Patel, Vitthalbhai Jahverbhāi. b. in Gujarat, India, c1873; d. 1933. Indian statesman and nationalist leader; brother of Vallabhbhai Jahverbhāi Patel. As president (1925, 1927) of the legislative assembly he distinguished himself as a capable master of parliamentary tactics and carried out the nationalist aim of forcing the executive power to resort to arbitrary action. He toured India in 1922 as a member of the civil disobedience committee.

Patelin (pā.tān). Conventional character in French comedy. He is a supple, insinuating flatterer, one who tries to accomplish his ends by indirect means. He seems to have had his origin in a 14th-century farce, L'Avocat Pathelin.

Patenôtre (pāt.nōtr), Jules. [Full name, Jules Patenôtre des Noyers (dā nwā.yā).] b. at Baye, Marne, France, April 20, 1845; d. at Menton, Alpes-Maritimes, France, Dec. 26, 1925. French diplomat, minister to the U.S. when the French legation at Washington was raised (1924) to the status of an embassy. He was minister and ambassador from 1891 to 1897, and was ambassador to Spain (1897-1902) during the Spanish-American War. He negotiated important French treaties in the Far East, including the treaty of Hué (1884) by which the French protectorate over Annam was established, and the treaty of Tientsin (1886), by which China ceded Tonkin to France.

Patent Office, U.S. Unit of the national government established in 1836 as a bureau of the State Department, under which it remained until 1849, when it became part of the Department of the Interior. In 1925 it was transferred to the authority of the Department of Commerce. It grants applications for patents, issues trademark specifications, rules on the application of patent law, and acts as the custodian of patent records. The office is headed by a commissioner of patents, with headquarters at Washington, D.C.

Pater (pā'tēr), Walter Horatio. b. at London, Aug. 4, 1839; d. at Oxford, England, July 30, 1894. English critic and essayist. He was educated at Oxford and in 1864 became a fellow at Brasenose College there. Pater became with time the center of a cult of devotees of the art and the humanism of the Renaissance, and expounded a theory of art and aesthetics as being in themselves an end of living. His writing was not easy, but he polished what he wrote to a precise, almost metallic, finish that reflected his intellectual approach to beauty. His writings include Studies in the History of the Renaissance (1873), Marius the Epicurean (1885), a novel considered his masterpiece, Imaginary Portraits (1887), Appreciations, with an Essay on Style (1889), Plato and Platonism (1893), and The Child in the House (1894), as well as several works published posthumously.

Paterculus (pā'tēr'kū'lus), Gaius Velleius. b. c.19 B.C.; d. after 30 A.D. Roman historian, author of an epitome of Roman history, which is distinguished by lavish praise for Tiberius.

Paterna (pā'tēr'nā). Town in E Spain, in the province of Valencia, near Valencia. 10,038 (1940).

Paternò (pā'tēr'nò). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Catania, situated on the S slope of Mount Etna, ab. 10 mi. NW of Catania. Nearby is the site of the ancient Hybla or Hybla Major. It exports quantities of oranges and tangerines. In World War II it was occupied by British troops, August, 1943. Pop. of commune, 32,179 (1936); of town, 28,533 (1936).

Pater Noster or Paternoster (pat'ēr.nos.tēr). See Lord's Prayer.

Paternoster Row. Street in London, N of Saint Paul's, long famous as a center of book publishing. It is said to be so named from the prayer books or rosaries formerly sold in it.

Paterson (pat'ēr.sən). [Called the "Silk City."] City in NE New Jersey, county seat of Passaic County, on the Passaic River ab. 17 mi. NW of New York; third largest city in the state. Chiefly notable as a silk and nylon textile center, it is also important for the manufacture of airplane engines and for textile dyeing. The falls of the Passaic supply it with water power for hydroelectricity. It was founded in 1792 under the patronage of Alexander Hamilton. 139,656 (1940), 139,336 (1950).

Paterson, Isabel. (Maiden name, Bowler.) b. on Manitoulin Island, Lake Huron, Canada—, American journalist and novelist. She is a book reviewer and columnist (Turns with a Bookworm) for the New York Herald Tribune. Author of The Shadow Riders (1916), The Magpie's Nest (1917), The Fourth Queen (1926), The Golden Vanity (1934), If It Proves Fair Weather (1940), God of the Machine (1943), and other novels.

Paterson, John. b. near what is now Newington, Conn., 1744; d. at Lisle, N.Y., July 19, 1808. American Revolutionary leader. He settled (1774) at Lenox, Mass., became prominent in the patriot cause, and served as an officer in the Revolutionary forces, being brevetted (1783) a major general. He took part in the fighting at Bunker Hill, Trenton, Princeton, Saratoga, and Monmouth, was at Valley Forge, and later helped put down Shay's Rebellion. He was one of the organizers of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Paterson, William. b. in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, in April, 1658; d. 1719. British economist and financier. In 1695 he was authorized, with others, to found colonies in the Americas. A company was formed to settle the Isthmus of Darien (now Panama; called in the charter New Caledonia); the stock was taken up in a spirit of wild speculation, and thousands volunteered as colonists. Paterson sailed from Leith on July 26, 1698, with 1,200 men, landed on the Isthmus, and founded the settlement of New St. Andrew, at the port of Acla. After terrible sufferings it was abandoned on June 22, 1699, and Paterson became for a time insane. Other colonists, to the number of 1,600, who had not heard of the disaster, arrived later; they were attacked by the Spaniards, capitulated after a siege of six weeks (March 31, 1700), and were allowed to leave the country, but very few ever reached home. Paterson also originated the plan of the Bank of England, which was founded in 1694 with Paterson as a director; he resigned (1695) after a disagreement with the other directors. He worked to settle the financial problems raised by the union (1701) of Scotland and England. He was one of the principal economists of his day, anticipating many economic principles later widely accepted.

Paterson, William. b. in County Antrim, Ireland, Dec. 24, 1745; d. at Albany, N.Y., Sept. 9, 1806. American politician and jurist. He was attorney general of New Jersey (1776-83), a member of the Continental Congress (1780-81), and as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention (1787), a proponent of the New Jersey Plan, which he introduced, to give all states equal congressional representation. He was U.S. senator from New Jersey (1789-90), governor of New Jersey (1791-93), and justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1793-1806). Paterson, N.J., is named for him.

Paterson, William Romaine. [Pseudonym, Benjamin Swift.] b. at Glasgow, July 29, 1871—, English novelist, essayist, and critic. Under his pseudonym he wrote Nancy Noon (1896), The Tormentor (1897), The Destroyer (1898), Siren City (1899), Nude Souls (1900), The Game of Love (1902), In Piccadilly (1903), The Old Dance-Master (1911), What Lies Beneath (1917), and Sudden Love, A Tale of Picardy (1922), fiction. He also wrote Nemeses of Nations: Studies in History (1907), Problems of Destiny (1935), and The Passions of Life, Being the Search for an Ideal (1938).

Paterson Strike. Strike of textile workers at Paterson, N.J., which began on Feb. 25, 1913, and subsequently affected more than 25,000 workers in the city's silk, ribbon, and dye establishments. The action, led by the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW), lasted five months and resulted in defeat for the strikers' demands.

Patey (pā'tī), Janet Monach. (Maiden name, Whytock.) b. at London, May 1, 1842; d. at Sheffield, England, Feb. 28, 1894. English contralto singer.

Patnanistan (pa.tā'nī.stan). See Pushtunistan.

Pathans (pā.tānz, pā.tānz). Tribesmen of the NW frontier of India. There are about three million Pathans, divided into numerous tribes, of which some of the best known are the Yusufzai, Orakzai, Mohmand, Afridi, Mahsud, and Wazir. All are Mohammedan, and all speak dialects of Pushtu, an eastern Iranian language of the Indo-European family.

Pathé (pathā'; French, pā.tā), Charles. b. at Paris, c.1873—. French motion-picture pioneer. In 1896, with a few associates, he set up the firm of Pathé Frères, which entered the Parisian entertainment field with two kinetoscopes, into which patrons looked at a series of pictures on cards which flipped over so rapidly as to give the illusion of motion. The firm grew rapidly, and presently began making motion pictures for exhibition in theaters. About 1909 the first newsreel picture was shown at Paris, and in 1910 this Pathé innovation was introduced in the U.S. In time the Pathé newsreel came to be a standard feature of motion-picture exhibitions throughout the world.

Pathétique (pā.tā.tēk), Symphonie. See Symphonie Pathétique.

Pathétique Sonata. Composition for piano (Opus 13) by Ludwig van Beethoven, composed in 1799.

Pathfinder, The. Third in chronological order of James Fenimore Cooper's Leather-Stocking novels, published in 1840. It is so called from a nickname of the hero, Natty Bumppo.

"Pathfinder, the." Epithet of Frémont, John Charles.

Path of the King, The. Volume of historical tales by John Buchan, published in 1921.

Pathway, The. Autobiographical novel by Henry Williamson, published in 1928. It is the concluding volume of a tetralogy under the general title The Flax of Dream.

Patia (pā.tē'a). River in SW Colombia, near Popayán, flowing SW to the Pacific Ocean. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Patiala (puti.āl'a). Former native state in India, now incorporated into Patiala and East Punjab States Union, Union of India, ab. 130 mi. NW of Delhi: wheat, rice, sugar, barley, and millet, are raised in the N and C parts of the state, while pasture lands occupy the S part. Area, 5,412 sq. mi.; pop. 1,936,259 (1941).

Patiala. City in N Union of India, capital of Patiala and East Punjab States Union, formerly capital of the state of Patiala, situated ab. 130 mi. NW of Delhi: a trading center for SE Punjab. 69,850 (1941).

Patiala, Maharaja of. [Title of Sir Bhupindar Singh.] b. in October, 1891; d. at Lahore, in what is now Pakistan, March 23, 1938. Indian ruler (1900-38) of Patiala, diplomat and soldier, best known as the representative of the Indian princes in their relations with the British government and at imperial and world conferences. He represented the ruling princes of India at the imperial war conference (1918), served in the imperial war cabinet, and took an active part in the Indo-Afghan War (1919). Chancellor (1925, 1927-30, 1933) of the Chamber of Princes, he was also the delegate (1925) of princely India to the League of Nations and to the Round Table conferences (1930-32).

Patiala and East Punjab States Union (pun.jāb'). State of the Union of India, in the NW part, formed in 1948 by the merging of eight formerly separate states, chief of which are Faridkot, Kapurthala, Maler Kotla, Nabha, Nalagarh, and Patiala. Capital, Patiala; area, 10,099 sq. mi.; pop. 3,468,631 (1951).

Patience (pā.shens). [Subtitle, Bunthorne's Bride.] Comic opera in two acts, with music by Sir Arthur Sullivan and words by W. S. Gilbert, produced at London on April 23, 1881.

Patient Grissel (grisel'). Play by Thomas Dekker, Henry Chettle, and William Haughton, produced in 1599, entered on the Stationers' Register in 1600, and published in 1603.

Patigian (pā.tig.yān'), Haig. b. in Armenia, Jan. 22, 1876—American sculptor. His style is best represented by his McKinley Monument (Arcata, Calif.), Rowell Monument (Fresno, Calif.), and the pediment for the Department of Commerce building at Washington, D.C.

Patin (pā.tān'), Henri Joseph Guillaume. b. at Paris, Aug. 21, 1793; d. there, Feb. 19, 1876. French writer.

Patinamit (pā.tē.nā.mēt). [Also, Ximché.] Ancient capital of the Cakchiquels of Guatemala, probably on or near the site of the first Spanish city of Guatemala. It is described as a large and strongly fortified place.

Patino (pā.tē.nō). See Patmos.

Patino (pā.tē.nō), Simón Ituri. [Called "the Tin King."] b. at Cochabamba, Bolivia, June 1, 1868; d. at Buenos Aires, April 20, 1947. Bolivian industrialist, banker, and diplomat. He acquired the Espritu Santo tin mines and, later, La Salvadora and many others. He was the organizer and president (1914 et seq.) of Patiño Mines Enterprises Company, Delaware, served as Bolivian minister plenipotentiary to Spain (1922-26) and to France (1927-39), and spent the last years of his life at New York. He is alleged by some authorities to have been the financial backer of Bolivia in the Chaco War (1932-35) against Paraguay. He was said to be one of the wealthiest men in the world.

Patkul (pāt.kōl'), Johann Reinhold (or Reginald) von. b. 1660; executed Oct. 10, 1707. Livonian adventurer. He became a captain in the Swedish army. Having been condemned (1694) to death for participating in the opposition of the Livonian nobility to a reduction of the crownlands, he entered (1698) the service of Augustus II, elector of Saxony and king of Poland. He negotiated the alliance (1702) between Augustus and the czar against Sweden. He entered the Russian service in 1703, and in 1704 became Russian ambassador at the court of Augustus. He was also made commander of the Russian troops sent to the aid of the latter. He was imprisoned (1705) by Augustus on the suspicion of conspiring against him. Surrendered to the Swedes by the treaty which Charles XII dictated (1706) to Augustus at Altranstädt, he was court-martialed and executed as a traitor (by being broken on the wheel).

Patman (pat'man), Wright. b. near Hughes Springs, Tex., Aug. 6, 1893—. American lawyer and legislator. He was a congressman (1929 et seq.) from Texas. He sponsored the Patman Act (known as the "Bonus Bill") providing a bonus to American veterans of World War I; the act was passed (1936) over a presidential veto. He was cosponsor of the Robinson-Patman Fair Trade Act (passed in 1936).

Patmore (pat'mör), Coventry. [Full name, Coventry Kersey Dighton Patmore.] b. at Woodford, Essex, England, July 23, 1823; d. at Lymington, Hampshire, England, Nov. 26, 1896. English poet and writer. He was assistant librarian at the British Museum (1846-66). He published Poems (1844), Tamerton Church Tower (1853), The Angel in the House (in four parts, 1854-62), The Unknown Eros, and Other Odes (1877), Amelia (1878), collected poems (1886), Principle in Art (1889), Religio Poetae (1893), and Roll, Road, and Flower (1895).

Patmore, Peter George. b. at Ludgate Hill, London, 1786; d. near Hampstead, London, Dec. 19, 1855. English author and editor; father of Coventry Patmore. He was associated (1841-53) as contributor and editor with the New Monthly Magazine, and others. Author of Imitations of Celebrated Authors, or Imaginary Rejected Articles (1826), My Friends and Acquaintances (3 vols., 1854), and Marriage in Mayfair (1854).

Patmos (pat'mos; Greek, pāt'mōs). [Also: Patino; Italian, Patmo (pāt'mō).] Island of the Dodecanese, in the Greek nomos (department) of Calymnos, situated in the Aegean Sea, ab. 20 mi. SW of Samos: fishing, cattle-breeding. It also produces barley, beans, tomatoes, figs, and tobacco. There is a monastery bearing the name of Saint John the Divine, and a cave is pointed out where, according to legend, the apostle saw the visions of the Apocalypse. Area, ab. 22 sq. mi.; pop. 3,184 (1936).

Patna (pat'na, put'na). Former native state in India, now merged into Orissa, Union of India, situated ab. 175 mi. W of Cuttack: rice, maize, and linseed; forest products. Capital, Bolangir; area, ab. 2,530 sq. mi.; pop. 632,220 (1941).

Patna. Division of Bihar, Union of India, ab. 300 mi. NW of Calcutta: intensive cultivation of rice, wheat, sugar, and barley. Area, 11,338 sq. mi.; pop. 7,205,950 (1941).

Patna. District in the division of Patna, Bihar, Union of India. Area, ab. 2,164 sq. mi.; pop. 2,528,272 (1951).

Patna. [Ancient name, Pataliputra.] Capital of the district of Patna, Bihar, Union of India, on the Ganges near the junction of the Gandak and Son rivers. It is an important center of river traffic, and has trade in rice, opium, cotton, and millet. It has food-processing and handicraft industries. In the 18th century Patna became the capital of an independent state, and in 1763 there was an outbreak of hostilities, during which a number of the English were seized and massacred by order of the nawab. Several Sepoy regiments here took part in the mutiny of 1857. Pop. 283,479 (1951).

Paton (pā'ton), Sir Joseph Noel. [Commonly called Sir Noel Paton.] b. at Dunfermline, Scotland, Dec. 13, 1821; d. at Edinburgh, Dec. 26, 1901. British historical painter. He was originally a designer of patterns for damask-weaving, went to London in 1843, and studied in the Royal Academy schools. He settled at Edinburgh in 1857, and was knighted in 1867. He was also a sculptor, archaeologist, and poet.

Patoqua (pā.tō'kwā). One of the ancient and now ruined Jémec pueblos, in NW New Mexico. It was abandoned after the uprising of 1650, and was never reoccupied.

Patos (pā'tōs), Lagoa dos. Lagoon in SE Brazil, near the Atlantic Ocean, in the E part of the state of Rio Grande do Sul, communicating with the Atlantic by a channel E of Rio Grande. It is the largest lake in Brazil. Length, ab. 150 mi.; greatest width, ab. 40 mi.; area, ab. 4,000 sq. mi.

Patras (pa'tras, pat'ras). [Greek, Patrai (pā'tre); Italian, Patrasso (pā.tras'sō); Latin, Patrae (pā'trē).] Capital of the department of Achaia, Greece, situated on the Gulf of Patras in the N part of the Peloponnese; point of export for wine, olive oil, raisins, currants, and sheepskins. It is one of the largest cities of Greece, and the terminus of a railway line to Corinth and Athens. It was a flourishing ancient city, was the capital of the medieval duchy of Achaia, was nearly destroyed by the Turks in 1821, and was the point of outbreak of the Greek revolution in 1821. Pop. 88,414 (1951).

Patri (pā'trē, pat'ri), Angelo. b. in Italy, Nov. 26, 1877—. American educator and writer. He was a teacher (1898 et seq.) and principal (1908 et seq.) in the

New York public schools system. Author of Pinocchio in Africa (1911), A School Master of the Great City (1917), Spirit of America (1924), Problems of Childhood (1926), What Have You Got to Give? (1926), Pinocchio in America (1928), The Questioning Child (1930), The Parents Counselor (1939), Your Children in Wartime (1943), and other books.

Patriarcha (pā.tri.ár'ka, pat.rí-), Nicephorus. See Nicephorus Patriarcha.

Patriarch of Ferney (fer.nā'). See Voltaire.

Patricia (pa.trish'a). A Latin name of Córdoba, Spain.

Patriarch, The. Novel by John Galsworthy, published in 1911.

Patrick (pat'rik), Saint. [Original name, Sucat; Latin, Patricius (pa.trish'us).] b. according to tradition, at Nemthur (now Dumbarton), Scotland, c396; d. probably 469. Patron saint of Ireland; son of the deacon Calpornius, son of Potitus, a priest. After the withdrawal of the Roman garrisons, Calpornius retired to the country south of the Wall of Severus, where Patrick was captured by the Picts about 411, and sold as a slave into Ireland. After six years he escaped, and, devoting himself to the conversion of Ireland, prepared for the priesthood, spending 12 years in study. About 425 he entered upon his mission. In 432 he was consecrated bishop, and received the pallium in 441. The details of Patrick's mission are obscured but his success in converting, before his death, nearly all of pagan Ireland is clear. He faced persecution and imprisonment at the hands of the native pagan clergy; courageously attacked the pagan idols and proceeded with Christian ceremonies; and organized the church in Ireland by coordinating existing communities of Christians, establishing churches and monasteries, and appointing abbots and bishops to look after the church. Patrick's knowledge of the people he dealt with and of their customs, in addition to his genius for adapting usage to conform to existing circumstances without losing the essential meaning of the usage, were largely responsible for his success. Many legends are told about him, so many (and so sparse is the actual information that has come down) that many believe that everything about his career is legendary. He is said to have explained the Trinity by means of a shamrock he found growing at his feet, and he is often credited with driving the snakes out of Ireland. He wrote a Confession and an Epistle. He is usually credited also with the authorship of the remarkable poem called variously the Lorica, the Hymn of Saint Patrick, The Cry of the Deer or Faer Fiada.

Patrick, Mary Mills. b. at Canterbury, N.H., March 10, 1850; d. at Palo Alto, Calif., Feb. 25, 1940. American scholar. She was president (1890-1924) of Istanbul Woman's College. Author of Sextus Empiricus and Greek Skepticism (1899), Sappho and the Island of Lesbos (1912), Under Five Sultans (1929), and A Bosphorus Adventure (1934).

Patrick Spens (spens), Sir. See Spens, Sir Patrick.

Patrimonium Petri (pā.tri.mō'ni.um, pē'trī). Ancient administrative division of the States of the Church, situated in C Italy NW of the Roman Campagna. The capital was Viterbo.

"Patriotic Youth." See Jeuneuses Patriotes.

Patriotism, Female. See Female Patriotism.

"Patriot Printer of 1776." See Bradford, William.

Patriots. In English politics, a faction of the Whig Party in the reigns of George I and George II, opposed to Sir Robert Walpole.

Patriots. Three-act play of Irish politics by Lennox Robinson, published in 1912.

Patriots, The. Play (1942) by Sidney Kingsley concerning the struggle between the Hamiltonian Federalists and the Jeffersonian Republicans in the early days of the U.S.

Patriot's Progress, The. Novel, dealing with "the vicissitudes of Private John Bullock," by Henry Williamson, published in 1930.

Patris Brunnā (pā'tris brun'a). Medieval name of Paderborn.

Patroclus (pa.trō'klus). In the Iliad, the intimate friend of Achilles. When the sulky Achilles withdraws from the fight, and the Greek host is in danger of being routed, he lends Patroclus his armor to fight against the Trojans. Patroclus at first succeeds, but at last is met by Hector and slain. Achilles then, to avenge his friend, reappears in the battle, drives the Trojans within their walls, and vanquishes Hector.

Patron, The. Comedy by Samuel Foote, produced in 1764.

Patrons of Husbandry, National Grange of the. Agrarian lodge organized (Dec. 4, 1867) at Washington, D.C., by seven persons, of whom the leading spirit was Oliver Hudson Kelley, who became its secretary. Kelley's tours (1868 et seq.) of the Western farm areas led to the establishment of approximately 20,000 local granges, and the impulse, drawing strength from the agrarian depression of the 1870's, emerged as the Granger Movement. The original intent of the organization was the development of intellectual, social, and cultural resources for farm families, a program to which it returned after the waning of the Granger Movement. By 1948 it claimed 800,000 members, most of them in the northern tier of states between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The organization maintains national headquarters at Washington, D.C.

Päts (pats), Konstantin. b. at Tahkuranna, Estonia, 1874; reported dead in prison in Russia, c1943. Estonian statesman, founder and leader of the Agrarian Party, representing the more conservative section of medium homestead farmers. Originally of radical leanings, Päts, as editor (1902-05) of the daily Taataja at Tallin, emphasized a realistic economic approach to the problem of national self-assertion. He was in exile abroad (1905-09), and imprisoned (1910-11) for anti-Czarist activities; he was placed in a concentration camp by the German occupation authorities in 1918. He took a leading part in preparing the secession of Estonia from Russia (1917-18) and in organizing the national defense in 1918-19, was prime minister in the Estonian provisional government (1918-19), and served as a member of the Estonian Constituent Assembly and of all parliaments of independent Estonia. He was head of the state (1923-24, 1931-32, 1931-33, 1933-34). Faced with the threat of a Rightist coup d'état secretly organized with foreign support, Päts, backed by the leaders of the Social-Democratic Party, and using his prerogatives as acting head of the state under the new constitution of 1933, proclaimed a state of national emergency in March, 1934, suspending normal political activities. He submitted the draft of a new and more liberal constitution to a plebiscite in 1936. Elected president in 1938, he was arrested and deported to the U.S.S.R. by the Russians in August, 1940.

Pattani or Patani (pā.tā.nē'). Province in S Thailand (Siam), on the Malay Peninsula. It was formerly a small native state feudatory to Siam. A little iron and some tin are produced here. The chief crop is rice. Area, ab. 750 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 200,000.

Pattani (put'tā.nē), Sir Prabhashanker Dalpatram. b. 1862; d. 1938. Indian political leader and administrator. He was diwan (1902-12) of Bhavnagar state, and a member of the executive council (1912-15) of the Bombay government. He served (1916) on the imperial legislative council, was president (1919-30) of the council of administration, and was a member (1917-19) of the council of state of India.

Pattee (pa.tē'), Fred Lewis. b. at Bristol, N.H., March 22, 1863; d. at Winter Park, Fla., May 6, 1950. American teacher and author. He served as professor of American literature at Pennsylvania State College (1894-1928) and Rollins College (Fla.) from 1928 to 1941. He was the author of The Wine of May and Other Lyrics (1893), The Foundations of English Literature (1900), The History of American Literature Since 1870 (1915), The Development of the American Short Story (1923), Mark Twain (1935), and The Feminine Fifties (1940).

Patten (pat'en), Gilbert. [Pseudonym, Burt L. Standsch.] b. at Corinna, Me., Oct. 25, 1866; d. at San Diego, Calif., Jan. 16, 1945. American writer of adventure stories, best known for the Frank Merriwell series written under his pseudonym. He was commissioned (1895) by Ormond W. Smith, publisher of Street and Smith's paper-back novels, to write a series about an adventurous schoolboy athlete, which he developed into the Frank and Dick Merriwell stories. The series declined after 1907. In his last book, Mr. Frank Merriwell, published in 1941, the once youthful hero had become an older man.

- Patten, James A. b. at Freeland Corners, Ill., May 8, 1852; d. Dec. 8, 1928. American speculator and philanthropist whose corners in grain (1908, 1909) and subsequently in cotton brought him great wealth; cousin of Simon Nelson Patten.
- Patten, Simon Nelson. b. in what is now Sandwich township, De Kalb County, Ill., May 1, 1852; d. at Browns Mills, N.J., July 24, 1922. American economist and author; cousin of James A. Patten. He became (1888) superintendent of schools at Rhodes, Iowa, and in the same year was named professor of political economy at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was retired in 1917. Author of The Premises of Political Economy (1885), The Development of English Thought (1899), and The New Basis of Civilization (1907). His Essays in Economic Theory (1924) were edited by R. G. Tugwell.
- Pattdale (pat'ér.däl). Civil parish and village in NW England, in Westmorland, situated at the head of Ullswater, ab. 8 mi. N of Ambleside. It is important as a tourist center. 817 (1931).
- Patterson (pat'ér.sən), Austin McDowell. b. at Damascus, Syria, May 31, 1876—. American chemist. He was a professor (1921-41) at Antioch College, Ohio. Author of A German-English Dictionary for Chemists (1917) and A French-English Dictionary for Chemists (1921); coauthor with E. J. Crane of A Guide of the Literature of Chemistry (1927) and with L. T. Capell of The Ring Index (1940).
- Patterson, Eleanor Medill. [Pen name (actually, the feminine form in Polish of her married name), Eleanor M. Gizycka.] b. at Chicago, Nov. 7, 1884; d. near Marlboro, Md., July 24, 1948. American editor, publisher, and author; sister of Joseph Medill Patterson. She married Count Joseph Gizycki (1904), and Elmer Schlesinger (1925). From her grandfather, Joseph Medill, she inherited a share of the Chicago Tribune and served as a member of its board of directors. She shared an interest with her brother in the New York Daily News, and was owner and publisher of the Washington (D.C.) Times-Herald after buying the papers from W. R. Hearst and merging them. Author, under her pen name, of Glass Houses (1926) and Fall Flight (1928).
- Patterson, Elizabeth. See Bonaparte, Elizabeth.
- Patterson, Frank Allen. b. at Allen's Hill, N.Y., Aug. 14, 1878; d. at Palisades Park, N.J., Aug. 4, 1944. American professor of English, noted as an authority on John Milton. He was a professor (1931-43) at Columbia, and founded and headed the Facsimile Text Society for the photographic reproduction of rare books. He was the general editor of the definitive Complete Works of John Milton (18 vols., completed in 1938).
- Patterson, Joseph Medill. b. at Chicago, Jan. 6, 1879; d. at New York, May 26, 1946. American newspaper publisher, founder (1919) of the New York Daily News, the first successful tabloid in the U.S.; grandson of Joseph Medill. He was a staff member, war correspondent in Germany, Belgium, France, and commander (1915-25), with his cousin Robert Rutherford McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune. Appointed (1905) Chicago commissioner of public works, he resigned (1906), declaring himself a socialist. Author of A Little Brother of the Rich (1908) and others.
- Patterson, Robert. b. in Ireland, May 30, 1743; d. at Philadelphia, July 22, 1824. American politician and scientific writer. He became director of the U.S. Mint in 1805.
- Patterson, Robert. b. in County Tyrone, Ireland, Jan. 12, 1792; d. at Philadelphia, Aug. 7, 1884. American Civil War general. He served in the Mexican War, was a commander of Pennsylvania troops in 1861, and commanded near Harpers Ferry at the time of the Battle of Bull Run, July, 1861.
- Patterson, Robert Porter. b. at Glens Falls, N.Y., Feb. 12, 1891; killed in air crash at Elizabeth, N.J., Jan. 22, 1932. American lawyer and jurist, and U.S. cabinet member. He served as a judge (1930-39) of the U.S. district court of southern New York, and a judge (1939-40) of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. He served as U.S. undersecretary of war (1940-45) and secretary of war (1945-47).

- Patterson, Wilfrid Rupert. b. at Belfast, Ireland, Nov. 20, 1893—. English naval officer.
- Patteson (pat'ē.sən), John Coleridge. b. at London, April 1, 1827; murdered Sept. 16, 1871. English missionary in the Pacific, made bishop of Melanesia in 1861. He was mistaken by the natives of one of the Santa Cruz Islands for a trader in kidnapped laborers (these often disguising themselves as missionaries) and killed.
- Patti (pat'tē). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Messina, near the coast, ab. 35 mi. W of Messina; exports tomatoes and other vegetables. The roof of its 13th-century cathedral and the Cappella Santa Febronia sustained some damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 12,350 (1936); of town, 5,490 (1936).
- Patti (pat'i; Spanish, pät'e), Adelina. [Original name, Adela Juana Maria Patti.] b. at Madrid, Feb. 10, 1843; d. in Wales, Sept. 27, 1919. Operatic soprano. She was taken to America as a child by her parents, both singers, and first appeared at New York in 1859 and at London in 1861. She was perhaps the most popular singer of the time. Her repertoire contained between 30 and 40 parts, including Linda, Norina, Luisa Miller, Lucia, Violetta, and Zerlina. After she retired (before 1890) from the operatic stage, she appeared often in concert; her rendition of Home Sweet Home was famous.
- Patti (pat'tē), Carlotta. b. at Florence, 1840; d. at Paris, June 27, 1889. Italian concert singer; sister of Adelina Patti. She made her debut at New York in 1861 and in England in 1863.
- Pattieson (pat'i.sən), Peter. Imaginary schoolmaster, the assumed author of the Tales of My Landlord, by Sir Walter Scott. He has a brother, Paul Pattieson, who publishes his manuscripts for his own advantage.
- Pattison (pat'i.sən), Andrew Seth Pringle. See Seth, Andrew.
- Pattison, Dorothy Wyndlow. [Known as Sister Dora.] b. at Haukswell, Yorkshire, England, Jan. 16, 1832; d. at Walsall, Staffordshire, England, Dec. 24, 1878. English philanthropist; sister of Mark Pattison. She joined the sisterhood of the Good Samaritan at Coatham, Yorkshire, in 1864, was connected with its cottage hospital at Walsall, and became an excellent surgical nurse and devoted herself to the care of the poor.
- Pattison, Lee Marion. b. at Grand Rapids, Wis., July 22, 1890—. American pianist and composer. He conducted two-piano recitals with Guy Maier throughout the U.S., and served as head (1932 et seq.) of the piano department of Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. Among his compositions are Two Songs, and Florentine Sketches, a piano solo.
- Pattison, Mark. b. at Hornby, Yorkshire, England, 1813; d. at Harrogate, Yorkshire, July 30, 1884. English writer. He graduated at Oxford (Oriel College) in 1837, and became a fellow of Lincoln College in 1839, and later tutor and (1861) rector. He wrote a Report on Elementary Education in Protestant Germany (1861) and Milton (1879). His essays were collected in 1889.
- Patton (pat'ən). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Cambria County, near Altoona. 3,148 (1950).
- Patton, Francis Landey. b. in Bermuda, Jan. 22, 1843; d. there, Nov. 25, 1932. American Presbyterian clergyman and educator. He became professor in Chicago Presbyterian Theological Seminary in 1871, and in Princeton Theological Seminary in 1881, and was president of Princeton University (1888-1902). In 1903 he became president of Princeton Theological Seminary.
- Patton, George Smith, Jr. [Called "Old Blood and Guts."] b. at San Gabriel, Calif., Nov. 11, 1885; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, Dec. 21, 1945. American soldier, commander (1944-October, 1945) of the U.S. 3rd army during World War II. A graduate (1909) of the U.S. Military Academy, he served in the cavalry, competed (1912) in the pentathlon at the Olympic Games in Sweden, and was an aide to General Pershing in Mexico (1916-17) and in France (May-November, 1917). He was appointed (November, 1940) commander of the 2nd armored division, promoted (1941) to major general, and led (November, 1942) U.S. forces landing at Morocco. He commanded (March-April, 1943) the central section of U.S. forces in Tunisia, and invaded Sicily (1943) in command of the 7th army. In France he led the 3rd army in the capture of Metz, to the relief of Bastogne, and into Czechoslovakia; appointed (1945) commander of the 15th army and promoted (April, 1945) to full general. Known for his colorful appearance, recklessness, and daring as commander, he was also the author of two volumes of poetry.

Pâturages (pâ.tü.răzh). Town in S Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, situated near the French border SW of Mons: coal mines; metal industry. 10,195 (1946).

Patuxent (pa.tuk'sent). River in Maryland which flows into Chesapeake Bay ab. 53 mi. SE of Washington, D.C. Length, ab. 100 mi.

Patwin (pat'win). North American Indian tribe, a southern branch of the Wintun, formerly found in the central portions of the interior valley of California. Their language was of the Wintun family.

Patyn (pat'in), William. Original name of Waynflete, William of.

Pátzcuaro (pâts'kwârô). Town in SW Mexico, in Michoacán state, ab. 130 mi. W of Mexico City, situated on the S shore of Lake Pátzcuaro: fishing; trade and tourist center. 9,557 (1940).

Pátzcuaro, Lake. Lake in SW Mexico, in the state of Michoacán. Elevation, ab. 6,703 ft.; area, ab. 149 sq. mi.

Pau (pô). City in SW France, the capital of the department of Basses-Pyrénées, situated on the Gave de Pau River, E of Bayonne. The old capital of the province of Béarn, it is now chiefly known as a popular resort. It affords a beautiful view of the Pyrenees Mountains. There is an art museum in the old castle of Henry IV (Henry of Navarre), who was born here. Pau is known for woolen-textile manufactures, and has trades in marble, meats, wine, iron, and leather. 46,158 (1946).

Pau, Gave de. River in S France which joins the Adour ab. 14 mi. NE of Bayonne. Length, ab. 105 mi.

Pau, Gérald. b. at Montélimar, Drôme, France, Nov. 29, 1848; d. at Paris, Jan. 2, 1932. French general, who as government military commissioner in the Chamber of Deputies was one of those chiefly responsible for the adoption (1913), on the eve of World War I, of a law providing three-year military service. He returned (1914) from retirement to take a field command at the start of World War I, and was sent (1915) on military missions to the Balkans and Russia.

Pau (pou), Manuel Oms de Santa. See Oms de Santa Pau, Manuel.

Paucartambo (pou.kâr.tâm'bô). Town in SE Peru, in Cusco department, on the Paucartambo River (a headstream of the Ucayali River), ab. 40 mi. NE of Cusco: frontier settlement of the Incas of Peru. The ruins still exist, and there is a modern village on the site. Pop. ab. 1,500.

Pauer (pou'ér), Ernst. b. at Vienna, Dec. 21, 1826; d. May 9, 1905. Austrian pianist, teacher, and musical editor.

Paulliac (pô.yâk). Town in SW France, in the department of Gironde, on the Gironde River ab. 27 mi. NW of Bordeaux, halfway to Point de Grave. It is a river port, and the commercial center of a region which produces excellent Médoc wines. It suffered damage in World War II. 5,367 (1916).

Pauker (pou'kér), Ana. b. in Bessarabia, 1890—. Rumanian Communist leader, minister of foreign affairs (1947-52). A member of the Communist Party since 1920, she served prison sentences (1936-41). She was active in the organization of the Communist-sponsored National Democratic Front (1944) and the Communist Information Bureau, the Cominform (1947). Her removal from office in 1952 was widely publicized in the U.S.

Paul (pôl), Saint. [Original name, Saul.] In Biblical history, the great apostle to the Gentiles. He was born at Tarsus, a "Hebrew of the Hebrews," was taught the trade of tent-maker, and went to Jerusalem and studied "at the feet of Gamaliel." He was at first a vehement persecutor of the Christians, and held the clothes of those who stoned Stephen. He was miraculously converted to Christianity while on his way to Damascus to direct the suppression of Christianity there, and became the most earnest preacher and the greatest expounder of Christianity. He made missionary tours in Syria, Cyprus, Asia Minor, Macedonia, Greece, and elsewhere, founding churches. His epistles to these churches form a large section of the New Testament. He was imprisoned at Caesarea, was tried before Felix, in whose custody he remained until he was handed over by Felix to his successor Festus, appealed as a Roman citizen to Caesar, and was sent to Rome, where he arrived in 61. He lived for about two years in comparative freedom in his own hired house. He appears to have been tried and acquitted, to have made various journeys, to have returned to Rome, and to have suffered martyrdom there, probably by decapitation c67.

Paul I, Saint. d. at Rome, June 28, 767. Pope from 757 to 767; a friend of Pepin, King of the Franks. He defended orthodoxy against the deviations of the Eastern emperor Constantine V (Constantine Copronymus).

Paul II. [Original name, Pietro Barbo.] b. at Venice, 1417; d. July 26, 1471. Pope from 1464 to 1471. He was involved in the Bohemian struggle against George of Poděbrad, whom he excommunicated; he attempted to minimize Venetian influence in Italy, and he was on unfriendly terms with Louis XI of France. A patron of learning, he is credited with introducing printing into Rome; at the same time, his ostentatious display made him conspicuously the Renaissance prince.

Paul III. [Original name, Alessandro Farnese.] b. at Canino, near Rome, Feb. 29, 1468; d. at Rome, Nov. 10, 1549. Pope from 1534 to 1549. He excommunicated Henry VIII of England in 1533, approved the Society of Jesus in 1540, and convoked the Council of Trent in 1545.

Paul IV. [Original name, Giovanni Pietro Caraffa.] b. near Naples, Italy, June 23, 1476; d. Aug. 18, 1559. Pope from 1555 to 1559. He was a man of good life, but lacked insight into the temper of the times in which he ruled.

Paul V. [Original name, Camillo Borghese.] b. at Rome, Sept. 17, 1550; d. Jan. 23, 1621. Pope from 1605 to 1621. He weakened the papal authority in a contest with Venice, which he placed under an interdict in 1606, and condemned the oath of allegiance imposed on his subjects by James I. Under Paul V various new religious institutes flourished.

Paul I (of Greece). b. at Athens, 1901—. King of Greece (1947 et seq.); second son of Constantine I and brother of George II. With his parents in exile in Switzerland (1917-20), he refused the throne, but returned to Greece in 1920, where he remained as crown prince after Constantine's final abdication to George II. He married Princess Frederika Louise of Brunswick in 1933, and acted as political adviser to George until the latter's death. He was in London and Cairo with the Greek government-in-exile (1941-46), and returned to Athens with his brother in 1946. He succeeded to the throne in 1947.

Paul I (of Russia). b. at St. Petersburg, Oct. 1, 1754; assassinated March 24, 1801. Czar of Russia (1796-1801); son of Peter III and Catherine II (Catherine the Great). He succeeded his mother in 1796, and joined the coalition against France (1793-1800), but withdrew from it later. In 1801 he annexed Georgia. His murder was the result of conspiracy.

Paul (of Yugoslavia). b. 1893—. Prince of Yugoslavia and cousin of Alexander I, a member of the Karađorđević dynasty. He served as first regent (1934-41) for Peter II.

Paul (poul), Bruno. b. at Seifenhensdorf, Saxony, Germany, Jan. 19, 1874—. German architect, painter, and designer. Beginning as a cartoonist for Simplicissimus and Die Jugend, he later became an architect and interior decorator of mansions, country houses, and ships' interiors.

Paul, Jean. Pseudonym of Richter, Jean Paul Friedrich.

Paul (pôl), John. Original name of Jones, John Paul.

Paul, John. Pseudonym of Webb, Charles Henry.

Paul, Elliot (Harold). b. at Malden, Mass., Feb. 13, 1891—. American editor and writer. He was literary editor of the Paris editions of the Chicago Tribune (1925, 1926) and the New York Herald (1930). He was a coeditor (1927, 1928) of the international review transition. Author of Indelible (1922), Low Run Tide (1928), The Life and Death of a Spanish Town (1937), Concert Pitch (1938), The Stars and Stripes Forever (1939), The Last Time I Saw

- Paris* (1942), Summer in December (1945), Linden on the Saugus Branch (1947), My Old Kentucky Home (1949), and other books, including the detective stories The Mysterious Mickey Finn (1939) and Hugger-Mugger in the Lowrie (1943).
- Paul, Herbert Woodfield. b. 1853; d. Aug. 4, 1935. English essayist and historian. He was a member of Parliament (1892-99 and 1906-09) and was second civil service commissioner from 1909. He published Men and Letters (1901), Matthew Arnold (1902), History of Modern England (1904-06), Lord Acton (1904), Life of Froide (1905), Stray Leaves (1906), Queen Anne (1906), and others.
- Paul (poul), Hermann. b. at Salbke, near Magdeburg, Germany, Aug. 7, 1846; d. Dec. 31, 1921. German philologist. He published Prinzipien der Sprachgeschichte (1880), Mittelhochdeutsche Grammatik (1881), Deutsches Wörterbuch (1897), and Deutsche Grammatik (5 vols., 1916-20). He organized and edited the collective work Grundriss der germanischen Philologie (3 vols., 1891-93).
- Paul (pól), Louis. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Dec. 4, 1901—. American novelist and short-story writer. Author of The Pumpkin Coach (1935), A Horse in Arizona (1937), Emma (1937), The Rev'rend Ben Pool (1941), This Is My Brother (1943), Breakdown (1946), and other books.
- Paul, Randolph Evernghim. b. at Hackensack, N.J., Aug. 8, 1890—. American lawyer, tax expert, and author, general counsel (1942 et seq.) of the U.S. Treasury Department.
- Paula (pǎ'ŏ.lǎ), Saint Francis of. See Saint Francis of Paula.
- Paul Astier (ǎs.ti.ǎ'). See Astier, Paul.
- Paul-Boncour (pól.bón.kor), Joseph. b. at St.-Aignan, Loir-et-Cher, France, Aug. 4, 1873—. French statesman and lawyer, known as a delegate to various international conferences and organizations. He was premier (December, 1932-January, 1933) and held several ministries: labor (1911), state (1935), and foreign affairs (1933). He was a deputy (1909-14, 1919-30) and a senator (1930-40). He was a delegate (1924-23) to the League of Nations. After World War I, he was a member of the Socialist Party until his election (1933) to the senate, was president (1935-38) of the Socialist and Republican Union, opposed the Pétain regime during World War II, was a member of the Consultative Assembly, and headed the French delegation at the final session (April, 1946) of the League of Nations.
- Paul Bunyan (bun'yán). See Bunyan, Paul.
- Paul Clifford (klí'ford). Novel by Edward Bulwer-Lytton, published in 1830.
- Paulding (pól'ding), Hiram. b. at New York, Dec. 11, 1797; d. at Huntington, Long Island, N.Y., Oct. 20, 1878. American admiral. He distinguished himself in the victory of Lake Champlain in 1814, and suppressed the actions of William Walker in Nicaragua by arresting him at Punta Arenas in 1857 (an act for which he was censured by President Buchanan, inasmuch as the arrest took place on foreign soil).
- Paulding, James Kirke. b. at Nine Partners, Dutchess County, N.Y., Aug. 22, 1778; d. at Hyde Park, N.Y., April 6, 1860. American novelist, poet, historian, and politician, U.S. secretary of the navy (1838-41) under Van Buren. His chief novels are Königsmarkte, the Long Finne (1823), The Dutchman's Fireside (1831), Westward Ho (1832), The Puritan and His Daughter (1849); his chief historical work, Life of George Washington (1835). He also wrote the poetry The Backwoodsman (1818); satires, The Diverting History of John Bull and Brother Jonathan (1812), Lays of the Scottish Fiddle (1813), and Merry Tales of the Three Wise Men of Gotham (1826); and a comedy, The Lion of the West (1830). He was associated with Washington Irving in issuing Salmagundi (1807-08), and published a second series alone (1819-20).
- Paul Eitherside (pól é'thi.ér.sí.d, í'-), Sir. See Eitherside, Sir Paul.
- Paul Emanuel (é.man'u.él). See Emanuel, Paul.
- Pauler (pou'ler), Gyula von. b. at Zagreb, Yugoslavia, May 11, 1841; d. at Balassonyi, Hungary, July 5, 1903. Hungarian historian and state archivist. Author of History of the Hungarian Nation under the Árpáds (1893) and History of the Hungarian Nation to Stephen the Saint (1900).

Paulet or Poulet or Powlett (pó'let). English family, important in the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. It included various dukes of Bolton and marquises of Winchester. Depending upon the individual and the period of his life, one or all of the variant spellings of the name may be used.

Paulet, Sir Amias. b. c1536; d. at London, 1588. English statesman, keeper of Mary, Queen of Scots, during her imprisonment. While lieutenant governor of Jersey (1559-71) and governor (c1571), he repressed Roman Catholics and offered protection to Huguenot refugees. He served as ambassador to France (1576-79). He acted as commissioner at Mary's trial, and after her condemnation, although he urged her execution, refused Secretary William Davison's suggestion to murder her secretly.

Paulet, Charles. [Titles: 1st Duke of Bolton, 6th Marquis of Winchester.] b. c1625; d. at Amport, England, 1699. English nobleman who switched allegiance from James II to William III (William of Orange); son of John Paulet. During the reign of James II, he pretended madness. For actively supporting William on his landing, he was created Duke of Bolton (1689). He is said to have caused Marlborough's fall from grace (1692) by disclosures to William III.

Paulet, Sir Charles. [Titles: 3rd Duke of Bolton, 8th Marquis of Winchester, Baron Basing.] b. 1685; d. at Tunbridge Wells, England, 1754. English nobleman who was deprived of his offices because of his persistent opposition to Robert Walpole. He married Lavinia Fenton, the actress who was noted as Polly Peachum in The Beggar's Opera, who had previously been his mistress. His portrait was painted by William Hogarth.

Paulet, John. [Title: 5th Marquis of Winchester; called the "Great Loyalist."] b. 1593; d. at Englefield, England, 1675. English nobleman who fought for Charles I in the English Civil War. He fortified and garrisoned his Basing House, the southern resort of Queen Henrietta Maria's friends, against the Cromwellians (1643-45) and held it until Cromwell stormed and leveled it. While his property was sequestered and sold, he remained a prisoner in the Tower, charged with treason. He was unrecompensed at the Restoration, but he was returned to his lands.

Paulet, Sir William. [Titles: 1st Marquis of Winchester; 1st Earl of Wiltshire, 1st Baron St. John.] b. near Basingstoke, England, c1485; d. there, 1572. English statesman who held important posts under five English rulers. In Henry VIII's household, he served as comptroller (1532), treasurer (1537-39), chamberlain (1543), and lord steward (1545-50). He was appointed lord president of council the year (1546) before Henry's death, and by his will, a member of the council of regency. Under the Protector Somerset (Edward Seymour), he was keeper of the great seal (1547), but joined in overthrowing him, subsequently siding with John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland. Under Edward VI, he was appointed lord treasurer, a post he held under Mary Tudor and Elizabeth until his death. Despite his allegiance with Northumberland, he joined the lords at Baynard Castle in proclaiming Mary Tudor queen in place of Jane Grey. Under Elizabeth, whose favor he obtained, he acted as speaker of the House of Lords in 1559 and 1560.

Paulet, Sir William. [Title: 3rd Marquis of Winchester.] b. c1535; d. 1593. English nobleman, chiefly remembered for a curious little work entitled The Lord Marques Idleness (1586). He was one of the commissioners for the trial of Mary, Queen of Scots (1586) and steward of her funeral (1587).

Pauletti (pó'let'í), Lady Erminia. See Hermione, Lady.

Paul et Virginie (pól é vēr.zhē.nē). Novel by Bernardin de Saint-Pierre, published in 1788.

Paul et Virginie. Opera in three acts by Victor Massé, with a libretto by P. J. Barbier and Michel Carré, first produced at Paris in 1876. The work is based on the novel by Bernardin de Saint-Pierre.

Paul Fleming (pól flem'ing). See Fleming, Paul.

Paulhan (pó.lán), Louis. b. at Pézenas, Hérault, France, July 19, 1883—. French aviator. On Aug. 25, 1900, he made a record, at Reims, with a flight of 31 3/4 mi. in 2 hours, 43 minutes, 4½ seconds; and on April 27-28, 1910, won a prize of 50,000 dollars for a flight from London to Manchester (185 mi.) in 12 hours. At the Los Angeles air meet in January, 1910, he reached an altitude of 4,165 ft., the world's record at that time.

Pauli (pou'le), Georg Reinhold. b. at Berlin, May 25, 1823; d. at Bremen, Germany, June 3, 1882. German historian. His works are chiefly on English history. They include König Alfred (1851), Geschichte von England (1853-58; a continuation of Lappenberg's History of England), Geschichte Englands (1864-75; history of England for the period 1814-52), and Simon von Montfort (1867).

Pauli, Johannes. b. at Pfedersheim, in Alsace, c1455; d. at Thann, in Alsace, after 1530. German Franciscan monk, author of the famous prose collection of tales and anecdotes (called Schwänke in German) entitled Schimpf und Ernst (1522).

Pauli, Wolfgang Joseph. b. at Prague, Sept. 11, 1869—. Austrian physiologist. He is known for his important studies in biophysical chemistry, colloidal chemistry in biology and medicine, and the inorganic colloids.

Pauli, Wolfgang, Jr. b. at Vienna, April 25, 1900—. Austrian physicist; son of Wolfgang Joseph Pauli. He was assistant at the University of Göttingen (1921-22) and at the University of Copenhagen (1922-23), docent at the Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule at Zurich (1923-28), where he became (1928) professor of theoretical physics, and served at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton University (1935-36, 1940 et seq.). He suggested (1925) the exclusion principle in quantum mechanics, a theoretical step towards explaining the atom statistically. He was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1945. Author of Relativitätstheorie (1920), Quantentheorie (1926), Allgemeine Prinzipien der Wellenmechanik (1933), and articles on problems of theoretical physics.

Paulians (pô'li'anz). Unitarian body founded in the 3rd century by Paul of Samosata in Syria.

Paulicians (pô'lish'anz). Sect probably founded by Constantine of Syria during the latter half of the 7th century. They held the dualistic doctrine that all matter is evil; believed that Christ, having a purely ethereal body, suffered only in appearance; and rejected the authority of the Old Testament and religious ordinances and ceremonies. The sect is said to have become extinct in the 13th century. The name is probably derived from their high regard for the apostle Paul.

Paulina (pô'li'na). Historical novel by Sir Max Pemberton, published in 1922.

Pauline (po'len). Faithful wife in Pierre Corneille's tragedy Polyeucte.

Pauling (pô'ling), Linus. b. at Portland, Ore., Feb. 28, 1901—. American chemist, professor (1931 et seq.) at California Institute of Technology. He served as a member of the explosives division (1942-45) of the National Defense Research Commission and as a member (1945-46) of the Research Board for National Security. He is notable for his research on the structure of molecules and on chemical bonds, and applied quantum mechanics to chemistry. Coauthor of Structure of Line Spectra (1930) and Introduction to Quantum Mechanics (1935); author of Nature of the Chemical Bond (1939).

Paulinus (pô'li'nus), Saint. [Full Latin name, Pontius Meropius Anicius Paulinus.] b. at Bordeaux, France, 353; d. June 22, 431. Christian prelate. Born in Aquitaine, he was educated by Ausonius and became governor of Campania. Married to a Spanish Christian, he was converted and in 390 he and his wife went to Spain to enter monasteries. Ordained priest, he became (409) bishop of Nola. He is known for his letters, poems, hymns, and doctrinal writings.

Paulinus of York, Saint. d. 644. Missionary to England, sent thither by Pope Gregory I in 601 to help Saint Augustine. He was instrumental in introducing Christianity into Northumbria, and in converting King Edwin. He was made bishop of York in 625 and of Rochester in 633.

Paulinzella (pou'lin,tse.lä). Village in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Thuringia, Russian Zone, ab. 22 mi. SW of Weimar; summer resort. It contains the picturesque ruins of a former church of the Benedictines, erected in the period 1112-32. The church was destroyed in 1525, during the great Peasants' Revolt, 203 (1946).

Paulista (pou'les'tä). City in NE Brazil, in the state of Pernambuco, 21,944 (1950).

Paulists (pô'lists). [Also: Paulist Fathers; Hermits of Saint Paul; Paulites (pô'lists).] Body of Roman Catholic monks who strive especially to be guided by the example of the apostle Paul. Specifically, in the U.S., the Congregation of the Missionary Priests of Saint Paul the Apostle, a Roman Catholic organization founded (1858) at New York City for parochial, missionary, and educational work.

Paulin (pô'lin), Charles Oscar. b. at Jamestown, Ohio, —. American historian and geographer. His works include The Navy of the American Revolution (1906), Commodore John Rodgers, 1773-1838 (1910), Diplomatic Negotiations of American Officers (1912), and Atlas of the Historical Geography of the United States (1932). With F. L. Paxson, he edited the Guide to Materials for United States History, since 1783, in London Archives (1914).

Paulu (pô'lyô). [Called Paulu Inca or Paulu Tupac Yupanqui; baptismal name (1543), Cristóbal.] b. c1500; d. at Cusco, Peru, in May, 1549. Peruvian chief; younger brother of Huáscar and Manco Capac. After the fall of Cusco he remained faithful to the Spaniards, accompanied Diego de Almagro to Chile (1535-36), and fought for him and for Gonzalo Pizarro.

Paul Morel (mô're'l). See Morel, Paul.

Paulo Afonso (pô'lo,ä a.fôn'sô). Cataract, consisting of three falls, in E Brazil, between the states of Pernambuco and Bahia, in the São Francisco River, ab. 193 mi. above its mouth. It is 275 ft. in total height, but is broken by ledges and rocks; the volume of water is nearly equal to that of Niagara Falls. The waterfall has been called "the Niagara of Brazil."

Paul of Aegina (ē.jī'ngä). See Paulus Aegineta.

Paul of Samosata (sä.mos'a.tä). b. (probably) at Samosata, Syria; fl. 260-272 A.D. Syrian heretic priest, bishop of Antioch from 260 to his deposition in 272. He denied the personality of the Logos and of the Holy Spirit, claiming that Jesus was born a man and became divine afterward through God.

Paul of Thebes (pô; thēbz). Saint. b. c230; d. c343. [Called also Saint Paul the Hermit.] Christian hermit of the 3rd and 4th centuries. Born on the edge of the Theban desert, he fled into it during the persecution of Decius, and is said to have lived alone there in a cave for 90 years, until found by Saint Anthony. Legends have grown up around his life, particularly the one that he was fed by a raven.

Paul Pliant (plī'ant), Sir. See Pliant, Sir Paul and Lady.

Paul Pry (pri). Comedy by John Poole, attributed to Douglas Jerrold, produced in 1853. The impudent, meddlesome adventurer who gives his name to the play was drawn from a Thomas Hill, at one time connected with the press.

Paulsboro (pôlz'bur.ô). Borough in SW New Jersey, in Gloucester County; manufactures of fertilizer and paint; petroleum refineries. 7,842 (1950).

Paul's Cross. Cross situated near the NE angle of old Saint Paul's, London, in the churchyard; originally the place of assembling of the folkmoor or general assembly. From it great public assemblies were addressed and sermons preached.

Paulsen (pou'zen), Friedrich. b. at Langenhorn, in North Friesland, Germany, July 16, 1846; d. at Steglitz, near Berlin, Aug. 14, 1908. German scholar. He became (1878) professor of philosophy and pedagogics at the University of Berlin. His works include Gründung, Organisation, und Lebensordnungen der deutschen Universitäten im Mittelalter (1881), Geschichte des gelehrten Unterrichts auf den deutschen Schulen und Universitäten (1885), Einleitung in die Philosophie (1891), Immanuel Kant (1898), and others.

Paulsen, Rudolf. b. at Berlin, March 18, 1883—. German lyric poet and essayist; son of Friedrich Paulsen. In his early development he was influenced by the group of poets associated with the journal Charon. His numerous volumes of verse include Töne der stillen Erinnerung and der Leidenschaft zum Kommen (1910), Knospen des Guten (1931), Auf trunkenen Daseinswegen (1932), and fat, fäte, fär, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lüte, pull; th, then; ð, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Das festliche Wort (1934). His essays in philosophy and aesthetics include Der Mensch an der Wage (1926) and Kunst und Glaube (1934).

Pauls Valley (pôlz). City in S central Oklahoma, county seat of Garvin County, in the Washita Valley, in an alfalfa, cotton, corn, sorghum, and pecan-producing area: food and cotton processing center, 6,896 (1950).

Paul's Walk. [Also, Duke Humphrey's Walk.] Nave of old Saint Paul's, London, which during the latter part of the 15th and the first part of the 16th century became a rendezvous for the transaction of business and for secular amusements of every description. It was frequented by disreputable characters and unemployed men and is frequently alluded to in old plays. A "Paul's man" was a frequenter of Paul's Walk, and presumably disreputable. The tomb of Duke Humphrey, the son of Henry IV, was said to be located here.

Paul Sweedlepipe (swê'dl.pip). See Sweedlepipe, Paul.

Paul the Deacon. See Paulus Diaconus.

Paul the Hermit, Saint. See Saint Paul of Thebes.

Paulus (pou'lus), Friedrich von. b. at Breitenau, Germany, Sept. 23, 1890—d. German general. In command on one of the Russian fronts in 1942, he was made a field marshal while his troops were encircled by the Russians at Stalingrad. He surrendered Jan. 31, 1943, and later headed the group of captured German officers in Russia who urged the overthrow of Hitler.

Paulus, Heinrich Eberhard Gottlob. b. at Leonberg, near Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 1, 1761; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 10, 1851. German Protestant theologian, a leading exponent of rationalism. His works include a commentary on the New Testament (1800-04) and other exegetical works including Exegetisches Handbuch (1830-33) and Leben Jesu (1838).

Paulus (pô'lus), Julius. fl. at the beginning of the 3rd century A.D. Roman jurist. He was praetorian prefect under Alexander Severus. Many excerpts from his works are contained in the Digest, he ranking among the five great authorities on the law. The most prolific writer after Ulpian, he was the author of Ad Edictum, in 80 books, and Sententiae ad filium.

Paulus, Lucius Aemilius. Killed at Cannae, 216 B.C. Roman consul, colleague with Varro in the defeat at Cannae.

Paulus, Lucius Aemilius. [Surname Macedonicus, meaning "the Macedonian."] b. c.229 B.C.; d. 160 B.C. Roman general; son of Lucius Aemilius Paulus (d. 216). He was distinguished as praetor in Spain (191-189) and as proconsul against the Ingauni in 181, was consul in 168, defeated Perseus at Pydna (168) and overthrew the Macedonian kingdom, pillaged Epirus in 167, and was granted a three-day triumphal festival at Rome in 167. He was censor in 164. He was the father of Scipio Africanus the younger, who was adopted by the elder Scipio Africanus.

Paulus Aegineta (pô'lus ê.ji.nê'ta). [Also, Paul of Aegina.] fl. probably in the late 7th century A.D. Greek medical writer. He wrote a number of works, the chief of which, still extant, is commonly called De re medica libri septem.

Paulus Diaconus (di.ă'kô'nus). [English, Paul the Deacon.] b. c.720 or 725; d. at Monte Cassino, Italy, before 800. First important historian of the Middle Ages. His chief works are a History of the Lombards, and a continuation of the Roman history of Eutropius.

Paulus Hook (pô'lus). Name given formerly to the site of Jersey City, N.J. A British garrison there was defeated and captured by Americans under Henry Lee, Aug. 19, 1779.

Paulus Servita (sêr.vî'ta). See Sarpi, Paolo.

Paumben Channel or Passage (pô'm'bên). See Pamban Channel.

Paur (pour), Emil. b. at Chernowitz (Czernowitz), in Bukovina, Aug. 29, 1855; d. 1932. Austrian musical conductor. He began his career as a conductor at Kassel in 1876. In 1893 he became conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1898 of the New York Philharmonic Society, in 1904 of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, and in 1912 succeeded Karl Muck at the Berlin Royal Opera, but served only briefly in the last post.

Pausanias (pô.să'ni.ă). See Tempio Pausania.

Pausanias (pô.să'ni.ă). d. in Sparta, c466 B.C. Spartan general; son of Cleombrotus. When Leonidas I, the Spartan king, died at Thermopylae, Cleombrotus, his brother, became regent for Pleistarchus, the son of Leonidas; Cleombrotus died in 479 and Pausanias became regent. He commanded the allied Greek armies at the victory of Plataea in 479, and continued the war against Persia in 478, taking Cyprus and Byzantium. He seems to have conducted a treasonable correspondence with Xerxes, and was recalled to Sparta. He soon returned to Byzantium and seized the Straits, but was chased from there by the Athenians. Returning to Sparta, he plotted a revolt of the helots that was exposed at the last moment. He took refuge in the sanctuary of Athena on the acropolis of Sparta and was starved to death there by order of the ephors as a punishment for his treason.

Pausanias. fl. in the 2nd century A.D. Greek geographer and writer on art. He wrote Periegesis of Greece, devoted to a description of Greek antiquities. It is one of the best sources we have on the topography, customs, legends, and history of ancient Greece.

Pausias (pô'si.ă, -shi-). fl. in the middle of the 4th century B.C. Greek painter of Sicily, a pupil of Pamphilus and a contemporary of Apelles. He made a special study of foreshortening, and was the first to paint ceilings. A famous picture was the Stephanoplocus or Stephanopolis, painted from Glycera, a flower girl of Sicily. He was especially attracted by the possibilities of encaustic, and developed it to a high degree of perfection.

Pautalia (pô.tă'li.ă). Ancient name of Kyustendil.

Pauthier (pô.tyă), Jean Pierre Guillaume. b. at Besançon, France, Oct. 4, 1801; d. at Paris, in March, 1873. French Sinologist.

Pauw (pou), Cornelius de. b. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, 1739; d. at Xanten, in the duchy of Cleve, July 7, 1799. Dutch author. He joined the order of Franciscans, but devoted most of his life to literary work, residing at Xanten. De Pauw's works are characterized by a violent spirit of criticism. His views excited much controversy, such writers as Voltaire contending with him.

Pauwels (pou'wels), Ferdinand. b. at Eeckeren, near Antwerp, Belgium, 1830; d. at Dresden, Germany, March 26, 1904. Belgian painter. Among his works are Banished by Alva, and Citizens of Ghent.

Pavelić (pă've'lich), Ante. [Also, Pavelich.] b. in Croatia (in territory now part of Yugoslavia), 1869—, Croatian nationalist leader, noted as head of the Ustaši (Ustashi), a terrorist organization implicated in the assassination (1934) of Alexander I of Yugoslavia, and as the head of the autonomous Croat state under Axis occupation (1941-44).

Pavia (pă.vě'ă). Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy. Capital, Pavia; area, ab. 1,145 sq. mi.; pop. 492,096 (1936).

Pavia. [Ancient name, Ticinum; medieval name, Pa Pia.] City and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, the capital of the province of Pavia, situated on the Ticino River and the Naviglio di Pavia, S of Milan. It is the chief market place for a rich agricultural district in the Po valley (grain, rice, wine, livestock), and has the oldest Italian rayon factory (established 1905). Other manufactures include electrical apparatus and metal products. Pop. of commune, 56,122 (1936); of city, 40,208 (1936).

Chief Buildings. It is the seat of a university founded by the German emperor Charles IV in 1361. The huge castle of the Visconti was built in the period 1360-65; Renaissance and baroque palaces include the Bottigella, Mezzabarba, and Borromeo. The cathedral is a 15th-century Renaissance building. The famous Certosa di Pavia, a Carthusian monastery with a large Gothic church, is in the vicinity.

History. Important in the period of the early Roman Empire, the city was destroyed by the Huns under Attila in 452. It was the capital of the Lombard kingdom from the 6th century on (a number of German emperors were crowned here as kings of Lombardy). A staunchly Ghibelline town, it was an enemy of Milan in the 11th-13th centuries. It passed in 1359 under the rule of the Visconti family of Milan. In the battle of Pavia (Feb. 24, 1525) the French king Francis I was disastrously defeated by the troops of Emperor Charles V under Charles de Lamoy, Fernando Francisco de Avalos, Marquis of Pescara, and Georg von Frundsberg. Pavia was incorporated into the Kingdom of Sardinia and Italy in 1859.

Paviatso (pä.vi.ät'sō). See under Paite.

Pavillons-sous-Bois (pä.vē.yōh.sō.bwā). See Les Pavillons-sous-Bois.

Pavlenko (pä.vlen'ko), Pyotr Andreyevich. b. 1899; d. 1951. Russian author. In a novel translated into English as Red Planes Fly East (1938), he pictures a global war breaking out in the Far East. Some of his writings having to do with World War II are available in English in a volume entitled Flames of Vengeance, published at Moscow in 1942.

Pavlograd (pä.v'lō.gräd; Russian, pä.v.lo.grät'). Town in SW U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 175 mi. NE of Odessa, on the Volchya River; flour milling. 17,654 (1935).

Pavlov (pä.v'lof), Ivan Petrovich. b. at Ryazan, Russia, Sept. 26, 1849; d. at Leningrad, Feb. 27, 1936. Russian physiologist, winner of the 1904 Nobel prize for physiology and medicine. He served as professor of physiology and director of the physiological laboratory in the Imperial Academy of Sciences and head of the department of physiology in the Imperial Institute of Experimental Medicine at St. Petersburg. His researches into the physiological nature of stomach juices led to the discovery of the psychological principle of the conditioned reflex; his experiments on the conditioning of digestive reflexes in the dog are among the most famous psychological experiments of the 20th century.

Pavlova (pä.v'lō.va; Anglicized, pä.v'lō'va), Anna. b. c1885; d. at The Hague, Netherlands, Jan. 23, 1931. Russian ballet dancer. She was trained in the ballet school at St. Petersburg and became a member of the imperial ballet at the opera house. She appeared at Berlin, Paris, and London, and in America. Her New York debut was made at the Metropolitan Opera House (season of 1909-10), in Coppelia. She also danced divertissements, usually appearing with Mikhail Mordkin. She is especially remembered for her dancing in Le Cygne (The Dying Swan), the ballet composed for her by Michel Fokine to Camille Saint-Saëns's music.

Pavlovsk (pä.v'lōtsk'). [Former name, Slutsk.] Town in the U.S.S.R., ab. 18 mi. S of Leningrad; summer resort; site of a former imperial palace. The town was occupied (1941-43) by the Germans during the siege of Leningrad, and was devastated. Pop. ab. 6,000.

Pavlovsky (pä.v'lōfski), Evgeny Nikanorovich. b. at Biryuch, Voronezh, Russia, Feb. 22, 1884—. Russian parasitologist. He organized (1928) an expedition to Samarkand to study venomous fish, the first of more than 90 scientific expeditions which made important contributions to the progress of public health in Russia. He served as assistant in zoology and comparative anatomy (1909-14) at the Military Medical Academy at Petrograd, organizing its department of general biology and parasitology. He contributed to the development of the study of parasitology in Russia. He solved a number of basic epidemiological and prophylactic problems during his expeditions into Central Asia and Transcaucasia, and devised methods of impregnating clothing against insect bites, thus helping to ward off the phlebotomus fly, which causes phlebotomus fever.

Pavo (pä'vō). Southern constellation, the Peacock, S of Sagittarius.

Pavon (pä.vōn'). Small river in the province of Santa Fé, Argentina, an affluent of the Paraná, ab. 30 mi. below Rosario. It gave its name to a battle fought on its banks, Sept. 17, 1861, in which the army of Buenos Aires under Bartolomé Mitre defeated the provincial forces under Justo José Urquiza. This battle decided the supremacy of Buenos Aires and the union of the Argentine Republic.

Pavullo nel Frignano (pä.vōl'ō nel frē.nyā'no). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Modena, in the Apennines ab. 21 mi. W of Modena; agricultural commune; glass manufacture; airport. Pop. of commune, 15,990 (1936); of town, 2,066 (1936).

Pawcatuck (pō'ka.tuk). Unincorporated community in SE Connecticut, in New London County, in Stonington town, at the Connecticut-Rhode Island border, adjoining Westerly, R.I. 5,269 (1950).

Pawhuska (pō.hus'ka). City in N Oklahoma, county seat of Osage County, in an oil-producing and cattle-grazing region. It is an Osage tribal capital. 5,331 (1950).

Pawling (pō'ling). Village in SE New York, in Dutchess County; residential community. It is the home of Thomas E. Dewey and Lowell Thomas. It was settled (c1740) by English Quakers. 1,430 (1950).

Pawnee (pō.nē'). [Also, Pani.] Tribe of North American Indians formerly living in Texas, then in S central Nebraska and N Kansas. By the 18th century there were ab. 10,000 of the n separated into four confederated tribes. They were a fierce, warlike people, but did not try to combat white encroachment, although they consistently lost territory to the U.S. until they were given a reservation in Oklahoma in 1876. They now number ab. 1,100. Their culture was typical Plains culture. Their philosophy and mythology are best known to white outsiders from the publicity given to their former human sacrifice to the Morning Star as part of their complex summer-solstice-vegetation rituals. This sacrifice was not practiced after the early 19th century, however. The language comprises a group of the Caddoan family.

Pawnee. City in N Oklahoma, county seat of Pawnee County; formerly a trading post and Pawnee Indian agency. 2,861 (1950).

Pawtucket (pō.tuk'et). Unincorporated community in NE Connecticut; residential suburb of New London. 5,269 (1950).

Pawtucket. City in N Rhode Island, in Providence County, on the Pawtucket River ab. 4 mi. NE of Providence; textile finishing and manufacturing. Cotton manufacturing was established here in 1790. 81,436 (1950).

Pawtucket River. Name for the lower course of the Blackstone River, near Pawtucket, R.I.

Pawtuxet (pō.tuk'set). River in Rhode Island which flows into Providence River below Providence.

Pax (paks). In Roman mythology, the goddess of peace. She was the personification of both civil peace and peace among nations. She was a fairly late addition to the pantheon, almost unknown before Augustus; but her cult is credited with fostering the popularity of the empire.

Pax Augusta (paks.ō.gus'tā). A Latin name of Badajoz, city.

Pax Julia (jō'li.a, jō'l'ya). Latin name of Beja, Portugal.

Paxos (pak.sos, pak.sōs'). [Also, Paxoi (pak.sē').] Small island of the Ionian Islands, Greece, in the nomos (department) of Corfu, ab. 8 mi. SE of Corfu. It is noted for the production of olive oil. According to a famous story found in Plutarch and mentioned by Rabelais and Milton among others, it was from Paxos that the mariners heard the great voice announcing "Pax is dead." 3,215 (1940).

Paxson (pak'son), Frederic Logan. b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 23, 1877—. American historian, professor of American history at Wisconsin (1910-32) and California (1932 et seq.). Author of The Independence of the South American Republics (1903), The Last American Frontier (1910), The Civil War (1911), American Democracy and the World War: Pre-War Years, 1913-17 (1936), America at War, 1917-18 (1939), The Great Demobilization and Other Essays (1941), and other works. He received the 1925 Pulitzer prize in history for A History of the American Frontier, 1763-1893 (1924).

Paxton (paks'ton). City in E Illinois, county seat of Ford County; center of a soybean and corn farming region; manufactures of canned goods and garments. 3,795 (1950).

Paxton, Sir Joseph. b. at Milton Bryant, near Woburn, England, 1801; d. at Sydenham, London, June 8, 1865. English architect, landscape gardener, and horticulturist. He obtained employment as a gardener at Chatsworth, and ultimately became superintendent of the Duke of Devonshire's gardens there, which he remodeled. A conservatory which he erected there formed the model for the exhibition building of 1851 at London. He designed the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, which was built mainly from the materials of the exhibition building. He also designed the mansion of Baron James de Rothschild at Ferrières, France. He organized the army work corps in the Crimea. From 1854 he was a member of Parliament. He published a Pocket Botanical Dictionary in 1840.

Paxton, William McGregor. b. at Baltimore, June 22, 1869; d. at Boston, May 13, 1941. American painter.

He served on the jury of awards at the Panama-Pacific Exposition (1915). His paintings are in the Metropolitan Museum (Tea Leaves), Corcoran Gallery (The Housemaid), Pennsylvania Academy (A Girl Sweeping), and elsewhere.

"Paxton Boys" See under Conestoga Massacre.

Payaguas (pá.yá'gwaz). Tribe of South American Indians of Paraguay, of whom a few hundred now survive in the vicinity of Asunción. They were numerous, warlike people, and put up long, formidable opposition to white colonists and missionaries. Their language, now practically extinct, was formerly regarded as a distinct, independent stock, but is now classified as comprising a group in itself, called Payagua, and embracing two dialects, in the northern division of the Guaycuruan family of languages.

Payer (pi'ér). Julius von. b. at Schönan, near Teplitz (Tepliec), in Bohemia, Sept. 1, 1842; d. at Velds, Austria (now Bled, Yugoslavia), Aug. 30, 1915. Austrian arctic explorer and painter. He took part in the expedition to Greenland (1869-70) and in the exploration of the Arctic Ocean east of Spitsbergen in 1871, and with Karl Weyprecht led the expedition (1872-74) which discovered Franz Josef Land.

Payerne (pe.yérn). [German, Peterlingen.] Town in W Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud, E of Lausanne. It was formerly a seat of the Burgundian rulers. The abbey church is a basilica dating from the 11th century. 5,178 (1941).

Payette (pā.ét'). City in SW Idaho, county seat of Payette County: trade center for an irrigated farming area. 4,032 (1950).

Payn (pā'n), James. b. at Cheltenham, England, Feb. 28, 1830; d. at London, March 25, 1898. English novelist and poet. He became editor of Chambers's Journal in 1858, and of the Cornhill Magazine in 1882. He published poems (1855), and some 100 novels, including Lost Sir Massingberd (1864) and By Proxy (1878).

Payne (pā'n), Henry B. b. Nov. 30, 1810; d. Sept. 9, 1896. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Ohio (1875-77), was a member of the Hayes-Tilden electoral commission in 1877, and was U.S. senator from Ohio (1885-91).

Payne, Henry Clay. b. at Ashfield, Mass., Nov. 23, 1843; d. at Washington, D.C., Oct. 4, 1934. American businessman and politician, U.S. postmaster general (1932-04) under Theodore Roosevelt.

Payne, John. b. 1842; d. 1916. English poet and translator, best known for his translation of The Arabian Nights' Entertainments (9 vols., 1882-84).

Payne, John Barton. b. at Pruntytown, Va. (now in W.Va.), Jan. 26, 1855; d. at Washington, D.C., Jan. 24, 1935. American lawyer and government official, U.S. secretary of the interior (1920-21) under Wilson. He served as chairman (1921 et seq.) of the American Red Cross.

Payne, John Howard. b. at New York, June 9, 1791; d. at Tunis, April 9, 1852. American dramatist, actor, and song writer. He first appeared on the stage at New York in 1809, and fulfilled a number of engagements in other cities as "The American Juvenile Wonder." He played also in England and Ireland. He retired from the stage in 1832, and served at Tunis as American consul (1843-45, 1851-52). He is famous as the author of the song Home, Sweet Home (originally in the opera Clari, or The Maid of Milan, 1823), and was author, translator, or adapter of more than 60 plays, among them his successful Brutus, or The Fall of Tarquin (1818), and several written in collaboration with Washington Irving.

Payne, Sereno Elisha. b. at Hamilton, N.Y., June 26, 1843; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 10, 1914. American lawyer and politician. He served (1883-87, 1889-1914) in the U.S. House of Representatives, where he was co-sponsor of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff in 1909.

Payne-Aldrich Tariff (-ôl'drich). High protectionist measure passed by the U.S. Congress in 1909 providing for increased duties on some 600 items and eliminating the reciprocity provisions of the Dingley Tariff of 1897. The raised duties were effected under the Republican leadership of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, who revised upward schedules contained in the tariff bill sponsored by S. E. Payne and passed by the House of Representatives. It is held that the grievances touched off among agrarian insurgents by the provisions of this act aided in bringing about the political setback suffered by the Republicans in the Congressional elections of 1910 and led to the election of Woodrow Wilson in the presidential contest of 1912.

Payró (pi-ró'), Roberto J. b. 1867; d. 1928. Argentine novelist, dramatist, and journalist. Author of Canción trágica (1900), Sobre las ruinas (1904), El Casamiento de Laucha (1936); his masterpiece, Historia de Pago Chico (1938), Violines y tonales (1908), Vivir quiero conmigo (1913), and others.

Paysandú or Paisandú (pā.sān.dó'). Department in W Uruguay, opposite Argentina: livestock, wheat, and wine. It was formed in 1837. Capital, Paysandú; area, 5,117 sq. mi.; pop. 86,390 (est. 1947).

Paysandú or Paisandú. [Former name, San Benito.] City in W Uruguay, capital of Paysandú department, a port on the Uruguay River, ab. 160 mi. N of Buenos Aires: meat packing, flour milling, tanning, canning, soap, sawmilling, and woodworking industries. The port is accessible to medium-sized ocean freighters, and has an active export trade. It was taken by the Brazilians after a bombardment Jan. 2, 1865. Pop. ab. 31,000 (est. 1949).

Pays-Bas (pā.ē.bā). French name of the Netherlands.

Pays de Gex (pā.ē de zhe). See Gex, Pays de.

Pays de Waas or Pays de Waes (pā.ē de vās). See Waasland.

Pays Messin (pā.ē me.sān'). See Messin, Pays.

Payson (pā'son). City in N Utah, in Utah County, in an onion-raising area. It was settled in 1850. Pop. 3,998 (1950).

Payson, Edward. b. at Rindge, N.H., July 25, 1783; d. at Portland, Me., Oct. 22, 1827. American Congregational divine, pastor at Portland. In his day, his sermons were said to have been read more than those of any other New England divine, except Timothy Dwight.

Payson, William Farquhar. b. at New York, Feb. 18, 1876; d. there, April 15, 1939. American writer and publisher. Author of The Triumph of Life (1903), Give Me Tomorrow (1936), and the play Candles in the Sky (1931). His Debonnaire (1904) was later adapted for the stage and his Barry Gordon (1908) and Periwinkle (1910) were both filmed.

Payta (pi'tā'). See Paita.

Paytiti (pi.tē.tē). [Also: Gran Paytiti, Paititi.] Legendary empire said to have been established by Incaes who fled from Peru after the Spanish conquest. Reports located it somewhere in the forests of NE Peru, and described a magnificent capital city. Various expeditions were made in search of it during the 17th and 18th centuries.

Paz (pāz; Anglicized, pāz), La. See La Paz.

Pazardjik or Pazardzhik or Pazardzik (pā.zār.jēk'). See Tatar Pazardzhik.

Paz Estenssoro (pās es.ten.sō'rō), Victor. b. at Tarija, Bolivia, Oct. 2, 1907—. Bolivian political leader. He held several posts in government financial bureaus before serving (1943-43) as a legislative deputy. He was vice-president of the chamber of deputies (1943-41), minister of economics (1941), and minister of finance (1943-44). Since 1941 he has been professor of the history of economic doctrines and of finance at San Andrés University. Leader of the National Revolutionary Movement, Paz Estenssoro has been one of Bolivia's most controversial figures; his support comes from the overworked tin miners who form Bolivia's principal industrial bloc, but his program is nationalistic to the extreme, pro-Communist, anti-Yankee, and anti-Semite, and many Bolivians think him dangerous to the country's welfare. Therefore when, in 1951, Paz Estenssoro won a plurality of votes in the presidential election, and by constitutional provision the election was then thrown into the congress to decide, President Mamerto Urriolagoitia resigned before the congress had a chance to act and gave the government into the hands of a junta to prevent Paz Estenssoro from taking office. However, early in 1952 the junta was overthrown and Paz Estenssoro returned from Argentine exile to assume the presidency.

Paz Soldán (pās sōl.dān'), Mariano Felipe. b. at Arequipa, Peru, in August, 1821; d. at Lima, Peru, Dec. 31, 1886. Peruvian geographer, historian, and jurist; brother of Mateo Paz Soldán. His works include Atlas geográfico del Perú (1861; French trans., 1865), accompanying the Geografía del Perú of his brother, Historia del Perú independiente (1866), Diccionario geográfico estadístico del Perú (1877), Diccionario de la República Argentina (1884), and Historia de la Guerra del Pacífico (1884).

Paz Soldán, Mateo. b. at Arequipa, Peru, 1814; d. c.1872. Peruvian mathematician and author; brother of M. F. Paz Soldán. He published several mathematical works and a treatise on the geography of Peru.

Pazzi (pát'sé). Power family of Florence, noted for their unsuccessful conspiracy, backed by disaffected Florentine nobles and by Pope Sixtus IV, against the Medici in 1478. Their plot, which came to a head in the cathedral, resulted in the stabbing to death of Giuliano de' Medici and the wounding of Lorenzo de' Medici (Lorenzo the Magnificent). A popular uprising in support of the Medici took place; the Pazzi conspirators were tortured and killed.

Peabody (pē'bod'i, -bod.i). [Former name, South Danvers.] City in NE Massachusetts, in Essex County, ab. 14 mi. NE of Boston; important for leather processing. The name was changed in 1868 in honor of George Peabody (1795-1869). 22,645 (1950).

Peabody, Andrew Preston. b. at Beverley, Mass., March 19, 1811; d. March 10, 1893. American Unitarian clergyman and author. He was professor of Christian morals at Harvard (1860-81), and subsequently professor emeritus. He was for many years editor of the North American Review. Among his works are Lectures on Christian Doctrine (1844), Conversation (1856), Christianity the Religion of Nature (1864), Reminiscences of European Travel (1868), Manual of Moral Philosophy (1873), Christianity and Science (1874), Christian Belief and Life (1875), Moral Philosophy (1887), Building a Character (1887), and Harvard Reminiscences (1888).

Peabody, Elizabeth Palmer. b. at Billerica, Mass., May 16, 1804; d. at Jamaica Plain, Mass., Jan. 3, 1894. American educator and author; sister of Mary, wife of Horace Mann, and Sophia, wife of Nathaniel Hawthorne. She established (1822, 1825) private schools at Boston, where she was secretary to William Ellery Channing and formed her association with the New England Transcendentalists. She was assistant (1834-36) to Bronson Alcott at the Temple School at Boston and in 1839 established a bookshop at Boston which became a Transcendentalist center; she subsequently (1842-43) published the Dial, to which she also contributed articles. She was active (1850-60) in championing the study of history in public schools and opened (1860) at Boston the first U.S. kindergarten, the operations of which were initially based upon Friedrich Froebel's theories. She published (1873-75) the Kindergarten Messenger and lectured (1879-84) at Alcott's Concord School of Philosophy. Her works include Record of a School (1835), Reminiscences of Rev. William Ellery Channing, D.D. (1880), and A Last Evening with Alston (1886).

Peabody, Endicott. b. at Salem, Mass., May 30, 1857; d. near Ayer, Mass., Nov. 17, 1944. American educator, a founder (1884) and first headmaster (1884-1940) of Grotton School, Grotton, Mass.

Peabody, Francis Greenwood. b. at Boston, Dec. 4, 1847; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 28, 1936. American theologian. He was Parkman professor of theology in Harvard University (1881-86), Plummer professor of Christian morals (1886-1913), and dean of the divinity school (1901-05). He wrote Mornings in the College Chapel (1896, 1908), Afternoons in the College Chapel (1898), Jesus Christ and the Social Question (1900), The Approach to the Social Question (1909), and The Rhythm of Life (1932).

Peabody, George. b. at South Danvers (now Peabody), Mass., Feb. 18, 1795; d. at London, Nov. 4, 1869. American merchant, financier, and philanthropist. Beginning as a grocer's apprentice, he subsequently became a partner in the dry-goods concern of Riggs and Peabody at Georgetown (in the District of Columbia) and Baltimore. In 1835 he negotiated at London a loan of eight million dollars for the state of Maryland which saved it from bankruptcy. He settled (1837) at London, the seat of George Peabody and Company, a firm that soon achieved a position of leadership in the banking world; after Peabody's retirement (1864), his partner Junius Spencer

Morgan reorganized the firm and founded thereby the banking house carried on by his son J. P. Morgan. Among his many benefactions were the gifts that founded the Peabody Institute at Baltimore, the Peabody Museum of natural history and natural science at Yale, the Peabody Museum of archaeology and ethnology at Harvard, and the Peabody Education Fund for promoting education in the South. To the City of London he donated two and a half million dollars for the construction of low-rental workmen's tenements.

Peabody, George Foster. b. at Columbus, Ga., July 27, 1852; d. at Warm Springs, Ga., March 4, 1938. American banker, director (1914-21) of the Federal Reserve Bank at New York. He organized the New York state reservation at Saratoga Springs and donated his estate, Yaddo, at Saratoga as a retreat for persons engaged in the arts. The George Foster Peabody awards for merit in broadcasting were established (1940) in his memory.

Peabody, Josephine Preston. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., May 30, 1874; d. Dec. 4, 1922. American poet and playwright. She was educated at Radcliffe College (1894-96) and was instructor in literature at Wellesley College (1901-03). She wrote The Waitresses, verse (1898), the plays Fortune and Men's Eyes (1900) and Marlowe (1901), The Singing Leaves (1903), The Wings (1905), The Piper, a drama which won the Stratford-on-Avon prize (1909), The Singing Man, poems (1911), a drama, The Wolf of Gubbio (1913), poems, Harvest Moon (1916), and a play, Portrait of Mrs. W. (1922).

Peabody, Robert Swain. b. at New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 22, 1845; d. Sept. 23, 1917. American architect. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1866, and later studied at the École des Beaux-Arts, Paris. From 1870 he practiced architecture at Boston. He was chairman of the Boston Park Commission.

Peabody, Selim Hobart. b. at Rockingham, Vt., Aug. 20, 1829; d. at St. Louis, Mo., May 26, 1903. American educator. He served (1878-80) as professor of mechanical engineering and physics at Illinois Industrial University, of which he officially became regent in 1881. He remained at this institution (which in 1885 became known as the University of Illinois) as its president until 1891, afterwards being associated in various capacities with the World's Columbian Exposition (Chicago), the World's Fair (Paris), and the Pan-American Exposition (Buffalo).

Peabody Institute. Institution at Baltimore, founded by George Foster Peabody, and containing a library, conservatory of music, and art gallery.

Peace, The. Comedy by Aristophanes, exhibited in 419 B.C. Its aim was to commend the anticipated peace of Nicias.

Peace Convention (or Conference). See Conference Convention.

Peace Democrats. See Copperheads.

Peacemaker, the. Epithet of Edward VII (of England). Peace of Monsieur (mē.syē'). Peace forced upon Henry III of France in 1576 by a combination of Huguenots, the Politiques, and François, Duc d'Alençon ("Monsieur"). Great concessions were made to the Huguenots and to the Duc d'Alençon.

Peace of Paris, First and Second. See under Paris, Treaties of.

Peace River (pēs). Town in W Alberta, Canada, ab. 344 mi. by road NW of Edmonton, with which it is also connected by rail. The town is on the Peace River and is one of the more important settlements in the Peace River country, a wheat-farming area, 1,672 (1951).

Peace River. River in N Alberta, Canada, which rises in British Columbia and flows into Lake Athabaska. Length, ab. 945 mi.; including the Finlay, ab. 1,195 mi.

Peachey Carnahan (pē'chi kār'na.han). See Carnahan, Peachey.

Peachtree Creek (pēch'trē). Small tributary of the Chattahoochee River, near Atlanta, Ga. Here, July 19-20, 1864, Union forces under W. T. Sherman defeated the Confederates under J. B. Hood.

Peachum (pē'chum). Character in John Gay's The Beggar's Opera. He is a receiver of stolen goods, and the father of Polly Peachum, the principal female character, who marries the highwayman Macheath.

Peacock (pē'kok), Thomas Love. b. at Weymouth, Dorsetshire, England, Oct. 18, 1785; d. at Lower Hallifat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

ford, near Chertsey, England, Jan. 23, 1866. English satirical novelist and poet. He was intimately associated with Shelley and Byron, and was literary executor of the former. In 1816 he published Headlong Hall, followed by Melincourt in 1817. He published Nightmare Abbey and Rhododaphne, a volume of verse (1818). In 1819 he was made assistant examiner at the India House, and in 1836 he succeeded Mill as chief examiner. Maid Marian appeared in 1822, The Misfortunes of Elphin in 1829, Crotchet Castle in 1837, and Gryll Grange in 1860.

Peak Cavern (pĕk). [Also, Devil's Hole.] Stalactite cave in C England, in Derbyshire, near Castleton in the Peak District. Depth, 2,250 ft.

Peak District. Hilly region in C England, principally in Derbyshire. It extends from Glossop to Ashbourne N and S, and from Chesterfield to Buxton E and W, and contains some picturesque scenery. Highest point, Kinder Scout, often called the Peak (2,088 ft.).

Peake (pĕk), Frederick Gerard. [Called Peake Pasha.] b. 1886— . British soldier who founded and trained the Arab Legion in Transjordan (now Jordan). He served (to 1913) in India, and joined (1913) the Egyptian army. He commanded (1922–39) the Arab Legion, as director of public security for Transjordan, before turning the Legion over to Glubb Pasha in 1939, when he returned to England as minister of civil defense.

Peaks of Otter (ot'ĕr). See Otter, Peaks of.

Peale (pĕl), Charles Willson. b. at Chestertown, Md., April 16, 1741; d. at Philadelphia, Feb. 22, 1827. American portrait painter. In the period 1772 through 1795 he did from life upwards of a dozen portraits of George Washington (under whom he served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War). He was a founder of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

Peale, Rembrandt. b. in Bucks County, Pa., Feb. 22, 1778; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 3, 1860. American painter, chiefly of portraits; son of Charles Willson Peale.

Peano (pĕ-ā'no), Giuseppe. b. at Cuneo, Italy, Aug. 27, 1858; d. at Turin, Italy, April 20, 1932. Italian mathematician, noted particularly for work in vector algebra, formal logic, and geometric calculus. His work in symbolic logic is paralleled by his invention (1903) of a proposed international language, Interlingua or Latino sine flexione, with a vocabulary drawn from Latin, French, English, and German. He was editor of Rivista di matematica (1891–1906) and of Formulaire de mathématiques (1895–1908). His works include Calcolo differenziale e principio di calcolo integrale (1884), Applicazioni geometriche del calcolo infinitesimale (1887), Calcolo geometrico (1888), Arithmetica principia nova methodo exposita (1889), I Principi di geometria logicamente esposti (1889), and Lezioni di anal. infinitesimale (2 vols., 1893).

Pearce (pĭrs), James Alfred. b. at Alexandria, Va., Dec. 14, 1805; d. at Chestertown, Md., Dec. 20, 1862. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Maryland (1835–39, 1841–43), and U.S. senator (1843–62).

Pea Ridge (pĕ). Place in NW Arkansas, in Benton County, near the Missouri border. Here, March 7–8, 1862, Union forces (10,500) under S. R. Curtis defeated the Confederates (16,202) under Earl Van Dorn. The Union loss was 1,384; the Confederate loss was 1,300. Pop. 268 (1950).

Pearl (pĕrl). See also Canton River.

Pearl. River in Mississippi which forms in its lower course part of the boundary between Mississippi and Louisiana, and flows into the Gulf of Mexico ab. 40 mi. NE of New Orleans. Length, ab. 490 mi.

Pearl, Raymond. b. at Farmington, N.H., June 3, 1879; d. at Hershey, Pa., Nov. 17, 1940. American biologist. He was a professor (1918–40) at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, being closely associated at the same time with the hospital. He was the author of Variation and Differentiation in Ceratophyllum (1937), Modes of Research in Genetics (1915), The Nation's Food (1919), The Biology of Death (1922), The Biology of Population Growth (1925), The Natural History of Population (1939), and collaborated with his daughter on The Ancestry of the Long-lived (1934).

Pearl, The. Middle English poem, written in the latter half of the 14th century. A poem of 100 12-line stanzas, it is an allegory, usually considered an elegiac lament for the unknown poet's two-year-old daughter. The dream symbolism of the poem is drawn from the Apocalypse and from the Roman de la Rose. As an example of personal poetry lyrically handled it is unequaled in Middle English literature.

Pearl Coast. Name given by the early Spanish explorers to the coast of Venezuela from Cumaná to Trinidad. Christopher Columbus first visited (1498) this region and obtained pearls from the Indians; subsequently extensive pearl fisheries were established, especially at the islands off the coast.

Pearl Harbor. Inlet of the Pacific Ocean in the Hawaiian Islands, indenting the S coast of Oahu, ab. 6 mi. W of Honolulu. Actually landlocked, it is an excellent harbor which has been developed (1909 et seq.) into one of the greatest of U.S. naval bases. Access to the open sea is gained through a carefully guarded opening. It was a surprise Japanese air attack (Dec. 7, 1941) on the U.S. Pacific fleet and air installations at this base which plunged the U.S. into World War II. The attack, which involved a total of 105 Japanese carrier-launched bombers and lasted for two hours, began at 7:55 A.M. on Sunday morning, damaged 19 American vessels, sinking or wrecking six battleships, and caused combined U.S. service casualties totaling 3,393 killed or missing and 1,272 wounded. Synchronized with other Japanese actions against U.S. forces elsewhere in the Pacific, the attack took place while U.S.-Japanese negotiations were under way at Washington, D.C. On Dec. 8, 1941, the U.S. Congress declared a state of war with the Japanese Empire, thereby marking the American entry into World War II. Blame for the unpreparedness of the U.S. garrison was at first placed by the presidential investigating committee under Owen Roberts on General Walter C. Short and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, army and navy commandants, but a Congressional investigating committee (1945–46) absolved them personally and laid the onus on the War and Navy departments.

Pearl Islands. Old name for islands off the coast of Venezuela (Margarita and others).

Pearl of Orr's Island (ōrz). The. Novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, published in 1862.

"Pearl of the Antilles" (an'til'ēz). A nickname of Cuba.

Pearl River. See also Pearl; also Canton River.

Pearl River. Unincorporated community in SE New York, in Rockland County. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 3,416 (1940).

Pearls, Gulf of. See Paria, Gulf of.

Pearsall (pĭr'sōl). City in S Texas, county seat of Frio County, in a truck-gardening and petroleum area. 4,481 (1950).

Pearse (pĭrs), Patrick Henry. [Called Padraic Pearse.] b. at Dublin, Nov. 10, 1879; d. there, May 3, 1916. Irish educator, writer, and patriot, a leader in the Easter Rebellion of 1916. Son of an English father and Irish mother, as a boy he dedicated his life to the service and the cause of Ireland. Drawn into the Gaelic Revival, he so mastered that language that he could use it as a literary medium equally with English, and for some years he edited An Claidheamh Solais (The Sword of Light), organ of the Gaelic League. Admitted to the bar in 1901, he seems never to have practiced law; his interest lay in education, and in 1903 he opened Saint Enda's School for boys, and a few years later Saint Ita's School for girls, both offering instruction through the media of Gaelic and English. In this connection he studied bilingual educational techniques in Belgium. He set before his pupils ideals derived alike from ancient Irish legendry and from Catholic Christian ethics. While raising funds for his schools in the U.S. in 1913–14, he met the old Fenian leader John Devoy, and on his return to Ireland he joined, and became a leader of, the Irish Republican Brotherhood (I.R.B.). Prior to this he had helped call the Irish Volunteers into being; and after the outbreak of World War I, when John Redmond, leader of the Irish Party in the British Parliament, split the Volunteers by attempting to recruit them for the British armed forces, Pearse became director of organization of the wing which repudiated Redmond. From the moment Great Britain became involved in a major war, the I.R.B. was resolved to utilize the opportunity to strike for Irish freedom. The Revolutionary Council of the I.R.B., of which Pearse was a member, determined upon rebellion in the spring of 1916; and when the intelligence agents learned that the British authorities were about to arrest all Irish nationalist leaders they could lay hands on, Easter Sunday was set as the day to strike, and Pearse was designated president of the provisional government and commander in chief of the armed forces of the Irish Republic. A series of misunderstandings led to countermarching of the orders for a general mobilization on Sunday, but the revolutionary council mustered about 800 men (later increased to about 1,200) in Dublin, and a few hundred in other parts of the country, on the following day. Thus on Easter Monday, April 24, 1916, Pearse, at the foot of Nelson's Pillar in Dublin, read the proclamation of the Irish Republic, while his troops seized the general post office and other strategic locations. For six days the patriot forces held their own, but British artillery fire forced them to surrender on Saturday, April 29. On May 3 Pearse and two of his comrades were executed by a firing squad, and further executions followed.

Pearson (pir'son), Drew. [Pen name of Andrew Russell Pearson.] b. at Evanston, Ill., Dec. 13, 1897—. American journalist. After serving (1919) in the Balkans as director of relief for the British Red Cross, he headed (1919-21) the relief operations of the American Friends Service Committee in Serbia, Montenegro, and Albania. He taught industrial geography at Pennsylvania (1921-22) and commercial geography at Columbia (1924), but spent much time traveling. In 1926 he became foreign editor of U.S. Daily and in 1929 was a member of the Baltimore Sun's Washington staff. He collaborated with Robert Allen in an exposé of political life in the nation's capital which they published anonymously in 1931; the book, The Washington Merry-Go-Round, was a great success and they followed it with Merry-Go-Round and a daily column (1932 et seq.) on the same subject (Pearson continued the column alone after Allen joined the armed services in 1942). They collaborated also in Nine Old Men (1936), a book about the Supreme Court published at the time of F. D. Roosevelt's fight to limit the court's power. Pearson, who does not hesitate to write what he considers news, has been called undignified names by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman and has been involved in physical altercation with indignant congressmen and others several times. In the tradition of crusading journalism, he continues to conduct his column in his own way; his public service is best illustrated by his origination (1947) of the concept of the Friendship Train, which traveled through the U.S. collecting gifts for the people of western Europe.

Pearson, Edmund Lester. b. at Newburyport, Mass., Feb. 11, 1880; d. Aug. 8, 1937. American writer, notably of such nonfiction works as Studies in Murder (1924), Five Murders (1928), and More Studies in Murder (1936). Author also of The Old Librarian's Almanack (1909), The Believing Years (1911), Theodore Roosevelt (1920), Queer Books (1928), Dime Novels (1929), and Instigation of the Devil (1930).

Pearson, John. b. at Great Snoring, Norfolk, England, Feb. 23, 1613; d. at Chester, England, July 16, 1686. English bishop and theological writer. He took orders in 1639, and in 1640 was chaplain to Lord Keeper Finch. He was a Royalist chaplain during the English Civil War. A defender of the English church against both Puritans and Roman Catholics, in 1659 he published the Exposition of the Creed, one of the monuments of English theology. In 1661 he was one of the commissioners on the review of the liturgy at the Savoy. On April 13, 1662, he was appointed master of Trinity College, Cambridge; and in 1673 he was made bishop of Chester. His defense of the authenticity of the Ignatian epistles (1672) has since been shown to be correct.

Pearson, Karl. b. at London, March 27, 1857; d. April 27, 1936. English mathematician, Galton professor of eugenics and director of the Laboratory for National Eugenics in the University of London. He wrote The Ethic of Free Thought (1888), The Grammar of Science (1892; enlarged 1899), The Chances of Death and Other Studies in Evolution (1897), National Life from the Standpoint of Science (1901), Scope and Importance to the State of the Science of National Eugenics (1907), and others. He was one of the editors (1901 et seq.) of Biometrika.

Pearson, Lester Bowles. b. at Toronto, Ontario, Canada, April 23, 1897—. Canadian diplomat. He taught history (1924-28) at the University of Toronto before serving (1928-35) as first secretary of the department of external affairs. He served as Canadian representative at a number of conferences and was secretary for the Canadian high commissioner at London (1935-41). He was assistant secretary of state for external affairs (1941-42), served with the Canadian legation at Washington (1942-44), and was Canadian ambassador to the U.S. (1944-46). He was senior adviser to the Canadian delegation at the San Francisco conference (1945) to organize the United Nations. After serving (1946-48) as undersecretary of state for external affairs and as head of the Canadian delegation to the general assembly of the United Nations, he became (1948) Canadian foreign secretary. Pearson was chairman (1947) of the United Nations committee on the Palestine problem, headed (1949) the political committee, and in 1952 he was elected president of the general assembly. In 1948 he was elected to the House of Commons.

Peary (pir'i), Marie Ahnighito. [Called "the Snow-baby"; married name, Staford.] b. at Inglefield Gulf, Greenland, Sept. 12, 1893—. American writer; daughter of Robert Edwin Peary. She was born, during one of her father's voyages, further north (67° N.) than any other white child.

Peary, Robert Edwin. b. at Cresson, Pa., May 6, 1856; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 20, 1920. American Arctic explorer, discoverer of the North Pole. In 1886 he made a journey to Greenland, advancing for a hundred miles or more upon the interior ice. In June, 1891, as chief of the Arctic expedition of the Academy of Natural Sciences, he sailed from New York in the Kite, and made his headquarters at McCormick Bay, on the NW coast of Greenland. He made sledge excursions along Whal's Sound, Inglefield Gulf, and Humboldt Glacier, traversed the inland ice from McCormick Bay to the NE angle of Greenland (Independence Fjord, lat. 81°37' N.), and proved the convergence of the E and W coasts of N Greenland, and almost with positiveness the insularity of the mainland. He discovered new lands lying beyond Greenland, and named many glaciers. In September, 1892, he returned to the U.S. In July, 1893, he sailed again, in the Falcon, intending to survey the NE coast of Greenland, and if possible to push on toward the North Pole. He was unsuccessful and returned in September, 1893, bringing with him two of three large meteorites that had been a supply of iron for the Eskimos. In 1895 he again returned to the attack upon the Pole. He made his winter quarters at Etah, near Smith Sound, and established caches of supplies as far as Fort Conger, in N Ellesmere Island. In the spring of 1895 he set out from Fort Conger, and traced the northern limit of the Greenland archipelago, reaching the highest latitude (83°50' N.) then attained in the Western Hemisphere. He intended to renew the attempt to reach the Pole each spring until he should succeed. But he returned in September, 1892, having reached lat. 81°17' N. His wife, Josephine, Diebitsch Peary, author of My Arctic Journal (1893), accompanied the expeditions of 1891-92, 1893-94, and 1900-01 (relief expedition) as far as the winter quarters; in 1893 she gave birth to their daughter Marie at Inglefield Gulf. In July, 1905, he again set out for the Pole in the Roosevelt. He wintered on the NE coast of Grant Land and in February, 1906, started north. He reached lat. 87°6' N. on April 21. He was obliged to return owing to lack of supplies. During this expedition he traced the N coast of Grant Land (the N part of Ellesmere Island) and discovered new land at about long. 100° W. He planned another attempt to reach the pole in 1907, but was obliged to postpone it until 1908. On July 17 he set sail in the Roosevelt from Sydney, Cape Breton, intending to winter in the north of Grant Land. On his return he announced by wireless message from Indian Harbor, Labrador, on Sept. 6, 1903, that he had reached the Pole April 6, 1909. He arrived in the Roosevelt at Cape Sheridan, in NE Grant Land.

where he wintered, on Sept. 1, 1908. The sledge expedition (including seven members of the exploring party and 59 Eskimos) was begun Feb. 15-22. Peary himself starting on the latter date, and arrived at Cape Columbia, on the N coast of Grunt Land. On March 1 the dash from Cape Columbia for the Pole was begun. The Pole was reached by Peary, his Negro servant Matthew Henson, and four Eskimos on April 6 and was left on April 7, and Cape Columbia was reached on April 23. Peary's claim to be first to the Pole was disputed, even before his announcement of success, by Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who claimed that he had reached the Pole in April, 1908. The proofs Cook submitted were checked and found to be wanting and his prior claim was discredited. But, backed by many reputable geographers, he continued to maintain until his death in 1940 that he and not Peary had been the first to the Pole. Peary wrote Northward Over the Great Ice (1898), Nearest the Pole (1907), and The North Pole (1910). He received the thanks of Congress and was retired with the rank of rear admiral in 1911.

Peasants' War. Insurrection of the peasantry in S Germany against the nobles and clergy. It broke out in 1524, and spread through Franconia, Swabia, Thuringia, and Alsace, being suppressed with great cruelty in May and June, 1525, though it continued until 1526 in Austria.

Pease (pēz), Alfred Humphreys. b. at Cleveland, Ohio, May 6, 1838; d. at St. Louis, Mo., July 13, 1882. American pianist, composer of many songs and a piano concerto.

Pease, Calvin. b. Aug. 12, 1813; d. Sept. 17, 1863. American Congregational (later Presbyterian) clergyman, president of the University of Vermont (1855-61).

Pease, Francis Gladheim. b. at Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14, 1881; d. at Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 7, 1938. American astronomer and designer of optical instruments. Optician and observer (1901-04) at Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., he became instrument designer (1904-07, 1908-13) and astronomer (1911 et seq.) at Mount Wilson Observatory at Pasadena, Calif. He was noted for his direct photography and spectrograms of nebulae, star clusters, the Moon, and the planets. He measured the velocity of light, with A. A. Michelson, and, by the interferometer, the diameters of stars. He designed the 100-inch and 50-foot telescopes at Mount Wilson, and was associated in the design of the 200-inch Palomar reflector, devising the grinding method for its mirror.

Peaseblossom (pēz'blōs'om). Fairy in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

Peaslee (pēz'li), Edmund Randolph. b. at Newton, Rockingham County, N.H., Jan. 22, 1814; d. at New York, Jan. 21, 1878. American gynecologist and teacher.

Peattie (pē'ti), Donald Culross. b. at Chicago, June 21, 1898—. American botanist and writer; brother of Roderick Peattie. He was a botanist (1922-25) with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Author of Cargoes and Harvests (1926), Port of Call (1932), Singing in the Wilderness (1935), Green Laurels (1936), Flowering Earth (1939), The Road of a Naturalist (1941), Journeys into America (1943), Immortal Village (1945), and other books. He was coauthor with his wife, Louise Redfield Peattie, of Up Country (1928), Down Wind (1929), The Happy Kingdom (1935), and others.

Peattie, Louise Redfield. b. at Kennicott's Grove, Glenview, Ill., June 14, 1900—. American writer. Author of Dayuy (1928), Pan's Parish (1931), Wife to Caliban (1934), American Acres (1936), The Californians (1940), Ring Finger (1943), and other books, some in collaboration with her husband, Donald Culross Peattie, whom she married in 1923.

Peattie, Roderick. b. at Omaha, Neb., Aug. 1, 1891—. American geographer and author; brother of Donald Culross Peattie. Professor (1925 et seq.) at Ohio State. His books include Geography in Human Destiny (1940) and The Incurable Romantic (1941). He edited The Berkshires—The Purple Hills (1948).

Peba (pā'bā). [Also: Peva, Yagua.] Tribe of South American Indians of NE Peru. The classification of their language is still a matter of research and conjecture. Both Carib and Arawak affinities have been suggested for it. It is called Peba by one group of South American Indian linguists, and Yagua by another (whence their language family is now referred to as Peba-Yagua).

Peč or Pech (pech). [Turkish, Ipek.] Town in S central Yugoslavia, in the autonomous province of Kosovo-Metohija, formerly in the banovina (province) of Zetska, S of Novi Pazar and NW of Skopje. It was the seat of the Serbian patriarchate under the Turks, before its removal to Belgrade, 17,175 (1948).

Pecanha (pe.su'nyā), Nilo. b. 1867; d. 1924. Brazilian jurist and political leader, president (1909-10) of Brazil. He was foreign minister (1917-18).

Pecci (pe'chē), Gioacchino Vincenzo Raffaele Luigi. Original name of Pope Leo XIII.

Peck (pech). See Peč.

Pecheneg (pech.e'nyeg'). Turkic nomads who dominated the steppes of S Russia between the Danube and the Don rivers in the 10th century A.D. The struggles of the early Russian principality of Kiev against the Pechenegs are recounted in the historical epic The Tale of the Host of Igor. In the middle of the 11th century the Pechenegs were forced westward by the Polovetsy and disappeared from history.

Pêcheurs de Perles (pe.shēr de perl), Les. [Eng. trans., "The Pearl Fishers."] Opera in three acts by Georges Bizet, with a libretto by Michel Carré and Cormon, first performed at the Paris Théâtre-Lyrique on Sept. 29, 1863. The work, adapted from a Ceylonese legend, contains the tenor aria Je crois entendre encore.

Pe-chi-lí (pe'ch'i'li), Gulf of. See Po Hai.

Pechora or Petchora (pe.chó'ra; Russian, pi.chó'ra). River in NW U.S.S.R. which flows from the Urals into the Barents Sea. Length, ab. 1,112 mi.

Pechstein (pech'shtin), Max. b. at Zwickau, Germany, Dec. 31, 1881—. German expressionist painter and designer. He worked in Italy and at Paris. Giotto, Van Gogh, Gauguin, and Matisse were all (at different times) influences on his work. Among his works are Life Boat, Double Portrait, Landscape, In the Sun, Two Girls on the Dunes, Still Life, Morning, Evening in Montreux, and Portrait of Dr. Pletzh.

Pecht (pēcht), Friedrich. b. at Konstanz, Baden, Germany, Oct. 2, 1814; d. at Munich, April 24, 1903. German painter and writer on art. Among his works is Galleries of Characters from Schiller, Goethe, Lessing, and Shakespeare.

Pechuel-Lösche (pesh'wēl.lō'she), Moritz Eduard. b. near Mersburg, Germany, July 26, 1840; d. at Munich, May 29, 1913. German traveler in the West Indies, Oceania, Africa, and the Arctic and Antarctic seas.

Peck (pek), Annie Smith. b. at Providence, R.I., Oct. 19, 1850; d. July 18, 1935. American explorer, especially noted as a mountain climber. She climbed the Matterhorn in 1895, and Popocatepetl and Orizaba in 1897, and in 1908 made the first ascent of Huascarán in Peru, one of whose peaks is named in her honor.

Peck, Charles Horton. b. at Sand Lake (now Averill Park), Rensselaer County, N.Y., March 30, 1833; d. at Menands, N.Y., July 11, 1917. American mycologist. A pioneer in the close investigation of fungi of the U.S. and Canada, he described some 2,500 new species and made fundamental contributions to American mycology.

Peck, George Wilbur. b. at Henderson, N.Y., Sept. 28, 1843; d. April 16, 1916. American journalist, humorist, and politician, noted as the creator of the "Peck's Bad Boy" stories. After serving in the Civil War, he established the Representative, a weekly published at Ripon, Wis., edited (1871-74) the La Crosse Democrat, and then founded the Sun, which he subsequently published (1874 et seq.) at Milwaukee. He was elected (1890) mayor of Milwaukee, and later in the same year was elected governor of Wisconsin, a post he held until 1894. His works include Adventures of One Terence McGrant (1871), Peck's Bad Boy and His Pa (1883), The Grocery Man and Peck's Bad Boy (1883), How Private Geo. W. Peck Put Down the Rebellion (1887), Peck's Uncle Ike and the Red Headed Boy (1899), Sunbeams—Humor, Sarcasm and Sense (1903), Peck's Bad Boy with the Circus (1906), and Peck's Bad Boy with the Cowboys (1907).

Peck, Harry Thurston. b. at Stamford, Conn., 1856; committed suicide, 1914. American educator and critic, teacher (1882-1910) at Columbia University. He was editor (1895 et seq.) of The Bookman, a literary periodical, and of the Harper's Dictionary of Classical Literature and Antiquities (1898).

Peckham (pek'am), Rufus Wheeler. b. Nov. 8, 1838; d. Oct. 24, 1909. American jurist; brother of Wheeler Hazard Peckham. He was a justice of the supreme court of New York (1883-86), associate judge of the court of appeals, New York (1886-95), and an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1895-1909).

Peckham, Wheeler Hazard. b. at Albany, N.Y., Jan. 1, 1833; d. at New York, Sept. 27, 1905. American lawyer; brother of Rufus Wheeler Peckham. Admitted (1854) to the bar, he practiced law in Iowa and Minnesota until 1864, when he established a practice at New York, where he took part (1873) in prosecuting members of the Tweed Ring. In 1884 he was named district attorney at New York by Governor Grover Cleveland who, as president in 1894, nominated him to the U.S. Supreme Court. His confirmation was blocked by Senators David Bennett Hill and Murphy of New York.

Pecksniff (pek'snif). Notorious hypocrite in Charles Dickens's Martin Chuzzlewit. He has two daughters: Mercy (Merry), married to Jonas Chuzzlewit, and Charity (Cherry), who is a victim of her own misplaced affection.

Peckock (pē'kok), Reginald. b. probably in Wales, c1395; d. c1460. English prelate. He was bishop of St. Asaph (1444-49), and of Chichester (1450-59). He was the author of Repressor of Overmuch Weeting (Blaming) of the Clergy (c1455), an anti-Lollard work, important as a fine example of 15th-century English. He was a privy councillor (1454-57).

Pecora (pē'kō'ra), Ferdinand. b. at Nicosia, Sicily, Jan. 6, 1882—. American lawyer and jurist who served (1935 et seq.) as justice of the New York State supreme court. He was a member (1918-30) of the New York County district attorney's office. As counsel (1933-34) for the U.S. Senate investigation of banking and stock-market practices, he helped establish the Securities and Exchange Commission and was appointed a member (1934). Author of Wall Street Under Oath (1939).

Pecorata (pā.kō.rō'nā), II. [Eng. trans., "The Dunc."] Collection of 50 tales by Ser Giovanni Fiorentino. He began to write them in 1376, but the book was not published until 1558 at Milan. The stories were mostly drawn from the chronicles of Giovanni Villani. William Painter, in his Palace of Pleasure, and subsequent writers are indebted to it.

Pecos (pā'kōs). Large ruined Pueblo Indian village at the headwaters of the Pecos River near Santa Fe, N.M. It was one of the easternmost outposts of Pueblo culture, occupied from 1300 to 1838 A.D. A flourishing settlement when the expedition of Coronado passed through New Mexico, it waned in later years and was abandoned in 1838. Excavations have revealed the remains of at least six successive towns, which reached the peak of their development during the Regressive Pueblo period (1300-1700 A.D.). Glazed pottery is typical. Its aboriginal name was Tshiquite, written Cicuite by the older Spanish chroniclers. The language was of the Tanoan family.

Pecos (pā'kōs). City in W Texas, county seat of Reeves County, SE of El Paso, in a petroleum and cattle region. One of the earliest versions of the rodeo was presented here in 1884. Pop. 8,054 (1950).

Pecos Bill. Culture hero of the cowboys, particularly those of the American Southwest. The legend is that he fell out of the wagon when his parents were moving west and was brought up by the coyotes; but he discovered he was human because he had no tail, so he became a cow hand. Bill taught the broncos how to buck and the cowboys how to ride the broncos. He himself could ride anything (and did), from mountain lions to cyclones. Pecos Bill stalked out New Mexico, dug the Rio Grande, invented the lasso, the six-shooter, and Western movies, and skinned his buffaloes alive so they could grow new hides. He died from drinking nitroglycerine.

Pecos River. [Also, Rio Pecos.] River in New Mexico and W Texas which joins the Rio Grande, NW of Del Rio. It was visited c1583 by Antonio de Espejo, who called it Río de las Vacas because of the many buffalo he saw. Length, ab. 735 mi.

Pécs (päch). [German, Fünfkirchen; Latin, Sompiana.] City in SW Hungary, at the S foot of a range of low mountains, W of Mohács. It is the seat of a university, including a school of metallurgy and ceramics, and of a Roman Catholic bishopric. There are some metalworking and food-processing plants, an organ factory, and works producing chinaware and pottery. Lignite is mined in the vicinity. From 1543 to 1686 the city was under Turkish domination. 77,529 (1948).

Pecunia (pē.kū'nī.a), Lady. See under Argurion.

Pedacius (pē.dā'shūs) or Pedanius Dioscorides (pē.dā'nī.us dī.ōs.kor'ī.dēz). See Dioscorides, Pedacius.

Pedee (pē.dē'). See Pee Dee.

Pedersen (pē.dēr.sen), Christiern. b. c1480; d. 1554. Danish writer. His most important work was the translation, after Martin Luther's German version, of the Bible into Danish; the translation is known as the Christian III Bible and is considered the first step in the growth of the Danish literary language. His work includes also an edition of Saxo Grammaticus's Danish History, Danish versions of the Ogier and Charlemagne legends, and a number of Lutheran tracts.

Pedi (pā'dē). [Also: Bapedi, Pedi-Sutho.] Bantu-speaking people of the E Sotho group in S Africa, inhabiting an area near Johannesburg in the Union of South Africa. Their population is estimated at ab. 500,000 (by C. M. Doke, "The Linguistic Situation in South Africa," in Africa, vol. I, 1928). They are divided into a number of subgroups ruled by independent chiefs, whose positions are inherited patrilineally. They practice hoe agriculture and cattle herding, with the cattle complex. Their principal foods are maize ("mealies") and sorghum ("Kafir corn").

Pedianus (pē.dā'nī.us), Asconius. See Asconius.

Pedianus, Quintus.

Pedjeng (pē.jēng'). Archaeological site on the island of Bali. It contains many stone statues of the classic period of Hindu-Balinese art. A nearby temple harbors a bronze drum which has been attributed to the Dongson culture.

Pedrarías (pā.thrā'ryās). [Also: Pedrarías Dávila (dā'bē.lā); usual form of the name of Pedro Arias de Ávila.] b. in Segovia, Spain, c1440; d. at León, Nicaragua, c1531. Spanish soldier and colonial administrator. He served in the Moorish wars in Spain and Africa, and was sent (1514) with 1,500 men to replace Vasco Núñez de Balboa as governor of Darien. Quarrels and jealousy led to Balboa's trial and his execution (1517) in the presence of Pedrarías. In 1519 he founded the city of Panama and made it his capital. He dispatched (1522) Francisco Fernández de Córdoba to take over power in Nicaragua, but captured and killed him when he sought (1526) autonomy. He alternately aided and hindered Francisco Pizarro and Diego de Almagro in their Peruvian quests. His harshness and rapacity brought him numerous enemies, and contributed directly to his transfer to the lesser governorship of Nicaragua in 1526.

Pedraza (pā.thrā'sā), Manuel Gómez. b. at Querétaro, Mexico, c1788; d. at Mexico City, May 14, 1851. Mexican general and politician. He was secretary of war under Guadalupe Victoria (1825-29), and was elected to succeed him, but the election was annulled. Pedraza took part in the revolts of 1832, and was eventually president during the last months of his legal term, Dec. 26, 1832, to April 1, 1833. He held cabinet positions under Santa Anna, was a senator (1844), and was a presidential candidate in 1845 and 1850.

Pedrell (pā.thrē'l'), Felipe. b. at Tortosa, Spain, Feb. 19, 1841; d. at Barcelona, Spain, Aug. 19, 1922. Spanish composer, notable for his belief that a country's music should be grounded in its folk idiom. Among his works are the operas El Último Abenceraje and Cleopatra. He also wrote church music, chamber music, songs, and cantatas. He is the author of critical works such as Antología de Organistas Clásicos Españoles.

Pedro I (of Aragon) (pē'drō; Spanish, pā'thīrō). b. c1074; d. 1104. King of Aragon and Navarre (1094-1104).

Pedro II (of Aragon). King of Aragon (1196-1213).

Pedro III (of Aragon). King of Aragon (1276-85). He became king of Sicily on the expulsion of the French in 1282.

Pedro IV (of Aragon). King of Aragon (1336-87); son of Alfonso IV. He annexed the Balearic Islands in 1343.

Pedro I (of Brazil) (pē'drō; Portuguese, pā'drō). [Called Dom Pedro; Pedro IV of Portugal.] b. at Lisbon,

Portugal, Oct. 12, 1798; d. there, Sept. 24, 1834. First emperor (1822-31) of Brazil. He was the second son of Dom João, of the house of Braganza, who became John VI of Portugal in 1816; and, by the death of his elder brother, was heir apparent. In 1807 he was taken to Brazil with the royal family, who were fleeing the French. His father assumed the crown there, and returned to Portugal April 26, 1821, leaving Pedro as regent of Brazil. Early in 1822 the prince assumed the leadership of the party of opposition to Portugal, definitely pronounced for independence Sept. 7, and was proclaimed emperor Oct. 12 and crowned Dec. 1. The only serious resistance made by Portugal was in the northern provinces, and was soon overcome; in 1825 Portugal recognized the independence of Brazil. The popularity of the emperor, at first very great, was weakened by his reactionary policy in 1823, and especially by his forcible dissolution of the constituent assembly Nov. 12, 1823, and the banishment of the Andradas. On March 25, 1824, he accepted a constitution which had been prepared by a council of state, and which remained in force during the empire. In 1828 the Cisplatine province, or Uruguay, became independent after three years of war with Brazil. The increasing opposition to the emperor's policy at length provoked popular tumults. Convinced that he could no longer rule, he abdicated, April 7, 1831, in favor of his son, and soon after sailed for England. On the death of John VI (1826) he had been proclaimed king of Portugal, but had resigned the crown in favor of his daughter, Donna Maria da Gloria (Maria II), whom the usurpation of Dom Miguel, his brother, had deprived of her rights. On his arrival in Europe Pedro at once headed a movement in his daughter's favor, taking a personal part in the war (1832-34) in Portugal. He was finally successful, and his daughter was crowned, but he died two days after. He was twice married: in 1818 to the archduchess Maria Leopoldina of Austria, who died in December, 1826; and in 1829 to the princess Amelia (or Amélie) of Leuchtenberg.

Pedro II (of Brazil). [Called Dom Pedro II.] b. at Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 2, 1825; d. at Paris, Dec. 5, 1891. Second emperor (1831-89) of Brazil; son of Pedro I. His father resigned in his favor on April 7, 1831. During his minority Brazil was governed by regents; his majority was proclaimed July 23, 1840, and he was crowned July 18, 1841. He was married in 1843 to the princess Theresa Christina Maria, sister of the King of the Sicilies. His male children died young, and his eldest daughter, Isabel de Braganca, became his constitutional successor. The principal events of his reign were: transient rebellions in Minas Gerais and São Paulo, 1842; rebellion in Rio Grande do Sul finally suppressed, February, 1845; rebellion in Pernambuco suppressed, 1849; alliance with Uruguia and war with Uruguay, May, 1851, leading to the victory of Monte Caseros, Feb. 3, 1852, by which Rosas, dictator of Buenos Aires, was overthrown; invasion of Uruguay and alliance with Flores, 1864; war with Paraguay, 1865-70; commerce advanced on the Amazon (1867); law passed for the gradual abolition of slavery, September, 1871; slavery finally abolished as the result of a remarkable popular movement, May 13, 1888. Dom Pedro visited Europe (May, 1871-March, 1872); visited the U.S. (1876), passing thence to Europe, Palestine, and Egypt, and returning in September, 1877; and visited Europe a third time (1886-89). In each case he traveled as a private gentleman, and during his absence the princess Isabel acted as regent. By a revolution which broke out Nov. 15, 1889 (the principal movers being army officers), he was forced to resign, and was immediately sent to Europe. The ex-empress died in Portugal, Dec. 28, 1889, and thereafter Pedro resided generally in France. As a ruler he was noted for the protection which he accorded to science and literature, and he was greatly respected both at home and abroad.

Pedro I (of Portugal). b. 1320; d. 1367. King of Portugal (1357-67); son of Alfonso IV. He is noted in connection with the story of Inês de Castro.

Pedro II (of Portugal). b. 1648; d. 1706. King of Portugal (1683-1706). He is remembered for measures that greatly improved Portugal's financial condition, perhaps most notably for the commercial treaty (1703) with England that laid the basis for the close economic relationship between Portugal and England that existed for centuries thereafter.

Pedro III (of Portugal). b. 1717; d. 1786. King of Portugal (1777-86). He ruled jointly with his wife, Maria I.

Pedro IV (of Portugal). See Pedro I (of Brazil).

Pedro (pē'drō), Don. In Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, the Prince of Aragon.

Pedro de Cordova (pā'thō dā kōr'thō.bā). See Cordova, Pedro de.

Pedro el Cruel (pā'thō el krō.el'). [English, Peter the Cruel.] b. at Burgos, Spain, 1334; killed March 23, 1369. King of Castile and León (1350-69); son of Alfonso XI. With the aid of the English Edward, the Black Prince, he defeated his brother Henry of Trastámara at Navarrete (Nájera) in 1367, but was defeated and captured by him at Montiel, March 14, 1369. He was put to death by Henry, who ascended the throne.

Pedro Garcías (gār.thē'ās). See Garcías, Pedro.

Peebles (pē'blz). Royal burgh, holiday resort, and manufacturing center in SE Scotland, county seat of Peebleshire, on the river Tweed ab. 20 mi. S of Edinburgh, ab. 384 mi. N of London by rail. The town has manufactures of woolen textiles. There are traces of early British and Roman forts on the surrounding hills. It was at one time a royal residence. Neidpath Castle is nearby. 5,962 (est. 1948).

Peeblesshire (pē'blz.shir) or Peebles (pē'blz). [Also, Tweeddale.] Inland county in SE Scotland. It is bounded on the N and NE by Midlothian, on the E and SE by Selkirkshire, on the S by Dumfriesshire, and on the W by Lanarkshire. The surface is hilly or mountainous on both sides of the narrow valley of the upper river Tweed which traverses the central part of the county. The principal industry is sheep raising, with woolen manufacture being carried on in the valley of the Tweed (especially at Peebles, Innerleithen, and Walkerburn). Peebles is the county seat; area, ab. 347 sq. mi.; pop. 15,223 (est. 1951).

Pee Dee (pē dē'). [Also: Great Pee Dee (or Peedee).] Name given to the Yadkin River after it enters South Carolina. It flows into Winyah Bay, near Georgetown; navigable ab. 150 mi.

Peek (pek), Frank William. b. at Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, Calif., Aug. 20, 1881; d. at Port Daniels, Quebec, Canada, July 26, 1933. American electrical engineer. His special field, after 1916, was the investigation and development of high voltage power transmission. Author of Dielectric Phenomena in High Voltage Engineering (1915).

Peek, George Nelson. b. at Polo, Ill., Nov. 19, 1873; d. at San Diego, Calif., Dec. 17, 1943. American industrialist who was administrator (1933) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. He was president and general manager (1919-23) of the Moline Plow Company, served (1934-35) as a special adviser on foreign trade to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and headed (1934-35) the government activity in export-import banking.

Peekskill (peks'kil). City in SE New York, in Westchester County, on the E bank of the Hudson River, ab. 40 mi. N of New York; trading center for an agricultural area; manufactures of yeast and alcohol. It was named for Peek's Kill, a creek bounding the N part of the city. 17,731 (1950).

Peel (pēl). Fishing village and seaside resort on the W coast of the Isle of Man, ab. 10 mi. NW of Douglas. It has the ruins of Peel Castle, situated on a rocky island, and of a cathedral. 2,582 (1951).

Peel (pāl). Extensive peat moor on the borders of the provinces of North Brabant and Limburg, Netherlands. Some of the area has been reclaimed and is used for vegetable growing.

Peel (pēl), Lady. Title, by marriage, of Lillie, Beatrice.

Peel, Sir Robert. b. at Peelford, Lancashire, England, April 25, 1750; d. at Drayton Manor, Staffordshire, England, May 3, 1830. English textile manufacturer; father of Sir Robert Peel (1788-1850). He introduced several new techniques to the calico-printing industry in Lancashire. As a member of Parliament (1790 et seq.), he supported William Pitt's policy toward the French Revolution, and advised the prime minister on commercial and industrial matters. He carried through (1802) in Parliament the first "Factory Act for the Preservation of the Health and Morals of Apprentices and others, employed in cotton and other mills, and Cotton and other Factories." Although ineffective, it is notable as the first attempt made to regulate industrial conditions in 19th-century England.

Peel, Sir Robert. b. near Bury, Lancashire, England, Feb. 5, 1788; d. at London, July 2, 1850. English statesman; son of Sir Robert Peel (1750-1830). He graduated from the University of Oxford (Christ Church College) in 1808, entered Parliament in 1809, and was appointed (1811) colonial under-secretary. Firmly Tory in his political allegiance, he was a vigorous opponent of Catholic emancipation during his period of service (1812-18) as secretary for Ireland. At this time also he established the Irish constabulary (members of which were promptly nicknamed "Peelers" by the Irish). He was home secretary from 1822 to 1827, and secured passage of acts that brought a measure of long overdue reform to the English penal laws. He had earlier (May 24, 1819) delivered a speech urging passage of the so-called Cash Payments Act; although neither this speech nor the legislation it urged can be said to equal most of his later achievements in importance, the speech attracted much comment at the time. In 1829 he entered the cabinet again, under the Duke of Wellington, as home secretary, and was selected leader of the House of Commons. He now reconsidered his original stand on the question of Catholic emancipation, and played a leading part in securing passage (1829) of the legislation which made it possible for Roman Catholics once again legally to participate in the government of the United Kingdom. It was at this time also that he organized the various local constabularies into a single police force to cover virtually all of metropolitan London (the London constables were at first called "Peelers," as in Ireland, but have long since been more generally known as "Bobbies," from Peel's first name). Peel's reversal on Catholic emancipation temporarily lost him the support of most of the Tory group in Parliament (as the party which had long been most closely identified with the throne, and hence with the Church of England, many Tories in the 1820's still looked upon Catholic emancipation as being almost tantamount to a Jacobite plot), but he came to the fore again in the debates of the Reform Bill; when this was passed (1832) despite Tory opposition, he emerged as the most effective of the Tory leaders, and headed for a short period (1834-35) a Tory government. It was during the early 1830's that a distinctly Peelite faction became evident within the Tory Party; this group, which numbered at first no more than 150, was the backbone of Peel's strength in Parliament from 1832, and constituted actually the seed from which the Conservative Party was to grow. In this period 1835-41, while Peel was out of the government, this group came to include such brilliant young politicians as W. E. Gladstone and Benjamin Disraeli; when he returned to power in 1841 he was the leader of an aggressive, highly organized group which managed in the next five years to pass England's first income tax law, to draft considerable banking reforms, and finally (1846) to repeal the corn laws. It was this last move which completely split the Tory Party; Gladstone followed Peel into the faction now openly known as the Peelites, and Disraeli remained with the Tories. The split marked a basic change not only in Tory policy, but also in British policy; repeal of the corn laws (which were import duties on grain) not only meant cheaper bread, it also marked a definite decision on the part of the British government to adhere to a policy of free international trade, unhampered by tariffs (a policy which was to remain in effect until the 1930's). The advantage of such a policy to a country as strong industrially as 19th-century England had long been apparent not only to such economists as Richard Cobden, but also to many of the important manufacturers of the Midlands (to whom also the lowering in the price of bread was advantageous, in that it abated the pressure of the working classes for higher wages). Nevertheless, the move constituted so complete a break with past Tory principles that Peel was not able to hold the party together; he resigned on June 29, 1846.

Peel Commission Report. Report on the status of Palestine, issued (July 7, 1937) by a British commission. One of the main signposts in British efforts to find an equitable program for Palestine, this report recommended a Jewish state encompassing about one third of Palestine along the coast, a British-mandated territory including Jaffa and Jerusalem, and an Arab state linked with Transjordan. This plan, though accepted by the World Zionist Congress, was never put into effect because of Arab demands that an independent Palestine be established without provision for a Jewish national home and without partition.

Peelle (pél), George. b. c1558; d. c1598. English dramatist and poet. He graduated at Oxford in 1577. He published the Arraignment of Paris (1584), the Chronicle History of Edward I (1593), The Battle of Alcazar (1594), The Old Wives' Tale (1595), and David and Bethsabe (1599).

Peelites (pél'its). In British politics, a political party existing after the repeal of the Corn Laws in 1846. Originally (in large part) Tories, but free-traders and adherents of Sir Robert Peel, they formed for several years a group intermediate between the Protectionist Tories and the Liberals. Several of them took office in the Aberdeen administration (1852-55), and W. E. Gladstone, Sidney Herbert, and others eventually joined the Liberal Party.

Peelkut (päl'köt). Subgroup of the Kipsigis, a Nilotic-Hamitic-speaking people of SW Kenya, in E Africa.

Peel River (pél). River in the Yukon Territory, Canada, which joins the Mackenzie River at its delta. Length, 425 mi.

Peene (pä'ne). River in NE Germany which unites with the W arm of the Stettiner Haff, and flows into the Baltic Sea ab. 26 mi. SE of Stralsund. Length, ab. 88 mi.

Peeping Tom of Coventry (tom; kuv'en.tri). Man of Coventry, England, celebrated in the legend of Lady Godiva (who rode naked through the streets to free the people from burdensome taxes). He was struck blind for peeping through his window, despite orders that the people should remain behind closed shutters.

Peep o'Day Boys (pép ó.dá'). Presbyterian faction in Northern Ireland (c1855-90), opposed to the Roman Catholic "Defenders." They were closely allied to the Orangemen.

Peer Gynt (pir gint; Norwegian, pār günt). Dramatic poem written in 1867 by Henrik Ibsen, and presented on the New York stage in 1907 by Richard Mansfield. Edvard Grieg composed a symphonic suite, in two series, based upon the poem, which centers on the exploits of Peer Gynt, hero of Norse folk tale, whom Ibsen makes an irresponsible egotist in search of sensation.

Peer Gynt. Incidental music by Edvard Grieg for the play by Henrik Ibsen, first performed (1876) at what is now Oslo; later adapted into two symphonic suites (Opus 46 and 55).

Peerybingle (pir'li.bing.gl). Mrs. Wife of a carrier in Charles Dickens's The Cricket on the Hearth; a blithe cheery little woman called "Dot."

Peffer (péf'er), Nathaniel. b. at New York, June 30, 1890—. American expert on Far Eastern affairs and author, professor of international relations at Columbia. Author of The White Man's Dilemma—Chinaz of the Age of Imperialism (1927), Basis for Peace in the Far East (1942), America's Place in the World (1945), and other works.

Pegasus (peg'gä.sus). In Greek mythology, the winged horse which sprang from the blood of Medusa when she was slain by Perseus, and later given by Athena to the Muses. With a stroke of his hoof he is said to have caused to well forth, on Mount Helicon in Boeotia, the poetically inspiring fountain Hippocrene. He was ultimately changed into a constellation.

Pegasus. One of the northern constellations, recognized since ancient times. The figure represents the forward half of a winged horse. The center of the constellation is about 20 degrees N of the celestial equator, and three bright stars in it form, with α Andromedae, a large square.

Peggotty (peg'ot'i). Faithful nurse of David Copperfield in Charles Dickens's novel of that name. She marries Barks, who "is willin'."

Peggy Heath (peg'i héth). See Heath, Peggy.
Pegler (peg'ler), Westbrook. [Full name, James Westbrook Pegler.] b. at Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 2, 1894—. American journalist and author. He was a war correspondent (1916-18) and sports writer (1919-25) before becoming sports correspondent (1925-33) for the Chicago Tribune and then a staff member (1933-44) of the New York World-Telegram, Chicago Daily News, and other papers. He was a columnist (1944 et seq.) for King Features Syndicate. His stories on union abuses won (1941) the Pulitzer prize for reporting. Author of Taint Right (1936), George Spelvin, American (1942), and other books.

Pegli (pe'ljē). Former town in NW Italy (now incorporated with Genoa) in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Genova, situated on the Gulf of Genoa: seaport and resort.

Pegnitz (peg'nits). A headstream of the Regnitz River in Bavaria, Germany.

Peg o' My Heart (peg ō mī hārt). Play (1912) by John Hartley Manners.

Pégoud (pā.gō), Adolphe. b. c1889; d. in August, 1915. French aviator. Noted (1913 et seq.) for his flying feats, he was the first to pilot his craft upside down (1913) and to "loop the loop." He served in the French aviation corps in World War I, and was credited with destroying six enemy planes before he was killed.

Pegram (pē.grām), George Braxton. b. at Trinity, Randolph County, N.C., Oct. 24, 1876—. American physicist, a pioneer in atomic experiments. Becoming associated with Columbia University in the city of New York in 1901, he became professor of physics in 1918. He was dean of the school of mines, engineering, and chemistry (1918-30), and dean of the graduate faculties (1937-49). In 1936 he demonstrated the splitting of an atom by slow neutrons, and participated with other physicists at Columbia in developing a technique for splitting the uranium atom, as announced in 1939. He was chairman of the Columbia Commission on War Research (1941-45), and a consultant of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies. In 1949 he became a vice-president of Columbia University, and in 1950 a special adviser to the president of that institution. He served as chairman (1951 et seq.) of the corporation formed to operate the Brookhaven atomic project.

Pegu (pē.gō). Division of S Burma, in the lower valley of the Irrawaddy River, formerly an independent realm. Rice is the most important crop; rubber, tobacco, and teakwood are also produced. It was annexed by the British after the war of 1852-53. Capital, Rangoon; area, 13,799 sq. mi.; pop. 2,549,637 (1931).

Pegu. Town in the division of Pegu, S Burma, ab. 50 mi. NW of Rangoon: trading center, 21,712 (1931).

Peguans (pā.gwānz). See Mon.

Peguénche (pā.gwen'chā). See Pehuenche.

Péguy (pā.gē), Charles Pierre. b. at Orléans, France, Jan. 7, 1873; d. in action at Plessis l'Évêque, France, Sept. 5, 1914. French poet and editor. Author of Le Mystère de la charité de Jeanne d'Arc (1910), Le Porche du mystère de la deuxième vertu (1911), Le Mystère des Saints-Innocents (1912), Ève (1913), and others. Son of a widow who repaired chairs for a living, and educated on government scholarships, he withdrew from the Superior Normal School in 1897 to found a Socialist bookshop. Joining Léon Blum and others during the Dreyfus case, he founded with them the Cahiers de la Quinzaine, in which he published the works of various new writers, including the Tharaud brothers and Romain Rolland. Later he broke with the Dreyfusards over their politics, and gradually turned back toward Roman Catholicism. His important poems date from the latter period of his life.

Peg Woffington (peg wof'ing.tŏn). Novel by Charles Reade, published in 1853. It is an adaptation of a play, Masks and Faces, he had written (1852) with Tom Taylor.

Peh (bā) or Peh-Kiang (bā'jyāng'). [Also: Pei-Kiang, Pih-Kiang.] River in SE China, in the province of Kwangtung. It flows S, then turns SE and flows into the South China Sea just below Canton. In its lower course it is known as the Canton or Pearl River (Chinese, Chu-Kiang). It is joined to the Si by a system of canals. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Pehlvi (pā'le.vē). See Pahlavi.

Pehrsson (pārs'sŏn), Axel. [Full name, Axel Alarik Pehrsson-Bramstorp.] b. at Öja, Sweden, Aug. 19, 1883—. Swedish political leader and businessman, leader of the Farmers' Party. He was briefly premier from June to September, 1936. He was elected (1918) to the Riksdag, and served (June, 1936-July, 1945) as agricultural minister.

Pehsik (pet'sik). See Petsik.

Pehuenche (pā.wen'chā). [Also, Peguenche.] Tribe of South American Indians in NW Argentina, originally from Chile. In many respects the culture of this tribe has been similar to that of the Mapuche and the Huilliche, except for more dependence in post-conquest times on cattle, horses, and other livestock than upon agriculture. Prior to 1750 the usage of this term was vague and was applied to various groups of Indians in this general area. Authorities differ as to the classification of the language. Earlier scholars regarded it as an Araucanian language. Today most authorities recognize Pehuenche as a one-language family in itself, embracing several dialects, of which only two are recorded.

Pei (pā). See Peh.

Pei Ho (pā' hō'; Chinese, bā' hu'). Former name of the Hai Ho.

Peiho Forts (pā'hō'). See Taku Forts.

Pei-Kiang (bā'jyāng'). See Peh.

Peile (pēl), John. b. at Whitehaven, England, April 24, 1838; d. at Cambridge, England, Oct. 9, 1910. English philologist.

Peine (pī'ne). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, ab. 21 mi. E of Hanover: important iron and steel industry (rolling mill); furniture manufactures; flour mills; trade in grain, wool, metals, and other products. The town, founded in 1220, passed to Prussia in 1802, to Westphalia in 1807, to Hanover in 1813, and to Prussia again in 1866. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 28.6 percent. 23,643 (1946), 27,404 (1950).

Peiping (bā'pīng'). [Eng. trans., "Northern Peace"; also: Peking, Pekin, Eng. trans., "Northern Capital"; former administrative name, Shun-tien-fu; literary name, Yen; called by medieval geographers, Cambaluc.] City in N China, in the province of Hopei: capital of the Chinese Peoples' Republic. It consists of the so-called Tartar City and the so-called Chinese City. The Imperial Palace, the Bell Tower, and the Drum Tower (all in the Tartar City), and the Temple of Heaven (in the Chinese City), are noteworthy. The city became one of the capitals of the Khitan Tartars at the end of the 10th century, was rebuilt by Kublai Khan, and was sole capital from the beginning of the 15th century until the 20th, when the Kuomintang moved the capital to Nanking. The Communists again made it the capital of China in 1949. It was unsuccessfully attacked by the Taiping forces in 1855. The English and French troops entered it in 1860, and it was captured during the Boxer Rebellion by the allied European and American forces on Aug. 14, 1900. Area of municipality, 273 sq. mi.; pop. 2,030,986 (1950).

Peipohuan (pā'pō'hwān'). [Also: Pepohwan, Pei Po, Peipohwan.] Name, the local pronunciation of Chinese p'ing-pu-fan (literally, "barbarians of the plain"), given in Formosa to those aborigines who have submitted to government authority and are gradually adopting Chinese speech and customs.

Peipus (pī'pus), Lake. [Estonian, Peipsi (pāp'sē); Russian, Chudskoe Ozero.] Lake in Estonia and in the Pskov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R. It is connected on the S with Lake Pskov. It is drained by the Narva River, which flows N to the Gulf of Finland. Elevation, ab. 98 ft.; area (including Lake Pskov), ab. 1,400 sq. mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 48 ft.

Peiraicus (pē.rē'us) or Peiraieus (pē.rē'us): Greek, pē.re-efs) or Peiraieus (pē.re.efs'). See Piraeus.

Peirce (pērs), Benjamin. b. at Salem, Mass., April 4, 1809; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6, 1880. American mathematician and astronomer. He became tutor of mathematics at Harvard in 1831, and professor of mathematics there in 1833, and also of astronomy in 1842. He was consulting astronomer to the American Nautical Almanac (1849-67) and superintendent of the U.S. Coast Survey (1867-74). Among his most notable researches are those on the perturbations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune, on Saturn's rings, and on more accurate lunar tables. He published textbooks on trigonometry, geometry, algebra, and related subjects, including A System of Analytic Mechanics (1857), Linear Associative Algebra (privately printed 1870; reprinted in the American Journal of Mathematics, 1882), Ideality in the Physical Sciences (1881), and others.

Peirce, Benjamin Osgood. b. at Beverly, Mass., Feb. 11, 1854; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14, 1914. American physicist and mathematician, professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Harvard University from 1888. He was assistant professor of mathematics and physics there (1884-88).

Peirce, Charles Sanders. b. at Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 10, 1839; d. April 19, 1914. American physicist, mathematician, and logician; son of Benjamin Peirce. He was for many years connected with the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, and was lecturer on logic at Harvard and at the Johns Hopkins University. As a logician he came to the conclusion that the true import of any idea could be comprehended only through consideration and examination of its consequences; in other words, an idea has no meaning not of itself, but as part of the sequence of its results. He published this concept in 1878, calling it "pragmatism"; William James picked it up and used it, with acknowledgment to Peirce. Despite his great importance as an influence on other thinkers (including, besides James, Josiah Royce and John Dewey), he has been comparatively little known to most people by reason of the small number of his published works.

Peirce, Cyrus. b. at Waltham, Mass., Aug. 15, 1790; d. April 5, 1860. American clergyman and educator. He served (1839-42, 1844-49) as principal of the first state normal school in Massachusetts (at Lexington). He played an important role in the reform of public school education in Massachusetts.

Peirce, George James. b. at Manila, P.I., March 13, 1868—un. American plant physiologist. Author of Textbook of Plant Physiology (1903), The Physiology of Plants—The Principles of Food Production (1925), and Experimental Plant Physiology (1931).

Peirce, Herbert Henry Davis. b. at Cambridge, Mass., April 11, 1849; d. Dec. 5, 1916. American diplomat, minister to Norway (1906-11).

Peirce, James Mills. b. at Cambridge, Mass., May 1, 1834; d. March 21, 1906. American mathematician; son of Benjamin Peirce. He was professor of mathematics at Harvard University (1869-1906). Among his works are A Text-Book of Analytical Geometry (1857) and The Elements of Logarithms (1873).

Peisistratus (pĭ.sĭ'stră.tus). See Pisistratus.

Peitho (pĭ'thō). In Greek mythology, a cult title of Aphrodite, and also a separate, lesser deity, attendant on Aphrodite, interpreted as a personification of persuasion, especially to love.

Peixoto (pă.shō'tō), Floriano. b. c1842; d. June 29, 1895. Brazilian statesman, president (1891-94) of Brazil. Adjutant general of the army, he supported Deodoro Fonseca in the revolution of 1889, was elected vice-president in 1891, and by Fonseca's forced resignation (Nov. 23, 1891) in the face of a naval revolt became president. Many Brazilians were strongly opposed to having a military president, and it was claimed that Peixoto was scheming to be his own successor; in consequence, congress passed a bill which made this succession impossible. President Peixoto vetoed the bill on constitutional grounds, but his action caused much ill feeling, and revolts broke out, principally in the south. In September, 1893, the naval force at Rio de Janeiro revolted, holding the bay for many months, bombarding the city at intervals, and taking Santa Catarina. Peixoto proclaimed a state of siege, many arrests were made, and a fleet of war vessels was ordered from the U.S. and Europe. On the arrival of these the naval rebellion was suppressed (March and April, 1894). Meanwhile a presidential election was held, and a civilian, Prudente Moraes Barros (supported by the government), was elected for the term beginning Nov. 15, 1894.

Peixoto, Ignácio José de Alvaranga. b. at Rio de Janeiro, 1744 or 1748; d. in Angola, Africa, Jan. 1, 1793. Brazilian poet who took part in the conspiracy of 1789, was condemned to death (1792), but had the sentence commuted to deportation to Angola. The only ones of his poems still extant are those which were published in 1865 under the title Obras pósticas.

Peixoto, Júlio Afrânio. b. at Lençóis, Bahia, Brazil, Dec. 17, 1876; d. at Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 12, 1947. Brazilian writer, educator, and physician. Among his best-known works are the novels Rosa mística (1900), A Esmola (1911), Maria Bonita (1914), Fruta do mato (1920), Bugrinha (1922), As Razões d. coração (1925), Uma mulher como as outras (1928), and Sinhazinha (1929); manuals, Elementos de medicina legal (1910) and Elementos de Higiene (1913); and Panorama da literatura brasileira (1940).

Peixotto (pă.shō'tō), Ernest Clifford. b. at San Francisco, Oct. 15, 1869; d. at New York, Dec. 6, 1940. American painter and illustrator. He was an official artist with the American Expeditionary Forces in 1918 and director of painting at the A.E.F. Art Training Center at Bellevue, France, the following year. From 1919 to 1926 he was director of the department of mural painting at the Beaux-Arts Institute, New York; he served also as chairman of the American Committee, Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts, and as consultant on mural painting to the board of design for the New York World's Fair (1939).

Pejeboscot (pej'eb.skot). Early name of the Androscoggin.

Pekah (pē'kă). King of Israel (c736-c734 B.C.). He came to the throne after killing King Pekahiah. He went to war against Ahaz of Judah with the result that Ahaz, an ally of Assyria, sent for help to the ruler of that country, who invaded Syria and Israel and took parts of Israel.

Pekahiah (pek.ă.hĭ'ă). King of Israel (c738-c736 B.C.); son of Menahem.

Pekin (pē'kin). City in C Illinois, county seat of Tazewell County, on the Illinois River ab. 54 mi. N of Springfield; trading and processing center for an agricultural region. Manufactures include alcohol and metal products. 21,858 (1950).

Peking (pē'king'; Chinese, bā'jīng') or Pekin (pē'kin'). See Peiping.

Peking, Peace of. Treaty negotiated at Peking (now Peiping) in October, 1860, between China on one side and Great Britain and France on the other. China ratified the treaty of Tientsin, paid indemnities, and made other concessions.

Peking Man. [Also, Sinanthropus pekinensis.] Type of prehistoric man, called Sinanthropus pekinensis, first unearthed by W. C. Pei in 1929 in a cave near Choukoutien, China. Since the first finds the skulls and skeletal parts of 14 other specimens have been discovered in the same cave. The Peking Man represents about the same phase of evolutionary development as Pithecanthropus erectus.

Pekkala (pek'kälă), Mauno. b. at Sýmä, Finland, Jan. 27, 1890; d. at Helsinki, June 30, 1952. Finnish politician, premier (1946-48) after World War II. He was elected (1927) to the parliament, and held the ministries of agriculture (1926-27), finance (1939-42), ministry without portfolio (1944-45), and defense (1945-48).

Péladan (pă.lă.dă), Joseph. [Called Josphin.] b. at Lyons, France, March 28, 1858; d. at Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, June 27, 1918. French writer. Author of a long list of novels, dramas, studies of painters and writers, and miscellaneous writings. His most important work is La Décadence latine (7 vols., 1884-1903).

Pelaez (pă.lă.eth'), Francisco de Paula García. See García Pelaez, Francisco de Paula.

Pelagia (pe.lă'jĭă), Saint. d. before 300. Christian convert maiden of Tarsus in Cilicia, said to have been chosen as bride by one of Diolethan's sons. Learning of her conversion the son committed suicide; she died a martyr sometime before 300.

Pelagia, Saint. d. c300. Virgin of Antioch in Syria, who being arrested during Diolethan's persecution of the Christians led to her death from a height rather than lose her virginity.

Pelagia. Penitent of Antioch, of the 5th century A.D., previously an actress and dancer. A character of the same name, resembling her, is introduced in Charles Kingsley's Hypatia.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pĭne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; ʔu, then; ʔ, d. or j; ʔ, s. or sh; ʔ, t. or ch;

Pelagians (pe.lá'janz). Followers of Pelagius, who is believed to have been a British monk of the 4th and early 5th century A.D. They held that there was no original sin through Adam, and consequently no hereditary guilt; that every soul is created by God sinless; that the will is absolutely free; and that the grace of God is universal, but is not indispensable; they rejected infant baptism. Pelagius, however, held to the belief in the Trinity and in the personality of Christ. His views were developed by his pupil Coelestius, but were anathematized by Pope Zosimus in 418. Pelagianism was the principal anthropological heresy in the early church, and was strongly combated by Pelagius's contemporary Augustine.

Pelagius (pe.lá'jús). See also Pelajo.

Pelagius, d. c.420 A.D. Originator of the heresy adhered to by the Pelagians. He is said to have been a British monk named Morgan (of which Pelagius is the Latin rendering), and to have taken up his residence at Rome before 405. He emigrated to Africa when Rome was sacked by the Goths in 410, but shortly settled in Palestine, where he is said to have died.

Pelagius I, b. at Rome; d. March 4, 561. Pope from 556 to 561. He was accused of heresy, specifically in that he supported the Three Chapters condemned at the Second Council of Constantinople (fifth general council), but vindicated himself.

Pelagius II, b. probably at Rome; d. there, Feb. 7, 590. Pope from 579 to 590. He insisted on clerical celibacy, and sought to end the schism of the Three Chapters.

Pelard de Givry (pe.lár de živ.vrě), Marie Louise Charlotte, de Comtesse de Fontaines. See Fontaines, Marie Louise Charlotte de Pelard de Givry, Comtesse de.

Pelagii (pe.laz'ji). [Also, Pelagians (-janz).] Ancient people widely spread over Greece and the coasts and islands of the Aegean Sea and the Mediterranean generally. All accounts of the Pelagii now available are entirely legendary and the ethnological position of these people is uncertain. Certain 19th-century anthropologists, however, regard them as having been the aboriginal pre-Hellenic people of the region, and possibly the founders of the Mycenaean civilization.

Pelagiotis (pe.laz.ji.ó'tis). In ancient geography, a division of C Thessaly, Greece.

Pelajo (pə.lá'yo) or Pelagius (pe.lá'jús). d. c.737. Founder (c.718) of the monarchy of Asturias, in Spain. His exploits are apparently mainly legendary, but he seems to have defeated the Moors at Covadonga in 718, thus marking the beginning of the Christian recovery of Spain.

Pele (pə.lā). [In Tahiti, Pere.] In Polynesian mythology, especially in Hawaii and Tahiti, the goddess of volcanoes. In Hawaiian mythology, she dwells within the huge caldron of Kilauea; in Tahiti she is said to dwell within the crater of an extinct volcano on a local island. She was worshiped with an annual festival of propitiation and sacrifice, and it was said that the royal dead dwelt with her under the earth in a state of perpetual delight and banqueting. The myth, which originated in Tahiti (where she is called Pere), states that she was born from the heat of the earth and is the goddess of all fires within the earth. In Hawaiian accounts she is generally depicted as a gorgeous, majestic goddess, but occasionally the folk tales describe her as a wizened little old woman with watery red eyes from tending her fires.

Pelée (pe.lā'). Mount. [French, Mont Pelée.] Volcano in the N part of the island of Martinique. On May 8, 1902, an eruption of Pelée destroyed the city of St. Pierre and about 30,000 people (apparently the inhabitants were killed by a cloud of hot gases which descended suddenly upon the city during the eruption). Elevation, 4,799 ft.

Pelée Island (pē.lē). Island in Lake Erie, directly S of Point Pelee, S Ontario, a part of Essex County; farming community. About 2 mi. S of the S tip of the island is a small islet which is the southernmost point of Canada. 516 (1951).

Pelēg (pē.lēg). In the Old Testament, the son of Eber, and the brother of Joktan. Gen. x. 25.

Pelestrina (pe.lēs.trē'na). See Pellestrina.

Peleus (pē.lūs, pē.lē.us). In Greek legend, a king of the Myrmidons in Thessaly; son of Aeacus, husband of the nymph Thetis, and father of Achilles. It was at the wedding of Peleus and Thetis, to which all the gods were invited except the goddess of discord, Eris, that that goddess sent the apple of discord inscribed "To the Fairest." Peleus was one of the heroes of the Calydonian boar hunt, and also took part in the expedition of the Argonauts.

Pelew (pē.lō'). See Palau.

Pelham (pē.ləm). City in SW Georgia, in Mitchell County; marketing center for cotton, tobacco, peanuts, and cottonseed, 4,365 (1950).

Pelham, Henry, b. c.1695; d. March 6, 1754. English statesman, prime minister (1743-54); younger brother of Thomas Pelham-Holles, 1st Duke of Newcastle. He entered Oxford (Christ Church) in 1710, fought at Preston (1715), and was elected member of Parliament for Seaford, Sussex, in 1717. He was appointed lord of the treasury in 1721 by Robert Walpole, secretary of war in 1724, and paymaster of the forces in 1730. He became prime minister and chancellor of the exchequer in 1743. He followed a sound financial policy and held his government together efficiently, if at times unscrupulously.

Pelham, Thomas. [Title, 2nd Earl of Chichester.] b. at London, 1756; d. 1826. English statesman, lord lieutenant of Ireland (1795-98) under the younger William Pitt. He served as a member of Parliament for Sussex (1780), and was appointed surveyor general of ordnance (1782). He opposed Pitt until 1794, when he joined the pro-Pitt Whigs. He was shifted by Henry Addington to the chancellorship of Lancaster (1803) after serving as his home secretary (1801-03). Deprived of the chancellorship by Pitt (1804), he later was joint postmaster general (1807-23) and then sole holder of the office (1823-26).

Pelham, Sir Thomas. See Newcastle, 1st Duke of.

Pelham, Sir William. d. c.1587. English soldier. As lieutenant general of the ordnance, he concerned himself in strengthening the defenses of the kingdom for several years. He was appointed (1579) lord justice of Ireland ad interim. Yielding to pressure in England he joined (1580) Ormonde's forces in Munster. He was appointed marshal of the army in the Low Countries by Robert Dudley, 1st Earl of Leicester, who offended Sir John Norris by the appointment, and was wounded (1586) while inspecting the trenches at Doesburg, near Arnhem.

Pelham-Holles (-hol's), Sir Thomas. See Newcastle, 1st Duke of.

Pelham Manor. Village in SE New York, in Westchester County; residential community. The village trolley lines (no longer in existence) are believed to have been the basis for Antoine Fox's cartoon strip Toonerville Trolley. 5,300 (1950).

Pelham, or the Adventures of a Gentleman. Novel (1828) by Edward Bulwer-Lytton.

Pelias (pē.li.ās). In Greek legend, a son of Poseidon, who usurped the throne of Iolcus in Thessaly from his brother Aeson, and sent Aeson's son Jason to steal the Golden Fleece, an expedition which he intended to be a death errand. But when Jason returned to Iolcus with Medea, Pelias was slain by Medea, through the agency of his own daughters, whom Medea persuaded to cut up and boil their father, with a false prescription for rejuvenation.

Pelican (pē.li.kən). Original name of the Golden Hind.

Pelican Island. See Alcatraz.

"Pelican State". A nickname of Louisiana.

Pelides (pē.li.dēz). Patronymic used especially of Achilles, as son of Peleus. Achilles's son, Neoptolemus, was also called Pelides.

Pelignii (pē.li.gnī). See Pacligni.

Pelion (pē.li.ŋ). Mountain in Thessaly, N Greece, near the coast, SE of Ossa. It was the legendary home of the Centaurs, and known especially as the dwelling place of Chiron, the wise Centaur who was tutor to Achilles. The two mythical giants known as the Aloidae piled Mount Ossa on Olympus and then Pelion on Ossa in their attempt to reach heaven.

Pélissier (pə.lē.syā). Aimable Jean Jacques. [Title, Duc de Malakoff.] b. at Maromme, Seine-Inférieure, France, Nov. 6, 1794; d. at Algiers, May 22, 1864. French marshal. He served in Algeria, where he became notorious for suffocating a number of Arabs in a cavern in 1845; despite public indignation, the authorities, engaged in subjugating the country, approved, and he was raised in rank to brigadier general. He became commander of the French forces in the Crimea (May, 1855), and successfully stormed the Malakhov Hill (Sept. 8, 1855), for which he was named marshal. He was ambassador at London (1858-59), and was governor general of Algeria (1860-64).

Pell (pel), John. b. at Southwick, Sussex, England, March 1, 1611; d. at London, Dec. 12, 1685. English mathematician. In 1643 he was professor of mathematics at Amsterdam, and in 1646 at Breda. From 1654 to 1658 he was Cromwell's agent in the Protestant cantons of Switzerland. Many of his manuscripts are preserved in the British Museum. He wrote the Ecliptica prognostica (1634), A Refutation of Longonotanus's Pretended Quadrature of the Circle (1646), A Table of Ten Thousand Square Numbers (1672), and others.

Pella (pel'a). Nomos (department) in N Greece, in Macedonia. Capital, Edessa; area, ab. 1,082 sq. mi.; pop. 116,688 (1951).

Pella. In ancient geography, the capital of Macedonia, situated in lat. 40°44' N., long. 22°27' E. It was the birthplace of Alexander the Great.

Pella. City in S Iowa, in Marion County: manufactures of Venetian blinds, wagons, flour, and overalls. 4,427 (1950).

Pelleas (pel'é.as). One of the knights of the Round Table, in the Arthurian cycle of romance. He was renowned for his great strength, and for his love of the lady Ettarre.

Pelleas and Ettarre (e.târ'). One of the Idylls of the King, by Alfred Tennyson.

Pelléas et Mélisande (pe.lä.äs ä mä.lë.zänd). Opera in five acts by Claude Debussy, with a libretto by Maurice Maeterlinck from his play of the same name, first produced at Paris on April 30, 1902.

Pellegrin (pel'ē.grin). Pseudonym of Fouqué, Baron Friedrich Heinrich Karl de la Motte-.

Pellegrini (pē.yā.grē'nē), Carlos. b. c.1848; d. July 17, 1906. Argentine politician, vice-president under Miguel Juárez Celman, and after the latter's resignation (Aug. 6, 1890) president until the end of the term (Oct. 12, 1892). Despite initial efforts to bring order out of the chaos in which Juárez Celman had left public finances, he could not halt the disastrous collapse of Argentine credit which ultimately (November, 1890) forced the powerful London firm of Baring Brothers (Argentina's official foreign financial agents) into liquidation.

Pellegrino (pel.lā.grē'nō), Monte. [Ancient names, Ercta, Ercte, Heircte.] Isolated mountain peak just N of Palermo, in Sicily, overlooking the city and harbor. It was occupied by Hamilcar in the first Punic War. Formerly it was an island. Elevation, ab. 1,900 ft.

Pellenore (pel'ē.nōr). See Pellinor, Sir.

Pellerin (pel.rān), Jean Victor. b. 1885—. French dramatist. Author of a novel, Insulaire (1920), and of plays including Intimité (1922), Le Plus Bel Homme de France (1925), Têtes de rechange (1926), Cris des cœurs (1928), and others. He has been most successful when writing in a satiric vein.

Pelles (pel'éz), Sir. In Arthurian romance, king of "a foreign country" and father of Elaine, the mother of Galahad.

Pellestrina (pe.les.trē'nā; Italian, pel.les.trē'nā). [Also, Pelestrina.] Island ab. 7 mi. S of Venice, Italy, forming part of the barrier between the lagoon of Venice and the Adriatic Sea; part of Venice commune.

Pelletan (pel.tān), Camille. [Full name, Charles Camille Pelletan.] b. at Paris, June 23, 1846; d. there, June 4, 1915. French political leader and journalist; son of Pierre Clément Eugène Pelletan. Known for his strongly anticlerical and republican views, he was an opposition journalist (1863-70) under the Second Empire, remained neutral during the Paris Commune (1871), but later became (1874) a strong defender of its principles and activity. He was a deputy (1881-1912) and senator (1912-15), opposed the French expeditions to Indochina, and was minister of the navy (1902-05).

Pelletan, Pierre Clément Eugène. b. at Royan, France, Oct. 29, 1813; d. at Paris, Dec. 14, 1884. French journalist, politician, and miscellaneous author. He wrote Profession de foi du XIX^e siècle (1852) and other works.

Pelletier (pe.lē.tyā), Sir Charles Alphonse Pantaléon. b. at Rivière Ouelle, Quebec, Canada, Jan. 22, 1837; d. at Quebec, April 29, 1911. Canadian statesman, lieutenant governor of the province of Quebec (1908-11). He was graduated from Laval University in 1858, was called to the bar in 1860, and was appointed queen's counsel in 1879. He was minister of agriculture in the Mackenzie administration (1877-78), was called to the Senate in 1877, and was its speaker (1896-1901). He resigned his seat in 1915. He was judge of the superior court of the province of Quebec (1905-08).

Pellévé de le Motte-Ango (pel.vā de le mot.ā.ŋ.gō), Robert. See Flers, Robert Pellévé de le Motte-Ango, Marquis de.

Pelléw (pel'ō, pel'ū), Sir Edward. [Title, 1st Viscount Exmouth.] b. at Dover, England, April 19, 1757; d. at Teignmouth, England, Jan. 23, 1833. English admiral. He took part in the American Revolutionary War, and fought against the French (1793 et seq.). He bombarded Algiers Aug. 27, 1816, in the struggle of the powers taking part in the Congress of Vienna to get the dey to abolish Christian slavery.

Pellico (pel'ē.kō), Silvio. b. at Saluzzo, Italy, June 24, 1788; d. at Turin, Italy, Jan. 31, 1854. Italian poet and prose writer. He was arrested by the Austrian authorities in 1820 on a charge of participating in Italian nationalist activities, and imprisoned for ten years (at Milan and Venice, and then, for eight years, near Brunn). His chief works are the tragedies Francesca da Rimini and Laodamia, and the autobiographical work Le Mie Prigioni (1832; Eng. trans., My Prisons, 1833).

Pellinor (pel'ī.nōr), Sir. [Also, Pellenore.] In the Arthurian cycle of romance, and specifically in the same versions of the Grail stories, the custodian of the Grail castle. Another Sir Pellinor was the father of Perceval.

Pelliot (pe.lyō), Paul. b. at Paris, May 28, 1878; d. there, Oct. 26, 1915. French Orientalist and explorer. He served as professor (1901 et seq.) at Hanoi, in Indochina, at the Sorbonne, and at the Collège de France.

Pellissier (pe.lē.syā), Georges Jacques Marie. b. at Montlaunquin, France, Feb. 7, 1852; d. at Montauban, France, June 18, 1918. French literary historian and critic. Author of Traité théorique et historique de versification française (1882), Les Écrivains politiques en France avant la révolution (1882), and of a series of volumes of essays on contemporary literature. A strong tendency toward didacticism in his work is perhaps responsible for its failure to survive.

Pelloux (pel'ō), Luigi. b. at La Roche, then in Italian Savoy, March 1, 1839; d. at Bordighera, Italy, Oct. 26, 1921. Italian general and politician. He served as premier (June, 1898-June, 1900).

Pellworm (pel'vōrm). Island in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, one of the Halligen group of the North Frisian Islands, in the Wattenmeer, a shallow part of the North Sea, W of the island of Nordstrand; livestock is raised here, 2,605 (1946).

Pelly (pel'ī). Former city in SE Texas, in Harris County, now a part of Baytown.

Pelly River. River in NW Canada, in C Yukon Territory, which unites with the Lewes River at Selkirk to form the Yukon River. Length, ab. 330 mi.

Peloepeia (pe.lō.pē'ā). See Thyatira.

Pelopidas (pe.lōp'ī.das). Killed at the battle of Cynoscephalae, Thessaly, 364 b.c. Theban general, leader in the liberation of Thebes from the Spartans in 379 b.c. He was the intimate friend of Epaminondas, and was closely associated with him in furthering the greatness of Thebes. He was commander of the Sacred Band, a picked body of troops, and was especially distinguished at Tegyra (375) and Leuctra (371). He was the victor at Cynoscephalae, but rashly attempted to capture the Thessalian tyrant, Alexander of Phæra, by himself, and was killed.

Peloponnesian War (pel'ō.pō.nē'zhan, -shan). War between Athens and its allies on one side and the Peloponnesian confederacy under the lead of Sparta and its allies (Boeotia, Phocis, Megara, and others) on the other. It was carried on from 431 to 404 b.c. The Peloponnesian War actually consisted of two wars, the Archidamæan War (431-421 b.c.) and the Decelean War (414-404 b.c.), and the uneasy Peace of Nicias between them; the first war is named for Archidamus, then king of Sparta, the second for Decelea, a town in Attica whose seizure by the Spartans signaled the beginning of open warfare once more. The cause of the Peloponnesian War is obscure, but basically it resulted from the reaching of the saturation point in the alliances of both of the chief Greek powers, Athens and Sparta. Athens had built up, following the Persian Wars at the beginning of the 5th century B.C., a great league of city-states around the Aegean Sea, while Sparta had developed a confederacy of land powers covering the Peloponnesus and part of northern Greece. It was thus the clash of a sea power with a land power; Athenian strategy, determined initially by Pericles, was to avoid land battles and to wait for Sparta's military efforts and Athenian raids to exhaust her; Sparta would try to starve Athens out, besieging her, laying the countryside waste, and alienating her allies. To say that the struggle was between oligarchic Sparta and her allies on one side and democratic Athens and her allies on the other has more ideological than actual significance; in truth, both ruled absolutely and solely for their own benefit, and both were subject to dissension caused by enemies within who were opposed to the ruling system. The war began over economic measures taken by Athens against Megara. The Megarians appealed to Sparta, and in the winter of 432-431 Sparta declared war. Attica was invaded in the spring of 431, but the inhabitants of the countryside were removed to within the walls of the Athens-Piraeus area (the "long walls" from Athens to the sea); all that Sparta accomplished was to destroy some crops and farms. In 430-429 the plague attacked the crowded Athenians, and many died. Pericles among them. In 428 Lesbos revolted, but by 427 the revolt had been suppressed by the Athenians. An Athenian fleet, on its way to Sicily, was driven by a storm into Pylos harbor (Navarino as it is known in later history); the general Demosthenes seized the city as a base for operations against Sparta. Sparta in turn sent troops to Sphacteria, an island in Pylos bay, and they besieged the Athenians. Cleon, who had replaced Pericles as the popular leader in Athens, was sent to assist Demosthenes, with the result that the Spartan force on Sphacteria was captured, an almost unbelievable event, since the Spartans had fostered the belief throughout Greece that Spartans never surrendered, but fought on to victory or death. In 422, after indecisive military operations by both sides throughout Greece, both Cleon and Brasidas, the Spartan military leader, were killed. The Peace of Nicias was negotiated in 421, but it was soon broken by both sides. In 418 the Spartans defeated the Athenians and their allies at the battle of Mantinea and restored their control over the Peloponnesus. Except for local fighting, however, the war had practically died out. A war had, meanwhile, been going on in Sicily among the city-states of that island and when Segesta appealed (416) for aid to Athens, a huge expedition was sent out from Athens by which the Athenians hoped to establish their hegemony over the island and provide a great outlet for their trade. But, just before the fleet sailed, the sacred statues of Hermes throughout Athens were discovered to be mutilated; suspicion fell on Alcibiades, the principal promoter and one of the leaders of the expedition, and he was recalled. He fled to Sparta and the expedition continued under Nicias, whose temporizing led in 413 to the complete defeat of the Athenians, the fleet being wiped out and very few of the men returning home. Fighting in Greece broke out once more in 414 and the Spartans began to make headway, not only in Attica but also in Ionia in Asia Minor, where Alcibiades had made a military agreement with Tissaphernes, the Persian satrap. Alcibiades's purpose apparently was to make it apparent to both sides that the war was pointless. In 411 he convinced a number of Athenians that the alliance between Sparta and Persia could be broken if an oligarchic government, one less repugnant to Persia than the Athenian democracy, could be set up. As a result, in 411 a small group of citizens seized power at Athens. Alcibiades now led the Athenians to victories at Cynossema (411), Abydos (411), and Cyzicus (410), but when the Spartans asked for peace the war party at Athens refused and once again the government reverted to a more democratic form. In 407, during Alcibiades's absence, the Athenian fleet was defeated at Notium by Lysander, who had built a fleet with money received from the Persians; again Alcibiades fled, this time for good. Conon now became chief of the Athenian military forces and was defeated at Lesbos (406). The Athenians once more rebuilt their fleet and in 405 defeated the Spartans at Arginusae in a great naval battle. The Athenians at home, however, were shocked to discover that the generals of the fleet had refused to stop their pursuit of the Spartan fleet to pick up from the water their own shipwrecked sailors; eight of them were tried and executed, thus removing from command most of the efficient leaders. What ensued was almost inevitable; at Aegospotami on the Dardanelles in 405 the Athenian fleet was caught by the Spartans while it was drawn up to shore and was annihilated. The supply route from the Black Sea was now in the hands of the Spartans and Athenian communication with their allies along the Aegean was cut off. Sparta set up governments in the various cities of the Athenian allies and began a siege by sea and land of Athens. After eight months of negotiation, and the execution of Cleophon, who persisted in his demands that Athens continue to resist, the Athenians surrendered in 404. The war resulted in the end of Athenian leadership in Greece; for a time Sparta replaced her, but by 370 the weakness of Spartan leadership in government had prevailed and Thebes became the principal city of Greece. Thucydides's history of the Peloponnesian War, down to 411, is the principal and most accurate source.

Peloponnesus (pel'pō.nē'sus). [Also: Morea, Peloponnesos (pe.lō.pō.nē.sōs), Peloponnes (pel'pō.nēz', -nēs').] Peninsula forming the S part of continental Greece. It includes the departments of Achaia, Arcadia, Argolis and Corinthia, Elis, Laconia, and Messenia. It is connected with C Greece by the Isthmus of Corinth, and separated from it by the gulfs of Lepanto and Patras on the N, and is bounded by the Aegean Sea on the E and the Mediterranean on the S and W. The surface is generally mountainous. The chief occupations of the inhabitants are the grazing of sheep and goats on the mountainsides, and the cultivation of wheat, corn, vegetables, tobacco, currant grapes, figs, olives, and citrus fruits on the lower slopes. The chief rivers are the Eurotas (or Iri) and the Alpheus. Area, 8,356 sq. mi.; length, ab. 160 mi.; pop. 1,173,541 (1940).

Pelops (pel'pōs). In Greek legend, a son of Tantalus, and grandson of Zeus. He was dismembered by his father and served to the gods as food; but when they discovered the nature of the dish, they restored him to life and wholeness. He won Hippodamia as bride in a chariot race against her father, and became king of Pisa in Elis. He was the father of Atreus and Thyestes. The Peloponnesus is named for him.

Peloris (pē.lō'ris) or Pelorum Promontorium (pē.lō'rum prōm.ōn.tō'ri.um). Latin names of Faro, Cape.

Pelotas (pē.lō'tas). City in S Brazil, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, on the São Gonçalo River, near its mouth on the Lagoa dos Patos; a port and the chief center of the Brazilian carque (dried beef) industry; it also has tanning, flour-milling, shoe, and furniture industries. 79,619 (1950).

Peloubet (pē.lō'bet), Francis Nathan. b. at New York, Dec. 2, 1831; d. March 27, 1920. American clergyman, author of works on the Bible for Sunday-school teachers. He was best known for his Select Notes on the International Sunday School Lessons (1875 et seq.).

Pelouze (pē.lōz), Théophile Jules. b. at Valognes, Manche, France, in February, 1807; d. at Paris, May 31, 1867. French chemist, professor successively at Lille, at the École Polytechnique at Paris, and at the Collège de France. He also filled various positions connected with the mint. Among his publications was Traité de chimie générale (1847-50; with E. Frémy).

Pelucones (pē.lū.kō'nās). Originally, a nickname given to the conservative party of Chile soon after the country became independent; it soon became the common name, and has been retained ever since. The Pelucones were in power from 1830 to 1876, though during the latter part of this period many concessions were made to the liberals; they again took charge of the government (with greatly modified principles), under Jorge Montt, after the civil war of 1891. In 1833 they adopted the constitution which, with some changes, served as the organic law of the republic until 1925.

Péluse (pā.lūz), Comte de. Title of Monge, Gaspard.

Pelusium (pe.lō.shi.um). In ancient geography, a city at the NE extremity of the Nile delta, Egypt, SE of Port Said, at what was called the Pelusiac mouth of the Nile. It was a frontier fortress of Egypt toward Syria. Here Assurbanipal defeated Tirhaka of Egypt, and Cambyses III defeated Psamtik III, the last Egyptian king (525 B.C.), reducing Egypt to a Persian province.

Pelvoux (pel.vū). [Also: Pelvoux Range: French, Massif du Pelvoux.] A group of the Alps in Dauphiné, France. Mont Pelvoux is 12,970 ft. in height, and the highest summit (Barre des Ecrins) is 13,462 ft.

Pelz (pels), Paul Johannes. b. at Seitendorf, in Silesia, Germany, Nov. 18, 1841; d. 1918. American architect. In 1873, together with J. L. Smithmeyer, he won a competition for the design of the Library of Congress.

Pelzer (pel.zer). Unincorporated community in NW South Carolina, in Anderson County: textile manufactures. 2,692 (1950).

Pemba (pem.bā). See also Mpemba.

Pemba. Island off the E coast of Africa, ab. 25 mi. NE of Zanzibar. It belonged to Zanzibar, and in 1890 passed with Zanzibar to Great Britain. It is now part of the British protectorate of Zanzibar. Its chief product is mangrove bark, which is exported in large quantities. Length, 42 mi.; width, 14 mi.; area, ab. 389 sq. mi.; pop. 114,587 (1948).

Pemberton (pem.bér.ton). District, comprising four wards of Wigan, in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 16 mi. NE of Liverpool, ab. 196 mi. NW of London by rail. The district, located in the SW part of Wigan, has been known for coal mining, which has declined in importance, however, since 1911. Pop. 21,932 (1931).

Pemberton, John Clifford. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 10, 1814; d. at Penryn, Pa., July 13, 1881. American Confederate general in the Civil War. He was graduated from West Point in 1837, served with distinction in the Mexican War, and entered the Confederate service at the beginning of the Civil War. He was promoted lieutenant general in 1862, was defeated by U.S. Grant in the battles of Champion's Hill and the Big Battle in May, 1863, and surrendered Vicksburg to Grant on July 4, 1863. After the surrender of Vicksburg he returned on parole to Richmond, where he remained until he was exchanged. He then resigned, but was reappointed as inspector of artillery, with the rank of colonel, in which capacity he served until the end of the war.

Pemberton, Sir Max. b. at Birmingham, England, June 19, 1863; d. Feb. 22, 1950. English author. He was editor of Cassell's Magazine (1896-1906). He wrote many novels and short stories. Among his published volumes are The Impregnable City (1895), Queen of the Jesters (1897), The Garden of Swords (1899), I Crown Thee King (1902), Beatrice of Venice (1904), The Hundred Days (1905), My Sword for Lafayette (1906), Sir Richard Escombe (1908), The Show Girl (1909), White Molley (1911), Captain Black (1911), The Virgin Fortress (1912), The Great White Army (1915), Paulina (1922), The Mad King Dies (1928), and Sixty Years and After (1936).

Pembroke (pem.bruk). See also Pembrokeshire.

Pembroke (pem.brok). Town in S New Hampshire, in Merrimack County. 3,094 (1950).

Pembroke. Town in SE Ontario, Canada, the county seat of Renfrew County, on the Ottawa River ab. 75 mi. W of Ottawa. The Muskrat River flows through the town and supplies power for sawmills and flour mills; manufactures also include electrical appliances, woolen textiles, matches, office equipment, and foodstuffs. 12,704 (1951).

Pembroke (pem.bruk). Municipal borough and market town in S Wales, in Pembrokeshire, situated on a navigable inlet of Milford Haven, ab. 9 mi. W of Tenby, ab. 259 mi. W of London by rail. There is a government dockyard here. The town has a ruined castle (the birthplace of Henry VII, founded in the 11th century and taken by Oliver Cromwell in 1648). 12,296 (1951).

Pembroke, Earl of. Title of Aymer de Valence.

Pembroke, Earl of. A title of Humphrey.

Pembroke, Earl of. A title of Tudor, Jasper.

Pembroke, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Herbert family; see also under Hastings.

Pembroke and Strigul (strig'ul), 2nd Earl of. Title of Clare, Richard de (d. 1176).

Pembroke and Strigul, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Marshal family.

Pembroke College. College of Cambridge University, England, founded (1347) by Mary de Chatillon, Countess of Pembroke, in memory of her husband, Aymer de Valence. The present buildings are of a later period. The chapel was built by Christopher Wren in 1663-65.

Pembroke College. College of Oxford University, England, founded by James I, from the estate of Thomas Tesdale (d. 1610), in 1624; named for William Herbert, 3rd Earl of Pembroke, chancellor of the university at the time.

Pembroke College. See under Brown University.

Pembroke's Arcadia (ār.kā'di.ä). The Countess of. Full title of Arcadia, by Sir Philip Sidney.

Pembrokeshire (pem.bruk.shir). Pembroke (pem.bruk). Maritime county in S Wales. It is bounded on the N by Cardigan Bay, on the NE by Cardiganshire, on the East by Carmarthenshire, on the S by Bristol Channel, and on the W by St. George's Channel. Except for Fishguard Bay and Newport Bay on the N coast, St. Bride's Bay on the W coast, and Milford Haven on the S coast, the coastline is rugged and presents no harbors. Inland the surface is a rolling series of green hills and fertile valleys. About half of the area of the county is in permanent pasture, raising dairy cattle, sheep, and pigs. The county specializes in butter production. One fourth of the area of the county is planted in crops. Part of the South Wales coal field lies here, and here contains anthracite coal. Other minerals found are lead, zinc, iron, and slate. Haverfordwest is the county seat; area, ab. 615 sq. mi.; pop. 90,896 (1951).

Pemigewasset (pem'jē.wos'et). River in New Hampshire which unites with the Winnepesaukee at Franklin to form the Merrimack River. Length, ab. 70 mi.

Peña (pā.nyā), Eugène Émile Diaz de la. See Diaz de la Peña, Eugène Émile.

Pena (pe'na), Luís Carlos Martins. b. at Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 5, 1815; d. at Lisbon, Portugal, Dec. 7, 1848. Brazilian playwright, generally regarded as the creator of Brazil's national comedy. Among his best-known plays are O Juiz de paz da roça (1842), A Família e a festa da roça (1842), O Diabete (1846), O Judas em sábado de alvura (1847), Os Irmãos das almas (1847), Quem casa quer casa (1847), O Caixeiro da taverna (1852), and O Noivo (1853).

Peña (pā.nyā), Narcisse Virgile Diaz de la. See Diaz de la Peña, Narcisse Virgile.

Penafel (pā.nā.fyel'). Town in W Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral and district of Porto, ab. 19 mi. NE of Oporto. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Peñalara (pā.nyā.lā.rā), Pico de. See under Guadarrama, Sierra de.

Penalzoa (pā.nā.lō.sā), Ezequiel Padilla. See Padilla, Ezequiel.

Penang (pē.nang'). [Also: Pinang, Pulo-Penang; former official name, Prince of Wales Island.] Island in NW Federation of Malaya, W of the Malay Peninsula, ab. 375 mi. NW of Singapore, at the NW entrance to the Strait of Malacca. The surface is hilly, rising to a peak elevation of 2,727 ft. It was acquired by the British in 1786, and has a large Chinese population. Capital, Georgetown; area, ab. 108 sq. mi.; pop. 247,460 (est. 1941).

Peñaranda (pā.nyā.rān'dā), Enrique. [Full name, Enrique Peñaranda Castillo.] b. Nov. 17, 1892-. Bolivian politician and soldier, president April 15, 1940-Dec. 20, 1943 of Bolivia. He was appointed (December, 1933) general-in-chief of the army, and was minister of national defense (1939). He was a conservative president and, because the fighting in World War II had cut off far Eastern supplies of tin, found himself courted by the Allied governments. Bolivia declared war on the Axis powers (April, 1943) during his administration. He was overthrown by a revolution engineered by pro-Axis forces, and was exiled (1944 et seq.).

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hêr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ыт, then; ђ, d or j; ș, s or sh; ț, t or ch;

Pen Argyl (pen 'är'jil). Borough in E Pennsylvania, in Northampton County; established in 1868, it was incorporated in 1882. Pop. 3,878 (1950).

Peñarroya-Puelonuevo (pä.nyär.rö'yä.pwä.blö.nwä'-bö). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, ab. 40 mi. NW of Córdoba. Iron, lead, and coal mines are in the vicinity; the town has metal, chemical, and paper industries. 29,161 (1940).

Penarth (pen.ä'rhth'). Urban district and seaport in S Wales, in Glamorganshire, situated at the mouth of the river Taff, ab. 3 mi. S of Cardiff, ab. 149 mi. W of London by rail. The town exports coal, 18,528 (1951).

Penates (pē.nä'tēz). In ancient Roman religion, the household gods, who presided over families, and were worshipped in the interior of every dwelling. They had their own place on every hearth, where a fire was kept burning for them. Their worship was associated with that of Vesta, the hearth goddess, and of the Lares.

Peña y Peña (pä'nyä ē pä'nyä), Manuel de la. b. at Taubá (or Tacuán), now part of Mexico City. March 10, 1789; d. at Mexico City, Jan. 2, 1850. Mexican jurist and statesman. He was judge of the supreme court from 1824, and later its president, twice held cabinet positions (1837, 1845), and was senator (1843-47). From Sept. 27 to Nov. 9, 1847, and again from Jan. 8 to June 3, 1848, he was provisional president of Mexico. During the latter period the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo was signed (Feb. 2, 1848), ending the war with the U.S.

Penbrook (pen'brük). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Dauphin County, near Harrisburg, 3,691 (1950).

Penck (pengk), Albrecht. b. at Reudnitz, a suburb of Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 25, 1858; d. 1945. German geographer, professor of geography in the University of Vienna (1885-1906) and in the University of Berlin (1906-26) and director of the Oceanographic and Geographic Institutes at Berlin. He advanced plans at several meetings of the International Geographic Institute for a world-wide series of maps on the uniform scale of 1:1,000,000. He wrote Morphologie der Erdoberfläche (1894), and numerous scientific papers.

Pencos (peng'kös, -köz). [Also: Pencónes (peng.kö'näs, -nēz).] General name given by early writers to the Araucanian Indians of Chile. The now extinct Picunche tribe were the first Araucanian Indians encountered by the Spaniards in the region, who called them Pencos, and the term became gradually extended to any Araucanians.

Penda (pen'dä). Killed 655. King of Mercia (626-655). He defeated Edwin of Northumbria in 633, and Oswald of Northumbria at Maserfield in 642, and was defeated by Oswy of Northumbria at Winwood in 655. He was a champion of paganism and at one time controlled nearly all the Midlands; his opposition to Christianity probably stemmed from political expediency rather than deep conviction, because his daughter married Oswy's son and his son Penda introduced Christianity in Middle Anglia.

Pend d'Oreille (pon.də.rä'). See Kalispel.

Pend d'Oreille Lake. See Pend Oreille Lake.

Pende (pen'dä). [Also: Bapende, Bapindji.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting SW Belgian Congo.

Pende (pen'dä), Nicola. b. at Noicattaro, Bari, Italy, April 21, 1880—. Italian physician, known for his studies of the vegetative nerve system, of endocrinology, and of the constitutional concept.

Pendennis (pen.den'is). Novel by William Makepeace Thackeray, published in 1850: so called from the name of one of its leading characters, Arthur Pendennis, a poet. Major Pendennis, his uncle, is a worldly and courageous old dandy.

Pender (pen'dēr), Harold. b. at Tarboro, N.C., Jan. 13, 1879—. American electrical engineer. He was invited (1903) to the Sorbonne, where he proved the existence of a magnetic field around a moving, electrically charged body. He was the director (1914-23) of the department of electrical engineering at the University of Pennsylvania and dean (1923 et seq.) of the Moore School of Electrical Engineering. Author of Principles of Electrical Engineering (1911), Direct Current Machinery (1921), and other works; editor in chief of American Electrical Engineering Handbook.

Pender, Sir John. b. Sept. 10, 1816; d. at Footscray Place, Kent, England, July 7, 1896. English merchant.

He was one of the contributors to the formation of the first Atlantic Cable Company in 1856, and was a liberal supporter of the enterprise through the difficulties which for many years beset it.

Pendergast (pen'dēr.gast), Thomas Joseph. b. at St. Joseph, Mo., July 22, 1870; d. at Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 26, 1945. American politician. He entered politics at the ward level, was appointed a street commissioner, and elected to the city council of Kansas City. He became the boss of the Democratic Party in the first ward and eventually in all of Kansas City, and a power in the politics of the state of Missouri. Pendergast sponsored the advancement of Harry S. Truman from minor political posts in Jackson County to the U.S. Senate. His enemies asserted that the power of his political machine rested in part on protection of gambling, prostitution, and other vice, as well as on the profits of street-paving contracts; but it was conceded that he gave Kansas City excellent streets and boulevards and the best parkways of any American city at that time. In 1939 he was convicted of income tax evasion and committed to Leavenworth Penitentiary. Paroled after serving a year and a half of a five-year sentence, on condition that he should refrain from political activities for five years, he was later accused of contempt of court, but freed by the U.S. Supreme Court under the statute of limitations. He suffered from heart trouble while in prison, and did not long survive his release.

Pendjeh (penj'de). Place in C Asia, in the U.S.S.R., in the Turkmen S.S.R., situated on the Murghab River ab. 130 mi. N of Herat, Afghanistan. Near it (on the Kushk), March 30, 1885, the Russians defeated the Afghans, precipitating thereby a crisis with Great Britain. Prime Minister Gladstone threatened war over the apparent violation of the Afghan frontier, and preparations were made to attack Vladivostok, but in September a compromise was reached.

Pendleton (pen'dlōn). Civil parish and district of Salford county borough, in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 3 mi. NW of Manchester, ab. 186 mi. NW of London by rail. It has a cotton-bleaching industry. Coal mining is carried on, but has declined since 1911. The Manchester race course is located here. 229 (1931).

Pendleton. City in NE Oregon, county seat of Umatilla County; trading center for a grain, sheep, and cattle area; manufactures of flour, blankets, wood products, and dairy products. 11,774 (1950).

Pendleton, Edmund. b. in Caroline County, Va., Sept. 9, 1721; d. Oct. 26, 1803. American jurist and Revolutionary patriot. He became (1751) a justice of the peace of Caroline County and was elected (1752) to the House of Burgesses. A conservative during the pre-Revolutionary crisis, he became (1773) a member of the Virginia committee of correspondence and went to the Continental Congress in 1774. He attended all of the Virginia Revolutionary conventions, serving as president of the two which assembled in 1775. He became (1775) president of the Committee of Safety and in 1776 was elected president of the Virginia Convention, at which he drew up the resolves for proposing a declaration of independence in Congress. He was also active in the drafting of the Virginia constitution and in the revision of the laws. In the new state government, Pendleton became speaker of the House of Delegates and served (1779-1803) as the first president of the supreme court of appeals. In 1788 he served as president of the Virginia convention for ratification of the federal Constitution. Toward the end of his life he was a supporter of the Jeffersonian party.

Pendleton, Ellen Fitz. b. at Westerly, R.I., Aug. 7, 1864; d. at Newton, Mass., July 26, 1936. American educator and mathematician. She was professor (1901-11) of mathematics, and president (1911-36) of Wellesley College.

Pendleton, George Hunt. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, July 29, 1825; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 24, 1889. American politician. He was a Democratic congressman from Ohio (1857-65), Democratic candidate for vice-president in 1864 on the ticket with G. B. McClellan, and U.S. senator from Ohio (1879-85). In 1868 he was the candidate of the proponents of the Ohio Idea (payment of government debts in greenbacks) for the Democratic presidential nomination, but he failed to get enough votes at the convention. He was the leading advocate of the civil-service reform act, known as the Pendleton Act, of 1883, establishing a civil service commission; his support of this and other reform causes led to his abandonment by the Ohio Democrats. From 1885 to 1888 he was U.S. minister to Germany.

Pendleton, William Nelson. b. at Richmond, Va., Dec. 26, 1809; d. at Lexington, Va., Jan. 15, 1883. American Confederate general, in the Army of Northern Virginia during the Civil War.

Pendleton Act. Law passed by the U.S. Congress and approved Jan. 16, 1883, exempting federal officers from political assessments and establishing a bipartisan Civil Service Commission to maintain competitive examinations for certain government offices. Written by Dorman B. Eaton after a study of the English civil service system and sponsored in Congress by Senator George H. Pendleton of Ohio, the law answered public demand for reform of the civil service system. The "spoils system" had been under attack by reformers for some time, and the assassination (1881) of President Garfield by a disappointed office-seeker focused public attention on the problem. The act provided for open competitive examinations for admission to the public service in Washington, and in all custom houses and post offices where the office force numbered as many as 50; for the apportionment in the departments in Washington among the states and territories in proportion to their population; and for the appointment of a civil service commission of three members, not more than two of them adherents of the same political party, and other officers, to put these provisions into execution. It also forbade assessments on public employees for political purposes by any one in the service of the U.S., or in any public building, and prohibited congressmen from making recommendations for offices to be filled under the act, except as to character or residence. Only about ten percent of federal appointive positions were placed under the limitations of the act.

Pend Oreille Lake (pon.də.ŕä'). [Also, Pend d'Oreille.] Lake in N Idaho, the largest lake in the state. Length, ab. 65 mi.; area, ab. 180 sq. mi.; greatest known depth, ab. 2,500 ft.

Pendragon (pen.drag'ŋ), Uther. See Uther Pendragon.

Penedo (pe.nä'dô). Town in NE Brazil, in the state of Alagoas, on the São Francisco River. 14,664 (1950).

Peneius (pē.nē'us). See Peneus.

Penelope (pē.nel'ə.pē). In Greek legend, the wife of Odysseus, famous as a model of the domestic virtues. In the absence of Odysseus, she was beset with importunate suitors. She promised to decide among them as soon as she finished a certain piece of weaving, but to hold them off she unraveled every night what she had woven each day.

Penetanguishene (pen'ē.tang'gwi.shēn'). Town in S Ontario, Canada, a lake port on the W shore of Victoria harbor, Georgian Bay, a few mi. N of Midland. 4,949 (1951).

Peneus (pē.nē'us). [Also, Peneius.] River in the Peloponnese, Greece, sometimes also called the Gastuni. It drains into the Ionian Sea. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Peneus. [Also, Peneius.] Principal river in Thessaly, Greece, sometimes also called the Salembria. It traverses the Vale of Tempe and flows into the Gulf of Salonika ab. 26 mi. NE of Larissa. Length, ab. 130 mi.

Penfield (pen.fēld), Frederic Courtland. b. at East Haddam, Conn., April 23, 1855; d. at New York, June 19, 1922. American diplomat and journalist, ambassador (1913-17) to Austria-Hungary. He joined (1880) the staff of the Hartford Courant, served (1893-97) as U.S. diplomatic agent and consul general at Cairo, and wrote Present Day Egypt (1899) and East of Suez (1907).

Penfield, Wilder Graves. b. at Spokane, Wash., Jan. 26, 1891—Canadian surgeon, professor of neurology and neurosurgery at McGill University (1928 et seq.), surgeon at Royal Victoria and Montreal General hospitals (1928 et seq.), and director (1928 et seq.) of the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Penfield, William Lawrence. b. at Dover, Lenawee County, Mich., April 2, 1846; d. at Washington, D.C., May 9, 1909. American jurist. He was elected (1894) judge of the 35th judicial circuit of Indiana, and was named (1897) solicitor of the U.S. Department of State, a post he held until 1905, when he became special commissioner to Brazil. He represented the U.S. in various arbitration proceedings, including the "Pious Fund" claim against Mexico (1902), the first case tried by the Hague Court of Arbitration, and arbitrations with Peru, Salvador, Haiti, and Santo Domingo.

Penge (peni). Urban district in SE England, in Kent, ab. 7 mi. S of Victoria Station, London: part of Greater London. 25,009 (1951).

Pengpu (pung'pō). City in E China, in N Anhwei province: a trading city and rail junction; crops of fruits, beans, and nuts; tanneries. 105,237 (1934).

P'eng Te-huai (pung' du'hw'). b. at Hsiangtan, Hunan, China, 1900—Chinese Communist military leader. He joined (1927) the Communist Party and led (1928) a revolt and set up the first Hunan Soviet. He occupied (1930) Changsha for 10 days. In 1949 he was appointed chairman of the northwestern administrative area of China. He was commander of Chinese Communist forces in Korea (1951).

Penhallow (pen.hal'ō), Samuel. b. in Cornwall, England, July 2, 1665; d. at Portsmouth, N.H., Dec. 2, 1726. American historian. He was treasurer (1699-1726) of provincial New Hampshire, secretary (1714-26), and chief justice of the superior court (1717-26). He wrote History of the War of New England with the Eastern Indians, or a Narrative of their Continued Perfidy and Cruelty (1726) and others.

Peniche (pē.nē'she). Town and concelho (commune) in W central Portugal, in the province of Estremadura and district of Lisboa, situated on a promontory on the Atlantic coast, NW of Lisbon: fisheries; fish-canning factories (sardines); lace manufactures. Pop. of concelho, 18,049 (1940); of town, 8,079 (1940).

Peninsula, the. In U.S. Civil War history, specifically the peninsula in E Virginia formed by the York and James rivers in which the Peninsular Campaign was fought.

Peninsula, the. In European history, the Iberian peninsula (Spain and Portugal). See Peninsular War. Peninsular Campaign. Civil War campaign (April 14-July 1, 1862) of the Union Army of the Potomac under General George B. McClellan, for the capture of Richmond by way of the peninsula in E Virginia between the York and James rivers. Chief events and incidents: siege and evacuation of Yorktown (May 3); battles of Williamsburg (May 5), Hanover Court House (May 27), and Fair Oaks (May 31); Seven Days' Battles (June 25-July 1); McClellan's withdrawal to Harrison's Landing (July 2). The retirement of the Army of the Potomac from the peninsula began on July 11, 1862. Union losses, ab. 15,000 (1,700 dead); Confederate losses, ab. 20,000 (3,200 dead).

Peninsular War. Military operations carried on in Portugal, Spain, and southern France by the British, Spanish, and Portuguese forces (largely under Wellington) against the French from 1808 to 1814. The French were driven out of the Peninsula.

"Peninsula State." A nickname of Florida.

Penistone (peni'stŋn). Urban district and market town in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Don ab. 13 mi. NW of Sheffield, ab. 175 mi. N of London by rail. 6,389 (1951).

Penitentes (pen.i.ten'tēz). Religious flagellant societies, especially of Mexico and New Mexico. They had their origin in similar brotherhoods in Italy, Spain, and Germany in the Middle Ages. In the 16th century the Third Order of Franciscans took the cult to Mexico, and in 1598 a member of that order introduced it into what is now New Mexico. Here the cult survives, despite papal interdiction and civil ban, and serves as a medium of religious comfort, political solidarity, and defense against intrusion. Its actual rites and ceremonies, however, are performed at night, in secret, and under guard. The annual demonstration takes place during Holy Week. During this period flagellation is continuous: the peak of excitement and exultation comes in the night of Holy Thursday, when the procession begins. The participants are bare to the waist, clad only in white trousers and a face cloth. They submit to flagellation every step of the way and carry or drag heavy wooden crosses. One of them has been chosen worthy to represent the Christ, and this one is crucified on the hill. Originally he was nailed to his cross for three hours; today he is tied up for only 40 minutes. In one of two localities an image is substituted for the living representative.

Penitent Thief. See Good Thief.

Penjab (pen.jáb'). See Punjab.

Penmarch (pañ.niár). Commune in NW France, in the department of Finistère, near the tip of the SW coast, SW of Quimper. The church of Saint-Nonna dates from the 16th century. The town is connected administratively with Kérity, a port for sardine fisheries. 6,596 (1946).

Penn (pen). Granville. b. at Philadelphia, Dec. 9, 1761; d. in England, Sept. 28, 1844. English scholar; grandson of William Penn.

Penn, John. b. in England, July 14, 1729; d. Feb. 9, 1795. American colonial administrator; grandson of William Penn. He was proprietary lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania (1763–71, 1773–76).

Penn, John. b. in Caroline County, Va., May 6, 1740; d. Sept. 14, 1788. American Revolutionary leader, signer of the Declaration of Independence. After practicing law in Virginia, he moved (1774) to Granville County, N.C., became (1775) a member of the provincial congress, and in the same year was elected to the Continental Congress, in which he served until 1780.

Penn, Richard. b. in England, 1735; d. there, May 27, 1811. English administrator; grandson of William Penn. He was lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania (1771–73).

Penn, Thomas. b. in England, March 9, 1702; d. there, March 21, 1775. Younger son of William Penn, and one of the proprietors of Pennsylvania. He was in Pennsylvania actively in charge of the proprietorship from 1732 to 1741, and after that remained in England to conduct the colony's affairs there.

Penn, Sir William. b. at Bristol, England, 1621; d. Sept. 16, 1670. English admiral; father of William Penn (1644–1718). He became admiral in 1653 under the Commonwealth, and commanded the fleet in the expedition which captured Jamaica in 1655. He carried on secret negotiations with the Royalists and was knighted in 1660 at the Restoration. He commanded, under the Duke of York (later King James II), the fleet which defeated the Dutch in 1665. He retired from active service with the Duke but remained in his post (held from 1660) of commissioner of the navy, in which post he was Samuel Pepys's superior; Pepys disliked him and wrote ill of him, calling him a "base rascal."

Penn, William. b. at London, Oct. 14, 1644; d. at Rusecombe, Berkshire, England, July 30, 1718. English leader of the Society of Friends, remembered also as the founder of Pennsylvania; son of Sir William Penn (1621–70). As a youth he began to be earnestly concerned with religious problems, and his open avowal of nonconformist principles led to his expulsion from Christ Church College, Oxford, in 1662. His shocked father, an admiral of the English navy and a man of wealth, sent him to the Continent in the expectation that its diversions would wean him from his preoccupation with religion. For a time he appears to have enjoyed life at the French court, but if his interest in religion ever really flagged, it was sharply revived by the grim visitation of the plague at London in 1665. In that year he sailed with his father on one of the expeditions against the Dutch, but on returning to England entered Lincoln's Inn, and learned just enough law to be useful, as it turned out, in future struggles for religious liberty. In 1666 he went to Ireland to supervise his father's estates there, and he was given military rank in the entourage of the lord lieutenant, one of the dukes of Ormonde. It was at this time that he definitely dedicated his life to religion, by joining the persecuted Society of Friends, or Quakers, and becoming an active evangelist of their beliefs. In 1668 he published a tract, The Sandy Foundation Shaken, attacking the concept of the Trinity, for which presently he found himself (1669) a prisoner in the Tower of London, where he employed his time in the writing of two other controversial works, No Cross, No Crown, and Innocency With Her Open Eyes. Throughout his life Penn wrote many tracts, not only arguing points of religious doctrine, but pleading for religious tolerance, denouncing luxury and frivolity on the one hand and economic injustice on the other, and advancing various liberal political proposals. Arrested again for public preaching of Quaker tenets in 1670, he argued his own case, taking his stand on the ancient liberties of Englishmen, and won acquittal. In that year his father died, giving his blessing to this strange son who would rather preach in the streets than shine at court, and preferred the comradeship of the persecuted to the company of the great. That son presently went as a Quaker missionary to the Netherlands and Germany, an experience he repeated in 1677 in the company of George Fox. When the American colony of West Jersey came under Quaker control, Penn, as one of the trustees, was influential in framing the plan of government known as the Concessions and Agreements, which guaranteed important civil rights including religious freedom, and set up as governing body an assembly to be elected by the colonists. Charles II had borrowed large sums of money from Penn's father, and in 1681 the latter's son and heir induced the monarch to pay the debt by granting him a great tract in America which the king named Pennsylvania in memory of the admiral. In 1682 the proprietor visited his American holding, laid out the city of Philadelphia, and made the first of those treaties with the Indians which he so scrupulously observed and which won him their affection and trust. In that year also he obtained from his friend the Duke of York (later James II), title to lands along the lower Delaware River, which later became a separate colony. In Pennsylvania he set up a government consisting of a governor of his appointment, an elective council and an elective assembly, and guaranteed religious freedom and other civil rights. From an Old World weary of murderous religious wars and oppressive tyrannies, great numbers, especially of English Quakers, Irish Catholics and Presbyterians, and Dutch and German pietists, flocked to this colony, and Pennsylvania rapidly became populous and prosperous. After the overthrow of James II and the accession of William and Mary, Penn was suspected of intriguing against the new regime, and in 1692 was deprived of the proprietorship of Pennsylvania, but this was restored to him in 1694. In 1697 he laid before the Board of Trade the first concrete proposals for a union of all the American colonies. Late in 1699 he visited Pennsylvania again, hoping to stay there for his remaining days, but it became necessary for him to return to England in 1701. In his last years he had to grapple with many vexatious problems arising from contentions between his governors and the Pennsylvania assembly; in 1712 he suffered a stroke which caused complete loss of memory. After his death the Friends of Reading, Pa., testified of him: "He was a Man of great Abilities, of an Excellent sweetness of Disposition, quick of thought, and ready utterance; full of the Qualification of true Discipleship, even Love without dissimulation . . . he may without straining his Character be ranked among the Learned good and great." In 1693, during the period of his greatest tribulation, he wrote the sweet-tempered book of maxims, Some Fruits of Solitude, and also the striking proposals entitled Essay Towards the Present and Future Peace of Europe, by the Establishment of an European Diet, Parliament, or Estates. A collection of his writings appeared in 1726.

Penna (pe'na). Afonso Augusto Moreira. b. 1847; d. June 14, 1909. Brazilian statesman, president (1906–09) of Brazil. He was a member of the commission that drafted (1888) the Brazilian civil code, three times minister under Dom Pedro II, and supported (1889) the new republic. As governor of the state of Minas Gerais, he founded its capital, Belo Horizonte. He served as vice-president (1902–06) of Brazil. As president of the republic he established, to stabilize Brazilian currency, a conversion office (Caixa de conversão) for issuing paper money redeemable in gold. He died in office.

Pennacook (pen'a.kúk'). North American Indian tribe, now extinct, formerly inhabiting S Maine, NE Massachusetts, and adjacent portions of New Hampshire. They took no part in King Philip's War in 1675, but even so, groups of them were massacred or taken captive in 1676, and the survivors fled to Canada and the West. The language was of the Algonquian family.

Pennant (pen'ant). Thomas. b. at Downing, Flintshire, Wales, June 14, 1726; d. there, Dec. 16, 1798. British naturalist and antiquary. His works include British Zoology (1766), Synopsis of Quadrupeds (1771; later expanded to History of Quadrupeds), A Tour in Scotland in 1769 (1771), Tour in Wales (1778-81), Arctic Zoology (1784-87), and Account of London (1790). He wrote much on the archaeology of Great Britain.

Penne (pān'nā). [Also, Clivta di Penne; ancient name, Pinna.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartmento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise, in the province of Pescara, ab. 15 mi. W of Pescara; agricultural commune. During World War II the roof of the cathedral was destroyed, endangering frescoes in the crypt which were painted in the 13th century. Pop. of commune, 12,784 (1936); of town, 4,498 (1936).

Pennell (pen'el), Joseph. b. at Philadelphia, 1860; d. at New York, April 23, 1926. American etcher and illustrator. He was elected N. A. in 1909. He wrote (in several instances with his wife, Elizabeth Robins Pennell) A Canterbury Pilgrimage (1885), An Italian Pilgrimage (1886), Two Pilgrims' Progress (1887), Our Sentimental Journey through France and Italy (1888), Pen Drawing and Pen Draughtsmen (1889), Our Journey to the Hebrides (1889), The Stream of Pleasure (1891), The Jew at Home (1892), Play in Provence (1892), To Gypsyland (1893), Modern Illustration (1895), The Illustration of Books (1896), The Alhambra (1896), The Work of Charles Keene (1897), Lithography and Lithographists (1900), Life of James McNeill Whistler (1908), Pictures of the Panama Canal (1912), and Etchers and Etching (1919).

Pennetier (pen-ne-ti-er), Louis Charles Adrien Lesot de la. Original name of Lacresionière.

Penni (pān'nē), Gianfrancesco. [Surname Il Fattore.] b. at Florence, Italy, c1488; d. at Naples, Italy, c1528. Italian painter, disciple and journeyman (fattore) of Raphael. He assisted his master in many of his frescoes, and painted most of the "Cartoons" for his designs.

Penniman (pen'i-man), James Hosmer. b. at Alexandria, Va., Nov. 8, 1860; d. at Philadelphia, April 6, 1931. American educator, benefactor, and historian. Graduating (1884) from Yale, he served (1900-13) as head of the Lower School at Philadelphia, and by his activities as a collector and writer achieved a reputation as an expert on Washingtoniana and on 18th-century American history. He established (1915) the Maria Hosmer Penniman Memorial Library of Education at the University of Pennsylvania, founded (1920) the Penniman Memorial Library of Education at Yale University, and in 1921 established the Penniman Memorial Library of Education at Brown University. Author of George Washington as Commander-in-Chief (1917), George Washington as Master of Letters (1918), George Washington at Mount Vernon (1921), Our Debt to France (1921), What Lafayette Did for America (1921), and Philadelphia in the Early Eighteen Hundreds (1923).

Penniman, Josiah Hlmar. b. at Concord, Mass., July 20, 1868; d. at Philadelphia, April 10, 1941. American educator; brother of James Hosmer Penniman. After getting the B.A. (1890) and Ph.D. (1895) degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, he was associated with it as professor (1896 et seq.) of English literature, dean (1897-1904) of the faculty, vice-provost (1911-20), provost (1923-39), and president (1923-39). Author of The War of the Theatres (1897) and A Book about the English Bible (1919).

Pennine Alps (pen'in). Important division of the central Alps. It extends from the Great St. Bernard Pass eastward to the Simplon Pass, and the Rhone is the northern boundary. They are noted for glaciers, long transverse valleys, and high peaks. The highest point is Monte Rosa (over 15,000 ft.). Another famous peak is the Matterhorn.

Pennines (pen'in-z). [Also: Pennine Chain; called the "Backbone of England."] Discontinuous series of low mountains and uplands in N England, extending S from the Cheviot Hills to Derbyshire, terminating in the Peak District. The highest summits (over 3,000 ft.) are in Cumberland.

Pennington (pen'in-ton), William. b. at Newark, N.J., May 4, 1796; d. there, Feb. 16, 1862. American politician. He was governor of New Jersey (1837-43), a member of Congress from New Jersey (1859-61), and speaker of the House of Representatives (1860-61).

Penns Grove (penz). Borough in SW New Jersey, in Salem County, on the Delaware River; manufacturing and residential community. 6,669 (1950).

Pennsylvania (pen-sil-vā'n-yā). [Called the "Keystone State"; official name, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.] State of the E United States, bounded by Lake Erie and New York on the N, New York and New Jersey (separated from both by the Delaware River) on the E, Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia on the S, and Ohio and West Virginia on the W: a Middle Atlantic State, and one of the 13 original states of the American Union.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Pennsylvania is divided for administrative purposes into 67 counties. The state sends 33 representatives to Congress, and has 35 electoral votes. Leading cities include Allentown, Altoona, Bethlehem, Easton, Erie, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Lancaster, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, Scranton, and Wilkes-Barre. Capital, Harrisburg; area, 45,045 sq. mi. (45,333 sq. mi., including water); pop. 10,498,012 (1950), an increase of 6 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks 32nd in area, and third (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface of Pennsylvania is varied. From NE to SW the state is traversed by parallel low ranges of the Allegheny Mountains, belonging to the Appalachian system. Highest point in the state is Mount Davis, or Negro Mountain (3,213 ft.). A portion of the extreme E part consists of a plain; another plain slopes down toward Lake Erie. In addition to the Delaware, which forms the E boundary, the state is drained by the Susquehanna, flowing from N to S in the C area; the Allegheny, in the W, joining the Monongahela at Pittsburgh and with it forming the Ohio, which flows across the W border. Smaller rivers are the Lehigh and Schuylkill rivers, both tributaries of the Delaware, and the Juniata, a tributary of the Susquehanna. The climate is fairly mild in the E, but the state as a whole experiences severe extremes of temperature. Snow falls throughout the area.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Mining is a great industry of the state, Pennsylvania ranking second only to Texas in the value of minerals produced. The state is a leader in the production of coal; also has iron ore, petroleum, natural gas, lime, clay, and slate. Although the state once supplied sufficient iron ore for its own industrial uses, today much is imported from Minnesota. A tremendous manufacturing industry has grown up, focused particularly on the mineral wealth of the state. Pennsylvania ranks second to New York in manufacturing. Pittsburgh is one of the world's great steel cities and a railroad center, producing also much plate glass, aluminum, refined oil, and many other products. Bethlehem and Johnstown are also great steel centers. The state's leading industries besides the manufacture of steel and other metals are printing and the manufacture of paper, textiles, food, chemicals. Philadelphia is an industrial center, known for textiles, publishing, and carpets, as well as many other varied products. It is a financial and commercial center, rail terminus, and as a shipping port surpassed only by New York City. Erie is also an active port. Scranton and New Castle are industrial rail centers. Agriculture ranks as an important industry of the state, which has many fertile valleys. Livestock raising is carried on extensively, and dairy and poultry products bring in considerable revenue. Buckwheat, potatoes, winter wheat, tobacco, rye, corn, oats, hay, peaches, apples, grapes, nuts, and vegetables are grown. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as $30 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as two billion; from manufacturing, as high as 18 billion.

History. Swedish colonists established the first permanent settlements in Pennsylvania, at Tinicum Island (1643) in the Delaware, and at Chester (1644). This region was later taken over by the Dutch and then by the English. William Penn, a Quaker, secured (1681) a grant for the region from Charles II of England, opening it as a refuge for Quakers and other persecuted peoples. A boundary dispute with Maryland was settled (1763-67) by the establishment of the Mason-Dixon Line. At Philadelphia, often called the birthplace of the U.S., the first Continental Congress was held (1774) at Carpenters' Hall, the Second Continental Congress at the State House (1775-81); the Declaration of Independence was issued (July 4, 1776) here. During the Revolutionary War the state was the site of several important battles, the Battle of Brandywine, in which Washington was defeated (Sept. 11, 1777) by Howe, who immediately marched into Philadelphia; and the Battle of Germantown, in which Washington tried (Oct. 4, 1777) without success to move Howe from his position at Germantown. Washington and his threadbare army spent the long, hard winter of 1777-78 at Valley Forge, on the Schuylkill. The Constitutional Convention took place at Philadelphia, adopting (Sept. 17, 1787) the Constitution of the United States. Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia headed the Pennsylvania delegation to the meeting. The state was the second to ratify (Dec. 12, 1787) the Constitution. The Whiskey Insurrection (or Rebellion) occurred (1794) in the state when various groups protested against an excise tax on distilled spirits. In the Civil War Gettysburg was the scene of a battle, July 1-3, 1863, in which the Union general Meade defeated Lee, thus blocking a Confederate invasion of the North; the site is now marked by Gettysburg National Military Park (2,463 acres; established 1895). Johnstown became widely known when a dam there gave way (May 31, 1889) releasing impounded water which engulfed more than 2,000; another flood there (1936) drowned 25. At Homestead occurred (1892) a serious labor conflict when strikers at the Carnegie steelworks rioted in protest against the importation of Pinkerton detectives to settle the strike, and the state militia was sent to break the strike; this conflict resulted in some deaths and the attempted killing of Henry C. Frick, manager of the plant, by Alexander Berkman, an anarchist. The Pennsylvania Turnpike, an automobile highway between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, was completed in 1940 at a cost of 70 million dollars; extensions had been completed by 1952.

Culture. Pennsylvania has a fairly heavy preponderance (over 70 percent of the 1950 population) of urban development. About ten percent of its inhabitants are foreign-born, Irish, Germans, and English being most numerous in this group. There are still living in the E. part of the state descendants of the Pennsylvania "Dutch," actually 18th-century German and Swiss settlers who while maintaining their original language intermingled with it numerous English words; their dialect became known as Pennsylvania Dutch (from the German word Deutsch, meaning "German"). The folk art of this group, extremely decorative but having simple motifs, has become widely known and imitated in the U.S. Philadelphia, still a great Quaker city, is a cultural and educational center; possesses one of the nation's outstanding symphony orchestras, a U.S. navy yard, the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts (oldest art institute in the U.S.), the Pennsylvania Hospital (first American hospital). Poor Richard's Almanac was published here as was the Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser, first daily newspaper in the U.S. The phrase "Main Line" often used to denote membership in exclusive Philadelphia society refers to the fact that the wealthy residents of the city moved, in the early 1900's, out from the city into the more countrified regions along the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Pittsburgh is an educational center. At Bethlehem, the center of the Moravian sect in the U.S., is held annually a famous Bach music festival. Bucks County, N of Philadelphia, is a famous colony of artists, writers, and theater people. Among Pennsylvania's many institutions of higher learning are the state-supported Pennsylvania State College, at State College, with branches at Altoona, Du Bois, Erie, Hazleton, and Pottsville; Bryn Mawr College, at Bryn Mawr; Bucknell University, at Lewisburg, with a branch at Wilkes-Barre; Carnegie Institute of Technology, at Pittsburgh; Chestnut Hill College, at Chestnut Hill; Dickinson College, at Carlisle; the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church, at Philadelphia; Drexel Institute of Technology, at Pittsburgh; Duquesne University, at Pittsburgh; Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, at Philadelphia; Haverford College, at Haverford; Lafayette College, at Easton; Lehigh University, at Bethlehem; Swarthmore College, at Swarthmore; Temple University, at Philadelphia; the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia;

Villanova College, at Villanova. The state motto is "Virtue, Liberty, and Independence." The state flower is the mountain laurel.

Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. Institution, founded in 1805, consisting of a museum of paintings, sculptures, and engravings, and an art school. Its building stands on Cherry and North Broad Streets, Philadelphia. Annual exhibitions of the works of living artists are held here in winter.

Pennsylvania Charter of Privileges. Charter granted (Oct. 28, 1701) by William Penn to the colony of Pennsylvania, notable for its guarantee of freedom of worship to all persons confessing and acknowledging "One almighty God. . . ." It provided for a unicameral legislature (the General Assembly) and certain guarantees in legal procedure. The charter, drafted by committees from the council and assembly established by an earlier frame of government, remained in force until the American Revolution.

Pennsylvania Gazette, The. Paper founded (1728) at Philadelphia by Samuel Keimer as The Universal Instructor in All Arts and Sciences; and Pennsylvania Gazette. Benjamin Franklin and Hugh Meredith purchased the paper in 1729. It was published until 1815.

Pennsylvanian Period (pen.sil.vān'yan). Geological period in the last part of the Carboniferous Period. See table at end of Vol. III.

Pennsylvania v. Wheeling Bridge Company, 13 Howard 518 (1851) (hwē'ling). [Also called the Wheeling Bridge Case.] U.S. Supreme Court decision holding invalid a Virginia statute authorizing the construction of a suspension bridge across the Ohio River wholly within the limits of Virginia. The case was of widespread interest as indicating the developing contest between railroad and river transportation. The majority opinion by Justice John McLean held that the bridge interfered with the Congressional commerce power. Chief Justice Roger Taney's interpretation of the commerce power in his dissenting opinion was characterized by an admirable display of judicial self-restraint. The doctrine formulated by Taney was in effect validated by later Supreme Court decisions.

Penn Yan (pen' yan'). Village in W New York, county seat of Yates County, at the foot of Keuka Lake, ab. 45 mi. SE of Rochester; marketing center for grapes, grain, fruits, and vegetables; canneries and wineries; tourist trade. The name is said to be derived from a combination of the first syllables of Pennsylvania and Yankee. 5,481 (1950).

Pennypacker (pen'i.pak.ər), Elijah Funk. b. in Schuylkill Township, Chester County, Pa., Nov. 29, 1804; d. Jan. 4, 1888. American Abolitionist. He served (1831 et seq.) in the Pennsylvania legislature, and in 1839 became associated with the Abolitionist Movement in that state. His home near Phoenixville, Pa., served as one of the stations on the Underground Railroad.

Pennypacker, Galusha. b. in Schuylkill Township, Chester County, Pa., June 1, 1844; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 1, 1916. American soldier; nephew of Elijah Funk Pennypacker. Serving in the Union forces during the Civil War, he was present in the fighting at Drewry's Bluff, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, and Fort Fisher. In the engagement (Jan. 15, 1865) at Fort Fisher, he was seriously wounded after leading a charge; he was awarded (1891) the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Pennypacker, Samuel Whitaker. b. at Phoenixville, Pa., April 9, 1843; d. at Pennypacker's Mills, near Schuylkill, Pa., Sept. 2, 1916. American lawyer, jurist, and politician. He served (1889-1902) as judge of the court of common pleas, of which he became (1897) president judge, was a member (1885-89) of the Board of Public Education of Philadelphia, and was governor (1903-07) of Pennsylvania. He was president (1900-16) of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and amassed some 10,000 items relating to the state's history.

Penobscot (pe.nob'skot). North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting the N coastal area of Maine. It was one of the tribes in the Abnaki confederacy, and belonged to the Algonquian linguistic stock. The Penobscot were pro-French in most of the colonial wars in New England, until they entered into a peace treaty with the English in 1749. They aided the American colonists during the Revolutionary War, and were rewarded with a reservation at Old Town, Me., where some 500 survive today.

Penobscot. Early name of Castine, Me.

Penobscot Bay. Arm of the Atlantic Ocean indenting the S coast of Maine, at the mouth of the Penobscot River.

Penobscot River. River in Maine, formed by the union at Midway of the E and W branches. It flows into Penobscot Bay near Belfast. Length, ab. 101 mi.; to headwaters, ab. 350 mi.; navigable for large vessels to Bangor.

Penrith (pen'riθ). Urban district and market town in NW England, in Cumberland, ab. 17 mi. SE of Carlisle, ab. 281 mi. NW of London by rail. It is the center of a large agricultural area in Cumberland and Westmorland and one of the principal entries to the Lake District. Overlooking the town are the ruins of a castle built in 1380 which became one of the strongholds of Richard, Duke of Gloucester, who later became Richard III. 10,490 (1951).

Penrod (pen'rōd). Novel by Booth Tarkington, published in 1914, relating the adventures of a 12-year-old boy in a Midwestern town.

Penrose (pen'rōz). Boles. b. at Philadelphia, Nov. 1, 1860; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 31, 1921. American political boss. He was graduated (1884, magna cum laude) from Harvard, studied law privately, and after his admission to the bar became a member of the firm of Page, Allison, and Penrose. His early interest in political reform was indicated in the book The City Government of Philadelphia (1887), written by him in collaboration with Edward P. Allison. In 1881 he became a Republican representative in the lower house of the Pennsylvania legislature; he went to the state senate in 1887, serving there until 1897, when he took his seat in the U.S. Senate. He held the latter post until his death. He was a member of the Republican national committee and took a leading role in the national conventions of 1911, 1904, 1908, 1916, and 1920, even though he did not attend the last one because of illness. The reformist tendencies displayed in his early study of Philadelphia government disappeared quickly after Penrose entered politics; after he succeeded (1904) Matthew Quay as Republican leader in Pennsylvania, Penrose achieved notoriety as one of the nation's most powerful political bosses. His notoriety was probably made easier of accomplishment by the flamboyance of his personal life (local Philadelphia legend still abounds with tales of his incredible feasts as a trencherman) and by the fact that he entered politics as a member of one of Philadelphia's best families (in most of his personal relationships he certainly belied the grossness and vulgarity which he accepted in public life, being notable both as a gentleman and a wit).

Penruddock (pen.ru'dok). Character in Richard Cumberland's The Wheel of Fortune.

Penruddock's Rebellion. Unsuccessful rising in behalf of Charles II in 1655: so called from its leader, Colonel John Penruddock (1619-55). Royalist sympathizer, who was captured and executed.

Penry (pen'ri). John. b. in Brecknockshire, Wales, 1559; hanged at St. Thomas-at-Watering, Surrey, England, May 29, 1593. British Puritan pamphleteer, noted for his connection with the Martin Marprelate tracts (1588-89) attacking the practices and clergy of the Church of England. An earlier pamphlet, published in 1587, was directed against alleged similar abuses within the established church in Wales, and brought Penry a brief term of imprisonment. However, Puritan sentiment rallied to his support and upon his release he and several associates (most notably John Udall and Job Throckmorton) were provided with a clandestine printing press, from which the seven Martin Marprelate tracts were issued during the next several months. The tracts aroused a tremendous public outcry, and government action against the alleged principals in the affair was, if not particularly swift by modern standards, exceedingly stern. Udall was arrested in 1590, and Penry was forced to take refuge in Scotland. Two years later he attempted to make his way secretly back into England, was arrested, accused of writing material calculated to incite rebellion, and hanged. Although it is not definitely known even yet who wrote any particular one of the Martin Marprelate tracts, there is certainly a strong probability that Penry was their chief author, if not their sole author. The real problem, at the time of the trial and since, has been whether or not Penry's admittedly great share in the responsibility for them could justify a charge of something very close to treason: as a Puritan and a reformer, Penry certainly thought not; equally obviously, however, the government of England, and Queen Elizabeth in particular, could not afford at that time to view any controversy involving the established church as being outside the political realm.

Penryn (pen'rin'). Municipal borough and small seaport in SW England, in Cornwall, ab. 2 mi. NW of Falmouth, ab. 288 mi. SW of London by rail, 3,923 (est. 1918).

Pensacola (pen.sə.kə'lə). North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting the area around what is now the city of the same name in W Florida. The tribe had become extinct by the early 18th century. It is not known to which language family their tongue belonged, although Muskogean has been suggested.

Pensacola. City in NW Florida, capital of Escambia County, on Pensacola Bay. It has an important fishing and agricultural trade, and is the site of a U.S. naval air base. It was settled by the French and Spaniards at the end of the 17th century, taken by the French commander Bienville in 1719 (but restored to Spain in 1723), ceded to Great Britain in 1763, taken by the Spaniards in 1781, and ceded to Spain in 1783. Andrew Jackson expelled the British from it in 1814, and took it from the Spaniards in 1818. It passed to the U.S. in 1821. During the Civil War, it surrendered to Union forces in May, 1862; Fort Pickens was continuously occupied, however, by Union forces. 43,179 (1950).

Pensacola Bay. Inlet of the Gulf of Mexico, indenting the NW coast of Florida. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Pensacola Dam. See Grand River Dam.

Pensador Mexicano (pän.sä.'ruör' me.nē.kä'nō), El. Pseudonym of Fernández de Lizard, José Joaquín. Pensées (pä'n.sä). [Full title, Pensées sur la Religion (pä'n.sä sür la re.lj.ēzhyōn), meaning "Thoughts on Religion."] Philosophical and theological work by Blaise Pascal (published posthumously in 1670).

Pen Selwood (pen sel'wōd). Place in Somersetshire, England, where Edmund Ironside defeated (1016) the Danes under Canute.

Penseroso (pen.sə.rō'sō), Il. Poem by John Milton, written c1632. The song "Hence all you Vain Delights," by John Fletcher, in Nice Valer, which begins with phrasing similar to Milton's opening, is thought to have influenced the poem.

Penshurst (penz'hurst), 2nd Baron. See Smythe, George Augustus Frederick Percy Sydney.

Pensioned (or Pension) Parliament. [Also, Cavaller Parliament.] Name given to the English Parliament of 1661-79, which was favorable to the Cavalier or Royalist cause.

Pentameron (pen.tan'e.ron), The. Work by Walter Savage Landor, published in 1837. It is principally an imaginary discussion between Petrarch and Boccaccio on the literature of Italy, including Dante and Vergil.

Pentamerone (pen.tä.mä.rō'nä), Il. Collection of stories in the Neapolitan dialect, by Giovanni Battista Basile, published in 1672. It is divided into five days, ten stories being included in each, and was the prototype of the French fairy-tale collections begun several years later.

Pentapolis (pen.tap'ō.lis). State consisting of five cities, or a group of five cities; the term was used in ancient geography in speaking of a variety of groups: 1. In Cyrenaica, Africa, a district comprising Cyrene, Apollonia, Barca, Arsinoë (near what is now Benghazi), and Berenice (or Hesperides; modern Benghazi), with their neighboring territories. 2. In Palestine, five cities including Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and one other. 3. Five cities of the Philistines: Ashkelon, Gaza, Gath, Ekron, and Ashdod. 4. Five Dorian cities in Asia Minor: Chidus, Kos, Lindus, Camirus (on the island of Rhodes), and Lalyssus. 5. Five cities in Italy: Rimini, Ancona, Fano, Pesaro, and Sinigaglia, with part of the exarchate of Ravenna; this also called Pentapolis Maritima, was later included in the States of the Church (Papal States).

Pentarchy (pen'tar.ki). Name given to the five great powers of 19th-century Europe: Austria, France, Great Britain, Prussia, and Russia. For about half a century after the Congress of Vienna (1814-15) they were of nearly equal strength.

Pentarchy. In 19th-century Italian political history, a parliamentary group under the leadership of the five politicians Benedetto Cairoli, Francesco Crispi, Giuseppe Zanardelli, Giovanni Nicotera, and Alfredo Baecarini.

Pentateuch (pen'ta.tük). First five books of the Old Testament, regarded as a connected group. They are Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. They record the creation, the diffusion of peoples, the formation of the Hebrew nation, and its history through its sojourn in the wilderness. Opinions regarding the authorship of these books differ greatly. Some scholars believe that they, with the book of Joshua, were written substantially by Moses, Joshua, and their contemporaries; others hold that they were compiled at a much later period (in part about the 7th century B.C., or even in postexilic times).

Pentecost (pen'te.kost). [Also, Whitsunday.] Christian feast day commemorating the anniversary of the gift of the Holy Ghost to Christ's disciples subsequent to the Ascension.

Pentelikon (pen.tel'ik'on). [Also: Brilessus, Mendeli; Latin, Pentelicus (-kus).] Mountain in Attica, Greece, ab. 12 mi. NE of Athens. It was famous for its marble. Elevation, ab. 3,638 ft.

Pentheia (pen.thé'a). Principal female character in John Ford's The Broken Heart.

Penthesilea (pen'the.si.lé'a). In Greek legend, a queen of the Amazons who aided the Trojans against the Greeks after the death of Hector. She was slain by Achilles.

Pentheus (pen.thūs). In Greek legend, a king of Thebes who was torn to pieces by his mother, Agave, and other maenads because he denied the divinity of Dionysus and had attempted to spy on and stop the orgiastic ceremonies involved in worship of him by the women.

Penthièvre (pän.tyevr). Region in Brittany, France, corresponding in the main to the department of Côtes-du-Nord. It was a county in the Middle Ages.

Penthièvre, Due de. See Vendôme, Due de.

Penticton (pen.tik'ton). City in S British Columbia, Canada, at the S end of Lake Okanagan, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the center of a rich fruit-growing area. 10,548 (1951).

Pentland Firth (pent'land). Sea passage in N Scotland, lying between the Orkney Islands and the Scottish mainland (Caithness-shire). Its navigation is hazardous for small vessels because of swift tidal currents. Width, ab. 7 mi.

Pentland Hills. Range of hills in S Scotland, in Lanarkshire, Peeblesshire, and Midlothian. It extends ab. 16 mi. from SW to NE, to the S environs of Edinburgh. Highest summit, 1,898 ft.

Pentweazel (pent'wé'zl), Lady. Character in Samuel Foote's comedy Taste, a kind of Mrs. Malaprop, vain of her lost charms.

Penwith (pen'with), 1st Baron of. Title of Courtney, Leonard Henry.

Penza (pen'za). Oblast (region) in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, centered ab. 350 mi. SE of the city of Moscow. Most of the area is rolling or hilly, and well drained. Wheat, barley, potatoes, sugar beets, flax, and oats are grown and there are many dairy herds and flocks of sheep. This area also has a small production of lumber. In the days of the czars approximately the same area was included in the guberniya (government) of Penza, but the present regime has somewhat altered the original boundaries. Capital, Penza; area, 17,563 sq. mi. (1939), ab. 16,700 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 1,708,656 (1939).

Penza. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Penza oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the Sura River; manufactures of paper, lumber, matches, bicycles, watches, machinery, leather goods, and foodstuffs. 157,145 (1939).

Penzance (pen.zans'). Municipal borough, fishing port, and small seaport in SW England, in Cornwall, situated on the coast ab. 21 mi. W of Falmouth, ab. 305 mi. SW of London by rail. It is the westernmost town in England. Penzance is a garden center for early vegetables, because of its mild climate. Steamers leave here for the Isles of Scilly, ab. 40 mi. W by SW. Tin mining was conducted near here in the 19th century, but there is now virtually no mining activity. 20,648 (1951).

Penzance, 1st Baron. Title of Wilde, James Plaisted. Penzoldt (pen'tsolt), Ernst. b. at Erlangen, Germany, June 14, 1892—. German writer and sculptor. Author of Idyllen (1923), Der Schatten Amphion (1924), Der Zuerg (1927), Die Pöwenzbande (1929), and the stories Portugalesische Schlacht (1930).

People in Cages. Novel by Helen Ashton, published in 1937.

People of the Ruins, The. Novel by Edward Shanks, published in 1920.

People's Palace. In the 19th century, an institution in the East End of London, on Mile End Road, intended for the "recreation and amusement, the intellectual and material advancement, of the vast artisan population of the East End."

People's Party. See Populist Party.

People's Political Council. Advisory body established (1938) by the Chinese Kuomintang as a concession to demands for an end of Kuomintang political monopoly.

People's Republic of Korea (kô.ré'a). See under Korea.

People's Theatre. See Volksbühne.

People, Yes, The. Poem in free verse by Carl Sandburg, published in 1936. The rhythms, slang, and idiom of American life are used to characterize the people, their hopes, and their desires.

Peoria (pé.ōr'i.a). City in C Illinois, county seat of Peoria County, on the Illinois River at the foot of Peoria Lake, ab. 62 mi. N of Springfield. It is a railroad center, with manufactures of farm implements and liquor. It is the seat of Bradley Polytechnic Institute. A trading post was established here by La Salle in 1680. Pop. of city, 105,087 (1940), 111,856 (1950); of urbanized area, 154,539 (1950).

Peoria Heights. Village in C Illinois, in Peoria County; a northern suburb of Peoria. 5,425 (1950).

Peoria Lake. Expansion of the Illinois River bordering Peoria on the E.

Peparethos (pép.a.ré'thos). Ancient name of Skopelos.

Pepe (pä'pä), Florestano. b. at Squillace, Italy, 1780; d. at Naples, Italy, April 3, 1851. Neapolitan general; brother of Guglielmo Pepe. He served in 1806 under Joseph Bonaparte, whom he accompanied to Spain. He became brigadier general in 1811, served in the Russian campaign in 1812, and fought as lieutenant general under Joachim Murat against the Austrians in 1815.

Pepe, Guglielmo. b. at Squillace, Italy, Feb. 15, 1783; d. at Turin, Italy, Aug. 9, 1855. Neapolitan general; brother of Florestano Pepe. He organized the Carbonari and, when Ferdinand IV temporized about putting a constitution into force, Pepe led a revolt that was put down (1821) by an Austrian army. In 1818 he came back to Naples and was put in command of troops to fight the Austrians, but was confronted almost immediately with a revocation of the order to fight. He thereupon gave up his commission and headed a group of volunteers that joined Daniele Manin in the defense of Venice; after their defeat, he was exiled.

Pepin (pép'in; French, pä.pañ). [German, Pippin; called Pépin le Bref (le bref), English, Pepin the Short.] d. 768. King of the Franks (751-768); son of Charles Martel and father of Charlemagne. He became major domus of Neustria on the death of his father in 741, his brother Carloman becoming major domus of Austrasia. The latter abdicated in his favor in 747, and with the Pope's sanction he assumed the title of king in 751 after deposing Childeric III, who had ruled the Franks with the consent of Pepin and Carloman. He assisted (754-755) the Pope against Aistulf, king of the Lombards, and granted the Pope the exarchate of Ravenna, the Pentapolis, and the territory of Bologna and Ferrara, thus laying, with what is known as the Donation of Pepin, the foundation of the States of the Church, or Papal States. He fought against the Moors, conquered Aquitaine, subjugated Bavaria, and attempted to defeat the Saxons. His wife, daughter of Carlbert, Count of Laon, is known as Bertha of the Big Foot.

Pepin I. d. 838. King of Aquitaine (817-838); second son of Louis I.

Pepin (pép'in), Lake. Expansion of the Mississippi River between Minnesota and Wisconsin, ab. 40 mi. SE of St. Paul. Length, ab. 25 mi.

Pepin of Herstal (her'stál). [Also: Pepin II; German, Pippin; French, Pépin d'Héristal (dā.rě.stál).] d. 714. Ruler of the Franks; father of Charles Martel. He became major domus of Austrasia in 676, and in 687 became sole major domus over all the Franks by his victory at Tertry over the major domus of Neustria. He thenceforth styled himself dux et princeps Francorum (leader and prince of the Franks).

Pepita (pē.pě'ta). Novel by V. Sackville-West, published in 1937.

Pepohwan (pā'pō'hwān'). See Peipohuan.

Pepoli (pē'pō.le), Contessa. See Alboni, Marietta.

Pepoli, Marchese Gioachino. b. at Bologna, Italy, Nov. 6, 1825; d. at Rome, March 26, 1881. Italian politician; grandson of Joachim Murat. He defended Bologna against the Austrians in 1848, and was chief of the provisional government at Bologna in 1859. In 1862 he was minister of agriculture and commerce under Urbano Rattazzi; he served as ambassador at St. Petersburg (1863), and was ambassador at Vienna (1868-70).

Pepper (pép'ér), Claude Denson. b. at Dudleyville, Ala., Sept. 8, 1900—. American lawyer and politician. He served (1936-50) as U.S. senator from Florida, becoming known as an ardent supporter of administration policies under F. D. Roosevelt and H. S. Truman.

Pepper, George Seckel. b. at Philadelphia, June 11, 1808; d. May 2, 1890. American lawyer and philanthropist. He was a member (1850-84) of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, of which he was president (1884-90), and helped found the Academy of Music (opened 1857).

Pepper, George Wharton. b. at Philadelphia, March 16, 1867—. American lawyer, politician, and author, U.S. senator (1922-27) from Pennsylvania. Author of The Borderland of Federal and State Decisions (1889), Pleading at Common Law and Under the Code's (1891), The Way (1909), A Voice from the Crowd (1915), Men and Issues (1924), In the Senate (1930), Family Quarrels (1931), Philadelphia Lawyer (1941), and other works.

Pepper, William. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 21, 1810; d. Oct. 15, 1864. American physician and teacher. He established his medical practice at Philadelphia, and in 1860 was named professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, a post he held for four years.

Pepper, William. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 21, 1843; d. at Pleasanton, Calif., July 28, 1898. American physician and scientist; son of William Pepper (1810-64). He was provost of the University of Pennsylvania (1881-94), and taught there as professor of clinical medicine (1876-87) and of the theory and practice of medicine (1887 et seq.).

Pepperkul (pép'ér.kul). See Colepepper, Captain John.

Pepperell (pép'ér.el). Town in NE Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, 3,460 (1950).

Pepperpot (pép'ér.pot), Sir Peter. Rich West Indian, a character in Samuel Foote's play The Patron.

Pepperrell (pép'ér.el), Sir William. [Also, Pepperell.] b. at Kittery point, Me. (then part of Massachusetts), June 27, 1696; d. there, July 6, 1759. American general, important also as a merchant and politician in colonial New England. He commanded the army of colonials raised (1745) to attack the French fortress of Louisburg, on Cape Breton Island (now part of Nova Scotia), and carried out the operation with notable brilliance (the assault was a joint land and sea matter, with a British fleet providing transport and offshore cover for Pepperrell's troops). As a result of this success, Pepperrell was given a baronetcy in 1746, the first person born in America to be so honored. He was a regimental commander during another, later phase of the French and Indian Wars, but had no successes to rival his capture of Louisburg. In civilian affairs he was notable as chief justice (1730 et seq.) of Massachusetts and as temporary governor (1756 et seq.).

Peppers and How They Grew (pép'érz), Five Little. See Five Little Peppers and How They Grew.

"Peppino" (pāp.pě'nō). See Garibaldi, Giuseppe.

Pepusch (pā'pūsh), Johann Christoph. [Also, John Christopher Pepusch.] b. at Berlin, 1667; d. at London, July 20, 1752. German composer, resident for most of his life at London. He went to England (c1700), and in 1710 was instrumental in the organization of the Academy of Ancient Music. He composed a number of masques, and wrote the overture and arranged the airs for John Gay's The Beggar's Opera and Polly, and for The Wedding, another ballad-opera.

Pepys (pēps, pep's, pips, pep's), Sir Charles Christopher. [Title, 1st Earl of Cottenham.] b. at London, April 29, 1781; d. in Italy, April 29, 1851. English jurist, lord chancellor (1836-41 and 1846-50).

Pepys, Samuel. b. Feb. 23, 1633; d. May 26, 1703. English politician and diarist. He was a son of a tailor at London. In 1650 he entered Magdalene College, Cambridge. He married in 1655 and was taken into the house of Sir Edward Montagu (afterward Earl of Sandwich), whose mother had married Pepys's grandfather. His Diary was begun Jan. 1, 1660, and is one of the chief sources for information on the Restoration, in which Pepys actively participated. Montagu made him secretary of the generals at sea in March, 1660, and clerk of the acts of the navy in July, 1660. During the plague of 1666 he remained at London. He also assisted in checking (so far as it could be checked) the great fire of the same year. He became secretary of the admiralty in 1673. In 1678-79 he sat as member of Parliament for Harwich, and was twice master of Trinity House. On May 22, 1679, during the hysteria of the Popish Plot, he was sent to the Tower of London as a papist, because of his being close to the Duke of York (later James II). From 1684 to 1686 he was president of the Royal Society. He was dismissed from all his offices after the revolution of 1688 which placed William of Orange on the throne. About 1690 he published Memoirs relating to the State of the Royal Navy. His library of 3,000 volumes was bequeathed to Magdalene College, Cambridge. The last entry in the Diary was made May 31, 1669; his sight was beginning to fail and he gave up keeping the record. The Diary was written in cipher, actually his own adaptation of Thomas Shelton's shorthand system, and was translated by the Reverend John Smith and published, with many omissions, by Richard Griffin Neville, 3rd Baron Braybrooke (who had discovered it in the Pepysian Library), in 1825. In 1875-79 Mynors Bright republished it with much original matter, and in 1893 the whole, except for certain lurid passages which could not be printed, was edited by H. B. Wheatley.

Pepysian Library (pē'pī.sian, pep'-). Library of Samuel Pepys (containing the cipher manuscript of his Diary and a large collection of ballads), bequeathed by him to Magdalene College, Cambridge, England. It is in a separate building, which was approaching completion about the time Pepys determined to bequeath his collection either to Magdalene or to Trinity, and in which (in the former case) he wished it to be deposited. The library came into the possession of the college on the death of his nephew in 1724.

Pequawket (pē.kwō'ket). [Former name, Kearsarge, also spelled Kiarsarge.] Mountain in Carroll County, New Hampshire, ab. 5 mi. N of North Conway. Elevation, 3,260 ft.

Pequod (pē'kwōd). Whaling ship that provides the background in Moby Dick (1851), novel by Herman Melville.

Pequot (pē'kwot). North American Indian tribe that formerly inhabited a strip of coast in Connecticut. During the early 17th century, in confederation with other tribes of Connecticut and Long Island, the Pequot were a serious threat to the English colonists. After the Pequot War, the remnants fled westward to Long Island. One group was massacred near Fairfield, Conn., and the few survivors enslaved. A few Pequot survive today in the Mystic River region, in Connecticut. The language was of the Algonquian family.

Pequot War. War (1636-38) between the Pequot Indians of Connecticut and the settlers. The Pequot were enslaved and nearly exterminated after their defeat by the colonists under John Mason and John Underhill in 1637.

Pera (pā'rā). See Bevoğlu.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔ, then; ǵ, d or j; ʃ, s or sh; ʒ, t or ch;

Peraea (pě.rě'a). In ancient geography, a vague region E of the Jordan, corresponding to the earlier Gilead and sometimes including Bashan.

Peraea. In ancient geography, a maritime district on the coast of Caria, Asia Minor, opposite Rhodes.

Perak (pā'rak, pe'rá). State in the Federation of Malaya, formerly one of the Federated Malay States, situated on the W coast of the Malay Peninsula, ab. 375 mi. NW of Singapore. It became a part of the Federation in February, 1948. It produces rice, rubber, and tin. Capital, Taiping; area, 7,980 sq. mi.; pop. 953,958 (1947).

Peralta (pā.räl'tä), Gaston de. [Title, Marquis of Peralta.] b. probably in Navarre, Spain, c1510; d. at Valladolid, Spain, 1580. Spanish nobleman, viceroy of Mexico (October, 1566–October, 1567).

Peralta Barnuevo (pā.räl'tä bär.nwä'bō) (or y Barnuevo) (ē bär.nwä'bō), Pedro de. b. at Lima, Peru, 1663; d. there, 1743. Peruvian mathematician, dramatist, and poet. He was several times rector of the University of San Marcos, and from 1708 was official cosmographer. His numerous writings include poetry, history, law, and mathematics. Among the best known are Lima fundada, an epic of the conquest of Peru, in ten cantos (1732).

Perath (pe.räth'). Hebrew name of the Euphrates.
Perceforest (pěr.sē.for'ēst). [Also, Perceforêt (pers-fōrē).] Medieval French historical romance, and the name of its hero. It is set in Britain before the reign of King Arthur.

Percé Rock (pěr.sä'). Rock off the E end of the Gaspé Peninsula, Quebec, Canada, on the St. Lawrence River. It is entirely pierced in places and forms arches. Height, nearly 300 ft.

Perceval (pěr'sē.väl). [Also: Percival, Percivale.] One of the principal heroes in the medieval Arthurian cycle of romance and legend, figuring especially in the search for the Holy Grail. He first appeared in the French poem Conte del Graal by Chrétien de Troyes c1175, and then passed into the literature of nearly every European nation. The story of Perceval begins with his boyhood in the forest, where he was brought up by his mother ignorant of the ways of knights and warriors or of courtly manners; it goes on to his arrival at King Arthur's court, where he makes one awkward blunder after another, receives instruction in knighthood and warfare, and becomes one of the best knights of the Round Table. Perceval's quest for the Holy Grail is the main incident, ending with his being rewarded with a sight of it. The story as told in Wolfram von Eschenbach's Parzival lays stress on the courtly training which transforms the simple forest boy into the noble knight, his first failure in the Grail quest, his years of suffering, and final achievement of the sovereignty of the Grail. Almost all versions present the forest boyhood, the gaucheries at court, and the Grail story. Late tellings, however, usually present him as a virgin knight. Thomas Malory's story of Perceval is a condensation of the 13th-century Cistercian Queste del Saint Graal. Malory was the source of Tennyson's version in Idylls of the King.

Perceval (pěr.sē.väl), Caussin de. See Caussin de Perceval.

Perceval (pěr'sē.väl), Sir John. [Title, 1st Earl of Egmont.] b. at Burton Port, Ireland, 1683; d. at London, 1748. English politician who helped James Oglethorpe found the colony of Georgia. He sat in the Irish Parliament for Cork (1704–15) and in the English Parliament for Harwich (1727–34). Appointed first president of the trustees incorporated by royal charter of 1732 for the establishment of Georgia, he actively superintended its colonization.

Perceval, Sir John. [Titles: 1st Baron Lovel and Holland, 2nd Earl of Egmont.] b. at Westminster, London, 1711; d. at Pall Mall, London, 1770. English leader of the Hanoverian opposition to Thomas Pelham-Holles, 1st Duke of Newcastle; son of Sir John Perceval (1683–1748). He joined Frederick, Prince of Wales, after effecting a coalition between the Jacobites and the prince's party, and opposed (1748–49) Newcastle's administration.

Perceval, Sir Philip. b. 1605; d. at London, 1647. English politician. He lost extensive property to the insurgents in the Irish rebellion (1641), and, because he opposed Charles I's overtures of allegiance to them, joined the parliamentary party (1644), obtaining a seat in Commons as a representative of the moderate Presbyterians. He was forced to retire on account of his opposition to the independents (1647).

Perceval, Spencer. b. at London, in November, 1762; assassinated in the lobby of the House of Commons, May 11, 1812. English statesman; younger son of Sir John Perceval, 2nd Earl of Egmont. He was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1786, became member of Parliament for Northampton in 1796, and was solicitor general in the Addington administration in 1801, and attorney general in 1802. He opposed Roman Catholic emancipation. He was premier (1819–12), and was shot by an insane bankrupt named Bellingham.

Perch (pěrch), Philemon. See Johnston, Richard Malcolm.

Perche (pěrsch). [Also, Le Perche.] Region and old county of N France, corresponding in the main to the departments of Eure-et-Loir and Orne. Capital, Mortagne. It passed by escheat to the French crown in 1257, and a large part was included in the government of Maine (or Maine and Perche).

Perchtoldsdorf (pěrch'tōlts.dōrf). [Also, Petersdorf.] Market town in E Austria, in the province of Vienna, situated on the E slope of the Wienerwald, SW of Vienna, between Liesing and Mödling. It has brewing and chemical industries and is famous for its wine. On July 17, 1683, the Turks massacred a large part of the population during the siege of Vienna, 9,917 (1946).

Percival or Percivale (pěr'si.väl). See Perceval.

Percival, James Gates. b. at Berlin, Conn., Sept. 15, 1795; d. at Hazel Green, Wis., May 2, 1856. American poet and geologist. He wrote many lyrics, most of them in imitation of Thomas Moore, Robert Southey, or Lord Byron; the best are The Coral Grove and the long, darkly meditative, Hyronic Prometheus. Unsuccessful as a physician and teacher of chemistry at the U.S. Military Academy, he mastered languages and assisted Noah Webster on An American Dictionary (1828). Becoming engrossed in botanical and geological studies, he completed the first geological survey of Connecticut in 1835, and he died while employed as state geologist of Wisconsin. Until the emergence of William Cullen Bryant in 1832, Percival was the leading American poet. He made several scientific discoveries of some significance.

Percival, John. [Called "Mad Jack" and "Roaring Jack."] b. at West Barnstable, Mass., April 5, 1779; d. Sept. 17, 1862. American naval officer who gained fame for his daring feats against British craft during the War of 1812. Promoted (1814) to the rank of lieutenant, he cruised against West Indian pirates, was commander of the Dolphin in South Sea waters, and commanded the Constitution on a global cruise (1844–46).

Percy (pěr'si). Tragedy by Hannah More, produced in 1778. She is supposed to have been assisted by David Garrick in this play.

Percy, Alan Ian. [Title, 8th Duke of Northumberland.] b. 1880; d. 1930. English soldier and conservative politician; a descendant of Sir Hugh Percy. He served in the Boer War (1901–02), in Egypt (1907–10), and in the intelligence department in World War I (1914–16). Author of political and military essays and articles.

Percy, Sir Algernon. [Title, 10th Earl of Northumberland.] b. at London, 1602; d. 1668. English political and military leader who endeavored to reconcile Charles I and the Parliamentarians; son of Sir Henry Percy (1564–1632), 9th Earl of Northumberland. His appointment as lord high admiral (1638) followed service as admiral of the fleet (1636–38). Although he became general of the forces south of Trent on the eve of the Scottish war (1639), his dissatisfaction with the policies of Charles I drew him to the side of the opposition, and he sought to negotiate the differences in 1642 as a member of the Parliamentary committee of safety and, in 1648, as one of the special commissioners. However, he led the House of Lords opposition to the trial of Charles.

Percy, Florence. Pseudonym of Akers, Elizabeth Chase.

Percy, George. b. 1580; d. 1632. English author and colonist; son of Sir Henry Percy (c1532–85), 8th Earl of Northumberland. After service in the Low Countries, he sailed for Virginia in the first expedition of James I's reign (1606). On the recall of John Smith (1609), and again after departure of Thomas West, Baron de la Warr (1611), he was appointed deputy governor. According to his A True Relation of the Proceedings . . . In Virginia (c1625), John Smith was a braggart and slanderer.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title, 1st Baron Percy of Alnwick (by writ).] b. c1272; d. 1315. English nobleman who played an important role in the Scottish wars of Edward I. Replaced by Piers Gaveston as justice of forests (1312), he joined Thomas of Lancaster against Edward II. Pardoned for his share in the disturbances, he took arms against Bruce at Bannockburn (1315). He purchased Alnwick and Northumbrian lands, and thus became virtual founder of the historic house of Percy, previously associated with Yorkshire.

Percy, Henry. [Title, 2nd Baron Percy of Alnwick.] b. c1299; d. near Alnwick, England, 1352. English nobleman who, with his father, Sir Henry Percy (c1272–1315), established the Percy family as the “hereditary guardians of the North and the scourge of Scotland.” Appointed warden of the Scottish marches (1328), he helped defeat David Bruce (whom he took prisoner) at Neville’s Cross (1346).

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title, 1st Earl of Northumberland.] b. 1342; killed at Bramham Moor, England, 1408. English military commander; grandson of Henry Percy (1299–1352) and father of Henry Percy (Hotspur). Although appointed (1377) marshal of England, he was instrumental in dethroning Richard II, and was engaged in various conspiracies against Henry IV. He defeated the Scots at Homildon Hill (1402). He was killed invading England.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Called Hotspur.] b. 1364; killed in the battle of Shrewsbury, England, 1403. English soldier; son of Henry Percy (1342–1408), 1st Earl of Northumberland. In 1402 he fought with his father at Homildon Hill, and captured the Earl of Douglas. Angered by the refusal of Henry IV to accept Douglas as ransom for his (Percy’s) brother-in-law, Edmund Mortimer (whom Henry was holding prisoner), Percy associated himself with Owen Glendower in his war against the king, and was killed at Shrewsbury in 1403. Shakespeare introduces him (on a basis of the accounts in Holinshed) as a gay, jesting, fiery-tempered soldier in his Henry IV, first part.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title, 2nd Earl of Northumberland.] b. 1394; d. at St. Albans, England, 1455. English nobleman; son and heir of Sir Henry (Hotspur) Percy (1364–1403). He was restored to his grandfather’s dignities and estates (1416) by Henry V, upon whose death he became a member of the council of regency (1422) for Henry VI. He was killed fighting Richard, Duke of York, at the first battle of St. Albans.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title, 4th Earl of Northumberland.] b. 1446; murdered by a mob near Thirsk, England, 1489. English nobleman; grandson of Sir Henry Percy (1394–1455), 2nd Earl of Northumberland. Edward IV conferred his title upon John Neville, Lord Montagu, but returned it in 1469. Although he received many favors from Richard III, he was disloyal to him, and was taken without resistance at Bosworth, immediately becoming an adherent of Henry VII. He was killed in a clash while attempting to suppress a disturbance in Yorkshire.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title, 8th Earl of Northumberland.] b. at Newburn Manor, England, c1532; d. in the Tower of London, 1585. English nobleman, thrice imprisoned for supporting the cause of Mary, Queen of Scots; great-grandson of Sir Henry Percy (1446–89), 4th Earl of Northumberland, and brother of Sir Thomas Percy (d. 1572), 7th Earl. Although he fought against the Scots (1559–60), he remained loyal during his brother Thomas’s rebellion (1569); however, he shifted allegiance to Mary, Queen of Scots in 1571. For so doing, he was arrested (1571). Following his third arrest (1584) for conspiracy, he was found shot through the heart. The jury’s verdict of suicide was upheld by a Star Chamber inquiry.

Percy, Sir Henry. [Title: 9th Earl of Northumberland; called “the Wizard Earl.”] b. at Tynemouth, England, 1564; d. at Petworth, England, 1632. English nobleman; son of Sir Henry Percy (c1532–85), 8th Earl of Northumberland. His scientific experiments won him the sobriquet. For failure to warn the king against the Gunpowder Plot, he was tried and sentenced to life imprisonment. Released in 1621 after 15 years in prison, he did not reënter public life. George Pele celebrated his installation into the Order of the Garter with Honour of the Garter (1593).

Percy, Sir Hugh. [Title, 2nd Duke of Northumberland.] b. Aug. 28, 1742; d. July 10, 1817. English soldier; a descendant, through his mother, of Sir Algernon Percy, 10th Earl of Northumberland. He fought (1774–77) in the American Revolutionary War.

Percy, Sir Thomas. [Title, 7th Earl of Northumberland.] Behended at York, England, Aug. 22, 1572. English politician, executed for conspiracy against Queen Elizabeth; brother of Sir Henry Percy (c1532–85), 8th Earl of Northumberland.

Percy, Thomas. b. at Bridgnorth, England, April 13, 1729; d. at Dromore, Ireland, Sept. 30, 1811. English poet, bishop, and antiquary, editor of the Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, known as Percy’s Reliques. He was the son of a grocer, and graduated from Oxford (Christ Church) in 1750. He was appointed vicar of Easton Maudit, Northamptonshire, in 1753, chaplain to George III in 1769, and bishop of Dromore, Ireland, in 1782. The Reliques of Ancient English Poetry appeared in 1765; the first edition contained 176 poems or ballads. It was coarsely, but with some justice, attacked by Joseph Ritson as not being an exact transcription from the original manuscripts. The collection, nevertheless, served as the inspiration for a good deal of the output of the romantic poets of the next century, and it had a notable success in stirring other collectors to work. He also published Hau Kiu Chooan (1761; a Chinese novel from the Portuguese), Miscellaneous Pieces relating to the Chinese (1762), and Northern Antiquities (1770; translated from Paul Henri Mallet).

Percy, Thomas. b. at Southwark, London, Sept. 13, 1768; d. at Ecton, near Northampton, England, May 14, 1808. English minor poet; nephew of Thomas Percy (1729–1811). He edited the fourth edition of Percy’s Reliques (1794).

Perdiccas (pér.dik’as). Assassinated in Egypt, 321 B.C. One of the generals of Alexander the Great. He became regent in 323, and conquered Cappadocia in 322. A league was formed against him by Ptolemy and others; he moved to attack the allies and was defeated. He was killed by his own soldiers.

Perdiccas I. fl. c700 B.C. King of Macedon, the legendary founder of the Macedonian kingdom.

Perdiccas II. d. c413 B.C. King of Macedon at the time of the Peloponnesian War.

Perdiccas III. d. 359 B.C. King of Macedon (364–359 B.C.); brother and predecessor of Philip II of Macedon, and thus an uncle of Alexander the Great.

Perdido (pér.dé’dó). Small river and bay on the W border of Florida, separating it from Alabama.

Perdido (pér.dé’énó). Monte. [French, Mont Perdu.] One of the highest peaks of the Pyrenees, situated in NE Spain, in the province of Huesca. Elevation, ab. 10,997 ft.

Perdita (pér’di.ta). In Shakespeare’s The Winter’s Tale, the daughter of Leontes and Hermione, brought up as a shepherdess.

Perdita. Pseudonym of Robinson, Mary.

Perdix (pér’diks). See Talos.

Perdriat (pér.dri.ä), Hélène Marie Marguerite. b. at La Rochelle, France, June 27, 1894—. French painter, engraver, illustrator, and designer. Among her works are Diana, The New Convert, Siesta, The Demoiselles of Fantasy, illustrations for Flaubert’s Mme. Bovary, Colette’s The House of Claudine, and F. Jammes’ When They Conspire, and décor for the ballet The Bird Merchant.

Perdu (pér.dü), Mont. French name of Perdido, Monte.

Pere (pä’rä). See Pele.

Pereida (pä.rä’rñä), Antonio de. b. at Valladolid, Spain, 1599; d. at Madrid, 1669. Spanish painter.

Pereida, José María de. b. at Polanco, near Santander, Spain, Feb. 7, 1834; d. at Madrid, March 2, 1906. Spanish regional novelist. Among his works are Escenas montañesas (1864), El Buey suelto (1877), Don Gonzalo González de la Gonzalera (1878), De tal palo, tal astilla (1879), Pedro Sánchez (1883), Sotileza (1884), La Puchera (1889), La Montañés (1891), and Peñas arriba (1895).

Père Duchesne (per dü.shen). See Hébert, Jacques René.

Père du Peuple (per dü.pèpl). See Louis XII (of France). Peredur (per'è.dür). Title and hero of one of the Arthurian stories in the Welsh Mabinogion, taken (c1200) from one or more earlier French prose romances. It comprises one of the earliest versions of the Perceval-and-the-Grail legend. It is especially interesting in that it substitutes for the usual chalice a platter bearing a man's severed head.

Père Enfantin (per äñ.fän.tän), Le. See Enfantin, Barthélemy Prosper.

Père Goriot (per gø.rjö). Le. Novel by Honoré de Balzac, published in 1835.

Peregrina (pä.rä.grë'nä), La. Pseudonym of Avellaneda y Arteaga, Gertrudis Gómez de.

Peregrine Pickle (per'ë.grin pik'l), The Adventures of. Novel by Tobias Smollet, published in 1751.

Peregrinus (per'ë.gri'nus). Pseudonym of Saint Vincent of Lerins.

Peregrinus Proteus (prö'tüs, prö'té.us). d. 165 A.D. Cynic philosopher. After a youth spent in debauchery and crime, he became a Christian and afterward a Cynic philosopher. He burned himself alive at Olympia during the Olympic Games in 165. He is represented by Lucian as a profligate and crazy quack. He is the subject of a romance by Christoph Martin Wieland.

Pereira (pä.rä'rá). City in W Colombia, in Caldas department: center of coffee and livestock industries. 30,762 (1938).

Pereira (per.ä'ra), Artur Ramos de Araújo. See Ramos, Artur.

Pereira, Duarte Coelho. See Coelho Pereira, Duarte.

Pereira da Silva (da sël'va), João Manuel. b. at Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 30, 1817; d. 1898. Brazilian historian.

Pereira de Souza (de sö'za), Washington Luiz. Full name of Luiz or Luis, Washington.

Pereira Gomes (gø'm's), Wenceslau Braz. See Braz Pereira Gomes, Wenceslau.

Pereira y Cubero (pä.rä'rá è kö.bä'rö), José Alvarez de. See Alvarez, José.

Pereira (pä.rer). Isaac. [Original surname, Pereira.] b. at Bordeaux, France, Nov. 25, 1806; d. July 12, 1880. French financier. In company with his brother he established himself as a broker at Paris. The brothers purchased the railroad from Paris to St.-Germain in 1835, and in 1852 founded the Crédit Mobilier, a bank established to finance companies that would forward French economic development. He published Le Rôle de la Banque de France et l'organisation du crédit en France (1864), Questions financières (1877), and Politique financière (1879).

Perekop (per.e'kop'; Russian, pä.rî.köp'). Village in the U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, on the Isthmus of Perekop, ab. 60 mi. SE of Kherson. It was formerly an important fortress and commercial place. Perekop, Gulf of. Arm of the Black Sea, lying NW of the Crimea.

Perekop, Isthmus of. Isthmus connecting the Crimean oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic with the rest of the U.S.S.R., and separating the Sea of Azov from the Black Sea. It was the scene of heavy fighting (September–October, 1941) during World War II. Width at narrowest point, ab. 4 mi.

Père Lachaise (per lä.shëz), Cemetery of. Most important and celebrated cemetery of Paris, situated in the eastern part of the city. The site belonged to a rich bourgeois in the 16th century, and was called La Folie-Regnault. It was bought by the Jesuits in 1626, and named Mont-Louis. It was later enlarged by Père La Chaise, the Jesuit confessor of Louis XIV, and has since borne his name.

"Père la Victoire" (per lä vëk.twär). Epithet given by French soldiers during World War I to Clemenceau, Georges (Eugène Benjamin).

Perelman (per'l'man), S. J. [Full name, Sidney Joseph Perelman.] b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Feb. 1, 1904—American humorist. He was an artist and writer for Judge (1925–29) and College Humor (1929–30), has been a frequent contributor to the New Yorker, and was a writer (1930 et seq.) for motion pictures. Author of Dawn Ginsberg's Revenge (1929), Parlor, Bedlam and Bath (1931) Strictly from Hunger (1937), Look Who's Talking (1940), The Dream Department (1943), Crazy Like a Fox (1944), Keep It Crisp (1946), Aces and Pains (1947), Westward Ha! (1948), The Swiss Family Perelman (1950), The Ill-Tempered Clavichord (1952), and other books.

Père Marquette (per mär.ket). See Marquette, Jacques.

Péret (pä.re), Raoul. b. at Chatellerault, Vienne, France, Nov. 29, 1870; d. at St.-Mandé, Seine, France, July 22, 1942. French political leader and lawyer. A Radical-Socialist, he was a deputy (1902–26) and senator (1926–32). He was minister of commerce and posts (1914), minister of justice (1917), president (1920–24, 1926) of the Chamber of Deputies, and minister of finances (1926, 1930). Accused (1930) of having given illegal assistance to a French speculator while he was finance minister in 1926, he resigned and withdrew from active politics. Tried for malfeasance in office, he was acquitted (1931).

Peretti (per.ät'të), Felice. Original name of Pope Sixtus V.

Peretz (per'ets), Isaac Loeb. [Also, Yitzchok Leibush Peretz.] b. near Lublin, Poland, 1852; d. at Warsaw, Poland, 1915. Jewish poet, playwright, and short-story writer. He wrote in Yiddish rather than in Hebrew, a language he had taught, in order better to reach the audience he intended for his work, the Jewish working class of Poland. His stories are considered among the best in Yiddish literature, the most famous being Bontche the Silent, telling of a quiet, uncomplaining porter who is greeted in heaven as one of the greatest of the saints.

Pérez (pä'reth), Antonio. b. in Aragon, Spain, c1539; d. at Paris, Nov. 3, 1611. Spanish politician, secretary of state under Philip II. At the instigation of Philip he procured the murder, for political reasons, of Juan de Escobedo, secretary of Don John of Austria, on March 31, 1578. Probably as the result of rumors raised by adherents of Don John which accused him of a liaison with the Princess of Eboli, the king's mistress, he lost the king's favor, and was arrested in 1579 and forced, by torture, to confess his part in the deed; but he escaped to Aragon, and thence to France (1591) when it seemed likely that the Inquisition might remove him from Aragon without the trial in public to which he was entitled under Aragonese privilege. His protection by Aragon led to the suppression by Philip of the ancient Aragonese privileges. Pérez eventually reached England, where he was a companion of Francis Bacon and of Robert Devereux, 2nd Earl of Essex. He published Relaciones (Accounts, 1594).

Pérez (pä'res), José Joaquín. b. at Santiago, Chile, 1800; d. 1890. Chilean statesman, president (1861–71) of Chile. He occupied various diplomatic positions, and under Manuel Bulnes was minister of the treasury (1845–49), and of the interior (1849–51). He became president of Chile (Sept. 18, 1861), serving, by reelection in 1866, until Sept. 18, 1871.

Pérez, Mariano Ospina. See Ospina Pérez, Mariano. Perez (per'ez), Michael. Character in Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher's play Rule a Wife and Have a Wife, known as "the Copper Captain."

Pérez (pä'res), Santiago. b. 1830; d. 1900. Colombian politician, president (1874–76) of Colombia. He was minister to the U.S. (1870–72).

Pérez de Ayala (pä'reth dä ä.yä'lä), Ramón. b. at Oviedo, Spain, 1880—. Spanish novelist, short-story writer, poet, critic, and diplomat. His novels and short stories combine realism with keen psychological penetration, pathos, irony, and tenderness, making them the most provocative in modern Spanish literature. Some of his novels are Belarmino y Apolonia, Luna de miel, luna de hiel, Los Trabajos de Urbano y Simona; A. M. D. G., and Tigre Juan. Noteworthy among his short stories are Promele, Luz de domingo, La Caida de los Limones, and El Profesor auxiliar. In La Paz del sendero (1903) and the two other poetical volumes which followed it, Ayala emerges as a symbolist who fuses seemingly contradictory elements into an elusive intellectual creation. He served (1931–36) as ambassador to London.

Pérez de Guzmán (pá'reth dā gō'mhān'), Alonso. See Medina Sidonia, Alonso Pérez de Guzmán, Duke of. Pérez de Guzmán, Fernando (or Fernán). See Guzmán, Fernando (or Fernán) Pérez de. Pérez de Montalván (pá'reth dā mōn.tál.vān'), Juan. See Montalván, Juan Pérez de.

Pérez Galdós (pá'reth gál.dōs'), Benito. b. in the Canary Islands, 1813; d. at Madrid, Jan. 4, 1920. Spanish novelist and dramatist. He wrote 77 novels (totaling 87 volumes) and 22 plays. The Episodios Nacionales, in 46 volumes, present in novel form the most important events of Spanish history of the 19th century. No man had a greater influence in shaping liberal tendencies in Spain. His novels are anticlerical rather than antireligious, and point out the way to enlightenment and progress. The range of his characters includes every phase of the "human comedy" of Spain. Doña Perfecta (1876), Gloria (1877), La Familia de León Roa (1878), Fortunata y Jacinta (1886-87), and Ángel Guerra (1891) are some of his most popular novels. His experiments with the dialogue novel, Realidad (1889), El Abuelo (1904), and Cassandra (1910), led him to writing for the stage. A number of his plays aroused much controversy, in particular Electra (1900), but his dramatic works were less successful than his novels.

Pérez Jiménez (pá'res nē.má'nes), Marcos. b. at Michelina, Táchira, Venezuela, April 25, 1914—. Venezuelan soldier. Commissioned in the army in 1934, he rose to become chief of the general staff. In 1948 he was one of the three members of the military junta that overthrew the government of Rómulo Gallegos; Pérez Jiménez became minister of defense in the new administration, which immediately discharged all the representative bodies of the government. Pérez Jiménez became provisional president in 1952, retaining the defense ministry.

Perfall (pér'fál), Baron Karl von. b. at Munich, Jan. 29, 1824; d. 1907. German composer. His works include operas, cantatas, choral, and solo vocal compositions.

Perfect Fool, The. Opera in one act by Gustav Holst, with a libretto by the composer, first performed at Covent Garden, London, on May 14, 1923.

Perfidious Oldcraft (pér'fid'ius old'kráft), Sir. See Oldcraft, Sir Perfidious.

Perge (pér'gá). [Also, Perge.] In ancient geography, a city in Pamphylia, Asia Minor, long noted for the worship of Artemis. A Roman theater here is one of the finest surviving.

Pergamino (pér.gá.mē'nō). City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, ab. 140 mi. NW of Buenos Aires; shipping point for wheat, cattle, and dairy products. 32,382 (1947).

Pergamos (pér'gá.mōs). [Also, Pergamum.] Name given in the Iliad to the citadel of Troy.

Pergamum (pér'gá.mum). [Also: Pergamus (pér'gá.mus); modern name, Bergama.] In ancient geography, a city in Mysia, Asia Minor, ab. 50 mi. N of Smyrna. The city was raised to importance by the famous victory of Attalus I over the Gauls in the latter half of the 3rd century B.C. To the son of Attalus, Eumenes II, are due the great extension of the city and its architectural adornment, and during his reign occurred the remarkable development of Pergamene sculpture, on lines much more modern in spirit than the older Greek art. The same king founded a famous library here. His chief buildings were placed on a succession of terraces on the summit of the acropolis, which rises 900 ft. above the plain, and on other lower terraces immediately outside of the powerful acropolis walls. The city remained prosperous under the Romans, and under the empire many fine buildings were erected on the acropolis, and beside the river below. In 1878 the Prussian government sent to the site an exploring expedition under Alexander Conze and Karl Humann. Their investigations were continued for several years, and to them are due the rediscovery of Pergamene art and the mass of new information regarding later Greek architecture which together form one of the most remarkable archaeological acquisitions of that century. There are also a Greek theater and a Roman amphitheater, and remains of several temples. An Ionic temple, of the finest Greek design, is on the slope of the acropolis; the cella with its ornamented doorway remains unusually perfect.

The temple of Athena Polias, a Doric peripteros of six by ten columns, of late Greek date, measuring 42½ by 72 ft., occupied a terrace which was surrounded on two or three sides by a handsome stoa of two stories, Doric below and Ionic above, with a balustrade sculptured with warlike trophies in the second story. The temple of Trajan, occupying a large terrace toward the summit of the acropolis, was a Corinthian peripteros of white marble.

Pergamum, Kingdom of. Ancient Greek kingdom in Asia Minor. It rose to prominence under Attalus I in the 3rd century B.C. Attalus III died in 133 B.C., and bequeathed the kingdom to Rome. It was made a Roman province under the name of Asia.

Pergaud (pér.gō), Louis. b. at Belmont, France, 1882; killed in action, 1915. French writer. He was especially known for his poetic animal stories, which include De Goupil à Margot (1910), La Revanche du corbeau (1911), and Le Roman de Miraut, chien de chasse (1914).

Perge (pér'j). See Perge.

Pergine Valsugana (pér'jē.nā vāl.sō.gá.nā). [German, Persen.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Venezia Tridentina, in the province of Trento, situated in the Sugana valley, E of Trent; health resort. It has a Gothic parish church of the 15th century, and a castle. Silver, copper, and lead mines in the vicinity were once important, but are now exhausted. Pergine Valsugana and its surrounding places comprised an enclave of German settlements from the 13th century until recently; they are now, however, Italianized. Pop. of commune, 11,451 (1936); of town, 3,895 (1936).

Pergola (pér.gō.lā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Marche, in the province of Pesaro e Urbino, ab. 15 mi. SE of Urbino. There is a 15th-century castle. Pop. of commune, 11,869 (1936); of town, 2,985 (1936).

Pergolesi (pér.gō.lā'zē) or Pergolese (-zā), Giovanni Battista. b. at Iesi, Italy, Jan. 3, 1710; d. at Pozzuoli, Italy, March 16, 1736. Italian composer. His first opera, La Sallustia (c1731), and two others written in rapid succession, were not successful, and he ceased writing for the stage and composed two masses and 30 trios for violins and bass viol. Shortly after this (apparently within the same year) he produced his very successful operetta La Serva Padrona, which served as the pattern of Italian comic opera until the time of Gioacchino Rossini. He died while finishing his Stabat Mater for two voices, soprano and contralto.

Pergusa (pér.gō'zā), Lake of. See under Enna, city.

Perí (pér'ē'). Principal Indian character of the romantic novel O Guarani (1857), by the Brazilian author José de Alencar.

Peri (pā'rē), Jacopo. [Called Il Zazzerino.] b. in Italy, Aug. 20, 1561; d. at Florence, Aug. 12, 1633. Italian composer, credited with having participated in creating the first true opera, Dafne, performed in 1597 and now lost. This work was the outcome of the Renaissance interest in ancient Greek works. The attempt to recreate the ancient atmosphere in a drama with musical recitation resulted in a drama written by Ottavio Rinuccini to which Peri supplied the music. He wrote also Euridice (1600), the recitatives (1608) to Rinuccini's Andriana, several other operas, and some madrigals.

Perí (pā'rē), La. Ballet by Paul Dukas, first performed at Paris on April 22, 1912.

Periander (pér.i.ān'dér). d. 585 B.C. Tyrant of Corinth (625-585 B.C.). Despite almost universal agreement on his despotism, he appears to have acted for the good of Corinth, establishing colonies to the north, promoting trade, extending Corinthian influence, and developing a program of public works. He is usually counted among the Seven Wise Men of Greece.

Pericles (pér'iklēz). b. probably c495 B.C.; d. of the plague at Athens, 429 B.C. Athenian statesman and orator; son of Xanthippus and a member of the powerful Alcmaeonid family. He entered public life c469, became the leader of the democratic party, and secured the ostracism of Cimon (c459) and later of Thucydides (441). After 444 he was the principal minister of Athens. He aided in the military and naval development of the state, making peace (448) with Persia, seeking an understanding with Sparta, and, that failing, building Athenian defenses for the inevitable struggle. He encouraged art and literature, completed the fortification of Athens and Piræus, and caused the building of the Parthenon, Propylæa, Odeon, and the other public works that have caused his period of ascendancy to be known as the Golden Age of Athens. He instituted many government reforms, all tending to strengthen Athenian democracy. He commanded in the war against Samos (440-439) and in the first part of the Peloponnesian War (431-429).

Pericles, Printe of Tyre. Play by Shakespeare, produced probably c1608, published in 1609, and included in the folio of 1664. It is now generally agreed that Shakespeare did not write the entire play (the failure of John Heminge and Henry Condell to include it in the first folio (1623) is almost conclusive evidence that he did not).

Pericu (pā.rē.kō'). Indian tribe, now extinct, formerly occupying the southern end of Lower California. It belonged to the Waiucian linguistic stock of that region.

Periegetes (per'i.jē.tēz), Dionysius. See Dionysius Periegetes.

Périer (pā.r'yā), Jean Paul Pierre Casimir. See Casimir-Périer, Jean Paul Pierre.

Périgord (pā.rē.gôr). Region and medieval countship of France, which formed part of the government of Guienne. The capital was Périgueux. It was bounded by Angoumois on the N, Quercy and Limousin on the E, Agénaïs on the S, and Saintonge on the W. It was largely included in the department of Dordogne. It appears as a countship, a fief of Aquitaine (in the 10th century), followed mainly the fortunes of Aquitaine, and was united to France under Henry IV (Henry of Navarre).

Périgord, Charles Maurice de Talleyrand. See Talleyrand-Périgord, Charles Maurice de.

Périgueux (pā.rē.gē). [Ancient name, Vesuna or Vesunna.] City in SW France, the capital of the department of Dordogne, between Limoges and Bordeaux. It is a commercial center, with various industries, among which leather and shoe manufactures are outstanding, and is famous for the so-called Périgord pies (of truffes and partridges). The Cathedral of Saint Front, one of the most remarkable Romanesque structures in France, was founded in the 10th century, with the famous facade dating from that time and other parts added during the 12th century. Périgueux has other ancient monuments, such as the Church of Saint-Étienne, the Chateau Berrière from the 10th and 12th centuries (ruined by the Protestants in 1577), and a Roman amphitheater (from the 3rd century). The city was fiercely contested during the religious wars and the war of the Fronde. 40,865 (1946).

Perijá (pā.rē.hā'). Sierra de. See Sierra de Perijá.

Perim (pe.rim'). See under Aden.

Perimedes the Blacksmith (per'i.mē.dēz). Collection of love stories interspersed with poems, by Robert Greene, published in 1588. The stories are mostly from Boccaccio.

Perinthus (pe.rin'thus). [Also, Heraclæa Perinthus.] In ancient geography, a city in Thrace, situated on the Propontis ab. 55 mi. W. of Byzantium. It made a successful defense against Philip II of Macedon in 340 B.C. The modern Eski Ereğli is on its site.

Periön (pā.r'yōn'). Legendary king, the father of Amadis of Gaul in the 13th-century Spanish romance of that name.

Peripatetics (per'i.pa.tēt'iks). Followers of Aristotle (384-322 B.C.). They were so called from his teaching while walking up and down. Theophrastus succeeded Aristotle as leader of the school. Under later teachers, especially during and after the 1st century B.C., the Peripatetics wrote commentaries and expositions of Aristotle; the school became eclectic and eventually turned to Neoplatonism. In the Middle Ages the word was often used to signify "logicians."

Periplus (per'i.plus). Title of various geographical works of antiquity. The oldest extant is by the younger Scylax of Caryanda in Caria, assigned to the time of Alexander the Great. There are also similar works by Nearchus, Agatharchides, Hanno, Timagenes, and others.

Perissa (pe.ris'a'). In Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene, the youngest of three sisters who were always at odds with each other. She is the sister of Elissa and Medina.

Perizzites (per'izits). In Old Testament history, a people of Canaan, living W. of the Jordan in the region between Bethel and Shechem. 2 Chron. viii. 7.

Perjur'd Husband, or the Adventures of Venice, The. Tragedy by Susannah Centlivre, produced and printed in 1700. This was her first play.

Perk (perk), Jacques F. b. 1859; d. 1881. Dutch poet. He broke away from the traditional poetry of his time in the sonnet cycle Een Helle en Hemelvaart (A Course to Hell and Heaven, 1887), later enlarged with other sonnets as Mathilde, a Sonnet Weath (1878-80). He was influenced by Pieter Corneliszoon Hooft and Percy Bysshe Shelley; the latter's The Cloud inspired Perk to write his poem Iris. The posthumous publication of his collected poems by his friend Willem Kloos marked the beginning of the Dutch literary revival called the "Movement of 1880."

Perkasie (pēr'kə.sī). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Bucks County; manufactures of cigars, textiles, and photographic supplies. 4,358 (1950).

Perkin (pēr'kin), Sir William Henry. b. at London, March 12, 1838; d. at Sudbury, England, July 14, 1907. English chemist. He founded the aniline dye industry, utilizing coal-tar derivatives, by his discovery (1856) of mauve, the first synthetic dye. He was knighted in 1906.

Perkins (pēr'kinz), Charles Callahan. b. at Boston, March 1, 1823; d. at Windsor, Vt., Aug. 25, 1886. American writer on art. He studied painting at Rome and Paris, and afterward music and etching. He published Tuscan Sculptors (1864), Italian Sculptors (1868), Raphael and Michelangelo (1878), and others.

Perkins, Frances. b. at Boston, April 10, 1882—. American social worker and public official, U.S. secretary of labor (1933-45), the first woman cabinet member in U.S. history. She attended Mt. Holyoke College (B.A., 1902) and received (1910) the M.A. degree from Columbia. She served (1910-12) as executive secretary of the Consumers' League (New York) and in 1911 was a lecturer in sociology at Adelphi College. She married (Sept. 26, 1913) Paul Caldwell Wilson. She was executive secretary (1912-17) of the Committee on Safety (New York) and was a director of investigations (1912-13) for the New York State Factory Commission. She served (1917-19) as executive director of the New York Council of Organization for War Service and from 1919 to 1921 was head of the New York State Industrial Commission. She was director (1921-23) of the Council on Immigrant Education. A member of the New York State Industrial Board since 1923, she was its chairman from 1926 to 1933, when she became U.S. secretary of labor in Franklin D. Roosevelt's cabinet. Resigning from that post in May, 1945, she was named (October, 1945) a member of the U.S. delegation to the International Labor Organization Conference held at Paris. She became (1946) a member of the U.S. Civil Service Commission. Her writings include Life Hazards from Fire in New York Factories (1912), The Problem of Mercantile Fire Hazards (1914), A Plan for Maternity Care (1918), Women as Employers (1919), People at Work (1934), and The Roosevelt I Knew (1946).

Perkins, George Walbridge. b. at Chicago, Jan. 31, 1862; d. at Stamford, Conn., June 18, 1920. American business organizer. He was a vice-president (1903-05) of the New York Life Insurance Company, a partner (1901-10) in J. P. Morgan and Company, a leading organizer of the International Harvester Corporation, and the planner (c1903) of a working organization for the United States Steel Corporation. He was one of the principal backers of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912.

Perkins, Grace. b. at Boston, 1900—. American writer; wife (married 1925) of Fulton Oursler. Author of Angel Child (1927), Er-Mistress (1930), Boy Crazy (1931), Personal Maid (1931), The Unbreakable Mrs. Doll (1938), Chats with the MacFadden Family, and other books, and coauthor with her husband of the play The Walking Gentleman (1942).

Perkins, Jacob. b. at Newburyport, Mass., July 9, 1766; d. at London, July 30, 1849. American inventor. He invented a steel check plate for printing bank notes that was officially adopted by Massachusetts in 1809. He left (1818) for England, where he took part (1840) in producing the first postage stamps for the British government.

Perkins, James Breck. b. at St. Croix Falls, Wis., Nov. 4, 1847; d. at Washington, D.C., March 11, 1910. American lawyer, legislator, and historian. He was elected (1898) to the New York legislature, and served (1901-10) in Congress. Author of France Under Mazarin With a Review of the Administration of Richelieu (2 vols., 1886), France Under the Regency With a Review of the Administration of Louis XIV (1892), France Under Louis XV (2 vols., 1897), Richelieu and the Growth of French Power (1900), and France in the American Revolution (1911).

Perkins, Maxwell Evarts. b. at New York, Sept. 20, 1854; d. June 17, 1947. American editor. He was a reporter (1907-10) for the New York Times, and then changed to book publishing, becoming an editor for Scribner's in 1914; he served also as a director (1915 et seq.) of the company and as its vice-president (1917-32). Perkins, one of the most painstaking of editors, is usually credited with making readable the long, sprawling novels of Thomas Wolfe, his most noted protégé; other authors whose work passed under his pencil were F. Scott Fitzgerald, John Galsworthy, Ring Lardner, and Ernest Hemingway.

Perkins, Milo Randolph. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 28, 1900— American government administrator. He served as assistant (1935-37) to the U.S. secretary of agriculture, assistant administrator (1937-39) of the Farm Security Administration, associate administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation (1939 et seq.). He was director of marketing (1940 et seq.) of the U.S. department of agriculture, executive director of the Economic Defense Board (Board of Economic Warfare after Pearl Harbor), and a foreign trade consultant (1944 et seq.).

Perkins, Thomas Handasyd. b. at Boston, Dec. 15, 1764; d. there, Jan. 11, 1854. American merchant, legislator, and philanthropist. A member of the Boston mercantile firm of J. and T. H. Perkins, he devoted himself chiefly to the China trade, which brought him large profits. He was active in establishing (1827) the first U.S. railroad at Quincy, Mass. Among the charitable enterprises and public institutions he supported were the New England Asylum for the Blind (to which he deeded his house in 1833 and which was later renamed for him), the Massachusetts General Hospital, and the Boston Athenæum.

Perkonig (pér'kō,nîeh), Josef Friedrich. b. at Ferlach, Carinthia, Austria, Aug. 3, 1890—. Austrian novelist.

Perla (pér'lā), La. Painting of the Holy Family, by Raphael, in the Royal Museum at Madrid. It was so named by Philip IV, who bought it from the collection of Charles I of Great Britain, and exclaimed when he saw it: "This is the pearl [Spanish, perla] of my pictures!"

Perleberg (pér'lē,berk). Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, situated on the Stepenitz River ab. 76 mi. NW of Berlin. Trade center of a fruit and vegetable growing district, it has canneries. 13,701 (1946).

Perle du Brésil (pér'lü brā,zēl), La. [Eng. trans., "The Pearl of Brazil."] Opera in three acts by Félicien David, with a libretto by St. Etienne and Gabriel, produced at Paris on Nov. 22, 1851.

Perley (pér'li), Sir George Halsey. b. at Lebanon, N.H., Sept. 12, 1857; d. at Ottawa, Canada, Jan. 4, 1938. Canadian lumber executive and politician. He was elected (1904, 1908, 1911, 1925, 1926, and 1930) to the Canadian House of Commons, served (1912-16, 1930-35) as minister without portfolio, and was acting premier (1912-13, 1933) of Canada. He was appointed high commissioner for Canada (1917), secretary of state (1926), and a member of the imperial privy council (1931).

Perlone Zipoli (pér'lō'nā tsē'pō,lē). Anagrammatic pseudonym of Lippi, Lorenzo.

Pern (pér'n). Former guberniya (government) in E Russia, situated on both sides of the Ural Mountains, and bordering on Siberia. The area is now in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, divided between the Molotov and the Sverdlovsk oblasts. The city formerly named Pern has been renamed Molotov.

Permanent Court of Arbitration. [Popular name, Hague Tribunal.] Permanent court of arbitration for the settlement of international disagreements, established (1899) by the first Hague Peace Conference. This tribunal was the most concrete achievement of that 26-nation conference. While not possessing any compulsory jurisdiction the court was empowered to render advisory opinions or to render arbitral decisions by common consent. The court consists of a panel of outstanding jurists from which states involved in a dispute may select arbitrators. The court sits at The Hague unless the parties to arbitration specify otherwise.

Permanent Court of International Justice. [Called the World Court.] Judicial body established by the League of Nations whose jurisdiction included treaty interpretation and international law. Participation in the court did not require League membership. Although U.S. Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover advocated U.S. adherence to the World Court, Senate consent was never obtained. The court first convened in 1922 and went out of existence with the League (1945). Its general functions have been assumed by the International Court of Justice of the United Nations.

Permanent Mandates Commission. Commission of ten established by the League of Nations Council on Nov. 29, 1920. It was responsible for the review of annual reports by states holding League mandates and the reception of petitions and grievances from the mandated areas. With a majority of the commission required to be representatives of states holding no mandates, it was limited in its powers by an absence of explicit authority and controls. It did, however, undertake searching examinations of annual reports, though lacking authority for direct inspection and punishment.

Permeke (pér'mē,ke), Constant. b. at Antwerp, Belgium, 1886; d. at Brussels, Jan. 4, 1952. Belgian painter. He worked in Devonshire, England, during World War I, and settled at Ostend and later at Jabbeke, in Flanders. His works include landscapes, interiors, marines, and portraits.

Permeti (pér'mē,tē), Turhan Pasha. d. at Neuilly, France, 1927. Albanian national leader, prime minister (1914) and head of the provisional government (1918-20).

Perrman Period (pér'mān). Last geological period generally recognized in the Paleozoic Era. See table at end of Vol. III.

Perrmians (pér'mi,anz). See Permians.

Permskoye (pér'm.skō'ye). Former name of Komsomolsk.

Permians (pér'mi,aks). [Also, Permians.] Native people of Perm, Russia. They comprise and give their name to one group of the Finno-Ugric peoples, and include the Udmurt and Komi.

Pernambuco (pér.nā.m.bō'kō, -bū'ā; Portuguese, per.nā.m.bō'kō). See also Recife.

Pernambuco. State in E Brazil, bounded on the E by the Atlantic Ocean. Capital, Recife; area, 37,458 sq. mi.; pop. 3,430,630 (1950).

Pernambuco, Count of. A title of Coelho, Duarte de Albuquerque.

Pernau (pér'nou). German and Swedish name of Pärnu.

Perne (pér'n), Andrew. b. at East Bilney, Norfolk, England, 1519; d. April 26, 1559. English ecclesiastical and scholar, a Roman Catholic under Henry VIII, a Protestant under Edward VI, a Roman Catholic again under Mary, and finally a Protestant under Elizabeth.

Pernelle (pér,nel), Madame. Mother of Orgon in Molière's Tartuffe.

Pernik (pér'nik). Town in SW Bulgaria, in the department of Sofia, situated near the Greek border on the Struma (Strymon) River and the railroad between Sofia and Kyustendil, ab. 15 mi. SW of Sofia; coal mines. 28,504 (1946).

Pérochon (pā.rō.shōn), Ernest. b. Feb. 24, 1885—. French poet and novelist. Author of Flûtes et bourdons (1909), Le Chemin de la plaine (1920), Contes de cent et un matins (1930), and others.

Perolla and Izadora (pér.rol'ā; iz.a.dō'rā). Tragedy by Colley Cibber, produced in 1705.

Perón (pā.rōn'), Eva Duarte de. b. at Los Toldos, Argentina, May 7, 1919; d. July 26, 1952. Argentine political personage. She abandoned high-school studies to seek a career in motion pictures, and within a decade was one of the most popular and one of the best-paid stars of the pictures and of the radio in Argentina. She is supposed to have met Juan Domingo Perón first in 1943, and in the following year she assisted him in organizing Argentine radio workers in an industry-wide union. In 1945 they were married, first by secret civil ceremony, and later in the Catholic Church. In the campaign leading to Perón's election to the Argentine presidency in February, 1946, Señora Perón, in a marked departure from the customary abstention of Argentine women from politics, campaigned actively and effectively for him. In 1952 she organized women to demand that her husband run for reelection. During his first term she wielded great political influence. Making much use of the radio, she was the self-proclaimed friend of los descamisados ("the shirtless"), and from offices in the ministry of labor and social welfare she distributed relief to the poor, in food, medicine, and money. She is considered responsible for the introduction of compulsory religious education throughout Argentina. In 1947 she visited Europe and was decorated by the Pope, by the president of France, and by Francisco Franco. La Pampa territory was renamed (1952) in her honor, as was the city of Quilmes.

Perón, Juan Domingo. b. at Lobos, Argentina, Oct. 8, 1895—. Argentine politician and army officer. His election (Feb. 24, 1946) as president of Argentina was a crushing electoral defeat for the "Democratic Union" (a coalition of the moderately reformist radicals with other opposition groups) and a blunt repudiation of the anti-Peronist efforts of U.S. Ambassador Spruille Braden. Originally a career officer in the army, Perón emerged as a political force in June, 1943, as an important, if little-publicized figure, in the "GOU," the clique of army officers which deposed President Ramón Castillo. Perón's administration as president has been marked by extreme nationalism, the tightening of government controls over various aspects of Argentine life, and a curious merging of certain labor and industrial interests under Perón's personal leadership. In 1951 Chaco territory was named Presidente Perón Province in his honor.

Peronista (pā.rō.nēs'tā), Partido. Argentine political party supporting President Juan Domingo Perón.

Péronne (pā.rōn). [Ancient name, Petronia.] Town in N France, in the department of Somme, on the Somme River ab. 30 mi. E of Amiens. It is an old fortress variously besieged since its foundation. It was shelled by the Germans in 1870 and virtually destroyed by them in World War I. It was again heavily damaged in World War II. 4,012 (1946).

Péronne, Treaty of. Conference in 1468 between Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, and Louis XI of France (who had gone to Péronne with a small escort and was imprisoned by the duke). Louis made important concessions.

Perón Province (pā.rōn'), Eva. See La Pampa, Argentina.

Perón Province, Presidente. See Chaco, Argentina.

Perosi (pā.rō'sē), Domenico Lorenzo. b. at Tortona, Italy, Dec. 20, 1872—. Italian priest and composer. From 1897 to 1903 he was musical director at Saint Mark's, Venice, and was then taken to Saint Peter's by Pope Pius X. His most important works are The Passion of Christ, The Transfiguration, The Resurrection of Lazarus, and The Birth of the Redeemer.

Perote (pā.rō'tā). Village in SE Mexico, in Veracruz state, ab. 18 mi. W of Jalapa. Near it was a fort of the same name, commanding the road up the mountains. It was commenced in 1770, and was long one of the strongest forts in Mexico. Pop. ab. 4,000 (1940).

Perote, Cofre de. [Nahuatl, Nauhcampatepetl.] Volcanic mountain in SE Mexico, NW of Veracruz. Elevation, ab. 14,048 ft.

Pérouse (pā.rōz), Jean François de Galaup, Comte de La. See La Pérouse, Jean François de Galaup, Comte de.

Pérouse Strait, La. See La Pérouse Strait.

Pérov (pī.rō'vō). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Moscow oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, an eastern industrial and residential suburb of Moscow. It has a considerable industry, including machine construction and tools. 77,727 (1939).

Perowne (pē.rōn'), John James Stewart. b. at Burdwan, in Bengal, India, March 13, 1823; d. Nov. 6, 1904. English divine, bishop of Worcester (1891-1901). He published various theological and exegetical works.

Perpenna (pēr.pēr'nā) or Perpenna (pēr'nā). Put to death by Pompey c72 B.C. Roman general in Spain, lieutenant of Sertorius, whom he put to death.

Perpetua (pēr.pēt'ūā), Saint. Killed at Carthage in 203. Christian martyr, thrown to the beasts, together with Felicitas and three slaves.

Perpetual Peace. Name given to the treaty concluded at Fribourg between France and the Swiss Confederation in 1516.

Perpignan (pēr.pē.nyāñ). City in S France, the capital of the department of Pyrénées-Orientales, situated on the Têt River near the Mediterranean Sea and N of the Spanish (Catalan) border. It is a trade center for agricultural products (wine, olive oil, fruits, wool, and others), has important apéritif distilleries and paperware, silk, woolen, chocolate, and leather goods manufactures. Architecturally it has a Spanish character. The Cathedral of Saint-Jean was built from 1324 to 1509. The city has a museum, library, and an ancient citadel. From 1172 to 1462, it belonged to the kingdoms of Aragon and Majorca successively. The city and surrounding territory were contested between France and Spain, until France took definite possession in 1660. Pop. 74,984 (1946).

Perplexed Husband, The. Comedy acted (1913) by Alfred Sutro.

Perplexed Lovers, The. Comedy by Susannah Centlivre, produced and printed in 1712.

Perraud (pē.rō), Adolphe Louis Albert. b. at Lyons, France, Feb. 7, 1828; d. Feb. 11, 1906. French prelate and ecclesiastical writer, bishop of Autun, Châlons, and Mâcon. He was created cardinal by Pope Leo XIII in 1893.

Perrault (pē.rō), Charles. b. at Paris, Jan. 12, 1628; d. there, May 16, 1703. French writer; brother of Claude Perrault. According to his own testimony, he left the college at Beauvais in consequence of a misunderstanding with one of his professors, but spent the next three or four years in study, especially of the classics. Two odes in eulogy of Louis XIV brought him into favor at court, so that no opposition was raised to his admission to the French Academy, Sept. 22, 1671. His poem Le Siècle de Louis le Grand, read before this body on Jan. 27, 1687, expressed incidentally some ideas that were disparaging to the old classics. Between Boileau and Perrault arose then the great literary quarrel concerning the respective merits of the ancients and the moderns, which lasted over a dozen years, and did much to bring Perrault's name into prominence. In the course of their dispute Perrault started in 1688 the publication of his Parallèle des anciens et des modernes. He also wrote the two works upon which his literary fame rests, Les Hommes illustres qui ont paru en France pendant ce siècle (1696-1701), and Les Contes de ma mère l'Oye (1697). These "tales of my mother, the goose" are also known simply as Les Contes de Perrault. They include 18 fairy tales including "Cinderella," "Sleeping Beauty," "Bluebeard," "Little Red Riding-Hood," and "Puss in Boots." These stories were folk material long before Perrault's day, but to him belongs the credit of first giving them in their French form a simple and lasting expression. The remainder of Perrault's writings have not added materially to his literary reputation, and he himself died in relative obscurity.

Perrault, Claude. b. 1613; d. 1688. French architect; brother of Charles Perrault. He designed the colonnade of the Louvre.

Perrégaux (pēr.rē.gō). Town in Oran department, Algeria, in NW Africa, ab. 24 mi. SW of Mostaganem. A modern town (founded in 1858), it is the distributing center for a rich and important agricultural region producing oranges, olives, and cereals. It is also an important railway junction on the main line from Algiers to Oran and on the line to Colomb-Béchar and the south. 11,098 (1948).

Perrenot (pēr.nō), Antoine. See Granvella, Cardinal de.

Perrers (pēr'ēr), Alice. [Also, de Windsor.] d. 1400. Mistress of Edward III, notorious for her influence on English affairs. She was one of the ladies in waiting of Queen Philippa and, because of her liaison with the king, wielded great influence in the law courts in her friends' favor. She was opposed by Edward the Black Prince and was banished in 1376; the death of the Black Prince brought her back and despite another banishment (1377) she retained influence at court under Richard II.

Perret (per'et), Frank Alvord. b. at Hartford, Conn., Aug. 2, 1867; d. at New York, Jan. 12, 1943. American volcanologist, founder (1933) of the Volcanological Museum, St.-Pierre, Martinique, where he studied (1929-39) Mont Pelée.

Perreux-sur-Marne (pe.ré.sür.märn), Le. See Le Perreux-sur-Marne.

Perreias (pe.ré.kiás). Pseudonym of Toulet, Jean.

Perrier (pe.rvā), Edmond. [Full name, Jean Octave Edmond Perrier.] b. 1844; d. Aug. 1, 1921. French zoologist. He was professor of zoology (1876 et seq.) at the Museum of Natural History, at Paris, later becoming its director. Among his works are Les Colonies animales et la formation des organismes (1881), La Philosophie zoologique avant Darwin (1884), Éléments de zoologie (1886), La Vie des animaux illustrée (1903-06), and La Femme dans la nature et l'évolution du sexe féminin (1908).

Perrin (pe.rā), Claude Victor. Original name of Victor or Victor-Perrin, Claude.

Perrin, Jean Baptiste. b. at Lille, France, Sept. 30, 1870; d. at New York, April 17, 1942. French physicist and chemist, awarded (1926) the Nobel prize in physics for his work on the discontinuous structure of matter and the discovery of the equilibrium of sedimentation. He was professor of physical chemistry (1910 et seq.) at Paris. He made notable investigations in light, electricity, and molecular physics, particularly the Brownian movement; he also made studies of x-rays, cathod rays, and electrons. Author of Traité de chimie physique (1903), Les Atomes (1913), and Les Éléments de la physique (1930).

Perrin Dandin (dān.dān). See Dandin, Perrin (from the works of Racine and La Fontaine).

Perrin Dendin (dān.dān). See Dendin, Perrin (from the works of Khabalais).

Perrine (pe.rin'). Town in S Florida, ab. 13 mi. SW of Miami; resort community. 2,859 (1950).

Perrine, Charles Dillon. b. at Steubenville, Ohio, July 28, 1867—. American astronomer, director of the Argentine National Observatory (1909-36). He was assistant astronomer and astronomer at the Lick Observatory (1895-1909). He discovered (1905) Jupiter's sixth and seventh satellites, and is credited with the discovery of several comets. His investigation of the 1901 nova in Perseus showed that there was motion in the nebula surrounding it.

Perron (pe.rōn), Madame de. Special agent of Catherine de Médicis in superintending the works by Philibert de l'Orme at the Tuilleries. Catherine herself is said to have made drawings for the work.

Perron (pe.rōn), Eduard du. b. in Java, 1899; d. 1940. Dutch author. In his autobiography, Het Land van Herkoms (Land of Origin, 1935), he drew a parallel between Javanese and Dutch life. He published essays in Voor kleine Parochie (For a Small Parish, 1931), Bloemle klein formaat (Small Tablet, 1936), and De smalle mens (Narrow-minded Man, 1934); poetry in Parlando (1937). Later focusing his interests on the problem of Dutch-Indonesian relations, he did studies on Multatuli (Eduard Douwes Dekker).

Perros-Guirec (pe.ros.gwē.rek). Town in NW France, in the department of Côtes-du-Nord, situated on a rocky peninsula on the English Channel, N of Lannion. It is a fishing port, a coastal trading station, and an important seaside resort. Its Romanesque church dates from the 12th century. 5,812 (1946).

Perrot (pe.rō), Georges. b. at Villeneuve-St.-Georges, Seine-et-Oise, France, Nov. 12, 1832; d. 1914. French archaeologist, director (1883-1904) of the École Normale at Paris. He made researches in Asia Minor.

Perrot (pe.rō'), Ile. [Also, Ile Perrot.] Small island in the St. Lawrence River, in Quebec, Canada, at the mouth of the Ottawa River. It is a few miles upstream from Montreal, and is connected with it and with the mainland by bridges.

Perry (per'i). Town in N Florida, county seat of Taylor County, W of Jacksonville; sawmills. 2,797 (1950).

Perry. City in C Georgia, county seat of Houston County. It is a local trade center in a predominantly agricultural area, although there is some quarrying. 3,849 (1950).

Perry. City in C Iowa, in Dallas County, in an agricultural area; railroad shops. It was platted in 1887. Pop. 6,174 (1950).

Perry. Village in W New York, in Wyoming County; manufactures of knitted goods, septic tanks, and gasoline tanks. 4,533 (1950).

Perry. City in N Oklahoma, county seat of Noble County, in an agricultural area. It was established in 1893. Pop. 5,137 (1950).

Perry, Benjamin Franklin. b. in Pendleton district, S.C., Nov. 20, 1805; d. Dec. 3, 1886. American politician. During the nullification controversy he took a Unionist position and in 1832 began editing the Greenville (S.C.) Mountaineer, a Unionist organ. He voted against the nullification ordinance in the South Carolina convention of 1832 and supported compromise at the second session of 1833, when the ordinance was repealed. During the period from 1836 to 1862 he served in the state legislature on many occasions. In 1850 he helped found the Southern Patriot, the sole Union paper in South Carolina, and became its editor. During the agitation of the 1850's he was opposed to secession, but fell into the secessionist ranks when his state voted to break away from the Union. He became (1862) a Confederate commissioner, and was made district attorney in 1863 and district judge in 1864. In 1865 he was appointed provisional governor of South Carolina by President Johnson. He was later elected a U.S. senator, but the Senate refused to seat him.

Perry, Bliss. b. at Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 25, 1860—. American editor, author, and critic. He was professor of English in Williams College (1886-93) and in Princeton University (1893-1900), and in 1906 was appointed professor of English literature at Harvard University. He held this post until 1930. He edited (1899-1909) the Atlantic Monthly. Among his works are The Broughton House (1890), Salem Kiltrede, and Other Stories (1894), The Plated City (1895), The Powers at Play (1899), a chapter on poetry in Counsel upon the Reading of Books (1900), A Study of Prose Fiction (1902), The Amateur Spirit (1904), Wall Whitman (1906), Park Street Papers (1908), The American Mind (1912), The American Spirit in Literature (1918), and the autobiographical And Gladly Teach (1935). He edited the selection The Heart of Emerson's Journals (1926).

Perry, Fred. [Full name, Frederick John Perry.] b. at Stockport, England, 1909—. English tennis player. He was winner of the men's singles championship at Wimbledon in 1934, 1935, and 1936, holder of the U.S. men's singles championship in 1933, 1934, and 1936, and led the British Davis Cup team to victory in 1933, 1934, 1935, and 1936. After turning professional, he held the men's professional singles championship from 1938 to 1941. He was injured in 1941 and retired from active play.

Perry, James De Wolf. b. at Germantown, Pa., Oct. 3, 1871; d. at Summerville, S.C., March 20, 1947. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman who was presiding bishop (1930-37) of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America.

Perry, Matthew Calbraith. b. at Newport, R.I., April 10, 1794; d. at New York, March 4, 1858. American naval officer; brother of Oliver Hazard Perry. He served in the War of 1812 and the Mexican War, and commanded the expedition to Japan (1852-54), during which he concluded the treaty opening Japan to American commerce. He became commodore in 1841.

Perry, Oliver Hazard. b. at Rocky Brook, South Kingstown, R.I., Aug. 20, 1785; d. on the Orinoco River, Venezuela, Aug. 23, 1819. American naval officer, hero of the battle of Lake Erie (1813); brother of Matthew Calbraith Perry. He was appointed midshipman in 1799 and, serving aboard his father's ship, the General Greene, he was on duty in the West Indies during the naval war with France and saw service in the Mediterranean during the war with Tripoli. He became a lieutenant in 1807 and in 1809 took command of the schooner Revenge. He became (August, 1812) master commandant and in the spring of 1813, after volunteering his services for duty on the Great Lakes, began constructing and organizing a fleet which later became the U.S. naval forces on Lake Erie, comprising ten vessels. The fleet's largest craft were the Niagara and the Lavinece, the latter becoming Perry's flagship after he was joined by the naval forces under Master Commandant Jesse Duncan Elliott. The fleet sailed up Lake Erie on Aug. 12, 1813, and took a station at Put In Bay. When the British attempted to seize control of the lake, Perry led his fleet out to give battle (Sept. 10, 1813). Perry was compelled to leave the Lavinece after it had been smashed to pieces, but he made the Niagara his flagship and continued the battle, which lasted for more than three hours. The surrender of the British fleet on Lake Erie gave the Americans the control of that body of water and affected the outcome of the war. The phrase "We have met the enemy and they are ours" appeared in one of Perry's dispatches announcing his victory. In recognition of his naval feat, Perry was promoted to the rank of captain by President Madison. He received the thanks of Congress and the acclamation of state and city governments. After his victory on Lake Erie, Perry helped General William Henry Harrison seize Detroit and took part in the Battle of the Thames, during which he acted as aide-de-camp to the commander in chief. He was assigned (May, 1819) to the command of a small fleet which he led on a mission to the republics of Venezuela and Buenos Aires. He was taken ill with yellow fever while descending the Orinoco River after concluding negotiations at the Venezuelan capital, and was buried at Port of Spain, Trinidad. In 1826 his remains were reinterred at Newport, R.I.

Perry, Ralph Barton. b. at Poulney, Vt., July 3, 1876—. American philosopher and university professor. He was professor (1913-46) of philosophy at Harvard. Author of The Approach to Philosophy (1905), The Moral Economy (1906), The New Realism (1912), The Present Conflict of Ideals (1918), Annotated Bibliography of the Writings of William James (1920), General Theory of Value (1926), Shall We Perish from the Earth? (1940), On All Fronts (1941), Our Side Is Right (1942), Puritanism and Democracy (1944), Our World in the Making (1945), and other books. He was awarded the 1936 Pulitzer prize in biography for The Thought and Character of William James (1935).

Perry, Roland Hinton. b. at New York, Jan. 25, 1870; d. there, Oct. 27, 1941. American portrait painter and sculptor, whose works include war monuments and architectural decorations. Among his commissions were the Fountain of Neptune for the Library of Congress, a frieze for the New Amsterdam Theater at New York, lions for the Connecticut Avenue bridge at Washington, D.C.; war monuments at Gettysburg, Andersonville, and Chattanooga; and the statue Pennsylvania for the State Capitol at Harrisburg.

Perrygo Place (pér'igō). Unincorporated community in S Wisconsin, in Rock County; agricultural trading center. 3,315 (1950).

Perrysburg (pér'iz.bérg). Village in NW Ohio, in Wood County, on the Maumee River. It was settled in 1816 and named for Oliver Hazard Perry. 4,006 (1950).

Perryton (pér'itn). City in NW Texas, close to the Oklahoma boundary, county seat of Ochiltree County; trading and shipping center for a considerable wheat-growing area. 4,417 (1950).

Perryville (pér'ivil). City in SE Missouri, county seat of Perry County. 4,591 (1950).

Persae (pér'sē). Eng. trans. "The Persians." Tragedy of Aeschylus, exhibited in 472 B.C. It celebrates the victory of the Greeks over the Persians at Salamis, of which the poet was an eyewitness.

Persano (pér.sā'nō). Count Carlo Pellione di. b. at Verelli, Italy, March 11, 1806; d. July 28, 1883. Italian admiral. He lost the battle of Lissa (now Vis) to the Austrians in 1866, and was deprived of his rank in 1867.

Persant of India (pér'sant; in.dī'a). [Also, Phosphorus.] In Arthurian legend and romance, the wonderful knight clad and armed in blue whom Gareth fought against for two hours and overcame. Persant so admired Gareth's prowess that he entertained and rested Gareth and his lady at his pavilion after the battle. He later came to Arthur's court with 100 knights at the feast of Pentecost and swore fealty to Arthur. He is also called Phosphorus; Tennyson, in Gareth and Lynette, calls him Morning Star.

Persarmenia (pér.sār.mē'nī.a). In ancient geography, the E portion of Armenia, annexed by Persia c384 A.D.

Perse (pers), St-John. [Pseudonym of Alexis Saint-Léger Léger.] b. on an island near Guadaloupe, 1887—. French poet and diplomat. Author of Eloges (1910; Eng. trans., Eloges and Other Poems, 1944), Anabase (1924; Eng. trans., Anabasis, 1930, by T. S. Eliot), Amitié du prince (1924), and Exil (1942). He has avoided poetic schools, but critics place him among the more successful followers of Arthur Rimbaud. He entered the French foreign service in 1914, was stationed at Peiping (1917-21), served as expert on Asia at the Washington Conference (1921-22), and was in the foreign office under Aristide Briand for ten years, becoming general secretary of the ministry of foreign affairs in 1933. He escaped to America after the fall of France during World War II.

Persecutions, Ten. In ecclesiastical history, the persecutions of Christians under the Roman emperors Nero, Domitian, Trajan, Marcus Aurelius, Septimius Severus, Maximin, Decius, Valerian, Aurelian, and Diocletian. Those under Decius and Diocletian were general throughout the Roman Empire.

Persene (pér'sen). German name of Pergine Valsugana.

Persephone (pér.sē'fō.nē). [Roman, Proserpine.] In Greek mythology, the daughter of Zeus and Demeter. She was abducted by Hades and taken to the underworld, where she became his consort. The grieving Demeter sought her daughter everywhere. During this time no vegetation grew upon the earth, and at last the gods consented to let Persephone return to the world. It was discovered, however, that she had eaten one pomegranate seed in the land of the dead, and for this reason she was obliged to remain in the underworld for one third of the year, but could spend the other eight months on earth. This is one of the familiar symbolic vegetation myths of ancient Greece. Demeter and Persephone were interpreted as two aspects of the grain goddess, Persephone representing the new young grain, Demeter the ripened harvest. Persephone is also associated with the mother goddess, Aphrodite, in the fertility myth regarding the vegetation god, Adonis. Adonis dwelt with Persephone under the earth for one third of the year, and spent the other eight months with Aphrodite in the world. Persephone's cult name was Kore, the maiden, and in this aspect she figured in the Eleusinian mysteries. The Romans called her Proserpine and made little or no change in the myth or its interpretation.

Persepolis (pér.sēp'ō.lis). In ancient geography, one of the capitals of the Persian Empire, ab. 35 mi. NE of what is now Shiraz. It became the capital under Darius I, was captured and burned by Alexander the Great c330 B.C., and is still noted for the ruins of its palaces. The most remarkable monuments are grouped on a terrace of smoothed rock and masonry, approximately rectangular in plan, though with irregular projections, measuring 940 by 1,550 ft., and attaining in front the height of 43 ft., of fine polygonal masonry, while at the back it is dominated by the rock of the foot-hills behind. The chief buildings on the terrace were the Propylaea and the great hypostyle hall of Xerxes, the Hall of 100 Columns, attributed to Darius, and the residence palaces of Darius and his successors. In the palace of Darius carved reliefs of men fighting animals occur, based on Assyrian originals; in that of Xerxes the sculptures represent subjects pertaining to royal luxury. Great figures of bulls, often set up before the portals, recall the Assyrian practice. The chief explorations are due to Eugène-Napoléon Plandin and P. Coste in 1840-41, and to F. Stolze and Andreas prior to 1882. In 1891 some excavations were made by Herbert Weld Blundell, and casts of the sculptures and inscriptions taken by a private expedition sent out from England. The site was carefully investigated (1931-34) by a University of Chicago expedition under Ernst Herzfeld.

Perseus (pér'sūs, -sē.us). d. in the middle of the 2nd century B.C. Last king of Macedonia, son of Philip V, whom he succeeded in 179 B.C. He began war with Rome in 172, was defeated at Pydna by Aemilius Paulus in 168, and was dethroned and taken captive to Rome in 167 B.C.

Perseus. In Greek mythology, the son of Danaë by Zeus as the shower of gold. Forewarned that his daughter's son would kill him, Acrisius (king of Argos and the father of Danaë) set both mother and child adrift on the sea in a chest. The chest came ashore on the island of Sesiophus, where they were cared for. The king of Sesiophus sent Perseus when he was grown to kill the Gorgon Medusa. This Perseus did with the help of the gods, who gave him a magic sword, winged sandals, a cap of invisibility, and a shield which served as a mirror. On his way home he rescued and married Andromeda, and on arriving at Sesiophus, turned its king into stone with the Gorgon's head for mistreating Danaë. The fatal prophecy was fulfilled later when Perseus journeyed to Argos to see his grandfather Acrisius, took part in some games, and accidentally struck and killed him with a discus-throw.

Perseus. Ancient northern constellation, representing Perseus holding the head of the Gorgon Medusa in one hand and a sword in the other.

Perseus and Medusa (mē.dū'sh-, -zā). Statue (1553) by Benvenuto Cellini, in the Loggia dei Lanzi, Florence. The helmeted hero, holding his falchion, stands over the bleeding body of Medusa and uplifts her severed head.

Pershing (pēr'shing), John Joseph. [Called "Black Jack"] Pershing, b. in Linn County, Mo., Sept. 13, 1860; d. at Washington, D.C., July 15, 1948. American soldier, commander in chief (1917-19) of the American Expeditionary Forces during World War I and U.S. Army chief of staff (1921-24). A graduate (1886) of the U.S. Military Academy, he served (1886, 1890-91) in Indian campaigns and on frontier duty until 1898. He served in the Santiago campaign in Cuba (1898) and in various posts in the Philippines (1899-1903). He was U.S. military attaché at Tokyo (1905-06) and with Kuroki's army in Manchuria (1905). Commander of the Department of Mindanao and governor of Moro province, he defeated the Moros at the battle of Bagsak (1913). He commanded U.S. troops in Mexico on the punitive expedition against Francisco (Pancho) Villa (1916). He was appointed major general (1916) and general (1917); in 1919 he became general of the armies. He was awarded the 1932 Pulitzer prize in history for My Experiences in the World War (1931).

Pershore (pēr'shōr). Rural district and market town in W. England, in Worcestershire, on the river Avon ab. 9 mi. SE of Worcester, ab. 113 mi. NW of London by rail. It is celebrated for its abbey church. 16,355 (1951).

Persia (pēr'zhā-, -shā). See Iran.

Persian (pēr'zhān-, -shān). See under Iranian.

Persian Empire. Any one of several ancient empires under the rule of peoples inhabiting the area of what is now Iran. Strictly speaking, there was no single "Persian Empire," but rather several different empires at different times. For the history of these domains, see under Iran.

Persian Fighting, A. Ancient marble statuette in the Vatican Museum, Rome, one of the notable series of Pergamene copies from the four groups of sculpture presented to Athens c200 B.C. by Attalus I of Pergamum.

Persian Gulf. [Latin, Sinus Persicus.] Arm of the Arabian Sea, W of Iran and E of Arabia. It is almost completely surrounded by bodies of land, communicating with the Gulf of Oman (and the Indian Ocean) only by the Strait of Ormuz. The delta area of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers is at its N extremity. Some of the largest oil-shipping areas in the world are situated on its shores or on islands contained within it (notably, Abadan, Bahrain, and Kuwait). During World War II, the Persian Gulf was of major strategic importance as a supply route from the U.S. to the U.S.S.R. Length, ab. 590 mi.; average depth, ab. 240 ft.

Persiani (pēr.sē.ā'nē), Madame Fanny. [Maiden name, Tachinardi.] b. at Rome, Oct. 4, 1812; d. at Passy, France, May 3, 1867. Italian soprano opera singer.

Persians (pēr'zhān-, -shānz). Native inhabitants of ancient Persia (modern Iran). Their name is derived from the district which in antiquity was known as Persis, the modern Fars. They were originally nomadic immigrants who entered the region through Caucasia, mingling with and dominating the people already there. They were well established in the Persis region by the 6th century B.C., and under Cyrus and his successors continued to build a great empire. The term Persian is still often applied to any native of Iran, whether a speaker of an Iranian, Turkic, Semitic, or other language.

"Persian Sage." Epithet of Aphraates, Jacob.

Persian Wars. In ancient Greek history, the wars between the Persians and the Greeks commencing in 500 and ending c449 B.C. The wars began with a revolt of the Ionian Greeks against Persia in 500. The Ionians were subjugated in 494. The assistance rendered them by Athens and Eretria provoked the Persians to attempt the conquest of European Greece. With this object in view, three grand expeditions were undertaken, each of which was repelled. The first expedition was undertaken in 492 under Mardonius, who returned after having lost part of his army in an attack by the Thracians, and after having suffered the loss of his fleet in a storm. The second expedition was undertaken in 490 under Artaphernes (the young nephew of Darius), assisted by the experienced general Datis. It was abandoned after the defeat of the army at the battle of Marathon, Sept. 12, 490. The third expedition was undertaken in 481-480 under Xerxes. It is said to have consisted of an army of 900,000 men, exclusive of European allies, and a fleet of 1,200 warships, besides 3,000 transport vessels. The army forced the pass of Thermopylae, after a heroic defense by the Greeks under the Spartan Leonidas, and destroyed Athens in 480. In the same year the fleet fought the indecisive battle at Artemisium and was defeated at Salamis, which compelled the retreat of Xerxes, who left Mardonius to prosecute the war. Mardonius fell at the battle of Plataea in 479, and his army was completely routed by Pausanias. On the same day, according to some, the Persian fleet under Mardonius was defeated at the battle of Mycale. Hitherto the Greeks had acted on the defensive; they now assumed the offensive, gaining the victories of the Eurymedon in 466 or 465 and of Salamis in Cyprus in 449. After the battle of Salamis negotiations for peace were opened, and, although no formal treaty was adopted, peaceable intercourse was gradually restored on the basis of existing political relations; this is known as the Peace of Callias, named for the Athenian ambassador to Artaxerxes who negotiated it. By some the name Persian Wars is restricted to the period between 500 and 479 inclusive, during which the Greeks acted on the defensive.

Persis (pēr'sis). In ancient geography, a country in Asia, lying SE of Susiana, S of Media, and W of Carmania. It was the nucleus of the Persian Empire, and corresponded nearly to the modern Fars.

Persius (pēr'shius-, -shus). [Full name, Aulus Persius Flaccus.] b. at Volaterrae, in Etruria, 34 A.D.; d. 62 A.D. Roman satirist. His six satires, written in hexameters, are actually homilies advocating the Stoic doctrine; their style is involved and moral.

Personae (pēr.sō'nē). Collection of poems by Ezra Pound, published in 1926. It reprints two earlier volumes, both originally published in 1909.

Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc (jōn, jō.an'; ārk). See Joan of Arc, Personal Recollections of.

Personier de Roberval (pēr.sō.nyā dē rō.bēr.vāl), Gilles. See Roberval, Gilles Personne (or Personier) de.

Persons (pār'sonz), Robert. See Parsons or Persons, Robert.

Persuasion. Novel by Jane Austen, published in 1818, after the death of the author.

Pertabgurih (pēr.tāb.gūr). See Pratapgarh.

Pertab Singh (pēr'tāb sing'), Sir. b. 1845; d. Sept. 4, 1922. Indian soldier and statesman, regent of Jodhpur for many years and a major general (1914-15) in the British army. He was commanding officer (1900) of the Jodhpur imperial service troops in China, and ruling chief (1902) of Idar state, Gujarat, abdicating (1911) in favor of his son.

Perte de la Valserine (pēr dē là vāl.sēr.rēn). See under Bellegarde-sur-Valserine.

Perte du Rhône (pēr dū rōn). See under Bellegarde-sur-Valserine.

Perth (pērth). See also Perthshire.

Perth. City in SW Australia, the capital of Western Australia state, on the Swan River near its mouth and ab. 12 mi. from the town of Fremantle, which serves as its port. Pop. including suburbs, 309,000 (est. 1950).

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d or j; ʔ, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Perth. Town in SE Ontario, Canada, county seat of Lanark County, ab. 58 mi. SW of Ottawa: trade center in a lake resort district. 5,034 (1951).

Perth. [Former name, St. John's Town or St. Johnstown.] City, royal burgh, and river port in C Scotland, county seat of Perthshire, situated at the mouth of the river Tay, at the head of the Firth of Tay, ab. 18 mi. W of Dundee, ab. 441 mi. N of London by rail. Its industries include the manufacture of gauge-glasses, inks and dyes, and others. Perth began its association with the linen trade about the middle of the 18th century. After Scone it was the capital of the country until 1482. James I was murdered there in 1437. Scone Palace is in the neighborhood. The city was taken by Robert Bruce in 1311, by James Graham, 1st Marquis of Montrose, in 1644, by Oliver Cromwell in 1651, by John Graham of Claverhouse in 1689, and by the Jacobites in 1715 and 1745. It has associations with Sir Walter Scott's Fair Maid of Perth. 40,466 (1951).

Perth, Dukes and Earls of. See under Drummond.

Perth, Convention of. Assembly summoned by Edward I at Perth, Scotland, in 1305, to send Scottish representatives to the English Parliament.

Perth Amboy (perth'am'boy). City in NE New Jersey, in Middlesex County, at the entrance of the Raritan River into Raritan Bay, ab. 20 mi. SW of New York: copper refining and manufactures of clay products, munitions, cables, asphalt, cigars, and haberdashery. 41,330 (1950).

Pertharite (per.tá.rít). Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1651. Its failure caused him to quit the stage for a long period.

Perthes (per'tes), Bernard. b. 1857; d. 1919. German publisher; son of Bernard Wilhelm Perthes. He was head of the family firm from the time he came of age until his death.

Perthes, Bernard Wilhelm. b. 1821; d. 1857. German publisher; son of Wilhelm Perthes. Head of the family firm for only four years (he died four years after his father), he left the firm in the hands of his associates, August Petermann and Bruno Hassenstein. It was these latter two who were responsible for publication by the Perthes firm of the Almanach de Gotha, a statistical and genealogical yearbook first published (1863) in French, and the Geographisches Jahrbuch, first published in 1866 under the editorship of Ernst Behm.

Perthes, Friedrich Andreas. b. 1813; d. 1890. German publisher; son of Friedrich Christoph Perthes. He established at Stuttgart the publishing firm of Friedrich Andreas Perthes.

Perthes, Friedrich Christoph. b. at Rudolstadt, Germany, April 21, 1772; d. at Gotha, Germany, May 18, 1843. German bookseller and publisher; nephew of Johann Georg Justus Perthes. In 1796 he established himself at Hamburg as a book jobber, thus initiating a new branch of the German book trade, which hitherto had known no division of labor between producer and distributor. The success of his venture made Hamburg the center of the North German book business. In 1810 he published the short-lived Vaterländisches Museum, which brought upon him the wrath of the French authorities. He went into exile and upon his return (1814) found his business ruined. After its reorganization he turned his attention to plans for a bookdealers' institute on a national basis. In 1822 he removed to Gotha, where he organized a publishing firm specializing in the production of theological and historiographic works.

Perthes, Georg Clemens. b. at Mörs, in the Rhineland, Germany, Jan. 17, 1869; d. at Arosa, Switzerland, Jan. 3, 1927. German surgeon. He studied the biological effects of x-ray treatment in surgery, and was the first to use deep x-ray therapy (1903) and to describe (1910) the disease of the hip that bears his name. He introduced (1895) a test for the patency of the deep veins of the leg (Perthes's test).

Perthes (pert), Jacques Boucher de Crèvecœur de. See Boucher de Crèvecœur de Perthes, Jacques.

Perthes (per'tes), Johann Georg Justus. b. at Rudolstadt, Germany, Sept. 11, 1749; d. at Gotha, Germany, May 1, 1816. German publisher who founded (1785) the firm of Justus Perthes at Gotha.

Perthes, Wilhelm. b. at Gotha, Germany, June 18, 1793; d. Sept. 10, 1853. German publisher; son of Johann

Georg Justus Perthes. He was at first (1814) his father's partner in the family publishing business, and later his successor. He developed the geographical department of the firm by his publication of Adolf Stieler's Handatlas (1817-23). This work, epoch-making in its day, was still in print in the middle of the 20th century.

Perthshire (perth'shir) or Perth (pèrth). Maritime county in C Scotland. It is bounded on the NW and N by Inverness-shire, on the N by Aberdeenshire, on the NE by Angus, on the SE by the Firth of Tay, Fifeshire, Kinross-shire, and Clackmannanshire, on the S and SW by Stirlingshire, on the SW by Dumbartonsire, and on the W by Argyllshire. It is situated on the border of the Highlands in the N and NW, where it is occupied by part of the Grampian Mountains system. The Highland portion of the county has many lochs and glens and is famous for its picturesque scenery and associations with history and romance. The SE part is occupied by the ranges of the Ochil Hills and the Sidlaw Hills, separated from the mountains of the Highlands by the valley of Strathmore. The principal lowland regions are the valley of Strathmore, extending from SW to NE across the county; the Carse of Gowrie, extending along the N bank of the Firth of Tay, S of the Sidlaw Hills; and the Carse of Forth, extending along the S border of the county. Minerals include coal, copper, iron, slate, and limestone. The county has woolen, cotton, and linen textile industries. Perth is the county seat; area, ab. 2,493 sq. mi.; pop. 128,072 (1951).

Pertinax (per.tē.nāks). See Géraud, André.

Pertinax (per.tē.naks), Publius Helvius. b. 126 A.D.; killed at Rome, March 28, 193. Emperor of Rome (Jan. 1, 193-March 28, 193). Originally a teacher of grammar, he rose to become consul twice. He was proclaimed emperor (193) to succeed Commodus and was put to death by the praetorian guard in the same year.

Pertinax Macesymphant (maks.sik'fánt), Sir. See Macesymphant, Sir Pertinax.

Pertolepe (per.tol'e.pē). [Also, Hesperus.] In Arthurian legend and romance, the formidable knight clad and armed in green, who was overcome by Gareth and put under oath to come to Arthur's court and yield to him when called. This he did at the feast of Pentecost, along with all the other knights whom Gareth had overcome on this expedition. He was also called Hesperus; Tennyson calls him the "Evening Star."

Pertuis (per.twē). Town in SE France, in the department of Vaucluse, near the Durance River, ab. 30 mi. NE of Marseilles. It is a center for the local trade in olive oil, wine, and grain. 5,556 (1946).

Pertuis d'Antioche (dānt.yōsh). Arm of the Bay of Biscay, W of the department of Charente-Maritime, France, between the islands of Ré and Oléron.

Perty (per'tē), Joseph Anton Maximilian. b. at Ornau, Bavaria, Germany, Sept. 17, 1804; d. at Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 8, 1884. German naturalist.

Pertz (per'ts), Georg Heinrich. b. at Hanover, Germany, March 28, 1795; d. at Munich, Oct. 7, 1876. German historian, best known as the editor (1823-74) of the Monumenta Germaniae historica. He became secretary of the royal archives at Hanover in 1823, and chief librarian at Berlin in 1842.

Peru (pe.rō', pē.-; Spanish, pā.rō'). [Official Spanish name, República del Perú.] Republic in W South America, bounded on the SW and W by the Pacific Ocean, on the NW by Ecuador, on the NE by Colombia, on the E by Brazil and Bolivia, and on the S by Chile. Peru is divided for administrative purposes into 23 departments and the province of Callao. The president is elected for a single term of five years. Legislative powers are vested in a senate of 49 members and a chamber of deputies of 153 members, who have six-year terms. Capital, Lima; area, ab. 514,059 sq. mi.; pop. 7,023,111 (1940); 8,558,000 (est. 1951).

Terrain and Climate. Peru is traversed from NW to SE by the principal ranges of the Andes, which parallel the Pacific coast, and rise abruptly from it in many places. The country is divided into three sharply contrasted major regions: (1) the arid coastal lowland and W slopes of the Andes; (2) the Andean highland, including numerous rugged mountain chains and high intermontane basins; and (3) a densely forested region occupying the E slopes and foothills of the Andes and the W portion of the Amazon basin. Within each of these regions there is a considerable diversity of terrain, but about two thirds of the country may be characterized as mountainous. The two principal centers of population are the irrigated valleys of the coastal lowland and the highland basins of the Andean region. The climate of Peru is as varied as its terrain. The coast has a very dry desert climate, tempered, however, by relatively cool winds from the ocean, which often bring the garúa, a heavy mist which nourishes plant life on the coastal hills and mountainsides. The climate of the highland basins depends upon the altitude, but as the more important ones are at elevations above 10,000 ft., they are rather cool the year round; days are warm if sunny, and nights are cold, with frosts not uncommon. There is a distinct dry season in winter in S Peru; elsewhere the highland is humid the year round, though winter (low-sun season) is drier than summer. Perpetual snow remains on the higher mountain peaks.

Industry, Agriculture and Trade. Agriculture is the chief industry of Peru. Highland agriculture is essentially subsistence farming. Potatoes, wheat, barley, and corn are the chief crops. Lowland agriculture in the irrigated coastal valleys has specialized in commercial crops such as cotton and sugar, but rice, fruits, and vegetables are produced for the domestic market. Livestock is raised in both highland and lowland regions; forage is provided by the rough hill and mountain slopes which are not under cultivation. Only slightly over one percent of the total land area of Peru is cropland. The chief varieties of livestock are sheep (by far the most numerous), cattle, alpacas, llamas, goats, pigs, horses, mules, and donkeys. Peru has important wool exports. Manufacturing industries in Peru are chiefly light industries producing for the domestic market. Handicrafts are common among the highland Indian population. The foreign trade of Peru is largely an exchange of sugar, cotton, wool, and petroleum and mineral products for imported manufactured goods. The major center of petroleum production is in the coastal region of NW Peru, an advantageous location for export. There is considerable mineral wealth in the highlands; Cerro de Pasco is a world-famous mining center. Copper, silver, gold, lead, zinc, bismuth, and vanadium are produced. Coal is mined, largely for use on the railroads, and for smelting. The highland and lowland regions of Peru are linked by numerous roads and railroads; the railroad network is incomplete, as construction costs in the mountains are very high. The railroad from Lima to Oroya reaches the highest elevation of any main line in the world (15,300 ft.); a branch line reaches ab. 15,800 ft. The chief highway in Peru is the Pan American Highway, which parallels the coast, traversing the length of the country.

History. Peru is noted as the homeland of some of the most advanced pre-Columbian Indian civilizations in the New World. The Inca empire, founded in the 13th century, extended its dominions as far N as N Ecuador, and S to C Chile. The Incas reached a high level of culture, and built roads linking various centers in their vast empire. The Spaniards under Francisco Pizarro effectively conquered this empire by the simple expedient of capturing the king, Atahualpa, and executing him. Lima was founded in 1535 and became the administrative center for the viceroyalty of Peru. In 1821 Peru declared its independence from Spain, which was achieved finally in 1824 by the victory of Antonio José de Sucre over the Spanish forces at Ayacucho. In 1879-83 Peru was defeated in war with Chile, and lost its S provinces to Chile; the provinces of Tacna and Arica remained in dispute until 1929.

Culture. Indian and Spanish cultures in Peru have not merged in reality; there are "two Perus": the Peru of the highland Indian culture where the majority of the population still speak Indian languages, and the Peru of the lowlands, where Spanish culture prevails. The University of San Marcos, at Lima, is the oldest seat of higher learning in the New World. In addition to Indian and Spanish ethnic elements, Peru has received a considerable immigration from Europe and Japan. Most of these people live in the coastal region. Lima is by far the largest city in Peru, and with its port city of Callao forms the only great urban center in the country.

Peru (pe.rŭ', pĕ.rŭ'). City in N Illinois, in La Salle County, on the Illinois River ab. 85 mi. SW of Chicago; manufactures of watches and clocks. 8,653 (1950).

Peru. City in N Indiana, county seat of Miami County, on the Wabash River ab. 70 mi. N of Indianapolis. 13,308 (1950).

Peru, Upper. See Charcas.

Peru, Viceroyalty of. In Spanish colonial history, the region governed by the viceroys of Peru, who resided at Lima. The conquest of Peru proper led to that of Chile, Charcas (Bolivia), and Quito (Ecuador); and Francisco Pizarro, with his successors, the viceroys, controlled those countries through their audiences (audiencias) and presidents or captains general. New Granada, Panama, and Paraguay were later added to Peru, so that in the 17th century and part of the 18th the viceroyalty practically embraced all of Spanish South America and the Isthmus of Panama, that is, the audience districts of Lima, Charcas, Buenos Aires, Santiago (Chile), Quito, Bogotá, and Panama. The viceroy was appointed by the crown, and corresponded directly with the Council of the Indies at Madrid; he received a salary of 30,000 ducats, or 10,000 more than the viceroy of Mexico, had military as well as civil jurisdiction, and was president of the audience of Lima. Gradually, his authority in the outlying provinces was restricted. In 1718 New Granada was completely separated. Quito, which was at first attached to it, was restored to Peru in 1739. The formation of the viceroyalty of La Plata (1776) reduced Peru to Peru proper, Chile, and Quito, the viceroy at Lima controlling the last two in military and treasury matters only. This arrangement continued until the revolution in the early 19th century.

Perugia (pă.rŭ'jă; Anglicized, pe.rŭ'jĭă, -jă). Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria. Capital, Perugia; area, ab. 2,445 sq. mi.; pop. 534,359 (1936).

Perugia. [Ancient name, Perusia or Colonia Vibia Augusta Perusia.] City and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, the capital of the province of Perugia, situated on hills above the Tiber River, N of Rome. There is trade in agricultural products, and manufactures of flour, chocolate, candy, textile, and ceramics. It is the seat of a university, recognized in 1308 by a bull of Pope Clement V (a political and social science faculty was added in 1927). Pop. of commune, 82,407 (1936); of town, 31,839 (1936).

Art and Architecture. The upper town is surrounded by an ancient Etruscan-Roman wall. At the center of the upper town is the Cathedral of San Lorenzo, a Gothic building erected in the period 1345-1490. Other notable buildings include the Church of Sant' Angelo (6th century), originally a Roman temple; San Pietro de Cassinensi (10th century), with antique columns and paintings by Raphael, Perugino, and others; San Domenico (14th century), with the tomb of Pope Benedict XIII; and the monastery of San Severo, with a mural by Raphael. Also noteworthy are the palazzo comunale (town hall), a Gothic building of 1281-1443, containing the Collegio del Cambio with murals by Perugino, and the Pinacoteca Vauucci, with important paintings of the Umbrian school. All structures of tourist interest were unhurt in World War II except the Ponte San Giovanni (an ancient bridge), which was destroyed by the Germans.

History. In early antiquity one of the 12 principal cities of the Etruscan federation, the city submitted to Roman rule in 309 B.C. Conquered (547 A.D.) by the Ostrogothic king Totila, it came in 774 under papal sovereignty, under which it retained self-government until 1534; from then until 1860 it belonged uninterruptedly to the States of the Church.

Perugia, Lake. See Trasimeno, Lake.

Perugino (pă.rŭ'jĕ-nŏ). [Original name, Pietro Vannucci.] b. at Città della Pieve, Umbria, Italy, 1446; d. 1524. Italian painter of the Umbrian school, called Perugino from his long residence at Perugia. He has long been known chiefly as having been the master of Raphael. Leading a somewhat wandering life, he was called to Rome by Pope Sixtus IV to assist in the decoration of the Sistine Chapel, and is credited with nine Pessoa (pe.sõ' /, Epitacio da Silva. b. at Umbuzeiro, Brazil, May 23, 1865; d. at Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 13, 1942. Brazilian jurist, politician, and diplomat, president of Brazil from 1919 to 1922. A delegate to the Versailles peace conference and a member (1922 et seq.) of the Court of International Justice at The Hague, he is far better known for his accomplishments in the international field than for his administration as president. He was appointed (1932) by Herbert Hoover to replace Jules Jusserand as the non-national member of the U.S.-British Permanent Commission of Arbitration.

Pessoa (pe.sô'a), Fernando. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, 1888; d. 1935. Portuguese poet. He was an outstanding member of the futurist group and later of the modernista school in Portugal. Mensagem (1934) was his only book, but he left other poems scattered in periodicals, especially Orfeu (1915) and Presença (1927), the organs of the two literary currents with which he was identified.

Pestalozzi (pe.tä.lôz'sh), Johann Heinrich. b. at Zurich, Switzerland, Jan. 12, 1746; d. at Brugg, Switzerland, Feb. 17, 1827. Swiss educator and writer, notable for his reforms in the methods of education. His theories on the necessity of developing the child's powers of understanding through observation and the manipulation of objects rather than by learning precepts and rules by rote had a profound influence on the systems of elementary education in Europe and America. He studied theology and then jurisprudence at Zurich. Subsequently, influenced by J. J. Rousseau's Émile, he turned his attention to agriculture. He had already determined to devote himself to the education of the people, and had established (1775), on his estate at Neuhof, a school for poor children which was intended to draw its support from popular subscription. He was obliged, however, to give this up in 1780. The first account of his method of instruction was published at this time in Isaac Iselin's Ephemeren with the title Abendstunden eines Einsiedlers (Evening Hours of a Hermit). His principal literary work is the didactic novel Lienhard und Gertrud, ein Buch für das Volk (Leonard and Gertrude; a Book for the People), which was written between 1781 and 1785. With government support, he founded (1798) an educational institution for poor children at Stans, which was, however, given up the year after. He then took charge of a school at Burgdorf, which was removed (1804) to Münchenbuchsee, and the following year to Yverdon, where it continued to exist until 1825, when, notwithstanding the renown that his pedagogical system had acquired, the enterprise was finally abandoned. His collected works were published at Brandenburg (1869-72) in 16 volumes. They include Wie Gertrud ihre Kinder lehrt (How Gertrude Teaches her Children, 1801), memoirs of Burgdorf and Yverdon, and Meine Lebensschicksale (1826).

Peste (pest), La. [English title, The Plague.] Allegorical novel (1946; Eng. trans., 1948) by Albert Camus. It studies the behavior of the population of Oran, when the city is isolated from the world by an epidemic of the bubonic plague. Allegorically, the plague may be interpreted on one level as the German occupation of France, on another as a tragic composite of the conditions of modern life.

Pestszerzsebet (pesht'sent.er'zhä.bet). [Also: Pestszerzsebet (pesht'er'zhä.bet).] Southeastern suburb of Budapest, Hungary, SE of Kispeszt, opposite Csepel Island, on the Danube River; a station on the railroad line from Budapest to Belgrade. 69,994 (1948).

Pestszentlőrinc (pesht'sent.lôr'ints). Eastern suburb of Budapest, Hungary, a station on the railroad line from Budapest to Cegléd. 47,932 (1948).

Petah Tikva (pe.tä' tēk'vā). [Also: Petah Tikva; Petach Tikva; Petah Tikvah.] Town in C Israel, ab. 7 mi. E of Tel Aviv. Founded in 1878, it was the first of the modern Jewish agricultural colonies. It has since grown to become the fourth largest urban center of Israel, an important center for shipment of citrus fruit, and for manufactures of textiles, chemicals, building materials, food products, and metal products. A large new tire factory has been built nearby. 31,500 (1950).

Pétain (pā.tān'), Philippe. [Full name, Henri Philippe Benoni Omer Joseph Pétain.] b. at Cauchy-a-la-Tour, Pas-de-Calais, France, Aug. 24, 1856; d. on the island of Yeu, in Brittany, France, July 23, 1951. French army commander and politician, head of the Vichy government of France during World War II and commander in chief of the French army during part of World War I. He was convicted (August, 1945) of high treason against France during the German occupation, and sentenced to death, but pardoned by General Charles de Gaulle. Upon graduation from the St.-Cyr military academy, he became (1878) an officer, was an army corps commander at the start of World War I (1914), successfully commanded the defense of Verdun (1916), and was in command (1917-18) of all French armies on the Western Front. He was promoted (1918) to marshal of France. He served as vice-chairman of the supreme war council, returned to active duty in 1925 as commander of the French army which defeated the Rifis in Morocco, and was elected (1929) to the French Academy. He was war minister in 1934, was accused of sponsoring various French fascist movements, was ambassador to Spain (1939-40) after the defeat of the Loyalist government, and returned to Paris after the German invasion to become (May 18, 1940) vice-premier and minister of state in the Reynaud cabinet. After Reynaud's resignation (June 16, 1940), he became premier, arranged an armistice with Germany upon the basis of capitulation, and became chief of state in the new regime. After his arrest and trial for treason, he was imprisoned (1945) on the island of Yeu, off the coast of Brittany.

Petaluma (pet.a.lô'mā). City in C California, in Sonoma County, N of San Francisco, in a poultry and egg producing area. 10,315 (1950).

Pétange (pē.tānzh). [German, Petingen.] Town in Luxembourg, N of Differdange. Iron mines of the Lorraine-Luxembourg "Minette" region are in the vicinity. 10,533 (1948).

Petau (pe.tō), Denys. [Latinized, Dionysius Petavius.] b. at Orléans, France, Aug. 21, 1583; d. at Paris, Dec. 11, 1652. French chronologist, antiquary, and Roman Catholic theologian. Among his chronological works are Opus de doctrina temporum (1627), Tabulae chronologicae (1628), Urologium (1630), and Rationarium temporum (1633-34). He also wrote an incomplete history of Church doctrine, De theologicis dogmatibus (5 vols., 1644-50).

Petchili (pe.chi'li), Gulf of. Former name of the Po Hai.

Petchora (pe.chō'ra). See Pechora.

Petén (pā.tān'). Department in N Guatemala: cacao, chicole, and rubber production. It was once a center of Mayan culture. Capital, Flores; area, 13,843 sq. mi.; pop. 15,908 (1950).

Petén, Lake. [Also: Lake San Andrés; Spanish, Laguna de Flores, Laguna de Petén Itzá (ē.tā'zā').] Lake in the N part of Guatemala, ab. 25 mi. long; also, the name of one of the islands in the lake.

Peter (pē'tēr), Saint. [Also: Cephas, Simon Peter; Greek, Petros; Latin, Petrus; original name, Simon.] One of the 12 apostles. He was originally a fisherman, became one of the three most favored disciples of Christ, and was the most prominent leader of the Church after the ascension (he was the first bishop of Rome, as the popes prior to the 4th century are generally designated). He was imprisoned (44) by Herod, contended with Paul at Antioch touching the proper policy to be observed toward the Gentiles, and according to tradition was the founder of the church at Rome and a martyr there in the reign of Nero. He is the reputed author of two epistles in the New Testament. His death is celebrated with that of Saint Paul on the 29th of June in the Eastern and Roman Catholic churches, and by the Church of England. This is the most ancient of the festivals of the apostles, dating from the 3rd century. In 1950 Pope Pius XII announced that a tomb found under the Church of Saint Peter at Rome had been definitely established as that of the saint.

Peter I (of Russia). [Also: Peter Alekseyevich (ā.lik.sā'yevich); called Peter the Great.] b. at Moscow, June 9, 1672; d. at St. Petersburg, Feb. 8, 1725. Czar of Russia; son of Alexis. He reigned conjointly with his half brother Ivan from 1682, and alone from 1696. He freed himself from the regency of his sister Sophia in 1689, captured Azov from the Turks in 1696, traveled in Germany, the Netherlands, England, and Austria 1696-97, put down a rebellion of the Siretzi in 1698, and took part in the Northern War (1700-21), in the course of which he was defeated by Charles XII of Sweden at Narva in 1700, and defeated him in turn at Poltava in 1709. He was forced by the Turks (who had taken up arms at the instance of Charles) to relinquish Azov (by the treaty of Prut in 1711). In 1721 he concluded the peace of Nystadt with Sweden, by which he obtained Livonia, Estonia, Ingermanland, and part of Karelia. He founded St. Petersburg in 1703, imprisoned his son Alexis for treason in 1718, and carried on a successful war against Persia (1722-23). He introduced Western civilization into Russia, which he made one of the great powers of Europe.

Peter II (of Russia). b. Oct. 23, 1715; d. 1730. Czar of Russia (1727-30); son of Alexis and grandson of Peter I (Peter the Great).

Peter III (of Russia). [Also, Karl Peter Ulrich.] b. at Kiel, in Holstein, Germany, Feb. 21, 1728; assassinated at Ropsha, Russia, July 17, 1762. Czar of Russia; son of Charles Frederick, Duke of Holstein, and Anna (daughter of Peter the Great). He was appointed heir in 1742, married Catherine (later empress) in 1745, and succeeded to the throne in January, 1762. He immediately made peace with Frederick the Great, with whom his predecessor had been at war since 1757 (the Seven Years' War). He was murdered after a few months' reign, and his wife, who was an accomplice in his murder, was placed on the throne.

Peter I (of Serbia). [Also: Peter I of Yugoslavia; Peter Karageorgevich.] b. at Belgrade, in what is now Yugoslavia, June 29, 1844; d. there, 1921. King of Serbia (1903-21). He was proclaimed king by the army after the murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga on June 10, 1903. He married (1883) Princess Zorka of Montenegro. His reign saw the expansion of the Serbian state as a result of the Balkan wars (1912-13), and the creation of the Yugoslav state after World War I. He reigned (1918-21) over the triune kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, the official title of the new state.

Peter II (of Yugoslavia). [Also, Peter Karageorgevich.] b. at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, 1923—. King of Yugoslavia (1934-45); son of Alexander I of Yugoslavia and grandson of Peter I of Serbia. He went into exile (1941) after the German invasion, and was deposed (1945) by the Yugoslav constituent assembly.

Peter Bell (bcl). Poetical tale by William Wordsworth, published in 1819.

Peter Bell the Third. Burlesque poem (1819) by Percy Bysshe Shelley. It strikes bitterly at Wordsworth's desertion of the liberal cause. A parody of the Wordsworthian style, Peter Bell by J. H. Reynolds had appeared earlier in 1819, hence Shelley's poem was called by him "the Third."

Peterborough (pē'tēr.bur.ō, -bēr.ō). Municipal borough, market center, manufacturing town, and railway junction in C England, in the Soke of Peterborough (an administrative county of Northamptonshire), situated on the river Nene ab. 38 mi. NE of Northampton, ab. 76 mi. N of London by rail. It is a large brickmaking center. Other industries are breweries, canneries, and the manufacture of agricultural machinery. A Benedictine abbey was founded here in 655. The cathedral, one of the most important of English Norman churches, was begun early in the 12th century. 53,412 (1951).

Peterborough. City in S Ontario, Canada, county seat of Peterborough County, ab. 70 mi. NE of Toronto. It is the commercial center for a large area; manufactures include cereal products and electrical appliances. 38,272 (1951).

Peterborough, Earl of. Title held by various members of the Mordaunt family.

Peterborough, Soke of. See Soke of Peterborough.

Peterburg (pā'tēr.bürk). See Leningrad.

Peter Chrysologus (kri.sō'ō.gus). Saint. b. at Imola, Italy, 406; d. there, 450. Italian ecclesiastic. Consecrated bishop of Ravenna (433), he became famous as an orator. His homilies, 176 in number, were first collected by Felix, bishop of Ravenna (707-717), and edited by Agapitus Vicentius (Bologna, 1534).

Peter Claver (klā.ver). Saint. [Spanish, San Pedro Claver.] b. at Verdú, in Spain, 1551; d. Sept. 8, 1654. Spanish Jesuit missionary. He studied at Barcelona, became a Jesuit, and went as a missionary to Cartagena, in South America, where for 44 years he worked as chaplain to the Negro slaves arriving at that port.

Peter Damian (dā'mi.ăn). Saint. See Damian, Saint Peter.

Peter Davies (dā'vis, -vēz). See Davies, Peter.

Peter Featherstone (fēth'ēr.stōn). See Featherstone, Peter.

Peter Funk (fungk). See Funk, Peter.

Peter Grimm (grim). The Return of. See Return of Peter Grimm, The.

Peterhead (pē'tēr.hed, pē'tēr.hed). Parliamentary burgh and fishing port in E Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, situated on a peninsula on the N side of Peterhead Bay (an inlet of the North Sea), ab. 15 mi. SE of Fraserburgh, ab. 568 mi. N of London by rail. It is an important fishing port, especially for herring. Granite is quarried in the vicinity. 13,234 (est. 1948).

Peterhof (pē'tēr.hof). See Petrodvorets.

Peter Homunculus (hō.mung'kū.lus). Autobiographical novel by Gilbert Cannan, published in 1909.

Peterhouse (pē'tēr.hous). [Official name, Saint Peter's College.] One of the colleges of Cambridge University. The oldest of all the Cambridge colleges, it was founded in 1257.

Peter Ibbetson (ib'et.sōn). Opera in three acts by Deems Taylor, based on a play by Constance Collier adapted from a George Du Maurier novel. It was first performed at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Feb. 7, 1931.

Peter I Island. [Norwegian, Peter I's Øy (pā'tēr den fēr'stes ē'i) (ōy="island").] Uninhabited island in Bellinghous Sea, off Antarctica, in ab. lat. 68°50' S., long. 90°35' W.; a dependency of Norway. Area, 96 sq. mi.

Peter Jackson, Cigar Merchant (jak'sōn). Realistic war novel by Gilbert Frankau, published in 1919.

Peterkin (pē'tēr.kin), Julia. [Maiden name, Mood.] b. in Laurens County, S.C., Oct. 31, 1880—. American fiction writer. Author of Green Thursday (1924), Black April (1927), Bright Skin (1932), Roll Jordan, Roll (1933), and Plantation Christmas (1934). She was awarded the 1929 Pulitzer prize for the novel Scarlet Sister Mary (1928), which was later dramatized.

Peterkin Papers, The. Stories for children by Lucretia Peabody Hale, published in 1880.

Peterlingen (pā'tēr.ling.en). German name of Payerne.

Peter Lombard (lōm'bārd; lum'-; -bārd). See Lombard, Peter.

Peterloo Massacre (pē'tēr.lō). Riot at St. Peter's Field, Manchester, England, Aug. 16, 1819. An assembly of about 60,000, mainly of the laboring classes, had met in behalf of Parliamentary reform and corn-law repeal, under the leadership of Henry Hunt. The assembly was charged by the military, and 11 were killed and 400 to 600 wounded. The support given by the Tory government, the same that claimed credit for Waterloo, to the action of the magistrates in ordering the assault led to the sarcastic labeling of the action as "Peterloo." Percy Bysshe Shelley wrote several indignant poems on the subject, including The Mask of Anarchy, not published until 1832.

Petermann (pā'tēr.mān), August. b. at Bleicherode, Germany, April 18, 1822; committed suicide at Gotha, Germany, Sept. 25, 1878. German geographer. He went to Great Britain in 1845, took charge of the Geographical Institute at Gotha in 1854, and encouraged geographical explorations in Africa, the polar regions, and elsewhere. He founded and conducted Petermanns Mitteilungen after 1855, and contributed to the atlases of Adolf Stieler and others.

Peter Martyr (mār'tēr), Saint. [Also, Peter of Verona.] b. at Verona, Italy, 1206; d. April 6, 1252. Italian ecclesiastic, a member of the Dominican order. The son of Manichean parents, he was brought up a Catholic. He studied at Bologna, became a Dominican after meeting Saint Dominic, and was appointed grand inquisitor by Pope Gregory IX, and sent to correct the Manichean errors still prevalent in northern Italy. He was murdered by a Manichean, while returning from Como to Milan.

Peter Martyr. [Called in Italian Pietro Martire d'Anghiera; Latinized, Petrus Martyr Anglerius.] b. at Anghiera, in the state of Milan, Italy, c1457; d. in Granada, Spain, 1526. Italian courtier and historian. In 1487 he went to Spain and remained in the service of Queen Isabella. In 1492 he opened a school for young nobles at Madrid; later he was tutor of the Spanish princes, and in 1501 he was sent as ambassador to Venice and Egypt. In 1524 he became a member of the Council of the Indies, and he held other public offices. De Orbe Novo, his principal historical work, treats of the first 30 years of American discovery. His published letters are also of historical value.

Peter Mogila (mo.gē'la) or Mogilas (-las). See Mogila, Peter.

Peter of Abano (ā'bā.nō). Anglicized name of Abano, Pietro d'.

Peter of Alcántara (āl.kān'tā.rā), Saint. b. at Alcántara, Spain, 1499; d. Oct. 18, 1562. Spanish ecclesiastic. At the age of 16 he became a Franciscan of the stricter observance, and in 1524 was ordained priest. He was known as a preacher, and promoted the reform of the Franciscan friars. He retired to eremitical solitude at Arabida, Portugal, but returned to Spain in 1553, continuing the work of reform. He counseled Saint Teresa of Ávila in her reform of Carmel.

Peter of Amiens (am'jenz). See Peter the Hermit.

Peter of Blois (blwā). [Latinized, Petrus Blesensis.] b. at Blois, France; d. c.1200. French ecclesiastic and scholar who settled in England in the reign of Henry II. He was employed in various confidential capacities diplomatic and otherwise by both Henry and the widowed queen, Eleanor of Aquitaine. His letters comprise an important body of historical source materials.

Peter of Langtoft (lang'toft). See Langtoft, Peter of.

Peter of Montboissier (mōn.bwā.syā). See Peter the Venerable.

Peter of Verona (ve.rō.nā), Saint. See Saint Peter Martyr.

Peter Paragon (par'a.gon). Novel by John Palmer, published in 1915.

Peter Pattieson (pat'i.sən). See Pattieson, Peter.

Peter Pepperpot (pēp'ēr.pot), Sir. See Pepperpot, Sir Peter.

Peter Porcupine (pōr'kū.pin). Pseudonym of Cobbett, William.

Peter Quince (kwins). See Quince, Peter.

Peter Rugg, the Missing Man (rug). Story by William Austin, published in 1824.

Peters (pā'tērs), Christian August Friedrich. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 7, 1806; d. at Kiel, Germany, May 8, 1880. German astronomer, director of the observatory at Altona (removed in 1872 to Kiel) from 1854.

Peters (pē'tērs), Christian Henry Frederick. b. at Koldenbüttel, near Eiderstedt, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, Sept. 19, 1813; d. at Clinton, N.Y., July 19, 1890. American astronomer, director of the observatory at Hamilton College, in New York, from 1858; brother of W. K. H. Peters. He discovered over 40 asteroids and two comets. He published Celestial Charts (1882-88) and others.

Peters, Curtis Arnoux, Jr. Original name of Arno, Peter.

Peters, Edward Dyer. b. at Dorchester, Mass., June 1, 1849; d. there, Feb. 17, 1917. American mining engineer and metallurgist. He worked as a metallurgist and superintendent of Colorado mines, and in 1904 was named professor of metallurgy at Harvard, where he became (1909) Gorday McKay professor of metallurgy. Among his works are Modern American Methods of Copper Smelting (1887), The Principles of Copper Smelting (1907), and The Practice of Copper Smelting (1911).

Peters (pē'tērs) or Peter (pē'tēr), Hugh. b. in Cornwall, England (baptized June 29, 1598); hanged at Charing Cross, London, Oct. 16, 1660. English Puritan clergyman. In October, 1635, he emigrated to Boston, and in 1636 became minister to the First Church at Salem, Mass. In 1641 he was the agent of the colony in England, and later filled important offices in England under Cromwell. At the Restoration he was imprisoned in the Tower of London and tried and convicted (Oct. 13, 1660) as an accomplice in the execution of Charles I.

Peters, John Punnett. b. at New York, Dec. 16, 1852; d. Nov. 10, 1921. American Episcopal clergyman, teacher, archaeologist, and author. He became (1884) professor of Old Testament language and literature at Philadelphia and in 1886 was named professor of Hebrew at the University of Pennsylvania. He led (1888-90) excavations at the site of ancient Nippur, and was scientific director of the project until 1895. At his death he was professor of New Testament exegesis at the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. Among his works are Nippur (2 vols., 1897), Labor and Capital (1902), Painted Tombs in the Necropolis of Marissa (1905), and Bible and Spade (1922).

Peters (pā'tērs), Karl. b. at Neuhaus, Hanover, Germany, 1856; d. at Wolport, Hanover, Sept. 10, 1918. German explorer and administrator in Africa. He founded (1884) the German Colonization Society, and acquired in East Africa large tracts of land and obtained for them an imperial protectorate. As head of the German East Africa Company he extended its possessions and organized its stations, brought about a colonial congress at Berlin in 1886, and returned to East Africa in 1887. He made further explorations in 1889-90 and 1891-93, and was made imperial commissioner for German East Africa in 1891. He tried to place Uganda under German protection, but the treaty he signed with the king of Uganda proved useless in the face of a German agreement that Uganda was in the British sphere. However, for his cruelty in securing this and other concessions from the natives, he was court-martialed in 1897 and dismissed from the German service. He explored along the Zambezi River in 1899 and discovered gold mines and traces of old cities. In 1906 the German government again made him imperial commissioner.

Peters, Louise Otto-. See Otto, Louise.

Peters (pē'tērs), Richard. b. at Philadelphia, June 22, 1744; d. Aug. 22, 1828. American jurist and Revolutionary patriot. He was secretary (1776-81) of the board of war under the Continental Congress, and was elected (1782) to Congress, later serving (1787-92) in the Pennsylvania legislature. He served (1792-1828) as judge of the U.S. district court of Pennsylvania.

Peters, Samuel Andrew. b. at Hebron, Conn., Nov. 20, 1735; d. at New York, April 19, 1826. American Episcopal clergyman. He wrote a satire entitled General History of Connecticut (1781), containing the so-called "Blue Laws" (invented by him).

Peters (pā'tērs), Wilhelm Karl Hartwig. b. at Koldenbüttel, near Eiderstedt, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, April 22, 1815; d. at Berlin, April 20, 1883. German naturalist and traveler; brother of C. H. F. Peters.

Petersburg (pē'tērs.bērg). Town in SE Alaska, on Mitkof Island, ab. 120 mi. SE of Juneau; fishing center for salmon, halibut, crab, and shrimp; canning and frozen-fish industry; sawmills. It is a port of call for coastal steamers. The town was founded in 1897, and has a population largely of Scandinavian descent, 1,619 (1950).

Petersburg. City in C Illinois, county seat of Menard County; burial place of Ann Rutledge. 2,325 (1950).

Petersburg. City in SW Indiana, county seat of Pike County. 3,035 (1950).

Petersburg. Independent city in SE Virginia, geographically but not administratively part of Dinwiddie County, on the Appomattox River ab. 23 mi. S of Richmond; manufactures of tobacco products, luggage, textiles, clothing, peanut products, optical lenses, flour, furniture, and wood products. It was incorporated in 1748. In the Civil War it was besieged (1864-65) by Union forces under U. S. Grant. Final operations began on March 25, 1865; and after the battle of Five Forks (March 31 and April 1) it was evacuated by the Confederates and surrendered on April 3; Lee's subsequent retreat toward Lynchburg ended with his surrender at Appomattox Court House on April 9. Pop. 35,054 (1950).

Peter Schlemihl (pā'tēr shla.mē'l). Man who sold his shadow, the central character of Peter Schlemihls wunderbare Geschichte, a tale by Adelbert von Chamisso, published in 1814.

Petersdorf (pā'tērs.dōrf). See Perchtoldsdorf.

Petersen (pā'tēr.zən), Eugen. b. at Heiligenhafen, Germany, Aug. 16, 1836; d. at Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 14, 1919. German archaeologist who served (1873 et seq.) as professor at the universities of Tartu (Dorpat) and Prague, and later as first secretary to the German archaeological institutes at Athens and Rome.

Petersen, Julius. b. 1878—. German historian of literature and stagecraft. His published studies include Schiller und die Bühne (1904), Schillers Persönlichkeit (1908 et seq.), Literaturgeschichte als Wissenschaft (1914), Das deutsche Nationaltheater (1919), and Die Wesensbestin- mung der deutschen Romantik (1926). The last-named work is a comprehensive attempt to reconcile conflicts of method and conclusion in various studies of German romanticism.

Petersen (pā'tēr.sən), Niels Matthias. b. in Fyn, Denmark, Oct. 24, 1791; d. at Copenhagen, May 11, 1862. Danish historian and philologist.

Petersen (pā'tēr.zen), Peter. b. at Grossenwiehe, near Flensburg, Germany, June 26, 1884—. German philosopher and educator, known as the author of the so-called Jena-Plan school system. Author of Allgemeine Erziehungswissenschaft (1924), Der Jena-Plan einer freien allgemeinen Volksschule (1927), Grundfragen einer Pädagogischen Charakterologie (1928), Pädagogik (1932), and Die Praxis der Schulen nach dem Jena-Plan (1934).

Peter's Eye. See under Battersea.

Petersfield (pē'tēr.z.fēld). Urban district and market town in S England, in Hampshire, ab. 19 mi. NE of Portsmouth, ab. 55 mi. SW of London by rail. 6,616 (1951).

Petersham (pē'tēr.sham). Town in C Massachusetts, in Worcester County, ab. 26 mi. NW of Worcester. It was the scene of the final engagement in Shays's Rebellion, in which the insurgents under Daniel Shays were dispersed by the state troops under General Benjamin Lincoln, on Feb. 2, 1787. Pop. 814 (1950).

Peter Simple (sim'pl). See Simple, Peter.

Peter's Island. See under Battersea.

Peterson (pē'tēr.son), Frederick. b. at Faribault, Minn., March 1, 1859; d. at New York, July 9, 1938. American poet and neurologist. He was an instructor (1897-1903) in neurology, clinical lecturer (1901-03), and professor (1903 et seq.) at Columbia. Author of Mental Diseases (1899) and American Text-book of Legal Medicine and Toxicology (1903). In poetry, he wrote Poems and Swedish Translations (1883), In the Shade of Ydrasil (1893), A Song of the Latter Day (1904), Chinese Lyrics (1916), and The Flutter of the Gold-Leaf (1922). He also wrote Creative Re-education (1936).

Peterson, Henry. b. at Philadelphia, Dec. 7, 1818; d. at Germantown, Pa., Oct. 10, 1891. American editor, publisher, and poet. He became (1846) editor of the Saturday Evening Post, of which he became (1848) an owner, remaining as editor until 1874, when he turned to writing fiction and poetry. Among his works are Poems (1863), The Modern Job (1869), Pemberton (1873), Faire-mount (1874), Bessie's Lovers (1877), and Columbus (1893).

Peterson (pā'tēr.sən), Kaj Harald Leininger. Original name of Munk, Kaj.

Peterson (pē'tēr.son), Mount. Mountain in Antarctica, in the Ellsworth Highland, in ab. 74°57' S., 81°20' W. Elevation, ab. 9,000 ft.

Petersen (pā'tēr.sən), Ellif. b. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Sept. 4, 1852; d. Dec. 29, 1928. Norwegian portrait, landscape, and genre painter. Among his works are Christian II of Denmark, E. Grieg, H. Ibsen, Portrait of a Woman, Mother Utne, Summer Night in Norway, Nocturne-Lake with Nymph, Gethsemane, and Emmaus.

Peter Teazle (tē'zē), Sir. See Teazle, Sir Peter.

Peter the Cruel. English name of Pedro el Cruel.

Peter the Great. See Peter I (of Russia).

Peter the Great Bay. [Russian, Zaliv Petra Velikogo.] Arm of the Sea of Japan, indenting the S coast of the Maritime Territory of SE U.S.S.R. Vladivostok is located on a peninsula in this bay.

Peter the Hermit. [Also, Peter of Amiens.] b. c.1050; d. at the monastery of Neufmontier (Liège), Belgium, July 11, 1115. Hermit and monk, one of the chief preachers of the first Crusade. He led the advance division of the first Crusade as far as Asia Minor in 1096.

Peter the Shipwright. See Czar and Zimmermann.

Peter the Venerable. [Known also as Peter of Montboissier.] b. at Montboissier, in Auvergne, France, c.1092; d. at Cluny, France, Dec. 25, 1156. French monk and abbot of Cluny. He entered Cluny in 1109, was prior at Vézelay and Domène, and abbot of Cluny from 1122. He was the last of the great abbots of Cluny.

Pétervárad (pā'tēr.vā'rőd). Hungarian name of Petrovaradin.

Peterwardein (pā'tēr.vār.dīn'). German name of Petrovaradin.

Peter Westcott (west'kōt). See Westcott, Peter.

Pétigru (pē'tī.grō), James Louis. [Original surname, Pettigrew.] b. in Abbeville district, S.C., May 10, 1789; d. March 9, 1863. American lawyer and politician. During the nullification controversy he became the leader of the Union party in South Carolina. He served as code commissioner of South Carolina from 1859 to 1863. He was opposed to secession and reluctantly supported the Confederate cause.

Pétining (pā'tīng.en). German name of Pétinge.

Pétion (pā'ti.yōn), Alexandre Sabès. b. at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, April 2, 1770; d. there, March 29, 1818. Haitian general and politician. A light mulatto, of good education, he served (1791 et seq.) as commandant of artillery under Toussaint L'Ouverture and André Rigaud, followed the latter to France in 1800, and was attached to Charles Victor Leclerc's expedition (1801-02) that overthrew Toussaint. In 1802 he joined the revolt of those who feared that slavery was to be reestablished, served under Jean Jacques Dessalines, and after his death, in which Pétion and Henri Christophe had a hand, became president (March 10, 1807) of the southern republic of Haiti. Christophe had already revolted in the north, and the French portion of the island was thus divided into two parts, between which there was almost constant war for many years. Pétion, by réélection, continued to rule the southern part until his death, but besides the war (1811-18) with Christophe there were many internal dissensions, despite his moderation and progressive methods.

Pétion de Villeneuve (de vėl.név), Jérôme. b. at Chartres, France, 1756; committed suicide near Bordeaux, France, in June, 1794. French revolutionist. He was a deputy to the third estate of the States-General in 1789, one of the leaders in the Constituent Assembly and its president in 1790, commissioner to bring the king back from Varennes in 1791, mayor of Paris (1791-92), and Girondist deputy to the Convention (1792-93) and its first president. The zeal of his followers in proposing that he have power similar to that of the president of the U.S. brought him the nickname "Roi Pétion" and the name brought suspicion with it. A rival of Robespierre, he was proscribed in June, 1793, but escaped to the south, and rebelled against the Convention.

Petit (pē.tē), Eugène. [Also, Eugène Claudius-Petit; pseudonym, Claudius.] b. at Angers, France, May 22, 1907—. French political leader, a prominent leader of the Resistance in France during World War II. A founding member of the National Committee of the Resistance, he was a deputy (1945 et seq.), headed the party Union Démocratique et Socialiste de la Résistance, and was minister of reconstruction and urbanism (1948 et seq.). He used the name Claudius while working in the Resistance.

Petit Andely (pē.tē tān.dlē), Le. See under Les Andelys.

Petit André (pē.tē tān.drā). Executioner in Louis XI's retinue, introduced as a character in the novel Quentin Durward by Sir Walter Scott.

"Petit Caporal (pē.tē kă.pō.rāl), le". Epithet in French of Napoleon I.

Petit-Charenton (pē.tē.shā.rān.tōn). Former name of St.-Maurice.

Petit Châtelet (pē.tē shā.tlē), Le. See Châtelet, Le Petit.

Petit de Julleville (pē.tē dē zhū.vēl'), Louis. b. at Paris, July 18, 1841; d. there, Aug. 25, 1900. French historian. He served as professor at the Faculté des Lettres at Paris. He was author of Histoire du théâtre en France (1880-86), and editor in chief of Histoire de la langue et de la littérature française (8 vols., 1896-99).

Petite-Synthe (pē.tē.sānt). Town in N France, in the department of Nord, near the English Channel, ab. 3 mi. W of Dunkerque. It is a port, with several industries. The town suffered damage in World War II. 7,142 (1946).

Petition of Right. Act of Parliament passed in May, 1628, one of the chief documents of the English constitution. It provided that no freeman be required to give any gift, loan, benevolence, or tax without prior approval by act of Parliament; that no freeman be imprisoned or detained contrary to the law of the land; that soldiers or mariners be not billeted in private houses; and that commissions to punish soldiers and sailors by martial law be revoked and no more issue.

Petitjean (pe.tē.zhān). Town in NW Africa, an important rail junction in French Morocco, in the N part of the country. The rail lines from Tangier to Meknès and Fez, and the lines from Casablanca and Port Lyautey join here. Pop. ab. 12,000.

Petit Nesle (pe.tē.nēl). Smaller residence attached to the Grand Nesle, or Tour de Nesle, in Paris. They stood opposite the Louvre, at the south end of the Pont des Arts. Both were inhabited by the royal family at various times, and numerous crimes were said to have been committed there. Benvenuto Cellini had his studio in the Petit Nesle.

Petit Nord Peninsula (pe.ti nōrd'). See Great North-Nord Peninsula.

Petit-Quevilly or Petit-Quevilly (pe.tē.ke.vē.yē), Le. See Le Petit-Quevilly.

Petits-Mulets (pe.tē.mū.le). See Mulets, Grands-Petits-.

Petkov (pet'kūf), Nikola Dimitrov. b. in Bulgaria, 1891; executed at Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 22, 1947. Bulgarian agrarian leader, noted as an opponent of the Communist regime that came into power after World War II. Imprisoned during the war for opposition to pro-German policy, he became deputy prime minister of the interim Fatherland Front government (1944-45). He was the leader of opposition to Communist policy, and was executed for treason.

Peto (pē'tō). Associate of Sir John Falstaff in Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Petőfi (pe.tē.fē), Sándor (or Alexander). [Original surname, Petrovics.] b. in Little Cumania, Hungary, Dec. 31, 1823; killed probably in the battle of Schässburg (now Sighisoara, Rumania), July 31, 1849. Hungarian lyric poet and national hero. He assumed an important role at the outbreak (1848) of the Hungarian revolution at Pest (now part of Budapest), and during the war his patriotic songs made him a national hero. He was last seen on the battlefield of Schässburg, and for many years it was popularly believed that he survived as a prisoner in Siberia.

Petoskey (pet.os'ki). City in NW Lower Michigan, county seat of Emmet County, on Little Traverse Bay; manufactures of wood and paper products, leather, and cement. 6,468 (1950).

Petra (pē'tra). In ancient geography, a city in Arabia Petraea, situated in lat. 30°19' N., long. 35°31' E. The site was early occupied on account of its proximity to the commercial route between Arabia and Egypt. From the 2nd century B.C., it was a stronghold of the Nabataeans. The site consists of a precipice-enclosed valley on the NE side of Mount Hor. The sandstone rocks are brilliantly colored in many different hues, and are greatly worn by the action of water. Petra is famous for its rock-cut architectural remains, dating from after the establishment of Roman rule in 105 A.D. These remains have been looked upon by many as those of temples and palaces, but are merely the façades, many of them considerable in scale and elaborate in ornament, of rock tombs. They gain in effectiveness by their situation and by the marvelous coloring of the rock. The buildings of the town are in an extreme state of ruin, except for the rock-cut theater.

Petra. See also under Batum.

Petralia Sottana (pā.trā.lē.sō.tā'nā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Palermo, situated near Monte San Salvatore, ab. 49 mi. SE of Palermo; agricultural commune; stone quarries. The Chiesa Matrice escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 10,936 (1936); of town, 5,760 (1936).

Petrarch (pē'trärk'). [Italian, Francesco Petrarca (pā.trär'kä); original name, Petracco (pā.trär'kō).] b. at Arezzo, Italy, July 20, 1304; d. at Arquà, near Padua, July 19, 1374. Italian poet, second in importance among Italian poets of the Middle Ages only to Dante. His father belonged to the party of the Bianchi (Whites) and was banished at the same time as Dante; Petrarch remembered seeing the latter in his childhood. The family went to Avignon in 1310, and when about 14 years of age Petrarch went to Montpellier to pursue his studies in law, later shifting to Bologna. He returned to Avignon in 1326, soon after the death of his father, and lived there until 1347. In 1327 he first saw the Laura idealized and celebrated in his sonnets. There have been many theories as to her identity; that generally received is that she was the daughter of Audibert de Noves, married Hugues de Sade in 1325, and became the mother of 11 children before her death in 1348. This identification has been disputed, but her real identity is unimportant: what is important is the effect she had on Petrarch's lyric poems of unrequited love and consequent melancholy, together with his inner conflict between desire and religious duty.

These reactions were distilled into verse of remarkable elegance, clarity of expression, and formal perfection. Petrarch's homage was conventional, and personal relations are not supposed to have existed between the wife of De Sade and the poet. His literary infatuation did not, however, prevent his having by other women a natural son and daughter, born in 1337 and 1343 respectively: He received a canonry at Lombez, at the foot of the Pyrenees, in 1335, serving there under Giacomo Colonna, Bishop of Lombez, and a member of the family in whose service Petrarch performed diplomatic duties for several years.

In 1337 he bought a little house at Vaulchère, near Avignon, to which he retired and where he did most of his best work. From the outset of his career he was an avid student of antiquity, his passion for which was evidenced in his Latin works of erudition, such as his collection of biographies De viris illustribus (On Famous Men, 1338 et seq.), and in his first major work, the Latin epic poem Africa (1338-42), celebrating the exploits of Scipio Africanus. Primarily in recognition of the promise shown in the Africa, he was crowned poet laureate by the senate in Rome April 8, 1341, he having received on the same day as the invitation to Rome a similar invitation from the University of Paris. In 1347 he built a house at Parma, but resided partly at Vaulchère until 1353, when he settled at Milan. He was patronized by nobles and ecclesiastics, and employed on various diplomatic missions, principally by the Visconti, whom he represented at the court of King John II of France, conducting the marriage of a young Visconti with the daughter of the king. In 1362 he removed to Padua, where he had held a canonry since 1347, and to Venice, in the same year, where he saw Boccaccio for the last time, having first met him in 1350 at Florence. He went to Arquà in 1370, where he died. Posterity remembers him chiefly for his personal utterances, in his Canzoniere (collected lyric poems, in Italian) and such Latin works as his Epistles (1326-74) and his philosophic-religious treatises Secretum (Innermost Thoughts, 1343), De vita solitaria (On Solitary Life, 1346-56), De otio religiosorum (On Monastic Freedom from Care, 1347-56), and De remediis utriusque fortunae (On the Remedies for Good and Bad Fortune, 1350's-1366). An effort to rival Dante in an Italian allegorical and didactic poem, I Trionfi (The Triumphs, c1352-74), was unsuccessful. Petrarch forms in a way a bridge between medieval and modern intellectual life. His deep interest in the rediscovery and revival of ancient culture marks him as an immediate forerunner of the humanistic renaissance. The intellectual content of his work and some elements of his poetic form were traditional, but his attitude, in its subjectivity and introspection, in its instability and many-sidedness, anticipates strikingly many later developments, so that he has been termed "the first modern man of letters." Petrarch, rather than Dante or Boccaccio, carried the prestige of Italian literature to the rest of Europe, and he still serves as a model for formal perfection and for harmony of verse and content in poetical expression. The English sonnet, perhaps the principal verse form in the language, stems directly from Petrarch through Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, and Sir Thomas Wyatt, whose translations of his sonnets appeared early in Elizabeth's reign and inspired in the next 50 years a great flow of English lyric poetry.

Petra Velikogo (pā.trā' vī.lē'ko.vō), Zaliv. Russian name of Peter the Great Bay.

Petri (pā'trē), Egon. b. at Hanover, Germany, March 23, 1881— d. Dutch pianist; son of Henri W. Petri. He studied under Ferruccio Busoni, settled (1921) at Berlin, and toured the U.S. several times, first appearing there in 1932.

Petri, Henri Willem (or Wilhelm). b. at Zeyst, near Utrecht, Netherlands, April 5, 1856; d. at Dresden, Germany, April 7, 1914. Dutch violinist, concertmaster at Sonderhausen (1877), Hanover (1881), the Leipzig Gewandhaus concerts (1883), and Dresden (1889). He was the composer of various pieces for violin.

Petrich (pe'trich). Town in SW Bulgaria, in the department of Sofia, on the Struma River ab. 15 mi. SW of Sofia, 13,456 (1946).

Petrie (pe'tri), Sir Flinders. [Full name, William Matthew Flinders Petrie.] b. June 3, 1853; d. at Jerusalem, July 28, 1942. English Egyptologist. He was educated privately. From 1874 to 1880 he surveyed ancient British earthworks; the years 1881 and 1882 he spent in studying the pyramids and temples of Gizeh. He returned to Egypt in 1884, as explorer for the Egypt Exploration Fund. He went twice again in the same capacity, each time making important discoveries, and bringing back plans and illustrations, all of which, with his memoirs and reports on the subject, were published by the committee. In 1887-89 he explored Fayum (not for the Exploration Fund), and later explored with valuable results both for the Egyptian and Palestine Exploration Funds. His excavations in Egypt (1880-1906) covered the exploration of the Greek city at Naucratis and the town of Daphnae, the discovery of remains of prehistoric Egyptians at Nagada, the discovery at Medum of an early temple, excavations of the temples at Tanis (Zoan), Koptos, and Thebes, records of kings of the earliest dynasties at Abydos, and other finds important in the historical record of ancient Egypt. He was Edwards professor of Egyptology at University College, London, from 1893. In 1894 he founded the Egyptian Research Account (developed in 1905 into the British School of Archaeology in Egypt). He published Stonehenge (1880), Pyramids and Temples of Gizeh (1883), Historical Scarabs, Historical Data of the XI. Dynasty, and other monographs (1888), Hawara, Biahmu, and Arsinöe (1889), Surveys of the Pyramid of Hawara (1890), Ten Years' Digging in Egypt, 1881-1891 (1892), History of Egypt (1894-1905), Egyptian Tales (1895), Religion and Conscience in Ancient Egypt (1898), Methods and Aims in Archaeology (1904), Religion of Ancient Egypt (1906), Janus in Modern Life (1907), Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity (1909), The Growth of the Gospels (1910), Meydum and Memphis (1910), Egypt and Israel (1911), and many volumes of special reports.

Petrified Forest. Area in E Arizona, now set aside as a national monument. It contains the remains of hundreds of cone-bearing evergreen trees which were buried thousands of feet underground long before the beginning of the historic period. The petrified tree trunks (some of which have a diameter of as much as six feet) consist actually of silica, in the form of red and yellow chalcodony, which replaced the original tissue of the trees. Area, ab. 133 sq. mi.

Petrified Forest. The. Drama by Robert E. Sherwood, produced in 1934 and published in 1935, starring Leslie Howard in the stage and film versions. It is laid against a geographical background in the SW part of the U.S., near the Petrified Forest.

Petrikau (pä'trē.kou). German name of Piotrków.

Petrillo (pe.tril'ō), James Caesar. b. at Chicago, 1892.—American labor leader, head of the musicians' union. As a child he learned to play the trumpet; and, having left school at an early age, he earned his living in various occupations, but eventually came to rely on music and to that end joined the independent American Musicians' Union, of which he became president in 1915. In 1918 he switched his allegiance to the American Federation of Musicians, becoming president of a local of that organization at Chicago in 1922. Petrillo has frequently resorted to strikes on a large scale to combat the effects of "canned music" in throwing musicians out of employment, and to secure for the performing musicians a share of the profits accruing from the widespread and repeated performance of recorded music.

Petro-Alexandrovsk (pe'trō.älik.sän'drōfsk). Former name of Turtkui.

Petrodvorets (pe'tr.dvo.rets'). [Former name, Peterhof.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Gulf of Finland ab. 15 mi. W of Leningrad. It is noted as the site of the imperial palace, built by Peter the Great, of interest from the great quantity of works of art of all kinds and of historical relics which were collected in it, as well as for the beautiful gardens with their fountains and statues. It was almost totally destroyed by the Germans during World War II. 28,000 (1935).

Petrograd (pe'trō.grad; Russian, pi.trō.grät'). A former name of Leningrad.

Petrokov (pi.trō.kof'). Russian name of Piotrków.

Petrokrepost (pe'trō.kre'pōst). [Former name, Shliselburg; German, Schlisselburg.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, formerly a fortress (used as a prison), situated at the exit of the Neva River from Lake Ladoga, ab. 30 mi. E of Leningrad: cotton-textile industry; other light industries. Ivan VI was imprisoned (1756-64) here. During World War II it was taken by the Germans late in 1941, thus temporarily sealing off Leningrad from its land approaches on the E. Pop. ab. 6,000.

Petrolia (pe'trōl'ya). Town in S Ontario, Canada, ab. 15 mi. SE of Sarnia. It was at one time the center of an active oil-drilling region but the majority of the wells are now yielding relatively small quantities. 3,105 (1951).

Petrolini (pä.trō.lē'nē), Ettore. b. at Rome, 1886; d. there, June 29, 1936. Italian comedian. A direct heir to the tradition of the commedia dell'arte, he began his career in the variety shows of the various Italian music halls and soon graduated to one-act farces suited to his broad comic style. His only classical role was that of Petruccio in The Taming of the Shrew. In 1933, he appeared in a series of one-act farces at London and then toured South America.

Petronel Flash (pe'trō.nel' flash), Sir. See Flash, Sir Petronel.

Petronell (pä.trō.nel'). Market village in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, on the Danube River ab. 23 mi. SE of Vienna. Nearby are the ruins of the ancient Roman camp of Carnuntum. 1,122 (1946).

Petronia (pe'trō.nī.a). Ancient name of Péronne.

Petronius Arbitrator (pe'trō.nī.us ār'bi.tēr), Gaius. d. probably c66 A.D. Roman author, often identified with a certain Gaius Petronius mentioned by Tacitus. This Petronius was one of the emperor Nero's companions, formerly proconsul in Bithynia, and was made by the emperor arbiter at his luxurious court in matters of taste. From his title in this post, Arbiter Elegantiae (Arbiter of Elegance), stems the identification with the writer. Petronius's influence aroused the jealousy of Tigellinus, prefect of the Praetorian Guard, and he carried tales about Petronius to the emperor. When Petronius subsequently received an order to remain in a sort of house arrest at Cumae, he committed suicide by opening his veins and dying slowly and quietly while his friends feasted about him. The Satyricon attributed to him is a vivid and elegantly written portrayal, in alternating prose and verse, of Roman life of the time, existing now only in fragments. Among these the largest is the Cena Trimalchionis (Trimalchio's Feast), depicting a feast tendered by vulgar rich man; the story of the Matron of Ephesus is another of the surviving episodes.

Petronius Maximus (mak'si.mūs). d. 455 A.D. Roman emperor for three months in 455. He was a member of the higher Roman nobility. According to the commonly related story, he placed himself at the head of a band of disaffected persons, killed the emperor Valentinian III, seized the throne (455), and forced Eudoxia, Valentinian's widow, to marry him (his own wife having in the meantime died). Eudoxia, however, is said to have appealed to Genseric, king of the Vandals, who pillaged Rome. Petronius Maximus was killed by a band of Burgundian mercenaries as he was fleeing from his capital.

Petrovavlovsk (pe'trō.pāv'lofsk). City in the U.S.S.R., in N Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, in W Siberia, situated on the Ishim River ab. 180 mi. W of Omsk; a junction point on the Trans-Siberian Railroad, it has meat-packing and other food industries. 91,678 (1939).

Petrovavlovsk. [Also, Petrovavlovsk-Kamchatski (-kām.chät'ski).] Seaport in E U.S.S.R., in the Khabarovsk Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the E coast of the Kamchatka peninsula: fishing port and fish-canning center, with one of the finest natural harbors in the world. 7,500 (1934).

Petrópolis (pe.trô.pô.lēs). Mountain resort and former summer capital of Brazil, in the state of Rio de Janeiro, in the SE part of the country. Founded in 1844, it was the residence of Dom Pedro I. Elevation, ab. 2,800 ft.; pop. 61,843 (1953).

Petros (pē'tros). Greek form of Peter.

Petrosani (pe.trô.shān', -shā'nē). [Also: Petroseni (-shān', -shā'nē); Hungarian, Petrosényi; German, Petroschen (pā'trô.shēn).] Town in NW Rumania, in the province of Transylvania, ab. 50 mi. SW of Sibiu; coal and iron mines. 14,138 (1948).

Petrouchka (pi.trôsh'ka). Ballet by Igor Stravinsky, first performed at Paris in 1911, with Váslav Nijinsky and Tamara Karsavina in the leading roles. It was brought (1913) to the U.S. by Sergei Diaghilev. Arranged as an orchestral suite, it was first played in that form in 1914.

Petrov (pe'trûf), Racho. b. at Shumen, Turkey (in territory now part of Bulgaria), 1861—, Bulgarian military and political leader, prime minister (1900–01, 1903–06).

Petrov (pi.trôf'), Yevgeny. [Pen name of Yevgeny Petrovich Katayev.] b. at Odessa, Russia, 1903; d. at Sevastopol, Russia, July 2, 1942. Russian humorist, junior partner of the literary team of which the other member was Ilya Ilf; brother of Valentin Katayev. A correspondent at the front during World War II, Petrov was killed during the siege of Sevastopol. One of his comedies was published posthumously.

Petrovac (pe'trô.vats), Bosanski. See Bosanski Petrovac.

Petrovaradin (pe'trô.vā.rā'dēn). [Hungarian, Pétevárád; German, Peterwardein.] Town in N Yugoslavia, in the region of Srem, the autonomous province of Vojvodina, and the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dunavska, situated on a hill overlooking the Danube River, opposite the city of Novi Sad, ab. 45 mi. NW of Belgrade. The town consists of an upper and lower part and is dominated by a strong fortress which was of crucial importance during the Turkish wars. Here on Aug. 5, 1716, the Imperial army under Prince Eugene of Savoy defeated the Turks. It was temporarily occupied by the revolutionary Hungarians in 1848. It is a river port, and a commercial center for a rich agricultural region trading particularly in cereals, wine, and fruit. It was incorporated into Yugoslavia in 1919 and reverted to Yugoslavia after the temporary German occupation during World War II. 6,613 (1931).

Petrovgrad (pe'trôv.grād). See Zrenjanin.

Petrović (pe'trô.vich), George. Original name of Kara-george.

Petrovich (pe'trô.vich), Nicholas. See Nicholas I (of Montenegro).

Petrovics (pe'trô.vēch), Sándor (or Alexander). Original name of Petőfi, Sándor (or Alexander).

Petrovna (pi.trôv'na), Anna. See Anna Petrovna.

Petrovna, Elizabeth (or Elizaveta). See Elizabeth Petrovna.

Petrovsk (pi.trôf'sk'). Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Saratov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Medveditsa River ab. 50 mi. NW of Saratov; food-processing center. Pop. 17,000 (1933).

Petrovsk. Former name of Makhachkala.

Petrozavodsk (pe'trô.zā.vôtsk'). City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on Lake Onega ab. 185 mi. NE of Leningrad. It has manufactures of quality steels, machinery, wood products, and gas generators; mica is also mined and processed. It has a cannon foundry, established by Peter the Great in 1703, and other industries. In World War II it was captured by the Finns in 1941 and was occupied by Finnish and German armies until June, 1944; the city suffered severe damage. 69,728 (1939).

Petrozényi (pe'trô.zhāny'). Hungarian name of Petrosani.

Petruchio (pē.trô'chi.ō, -ki.ō). In Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, the rough wooer and tamer of Katharina. He subdues her by meeting turbulence with turbulence, but remains, however, entirely good-natured himself. John Fletcher introduces him in The Woman's Prize, or the Tamer Tamed as the henpecked husband of a second wife, Maria.

Petrunkévitch (pe.trûn.ke'vich), Alexander. b. at Pliski, Russia, Dec. 22, 1875—. American zoologist and writer. He served as professor (1917–44) at Yale. Author of Free Will (1905), Terrestrial Palaeozoic Arachnida of North America (1913), The Russian Revolution (1917), An Inquiry into the Natural Classification of Spiders (1933), A Study of Amber Spiders (1942), Palaeozoic Arachnida of Illinois (1945), Choice and Responsibility (1947), and other books.

Petrus (pē'trus). Latin form of Peter.

Petrus Arctedius (ark.tē'di.us). Latinized name of Artesi, Peter.

Petrus Blesensis (blē.sen'sis). Latinized name of Peter of Blois.

Petrus d'Alliaco (dal.yā'kō). Latinized name of Ailly, Pierre d'.

Petrus Hispanus (his.pā'nus). See Pope John XXI (or XX).

Petrus Lombardus (lom.bār'dus). Latinized name of Lombard, Peter.

Petrus Platenius (pla.ten'sis). Latinized name of Rue, Pierre (or Pierchon) de la.

Petrus Waldus (wof'dus). Latinized name of Waldo or Valdo, Peter.

Petržalka (pe'tēr.zhāl.kā). [German, Engerau.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Bratislava, SW Slovakia, situated on the S bank of the Danube River near the Austrian and Hungarian borders; suburb of Bratislava. It has industries producing steel and rubber goods. 11,618 (1947).

Petsch (pech), Robert. b. 1875—. German historian of literature, professor at the University of Hamburg.

Petsche (petsh), Maurice. b. Dec. 1, 1895; d. 1951. French politician, minister of finance and economic affairs (1949). He represented France at various international conferences (1920–22), was a deputy (1925 et seq.), and was a member of the Peasants' Party under the Fourth Republic. He was minister of state (1951) in the Plevin cabinet.

Petsik (pet'sik). [Also, Pehtsik.] Collective name, meaning "up stream," applied to a certain group of Karok Indians formerly situated up the Klamath River from the Weitspek Indians, a Yurok group, whose village (Weitspek) was situated at the confluence of the Klamath and Trinity rivers in NW California.

Pettau (pet'ou). German name of Ptuj.

Pettenkofer (pet'en.kô.fēr), Max Joseph von. b. near Neuburg, Bavaria, Germany, Dec. 3, 1818; committed suicide near Munich, Feb. 10, 1901. German chemist and physiologist, noted for his researches in hygiene, especially in ventilation, the spread of cholera, sewage disposal, and the like.

Petterson (pet'ers.sôn), Sven Otto. b. at Göteborg, Sweden, 1848; d. 1914. Swedish inorganic chemist, oceanographer, and meteorologist. With L. Nilson, he obtained the first fairly pure titanium (1887), and further investigated metallic titanium and germanium.

Pettie (pet'i), George. b. 1548; d. at Plymouth, Devonshire, England, in July, 1589. English writer of prose romances. He was the author of a work important for the part it played in developing Elizabethan prose fiction, A Pettie Palace of Pettie his Pleasure, containing many pretty Hystories by him, set forth in Comely Colours, and most Delightfully Discovred (1576), an imitation of William Painter's Palace of Pleasure (1567), and written in the ornate style later further developed by John Lyly. He was also the translator of Guazzo's Civile Conversation (1581).

Pettie, John. b. at Edinburgh, March 17, 1839; d. at Hastings, England, Feb. 21, 1893. British historical, genre, and portrait painter. He first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1860. Among his pictures are What d'ye Lack? (1862), A Drumhead Court Martial (1865), An Arrest for Witchcraft (1866; this picture decided the Academy to elect him to an associateship; he was made a full member in 1873), Jacobites, 1745 (1873), and A Knight of the Seventeenth Century, a portrait of William Black (1887).

Pettigrew (pet'i.grô), James Johnston. b. in Tyrrel County, N.C., July 4, 1828; killed in action near Winchester, Va., July 17, 1863. American Confederate general in the Civil War. He became brigadier general in 1862, and commanded Heth's division during the third day's fight at the Battle of Gettysburg, taking part in Pickett's charge (July 3, 1863).

Pettigrew, James Louis. Original name of Petigru, James Louis.

Pettus (pet'us), Edmund Winston. b. in Limestone County, Ala., July 6, 1821; d. July 27, 1907. American lawyer and statesman, U.S. senator from Alabama (1897-1907).

Petty (pet'i), Sir William. b. at Romsey, Hampshire, England, May 26, 1623; d. at London, Dec. 16, 1687. English statistician and political economist. He retired to the Continent on the outbreak of the civil war, returning to England in 1646. In 1651 he was professor of anatomy at Oxford. In 1652 he was appointed physician to the army in Ireland, and c1654 executed by contract a fresh survey, commonly known as the Down Survey, of the forfeited Irish lands granted to soldiers. He bought large tracts of land and established various industries. After the Restoration in 1660 he was knighted. In 1663 he invented a double-bottomed ship. He is best remembered as an economist and early statistician. He criticized the bullionist mercantile theory and stated instead that price is fixed by the labor necessary in production. He was a firm advocate of union with Ireland. He wrote Treatise of Taxes and Contributions (1662-85), Political Arithmetic (1683 and 1686), Political Anatomy of Ireland (1676; printed 1691), and others.

Petty, Sir William. See Lansdowne, 1st Marquis of.

Petty-Fitzmaurice (-fits.mə'ris). Full family name of the various Marquises of Lansdowne descended from Sir William Petty, 1st Marquis of Lansdowne, the great-grandson of Sir William Petty (1623-87).

Petza (pet'sä). See Spetsai.

Petzold (pet'solt), Alfons. b. at Vienna, Sept. 24, 1882; d. at Kitzbühel, Tirol, Austria, Jan. 26, 1949. Austrian writer, best known for his lyrics on social themes (Arbeiterdichtung). He also produced some very powerful prose works, for example, the autobiographical novel Das rauhe Leben (1920).

Petzoldt (pet'solt), Joseph. b. at Altenburg, Germany, Nov. 6, 1862; d. at Spandau, Germany, Aug. 1, 1929. German positivistic philosopher. Author of Einführung in die Philosophie der reinen Erfahrung (1900-04), Das Weltproblem vom Standpunkt des relativistischen Positivismus aus (1906), and Die Stellung der Relativitätstheorie in der geistigen Entwicklung der Menschheit (1921).

Peucer (poi'tser), Kaspar. b. at Bautzen, Saxony, Germany, Jan. 8, 1525; d. at Dessau, Germany, Sept. 25, 1602. German physician and Protestant theologian; son-in-law of Philip Melancthon. He was imprisoned (1574-86) as one of the leaders of the crypto-Calvinistic movement.

Peucker (poi'kér), Eduard von. b. at Schmiedeberg (now Kowary), in Silesia, Jan. 19, 1791; d. at Berlin, Feb. 10, 1876. German general, commander of the army against the Baden insurrectionists in 1849.

Peuhl (pä.öl'). See Fulani.

Peuple Français (pèpl frän.sä), Rassemblement du. See Rassemblement du Peuple Français.

Peutingér (poi'ting.ér), Konrad. b. at Augsburg, Germany, Oct. 14, 1465; d. there, Dec. 24, 1547. German antiquary. He is best known for his discovery of an ancient map of the military roads in the Roman Empire, called for him Tabula Peutingeriana (1753).

Peva (pä.vä). See Peba.

Pevensey (pev'en.zi, -si). [Latin, Anderida.] Civil parish, market village, and small seaport in SE England, in East Sussex, on the English Channel, ab. 4 mi. NE of Eastbourne, ab. 65 mi. SE of London by rail. The walls of the Roman fort Anderida still remain. Pevensey also has the ruins of a castle, built soon after the Norman conquest. 793 (1931).

Pevensy, Viscount. A title of Compton, Spencer (c1673-1743).

Peveril of the Peak (pev'ér.il). Historical novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1823.

Pevsner (pefs'nér), Antoine. b. at Orel, Russia, 1886—Russian painter. He worked for a time at Paris, was influenced by cubism, and knew Archipenko and Modigliani. In 1914 he went to Oslo, and returned to Russia with his brother in 1917, where they collaborated in 1920 on The Realistic Manifesto of Constructivism. Pevsner then taught constructivism in Russia.

Peyer (pi'ér), Johann Konrad. b. at Schaffhausen, Switzerland, Dec. 26, 1653; d. Feb. 29, 1712. Swiss anatomist, the discoverer of Peyer's glands in the small intestine.

Peyerimhoff (pä.e.rañ.of), Henri de. [Full name, Henri de Peyerimhoff de Fontenelle.] b. at Colmar, France, Sept. 19, 1871—French industrialist, a leader of the coal-mining industry in France. He was president of the Comité Central des Houillères de France.

Peyrolé (pä.röl), Germaine. b. at Montaigne, Jura, France, March 22, 1902—French political leader and lawyer, active in the Resistance during World War II. A leader of the Mouvement Républicain Populaire, she was a deputy (1945 et seq.), and was elected (1946) vice-president of the National Assembly.

Peyronet or Peyronnet (pä.rö.ne), Charles Ignace, Comte de. b. at Bordeaux, France, Oct. 9, 1778; d. at Montferand, near Bordeaux, Jan. 2, 1854. French politician. He was minister of justice (1821-28) and minister of the interior (1830). He signed the "July" ordinances suppressing the free press, dissolving the chamber elected in May, and instituting an electoral system designed to return a rightist majority; this led to the revolution of July, and Peyronet was imprisoned at Ham (1830-36).

Peyronnet (pä.rö.ne), Dominique-Paul. b. at Talence, France, 1872—French primitive painter. He did not start to paint until 1920. From 1902 he had been a commercial printer, very successful in printing color lithographs. During World War I he was gassed, and he retired from his business in 1920. His first paintings were small woodland scenes, and his work is suggestive of that of Henri Rousseau.

Peyrouton (pä.rö.tôn), Marcel B. c1888—French colonial administrator and politician, who as minister of interior (1940) in the Vichy government introduced anti-Semitic decrees into France. Resident general (1933-36) in Tunisia and in Morocco (1936), he was ambassador (1936-40) to Argentina, returned (1940) to Tunisia as resident general, served (1941-42) as ambassador to Argentina, returned to North Africa after the American invasion, becoming (1943) governor general of Algeria, and was acquitted (December, 1948) of treason charges.

Peyster (pis'tér). See De Peyster.

Peza (pä.sä), Juan de Dios. b. at Mexico City, 1852; d. 1910. Mexican poet, coauthor of Tradiciones y leyendas mexicanas (1884). He also wrote Fusiles y muñecas, En mi barrio, El visitador Muñoz, and other lyrics notable for their expression of family affection.

Pézenas (pä.z.näs). [Latin, Penninae.] Town in S France, in the department of Hérault, on the Hérault River ab. 25 mi. SW of Montpellier. It is a center for the wine and liquor trade. Molière wrote his comedy Les Précieuses Ridicules here. 6,397 (1946).

Pezet (pä.sét'), Juan Antonio. b. at Lima, Peru, 1810; d. there, 1879. Peruvian general and politician, president (1863-65) of Peru. Soon after his inauguration, Spain demanded from Peru a large indemnity for alleged injuries. Pezet tried to temporize, and on Jan. 27, 1865, agreed to an arrangement to which the Peruvian people were strongly opposed; this led to a revolt, and Pezet, to avoid a civil war, resigned on Nov. 6, 1865.

Pezuela (pä.thwä.lä), Joaquín de la. [Title, Marquis of Viluma.] b. in Aragon, Spain, 1761; d. at Madrid, 1830. Spanish general and administrator. In 1816 he was made viceroy of Peru, assuming office on July 7. Owing to his ill success in checking the patriots under José de San Martín, he was deposed by his own officers, Jan. 29, 1821, and soon after returned to Spain, where he published a defense of his conduct.

Pezza (pet'sä), Michele. See Fra Diavolo.

Pfäfers (pä'färs) or Pfeffers (pfe'färs). Village and spa in NE Switzerland, in the canton of St. Gallen, situated on the Tamina River. The Benedictine abbey, founded c740, with buildings from the end of the 17th century, is now an asylum for the insane. 2,010 (1941).

Pfaff (päf), Christian Heinrich. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, March 2, 1773; d. at Kiel, Germany, April 24, 1852. German physicist and chemist; brother of Johann Friedrich Pfaff.

Pfaff, Johann Friedrich. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Dec. 22, 1765; d. at Halle, Germany, April 21, 1825. German mathematician, contributor to geometry, analysis, and astronomy, best known for "Pfaff's problem" in differential equations; brother of Christian Heinrich Pfaff. His works include Disquisitiones analyticae (1797) and Allgemeine Methode, partielle Differentialgleichungen zu integrieren (1815).

Pfaffe Amis (pfä'f'e ä-mës'), Der. German name of Amis the Parson.

Pfaffenhofen (pfä'f'en.hö.fen). [Also, Pfaffenhofen an der Ilm (än der ilm).] Town in S Germany, in the Land state of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Ilm River ab. 28 mi. N of Munich. Trade center of a hops and grain growing district, it has breweries and small industries. Here on April 15, 1745, the Austrians under Károly Batthyány defeated the French and Bavarians; and on April 19, 1809, the French under Nicolas Charles Oudinot defeated the Austrians. 6,978 (1946).

Pfahlgraben (pfäl'grä.ben). Long line of fortifications built by the Romans c70 A.D. for protection against the Germans. They extended from Regensburg NW to Giessen, Ems, and Hönningen. The chief fort was the Saalburg. The S part is sometimes called the Devil's Wall.

Pfalz (pfälts). See under Rhineland-Palatinate.

Pfalzburg (pfälts'bürk). German name of Phalsburg.

Pfannenstiel (pfän'en.sh'tel), Hermann Johannes. b. at Berlin, June 28, 1862; d. at Kiel, Germany, July 3, 1909. German gynecologist. He studied pathology of the ovaries, tumors of the uterus, and carcinoma after ovariectomy, and described (1900) an incision for entering the abdominal cavity to avoid scarring (called Pfannenstiel's incision).

Pfaundler (pfoun'dler), Meinhard von. b. at Innsbruck, Austria, June 7, 1872; d. at Ötz, Tirol, Austria, July 20, 1947. German pediatrician. He explored disorders arising from nutritional errors, studied the motility of the stomach in nurslings, described filariation, the so-called Pfaundler's reaction (1898), which is shown by the typhoid and proteus bacilli, and described (1920) a syndrome of congenital multiple symmetrical skeletal deformities with disturbance of lipid metabolism.

Pfeffers (pfef'ers). See Pfäfers.

Pfeiffer (pfif'ër), Franz. b. at Solothurn, Switzerland, Feb. 27, 1815; d. at Vienna, May 29, 1868. German philologist. He is best known for editions of medieval German works, including German Mystics of the 14th Century and others.

Pfeiffer, Ida Laura. [Maiden name, Reyer.] b. at Vienna, Oct. 15, 1797; d. there, Oct. 28, 1858. Austrian traveler and writer of travels. She traveled in Asiatic Turkey and Egypt in 1842, in Scandinavia and Iceland in 1845, around the world (1846-48, and again 1851-54), in Madagascar (1856-58), where she was imprisoned, and elsewhere. She published Reise einer Wienerin in das Heilige Land (Journey of a Viennese to the Holy Land, 1843), Reise nach dem skandinavischen Norden (Journey to the Scandinavian North, 1846), Eine Frauenfahrt um die Welt (A Woman's Journey Round the World, 1850), Zweite Weltreise (Second Journey Round the World, 1856), and Reise nach Madagascar (Journey to Madagascar, 1861).

Pfeiffer, Richard Friedrich Johannes. b. at Zduny, near Posen, Germany (now Poznań, Poland), March 27, 1858—. German bacteriologist. He was director (1891 et seq.) of the scientific department of the institute of contagious diseases at Berlin, and served as professor of hygiene (1894 et seq.). He participated in the investigation of plague in India (1897) and of malaria in Italy (1898). He became professor at Königsberg (1899) and at Breslau (1909). He discovered (1894) that the peritoneal fluids of immunized guinea pigs would dissolve cholera vibrios that had been introduced into the abdomen (bacteriolysis), introduced (1893) blood agar for the cultivation of bacteria, reported (1894) immunization of man against typhoid fever by the use of killed cultures, and detected a few vibrios by using the dark field in direct sunlight.

Pfister (pfis'tër), Albrecht. b. c.1420; d. c.1470. One of the earliest German printers, presumed, probably erroneously, to have set the Bible of 36 lines, known as Pfister's Bible.

Pfützner (pfits'nër), Hans. b. at Moscow, May 5, 1869; d. May 22, 1949. German musician, municipal music director (1908) and director of the Conservatory (1908 et seq.) at Strasbourg, a position formerly held by Franz Stockhausen. He was music director (1910-16) of the Strasbourg Municipal Opera, directed (1919-20) the subscription concerts of the Munich Concert Society, and taught (1920 et seq.) master classes in composition at various institutions.

Pfizer (pfë'tser), Paul Achatius. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 12, 1801; d. at Tübingen, Germany, July 30, 1867. German publicist and liberal politician.

Pfanzner-Baltin (pfän'tser.bäl'tin), Baron Karl von. b. at Fünfkirchen, Austria, June 1, 1855; d. at Vienna, April 8, 1925. Austro-Hungarian general. He defended the eastern Carpathians in World War I, was defeated by the Russians under Brusilov, and later commanded on the Italian and Albanian fronts.

Pfeiderer (pfif'dër'ër), Edmund. b. at Stetten, near Caustadt, Germany, Oct. 12, 1842; d. at Tübingen, Germany, April 3, 1902. German philosopher. Author of Der moderne Pessimismus (1875), Eudamismus und Egoismus (1883), Letzte philosophische Weltanschauung (1882), and Sokrates und Plato (1896).

Pfeiderer, Otto. b. at Stettin, Germany, Sept. 1, 1839; d. at Grossichterfelde, near Berlin, July 18, 1908. German liberal theologian.

Pfämlin (flah.län), Pierre. b. at Roubaix, Nord, France, Feb. 5, 1907—. French political leader and lawyer, a member of several cabinets after the liberation (1944) of France. A deputy (1945 et seq.) and leader of the Mouvement Républicain Populaire, he was minister of agriculture (1947-51), minister of commerce (1951), state minister for the Council of Europe (1952), and minister for overseas territories (1952).

Pfäuger (pfü'ger), Eduard Friedrich Wilhelm. b. June 7, 1829; d. March 16, 1910. German physiologist, professor in the University at Bonn from 1859. He demonstrated cellular respiration and investigated sensory, digestive, and metabolic phenomena. He founded and edited (1868 et seq.) the Archiv für die gesamte Physiologie.

Pfäugk-Harttung (pfük'här'tung), Julius von. b. at Warnikow, Germany, Nov. 8, 1848; d. at Berlin, Nov. 5, 1919. German historian. He served as professor (1886 et seq.) at the University of Basel, succeeding the historian Jakob Burckhardt, and later served at the archives for secret state papers at Berlin. Author of Geschichte des Mittelalters (History of Medieval Times, 1888), Die Bullen der Päpste bis zum Ende des 12. Jahrhunderts (The Papal Bulls until the End of the 12th Century, 1901), and Der Kampf um die Freiheit der Meere (The Fight for Freedom of the Seas, 1917).

Pfordten (pför'ten), Baron Ludwig Karl Heinrich von der. b. at Ried, Upper Austria, Sept. 11, 1811; d. at Munich, Aug. 18, 1880. Bavarian statesman. He was premier of Bavaria (1849-59, 1864-66).

Pfordten, Theodor von der. b. at Bayreuth, Germany, March 14, 1875; killed in Hitler's "beer-hall" putsch at Munich, Nov. 9, 1923. German Nazi writer, one of Hitler's earliest followers. Author of Tragik des Idealismus (1914).

Pforzheim (pförts'him). City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the state of Baden, on the Nagold River ab. 15 mi. SE of Karlsruhe: said to be the Roman Porta Hercyniae. It is an important manufacturing center, specializing in the manufacture of costume jewelry, silverware, watches, chains, and similar small metal articles; there are also diamond-polishing and printing establishments, and machine, enamelware, plastics, paper, and furniture factories. However, many of the former export markets have been lost and the population has steadily declined since World War I. The decline in the period 1939-46 was 40.8 percent. The city was destroyed by the French in 1689, and has only a few churches from the medieval period. It was the birthplace of Johann Reuchlin. Heavy damage was done in World War II. Pop. 54,143 (1950).

Phact (fakt). Second-magnitude star α Columbae.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; πη, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Phaeacia (fē.ā'shā). Unknown island in Greek legend, inhabited by a seafaring people who were traditionally hospitable to other seafarers. In the Odyssey, Odysseus was shipwrecked on its shores while returning from Troy to Ithaca, and was succored and entertained by its king and his daughter, Nausicaa. It is sometimes identified with Corfu.

Phaed (fā'ēd) or Phedda (fēk'dā). Second-magnitude star γ Ursae Majoris, the star in the base of the dipper nearest the handle.

Phaedo (fē'dō) or Phaedon (fē'don). b. at Elis, Greece; fl. in the first part of the 4th century B.C. Greek philosopher, a disciple of Socrates. His name is given to a celebrated dialogue of Plato, which purports to be the last conversation of Socrates, with an account of his death.

Phaedra (fē'drā). See also Hippolytus.

Phaedra. In Greek legend, the daughter of king Minos of Crete and Pasiphae; sister of Ariadne, and wife of Theseus, noted for her love for her stepson Hippolytus. She was repulsed by Hippolytus, and accused him to Theseus, thus securing his death. When his innocence became known, she committed suicide. She was the subject of tragedies by Euripides, Seneca, and Racine, and of a lost tragedy by Sophocles.

Phaedrus (fē'drus). fl. 5th century B.C. Athenian philosopher. He was a friend of Socrates, and is immortalized in the name of one of Plato's dialogues, the Phaedrus. In this, thought to be one of Plato's early works, and noted as one of the most poetic, certain types of Greek rhetoric are attacked; the preexistence and immortality of the soul are asserted; and the doctrine of the transmigration of souls is expounded.

Phaedrus. fl. in the first half of the 1st century A.D. Roman fabulist, originally a Macedonian slave. His five books of fables, in verse, are apparently renderings of Aesopian fables current in his day. Phaedrus was the principal medieval source for the fables of Aesop.

Phaer or Phayer (fār, fā'ēr). Thomas. b. c1510; d. at Kilgeran, Pembrokehire, Wales, 1560. English translator. In 1558 he published his translation of the Seven First Books of the Aeneid of Virgil. He had begun the tenth book when he died; nine books were published in 1562. He also wrote on various subjects, including law and medicine.

Phaethon (fā'ē.thon). In Greek mythology, the son of Helios, the sun god. Phaethon longed to drive his father's chariot (the sun) across the sky, but, being unable to check the horses, nearly set the earth on fire. The situation was saved by Zeus, who struck the youth with a thunderbolt. Phaethon fell in flames into the Po (ancient Eridanus) River.

Phaethon, or Loose Thoughts for Loose Thinkers. Work by Charles Kingsley, published in 1852.

Phalaris (fal'ā.ris). Tyrant of Agrigentum in Sicily from c570 to c534 B.C., notorious for his cruelty (notably his human sacrifices in a heated brazen bull). The inventor of the bull was the first victim to be roasted alive. The spuriousness of some 148 epistles which passed under his name was shown by the classical scholar Richard Bentley in his Epistles of Phalaris (1697).

Phalereus (fā.lē.rōs, fā.lir'ē.us), Demetrius. See Demetrius Phalereus.

Phaleron (fā.lir'on) or Phalerum (fā.lir'um). In ancient geography, a seaport in Attica, Greece, on a small bay S of Athens and E of Piræus.

Phalsbourg (fāls.bör). [German, Pfalzburg.] Town in E. France, in the department of Moselle, in the northernmost part of the Vosges Mountains, ab. 27 mi. NW of Strasbourg. Ceded to France in the 17th century, it was fortified by Vauban. 3,093 (1916).

Phanagoria (fan.ā.gō'ri.ā). In ancient geography, a Greek colony situated on the peninsula now called Taman, opposite the Crimea.

Phanariots (fā.nar'i.ōts). [Also, Fanariots.] Residents of a quarter of Constantinople known as Fanar; hence, the members of a class of aristocratic Greeks, chiefly resident in the Fanar quarter, who held important official positions under the Turks, and furnished hospodars (governors) of Moldavia and Walachia.

Phansigars (fan'si.garz). See Thugs.

Phantasiasts (fan.tā'zi.asts). See Apthartodocetae. Phantassus (fan.tā.zūs). Pseudonym of Maximilian Joseph.

Phaon (fā'on). Boatman of Mytilene, loved by the poetess Sappho. According to the legend, when old and ugly he carried the goddess Aphrodite across the sea and would accept no payment. For this she rewarded him with youth and beauty. Sappho is said to have leaped into the sea because her love for him was not returned.

Pharae (fā'rē, fār'ē). Ancient name of Kalamata.

Pharamond (fār.ā.mond). Legendary king of France, noted in the Arthurian cycle of romance. He is said to have been the first king of the Franks, and his reign has been placed between 420 and 428.

Pharamond, ou l'histoire de France (fā.rā.mōn, ō lēs.twār de frāns). Novel by Gautier de Costes de La Calprenède, published in 1661.

Pharaoh (fār'ō, fār'ō, fār'ā.ō). Title given to the ancient Egyptian kings, meaning "great house." Among those mentioned in the Old Testament are a contemporary of Abraham (Gen. 12-20); the patron and friend of Joseph (Gen. 39-47); the oppressor of the Hebrews, perhaps Ramses II (Ex. 1); the Pharaoh who reigned at the time of the Exodus, perhaps Merneptah (Ex. 12); Pharaoh Necho; Pharaoh Hophra or Apries; Shishak or Sheshonk; and Tirhakah or Tarhaka.

Pharaoh-Nechoh or Pharaoh-Necoh (-nē'kō). See Necho.

Phare Pleigh (fār plā). Pseudonym of Wiggins, James Henry.

Pharisees (far'i.sēz). Ancient Jewish school, sect, or party which was specially exact in its interpretation and observance of the law, both canonical and traditional. In doctrine the Pharisees held to the resurrection of the body, the existence of angels and spirits, the providence and decrees of God, the canonicity and authority of Scripture, and the authority of ecclesiastical tradition; politically they were intensely Jewish, though not constituting a distinct political party; morally they were scrupulous in the observance of the ritual and regulations of the law, both written and oral. The Pharisees antagonized John Hyrcanus I (135-105 B.C.), and as religious reformers bitterly opposed the corruptions which had entered Judaism from the pagan religions. The name means "Separatists," indicating that they emphasized the Old Testament ideal of a nation set apart from its neighbors by virtue of obedience to the true religion. In support of the authority of the law, and to provide for the many questions which it did not directly answer, they adopted the theory of an oral tradition given by God to Moses. Popular tradition has made their name synonymous with the hypocritical and self-righteous, but this, stemming from the New Testament, does not take into account that Jesus attacked not the Pharisees as a group but only the hypocrites among them.

Pharnabazus (fār.nā.bā'zus). fl. c400 B.C. Persian satrap in Asia Minor. He was allied with Sparta against Athens during the last part of the Peloponnesian War, and aided (394 B.C.) the Athenians under Conon against Sparta. He attempted (385 and 373 B.C.) unsuccessfully to invade Egypt.

Pharnaces (fār.nā.sēz). King of Pontus (c190-160 B.C.). He conquered Sinope in 183.

Pharnaces II. d. 47 B.C. King of Pontus (c63-47 B.C.); son of Mithridates VI (Mithridates the Great) of Pontus. On the suicide of Mithridates in 63 B.C., he revolted and made himself master of that part of his father's dominions lying along the Cimmerian Bosphorus. He afterward invaded Pontus, but was defeated by Caesar at Zela in 47. It was after this battle that Caesar, elated at the ease with which he had won, sent his famous report to Rome: "Veni, vidi, vici" (I came, I saw, I conquered).

Pharnake (fār'nā.kē). See under Apamea, Syria.

Pharnakeia (fār.nā.kē'ā). Ancient name of Giresun, town.

Pharos (fār'ōs, fār'os). See also Hvar.

Pharos. Island opposite ancient Alexandria, on which Ptolemy I and Ptolemy II erected a celebrated lighthouse, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

Pharpar (fār.pār). In Biblical geography, a river in Damascus; the modern Awaj.

Pharr (fär). City in S Texas, in Hidalgo County, SW of Corpus Christi; shipping center for an irrigated citrus fruit and vegetable producing region. 8,690 (1950).

Pharsala (fär.sä.lä). See Pharsalus.

Pharsalia (fär.sä.lä). Epic poem in ten books, by Lucan (Marcus Annæus Lucanus), on the civil war between Pompey and Caesar.

Pharsalus (fär.sä.us). In ancient geography, a city in Thessaly, Greece, ab. 23 mi. S of Larissa; the modern Pharsala. It is celebrated for the great battle fought near it, Aug. 9, 48 B.C., in which Caesar with 22,000 legionaries and 1,000 cavalry totally defeated Pompey and his army of 45,000 legionaries and 7,000 cavalry.

Pharus (fä.rus, fär.us). See Hvar.

Phaselis (fä.së.lis). In ancient geography, a seaport in Lycia, Asia Minor, situated on the W shore of the Pamphylian Gulf (the modern Gulf of Antalya).

Phases of English Poetry. Critical study by Herbert Reed, published in 1928.

Phasianus (fä.zi.ä.nus). Original name of Pope John XVIII.

Phasis (fä'sis). Ancient name of the Rion.

Phaulkon (fö'l'kon), Constant (or Constantine). b. 1650; d. 1688. Greek adventurer who achieved political power in Siam. As factor for the British sea captain George White (whom he had previously served as cabin boy), he came to Siam in 1675, grew rich by trading operations in disregard of the East India Company's claim to monopoly, was appointed superintendent of foreign trade by the Siamese king, and threw a large part of that trade to the French. After embracing Roman Catholicism he was knighted by the Pope and made a count of France. In 1688, during a serious illness of the king, a pretender to the throne succeeded by a coup d'état and swept away the political and administrative power which Phaulkon had achieved. Phaulkon, failing to secure assistance from French troops, was arrested for treason and executed. However, some of his descendants continued to fill important offices in Siam through the 18th century.

Phayer (fär, fä'ër), Thomas. See Phaer, Thomas.

Phazania (fä.zä.ni.ä). Ancient name of Fezzan.

Phebo (fä'bō), Donzel del. Knight of the Sun, a famous character in the old Spanish romances, reproduced in The Mirror of Knighthood, one of the Amadis cycle of romances.

Phecdra (jek'dä). See Phaed.

Phèdre (fèdr). Tragedy by Jean Baptiste Racine, produced Jan. 1, 1677. It was founded on the story of Phaedra. Within a week another play, Phèdre et Hippolyte, by Nicolas Pradon, was produced at the opposition theater. Owing to the tricks of a cabal, the latter play, though inferior, was a success, and Racine's masterpiece was nearly driven from the stage.

Pheidippides (fi.dip'i.déz). fl. 490 B.C. Athenian athlete. When the Persians landed at Marathon, Pheidippides was sent as a courier from Athens to Sparta, asking the latter city's help against the invader. According to Herodotus, he covered the distance of about 150 miles in two days. Pheidippides is sometimes confused with the runner, whose name is not preserved, who brought to Athens the news of the Greek victory at Marathon.

Phélippeaux (fä.lë.pō), Jean Frédéric. See Maurepas, Jean Frédéric Phélippeaux, Comte de.

Phelps (felps), Edward John. b. at Middlebury, Vt., July 11, 1822; d. at New Haven, Conn., March 9, 1900. American jurist and diplomat; son of Samuel Shethar Phelps. He became professor of law at Yale in 1881, and was U.S. minister to Great Britain (1885-89). He was chief U.S. counsel in the Bering Sea seal arbitration of 1893 and made a closing speech that took 11 days to deliver.

Phelps, Elizabeth Stuart. See Ward, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

Phelps, Oliver. b. near Poquonock, Conn., Oct. 21, 1749; d. Feb. 21, 1809. American land speculator and merchant. He served (1777-83) as superintendent of purchases of army supplies for Massachusetts, was a member (1778-80) of the state legislature, was a member (1779-80) of the Constitutional Convention, and sat (1786) on the governor's council. Together with Nathaniel Gorman, he bought (1788) the preemption rights to six million acres of land owned by Massachusetts in western New York, most of which was returned to Massachusetts after he failed to sell enough shares. He was later active in land speculation involving tracts along the lower Mississippi River and in the Western Reserve, and eventually fell into serious financial difficulties.

Phelps, Samuel. b. at Devonport, England, Feb. 13, 1804; d. near Epping, Essex, England, Nov. 6, 1878; English actor. He made his first appearance on the London stage (Haymarket) in 1837; and in 1844, in conjunction with others, he leased Sadler's Wells Theatre, playing there until 1862. He devoted himself to the revival of Shakespeare and the older dramatists, and played 30 of Shakespeare's characters, together with such parts as Sir Pertinax Macesworth in Charles Macklin's The Man of the World, in which he was celebrated.

Phelps, William Lyon. b. at New Haven, Conn., Jan. 2, 1865; d. there, Aug. 21, 1943. American educator and essayist, professor of English literature at Yale University (1901-33). He wrote The Beginnings of the English Romantic Movement (1893), Essays on Modern Novelists (1910), Essays on Russian Novelists (1911), Autobiography with Letters (1939), and other books on literature and teaching.

Phelps, William Walter. b. at New York, Aug. 24, 1839; d. at Teaneck, Englewood, N.J., June 17, 1894. American politician. He was a member of Congress from New Jersey (1873-75, 1883-89), and was U.S. minister to Austria (1881-82) and to Germany (1889-93).

Phenicia (fē.nish'ä). See Phoenicia.

Phenix (fē.niks). See Phoenix.

Phenix City. City in E Alabama, county seat of Russell County, on the Chattahoochee River opposite Columbus, Ga., ab. 75 mi. E of Montgomery; manufactures of cotton, textiles, and bricks. 23,305 (1950).

Pherae (fē'rē). In ancient geography, a city in Thessaly, Greece, ab. 25 mi. SE of Larissa. It was important in the first half of the 4th century B.C.

Pherae. Ancient name of Kalamata.

Pherecydes of Syros (fē.rē.sif'déz; s'i'ros). b. in the island of Syros; fl. in the 6th century B.C. Greek philosopher, sometimes reckoned among the Seven Wise Men of ancient Greece. Fragments of his work on cosmogony and theogony are extant. He was an Orphic and is said to have originated the doctrine of metempsychosis.

Pheretima (of Cyrene) (fē.rē.ti'mä). See under Bat-tiadae.

Pherkad (fēr'kad). Name of the third-magnitude star γ Ursae Minoris. The Arabs called the two stars β and γ Alferquadein ("the calves"), but β is usually called Kochab.

Phi Beta Kappa Society (fi bā'tä kap'ä). National honor society (nominally secret), established in various American colleges, to which students of high scholarship are admitted. It was founded at William and Mary College, in Virginia, in 1776. The first national council of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa was established in 1883. The society, with headquarters at New York, maintains districts in seven national regions. It publishes the Key Reporter (quarterly) and the American Scholar (quarterly).

Phidias (fi.dī.äs). b. probably at Athens, c500 B.C.; d. c430 B.C. Greek sculptor; the son of Charmides. He studied with Hegias of Athens, and later with Ageladas of Argos, who may have come to Athens in the time of Cimon. He became later, under Pericles, a counselor in political affairs at Athens, as well as chief sculptor, and was a sort of supervisor of public works. Among his first works were the temple of Theseus, not definitely identified with the existing building, and a group of 13 figures at Delphi, ordered by Cimon, son of Miltiades, to commemorate the victory at Marathon, in which Miltiades was represented among gods and heroes. To this early period are ascribed also the Athena Areia at Plataea, and the Athena Promachos, or bronze colossus, on the Acropolis at Athens. This figure was probably more than 30 ft. high, and could be seen for a great distance. The pedestal was discovered in 1845. The statue of Olympian Zeus at Elis, his greatest work, described by Pausanias, is supposed to have been about 42 ft. high, seated and holding a Nike (Victory) in his hand. The flesh was of ivory and the drapery of gold, with inlaid or inscribed decoration.

The throne itself, which rose above the head of the statue, was elaborately carved and decorated to the very top. Both throne and statue were surrounded with statues and paintings. By 444 B.C. Phidias must have been at Athens, and intimately associated with Pericles in his transformation of the city. All the great monuments of Athens, including the Parthenon, were erected at this time, within a period not longer than 20 years. The work of Phidias culminated in the Athena Parthenos, a chryselephantine (gold and ivory) statue of Athena in the cella of the Parthenon. It was finished and consecrated in 438. The figure was about 38 ft. high, standing, and held a Nike in her right hand. The Varakeion Athena at Athens (discovered in 1881) represents the statue, but inadequately. The enormous expense of these works, which was paid with money exacted from the allies of Athens, brought both Pericles and Phidias into difficulties. According to Plutarch, Phidias was accused of appropriating the gold devoted to the statue to his own use. The gold was removed, weighed, and found to be intact. He was then accused of sacrilege in representing Pericles and himself on the shield of the goddess. On this accusation he was condemned, thrown into prison, and died there, possibly of poison. This story, however, is doubtful. The actual style of Phidias is best represented in the well-known fragments of the frieze of the Parthenon, which easily hold the supreme place among all existing works of sculpture. Among the independent statues by Phidias was an Amazon at Ephesus which took the second prize in competition with Polykleitos. This is supposed to be represented by the Amazon Mattei of the Vatican.

Phigalia (fi.gă'li.ă). In ancient geography, a town in Arcadia, Greece, situated in lat. 37°24' N., long. 21°52' E. Near it was Bassae.

Phigalian Marbles (fi.gă'li.ăn). See under Bassae.

Philadelphia (fil.ă.del'f.ŭs). [Modern name. Alaschêr.] In ancient geography, a city in Lydia, Asia Minor, ab. 80 mi. E. of Smyrna. It contained one of the seven churches of Asia addressed in Revelation.

Philadelphia. City in E. Mississippi, county seat of Neshoba County. It is the seat of the Choctaw Indian Agency. 4,472 (1950).

Philadelphia. [Called the "Quaker City," "City of Brotherly Love."] City in SE Pennsylvania, county seat of and coextensive with Philadelphia County, at the confluence of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers; largest city in the state. Among its manufactures are such consumer goods as leather, textiles, knit goods, silk hose, men's clothing, cigars, carpets, rugs, and radios, and various port industries including heavy industries such as petroleum refineries and shipyards. It is a major railroad center, and one of the principal coal-exporting ports along the Atlantic seaboard; the second ranking port in the U.S. in terms of tonnage, in importing crude petroleum, potash, nitrate, raw sugar, bananas, wood pulp, and kaolin; and one of the principal sugar-refining and publishing centers in the country. Platted in 1682 under a patent granted to William Penn, the streets in the C part are laid out in checkerboard fashion. The meeting place of the First Continental Congress in 1774 and the seat (1775-89) of the national government, the resolution of independence was adopted here on July 2, 1776, and the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. It was the meeting place of the Constitutional Convention in 1787, the national capital from 1790 to 1800, and the capital of Pennsylvania until 1799. The first national bank was established here in 1791, and the second bank in 1816. In 1854, the city was greatly enlarged by the incorporation of the remainder of Philadelphia County, including Germantown, Manayunk, Frankford, West Philadelphia, and South Philadelphia. The Centennial Exposition of 1876 and the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition of 1926 were held here. Formerly the chief literary center of the country, and before 1800 the first city in population, it is the seat of the Academy of Music, the Curtis Institute of Music, the Philadelphia Art Alliance, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Academy of Natural Sciences, the University of Pennsylvania, the Drexel Institute of Technology, the Girard College, the Moore Institute of Art, Science, and Industry, Temple University, the Wagner Free Institute of Science, and the Germantown Academy. It contains Independence Hall, Carpenter's

Hall, Christ Church, the Rosenbach Galleries, the Mercantile Library, the American Philosophical Society, the Betsy Ross House, the Rodin Museum, the Franklin Institute, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, and the Morris Arboretum. Fairmount Park is noted for its Robin Hood Dell concerts. Pop. of city, 1,931,334 (1940), 2,071,605 (1950); of urbanized area, 2,922,470 (1950).

Philadelphia. An ancient name of Amman.

Philadelphia Orchestra. Concert ensemble organized (1900) by Fritz Sehel. Among its conductors have been Leopold Stokowski (1912-38) and Eugene Ormandy (1938 et seq.) on the permanent staff, and Richard Strauss (1904) and Arturo Toscanini (1930) as guest directors.

Philadelphia Story, The. Play (1939) by Philip Barry.

Philadelphus (fil.ă.del'f.ŭs). Attalus. See Attalus II.

Philadelphus, Ptolemy. See Ptolemy II.

Philae (fi'lē). Island in NE Africa, in the Nile River, Upper Egypt, situated at Aswan near the first cataract; noted for its remains of ancient temples. The temple of Isis, founded 286 B.C. by Ptolemy II (Ptolemy Philadelphus) and Arsinoë, is preceded by a great double pylon, 120 ft. wide and 60 high; behind the pylon lies the great court, which has a colonnade on its eastern side, and a complete small temple, almost Greek in plan, on the west. A second pylon, of smaller size, opens on a hypostyle hall with huge columns and brilliantly colored decoration. Isis and Osiris were worshipped here as late as 453 A.D., and the temples were not closed until the reign of Justinian I (527-565). Another ancient edifice found on the island is the Kiosk, or Pharaoh's Bed, a beautiful small temple of late date. From October to July the island is almost totally submerged by the annual rising of the Nile behind the Aswan Dam.

Philagathos (fil.ă.g'ă.th.ŭs). See Pope John XVI.

Philaethes (fil.ă.lē'thēz). Pseudonym of John (of Saxony), 1801-73.

Philaminte (fi.lă.mănt). Wife of Chrysale in Molière's Les Femmes savantes.

Philander (fil.ăn'dēr). Name often given to lovers in old fables and romances, as in Lodovico Ariosto's Orlando Furioso and Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher's The Laws of Candy.

Philanthropos (fil.ăn'thrō.pŏs). Pseudonym of Wells, Seth Youngs.

Philarghi (fē.lăr.gē), Pietro. Earlier name of Pope Alexander V.

Philarghos (fē.lăr.gŏs), Petros. Original name of Pope Alexander V.

Philario (fil.ă'ri.ō). In Shakespeare's Cymbeline, an Italian gentleman, friend to Posthumus.

Philaster, or Love Lies a-Bleeding (fil.ă'stēr). Play by Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher, produced 1610 and published in 1620.

Philby (fil'bi), Harry St. John Bridger. b. at St. John's, Badulla, Ceylon, April 3, 1855—. British explorer in Arabia and Arabic scholar. He made numerous journeys of exploration to central and south-central Arabia, was adviser to the ministry of interior of Mesopotamia (1920-21), and served as chief British representative in Trans-Jordan (1921-24). His books include The Heart of Arabia (1922), Arabia of the Wahabis (1925), Arabia (1930), The Empty Quarter (1933), Sheba's Daughters (1939), Arabian Days (1948), and others.

Philiphus (fi.lē'l'f.ŭs). Latinized surname of Fileffo, Francesco.

Philemon (fi.lē'mŏn, fi-). b. c360 B.C.; d. c262. Greek poet of the New Attic Comedy. He was more popular than Menander, whom he defeated in public dramatic contests several times. Fragments of his works have survived. He wrote the plays on which the Mercator and the Trinummus of Plautus were based.

Philemon. In Greek legend, a Phrygian who with his wife Baucis offered hospitality to Zeus and Hermes, and was rewarded with the gift of an inexhaustible picher.

Philemon, Epistle of Paul to. One of the books of the New Testament, a letter written by the apostle Paul during his first captivity at Rome.

Philemon and Baucis (bŏ'sis). See under Baucis.

Philémon et Baucis (fē.lă.mŏn ā bŏ.sēs). Opera in three acts by Charles Gounod, with a libretto by Paul Jules Barbier and Michel Carré, first performed at the Théâtre Lyrique on Feb. 18, 1860.

Philenia (fī.lē.nī.ə). Pseudonym of Morton, Sarah Wentworth.

Philiatra (fē.lī.yā.trā'). [Also, Filiatra.] Town in S Greece, in the nomos (department) of Messenia, in the SW part of the Peloponnese, on the Ionian Sea. Currents are grown in the vicinity. 11,057 (1940).

Philidor (fē.lē.dōr), André. [Name used by André Danican; also called Philidor l'Ainé.] b. c1647; d. at Dreux, France, Aug. 11, 1730. French instrumentalist and collector of music. As musical librarian (1684 et seq.) to the French court, he compiled 57 volumes of court music extending from the time of Henry III to c1700. He also composed divertissements for the court.

Philidor, François André Danican. b. at Dreux, France, Sept. 7, 1726; d. at London, Aug. 31, 1795. French musical composer and chess master, one of the first blindfold chess experts. His treatise on chess, Analyse du jeu des échecs (1749), set forth his general principles of the game, with particular emphasis on pawn play, and exerted the greatest influence on European chess theory for more than a century. Philidor's Defense to the king's knight's opening and Philidor's Legacy (a smothered mate by the knight following a queen sacrifice) both commemorate him. His musical career was as successful as his chess life. He wrote a number of very popular comic operas, including Le Maréchal (1761) and Tom Jones (1764), and several grand operas, among them Ernelinde, princesse de Norvège (1767).

Philidor l'Ainé (lē.nā). See Philidor, André.

Philinte (fē.lānt). In Molière's comedy Le Misanthrope, the friend of Alceste.

Philip (fī'līp). fl. in the 1st century. One of the 12 apostles, sometimes confused with Saint Philip (Philip the Evangelist). Nothing is known concerning him after the ascension, though he is the subject of various legends.

Philip, Saint. [Called Philip the Evangelist.] fl. 1st century A.D. One of the seven deacons ordained by the apostles, as related in the Acts. He baptized the eunuch of the queen of Ethiopia. He is said to have died a martyr.

Philip. fl. 8th century. Antipope for a day in 768. On the death of Paul I, Tuscan factions obstructed the papal election, intruding Constantine on the throne (June, 767). Some of their Lombard opponents clandestinely elected (July 31, 768) the monk Philip, who the same day retired to his monastery.

Philip. [Called King Philip; original name, Metacombet.] Killed at Mount Hope, Rhode Island, Aug. 12, 1676. American Indian chief; son of Massasoit. He became chief of the Wampanoag Indians in 1662. Philip attempted to live at peace with the colonists, but the steady shrinking of tribal lands and the growth of the colonists' holdings, in addition to the attempts of the colonists to apply their laws to the Indians, led finally to his resistance. He gave his name to King Philip's War against the New England colonists, which commenced at Swansea, June, 1675, after three Wampanoags had been executed for the murder of an Indian informer. He prosecuted the war (1675-76), and was killed by a party under Benjamin Church.

Philip II. Tragedy by Count Vittorio Alfieri, which was printed in 1783.

Philip IV. Two portraits by Velázquez: 1. An equestrian portrait in the Royal Museum at Madrid. The king, in corselet and plumed hat, holding his baton of command, sits on a prancing charger. This is sometimes held to be Velázquez's finest portrait. 2. A portrait in the Louvre, Paris.

Philip (of Burgundy). [Called "le Hardi" (lē ār.dē), English, "the Bold."] b. Jan. 15, 1342; d. April 27, 1404. Duke of Burgundy (1363-1404); younger son of John II (John the Good) of France. He earned his epithet at the battle of Poitiers (1356); after the battle he accompanied his father into captivity in England. The death of the last Capetian duke of Burgundy in 1361 united Burgundy to the French reigning family and in 1363 Philip became duke. In 1369 he married Margaret, widow of the preceding duke of Burgundy and heiress of Flanders, which latter he ruled after his father-in-law's death in 1384. He was appointed by his brother Charles V one of the regents during the minority of Charles VI, who ascended (1380) to the throne of France. Philip now found himself virtual ruler of France and fought in campaigns in the Netherlands (1382 et seq.) and against England. When the insanity of Charles VI incapacitated him in 1392, Philip again became paramount in the kingdom. His diplomacy succeeded, among other things, in securing a truce with England and appeared about to succeed in healing the schism in the Roman Catholic Church when the rivalry of Louis d'Orléans, brother of the king, forced him to turn his attention to internal politics.

Philip (of Burgundy). [Called "le Bon" (lē bōn), English, "the Good."] b. at Dijon, France, June 13, 1396; d. at Bruges, June 15, 1467. Duke of Burgundy (1419-67); son of John the Fearless. He signed the treaty of Troyes in 1420, as the result of which he was allied with England against Charles VII of France until 1435. According to the treaty he recognized Henry V of England as heir to the French throne, but gradually he became reconciled to Charles, although he sided with the rebellious nobles of the Praguerie and gave asylum to the Dauphin (later Louis XI) when he fled from the king; therefore, when Louis XI ascended the throne in 1461, Philip supported him against any claim the English might have. He often had to suppress revolts in the Netherlands, the most notable being that of Ghent (1448-53). During his reign Burgundy rose to its greatest eminence and prosperity and was probably the first state in Europe at the time; Philip's court was famous for its brilliance. In 1429, in honor of his third marriage, to Isabella of Portugal, he instituted the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Philip I (of Castile). [Called Felipe el Hermoso, meaning "Philip the Handsome"; sometimes called Philip I of Spain.] b. at Bruges, 1478; d. in Spain, Sept. 25, 1506. King of Castile; son of the Emperor Maximilian I and Mary of Burgundy, and grandson of Charles the Bold. On the death (1482) of his mother, he became titular duke of Burgundy and thus ruler of the Netherlands as well as of the other possessions of Burgundy. He married (1496) Joanna, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain. When Isabella died in 1504, Joanna became queen of Castile and Philip and his father-in-law contested the actual rule of the kingdom. Philip, who had been in the Netherlands, returned to Spain in 1506 to press his claims but shortly thereafter died, apparently from typhoid, but according to rumor from poison. Philip's long absence in the Netherlands and his open infidelities had aroused a possessive jealousy in the unstable Joanna (his treatment of her was one of the arguments advanced by Ferdinand for keeping him from ruling in Castile) and his sudden death made her completely insane; she refused to permit his body to be buried for a long time and after his entombment lived out her life near his tomb at Tordesillas. The emperors Charles V and Ferdinand I were their sons.

Philip II (of Castile). See Philip II (of Spain).

Philip I (of France). b. 1052; d. 1108. King of France (1060-1108); son of Henry I. The early years of his reign (1060-66) were under the regency of his mother, Anne, daughter of the grand duke of Kiev, and Baldwin V, Count of Flanders. He attained his majority in the year that William of Normandy invaded England and he spent much of his reign warring against Normandy in an effort to prevent consolidation of the English and Norman territories under one head. France itself was a comparatively minor nation amidst its powerful neighbors and remained so throughout his reign, although he managed to hold his own and even to expand his holdings steadily. Philip came into conflict with Rome over his practice of simony; when in 1092 he discarded his wife, Bertha of Holland, and married Bertrada de Montfort, wife of Fulk Rechin of Anjou, he was excommunicated by Pope Urban II for bigamy and adultery, both he and his wife having living spouses. Bertha died in 1094, but Fulk outlived Philip and the sentence of excommunication was renewed several times. He eventually submitted (1104) and agreed not to live with Bertrada privately, but he seems to have ignored his promise. After 1098 his son and successor Louis VI was associated with him on the throne.

Philip II (of France). [Called Philip Augustus.] b. Aug. 21, 1165; d. at Mantes, France, July 14, 1223. King of France (1180-1223); son of Louis VII. He was perhaps the greatest of the Capetian kings of France; under his rule France rose from a minor nation to a leading position in Europe, with greatly extended lands, a more powerful central government, and a much augmented national trade. He was associated with his father on the throne in 1179 and succeeded him the next year. He obtained the Artois as dowry in his first marriage (1180) to Isabella of Hainaut. From 1181 to 1183, he fought against the barons surrounding him, gaining Amiens and other territories. He then attacked Henry II of England and supported his sons in their rebellions against him, eventually forcing Henry to submit to him as his overlord for his holdings in France. In 1190 he left on the third Crusade with Richard I, newly crowned king of England, but the two quarreled even before they got to Palestine and in 1191 Philip returned to France. He entered into an alliance with the emperor Henry VI against Richard, made efforts to prolong Richard's captivity in Austria, and sided with Richard's brother John in attempting to take Richard's lands in Normandy. Richard's return heightened the war, which lasted until Richard's death in 1199. John signed a treaty with Philip in 1200, but in 1202 war broke out between the two, Philip supporting the claims of Prince Arthur in Anjou, Poitou, and Normandy. After a bitter war, in which Arthur was murdered by John, Philip gained control (1205) of Maine, Touraine, Anjou, Poitou, and Normandy. Despite truces, the war continued until 1208, by which time nearly all English possessions in France had been seized by Philip. John meanwhile had been excommunicated by the Pope and ordered deposed, and Philip prepared to invade England itself, when John submitted (1213) to the Pope and accepted England as a papal fief. In 1213-14 Philip attacked Flanders but soon was faced by a coalition of the emperor Otto IV, John, Ferdinand, Count of Flanders, several French vassals, and a group of German princes. On July 27, 1214, he defeated the allies at Bouvines and smashed their armies; at the same time John was being driven into La Rochelle by Prince Louis (later Louis VIII). Philip spent the remainder of his reign consolidating his many gains and preparing, as in the Albigensian crusades of 1215 and 1219, for further conquests. He quadrupled during his reign the lands of France. During Philip's reign Paris became the definite administrative center of France; he built the Louvre, chartered the University of Paris, and otherwise made the city a royal residence. He was married three times: in 1180 to Isabella of Hainaut; in 1193 to Ingeborg of Denmark, with whom he refused to live; and in 1196 to Agnes of Meran, despite papal refusal to sanction the marriage. He was forced to leave Agnes in 1200, but he kept Ingeborg imprisoned until 1213.

Philip III (of France). [Called "le Hardi" (le àr.dē), English, "the Bold."] b. April 3, 1245; d. at Perpignan, France, 1285. King of France (1270-85); son of Louis IX. He inherited (1271) the county of Toulouse, which was added to the crownlands. The first half of his reign saw a struggle to unseat Philip's favorite, Pierre de la Brosse; this was accomplished in 1278 when he was hanged. A sharp struggle ensued between the parties of the queen, Marie of Brabant, and the queen mother, Margaret of Provence. The result was the ascendancy of the king's uncle, Charles of Anjou, who was supported in Italy (1284 et seq.) by Philip. Philip died during a futile expedition to secure the crown of Aragon for his son.

Philip IV (of France). [Called "le Bel" (le bel), English, "the Fair."] b. at Fontainebleau, France, 1268; d. Nov. 29, 1314. King of France (1285-1314); son of Philip III. He married in 1284 Jeanne, heiress of Navarre, whereby he united that kingdom with France. In 1292 or 1293 he summoned Edward I of England, as the holder of French fiefs, to his court to answer for depredations committed by Edward's subjects on the Norman coast. Edward sent his brother, Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, who surrendered Guienne to Philip as security for a satisfactory settlement. Philip thereupon declared Edward's fiefs forfeited on account of his non-appearance. War broke out in consequence in 1294; peace was restored in 1296. Guienne being restored to Edward. In 1296 he became involved in a quarrel with Pope Boniface VIII, as the growing expenditures occasioned by the centralization of the government led him to tax ecclesiastical property. Boniface issued (1296) the bull Clericis laicos opposing this, whereupon Philip cut off the export of coin, cutting the papal revenue and forcing the Pope to back down (1297). When Philip arrested (1301) Bernard Saisset, Bishop of Pamiers, Boniface issued (1302) the bull Unam Sanctam, asserting strongly his right to intervene. Philip then convened the estates to hear his side of the case and to give him support. The quarrel culminated in 1303 in the seizure of the Pope, who, although released by the Roman populace, died shortly after. Boniface's successor, Benedict XI, dying in 1304, Philip procured the election of a Frenchman, Clement V, who removed (1309) the papal residence to Avignon. In 1302 Philip's army was defeated by the Flemings at Courtrai, and he was forced to recognize their independence in 1305. He suppressed (1307-13) the order of the Templars, whose lands he confiscated. Three of his sons by Jeanne of Navarre, Louis X, Philip V, and Charles IV, later ruled in France; their daughter Isabella married Edward II of England and was later involved in a liaison with Roger de Mortimer.

Philip V (of France). [Called "le Long" (le lôn), English, "the Tall."] b. c.1293; d. Jan. 2, 1322. King of France (1316-22); second son of Philip IV. He succeeded (Nov. 19, 1316) his brother, Louis X, who died on July 5, 1316, leaving his widow pregnant; Philip served as regent until the birth of the child, John I, who died four days after birth. Philip seized the throne and obtained (1317) confirmation of his tenure by the States General, which invoked the Salic Law, barring women from succession, Philip's rival to the throne being a daughter of Louis X. His reign was marked by frequent meetings of the States General and by attempts at reform in such matters as coinage. Popular persecutions of the Jews were suppressed by Philip (who exacted heavy donations from the Jews in return).

Philip VI (of France). b. 1293; d. August, 1350. King of France (1328-50), first king of the house of Valois; son of Charles of Valois (the brother of Philip IV). In his reign began (1338) the Hundred Years' War with England. He was defeated by Edward III at Crécy in 1346, lost Calais in 1347, and acquired Dauphiné in 1349.

Philip (of Hesse). [Called "Philip the Magnanimous"; also, Philip of Hesse.] b. Nov. 13, 1504; d. March 31, 1567. Landgrave of Hesse (1509-67). He introduced the Reformation into Hesse in 1526, signed the Augsburg Confession in 1530, and was one of the founders of the Schmalkaldic League (1530-31). He was one of the leaders in the Schmalkaldic War (1546-47) against Charles V and was imprisoned by Charles (1547-52) until the surprise capture of Charles by Philip's son-in-law Maurice of Saxony resulted in his release. In 1567 he divided his lands among his four sons. An aggravating cause of much of his trouble was his marital difficulty. In 1540 he attempted to escape from an unhappy marriage with Christine of Saxony by marrying bigamously Margaret of Saale. This marriage was consented to by Luther and Melancthon but when it became known he was deserted by his friends and forced to sign a peace with Charles V.

Philip (of the Holy Roman Empire). [German, Philipp (fe'lip).] b. c.1177; murdered at Bamberg, Germany, by Otto von Wittelsbach, June 21, 1208. Duke of Swabia (1196) and Holy Roman Emperor (1198-1208); youngest son of Frederick Barbarossa. He was elected king of Germany in 1198, but his rival, the Guelph Otto IV, was chosen emperor by some of the nobles; Philip was never crowned emperor.

Philip II (of Macedon). b. 382 B.C.; assassinated at Aegae, Macedonia, August, 336 B.C. King of Macedon (359-336 B.C.); son of Amyntas II, and father of Alexander the Great. He lived some years at Thebes as a hostage, and succeeded his brother Perdiccas in 359. He defeated the Illyrians and Paeonians in 358, captured Amphipolis in 358 and Potidæa in 356, founded Philippi in 356, captured Methone c.353, and subdued nearly all Thessaly in 352. At about this period Demosthenes in Athens began delivering the speeches known as the Philipics, warning the Greeks that Philip would eventually conquer all of Greece unless he were opposed. Philip took Olynthus in 347, took part in the Sacred War against the Phocians, after whose overthrow in 346 he was elected to their place in the Amphictyonic Council, made peace with Athens in 346, besieged unsuccessfully Perinthus and Byzantium (340-339); took command in the Holy War against the Locrians in 339, and totally defeated the combined Athenian and Theban army at Cheronea in 338. He then subdued the Peloponnesus, making himself master of all Greece, and in 337 was chosen commander of the Greek forces against Persia. He was killed before he could take the field, however. Philip's reign marks the end of the old city-state system in Greece and the growth of a Greek nation. He prepared, by his organization of the army and his selection of generals, the way for Alexander's conquests.

Philip III (of Macedon). [Also, Philip III Arrhidæus (ar.i.d'us).] Murdered 317 b.c. King of Macedonia (323-317 b.c.); illegitimate son of Philip II. He was proclaimed king in 323 by the troops after Alexander's death. His own death was caused by Olympias, widow of Philip II and mother of Alexander.

Philip IV (of Macedon). King of Macedon; son of Cassander. He reigned for a few months c297 b.c.

Philip V (of Macedon). b. 237 b.c.; d. 179 b.c. King of Macedonia (220-179 b.c.); son of Demetrius II. He was at war with the Aetolian League (220-217), was allied with Carthage and at war with Rome (later also with the Aetolian League) from 214 to 205, and began the second war against Rome in 200. He was defeated by Flaminius at Cynoscephalae in 197, and was thereafter at peace with the Romans, recognizing them as his masters and concentrating on his own Macedonian kingdom. Philip's reign marks the disappearance of Greece as a world power.

Philip (of Rome). [Called "the Arabian"; full Latin name, Marcus Julius Philippus.] d. 249 A.D. Roman emperor (244-249). A general under Gordian III, he had the emperor killed, assumed the purple, and signed a treaty of peace with Persia. He celebrated the thousandth anniversary of the founding of Rome by a splendid exhibition of the secular games in 248. His general Decius, sent to Dacia to subdue a revolt, was declared emperor by his troops, marched on Rome, and defeated (249) Philip at Verona, Philip being killed in the battle.

Philip I (of Spain). See Philip I (of Castile).

Philip II (of Spain). b. at Valladolid, Spain, May 21, 1527; d. in the Escorial Palace, near Madrid, Spain, Sept. 13, 1598. King of Spain, Naples, and Sicily (1556-98), and of Portugal (1580-98); son of Charles I of Spain (the Holy Roman emperor Charles V) and father of Philip III. Already invested by his father with the rule of Milan, Naples, Sicily, Franche-Comté, and the Netherlands, he succeeded to the crown of Spain upon Charles's abdication in 1556. In that year France and the Pope (Paul IV) made war against Spain. The Pope was defeated by Philip's forces, and in 1559 France, by the Treaty of Cateau-Cambrésis, acknowledged Spanish suzerainty in Franche-Comté and in the Italian states. It was at the time of his victory over the French in the battle of St-Quentin in 1557 that Philip made the vow which he fulfilled by building the vast aggregation of the monastery, church, college, library, and palace of San Lorenzo del Escorial. In 1543 he had married Maria, daughter of John III of Portugal, who died in 1545. With Philip, marriage was strictly a political matter. His second wife (1554-58) was Mary of England, whom he assisted in returning that country officially to the fold of the Roman Catholic Church, but to whom he gave no progeny; and by the marriage-treaty he had renounced any claim to the English crown upon her death. His offer of marriage to Mary's sister Elizabeth was rejected, and in 1559 he married another Elizabeth, daughter of Henry II of France; she died in 1568. His last consort (1570-80) was Anne, daughter of Emperor Maximilian II. The great objectives of Philip II's policy were to prevent the diffusion of Protestantism, to restore the Roman Catholic religion in countries where Protestantism had taken root, and to impose a uniform government throughout his diversified dominions. The second and third of these aims did not sit well with the provinces of the Netherlands, where revolt broke out in 1567. Resistance began among the nobles and wealthy bourgeoisie, but was taken over by the common people. The Duke of Alva, appointed by Philip regent of the Netherlands, shed much blood but was unable to cow the Dutch, and in 1573 gave up the task. His successors, including Don John of Austria, had no better success in the northern provinces, which declared their independence in 1581 and maintained it until it was internationally recognized in 1648. The southern Netherlands provinces, however, were reconciled to Spanish rule during the regency of the Duke of Parma (1578-92). In 1571 Spain, in the person of Philip's half brother John of Austria, took the lead of Christendom in breaking the Turkish naval power at Lepanto. In that year also Philip completed the ruthless suppression of the Moors in Spain. Claiming inheritance from his mother, Isabella of Portugal, Philip in 1580 seized that country, with the aid of the clergy and some of the nobility, against the opposition of the Portuguese people in general. As Philip I of Portugal he kept his promise to respect that nation's rights and to rule there only through Portuguese officials. In 1585 he formed an alliance with the Holy League in France, but was unable to prevent the accession of Henry IV (Henry of Navarre) to the French throne. Mary, Queen of Scots, claimant to the throne of England, in her last will named Philip as her heir in that respect. On this ground Philip prepared the invasion of England, creating for this purpose the "Invincible Armada," the defeat of which in 1588 marked the passing of the rule of the seas from Spain to England.

Philip III (of Spain). b. at Madrid, April 14, 1578; d. there, March 31, 1621. King of Spain (1598-1621); son of Philip II and Anne of Austria. He was an extremely weak ruler, interested mainly in court protocol and in entertainment; the government was left in the hands of the Duke of Lerma and, after his death in 1618, to his son, the Duke of Uceda. The Moriscos were expelled from Spain in 1609; in the same year the Netherlands obtained their independence.

Philip IV (of Spain). b. at Valladolid, Spain, April 8, 1605; d. Sept. 17, 1665. King of Spain (1621-65); son of Philip III. The Spanish power declined steadily throughout his reign, Philip leaving matters in the hands of others. Spain entered the Thirty Years' War in 1622, continued fighting against France even after the Treaty of Westphalia (1648), and submitted to the loss of Roussillon by the Treaty of the Pyrenees (1659). Meanwhile Catalonia and Portugal both revolted (1640), Portugal retaining her independence and Catalonia gaining much of her former autonomy and special privilege. The Netherlands became independent by the Treaty of Westphalia (1648) and the revolt of Masaniello at Naples was suppressed (1647). Though his reign marked a decadent period in Spanish political fortunes, Philip's court was the scene of much of Velázquez's painting and such writers as Pedro Calderón, Lope de Vega, and Tirso de Molina flourished in Spain at the time.

Philip V (of Spain). b. at Versailles, France, Dec. 19, 1683; d. at Madrid, July 9, 1746. King of Spain (1700-46), first of the Spanish Bourbon line; grandson of Louis XIV of France, and second son of the Dauphin Louis (d. 1711). He was called the Duke of Anjou until his succession to the Spanish throne by the will of Charles II. His accession caused the War of the Spanish Succession. He lost Gibraltar in 1704, and by the peace of Utrecht (1713) was obliged to cede the Spanish Netherlands, Milan, Sardinia, and Naples to Austria and, although he was confirmed on the Spanish throne, was forced to adopt the Salic Law of succession. He abdicated in favor of his son Louis in 1724, but on the death of the latter in the same year resumed the government. He was, during the latter part of his reign, completely under the ascendancy of his second wife, Elizabeth Farnese of Parma.

Philip, Adventures of. See Adventures of Philip.

Philip (filip), André. b. at Pont-St-Esprit, Gard, France, June 28, 1902-. French political leader and educator, a cabinet member after the liberation of France. Professor of economics at Lyons, he was a Socialist deputy (1936-40, 1945 et seq.). He escaped (1942) to Great Britain, and was commissioner of interior (1942-43), finance minister (1946), and minister of national economy (1947).

Philip (filip), Herod. See Herod Philip.

Philip, Hoffman. b. at Washington, D.C., July 13, 1872-. American diplomat, U.S. minister to Colombia (1917-22), Uruguay (1922-25), Persia (1925-30), and Norway (1930-35), and U.S. ambassador (1935-38) to Chile.

Philip, John Woodward. b. at Kinderhook, N.Y., Aug. 26, 1840; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., June 30, 1900. American naval officer. He commanded the Texas in the battle off Santiago, July 3, in the Spanish-American War, was temporary commander of the North Atlantic squadron, and on Jan. 15, 1899, took command of the navy yard at New York.

Philip, Sir Robert William. b. 1857; d. at Edinburgh, Jan. 26, 1939. Scottish physician, chiefly known for his work in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. He founded (1887) the first tuberculosis dispensary at Edinburgh.

Philip Augustus (ô.gus'tus). See Philip II (of France).

Philip Baboon (ba.bôn'). See Baboon, Lewis and Philip.

Philip Carey (kâr'i). See Carey, Philip.

Philip Faulconbridge (fô'kon.brij). See Faulconbridge, Philip.

Philiphaugh (fil'p.hô). Place ab. 2 mi. W of Selkirk, Scotland. Here, in the English Civil War, the Parliamentary troops under David Leslie, 1st Lord Newark, totally defeated (Sept. 13, 1645) the Royalist Highlanders under James Graham, 1st Marquis of Montrose.

Philip Neri (nâ'rê), Saint. See Neri, San Filippo de'.

Philip II of Montmorency-Nivelle (mont.mô.ren'si-ni-vêl'). See Hoorn (or Hoorne or Horn or Hornes), Count of.

Philippa (fil'p'a). [Known as Philippa of Hainaut.] b. c.1312; d. Aug. 15, 1369. Queen of Edward III of England. She was the daughter of William the Good, Count of Holland and Hainaut, and married Edward in 1328. She was a stabilizing influence on the kingdom and her death, which left the king even more under the influence of Alice Perrers, his mistress, soon resulted in trouble. Jean Froissart, the chronicler, was her secretary from 1361 to 1366. She bore the king 12 children, among them Edward, the Black Prince, Lionel of Antwerp, the Duke of Clarence, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, Edmund of Langley, Duke of York, and Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester.

Philippe (fê.lêp), Charles Louis. b. at Cérilly, France, 1874; d. at Paris, Dec. 21, 1909. French novelist. Author of Quatre histoires de pauvre amour (1897), Bonne Madeleine et pauvre Marie (1898), Mère et enfant (1900), Bubu de Montparnasse (1901), Père Perdrix, métayer (1903), Marie Donadieu (1904), Croquis (1906), and Charles Blanchard (1913). Well-educated, he gave up the career which graduation from the Polytechnic School at Paris would have guaranteed, preferring the obscurity of minor jobs in the Paris department of sanitation. His stories dramatize the plight of people as poor as he was himself.

Philippe Égalité (â.gâ.lê.tâ). See Orléans, Louis Philippe Joseph, Duc d'.

Philippeville (fê.lêp.vêl; Anglicized, fil'p.vil). Seaport in Constantine department, Algeria, in NW Africa, ab. 35 mi. NE of Constantine: the chief outlet to the sea for the city of Constantine. It serves a rich agricultural hinterland and is an important commercial port for the trade of E. Algeria and the E. Sahara: it ships citrus fruit, winter vegetables, wool, hides, and wine. There is also some industrial activity in the town. 36,262 (1948).

Philippi (fil'ip'i). In ancient geography, a city in Macedonia, ab. 73 mi. NE of Salonika. It was named after Philip II of Macedonia, and is famous as the site of the two battles in 42 B.C., in which Augustus (Octavius) and Mark Antony defeated the republicans under Brutus and Cassius. A Christian church was founded here by Paul, who addressed to the congregation the Epistle to the Philippians.

Philippi (fil'ip'i). [Former names: Anglin's Ford, Booths Ferry.] City in N West Virginia, county seat of Barbour County, on the Tygart River ab. 50 mi. SE of Wheeling. It was the site of the Civil War battle known as "Philippi Races," in which the Confederates were routed by Union forces on June 3, 1861. Pop. 2,531 (1950).

Philippi. A former name of St. Albans, W.Ya.

Philippians (fil'ip'i.anz), Epistle to the. Letter addressed by the apostle Paul to the church at Philippi, in Macedonia. He alludes in it to the close personal relations existing between himself and the members of that church, encourages them to remain in unity, and warns them against various dangers. It was probably written at Rome shortly before his release in 63.

Philippics (fil'ip'iks), The. Group of nine orations of Demosthenes, directed against Philip II of Macedonia. In these orations Demosthenes urges his fellow Athenians to resist conquest by Philip. They comprise the first Philippic, urging the sending of a military force to Thrace, delivered in 351 B.C.; three orations in behalf of the city of Olynthus (destroyed by Philip), delivered in 349-348; the oration On the Peace (346); the second Philippic (344); the oration On the Embassy (343); the speech On the Chersonese (341); and the third Philippic (341). The name is also given to a series of 14 orations of Cicero against Mark Antony, delivered in 44-43 B.C. The word "philippic" has come, therefore, to mean any speech of caustic denunciation.

Philippicus (fil'ip'i.kus). [Also: Philepticus (fi.lêp'it'kus); original name, Bardanes.] Byzantine emperor (711-713). A general under Justinian II, he was banished to the Crimea for his part in the conspiracies against the king. He instigated a revolt there and had Justinian killed, himself becoming emperor. He was unable, however, to resist the attacks of the Bulgarians and the Saracens, and was blinded and deposed as the result of a revolt.

Philippides (fil'ip'i.dêz). Original name of Chrysanthos or Chrisanthos, Archbishop.

Philippine Islands (fil'ip'ên). [Also: Philippines; Spanish, Islas Filipinas.] Archipelago of SE Asia, situated between the South China Sea and the Pacific Ocean, and enclosing, with Borneo, the Sulu Sea. It is occupied by the Republic of the Philippines.

Philippines (fil'ip'ênz), Republic of the. [Spanish, República de Filipinas.] Republic of SE Asia, occupying the Philippine Islands. It was established on July 4, 1946, as a sovereign and independent state. The republic is divided for administrative purposes into 50 provinces (including the city of Manila, which constitutes a province). Executive power rests in a president, elected for a term of four years, and his cabinet. The national legislature consists of two houses, a senate of 24 members, and a house of representatives of 100 members. There is also a supreme court, with a chief justice and ten associate justices. The basic law of the land is embodied in a constitution adopted in 1935, modeled to a considerable extent on that of the U.S. Capital, Quezon City; land area, 114,830 sq. mi.; pop. 19,234,182 (1948).

Terrain and Climate. Approximately 7,100 islands are included in the archipelago, of which only slightly more than a third are named, and only 462 have an area of one square mile or more. The two chief islands, Luzon and Mindanao, together comprise two thirds of the land area of the group. The terrain of the Philippines is largely of two contrasting types: rough or rugged mountains and hills, and flat or gently sloping alluvial plains. The largest and most densely populated plain is that of C Luzon, extending from Lingayen Gulf S to the vicinity of Manila. Mountains cover a large part of the islands, and are mostly forested; the highest peak is Mount Apo on Mindanao (9,690 ft.). About 20 of the mountain peaks are active volcanoes; several disastrous eruptions have occurred in historic times, most recently that of Hibok Hibok volcano, on Camiguin island, in 1951. The climate of the Philippines is tropical; the lowlands have a hot, humid climate with no cool season; the mountain regions, though relatively cooler than the lowlands, are generally very wet with extremely heavy rainfall. From October to May the prevailing winds are from the NE; there is a drier season at this time on the lee (W) sides of the islands. Between May and October is the wet season, with SW winds prevalent; during this season the E sides of the islands receive less rainfall than the W. In the S (Mindanao) there is no real dry season. Typhoons of destructive force occur practically every year in some part of the C or N Philippines.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Agriculture is the chief occupation of the Filipinos; the principal crop is rice, which occupies about half of all cropland, grown in small wet fields or paddies in the Oriental fashion. In the C Philippines, maize is the principal food crop, and in the northernmost islands camotes, or sweet potatoes, are the staple crop. Fruits (including bananas, mangoes, and other tropical fruits) and vegetables are also extensively grown for food. Commercial agriculture is also very important in the Philippine economy; sugar cane, coconuts, abacá (Manila hemp), tobacco, pineapples, rubber, kapok, and cotton are some of the crops grown. Copra, coconut oil, and Manila hemp are the major export products. The fisheries of the islands supply food for the coastal inhabitants. Forests cover ab. 54 percent of the total land area, and tropical hardwoods are produced both for the domestic market and for export. Manufacturing enterprises are chiefly concerned with the processing of agricultural products for export; in recent years there has also been a considerable growth, especially in Manila and Cebu, of industries serving the Philippine market. Handicraft industries are common. Transportation is by steamer, air, road, or railroad; there are ab. 700 mi. of railroads on Luzon, Panay, and Cebu, and perhaps 5,000 mi. of all-weather roads in the islands. There is considerable mineral wealth in the Philippines; gold, iron, copper, chrome, and manganese are mined in relatively modest quantities.

History. The Philippines were known to the Chinese during the Middle Ages, and there was a considerable commerce with China during the Ming period. The first European to discover the islands was Magellan, who was killed by natives on the island of Maetan in 1521, after claiming the archipelago for Spain. The islands were later named for Philip II of Spain. Spanish settlement began in 1565 on Cebu and spread gradually; in early years there were conflicts with the Portuguese, who finally cleared out. Spanish rule was resisted strongly by the Moros of the S Philippines, and by the Igorots of the mountains of N Luzon; elsewhere the Spanish influence spread, and the population was converted to the Roman Catholic religion. During the 19th century, modern independence movements began; one of the most powerful of these was the Liga Filipina founded by José Rizal in 1891. Rizal was executed by the Spanish in 1896 and immediately became a national hero. A revolt against the Spanish broke out in the same year and lasted until 1898; after the battle of Manila (May 1, 1898), revolt flared again. The Philippines were ceded by Spain to the U.S. by the Treaty of Paris (Dec. 10, 1898) at the conclusion of the Spanish-American War. A Philippine republic was declared under Emilio Aguinaldo, and guerrilla warfare ensued between U.S. forces and the Filipino insurgents, ending with the capture of Aguinaldo by General Frederick Funston on March 23, 1901. A governor general was appointed by the president of the U.S., and the islands were administered under the Bureau of Insular Affairs. The U.S. recognized, however, the legitimate aim of Philippine independence, and in 1916 the U.S. Congress passed the Jones Bill, establishing a bicameral Philippine legislature, with nearly all of its members elected. At the same time six executive departments of the Philippine government were established. In 1935 the Philippine Commonwealth was established, with Manuel Quezon as its first president, and the Philippines began to function under their own constitution. Complete independence was promised in 1946, and this was formally achieved on July 4, 1946. World War II saw the involvement of the Philippines as a major battleground of the Far East, and tremendous devastation was caused by military operations. The Japanese attack began with air bombing attacks on Dec. 8, 1941; Japanese forces landed on Luzon five days later, and took Manila on Jan. 2, 1942. U.S. and Philippine troops maintained a strong defense of the Bataan peninsula and Corregidor for several months longer; Corregidor finally capitulated on May 6, 1942. General Douglas MacArthur moved with his command to Australia, General Jonathan Wainwright was taken prisoner, with ab. 15,000 American troops. The Philippine resistance to the Japanese invaders was organized by numerous guerrilla groups, of which the most notable were the Hukbalahaps. Allied forces under the command of General MacArthur landed on Leyte Oct. 19, 1944, and began the reconquest of the Philippines; the major land and sea battles in the C and N Philippines resulted in a decisive defeat for the Japanese forces. Manila was liberated in February, 1945, and by the end of the war in August, 1945, most of the area of the Philippines had been reconquered. Since the end of the war there have been some uprisings of the Hukbalahaps and Moros against the government. Inflationary economic conditions and heavy war damage have imposed a burden on the national economy which has led to some dissatisfaction and unrest.

Population and Culture. The earliest known inhabitants of the Philippines were a short, black-skinned people with frizzy hair, averaging about 4 ft. 9 inches in height, known as Negritos. These people have survived as a somewhat mixed stock only in very inaccessible mountain regions, especially in N Luzon, and are estimated to number only ab. 30,000 (Krieger, Peoples of the Philippines, 1942). The early inhabitants were submerged by successive incursions of Indonesian peoples, who populated the archipelago and who formed the chief ethnic element of the present-day Filipino. In modern times there have been Malay, Chinese, Hindu, Japanese, and European immigrants. Numerous dialects are spoken through the Philippines, but there are only eight major languages. Tagalog, spoken by about one fourth of the total population, has been the official national language since 1937. English is understood by perhaps a quarter of the total population, and Spanish by a smaller number. The indigenous religions of the Philippines were tribal pagan cults. Mohammedanism was introduced by the Arabs about the 15th century and took a firm hold in the S portion of the Philippines (S and SW Mindanao, Palawan, and the Sulu Archipelago). The Mohammedans were named Moros (Moors) by the Spaniards. Elsewhere the prevailing religion is Christian, predominantly Roman Catholic. In 1902 Isabelo de los Reyes and a Filipino priest, Gregorio Aglipay, led a separatist movement and founded the Philippine Independent Church (sometimes called Aglipayan) which, though retaining many of the principal features of Roman Catholic Christianity, refuses to recognize miracles, is entirely independent of papal authority, and permits members of the priesthood to marry. In 1939, the percentage distribution of the population by religion was: Roman Catholic, 79; Aglipayan, 10; Moslem, 4; pagan, 4; Protestant, 2; Buddhist and others, 1. Filipino culture retains most of its indigenous elements, though many aspects of daily life, especially in the larger cities and towns, have been strongly influenced by Spanish and American cultures. In recent years the Philippines have had close social and political ties with the U.S., and they have continued a policy of active cooperation with the U.S.

Philippine Sea (fīl'ipēn). Portion of the W Pacific Ocean, W of the Philippines and S of Japan. It contains the Mindanao Trench (or Mindanao Deep), which reaches the deepest point of any of the world's oceans (34,440 ft.). During World War II the Philippine Sea was the scene of two major battles.

Philipp Pirip (fīl'ip pī'rip). See under Pip.

Philippopel (fēl'ip,ō'pel). German name of Plovdiv.

Philippopolis (fīl'ip,ō'pō'lis). Greek name of Plovdiv.

Philippoteau (fēl'ip,ō'tō). Henri Emmanuel Félix. b. at Paris, 1815; d. there, Nov. 8, 1884. French historical and battle painter.

Philippović (fēl'ip,ō'vich). Eugen. (Title, Baron Philippovich von Philippberg.) b. at Vienna, March 15, 1858; d. there, June 4, 1917. Austrian economist. He was one of the leaders of the social-political school of German economics.

Philips (fīl'ips; German, fē'lips), Georg. b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, Jan. 6, 1804; d. at Vienna, Sept. 6, 1872. German jurist and Roman Catholic historian.

Philipp Quarles (kwōrlz, kwārlz). See Quarles, Philip.

Philips (fīl'ips), Ambrose. [Nicknamed "Nabby Pamby."] b. c1765; d. at London, June 18, 1749. English writer. He was of a Leicestershire family, and was educated at Cambridge (Saint John's College), where he wrote his Pastorals, which appeared in the sixth volume of Jacob Tonson's Miscellanies (1709), the same volume in which Alexander Pope's Pastorals appeared. When Pope's work was ignored by the writer in The Guardian who praised Philips highly, Pope began a long series of attacks on Philips, out of sheer jealousy. Philips sided with Joseph Addison in his quarrel with Pope, went to Ireland as secretary to Archbishop Hugh Boulter, and was a member of the Irish Parliament. His nickname "Nambly Pambly" was conferred on him by Henry Carey, and adopted by Pope, who considered it suited to his "feminine in the infantile style." He is best known by his play The Distrest Mother, an adaptation of Jean Baptiste Racine's Andromaque (1712). Among his other plays are The Briton (1722) and Humfrey, Duke of Gloucester (1723).

Phillips, Anton Frederik. b. at Zalthommiel, Netherlands, March 14, 1874; d. at Eindhoven, Netherlands, Oct. 7, 1951. Dutch industrial executive, head of one of the world's largest organizations for the manufacture of electric motors, appliances, and lighting equipment.

Phillips, John. b. at Bampton, Oxfordshire, England, Dec. 30, 1676; d. at Hereford, England, Feb. 15, 1709. English writer. The Splendid Shilling, a burlesque of John Milton's Paradise Lost, appeared in 1705. In 1705 he published Blenheim, also in imitation of Milton, as an answer for the Tories to Joseph Addison's Campaign; it was, however, so overdue that it failed. On Jan. 24, 1708, he published Cyder, his most ambitious work, in imitation of Vergil's Georgics.

Phillips, Katharine. [Called "the Matchless Orinda"; maiden name, Fowler.] b. at London, Jan. 1, 1631; d. June 22, 1664. English letter-writer and poet. She was known as "the Matchless Orinda" because of the signature Orinda adopted by her in a correspondence with Sir Charles Cotterel, who used the name of Poliarchus. She also used the name as her usual signature. She translated Horace (in part) and La Mort de Pompée, two of Pierre Corneille's plays, which, with a number of poems, were published in 1667.

Phillipsburg (fil'ps.bërg). Borough in C Pennsylvania, in Centre County, in a bituminous coal region: manufactures of boilers, cooking utensils, and sheet-nickel products. It is the site of the first screw factory in the U.S. The place was settled in 1797. Pop. 3,988 (1950).

Philipse (fil'ps), Frederick. b. in Friesland, Netherlands, Nov. 6, 1626; d. 1702. Dutch trader and landed proprietor in America. Arriving (1647) at New Amsterdam, he became prominent as a merchant trader and served (1675 et seq.) in the colony's council. He acquired (1672-93) land holdings in and near upper Yonkers which became (1693) by the Royal Patent of Phillipsburgh his manorial tract. He built Philipsse Castle at Sleepy Hollow (now in North Tarrytown) and the Manor Hall at Yonkers.

Philip the Evangelist. See Saint Philip.

Philip van Artevelde (vân ârt'vêl.dë). See Artevelde, Philip van.

Philip Wakem (wâ'këm). See Wakem, Philip.

Philisides (fil'is'idëz). In Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia, a shepherd whose name is formed from some of the letters of Sidney's own. In the volume of Edmund Spenser's poems published in 1596 is a collection of laments for Sidney, among which is a Pastoral Eclogue upon the Death of Sir Philip Sidney, in which each shepherd begins his lament with the words "Philisides is dead." It has been attributed to Sir Edward Dyer.

Philistia (fil'is'ti.ä). In ancient geography, a country SW of Palestine, lying along the Mediterranean Sea. The five principal cities were Ashkelon, Ashdod, Gaza, Gath, and Ekron.

Philistines (fil'stinz, fil'is.tënz, -ti.öz). In the Old Testament, a people, possibly of Semitic origin but more probably originally from Crete, dwelling in Philistia. They were frequently at war with the Hebrews, and reached their highest power in the reigns of Saul and David.

Phillip (fil'ip), John. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, April 19, 1817; d. at London, Feb. 27, 1867. Scottish painter. His The Letter-Writer of Seville was commissioned by Queen Victoria in 1854. He was especially devoted to Spain and Spanish subjects.

Phillips (fil'ps). Unincorporated community in N Texas, in Hutchinson County, NE of Amarillo. 4,105 (1950).

Phillips, Adelaide. b. at Stratford-on-Avon, England, 1833; d. at Karlsbad (Karlovy Vary), in Bohemia, Oct. 3, 1882. American contralto singer.

Phillips, Charles. b. at New Richmond, Wis., Nov. 20, 1880; d. Dec. 29, 1933. American poet and editor, professor (1924 et seq.) of English literature at the University of Notre Dame. He founded (1925) Fan, Poetry and Youth, which he edited. Author of Back Home—An Old-fashioned Poem (1913), The Doctor's Wooing, a novel (1926), and High in Her Tower (1927). He wrote also the poetic play The Divine Friend (1915), and the plays The Shepherd of the Valley (1918) and Tarcisus (1917).

Phillips, David Graham. b. at Madison, Ind., Oct. 31, 1867; d. at New York, Jan. 24, 1911. American novelist. He served on the staffs of the Sun and World at New York, and as one of the "Muckrakers" at the turn of the century exposed political corruption in his magazine series "The Treason of the Senate," published (1906-07) in Cosmopolitan. Among his works are Her Serene Highness (1902), The Cost (1904), The Social Secretary (1905), The Fortune Hunter (1906), The Second Generation (1907), Old Wives for New (1908), The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig (1909), The Hungry Heart (1909), White Magic (1910), The Husband's Story (1910), The Grain of Dust (1911), The Price She Paid (1912), and Susan Lenox: Her Fall and Rise (2 vols., 1917).

Phillips, George. b. probably at South Rainham, Norfolk, England, 1593; d. July 1, 1644. English clergyman in America. He came to the Massachusetts colony in 1630, and took part in the settlement of Watertown, where he supposedly drafted the covenant of the Watertown Church, whose minister he was until his death. He is reputed to have been the first minister of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to make the Congregational form of church polity a working reality and was one of the leaders (1632) of the Watertown protest, generally regarded as the inception of representative government in Massachusetts.

Phillips, John. b. at Andover, Mass., Dec. 27, 1719; d. at Exeter, N.H., April 21, 1795. American merchant, founder of Phillips Exeter Academy at Exeter, N.H., and one of the founders of Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass.

Phillips, John. b. at Marden, Wiltshire, England, Dec. 25, 1800; d. at Oxford, England, April 24, 1874. English geologist; nephew of William Smith (1769-1839). In 1834 he became professor of geology at King's College, London, and in 1840 joined the staff of the geological survey of Great Britain. He published Illustrations of the Geology of Yorkshire (1829-36), Treatise on Geology (1837-39), and others.

Phillips, Montague Fawcett. b. at London, Nov. 13, 1885—. English composer and organist. Among his works are the light operas The Rebel Maid (1921), generally considered his principal work, and The Golden Triangle. He also composed the orchestral suites In Maytime and Dance Revels, and wrote ballet music, overtures, and many songs.

Phillips, Philip. [Called "the Singing Pilgrim."] b. 1834; d. 1895. American tenor singer and music publisher. He was the editor and publisher of many song collections, chiefly of liturgical music.

Phillips, Samuel. b. at North Andover, Mass., Feb. 5, 1752; d. Feb. 10, 1802. American politician, judge, and merchant; nephew of John Phillips (1719-95). He was a state senator (1780-1801) and lieutenant governor of Massachusetts (1801-02). He was the principal founder (1778) of Phillips Academy of Andover, Mass., serving as one of its trustees (1778 et seq.).

Phillips, Samuel. b. Dec. 28, 1814; d. at Brighton, England, Oct. 14, 1854. English writer. His first novel, Caleb Stukely, appeared (1841) in Blackwood's Magazine. In 1845 and 1846 he was political editor of the Morning Herald, and he was literary critic of the Times (1845-54). Essays from the Times was published in 1851.

Phillips, Stephen. b. at Somerton, near Oxford, England, July 28, 1868; d. at Deal, Kent, England, Dec. 9, 1915. English poet and playwright. He was on the stage from 1886 to 1892. He wrote Poems (1897), Paolo and Francesca (1899), Herod (1900), Ulysses (1902), The Sin of David (1904), Nero (1906), The Last Hair (1908), The New Inferno (1910), Pietro of Siena (1910), The King (1912), and others. He was editor of The Poetry Review.

Phillips, Thomas. b. at Dudley, Warwickshire, England, Oct. 18, 1770; d. at London, April 20, 1845. English painter. He learned glass-painting at Birmingham, and was employed on the window of Saint George's Chapel at Windsor. He went to London in 1790, exhibited in 1792, and was made associate royal academican in 1804 and royal academican in 1808. In 1825 he succeeded Fuseli as professor of painting at the Royal Academy, resigned in 1832, and published his lectures on The History and Principles of Painting in 1833.

Phillips, Thomas Wharton. b. near Mount Jackson, Pa., Feb. 23, 1835; d. at New Castle, Pa., July 21, 1912. American oil promoter, legislator, and philanthropist. Beginning in 1861, he took part in the development of the Pennsylvania oil fields, eventually becoming one of the most prominent producers as head of the T. W. Phillips Gas and Oil Company. He served (1893-97) in Congress and originated the scheme for what was later known as the U.S. Industrial Commission, of which he served as a member. The Commission's reports (19 vols., 1900-02) led to the establishment of the U.S. Bureau of Corporations and to government surveys of labor and commerce. Among the educational and missionary enterprises supported by him were Oklahoma Christian University (now Phillips University), and the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

Phillips, Ulrich Bonnell. b. at La Grange, Ga., Nov. 4, 1877; d. Jan. 21, 1934. American historian, professor of American history at the University of Michigan (1911-29) and at Yale (1929 et seq.). He wrote Georgia and State Rights (1901) and Life and Labor in the Old South (1929), both winners of special prizes. He was author also of Life of Robert Toombs (1913) and American Negro Slavery (1918).

Phillips, Wendell. b. at Boston, Nov. 29, 1811; d. there, Feb. 2, 1884. American abolitionist, reformer, and orator. He was graduated (1831) from Harvard, attended the Harvard Law School, and established his practice at Boston after admission (1834) to the bar. His interest in the antislavery cause made him one of its leaders at the age of 26, when he protested the murder of the abolitionist editor Elijah P. Lovejoy. He devoted himself to lecturing in behalf of abolitionism and contributed to William Lloyd Garrison's organ, the Liberator. However, he differed with Garrison's doctrines in that Phillips did not espouse nonresistance and refused to tie the abolitionist cause to a political organization. But with Garrison he repudiated the federal Constitution on the ground that it was a compromise with the slave-owning element, and eventually called for the separation of North from South. He became (1865) president of the American Anti-Slavery Society and after the Civil War was active in behalf of penal reform, prohibition, woman suffrage, and the labor movement. In 1870 he was the unsuccessful candidate of the Labor Reform Party and the Prohibitionists for the governorship of Massachusetts. During his lifetime he was one of New England's leading orators and lecturers.

Phillips, William. b. in May, 1775; d. April 2, 1828. English mineralogist and geologist. He published Outlines of Mineralogy and Geology (1815), Introduction to the Knowledge of Mineralogy (1816), and others.

Phillips, William. b. at Beverly, Mass., May 30, 1878—. American diplomat. He served as assistant U.S. secretary of state (1917-20) and undersecretary (1922-24), and as U.S. minister to the Netherlands and Luxembourg (1920-22), and to Canada (1927-29) and Italy (1936-December, 1941). He was appointed (1942) head of the London division of the Office of Strategic Services. He was made (December, 1942) personal representative of President F. D. Roosevelt in India, with rank of ambassador, served as political adviser (1943-44) to General Dwight Eisenhower, and was a member (1946 et seq.) of the Anglo-American Commission on Palestine and chairman (1947 et seq.) of the Franco-Siamese Commission on Conciliation.

Phillips Andover Academy (an'dô.vér). [Former name, Phillips Academy.] Preparatory school for boys, situated at Andover, Mass.; founded by John and Samuel Phillips in 1778.

Phillipsburg (fil'ps.bérg). City in N. Kansas, county seat of Phillips County; trading and shipping point for a considerable corn-growing area. 2,589 (1950).

Phillipsburg. Town in N. New Jersey, in Warren County, on the Delaware River opposite Easton, Pa., ab. 55 mi. W. of Newark; manufactures of iron pipes. 18,919 (1950).

Phillips Exeter Academy (ek'se.tér). [Former name, Phillips Academy.] Preparatory school for boys, situated at Exeter, N.H.; founded by John Phillips in 1781.

Phyllis (fil'is). See Phyllis.

Phillipotts (fil'pòts), Eden. [Pseudonym in early works, Harrington Hext.] b. at Mount Abu, India, Nov. 4, 1862—. English novelist. His work includes regional novels of Devonshire, which have been highly regarded, detective stories, historical novels, poems, plays, and short stories. Author of Down Dartmoor Way (1895), Lying Prophets (1896), Children of the Mist (1898), Sons of the Morning (1900), The Good Red Earth (1901), The Striking Hours (1901), The River (1902), My Devon Year (1903), The Golden Felch (1903), The American Prisoner (1904), The Farm of the Dagger (1904), The Secret Woman (1905), Knock at a Venture (1905), The Portrevue (1906), The Sineux of War (1906; with Arnold Bennett), The Mother of the Man (1908), The Virgin in Judgment (1908), The Statue (1908; with Arnold Bennett), The Three Brothers (1909), Tales of the Tenements (1910), Wild Fruit, poems (1910), Demeter's Daughter (1911), The Beacon (1911), Widdecombe Fair (1913), Children of Men (1923), The Jury (1927), Minions of the Moon (1934), The Changeling (1943), and Through a Glass Darkly (1951).

Phillipotts, Mary Adelaide Eden. b. at Ealing, England, April 23, 1896—. English novelist and playwright; daughter of Eden Phillipotts, and collaborator with him on the play Yellow Sands (1926). Her novels include Man, a Fable (1922), A Marriage (1928), The Growing World (1934), The Gallant Heart (1939), Our Little Town (1942), and The Lodestar (1946). Author also of the plays Arachne (1920), Akhalton (1926), and Laugh With Me (1938).

Philo (fí'lo) or Philo Judaeus (jô.dé'us). [Also, Philo of Alexandria.] b. probably at Alexandria, c20 A.C.; d. after 40 A.D. Hellenistic Jewish philosopher of Alexandria. He went to Rome (c40 A.D.) at the head of an embassy of five Jews, to plead with Caligula for the uninterrupted exercise of their religion, a privilege that had been suspended because the Jews refused to give the emperor divine homage. His philosophy sought to reconcile Hellenistic doctrines, such as Neoplatonism, with the teachings of the Pentateuch.

Philobiblon (fil.ô.bib'lôn). Treatise on book collecting by Richard Aungerville (usually called Richard de Bury), bishop of Durham and chancellor of Edward III. It was finished in 1345, and was printed at Cologne in 1473.

Philo Byblius (fí'lo bib'lí.us). [Also, Herennius Byblius.] fl. c100 A.D. Greek grammarian from Byblus in Phoenicia, author of a work on Phoenician religion.

Philoctetes (fil.ók.té'téz). In Greek legend, a Greek warrior in the Trojan War, famous as an archer. He was the friend and armorbearer of Hercules, and set fire to the funeral pile of that hero. On his way to the Trojan War, he was wounded either by a serpent or accidentally by one of the poisoned arrows given him by Hercules, and was left to die on Lemnos. It was prophesied, however, that Troy could not be taken without the arrows of Hercules, so haste was made to bring Philoctetes to Troy, and there he was healed. It was Philoctetes who killed Paris. He was the subject of a drama by Sophocles entitled Philoctetes.

Philolaus (fil.ô.lá'us). fl. in the 5th century B.C. Greek philosopher, one of the chief of the Pythagoreans. Fragments of his works are extant.

Philomela (fil.ô.mé'lá). In Greek legend, the daughter of King Pandion of Athens, and sister of Procne, who was married to Tereus, king of Thrace. Tereus reported that Procne was dead and sent out for Philomela. When she arrived, he raped her and cut out her tongue, to prevent her telling. But Philomela embroidered her story and sent the cloth to Procne. In revenge Procne served the flesh of their son to Tereus and fled with her sister. Tereus followed them, but the pair were turned into birds by compassionate gods.

Philomela. Novel by Robert Greene, published in 1592.

Philomelion (fil.ô.mé'lí.on). Ancient name of Aksehir.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Philometor (fil.ô.mê.tôr). Surname (meaning "mother-loving") of various Eastern rulers, including Attalus III, Demetrius III (of Syria), and Ptolemy VI (of Egypt).
Philopator (fil.ô.pâ.tôr). Surname (meaning "loving his father") of various Eastern rulers, including Ariobarzanes II (of Cappadocia), Ptolemy IV (of Egypt), and Seleucus IV.

Philopoemen (fil.ô.pê.mên). b. at Megalopolis, Arcadia, Greece, c252 B.C.; put to death at Messene, Greece, 183 B.C. General of the Achaean League, called "the Last of the Greeks." He was distinguished at the battle of Sellasia (222) when the Spartans were defeated, was several times general (first in 208), defeated the Spartans at Mantinea (207), and defeated Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, in 192. He was killed after being captured by rebelling Messenians.

Philosophiae Naturalis Principia Mathematica (fil.ô.sôf.i.ê nat.ô.râ.îs prin.sip.i.â math.ê.mat'i.kâ). Full name of Principia.

Philosophus Autodidactus (fil.ô.sô.fus ô'tô.di.dak'tus). See under Autodidactus, or the Natural Man, The.
Philosophy of Composition, The. Critical essay by Edgar Allan Poe, published (1846) in Graham's Magazine. It ranks in modern times as one of the foremost statements of literary principles and procedure. Poe stresses beauty and unity of impression as essential elements of literary composition, and points to melancholy as "the most legitimate of all poetical tones." The essay employs the author's poem The Raven to designate and illustrate his objectives. The theories formulated in this essay are further developed in The Poetic Principle (1850).

Philostorgius (fil.ô.stôr'j.us). b. in Cappadocia, c364 A.D.; d. after 425. Greek ecclesiastical historian.

Philostate (fil.ô.strât). Thesaurus's master of the revels in Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Philostratus (fil.ô'stra.tus). [Surname "the Elder."] b. probably in Lemnos; fl. in the first part of the 3rd century A.D. Greek sophist and rhetorician. He wrote the life of Apollonius of Tyana, Eikones (Likenesses), Heroica, and Lives of the Sophists.

Philostratus. [Surname "the Younger."] fl. in the 3rd century A.D. Greek sophist.

Philoxenus (fil.ôk'se.nus). b. in Persia; fl. at the beginning of the 6th century A.D. Monophysite leader of the Eastern Church. He revised the Syriac Bible and later (508) prepared the Philoxenian version, which was throughout the 6th century the Monophysites' Bible. He was noted as a controversialist; he wrote 13 homilies on Christian life.

Philtre (fêl'tr). Le. [Eng. trans., "The Philter."] Opera by Daniel François Auber, with text by Eugène Scribe, produced at Paris in 1831. It treats the same subject as Gaetano Donizetti's L'Elisir d'Amore, and was very popular.

Phinehas (fin'ê.as). In Old Testament history, a high priest of Israel; son of Eleazar and grandson of Aaron. Ex. vi. 25.

Phintias (fin'ti.as). See under Damon and Pythias.

Phintias. Ancient Greek name of Lycia.

Phips (fips). Sir Constantine Henry. [Titles: 1st Marquis of Normanby, 2nd Earl of Mulgrave.] b. May 15, 1797; d. at London, July 28, 1863. English statesman and writer. He published his first novel, Matilda, in 1825, and in 1828 Yes and No. He was made captain general and governor of Jamaica in 1832, was made lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1835, and was colonial secretary (1839) and home secretary (1839-41), successively, in Lord Melbourne's administration. From 1846 to 1852 he was ambassador at Paris, and later minister at Florence (1854-58), provoking criticism at both posts for meddling in the politics of those states.

Phipps, Constantine John. [Title, 2nd Baron Mulgrave.] b. in England, 1744; d. at Liège, Belgium, Oct. 10, 1792. English arctic explorer. In 1773 he commanded an expedition in search of the Northwest Passage, but was stopped by ice in lat. 80°48' N. He wrote A Voyage toward the North Pole (1774).

Phipps, Sir Eric Clare Edmund. b. 1875; d. at London, Aug. 13, 1945. English diplomat who served as ambassador to Germany (1933-37) and France (1937-39).

Phipps, Henry. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 27, 1839; d. at Great Neck, Long Island, N.Y., Sept. 22, 1930. American manufacturer and philanthropist. A manufacturer of iron products, he became associated (1867) with Andrew Carnegie in the formation of the Union Iron Mills and thereafter, until the purchase (1901) of the Carnegie properties by the U.S. Steel Corporation, took a leading role in the development of the Carnegie holdings. He founded (1903) at Philadelphia the Henry Phipps Institute for the study, treatment, and prevention of tuberculosis, established (1905) the Phipps Tuberculosis Dispensary at the Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, supported the Sixth International Congress on Tuberculosis (Washington, 1908), and made possible the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic (1913 et seq.) of the Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Phips or Phipps (fips), Sir William. b. in Maine, Feb. 2, 1651; d. at London, Feb. 18, 1695. English colonial administrator in America, governor of Massachusetts (1692-94). In 1687, on a second expedition to recover sunken treasure in the Caribbean, he discovered some 300,000 pounds in Spanish gold; most of it went to Christopher Monck, 2nd Duke of Albemarle, who had financed the expedition, but Phips retained 16,000 pounds. His new wealth brought him a knighthood (1687) and official posts in the Massachusetts government. He led the expedition that captured (1690) Port Royal from the French, but failed in an attempt on Quebec and Montreal. The colony's charter having been canceled, he joined (1690) Increase Mather in a request to obtain an improved charter from William III. This was granted and Phips became (1692) royal governor of the combined colonies of Massachusetts and Plymouth. Despite Mather's support he was unable to cope with the difficulties of his position and as a result of a growing number of quarrels was recalled (1694) to England to answer charges of misgovernment. He died before trial. The witchcraft mania that swept the colony during his administration resulted in his appointing a commission to try witchcraft cases.

Phiz (fiz). Pseudonym of Browne, Hablot Knight.

Phlegethon (fleg'ê.thon). In Greek mythology, one of the five rivers surrounding Hades. It was a river of fire which flowed into the Acheron.

Phlegraean Fields or Plain (fleg'grê'an). [Italian, Campi Flegrei.] Volcanic district lying W of Naples, Italy, bordering on the Bay of Naples.

Phlasiia (fil.â'shi.â). In ancient geography, a small district in the Peloponnesus, Greece, NW of Argolis, NE of Arcadia, and S of Sicyonia.

Philpon (fil'pôn), Manon Jeanne (or Jeanne Manon). See Roland de la Platière, Madame.

Philius (fil'us). In ancient geography, a city in Phlasiia, Peloponnesus, Greece, ab. 14 mi. SW of Corinth. It was usually allied with Sparta.

Phlorina (flô'rê.nâ). See Florina.

Phnôm-Penh (pê.nôm'pen'). See Pnompenh.

Phnong (pê.nông'). [Also, Pnong.] General name given in Cambodia (Indochina) to any or all of the pagan mountain tribes; equivalent to the terms Moi (used in Viet-Nam) and Kha (used in Laos).

Phobos (fô.bos). In late Greek mythology, a son of and attendant of Ares, the god of war. He personifies the fear which terrifies whole armies and causes rout.

Phobos. Inner of the two satellites of the planet Mars, discovered by Asaph Hall at Washington, D.C., in August, 1877. It revolves in the plane of the equator of Mars, at a distance of 3,700 mi. from the surface of the planet, in 7 hours, 39 minutes, 14 seconds, and, as Mars revolves on its axis in over 24 hours, the satellite would appear to an observer on Mars to rise in the W and set in the E. It has the shortest period of revolution of any satellite in the solar system and is the only one which revolves faster than its primary rotates.

Phôbus (fê'bûs). German literary magazine founded in 1808 by Heinrich von Kleist and Adam Müller at Dresden. In it appeared Kleist's Der zerbrochene Krug and also Penthesilea, a part of Michael Kohlhaas and of Das Käthchen von Heilbronn. The magazine failed after its first year.

Phocaea (fô.sê.â). In ancient geography, a city in Ionia, Asia Minor, situated on the Aegean Sea ab. 25 mi. NW of Smyrna. The inhabitants emigrated in large numbers after an attack by the forces of Cyrus the Great in the 6th century B.C. It was the mother-city of Massilia, later Marseilles, France.

Phocaea. Asteroid (No. 25) discovered by Jean Chacornac at Marseilles, April 7, 1853.

Phocion (fô'shi.ôn). b. c.402 B.C.; put to death 317 B.C. Athenian statesman and general. He commanded the left wing of the Athenian fleet in the sea-fight with the Spartans off Naxos in 376, and in 339 commanded a force which successfully opposed Philip II of Macedon at Byzantium. He afterward became the leader of the aristocratic party, and advocated the policy of peace with Macedon in opposition to Demosthenes. As a result he was able to negotiate a favorable treaty with Philip after the disaster at Chaeirona (338). He led Athens during the period of Macedonian domination, but fell from power in 318. He was put to death by the democratic party on a false charge of treason.

Phocis (fô'sis). Nomos (department) in S central Greece, S of Phthiotis. In ancient times it was bounded by Locris on the N, Boeotia on the E, the Corinthian Gulf on the S, and Doris and Locris on the W. The surface of this region is generally mountainous. It contains Mount Parnassus, and was especially important because of its chief place, Delphi. It took part in the Sacred War (357-346 B.C.), and was defeated by Philip II of Macedon. The modern department was for a time combined with Phthiotis. Capital, Amphissus; area, ab. 900 sq. mi.; pop. 51,444 (1951).

Phocylides (fô.sil'i.dêz). b. in Ionia, c.500 B.C.; date of death not known. Greek gnomic poet. Nothing is known of his life.

Phoebe (fô'bê). In Greek mythology, a Titaness; daughter of Uranus and Gaea. She was the mother of Leto, and thus the grandmother of Artemis. The name Phoebe became synonymous with the moon in later writings, and hence synonymous both with Artemis and the Roman Diana, as identified with the moon.

Phoebe. Shepherdess in Shakespeare's As You Like It.

Phoebe. Character in The House of the Seven Gables (1851) by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Phoebeus (fô'bus). Town in SE Virginia, in Elizabeth City County: residential and fishing community. 3,694 (1950).

Phoebeus. In late Greek mythology, Apollo in his aspect of sun god and dispenser of light. As Phoebeus, Apollo took on many of the attributes of the older sun god, Helios, but never the chariot.

Phoebeus. See also Foix, Gaston, Comte de.

Phoenicia (fô.nish'ya). [Also, Phénicia.] In ancient geography, the strip of land on the coast of S Syria, between Mount Lebanon and the Mediterranean Sea. It was ab. 200 mi. in length, and its width did not exceed 35 mi. at the maximum; area, ab. 4,000 sq. mi. But the rivers (fed by the snows of Lebanon) which irrigated it, and the energy and enterprise of its inhabitants, made this narrow tract of land one of the most varied in its products, and gave it a place in history out of proportion to its size. The principal rivers were the Leontes (the modern Litani), N of Tyre, and the Orontes (the modern Nahr el Asy) in the N. The cedars of the mountains furnished building material; the coast furnished sand for glass and the purple snail for dyeing; and the inland plains were covered with orchards, gardens, and cornfields. Though the coastline was not deeply indented, the skill of the inhabitants secured them harbors. The ancient inhabitants of Phoenicia, the Phoenicians of the classical writers (Poeni or Puni designating the Carthaginians), are now considered by many scholars to have been Semites of the Canaanite group, though in Gen. x. 15 Sidon (Zidon), from whom the oldest city in the country derived its name, is represented as a descendant of Ham. They called themselves Canaanites, and their country Canaan. According to classical writers they emigrated from the Erythraean Sea. This would favor the assumption that the Phoenicians were identical with the Puni of the Egyptian monuments. The language of the Phoenicians was closely akin to Hebrew. They worshiped as principal divinities Baal and Astarte, besides the seven planets under the name of Cabiri. Phoenicia never formed a single state under one head, but rather a confederacy of cities. In the earliest period (1600-1100 B.C.) Sidon stood at the head of Phoenician cities; c.1100 Sidon lost the hegemony to Tyre; in 761 Aradus was founded in the N extreme of the country; and from these three cities Tripolis (the modern Tripoli, in Lebanon) was settled. South of Tripolis old Byblos was situated, while Berytus (the modern Beirut) in the N did not become prominent before the Roman period. To the territory of Tyre belonged Akko or Aco (the modern Acre), later called Ptolemais. Separated from the rest of Phoenicia lay Joppa (the modern Jaffa), on the coast of Palestine, which the Maccabees united with Palestine. The constitution of these Phoenician townships was aristocratic, headed by a king. The earliest king of Tyre mentioned in the Old Testament was Hiram, a contemporary and friend of David and Solomon. Under Hiram six kings are supposed to have ruled until Ethbaal or Ithobal, the father of Jezebel, wife of Ahab. Under Ethbaal's grandson, Pygmalion, contentions about the throne led to the emigration of his sister Elissa (Dido in Vergil) and the foundation of Carthage, the mighty rival of Rome. In the middle of the 9th century B.C., Phoenicia shared the fate of Syria at large. After the battle of Karkar (853 B.C.) it became tributary to Assyria. It made a struggle for independence under Shalmaneser IV, but was brought to submission by his successor, Sargon. In 609 Phoenicia came for a short time into the hands of Necho II, king of Egypt. Tyre was besieged for 13 years (585-572) by Nebuchadnezzar. Cyrus brought Phoenicia with the rest of the Babylonian possessions under Persian supremacy. But, owing to their skill in navigation, the Phoenicians retained a sort of independence. In 351 Sidon was destroyed by Artaxerxes III. The same fate befell Tyre at the hands of Alexander the Great in 332. In 64 Phoenicia was annexed by Pompey to the Syrian province of the Roman Empire. Less original and productive in the domain of thought and higher culture, the Phoenicians excel the other members of the Semitic family in contributions to material civilization. They were the merchants and manufacturers of antiquity. They were the most skillful shipbuilders and boldest navigators. All along the Mediterranean, even beyond Gibraltar, they established colonies. They sent colonies to Cyprus, Crete, and England, and it is not improbable that they worked the tin mines of Cornwall. They even ventured to circumnavigate Africa. The principal articles of their commerce were precious stones, metals, glassware, costly textiles, and especially purple robes. Their skill in architecture was exhibited in the temple of Solomon. Their alphabetic writing became the parent of all the alphabetic systems now in use. They also transmitted a knowledge of mathematics and of weights and measures to other nations. Of the Phoenician literature only a few fragments in Greek translation (by Sanchuniathon) have come down to us. Among the numerous Phoenician inscriptions, the most important is that of the sarcophagus of the Sidonian king Eshmunazar (who reigned in the 4th century B.C.) found in 1855, and now at Paris.

Phoenix (fô'niks). City in S central Arizona, in the irrigated Salt River Valley, capital of Arizona, and county seat of Maricopa County: largest city and commercial center of the state and chief shipping point for the produce of the surrounding region. The water from Roosevelt Dam has made this area so fertile that it produces much of the American crop of long-staple cotton, one seventh of the commercial lettuce crop, and citrus fruits, dates, winter vegetables, and cantaloupes. It is an important vacation resort because of the mild winter climate. Pop. of city, 65,414 (1940), 106,818 (1950); of urbanized area, 218,038 (1950).

Phoenix. Village in NE Illinois, in Cook County: a southern residential suburb of Chicago. 3,606 (1950).

Phoenix. In Greek legend, son of Agenor, king of Tyre, brother of Europa, and eponymous ancestor of the Phoenicians. Homer mentions him as the father of Europa. Another Phoenix in Greek legend was one of the tutors of Achilles, whom he attended during the Trojan War.

Phoenix. [Also, Phénix.] Greek name for the ancient Egyptian mythological bird, the bennu, a bird of great beauty which, after living 500 or 600 years in the Arabian wilderness, the only one of its kind, built for itself a funeral pyre of spices and aromatic gums, lighted the pile with the fanning of its wings, was burned upon it, but from its ashes rose new and young. The Phoenix was the Egyptian symbol for the rising sun and the hieroglyph for the sun. In Christian symbolism the Phoenix represents resurrection and immortality. The story exists in Arabia, Persia, and India. It is mentioned in the Old Testament (Job, xxix. 18). In heraldic symbolism the Phoenix is always represented in the midst of flames.

Phoenix, John. Pseudonym of Derby, George Horatio. Phoenix, The. Old London theater in Drury Lane. It was altered (1616-17) from a pit for fighting cocks, and was sometimes called the Cockpit. In 1583 it was one of the chief places of amusement; it was pulled down in 1649 by the Puritans, but not completely destroyed. Plays were staged there, even during Parliamentary rule, until soon after the Restoration, when newer theaters superseded it.

Phoenix, The. Comedy by Thomas Middleton, printed in 1607. It is founded on a Spanish novel, The Force of Love.

Phoenix and Turtle, The. Poem generally accepted as being by Shakespeare, first published in an appendix to a book called Lore's Martyr, by Robert Chester, in 1601.

Phoenix-Kind, The. Novel by Peter Quennell, published in 1931.

Phoenix Nest, The. Collection of poems published in 1593, edited by "R.S. of the Inner Temple, gentleman." It contains poems by Sir Walter Raleigh, George Peele, Thomas Lodge, Sir Edward Dyer, and Thomas Watson, among others.

Phoenix Park. Pleasure resort in Dublin, ab. 1,760 acres in extent, where the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish, chief secretary for Ireland, and Thomas H. Burke, undersecretary, occurred on May 6, 1882. The murders caused the government to institute severe measures against the Fenians, who were responsible; in return, the Fenians resorted to terrorism. C. S. Parnell denied all connection with either the murders or the extremist activity.

Phoenixville (fē'niks.vil). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Chester County, at the confluence of French Creek and the Schuylkill River, ab. 23 mi. NW of Philadelphia: meat packing and textile plants. 12,932 (1950).

Pholien (fo'lyān), Joseph. b. at Liège, Belgium, Dec. 28, 1884— Belgian politician. He served as a senator (1936 et seq.) and was minister of justice (1938-39). During World War II he remained in Belgium as liaison between the government-in-exile and the underground; he was imprisoned several times by the Nazis. After the war he helped to found the Social Christian Party; in 1950, after the abdication of King Leopold III in favor of Baudouin, he served as premier. In 1952 he resigned the premiership and served as minister of justice for a time, but when he was accused of leniency in his treatment of wartime collaborators he resigned that post as well.

"Phony War." Popular label given that period of World War II from the German-Russian subjugation of Poland in October, 1939, until the German invasion of Denmark and Norway in April, 1940. During this time little more than occasional border skirmishes on the Western Front and the Russo-Finnish War occurred, while Hitler was preparing to unleash German strength against the North and West.

Phorbos (fōr'bas). In Greek legend, son of Lapithes. He freed the Rhodians from a plague of serpents, and was honored by them as a hero. He was placed in the heavens as the constellation Ophiuchus (the Serpent-holder). Another Phorbos was a famous boxer, who challenged pilgrims en route to Delphi to contend with him, killed them, and so was slain by Apollo.

Phorcus (fōr'kus). [Also: Phorcys (fōr'sis), Phorkys (-kis).] In Greek mythology, a sea deity, leader of the Tritons. He was brother and consort of Ceto (a sea goddess) and father of the Phoreyads (especially the Graecae) and the Gorgons, and in some accounts of the Sirens and Scylla also.

Phorcys (fōr'si'adz). [Also: Phorides (fōr'si.dēz), Phorids (-sidz), Phorkyads (-ki.adz).] In Greek mythology, the daughters of Phorcus and Ceto. They are depicted as hideous and sharing between them but one tooth and one eye. In the second part of Goethe's Faust, Mephistopheles is turned into a Phoreyad.

Phormio (fōr'mi.ō). Comedy by Terence.

Phort Láirge (turt lór'ge). Irish name of Waterford.

Phosphorists (fōs'fō.rists). In Swedish literary history, a poetic school, of romantic tendency, which flourished in the first part of the 19th century. They were so named after their organ, Phosphorus. The leading writer of the school was Per Daniel Atterbom.

Phosphorus (fōs'fō.rus). See also Persant of India.

Phosphorus. In Greek mythology, the morning star; a son of Astraeus and Eos. It is also the name of the planet Venus when seen in the early dawn. Phosphorus is sometimes depicted as a youth carrying a blazing torch.

Photius (fō'shus). d. 892 or 891 A.D. Byzantine prelate and scholar. His sister-in-law was Irene, sister of Theodora, regent for the Emperor Michael III, and Photius rose to the position of imperial secretary. In 858, when the patriarch Ignatius was deposed for his rigidity in the controversy over treatment of the iconoclasts, Photius, a layman, was recipient of all the intermediate orders within a week and was made patriarch. The election was not recognized by Pope Nicholas I, who in 863 excommunicated and deposed Photius. Photius thereupon challenged the Pope's right to rule in the East, especially in view of certain Roman practices, such as the proposed insertion of filioque in the creed, and he issued (867) a decree excommunicating the Pope: this is generally considered to be the beginning of the schism between the Eastern and Western churches. Michael was killed in 867 and Basil I, who succeeded him, deposed Photius and reinstated Ignatius. Later there was a reconciliation and on Ignatius's death (877) Photius again became patriarch. In 879 he convened a synod at which papal legates were in attendance and, although Pope John VIII was willing to compromise and recognize him as patriarch, apparently Photius's insistence on removal of the filioque and on his jurisdiction over the Bulgarian church resulted in his again being excommunicated (882). In 886 Basil died and Photius was deposed by his successor Leo VI and exiled to an Armenian monastery, where he died. His chief works are Myriobiblion, a collection of extracts from and abridgements of 280 volumes of classical authors, the originals of which are now in large part lost; and Amphilochia, a collection of questions and answers on difficult points in Scripture.

Phra (prä). Siamese (Thai) and Burmese term for Buddha.

Phrixus (frik'sus). In Greek legend, the son of Athamas, king of Boeotia; his stepmother, Ino, so hated him and his sister Helle that she planned to kill them, and contrived to receive a false oracular message demanding the sacrifice of the two children to save the crops, but they escaped on the ram with the golden fleece. Phrixus safely reached Colchis and sacrificed the ram, but Helle fell off and was drowned. Phrixus was the father of that Argus who built the ship Argo for Jason and the Argonauts.

Phrygia (frij'i.a). In ancient geography, a country in Asia Minor, of varying boundaries. In the Persian period it comprised Lesser Phrygia, on the Hellespont, and Great Phrygia in the interior, bounded by Bithynia and Paphlagonia on the N, the Halys River on the E, the Taurus Mountains on the S, and Mysia, Lydia, and Caria on the W. Later the Galatians settled in the NE part. The inhabitants (Phrygians) were of undetermined origin, but are believed to have come from Europe. The country was overrun by the Cimmerians in the 7th century B.C., and was ruled later by Lydia, Persia, Macedon, and Rome. Gordius, who tied the Gordian knot, and Midas, his son, who possessed the golden touch, were legendary kings of Phrygia.

Phryne (fri'nē). [Original name, Mnesarete.] b. in Boeotia; fl. in the middle of the 4th century B.C. Athenian courtesan. She is supposed to have been the model of the picture Aphrodite Anadyomene by Apelles, and of the statue of the Cnidian Aphrodite by Praxiteles. According to legend, she was defended, on a capital charge, by her lover Hyperides; and when he failed to move the judges by his oratory, he bade her uncover her bosom, and by her beauty moved them to grant her acquittal.

Phryne Before the Areopagus (ai.ē.op'a.gus). Painting by Gérôme (1861).

Phrynicus (frin'ikus). fl. c500 B.C. Attic poet, considered one of the founders of Greek tragedy. His Capture of Miletus caused him to be fined for reminding the Athenians of the loss of that city. Aeschylus is said to have modeled his The Persians on The Phoenician Women of Phrynichus. He is credited with several innovations, such as using an actor in addition to the leader of the chorus, and placing female characters on the stage.

Phthia (thí'a). Region in ancient Greece, mentioned by Homer. Phthiotis is named after it.

Phthiotis (thí.ô'tis). [Also, Phthiotis.] Nomos (department) in C. Greece. In ancient times a district of Thessaly, it is now S. of the modern boundary of that region. In modern times it was combined for a period with Phocis, now a separate department bounding it on the S. On the E. it is bordered by the Gulf of Lania (ancient Maliaeus Sinus). Capital, Lamia; area, ab. 1,600 sq. mi.; pop. 147,701 (1951).

Phul (ful). Name in the Old Testament of Tiglath-pileser III.

Phurud (fû.rûd'). Third-magnitude star ζ Canis Majoris, in the left hind paw of the animal.

Phut (fut). People mentioned in Genesis and in a fragment of the annals of Nebuchadnezzar.

Phyfe (fif), Duncan. [Original surname, Fife.] b. in Scotland, c1765; d. at New York, 1854. American cabinetmaker. Brought to the U.S. in 1783 or 1784, he was apprenticed to a cabinetmaker at Albany, N.Y. Upon coming of age he moved to New York City, where at least as early as 1792 he had a business of his own. It appears to have been in 1793 or 1794 that he changed the spelling of his name from Fife to Phyfe. His business prospered from the first; in 1795 he moved to larger premises, and by 1816 he owned considerable property on Fulton Street. Taking two of his sons into the business, he changed the name of the concern in 1837 to Duncan Phyfe and Sons, and in 1840, after the death of one son, it was known as Duncan Phyfe and Son. During the years of his busiest operations, he is thought to have employed as many as 100 men. Until his retirement in 1847 he not only managed the business but continued to work with his own hands, and he is believed to have been skilled at carving as well as at design. Critics agree that Duncan Phyfe furniture of the early and middle periods is fully equal to the products of the most distinguished English cabinetmakers of the 18th and early 19th centuries. Phyfe's chairs, settees, and tables, which comprise the bulk of his output, are evidence that he was acquainted with the work of Heppelwhite, Sheraton, and the Adam brothers. Working at first almost entirely with solid mahogany but later making some use of mahogany veneer, satinwood, maple, ebony, and rosewood, he closely studied the evolution of furniture in France under the Directory, the Consulate, and the Empire, and incorporated elements of these styles in his own design. He was fond of the lyre form for chair backs, in which he also characteristically employed crossed slats, and he was a master of graceful, sweeping curves. He made extensive use of parallel beading and, especially on table legs, of the carved acanthus. Under the pressure of deteriorating public taste, after about 1825 he turned out a good deal of heavier furniture, which he personally disliked and deplored. Duncan Phyfe's design was much imitated by other cabinetmakers, so that not all "Phyfe" pieces can with certainty, in the absence of documentation, be traced to his shop.

Phyfe, William Henry Pinkney. b. at New York, June 13, 1855; d. March 7, 1915. American orthoepist, author of How Should I Pronounce? Seven Thousand Words Often Mispronounced, Five Thousand Words Often Misspelled, Twelve Thousand Words Often Mispronounced, and others.

Phyllis (fil'is). In Greek legend, the betrothed wife of Demophon, son of Theseus. Because he failed to come and marry her on a promised day, she hung herself, and was metamorphosed into an almond tree.

Phyllis. [Also, Phyllis.] In pastoral poetry, a conventional name for a maiden.

Physon (fis'kon), Ptolemy. See Ptolemy VII.

Physical Force Party. Name sometimes given to the Young Ireland Party, after Daniel O'Connell's repudiation of the use of force c1843.

Physician's Tale, The. [In some older sources, The Doctor's Tale.] One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, told by the Doctor of Physic. The Roman story of Appius Virginia, it was expanded from the same story in the Roman de la Rose, though the account purports to be direct from Livy.

Physick (fiz'ik), Philip Syng. [Sometimes called the "Father of American Surgery." b. at Philadelphia, July 7, 1768; d. there, Dec. 15, 1837. American surgeon and physician. He was noted for his operations on the bladder and for his invention of surgical instruments.

Physiologus (fiz.lof'gus). Bestiary, or collection of allegorical fables on animals. These were widely read in the Middle Ages. The word was sometimes used as if it were the name of the author. A Physiologus ascribed to Epiphanius was published at Rome in 1587. In the Western Church there is reference to a Latin Physiologus, ascribed to Saint Ambrose, which was condemned as apocryphal and heretical by Pope Gelasius I in a council of the year 496. There are several Latin manuscripts of such works, but none earlier than the 8th century. They are to be found also in Old High German prose of the 11th century, and in the Old French of Philippe de Thaun at the beginning of the 12th century. Another is of the 13th century, Le Bestiaire of Guillaume, Clerc de Normandie. Another is Le Bestiaire d'Amour of Richard de Fournival. Traditions taken from the Bestiaires found their way also into the Speculum Naturale of Vincent of Beauvais.

Phyeteus (fit'ē.us). In Greek mythology, Apollo as the Pythian god, i.e., as killer of the dragon, Python, and specifically as god of the Delphic oracle.

Piacentini (pyä.chen.tē'nē), Marcello. b. at Rome, Dec. 8, 1881. Italian architect. He is best known as the winner of the competition (1907) for the architectural reorganization of the center of Bergamo's lower city. Among his other designs are office and residential buildings, churches, theaters, the Banca d'Italia (1918) at Rome, and the triumphal arch (1931) at Genoa.

Piacenza (pyä.chen.tsa'). Province in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna. Capital, Piacenza; area, ab. 998 sq. mi.; pop. 294,785 (1936).

Piacenza. [Ancient name, Piacentia or Colonia Piacentia.] City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, the capital of the province of Piacenza, situated on the Po River E. of its junction with the Trebbia River, ab. 40 mi. SE of Milan. The district produces grain, fruit, wine, cheese, sugar beets, tobacco, and some petroleum, and has manufactures of buttons, macaroni, tomato paste, and chemical products. There are sugar refineries. Pop. of commune, 64,210 (1936); of city, 43,048 (1936).

Architecture. The Gothic Palazzo del Comune (1281) is one of the most beautiful medieval town halls of Italy, and there are a number of notable palaces, such as the Palazzo dei Tribunali (15th century) and the Palazzo Farnese (16th century). The cathedral, started in 1122, is a brick building in Lombardo-Romanesque style, with murals by Guercino and Carracci; the Church of San Sisto (1499-1511) contained until 1753 the Sistine Madonna by Raphael; the Renaissance Church of Santa Maria di Campagna contains murals by Pordenone; the Basilica di Sant'Antonio, the former cathedral, dates back to the 11th and 12th centuries. In World War II the windows of Santa Maria di Campagna were destroyed; repairs were required by Sant'Agostino, San Francesco, the Carmine Vecchio, and several other buildings, but the cathedral was unhurt.

History. Founded by the Romans in 219 B.C. as a fortress against the Gallic tribes, the city was made a terminus of the ancient Aemilian Way. It became part of the Lombard League in the 12th century, fell (1337) to the Visconti of Milan, incorporated into the States of the Church by Pope Julius II in 1512, and (together with Parma) given to the Farnese family by Pope Paul III in 1545. It was part of the duchy of Parma and Piacenza until 1860, when it was incorporated into Italy.

Piacenza, Duc de. Title of Lebrun, Charles François.

Piacenza, Duke of Parma and. See under Farnese.

Piaggia (pyad'ja), Carlo. b. at Lucca, Italy, 1830; d. in Sennar, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, 1882. Italian traveler and collector in Africa.

Piankashaw (pi.an'ka.shô). Tribe of North American Indians, formerly occupying the Wabash River valley in Indiana and Illinois. They were closely related to the fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; yh, then; g, d or j; g, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Miami Indians and were of Algonquian linguistic stock. A few of them survive on a reservation in Oklahoma, united with the Illinois Indians.

Piankhi (pě.āng'khi). [Also: Piankhy.] Ethiopian (Nubian) king (c745-c718), conqueror of Egypt (c721 B.C.). His campaign against Middle and Lower Egypt is described in an inscription found at Gebel Barkal on "a block of granite covered with writing on all sides up to the very edges" (Brugsch).

Piano Carpin (pyā'nō kār.pē'nē), Giovanni de. See Carpini, Giovanni de Piano.

Piano Quintet. Novel by Edward Sackville-West, published in 1925.

Pianoro (pyā.nō'rō). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Bologna, situated in the foothills of the Apennines, S of Bologna; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 10,055 (1936); of town, 1,115 (1936).

Piapiocos (pē.a.pō'kōz). See Papiocos.

Piar (pē.ār'), Manuel Carlos. b. in Curaçao, 1782; executed at Angostura (now Ciudad Bolívar, Venezuela), Oct. 16, 1817. Venezuelan general in the war for independence. He repeatedly defeated the Spaniards (1816-17), but eventually conspired against Simón Bolívar, was tried by court-martial, and shot.

Piaros (pē.a.rō'az). South American Indian tribe occupying the region of the Orinoco River adjoining the Colombian border. The language is still classified as an independent linguistic stock, but some Cariban affinities are seen. It is commonly synonymous with Salivan as a linguistic term, comprising and naming the eastern division of the stock.

Piast (pyāst). Reputed founder of the first Polish dynasty (about the middle of the 9th century).

Piasts. First dynasty of Polish rulers. It ended in Poland with the death of Casimir III in 1370, but continued some centuries longer in Mazovia and Silesia.

Piatigorsk (pyā.ti.gōr'ski). See Pyatigorsk.

Piatigorsk (pyā.ti.gōr'ski), Gregor. b. at Ekaterinoslav (now Dnepropetrovsk), Russia, April 20, 1903—Russian cellist.

Piatra-Neamț (pyā'tr.nyām'ts). Town in NE Rumania, in the province of Moldavia, on the Bistrița River ab. 64 mi. SW of Iași, in the foothills of the Carpathian Mountains; wood and textile industries. There is a church, built by Stephen the Great of Moldavia in 1497. Pop. 26,303 (1948).

Piatt (pīāt), Donn. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 29, 1819; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 12, 1891. American journalist. He was appointed (1851) judge of the court of common pleas in Hamilton County, Ohio, was later secretary of legation at Paris, and served on General R. C. Schenck's staff during part of the Civil War. He founded the Washington Capital, a strongly Democratic paper, and was its chief editor for two years. He wrote Memoirs of the Men who Saved the Union (1887) and The Lone Grave of the Shenandoah (1888).

Piatt, John James. b. at James' Mills (later Milton), Dearborn County, Ind., March 1, 1835; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 16, 1917. American poet and journalist; husband of Sarah Morgan Bryan Piatt. With William Dean Howells, he worked on the Ohio State Journal and was literary editor and correspondent (1869-78) for the Cincinnati Commercial. In 1871 he was made librarian of the House of Representatives, serving until 1875, and later was U.S. consul (1882-94) at Cork, Ireland. He wrote, conjointly with W. D. Howells, Poems of Two Friends (1860), and with his wife, The Nests at Washington and Other Poems (1864). He published also Poems in Sunshine and Firelight (1866), Western Windows, and Other Poems (1869), Landmarks (1871), Poems of House and Home (1878), A Book of Gold (1887), A Book of Gold (1889), The Ghost's Entry (1895), and Odes in Ohio (1897).

Piatt, Sarah Morgan Bryan. b. at Lexington, Ky., Aug. 11, 1836; d. at Caldwell, N.J., Dec. 22, 1919. American poet; wife of John James Piatt. With her husband she wrote The Nests at Washington and Other Poems (1864) and others. She published A Woman's Poems (1871), Voyage to the Fortunate Isles (1874), Dramatic Persons and Moods (1879), An Irish Garland (1884), Child's World Ballads (1887, 1895), The Witch in the Glass

(1888), An Enchanted Castle (1893), and Complete Poems (2 vols., 1894).

Piatti (pyāt'tē), Alfredo Carlo. b. at Bergamo, Italy, Jan. 8, 1822; d. near there, July 18, 1901. Italian cellist. He gave many concerts, playing at Munich with Liszt in 1843, and in the following year appearing at Paris, and in Germany and England.

Piauí (pyu.é'). [Also: Piauíh, Piauíh.] State in NE Brazil, bounded on the N by the Atlantic Ocean. Capital, Teresina; area, 96,262 sq. mi.; pop. 1,064,438 (1950).

Piauí River. [Also: Piauíh, Piauíh.] River in NE Brazil, in the state of Piauí, which flows N to join the Parnaíba River. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Piave (pyā'vā). [Latin, Plavis.] River in Italy, which flows into the Adriatic Sea ab. 20 mi. NE of Venice. Length, ab. 137 mi.

Piave, Battle of the. Military operation on the Italian-Austrian Front, in World War I. It began when the Austrians, in order to support the German offensive of 1918 on the Western Front, launched (June 15, 1918) an assault along a wide front against the Italian lines in the region of the Piave River. The main Austrian objectives were the rail centers of Verona and Padua. Five Austrian armies made small advances in crossing the Piave, but by July 6 their gains had been entirely dissipated by the Italian counterattack.

Piazza Armerina (pyāt'tsā ār.me.rē'nā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, ab. 13 mi. SE of Enna; rich sulfur mines; trade in olive oil and grain. The cathedral is a 16th-century baroque building; the Church of Sant' Andrea Fuori le Mura is a Norman building of the 11th century. Pop. of commune, 24,527 (1936); of town, 22,815 (1936).

Piazza del Campidoglio (pyāt'tsā del kām.pe.dō'lyō). Open square on the Capitoline Hill at Rome, the Area Capitolina of the ancient city. Until 1477 it was the general market of the city and remained the center of civic life after the market was removed to another location. The Senatorial Palace or city hall is mentioned as early as 1150. In 1538 the equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius was placed here, and in 1559 a plan was made, under the direction of Michelangelo, according to which the present arrangement of the buildings has been carried out: the Senatorial Palace in the center, the Palace of the Conservatori on the right, and the Museum of the Capitol on the left.

Piazza della Signoria (pyāt'tsā del'lā sē.nyō.rē'a) or Piazza del Granduca (del grān.dō'kū). Chief public square in Florence, Italy.

Piazza del Popolo (pyāt'tsā del pō.pō'lō). Square in the N part of modern Rome, where the Corso Umberto begins.

Piazza di Spagna (pyāt'tsā di spā'nyā). Public square in Rome; so called from the residence of the Spanish ambassador. John Keats died in a house overlooking the great flight of steps leading to the "Trinità dei Monti."

Piazza Tales (piāz'a), The. Collection of stories by Herman Melville, published in 1856. Among the tales are "The Encantadas," "Bartleby the Scrivener," and "Benito Cereno."

Piazzi (pyāt'tsē), Giuseppe. b. at Ponté in Valtellina, Italy, July 16, 1746; d. at Naples, Italy, July 22, 1826. Italian astronomer. He became professor of astronomy and mathematics at Palermo in 1781, director of the new observatory there in 1791, and director also of the observatory at Naples in 1817. He discovered the first asteroid, Ceres, Jan. 1, 1801, and published star catalogues in 1803 and 1814.

Piazzola sul Brenta (pyāt'tsō'lā sōl bren'tā). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Padova, situated on the Brenta River NW of Padua; important jute and silk manufacture; rice mills. Pop. of commune, 10,338 (1936); of town, 2,723 (1936).

Pi-Beseth (pī.bē'seth). Old Testament name of Bu-bastis.

Pibrans (pē'b'rāns). German name of Příbram.

Pibul Songgram (pē'būl sōng.grām'), Luang. b. near Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), July 14, 1897—. Siamese field marshal. He was one of the young officers who took part in the 1932 revolution that destroyed the absolute power of King Prajadhipok; he sat (1932) as a member of the first national assembly and became (1933) a member of the cabinet. In 1934 he was minister of defense and served as one of the triumvirate holding the reins of government in the absence of the young King Ananda Mahidol. He served (1938-44) as premier and minister of defense and did not resist the Japanese domination of his country during World War II. In 1944 he retired, but in 1947 returned to seize power once again and resume the premiership and defense (and finance) ministry. Twice (1939, 1949) he has officially changed the name of Siam to Thailand. In 1951 he was a central player in an attempted revolution; he was seized by a group of sailors and imprisoned aboard a warship which was sunk by the premier's adherents; he swam ashore.

Picabia (pē.kā'pyä). Francis. b. at Paris, Jan. 22, 1879—.

French cubist, dada, and surrealist painter, who contributed much to each of these movements. His early works were impressionistic. In 1910 he joined the cubists, and exhibited with them in 1912; in 1917 he formed a dada group at New York, with Man Ray, and continued to be an active dadist at Zurich, Barcelona, and Paris. Later he became a surrealist.

Picadome (pik'ä.döm). Unincorporated community in C Kentucky, a suburb of Lexington, 7,352 (1950).

Picado Michalski (pē.kä'thō mē.chäl'skē), Teodoro. b. at San José, Costa Rica, Jan. 10, 1900—.

Costa Rican statesman, president (1944-48) of Costa Rica. He was minister (1932) of public education, deputy, and president (to 1944) of the Congreso Nacional.

Picard (pē.kär), Charles Émile. b. at Paris, July 24, 1856; d. there, Dec. 11, 1941. French mathematician, contributor to analysis, algebraic surfaces, mechanics, and the theory of relativity. In mechanics certain theorems are known as "theorems of Picard," and in pure mathematics his name is remembered for the "group of Picard" and the "surfaces of Picard." He wrote a Cours d'analyse (1887) and a Traité d'analyse (3 vols., 1893-1901) which appeared in several editions.

Picard, Edmond. b. at Brussels, Belgium, 1836; d. 1924. Belgian lawyer, jurist, and man of letters. He served on the Belgian supreme court and was active as an essayist, poet, novelist, critic, dramatist, and writer of travel accounts. In the field of law he is noted as the initiator (1878) of the Pandectes belges. He founded (1901) the Free Academy, later called the Picard Academy. Among his critical works are Paradoxe sur l'avocat (1881), La Forge Roussel (1884), and Le Juré (1887). He wrote the travel accounts El Moghreb-al-Aksa (1889) and En Congolie (1896), the novel L'Amiral (1884), and plays including Jéricho (1901) and Ambidextre Journaliste (1904).

Picard, Jean. b. at La Flèche, France, July 21, 1620; d. at Paris, Oct. 12, 1682. French astronomer and Roman Catholic priest. While prior of Rillé in Anjou, he maintained his interest in astronomy, observed the solar eclipse of Aug. 25, 1645, with Pierre Gassendi, and in 1655 succeeded the latter in the chair of astronomy at the Collège de France, at Paris. Considered the father of modern astronomy in France, he devised new instruments and methods, and made observations of basic importance, including (1669-70) the most accurate measurement up to that time of an arc of a meridian of the earth. In 1669 also he observed stars on the meridian during daytime and determined their position. Going in person to Denmark in 1671, he ascertained the exact latitude and longitude of Tycho Brahe's observatory, Stjerneborg, on the island of Ven, in order fruitfully to use Brahe's data on the positions of heavenly bodies. His studies in this field led to the discovery of the aberration of light. Newton's calculations leading to the announcement of the law of gravitation were greatly facilitated by Picard's work. Picard had much to do with the establishment of the Paris Observatory, and recommended the appointment of his rival Giovanni Domenico Cassini as its first director, a generous gesture which was repaid with ingratitude. Picard also established Connaissance des temps in 1678, and wrote the first five issues of this publication, which has appeared annually since that time.

Picard, Louis Joseph Ernest. b. at Paris, Dec. 24, 1821; d. there, May 14, 1877. French republican politician. He was minister of finance in the government of national defense in 1870, and minister of the interior (1871-72).

Picards (pik'ardz). Sect in Bohemia about the beginning of the 15th century, suppressed by Jan Žižka in 1421. The Picards are said to have attempted, under the guise of restoring man's primitive innocence, to renew the practices of the Adamites, including going absolutely unclothed and maintaining the community of women.

Picardy (pik'är.dī). [French, Picardie (pē.kär.dē)]. Region and former government of N France. The capital was Amiens. It was bounded by Artois and Flanders on the N, Champagne on the E, Île-de-France on the S, and Normandy and the English Channel on the W, corresponding to the department of Somme and parts of Pas-de-Calais, Oise, and Aisne. It was composed of various counties, including, Amiennois, Vermandois, Ponthieu, and others. It was under the suzerainty of Flanders, but was united to France under Louis XI.

Picasso (pē.kä'sō), Pablo. [Full name, Pablo Ruiz y Picasso.] b. at Málaga, Spain, Oct. 25, 1881—.

Spanish cubist painter and sculptor, who, with Georges Braque, founded the cubist movement in 1907-08, at Paris, and who is probably the most influential and widely known painter of the 20th century. His father was an art teacher who became a professor at the Barcelona Academy of Fine Arts. Picasso first studied under his father, and showed exceptional talent by the time he was 10. At 15, he moved with his parents to Barcelona, and studied at the Barcelona Academy. In 1896 he went to the Royal Academy of San Fernando, at Madrid, but did not like it, so returned to Barcelona, where he first exhibited in 1897.

In 1900 he visited Paris, then returned to Spain. He remained at Barcelona until 1904, except for visits to Madrid (1901) and Paris (1901, 1902). In 1904 he settled permanently at Paris. His work was influenced by Casas, the impressionists, Toulouse-Lautrec, El Greco and (c1906) by Cézanne and by the primitive sculpture of Spain and West Africa. The period from 1901-06 includes his three most important early phases, known as the Blue, Acrobat, and Rose periods, so called because of the predominance of a single tone or subject matter. In 1907 he completed the Demoiselles d'Avignon, considered to be the first cubist painting. A group of artists were attracted to him at this time, including the painters Braque and Derain, and the writers Max Jacob, Guillaume Apollinaire, and Gertrude Stein. From 1908 to 1925 he developed the various forms of cubism, such as analytic cubism, collage, and synthetic cubism. About 1917 his interest in the Russian Ballet and the drawing of Ingres brought his return to a more traditional style, which became more neoclassic during the early 1920's. About 1925 he became interested in surrealism. Although the works after this date were mainly surrealist, he also did many almost entirely abstract paintings, some sculpture and constructions, and a few realistic portraits and figures. His output has been enormous, and his work has been exhibited throughout Europe and North and South America. A list of his important works includes The Blue Room, Two Acrobats with a Horse, Boy Leading Horse, The Guitarist, Mother and Child, Woman with Fan, Woman with Loaves, Portrait of Gertrude Stein, Demoiselles d'Avignon, Portrait of Kahnweiler, Harlequin, Still Life with Chair Caning, Ma Jolie, Dog and Cock, The Race, Girl with Dark Hair, Card Player, Green Still Life, Three Musicians, Girl Before a Mirror, Woman in White, Seated Woman, Seated Bather, Guernica, Portrait of a Lady, designs for five ballets, many drawings, etchings, including the Minotaur series, lithographs, illustrations for over 50 books, a play, and a number of poems.

Picayune (pik'ä.yön). City in S Mississippi, in Pearl River County, near the Pearl River; tung-oil center; lumbering, naval stores, crescenting, box, and broom-handle industries. 6,707 (1950).

Piccadilly (pik'ä.dili). Great thoroughfare in London between Hyde Park Corner and the Haymarket. The street was named from a house of entertainment (Piccadilly House) which stood in the Haymarket in the time of Charles I. The W portion of Piccadilly was then called Portugal Street.

Piccard (pē.kär), Auguste. b. at Basel, Switzerland, Jan. 28, 1884—.

Swiss physicist; brother (identical twin) of Jean Félix Piccard. Educated at Basel and fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; th, then; d, d o r j; s, s o r sh; t, t o r ch;

Zurich, he was professor of physics (1922-40) at the University of Brussels. He is noted for his studies of atmospheric electricity and radioactivity, made in an airflight gondola and special balloon devised by him for exploring the stratosphere and investigating cosmic rays. With his assistant Charles Kipfer he made an ascent (over Augsburg, Germany, in May, 1931) of 51,793 ft.; with his assistant Max Cosyns he made an ascent (over Zurich, in August, 1932) of ab. 55,500 ft., establishing an altitude record. He has since made several bathysphere descents for scientific purposes.

Piccard, Jean Félix. b. at Basel, Switzerland, 1884—. Swiss aeronautical engineer and chemist; brother (identical twin) of Auguste Piccard. He ascended 57,549 ft. in a balloon with his wife (1934) and ascended in first manned flight of multiple free balloons (1936).

Piccinni (pĕt.chĕn'ĕ) or Piccini (pĕt.chĕ'nĕ), Nicola. b. at Bari, Italy, 1728; d. at Paris, May 7, 1800. Italian composer of opera. In 1776 he went to Paris, the scene of the famous quarrel between his followers and those of Christoph Willibald Gluck. He died impoverished. Among his works are La Cecchina ossia la Buona Figliuola (1760), which had a great success; Roland (1778); Atys (1780); and, in opposition to Gluck, Iphigénie en Tauride (1781). Gluck's opera was the more successful.

Picciola (pĕ.chi.ô'la; Italian, pĕt.chô'la). Story of the love of a prisoner for a flower, written by Joseph Xavier Boniface Saintine and published 1836. The sketch won for its author the Montyon prize and the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Piccirilli (pĕt.chĕ.rĕl'le), Attilio. b. at Massa, Italy, May 16, 1868—. American sculptor; brother of Furio Piccirilli. He came (1888) to the U.S. with his brother with whom he opened a studio at New York. His work, following neoclassicist lines, includes busts, figure groups, and architectural sculpture. He executed two reliefs, cast in glass, over the entrance to the Palazzo d'Italia at Rockefeller Center, New York. He is known also for his Maine Monument and Firemen's Memorial, both at New York. He was awarded (1932) the Jefferson presidential medal for his services as a U.S. citizen.

Piccirilli, Furio. b. at Massa, Italy, March 14, 1870—. American sculptor; brother of Attilio Piccirilli. He came (1888) to the U.S. with his brother, with whom he opened a studio at New York. He is represented at the Metropolitan Museum of Art by a seal in black marble. He executed four groups for the Court of the Seasons at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and created the sculptural decoration for the Parliament House at Winnipeg, Canada.

Piccolomini (pĕk.kô.lô'mĕ.nĕ). Italian noble family, a branch of which settled in Germany. Both lines became extinct in the 18th century.

Piccolomini, Die. Tragedy by Schiller (1799), forming the second play in the trilogy of Wallenstein.

Piccolomini, Enea Silvio. Original name of Pope Pius II.

Piccolomini, Francesco Todeschini. Original name of Pope Pius III.

Piccolomini, Maria. b. at Siena, Italy, 1834; d. at Florence, in December, 1899. Italian opera singer. She was a coloratura soprano. She left the stage in 1860, and soon after married the Marchese Gaetani.

Piccolomini, Prince Octavio. [Title, Duke of Amalfi.] b. 1599; d. at Vienna, Aug. 10, 1656. General in the Thirty Years' War, in the Imperialist and later in the Spanish service. He was one of those asking (1630) for Wallenstein's recall as Imperialist general against Gustavus Adolphus, but was instrumental in bringing about the downfall and death of Wallenstein in 1634. He was defeated by Lennart Torstenson at Breitenfeld in 1642. In 1643 he entered the Spanish service, but by 1648 was again with the Imperialists and as general in chief was in charge of the last campaign of the Thirty Years' War. He was one of the commissioners (1648-49) appointed to execute the Peace of Westphalia.

Pic de Néthou (pĕk də nĕ.tô). See Aneto, Pico de.

Pic des Écrins (pĕk də ză.kraŋ). See Barre des Écrins.

Pic de Vignémale (pĕk də vĕ.nyĕ.mâl). See Vignémale, Pic de.

Pic du Midi de Bigorre (pĕk dû mi.dĕ də bĕ.gôr). [Also, Pic du Midi.] Mountain in the Pyrenees, in the department of Hautes-Pyrénées, France, ab. 20 mi. S of Tarbes. Elevation, ab. 9,440 ft.

Pic du Midi d'Ossau (pĕk dû mi.dĕ do.sô). Mountain in the Pyrenees, in the department of Basses-Pyrénées, France, ab. 35 mi. S of Pau. Elevation, ab. 9,465 ft.

Picenes (pi.sĕ'nĕ). Specifically, the people of Picenum in ancient Italy, ethnologically and linguistically related to the Illyrians. The term is also a generic regional and cultural term, however, for all the people E of the Apennines from Rimini to Vasto. The Picenes were a warlike merchant people, practiced earth burial, and had many amber and ivory ornaments and carvings, and bronze figures and bowls.

Picenum (pi.sĕ'nŭm). In ancient geography, a territory in Italy, lying between the Adriatic Sea and the Apennines. It was bounded by Umbria on the NW and W, the Sabines on the SW, and the Vestini on the S. It was reduced by Rome in 268 b.c., and took part in the Social War against Rome in 90 b.c. Capital, Asculum Picenum.

Pichardo y Tapia (pĕ.châr'thō ē tā'pyā), Esteban. b. at Santiago de los Caballeros, Dominican Republic, Dec. 26, 1799; d. at Havana, Cuba, 1879. Cuban author. He published several geographical works on Cuba, and a dictionary of Cuban provincialisms (3rd ed., 1862).

Pichegru (pĕsh.grŭ), Charles. b. at Arbois, Jura, France, Feb. 16, 1761; committed suicide or was assassinated in prison, April 5, 1804. French general, distinguished as commander of the Army of the Rhine in 1793, of the Army of the North in 1794, and especially in Belgium in 1794. He conquered the Netherlands in 1793, suppressed the Germinal insurrection at Paris in April, 1795, was a member of the Council of Five Hundred, and was implicated in the conspiracy of Fructidor (1797). He escaped to England but returned to France to engage in the unsuccessful Cadoudal conspiracy against Napoleon (1803-04).

Picher (pič'ĕr). City in NE Oklahoma, in Ottawa County; zinc mining, 3,951 (1950).

Pichincha (pĕ.chĕn'chā). Province in N Ecuador. Capital, Quito; area, 6,474 sq. mi.; pop. 321,569 (est. 1944).

Pichincha. Volcano in Ecuador, ab. 6 mi. NW of Quito. Its lower slope was the site of a battle (1822). Elevation, ab. 15,410 ft.

Pichincha, Battle of. Battle fought May 24, 1822, on the side of the Pichincha volcano (at an elevation of ab. 10,000 ft.), near Quito, Ecuador, between the Spaniards and the patriots under Antonio José de Sucre. The victory of the latter freed Ecuador from Spanish rule.

Pichler (pič'lĕr), Karoline. [Maiden name, von Greiner.] b. at Vienna, Sept. 7, 1769; d. there, July 9, 1843. Austrian novelist, author of Agathokles (1808) and other historical novels.

Pichon (pĕ.shôn), Stéphen Jean Marie. b. at Arnay-le-Duc, Côte-d'Or, France, Aug. 10, 1857; d. at Vers-en-Montagne, Jura, France, Sept. 19, 1933. French political leader and diplomat, foreign minister (1906-11, 1917-20). He was a disciple of Georges Clemenceau, whom he followed while a deputy (1885-93). He entered the diplomatic service, was minister to Haiti (1894), Brazil (1896), and China (1897), and was resident general (1901) at Tunis. He became (1906) a senator, and held the foreign ministry in both Clemenceau cabinets.

Pick (pĭk), Arnold. b. at Gross-Meseritz (now Velké Meziříč), in Moravia, July 20, 1851; d. at Prague, April 4, 1924. Austrian neuropathologist. He is best known for his description of the circumscribed atrophy of the cerebral cortex (1892), called Pick's disease, and for his description of agranulomatism (1913). His textbook on neuropathology is a classic. He was the first to put C. Wernicke's ideas on aphasia on a pathoanatomic basis (1909). Author of Beiträge zur Pathologie und pathologischen Anatomie des Centralnervensystems (1879), Studien zur Gehirnpathologie und Psychologie (1908), Die agranulomatischen Sprachstörungen (1913), and Die neurologische Forschung in der Psychopathologie und andere Aufsätze (1921).

Pick, Ernst Peter. b. at Jaroněf, in Bohemia, May 18, 1872—. Austrian pharmacologist. He is known for his studies on medical (physiological and pathological) chemistry, serology, chemical constitution of antigens, immunology, pharmacology of diuresis, and the heart and nervous system.

Pickard (pik'ard), Greenleaf Whittier. b. at Portland, Me., Feb. 14, 1877—. American electrical engineer and inventor. He was consulting engineer (1907-30) for the Wireless Specialty Apparatus Company, and consultant (1932-42) to the R.C.A. Victor Company of Massachusetts. A pioneer in the transmission of speech by electrical waves, he invented the static eliminator, the crystal detector, and the radio compass.

Pickel (pik'el), Konrad. Original name of Celtes, Conrad.

Pickens (pik'en-z), Andrew. b. near Paxtang, Bucks County, Pa., Sept. 19, 1739; d. in Pendleton district, S.C., Aug. 11, 1817. American Revolutionary general. He was noted as a partisan commander in South Carolina (1779-81), served with distinction at Cowpens in 1781, and captured Augusta, Ga., in 1781. He was a member of Congress (1793-95).

Pickens, Fort. Fort in Florida, on Santa Rosa Island, in Pensacola harbor. It was weakly garrisoned by Union troops under Lieutenant A. J. Slemmer at the outbreak of the Civil War, but refused to surrender in January, 1861, and was held until reinforced.

Pickens, Francis Wilkinson. b. in St. Paul's Parish, Colleton district, S.C., April 7, 1805; d. at Edgefield, S.C., Jan. 25, 1869. American politician and diplomat. A states-rights advocate, he wrote a series of letters (1830) under the pseudonym of "Hampten" in which he urged Nullification for South Carolina. He was elected (1832) to the state legislature and subsequently organized more than 2,000 men to resist federal compulsion during the Nullification controversy. He served (1834-43) in Congress and subsequently became a member of the South Carolina senate. Although he was prominent in his state's secession movement after 1850 and was a delegate to the Nashville Convention held that year, he later became a moderate. He served (1858-60) as U.S. minister to Russia, returning to counsel a moderate course during the secession crisis; however, he changed his position, backing the expediency of immediate secession, and was elected governor of South Carolina in December, 1860. Pickens is assigned the responsibility for the attack (Jan. 9, 1861) of the Morris Island batteries on the Star of the West when that vessel was dispatched to relieve Fort Sumter. Although responsibility for the forts in Charleston Harbor was taken over by the Confederate government on Feb. 12, 1861, Pickens was in touch with Lincoln and the latter's confidential agent, Ward H. Lamon, in regard to Union action on Fort Sumter. After his retirement from the governorship in 1862, he resided at his Edgefield estate. In 1865 he appeared at the state constitutional convention to urge support of Johnson's reconstruction program.

Pickens, Israel. b. in North Carolina, Jan. 30, 1780; d. near Matanzas, Cuba, April 23, 1827. American politician. He was Democratic member of Congress from North Carolina (1811-17), governor of Alabama (1821-25), and U.S. senator (1826).

Pickerbaugh (pik'er.bô), Dr. Almus. Character in Arousmith (1925) by Sinclair Lewis.

Pickering (pik'er-ing), Charles. b. in Susquehanna County, Pa., Nov. 10, 1805; d. March 17, 1878. American naturalist; grandson of Timothy Pickering. He was naturalist with the Wilkes expedition of 1838-42. He wrote Races of Man and their Geographical Distribution (1848), Geographical Distribution of Animals and Man (1854), Geographical Distribution of Plants (1861), and others.

Pickering, Edward Charles. b. at Boston, July 19, 1846; d. Feb. 3, 1919. American astronomer and physicist; great-grandson of Timothy Pickering, and brother of William Henry Pickering. He graduated at Harvard in 1865, was professor of physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (1868-77), and was professor of astronomy and geodesy and director of the observatory at Harvard from 1876. He did important work in the measurement of the brightness of stars, using photometers he devised, and in stellar spectroscopy; the inclusiveness of his measurements covers the southern sky, since (with his brother) he established a station of the Harvard Observatory at Arequipa, Peru, in 1891. He published Elements of Physical Manipulation (1874-76) and others.

Pickering, John. b. at Salem, Mass., Feb. 7, 1777; d. at Boston, May 5, 1846. American philologist; son of Timothy Pickering. He published Vocabulary of Americanisms (1816), a Greek-English lexicon (1826), Remarks on the Indian Languages of North America (1836), and others.

Pickering, Timothy. b. at Salem, Mass., July 17, 1745; d. there, Jan. 29, 1829. American soldier, politician, and public official, U.S. secretary of state (1795-1800) under Washington and John Adams. He was graduated (1763) from Harvard and became a clerk in the office of the register of deeds for Essex County, where he subsequently served as selectman, town clerk, and representative in the General Court. He was active in the pre-Revolutionary agitation and in 1766 was commissioned a lieutenant in the Essex County militia. He wrote An Easy Plan of Discipline for a Militia (1775), which was adopted by Massachusetts in 1776 and was used in the American army until its replacement by Baron Friedrich von Steuben's manual. He was elected (1774) register of deeds and became (1775) colonel of the 1st Regiment of Essex County militia. He took part in the winter campaign in New York and New Jersey (1776-77) and accepted (May, 1777) the offer, made by Washington, of the post of adjutant general of the Revolutionary army. He served in this position until January, 1778, having already been elected to the board of war, and became (Aug. 5, 1780) quartermaster general, serving in that capacity until peace was concluded with Great Britain. Going into business at Philadelphia, he moved (1778) to the Wyoming Valley in western Pennsylvania when the postwar economic depression occurred, and he organized the new county of Luzerne, which he represented (1789-90) at the state convention for the ratification of the federal Constitution. In 1790-91 he was sent on a special mission to the Seneca Indians and was appointed (Aug. 12, 1791) U.S. postmaster general by President Washington. He became (Jan. 2, 1795) U.S. secretary of war and took office as U.S. secretary of state in August, 1795. A vigorous opponent of the French Revolution, he favored preparations for war against France in 1798 and entered into open and secret opposition to President Adams's policy of conciliation. Dismissed from office on May 10, 1800, he returned to farming on his Pennsylvania estate, which he subsequently sold in order to move to Massachusetts, where he followed farming at Danvers and then at Wenham. Since he was a firm Federalist and a leading member of the Essex Junto, his career in the U.S. Senate (1803-11) was marked by fierce opposition to the Republican administrations of Jefferson and Madison. He served (1812-13) on the executive council of Massachusetts and was a member of Congress from 1813 to 1817.

Pickering, William. b. April 2, 1796; d. at Turnham Green, London, April 27, 1854. English publisher. He began (1820) his business at Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, moving to larger quarters at Chancery Lane in 1824, and to Piccadilly in 1842. He became known (1821-31) for his publication of small, finely printed volumes, including the Diamond Classics (24 vols., representing such authors as Shakespeare, Milton, Isaac Walton, Homer, Horace, Vergil, Terence, Cicero, Dante, and Petrarch) and the widely used Aldine Edition of the British Poets (53 vols., including Chaucer, Milton, Dryden, Cowper, Collins, Burns, Gray, Pope, and Swift). In 1830 Pickering adopted the famous Aldine trademark (a dolphin twined round an anchor) of the Italian printer Aldus Manutius, adding to it the phrase "Aldi Discip. Anglvs." He also published Hume, Smollett, Johnson, and other 18th-century authors in the Oxford Classics and brought out Alexander Dyce's scholarly editions of Greene, Peele, and Webster.

Pickering, William Henry. b. at Boston, Feb. 15, 1858; d. in Jamaica, Jan. 17, 1938. American astronomer; brother of E. C. Pickering. He was assistant professor of astronomy at the Harvard Observatory from 1887. With his brother, he established the Arequipa station of the Harvard Observatory in 1891, the Flagstaff, Ariz., observatory in 1894, and a station in Jamaica in 1900, and led eclipse expeditions in 1878 (Colorado), 1886 (West Indies), 1889 (California), 1893 (Chile), and 1900 (Georgia). The Lalande prize of the French Academy was awarded to him in 1905 for the discovery of the ninth and tenth satellites of the planet Saturn. He predicted (1907 et seq.) the existence and position of the ninth planet (Pluto, discovered in 1930). He influenced his brother, director of the Harvard Observatory, to begin the huge photographic survey of the sky, and himself made observation of the Martian "lakes," the lunar craters, the nebulosity in Orion, and the third moon of Jupiter. In addition to reports in technical journals, he wrote The Moon (1903), Lunar and Hawaiian Physical Features Compared (1906), and Mars (1921).

Pickett (pik'et), Albert James. b. in Anson County, N.C., Aug. 13, 1810; d. at Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 28, 1858. American historian.

Pickett, George Edward. b. at Richmond, Va., Jan. 25, 1825; d. at Norfolk, Va., July 30, 1875. American Confederate general, commander of the troops which made "Pickett's charge" (July 3, 1863) at the battle of Gettysburg. He was graduated (1846) from West Point, served in the Mexican War, was on garrison duty in Texas (1849-56), and thereafter, until his resignation from the army in 1861, was on frontier duty in the Northwest. Commissioned a colonel in the Confederate army, he became (February, 1862) a brigadier general and took part in the fighting at Williamsburg, Seven Pines, and Gaines's Mill. Wounded during the last-named battle, he returned to his command after the first Maryland campaign. He was promoted (October, 1862) to the rank of major general, and was assigned to the command of a Virginia division. On the last day (July 3, 1863) of the three-day battle of Gettysburg, his troops made the famous charge over half a mile of broken terrain, braving deadly Union fire that reduced Pickett's ranks by 75 percent. The action, which was the last important attempt of the Confederates at Gettysburg, has gone down in military history as one of the outstanding examples of Confederate valor. After Gettysburg, Pickett was assigned to the command of the Department of Virginia and North Carolina. He led the advance from Petersburg, Va., toward New Bern, N.C., in February, 1864, and in April, 1864, his command retook Plymouth, N.C. Pickett's division, during the Union assault on Petersburg, gave a high account of itself in the fighting at Five Forks (April 1, 1865).

Pickford (pik'ford), Mary. [Original name, Gladys Smith.] b. at Toronto, Canada, April 8, 1893--. American actress. She was married to Owen Moore, from whom she was divorced in 1920, married (1920) Douglas Fairbanks, from whom she was divorced in 1935, and married (1937) Charles "Buddy" Rogers. She made her first stage appearance at the age of five and came to prominence as a screen actress, starring in such films as The New York Hot, M'iss, Tess of the Storm Country, Daddy Long Legs, Pollyanna, Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm, Poor Little Rich Girl, and Little Lord Fauntleroy. Her ingenious roles brought her popular acclaim as "America's Sweetheart." She was one of the founders of Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., and is a part-owner of United Artists. She is the author of Why Not Try God? (1934) and My Rendezvous with Life (1935).

Pickle the Spy (pik'l). See Macdonell, Alastair Rudah.

Pickthall (pik'thól), Marmaduke (William). b. at Chillesford, Suffolk, England, April 7, 1875; d. at St. Ives, Cornwall, England, May 19, 1936. English journalist, traveler, and novelist. He traveled on the Continent, and in Egypt, Turkey, and Syria, wrote pro-Turkish articles (1913) for the New Age, and edited (1920-24) the Bombay Chronicle, the Hyderabad Quarterly Review, and Islamic Culture. Author of All Pools (1900), Said the Fisherman (1903), Enid (1904), Brendle (1905), The House of Islam (1906), The Myopes (1907), The Children of the Nile (1908), The Valley of the Kings (1909), Pot-au-Feu (1911), Larkmeadow (1912), Veiled Women (1913), With the Turk in War-Time (1914), Tales from Five Chimneys (1915), The House of War (1916), Knights of Arabi (1917), Oriental Encounters (1918), Sir Limpidus (1919), The Early Hours (1921), As Others See Us (1922), and The Meaning of the Glorious Koran (1930).

Pickwick Papers (pik'wik). [Full title, The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club.] Story by Charles Dickens, published serially in 1836-37. It takes its name from its chief character, Mr. Samuel Pickwick, the founder of the Pickwick Club. It comprises picaresque and generally hilarious adventures, culminating in the boisterous burlesque of legal chicanery and formality in the Bardell-Pickwick breach-of-promise trial. In describing Mr. Pickwick's subsequent imprisonment in the Fleet, Dickens sounds for the first time in one of his major works the note of social criticism which marks much of his writing.

Pico. Spanish (pē'kō) and Portuguese (pē'kō) word for "mountain peak"; for entries not found immediately below see the distinguishing element of the name.

Pico (pē'kō). Volcanic island in the Azores. The highest elevation rises precipitously to ab. 7,613 ft. above sea level. On the lower slopes are villages with carefully tilled gardens. It has a port, and was once one of the great whaling centers of the world. Emigration to the U.S. was considerable during the late 19th century, particularly to New England sea towns (the descendants of these emigrants make up a large percentage of today's New England fishermen). Area, ab. 170 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 22,000.

Pico della Mirandola (pē'kō del'la mē.rān'dō.lā), Count Giovanni. b. Feb. 24, 1463; d. at Florence, Nov. 17, 1494. Italian humanist and philosopher, one of the leading scholars of the Italian Renaissance. After study that took him through France and Italy and made him master of Greek, Latin, Hebrew, and Arabic and gave him insight into the Cabala, he came (1486) to Rome. There he published a set of 900 propositions in theology, philosophy, mathematics, and other subjects that he was prepared to defend; no answer was forthcoming, but Pope Innocent VIII accused him of heresy, and Pico was forced to issue an Apologia on the theses. In 1493 Alexander VI cleared him of the taint of heresy. He left (1487) Rome and traveled in Italy, making his base at Florence, where his friend Poliziano and Marsilius Ficinus lived. He was for some time under Savonarola's influence and appears to have planned to become a missionary preacher, but he died before he could carry out the scheme. He was the author of the Heptaplus (1489), a mystical account of the creation, In Astrologia, an attack on astrology, and others.

Picón (pē'kōn'), Jacinto Octavio. b. in Spain, 1851; d. 1924. Spanish novelist and art critic, who initiated the erotic novel in Spain. His polished and artistic style is best illustrated in his novel Dulce y sobroso. He was intensely anticlerical.

Piconnerie (pē'kon.rē), Thomas Robert Bugeaud de la. See Bugeaud de la Piconnerie, Thomas Robert. Picot (pē'kō), Auguste Henri Marie. See Dampierre, Auguste Henri Marie Picot, Marquis de.

Picot, François Édouard. b. at Paris, Oct. 17, 1786; d. there, March 15, 1868. French genre and portrait painter. He won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1813, and studied for five years at Rome. Cabanel, Bouguereau, and other well-known artists were his pupils.

Picou (pē'kō), Henri Pierre. b. at Nantes, France, Feb. 27, 1824; d. there, July 18, 1895. French historical and genre painter.

Picquart (pē'kär), Georges (Marie). b. at Strasbourg, France, Sept. 6, 1854; d. at Amiens, France, Jan. 19, 1914. French army officer, best known for his role as a defender of Captain Alfred Dreyfus during the Dreyfus Affair. He served in the French colonial forces in Algeria and Indochina before becoming involved (1894 et seq.) in the Dreyfus Affair, in connection with which he was retired from the army in 1898 and later imprisoned. Picquart had uncovered evidence to show that the conviction of Dreyfus was based on forgery. After Émile Zola's conviction, Picquart was himself accused of forgery. Promoted (1906) to brigadier general by a special law, he was war minister (1906) in the Clemenceau cabinet.

Picquigny (pē'kē.nyē). Village in the department of Somme, France, ab. 9 mi. NW of Amiens. A treaty was concluded there between France and England in 1475; Edward IV's army left France in return for a money payment.

Picrocholo (pē'kro.shol). In François Rabelais's Gargantua and Pantagruel, a character supposed by some to represent either Ferdinand II of Aragon or Charles V.

Pictaviensis (pik.tā.vien'sis). Latinized surname of Saint Hilarius or Hilary.

Pictaviensis, Gilbertus. See Gilbert de la Porée.

Pictet (pē'k.te), Adolphe. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 11, 1799; d. there, Dec. 20, 1875. Swiss comparative philologist. He published Origines indo-européennes (1859-63) and others.

Pictet, Raoul. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, April 4, 1842; d. at Paris, July 27, 1929. Swiss physicist. He made studies of low temperature and the liquefaction of gases, and liquefied (1877) oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen. Author of Die Entwicklung der Theorien und der Verfahrungsweisen bei der Herstellung der flüssigen Luft (1907).

Pictet de la Rive (de là rêv), François Jules. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 22, 1809; d. there, May 15, 1872. Swiss naturalist, professor of zoology and anatomy at Geneva. He wrote Traité élémentaire de paléontologie (1844-46) and others.

Picton (pik'ton). Town in SE Ontario, Canada, county seat of Prince Edward County, situated on a bay of Lake Ontario, ab. 35 mi. SW of Kingston. It is the chief town in a vacation resort and farming area on the peninsula which projects into Lake Ontario. 4,287 (1951).

Picton, Sir Thomas. b. at Poyston, Pembrokeshire, Wales, in August, 1758; d. in the Battle of Waterloo, June 18, 1815. English general. He fought (1794 et seq.) in the West Indies and was made governor of Trinidad. His methods, which involved application of the Spanish legal code in the absence of specific new laws, were attacked in England as inhumane and, after trial (1806), he was found guilty, a verdict set aside in 1808. In 1809 he was governor of Vlissingen (Flushing), which he had helped to capture. He commanded a division in the Peninsular War, serving with distinction at the capture of Badajoz (1812). He was wounded at Quatre Bras (June 16, 1815) but concealed the wound in order to command his troops in the battle in which he was killed.

Pictones (pik.tō'nēz). Ancient Gallic people, mentioned by Julius Caesar as living on the coast of what is now France, along the S bank of the Loire River. Their ancient town of Limonum is the modern Poitiers, to which they gave their name.

Pictor (pik'tör), Quintus Fabius. See Fabius Pictor, Quintus.

Pictou (pik'tō). Seaport in Nova Scotia, Canada, the county seat of Pictou County, situated on a small harbor ab. 85 mi. NE of Halifax. It exports coal, and has shipyards. 4,259 (1951).

Picts (pikts). [Latin, Picti (pik'ti).] Ancient people of disputed origin, who formerly inhabited C and N Scotland and N Ireland. It is assumed that they came to Scotland from the Continent c1000 B.C. and that from there some of them moved over to Ireland, probably in the 2nd century. They are reported as fighting against the Romans in Britain in the 4th century, and especially as attacking Hadrian's Wall. Early Latin writers called them Picti from their custom of tattooing their faces and bodies. Other culture traits of the Picts especially mentioned are exogamy, totemism, cannibalism, public coition, and the presence of women warriors in battle. The problem of their language remains unsolved; but it is now more or less agreed that it was not Celtic. The Picts and Scots were united in one kingdom during the reign of Kenneth I in the 9th century.

Picture, The. Play by Philip Massinger, licensed in 1629 and printed in 1630. The plot was from one of Matteo Bandello's stories in Painter's Palace of Pleasure. The picture is a magical one, and grows brighter or darker according to the behavior of the absent wife it represents.

Picumnus (pik.um'nus) and Pilumnus (pil.um'nus). In Roman religion, two fertility gods associated with marriage and especially with childbirth. Offerings were made to them after a delivery.

Picunches (pē.kōn'chās). [Also: Pencones, Pencos.] Tribe of South American Indians of Chile, now extinct, called Pencos by the Spanish, when first discovered. The language, Picunche, is classified as having comprised a group in the northern division of the Araucanian family of languages.

Picuris (pē.kō'rēz). Small Pueblo Indian village in New Mexico ab. 40 mi. N of Santa Fe. Their language, also called Picuris, belongs to the Tiwa group of the Tanoan family of North American Indian languages.

Picus (pi'kus). In ancient Italian mythology, a god of agriculture, regarded as a son of Saturn. In later Roman legend he was a warlike hero, and first king of Latium.

transformed into a woodpecker because he rejected the love of Circe. This, however, is probably a rationalization of the sacred bird of Mars, the woodpecker.

Pidgin English. In China, West Africa, Australia and Oceania, a reduction and adaptation of English to the speech habits of native peoples. There are wide local variations. Melanesian Pidgin is used in New Guinea, the Solomon, New Britain, and adjacent groups with only slight changes. Everywhere, Pidgin is more than English badly spoken; it has definite rules of its own. Sounds are derived from English but with changes such as insertion of a vowel between any two adjacent consonants, so that "stop" becomes "si-top," "box" becomes "hok-is." The vocabulary is mainly English, with some borrowing from native languages and some modifications of out-moded British slang, like "gammon," "humbug." Grammar is much changed. Nouns have no plural; verbs no tense, person, or number, but they have new suffixes such as -in to form a transitive verb.

Pieck (pēk), Wilhelm. b. at Guben, Brandenburg, Germany, Jan. 3, 1876—. German politician, president of the German Democratic Republic (1949 et seq.). A carpenter by trade, he became a member of the Social Democrats, a member of the Bremen legislature (1906), and secretary of the Bremen section of the Social Democratic Party (1906 et seq.). During World War I he was arrested for his antiwar activities but escaped to the Netherlands, where he published a newspaper critical of the war. He was one of the founders (1918) of the German Communist Party, was elected to the Prussian diet in 1921, and became a member of the Reichstag in 1928, remaining a member of the German legislature until Hitler's coup of 1933; he was one of those arrested on suspicion of causing the Reichstag fire. From 1933 to the end of World War II, Pieck, a member of the Comintern's executive committee, lived at Paris and Moscow. In 1946 he became a member of the Brandenburg parliament and joined with Otto Grotewohl in forming the Sozialistische Einheitspartei Deutschlands (German Socialist Unity Party). When the German Democratic Republic was established in the Russian Zone of occupation, in 1949, Pieck became its president.

Piedad Cavadas (pyā.thāt'i kā.bā'rhās), La. See La Piedad Cavadas.

Piedmont (pēd'mont). City in NE Alabama, in Calhoun County, ab. 75 mi. NE of Birmingham. 4,498 (1950).

Piedmont. City in C California, in Alameda County. E. of downtown Oakland; residential suburban community. 10,138 (1950).

Piedmont. [Italian, Piemonte; French, Piémont.] Compartimento (region) in NW Italy, containing the provinces of Alessandria, Aosta, Asti, Cuneo, Novara, Torino, and Verelli. It is bounded by France on the W, Switzerland on the N, Lombardy on the E, and Liguria on the S, and reaches from the highest peaks of the western Alps in the N and W to the Ligurian Apennines in the S, while it comprises the fertile plain and hill country of the upper Po valley in its central parts. It produces grains, wine, and fodder, with livestock raising (cattle and poultry) prevailing in the hills and valleys. There are stone quarries and highly developed industries, based on water power, producing mainly textiles, chemicals, machinery, and foodstuffs. Some valleys speak a French patois; there are remnants of Waldensian communities. Area, 9,813 sq. mi.; pop. 3,418,300 (1936), 3,512,032 (1951).

History. The region was originally inhabited by Gallic tribes, then conquered by the Romans. In the Middle Ages it was under the overlordship of the German emperors but was actually ruled (from the 11th century) by the house of Savoy, which took the title of princes of Piedmont, later kings of Sardinia and finally of Italy. The region was the birthplace of the national liberation movement called the Risorgimento, and the cradle of modern Italy. Small areas around Mont Cenis and in the Briga and Tenda (French, Brigue, Tende) district were ceded to France in 1947.

Piedmont. Unincorporated community in NW South Carolina; cotton mills. 2,673 (1950).

Piedmont. City in E West Virginia, in Mineral County. 2,565 (1950).

Piedmont Region. Name given in several states of the Atlantic seaboard to the rolling and hilly territory lying E and SE of the Appalachians. It is bounded on the E by the coastal plain, and on the W by the mountains. The region has had an extraordinary industrial development, especially of the cotton-textile industries, in the last half-century.

Pied Piper of Hamelin (ham'lin). [Also, Piper of Hamelin or Hameln (hā'meln).] In medieval legend, a magician who in the year 1284, for a stipulated sum of money, freed the town of Hamelin from a plague of rats by playing on his pipe and leading the vermin, which followed the music, into the river where they were drowned. When the townsman refused to pay the money, the piper returned and, again playing on his magical pipe, led the way through the Bungen-Strasse out of the town, this time followed by 130 children. He led them to a hill called the Koppenberg, into which they all entered and disappeared. The event is recorded in inscriptions on the Rathaus (town hall) and elsewhere in the town, and was long regarded as historical. The legend has been told in verse by Robert Browning. He apparently founded it on Verstegan's account in his Restitution of Decayed Intelligence (1634). Brandenburg, Lorch, and other towns have a similar tradition, and there are Chinese and Persian legends much resembling it.

Piedras Negras (pyā'nras nā'grās). Maya Indian city and ceremonial center in the Usumacinta valley, Petén, Guatemala, notable for the fine stone sculpture that decorated its temples and for the unusually long series of period-markers dated in the Maya calendrical system. The site, which seems to have achieved its peak in the mid-8th century, has long been abandoned.

Piedras Negras. City in NE Mexico, in Coahuila state, on the Rio Grande opposite Eagle Pass, Tex.; zinc smelting, metalworking, and other industries. It is a shipping point for livestock, and for coal, zinc, and other mineral products, 15,663 (1940).

Piegán (pē-gan'). North American Indian tribe, of the Algonquian linguistic family, formerly inhabiting S Alberta, Canada, and C Montana. They were one of the three main tribes of the Blackfoot Indians.

Piekary Śląskie (pye.kā'ri shlōn'skye). [Also: Piekary Wielkie (vyel'kye); German, Piekar (pyā'kār).] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Katowice, NE of Bytom; zinc mines and metalworking establishments; it is a place of pilgrimage; came to Poland in 1920. Pop. 21,467 (1946).

Piémont (pyā'mōn'). French name of Piedmont.

Piemonte (pyā'mōn'tā). Italian name of Piedmont.

Pien-ching (pyen'jing'). Sung name of Kaifeng.

Pieng-an (pyung'an'). See Poyangang.

Pienza (pyen'tsā). Small cathedral city in Italy, in the province of Siena, ab. 25 mi. SE of Siena. Artillery fire in World War II destroyed the roof of the cathedral and the tracery of the apse; the Piazza del Duomo (or Piazza Pio II), considered one of the finest of its kind in Italy, was not seriously damaged.

Pierce (piers), Benjamin. b. at Chelmsford, Mass., Dec. 25, 1757; d. at Hillsborough, N.H., April 1, 1839. American soldier in the Revolutionary War and politician; father of Franklin Pierce. He was governor of New Hampshire (1827-29).

Pierce, Franklin. b. at Hillsborough, N.H., Nov. 23, 1804; d. at Concord, N.H., Oct. 8, 1869. American politician, 14th President of the United States (1853-57); son of Benjamin Pierce. He was graduated (1824) from Bowdoin College, studied law at Portsmouth, N.H., and at Northampton, Mass., and was admitted to the bar in 1827. His father was a Revolutionary War veteran and governor of the state. Franklin entered politics under most favorable auspices, as a protégé of the ruling party. He was elected (1829) to the New Hampshire General Court, where he served as speaker in 1831 and 1832. Elected (1833) to Congress, he served two terms and in 1837 went to the U.S. Senate, from which he resigned in 1842. Resuming his law practice at Concord, N.H., he became active in Democratic politics, and subsequently became district attorney for New Hampshire and one of a Democratic cabal which ruled the state (1848-51). He served in the Mexican War as a colonel and later a brigadier general, but his military career, which began actively in 1847, was terminated by illness. As a "dark horse" candidate, he received the Democratic presidential nomination in 1852, and in the campaign of that year was opposed by Winfield Scott (Whig) and John P. Hale (Free-Soil Party). Pierce took no active role in the campaign, and shortly after its close he suffered a personal tragedy when he witnessed the death of his 11-year-old son in a railroad accident. Elected by a small popular majority on a platform committing his party to support of the Compromise of 1850, he signed the Kansas-Nebraska bill (1854) which repealed the Missouri Compromise and led to the troubles in Kansas and the secession crisis of 1860-61. He tried to maintain a just balance between North and South in the policies of his administration, but the sum total was in favor of the South. His administration was marked by the reciprocity treaty with Canada (1854), the Gadsden Purchase (1853), and the events leading up to the Ostend Manifesto (1854), drawn up by American diplomats who desired the U.S. annexation of Cuba. Failing to secure renomination in 1856, Pierce made a European tour after leaving the White House and upon his return settled at Concord. Although he frequently attacked the Republicans as sectionalists, his strong sense of nationalism made it impossible for Pierce to reconcile himself to Southern secession. During the Civil War, however, he opposed the Lincoln administration because of what he regarded as its invasion of personal liberties.

Pierce, George Washington. b. at Webberville, Tex., Jan. 11, 1872-. American physicist. Author of The Principles of Wireless Telegraphy (1910), Electric Oscillations and Electric Waves (1920), and other works.

Pierce, Gilbert (shville). b. at East Otto, N.Y., Jan. 11, 1839; d. at Chicago, Feb. 15, 1901. American politician and author. After serving in the Civil War, he became a member (1869) in the Indiana legislature, and was active in journalism at Chicago. He was named (1884) governor of the territory of Dakota, holding that post until 1886, and in 1889 became the first U.S. senator from North Dakota. He prepared The Dickens Dictionary (1872), wrote One Hundred Wives, a play (1888), and the novels Zachariah, the Congressman (1876) and A Dangerous Woman (1883).

Pierce of Exton (eks'ton), Sir. See Exton, Sir Pierce of.

Pierce Penillion his Supplication to the Devil. Pamphlet by Thomas Nashe, published in 1592, and containing an attack on Gabriel and Richard Harvey for attacking Robert Greene's Menaphon, to which Nashe had written a preface.

Pierce's Supererogation, or A New Praise of the Old Ass. Pamphlet by Gabriel Harvey, written against Thomas Nashe, published in 1593.

Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510 (1925). U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring unconstitutional an Oregon law of 1922 requiring the attendance at public schools of all children between the ages of eight and 16. The statute would have impaired the operation of private and parochial schools. In delivering the unanimous opinion of the court, Justice James C. McReynolds declared that the Oregon law "unreasonably interferes with the liberty of parents and guardians to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control. . . . The child is not the mere creature of the State; those who nurture him and direct his destiny have the right, coupled with the high duty, to recognize and prepare him for additional obligations. . . ."

Pieria (pi.rī'a). In ancient geography, a district in N Thessaly, Greece. It was the legendary birthplace of Orpheus and of the Muses. Mount Olympus was in the district.

Pierides (pi.rī'dēz). In Greek mythology, the Muses. They were so named from Pieria in Thessaly, their reputed birthplace.

Pierides. Nine maidens of Pieria, in N Thessaly, who contended with the Muses, and were defeated and changed into magpies. They were so named, and the incident thus reported, by Nicander of Colophon, a poet of the 3rd century B.C. They are also said to be the daughters of Pierus, a king of Macedonia.

Pierleone (pyer.lā'ō'nā) or Pierleoni (pyer.lā'ō'nē). Pietro. Original name of the antipope Anacletus II.

Pierné (pyer.nā), (Henri Constant) Gabriel. b. at Metz, France, Aug. 16, 1863; d. near Morlaix, France, July 7, 1937. French composer. He studied at the Paris Conservatory, and in 1882 won the Prix de Rome with a cantata, Edith. In 1890 he succeeded César Franck as organist of Sainte Clotilde. He wrote incidental music for several plays in which Sarah Bernhardt appeared, including Izely, La Princesse lointaine, and La Samaritaine; several operas, including La Coupe enchantée (1895), La Vendée (1897), and La Fille de Taborin (1901); two choral works, Le Croisade des enfants (1902) and Les enfants de Bethlém (1907); and also songs, piano pieces, and a number of orchestral compositions. For several years he was assistant conductor of the Colonne concerts at Paris, and after Édouard Colonne's death (1910), succeeded him.

Piero della Francesca (pye'rō dē llā frān.chās.kā) or dei Franceschi (dā'ē frān.chās.kē). See Francesca, Piero della.

Piero di Cosimo (pye'rō dē kō'zē.mō). [Original name, Piero di Lorenzo.] b. at Florence, Italy, 1462; d. there, 1521. Florentine painter. He was the pupil and assistant of Cosimo Roselli, and from this circumstance derived the name by which he is now generally known. He accompanied the latter when he was summoned to Rome by Pope Sixtus IV in 1482, and worked with his master on the decoration of the Sistine Chapel. He also collaborated with Roselli in the execution of certain altarpieces, including those in the church of Santo Spirito, Florence, and with Fra Bartholomew in the decoration of the convent of Santo Ambrogio. In the spirit of his times, Piero painted both religious pictures of exemplary piety, and subjects taken from classical mythology, but his real interest was in the landscapes which formed the backgrounds of his compositions, and in animal forms, which he painted with zest, either in close fidelity to nature or with imaginative fantasy. Among his most admired works are several treatments of the legend of Perseus and Andromeda, in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence, which also contains an Immaculate Conception by his hand. The National Gallery at London displays his notable Death of Procris, and his Coronation of the Virgin is in the Louvre at Paris. Although the number of extant works by Piero di Cosimo is not large, he is well represented in the U.S., where the National Gallery of Art at Washington has three examples, Allegory, The Visitation with Two Saints, and The Nativity with the Infant Saint John; the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York owns Young Saint John the Baptist and a Hunting Scene; and other examples are among the treasures of museums and galleries at Toledo, St. Louis, Hartford, Worcester, and Cambridge. Piero gave much time to devising and directing pageants in his native city, including the masque called the "Triumph of Death," which was popular at carnival time. Piero was also the instructor of Andrea del Sarto.

Pirola (pyā'rō.lā), Nicolás de. b. at Camaná, Arequipa, Peru, Jan. 5, 1839; d. 1913. Peruvian politician. He was a lawyer and journalist, was minister of the treasury under José Balta (1868-72), and headed unsuccessful revolts against Manuel Pardo (1874) and Mariano Ignacio Prado (1877-78). During the Chilean war, when Prado had deserted his post, Pirola headed another revolt, deposed the vice-president, and was proclaimed supreme chief at Lima, Dec. 23, 1879. He did his best to check the Chileans, and when Lima was taken (Jan. 17, 1881) escaped into the interior. In July he convoked a congress at Arequipa, but in November resigned and went to Europe. In 1885 he returned and tried to seize the presidency, but was banished. He was presidential candidate in 1894. He overthrew Andrés Bolognesi in 1895, and was president until September, 1899; during his administration Peru adopted the gold standard, civil marriages were legalized, and the national military academy was reorganized.

Pierozzi (pye.rōt'sē), Antonio. Original name of Saint Antoninus.

Pierpont (pir'pōnt), James. b. at Roxbury, Mass., Jan. 4, 1660; d. Nov. 22, 1714. American Congregational clergyman, one of the founders of Yale College (chartered 1701, at d. originally the Collegiate School of Connecticut). He is credited with having drawn up the "Saybrook Platform" (1708).

Pierpont, John. b. at Litchfield, Conn., April 6, 1785; d. at Medford, Mass., Aug. 27, 1866. American poet and Unitarian clergyman. He published Airs of Palestine (1816) and other poems.

Pierre (pir). City in C South Dakota, capital of the state and county seat of Hughes County, near the center of the state, at the confluence of the Bad and Missouri rivers: shipping point for a livestock and grain producing area. 5,715 (1950).

Pierre (pi'er). One of the principal characters in Thomas Otway's Venice Preserved.

Pierre de Bernis (pyer de ber.nēs), François Joachim de Bernis, François Joachim de Pierre de.

Pierrefitte-sur-Seine (pyer.fēt.sūr.sen). Town in N France, in the department of Seine, situated NE of St.-Denis and N of Paris. It is a suburb of Paris; known for manufacture of electrical equipment. 12,100 (1946).

Pierrefonds (pyer.fōns). Village in the department of Oise, France, ab. 9 mi. E of Compiègne. The chateau is a huge castle built by Louis d'Orléans in 1390, and completely restored by Napoleon III. It is approximately rectangular in plan, with high battlemented walls and roofs flanked by eight great cylindrical cone-roofed towers over 100 ft. high. Within the enclosure the buildings surround an extremely picturesque court, on one side of which rises the late Gothic chapel. In the interior the polychrome decoration of many of the apartments has been renewed, and, together with the sculpture, the great fireplaces, and all the arrangements for medieval life and warfare, compose a unique picture.

Pierre Heath (pi'er'hēth). See Heath, Pierre.

Pierre; or, The Ambiguities (pi'er). Novel by Herman Melville, published in 1852.

Pierrepont (pir'pōnt), Edwards. b. at North Haven, Conn., March 4, 1817; d. at New York, March 6, 1892. American lawyer and politician, U.S. attorney general (1875-76) under Grant. He served as minister to Great Britain (1876-77).

Pierrepont, Elizabeth. [Titles: Countess of Bristol, self-styled Duchess of Kingston; maiden name, Chudleigh.] b. 1720; d. near Paris, Aug. 28, 1788. English adventuress who married Captain Augustus John Hervey (later 3rd Earl of Bristol) in 1744 and Evelyn Pierrepont, 2nd Duke of Kingston, in 1769. Samuel Foote satirized her in his Trip to Calais. She revenged herself by securing the prohibition of the play.

Pierre Roger (pyer ro.zā). Original name of Pope Clement VI.

Pierre Roger de Beaufort (de bō.fōr). Original name of Pope Gregory XI.

Pierrot (pi'e.rōt; French, pye.rō). Traditional buffoon from old French pantomime. He dresses in loose white clothes with enormous white buttons, and his face is whitened; he is a gourmand and absolutely without moral sense. The 19th-century Pierrot was created by Gaspard Deburau under the Restoration; previous to this he had been a gayer and more insignificant personage, a cross between a fool and an vagabond.

Pierson (pir'sōn), Abraham. b. in Yorkshire, England, 1609; d. Aug. 9, 1678. English Congregational clergyman in America. He was ordained (1632) a deacon, came to the Massachusetts Bay colony, and in 1640 became the first pastor of the settlement that later became the town of Southampton on Long Island, serving there until 1647, when he became pastor at Branford, in the New Haven colony. In 1667 he settled at Newark, N.J., where he served until his death.

Pierson, Abraham. b. c1645; d. March 5, 1707. American Congregational clergyman; son of Abraham Pierson (1609-78). He served as first rector of Yale College.

Pierson (pi'er'sōn), Nicolaas Gerard. b. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Feb. 7, 1839; d. at Heemstede, near Haarlem, Netherlands, Nov. 24, 1909. Dutch economist, statesman, and banker. He was active in cotton trading and banking at Amsterdam, and in 1866 was named to the board of directors of the Nederlandsche Bank, of which he was president from 1885 to 1891. He became (1877) professor of economics at Amsterdam. He was minister of finance (1891-94) in the Netherlands government, served as prime minister and minister of finance (1897-1901), and was a member (1905 et seq.) of the second chamber. He made outstanding studies in taxation and economic history, and viewed economics not merely as a branch of knowledge but as a lever for accomplishing social improvement. A free-trader, he was influenced by the doctrines of Adam Smith and David Ricardo.

Piers Plowman (pîr'z'plou'man). [Full title, The Vision concerning Piers Plowman.] Allegorical and satirical poem in 14th-century English, generally attributed to William Langland (c1330-c1400), though other authors may have been involved in the original composition of 2,567 lines, as first circulated in 1362, and even more probably in the elaboration of later texts, which by 1393 or thereabouts had grown to 7,357 lines. The 47 manuscripts of the poem still preserved are evidence that it was widely circulated in that form before printing came to England, and beginning in 1550 several editions were printed; in the 19th and 20th centuries it has been several times reprinted, either in Middle English versions such as the exhaustive edition prepared by Walter William Skeat in 1887, or in modernized redactions, one of which was also the work of Skeat. The poem, in unrhymed but alliterative verse, relates how the poet in a vision beholds a tower (Truth, or Heaven), a dungeon (Error, or Hell), and a "fair field full of folk" (the world, or more specifically England), and many pilgrims are seeking the way to "Saint Truth," and Piers the plowman offers to guide them if they will help him plow his small farm, which some do, while others evade. Many religious and moral concepts are allegorically brought into the action under such names as Reason, Conscience, Holy Church, Lady Meed (meaning reward, sometimes in the sense of bribery), Do-Wel, Do-Bet, Do-Best, and so forth. The central thought seems to be that the way to truth (and to heaven) lies in honest work and the observance of Christian precepts; the lesson is plain also that if the workers and poor folk are to find any betterment of their lot, they must achieve it by their own industry, good sense, and resolution, for it will not be conferred upon them by the lords, the rich, the exploiters, the lovers of luxury, the lawyers, the clerics who have grown indifferent and worldly, or the hordes of fraudulent parasites who take the livery of monastic and mendicant orders that by preying on the people's superstitions they may live without working. In the later portions of the poem, Piers becomes in effect identified with Christ, seeking to guide men to God. The great and abiding interest and historical value of the poem lies in its vivid, crowded, sharply characterized pictures of life in 13th-century England, when as feudalism began to break down, swarming evils and injustices evoked determination to bring about better times, in the spirit of the deeply pious Catholic Christian social ideals which the poet shared with the plain people of the land.

Piers Plowman's Crede. Satirical alliterative poem, after the style of Piers Plowman, written c1394.

Pišt'any (pyesh'ty'ni). [German, Pistyan; Hungarian, Pöstyén.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Bratislava, in W Slovakia, situated in the valley of the Váh River between two mountain ranges, between Bratislava and Trenčín. It has been known as a spa since the 16th century. 14,367 (1947).

Piètre (pyet'r). Fernand Anne. See Cormon.

Pietà (pyä'tä). [Also, Descent from the Cross.] Title (being the Italian word for "pity") of pictures, bas-reliefs, and others, representing the compassionate lamentation of the Virgin, alone or with others, over the body of Christ after the descent from the cross. Among the best known are: 1. A painting by Van Dyck, in the old Pinakothek at Munich. The body of Christ lies on some drapery spread on the ground, the head and shoulders supported by the Virgin. The cross is behind, and at the left are three mourning angels. 2. A vigorous painting by Andrea del Sarto (c1518), in the Imperial Gallery at Vienna. Christ's body lies on outspread yellow drapery, mourned over by the weeping Virgin; an angel supports the head, and another holds the accessories of the passion. 3. A painting by Van Dyck (1628), in the museum at Antwerp, Belgium. The Virgin holds on her lap the head of the dead Christ, whose face is drawn with suffering. Saint John points out the wound in one hand to two grieving angels. 4. A painting, considered his masterpiece, by Quentin Massys (1508), in the museum at Antwerp, Belgium. It is a triptych. On the chief panel Christ is seen borne to the tomb, supported by Joseph of Arimathea and Saint John. The Virgin kneels by the body, and near her stand the Magdalen, Saint John, and Mary Salome. On the side panels are painted the martyrdoms of Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist. 5. A painting by Gerard David, in the Chapelle du Saint Sang at Bruges, Belgium. The Virgin and Mary Salome are grouped with Saint John about the body of Christ, which is supported by Nicodemus. In the background the cross is seen. The Magdalen and Joseph of Arimathea are painted on the wings. 6. A painting by Titian, in the Academy of Fine Arts at Venice. It was unfinished at his death and was completed by a student. It is remarkable as having been painted in Titian's ninety-ninth year (1576).

Pietas Julia (pî'e.tas jöl'ya, jöl'i.gä). Latin name of Pula, Yugoslavia.

Pietermaritzburg (pê.têr.mâr'its.bêrg). [Also, Maritzburg.] City in S Africa, the capital of Natal province, Union of South Africa, ab. 73 mi. NW of Durban. It has tanning, shoe, furniture, and food-processing industries, and is an important commercial center. Elevation, ab. 2,200 ft.; pop. 60,609, including 26,890 Europeans (1946).

Pieters (pê'têrz), Adrian John. b. at Alto, Wis., Nov. 18, 1866; d. April 25, 1940. American agronomist, noted for introducing into the U.S. a forage crop variety of Lespedeza or bush clover. He was principal agronomist (1915-38) with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Pietism (pî'e.tiz.em). Religious movement of the late 17th and early 18th centuries, arising within the Lutheran Church in Germany, having resemblances to numerous movements in different epochs and in various folds, with the aim of reviving individual religious fervor. After the conclusion of the Thirty Years' War in 1648, the Lutheran Church became an instrument of princes and civil governments, and its ecclesiastics and theologians, concerned with enforcing strict uniformity of doctrine and preserving outward forms and ceremonies, did all too little to foster Christian character and enrich Christian life. Historically, periods of this kind of arid formalism have usually bred corrective revival movements. Pietism was one such "reaction of the spirit against the letter." The name was given the movement by its enemies in contempt, but gladly adopted by its adherents. It began when Phillip Jakob Spener, who became a Lutheran pastor at Frankfurt on the Main in 1666, initiated gatherings of the laity, which he called collegia pietatis, where the New Testament was expounded and discussed and other pious exercises held. In his book Pia Desideria (1675), Spener called for earnest study of the Bible by such groups, and for the exemplification of Christian principles in daily life by the practice of charity and other good works. This seemed to come close to the doctrine of salvation by works as well as by faith, and accordingly the Pietists were often opposed and even persecuted by the Lutheran ecclesiastical and civil authorities. Spener became court chaplain to the elector of Saxony in 1686 and later a rector at Berlin, and in 1694 he had a part in setting up the University of Halle. At Leipzig a younger man, August Hermann Francke, had been instrumental in establishing the Collegium Philobiblicum, for Bible study by graduate students. When this led to his persecution, he was befriended by Spener, who secured a post for him at Halle. Francke is considered the second principal leader of Pietism, and after his death in 1727 the movement largely died out. Pietism, seeing religious stagnation and sterility in mere doctrinal orthodoxy and reliance on means of grace, expounded the necessity of individual communion with God, and of the personal experience of conversion. A similar conviction became a central point in the creed of Methodism in England because it arose from the same kind of reaction against similar sterile formalism in the Church of England, and moreover John Wesley's conversion was clearly related to his deep interest in the Moravian doctrines, into which Pietistic concepts had been brought by Count Zinzendorf. Pietistic influence was felt in America not only via Moravianism and Wesleyanism, but through the settlement of numerous Pietists in Pennsylvania. The famous schools for orphans established by Francke at Halle typify the revival of philanthropic work promoted by Pietism, in which also Protestant missionary work is rooted. The earlier Pietists especially, considering that the duty of Christians is to live for the glorification of God, scorned the arts and discouraged, or even forbade, worldly enjoyments such as dancing, games, and the theater, but among their dwindling numbers after Francke's death, these austerities were considerably relaxed.

Pietraperzia (pye.trä.per'tsyä). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, situated near the Salso River, ab. 13 mi. SW of Enna: agricultural commune, with stone quarries and sulfur mines. Pop. of commune, 12,355 (1936); of town, 11,886 (1936).

Pietrasanta (pye.trä.sän'tä). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Lucca, situated on the coastal plain between Carrara and Viareggio: marble quarries. Noteworthy buildings include a 14th-century cathedral, the 13th-century Church of Sant'Agostino, a 12th-century castle, and various Renaissance palaces of the 16th century. It sustained considerable damage in World War II, but repairs have been carried out or are under way; the cathedral and several other churches were only slightly damaged. Pop. of commune, 21,382 (1936); of town, 5,907 (1936).

Pietro (pye'trō), Guido (or Guidolino) da. Original name of Fiesole, Giovanni Angelico da.

Pietro Averulino (a'vä.rō.lē'nō) or Avellino (a.vellē'nō) or Averlino (-ver-), Antonio di. See Filarete.

Pietro Barbo (bär'bō). Original name of Pope Paul II.

Pietro Cadalous (kad.ä.lō'us). Original name of the antipope Honorius II.

Pietro di Candia (dē.kän'dyā). See Pope Alexander V.

Pietro di Murrhone (dē.mör.rō'nā). Original name of Pope Celestine V.

Pietro di Tarantasia (dē.tä.rän.tä'zyä). Original name of Pope Innocent V.

Piety in Pattens, or the Handsome Housemaid. Puppet-show droll, produced by Samuel Foote in 1773, played by ingeniously contrived puppets.

Pigafetta (pē.gä.fät'tä), Antonio. b. at Vicenza, Italy, 1491; d. probably at the same place, c1534. Italian traveler. He went to Spain in the suite of the papal nuncio in 1510, received permission to accompany Ferdinand Magellan to the Moluccas, sailed in the Victoria, Sept. 20, 1519, and was one of those who returned to Spain in that vessel, in September, 1522, after the first voyage round the world. Pigafetta wrote for Charles V an account of the voyage, which was quickly published in several languages. A longer manuscript which he prepared was discovered in the library of Milan and published in 1800 as Primo viaggio intorno al globo terraqueo.

Pigalle (pē.gäl), Jean Baptiste. b. at Paris, Jan. 26, 1744; d. there, Aug. 20, 1785. French sculptor. His best-known work is a mausoleum of Marshal Saxe at Strasbourg.

Pigeon (pij'ōn). Former name of Clintonville, Wis.

Pigeon Irish (i'rish). Novel by Francis Stuart, published in 1932.

Pigeon River. River in W Ontario, Canada, flowing into Lake Superior S of Fort William. It forms part of the boundary between Ontario and Minnesota. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Piggott (pig'ōt). City in NE Arkansas, a county seat (with Caring) of Clay County: trade center for an agricultural area. 2,558 (1950).

Pignatelli (pē.nyä.tel'ē), Antonio. Original name of Pope Innocent XII.

Pignatelli, Bernardo. Original name of Pope Eugenius III.

Pignerol (pē.nyē.rōl). French name of Pinerolo, Italy.

Pignotti (pē.nyōt'tē), Lorenzo. b. in Tuscany, Italy, 1739; d. at Pisa, Italy, 1812. Italian physician, historian, and fabulist.

Pigwiggen (pig.wig'en). Fairy knight in Michael Drayton's Nymphidia. He has a combat with Oberon, who is jealous of him and his love for Queen Mab. The name is also given to a constable mentioned in Selinus, a tragedy, vaguely attributable to Robert Greene, published in 1594.

Pih-Kiang (bä'jyäng'). See Ph.

Pihkva (pē.kvä). Estonian name of Pskov, Lake.

Piip (pēp), Ants. b. at Tuhalaane, Estonia, 1884; reported dead after World War II in a forced labor camp in Russia. Estonian statesman and scholar. He was Estonian minister at London (1918-20), premier and minister of war (1920-21), foreign minister on various occasions, and Estonian minister at Washington (1923-25). He played an important part in achieving international recognition of the independence of Estonia, and was the last foreign minister of independent Estonia. He was deported to Russia in 1941.

Pijaos (pē.hä'ōs). [Also, Pinao.] Indian tribe which once occupied the E slopes of the Cordillera Central in Colombia. They were a warlike people who first fought the Paez Indians and later the Spanish until their extinction. Their language was formerly assigned to the Chibchan linguistic stock; but it is now more commonly classified in the Cariban family, itself comprising and naming a group (embracing five dialects) of the southeast branch of the northwestern division of the Cariban languages.

Pike (pik), Albert. b. at Boston, Dec. 29, 1809; d. at Washington, D.C., April 2, 1891. American lawyer and author.

Pike, Sumner Tucker. b. at Lubec, Me., Aug. 30, 1891—. American administrator. After a career as a clerk and official with several public utility and financial companies in various parts of the U.S., he spent a number of years (1928-39) in Persia, the U.S., Afghanistan, Venezuela, and Hispaniola exploring for oil and engaged in its production. In 1939 he became an adviser to the U.S. secretary of commerce and from 1940 to 1946 was commissioner at Philadelphia for the Securities and Exchange Commission. During World War II he served (1942 et seq.) as director of the fuel price division of the Office of Price Administration. When the Atomic Energy Commission was established (1946) he became one of the members, and for several months in 1950, after the resignation of David E. Lilienthal and before the appointment of Gordon Dean, he was acting chairman of the commission. He was reappointed to the commission in 1950 despite a majority report of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee against his confirmation; he resigned from the commission in 1951.

Pike, Zebulon Montgomery. b. at Lambert, New Jersey, Jan. 5, 1779; killed in the assault on York (now Toronto), Canada, April 27, 1813. American general. As commander of an exploring expedition in the West he visited Pikes Peak (later named for him) in 1806. He commanded the attack on York (now Toronto) in 1813.

Pike County Ballads and Other Pieces. Collection of dialect poems by John Hay, published in 1871.

Pikes Peak (piks). One of the highest summits of the Rocky Mountains, situated in the Front Range ab. 60 mi. S of Denver, Colo. It was visited by Zebulon M. Pike in 1806, and was named for him. A mountain railway up Pikes Peak from Manitou was opened in 1891. Elevation, 14,099 ft.

Pikeville (pik'vil). Town in E Kentucky, county seat of Pike County: commercial center for a coal-mining and lumbering area. 5,154 (1950).

Pik Stalina (pyëk stä'lyi.nä). Russian name of Stalin Peak.

Pila (pē'lä). [German, Schneidemühl.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Poznań, formerly in the district of Posen-Westpreussen, Germany, ab. 53 mi. N of Poznań: agricultural industries and trade; machine and pottery manufactures; cement works. In World War II, the town was taken from the Germans by the Russians on Feb. 14, 1945, and was allotted to Poland at the Potsdam Conference (1945). Virtually all of the German population has now departed from the area. 45,791 (1939); 10,671 (1946).

Pilaga (pē.lä'gä). [Also: Pitilaga, Yapitilaga.] Tribe of South American Indians of the Chaco, along the Pilcomayo River. They are regarded as a subtribe of the Toba Indian group. Their language, Pilaga, is a dialect (with Toba proper) of the Toba group of the western Guayacuran linguistic stock.

Pilar (pē.lär'). [Full name, Villa del Pilar.] City in SW Paraguay, capital of Neembucú department, on the Paraguay River: river port for cotton, hides, lumber, and oranges; distilleries. 9,593 (est. 1945).

Pilas (pē.läs), Las. See Las Pilas.

Pilat (pē.lä), Mont. See under Cévennes.

Pilate (pí'lát), Arch of. Arch in Jerusalem which spans the Via Dolorosa. It has been venerated for its supposed connection with Jesus by pilgrims since the Middle Ages, but is now held to be in fact the remains of a triumphal arch of the time of Hadrian.

Pilate, Pontius. [Latin, Pontius Pilatus.] fl. in the first half of the 1st century A.D. Roman procurator (governor) of Judea, Idumea, and Samaria (26–36 A.D.). He tried and condemned Jesus Christ. He is the subject of many legends.

Pilate's Staircase. See Scala Santa.

Pilatuz (pě'lǎ'tús). Mountain on the border of the cantons of Lucerne and Unterwalden, Switzerland, ab. 7 mi. S and SW of Lucerne. It is a popular tourist resort, and is ascended by a mountain railway. Elevation of highest peak (the Tomlishorn), 6,998 ft.

Pilaya (pě'lǎ'yá). River in S Bolivia, tributary of the Pilcomayo. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Pilbarra Gold Field (pil'bar'á). Gold-mining region (since 1888) in Australia, in the NW part of Western Australia state. Mining has declined greatly in recent years.

Pilcomayo (pě'l.kō.mǎ'yō). River rising in S Bolivia and flowing through the Chaco, where it separates W Paraguay from Argentina. It is the longest branch of the Paraguay, which it joins opposite Asunción. In the Chaco it is very crooked and shallow, and obstructed by sand bars; the lower course is brackish. Many attempts have been made to explore it, with the object of opening a route to Bolivia; in 1907 it was reported that it might afford a practicable water route, but such a route has not yet been utilized. The French explorer Jules Nicolas Crevaux, who tried to ascend the river in 1882, was killed by the Indians, with all his party. Length, ab. 700 mi.

Pile (pil), Sir Frederick Alfred. b. at Dublin, Sept. 14, 1884—, British army officer. He served in World Wars I and II.

Pilgrim, The. Play by John Fletcher, produced at court in 1621 and printed in 1647.

Pilgrim, The. Tragedy by Thomas Killigrew, printed in 1664.

Pilgrimage. Sequence of 12 novels by Dorothy M. Richardson, published in omnibus form in 1938. It consists of Pointed Roofs (1915), Backwater (1916), Honeycomb (1917), The Tunnel (1919), Interim (1919), Deadlock (1921), Revolving Lights (1923), The Trap (1925), Oberland (1927), Dawn's Left Hand (1931), Clear Horizon (1935), and Dimple Hill (1938). The work employs the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Pilgrimage of Grace. Insurrection in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire (1536–37), headed by Robert Aske. It was precipitated by the ecclesiastical and political reforms of Henry VIII, especially by the dissolution of the monasteries. The rebels occupied York, where they were joined by Edward Lee, the archbishop of York, where they were joined having increased to 30,000, they proceeded to Doncaster, where they were induced to disband by the representations of the royal commissioners. Finding themselves deceived, they rose again under Sir Francis Bigod. Martial law was declared in the north, and the rising was suppressed with great severity.

Pilgrime von Mekka (pil'grí.me fón mek'á), Die. German title of Pilgrims of Mecca, The.

Pilgrim Fathers. Founders of Plymouth Colony, in what is now Massachusetts, in 1620.

Pilgrims of Mecca (mek'á), The. [German title, Die Pilgrime von Mekka; French title, La Rencontre Imprévue.] Comic opera by Christoph Willibald Gluck, first performed at Schönbrunn, Vienna, in 1764.

Pilgrims of the Rhine (rín). Descriptive work by Edward Bulwer-Lytton, published in 1834.

Pilgrim's Progress. [Full title, The Pilgrim's Progress From This World to That Which Is to Come.] Allegory, by John Bunyan, which recounts the adventures of the hero Christian in journeying from the City of Destruction to the heavenly Jerusalem. It was composed while Bunyan was in prison in 1675. The first part was printed in 1678. A second part (1684) narrates the similar travels of Christiana, Christian's wife.

Pilgrim's Rest. Novel by Francis Brett Young, published in 1922.

Pilgrim's Tale, The. Poem thought by William Thynne to have been Chaucer's. He printed it, but it was not published, being objected to by the bishops. It was lost, apparently, and attention having been directed to it, it was searched for in vain for over 200 years. Thomas Tyrwhitt found part of it, examined it, and it disappeared again. At length it was rediscovered and printed by the Chaucer Society. It is now believed to be by someone acquainted with Chaucer's work, but writing after 1532.

Pilgrim's Way. Ancient route taken by pilgrims to Canterbury, in England. It extended E from Guildford, in Surrey, along the S slope of the North Downs to the vicinity of Sevenoaks, in Kent.

Pillai (pil'lá'ē), P. P. b. 1894—. Indian diplomat and economist, representative (1947–48) of India to the United Nations and director (1929–47) of the Indian branch of the International Labor Organization. He served as a member (1924) of the economic and financial secretariat of the League of Nations. As vice-chairman of the council of the Indian Institute of International Affairs, he has been actively connected with Asiatic relations conferences at New Delhi. He was head (with ambassadorial rank) of the Indian liaison mission to Japan after World War II.

Pillar of Fire, The. Historical novel by Henry Christopher Bailey, published in 1918.

Pillars of Hercules (hěr'kŭ.lěz). In ancient geography, the two opposite promontories Calpe (Gibraltar) in Europe and Abyla in Africa, situated at the E extremity of the Strait of Gibraltar, at the outlet from the Mediterranean into the Atlantic. According to one of several explanations of the name, they were supposed to have been torn asunder by Hercules.

Pillau (pil'ou). [Russian, Baltiisk.] Seaport, fortress, and resort in what was formerly the province of East Prussia, situated at the entrance to the Frisches Haff, ab. 25 mi. W of Königsberg (Kaliningrad). It is now in the Kaliningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic.

Pilling (pil'ing), James Constantine. b. at Washington, D.C., Nov. 16, 1846; d. at Olney, Md., July 26, 1895. American ethnologist. He accompanied (1875) the Rocky Mountain survey led by John W. Powell, devoted himself to collecting (1875–80) ethnological items on Indian life, was named chief of the geological survey, and served as chief clerk of the ethnological bureau, specializing (1892 et seq.) in bibliographical work relating to Indian tribes.

Pillnitz (pil'nits). Castle in Germany, situated on the Elbe River ab. 6 mi. SE of Dresden, formerly a residence of the royal family of Saxony.

Pillnitz, Convention of. Meeting at Pillnitz in August, 1791, between the emperor Leopold II, Frederick William II of Prussia, and the Comte d'Artois (later Charles X of France). They issued a declaration of their hostility to the French Revolution, which formed the basis of the first coalition against France, and, by their insistence on the restoration of Louis XVI's power, made it almost inevitable that the king would eventually be executed.

Pillow (pil'ō), Fort. Fort on the Chickasaw Bluff in Tennessee, on the Mississippi River above Memphis, noted in the Civil War. It was erected by the Confederates during the war, and was occupied by Union forces on June 5, 1862, having been evacuated and partly destroyed by the Confederates on the day previous. It was recaptured by the Confederates under Forrest on April 12, 1864, when a large part of the garrison, which consisted of a regiment of Negro infantry and a detachment of cavalry, was killed.

Pillow, Gideon Johnson. b. in Williamson County, Tenn., June 8, 1806; d. in Lee County, Ark., Oct. 8, 1878. American general. He served with distinction first as a brigadier general and afterward as a major general of volunteers in the Mexican War, at the close of which he resumed the practice of law in Tennessee. He became brigadier general in the Confederate army at the beginning of the Civil War, commanded under General Leonidas Polk at the battle of Belmont, Mo. (Nov. 7, 1861), and was second in command under General John B. Floyd at Fort Donelson in February, 1862, when he escaped with his chief, leaving General Simon B. Buckner to surrender the post to General Grant. Pillow was as a result suspended from his command.

Pillsbury (pîlz'ber'î, -bër.î), Harry Nelson. b. at Somerville, Mass., Dec. 5, 1872; d. at Frankford, Pa., June 17, 1906. American chess master, noted chiefly for his brilliant attacking style of play, and his contributions to opening theory, as well as for his simultaneous and blindfold chess records. He became (c1893) the first American to appear professionally at chess exhibitions. His principal international tournament successes were first prize at Hastings, 1895, and equal first at Munich, 1900. In 1898, after defeating Jackson Showalter in a match, he was recognized as U.S. champion.

Pillsbury, John Elliott. b. at Lowell, Mass., Dec. 15, 1846; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 30, 1919. American naval officer and oceanographer. He served (1874-91) in connection with astronomical and oceanographical work, chiefly with the coast survey, and devised (1876) a current meter. He served in the Spanish-American War and in 1908 was retired with the rank of rear admiral. Author of The Gulf Stream (1891).

Pillsbury, Parker. b. at Hamilton, Mass., Sept. 22, 1809; d. at Concord, N.H., July 7, 1898. American reformer and abolitionist. He was active in the abolitionist cause until the end of the Civil War, afterwards devoting himself to Negro suffrage, international peace, woman's rights, and temperance. He was coeditor (1868-69), with Elizabeth Cady Stanton, of the Revolution. Author of the Acts of the Anti-Slavery Apostles (1883).

Pillsbury, Walter Bowers. b. at Burlington, Iowa, July 21, 1872—. American psychologist. His works include Attention (1908), Essentials of Psychology (1911), and An Elementary Psychology of the Abnormal (1932).

Pilnyak (pîl.nyâk'), Boris. [Pseudonym of Boris Andreyevich Vogau.] b. at Mozhaisk, Russia, Sept. 29, 1904; presumed to have died c1937. Russian novelist and short-story writer. A nonconformist, he accepted the regime that issued from the Russian Revolution, but remained rather critical of it. Some of his early stories are available in English in the volume entitled Tales of the Wilderness (1925). His best-known book is the novel translated into English as The Volga Falls to the Caspian Sea (1931), which was intended to promote the Five Year Plan, but was not well liked by Russian critics. His novelette entitled Maqoqany (1929) was published abroad, and at home was declared a slanderous attack on the U.S.S.R. After a visit to the U.S. in 1931 he wrote a novel of American life entitled O.K. He last appeared in print in 1937 and thereafter vanished from the scene, apparently a victim of the purge of 1936-37.

Piloña (pî.lî.nyâ). Commune in NW Spain, in the province of Oviedo, ab. 24 mi. E of Oviedo: marble quarries. 16,948 (1940).

Pilot, The. Nautical romance by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1823.

Pilot Case. See Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 Howard 299 (1851).

Piloty (pî.lî'ty), Ferdinand. b. at Munich, Oct. 9, 1828; d. there, Dec. 21, 1895. German genre and historical painter; brother of Karl von Piloty, whose style influenced him. He was an honorary member of the Munich Academy.

Piloty, Karl von. b. at Munich, Oct. 1, 1826; d. there, July 21, 1886. German historical painter, professor in the Munich Academy from 1858, and its director after 1874; brother of Ferdinand Piloty. Among his paintings are Seni Before the Body of Wallenstein, Nero on the Ruins of Rome, Columbus as Discoverer of America, Galileo in Prison, Death of Caesar, and Triumph of Germanicus.

Pilpay (pîl'pî). See Kalilah and Dimnah; see also under Panchatantra.

Pilsen (pîl'zen). German name of Plzeň.

Pilsudski (pîl.sût'skî), Józef. [Polish, Pilsudski.] b. near Vilna, November, 1867; d. May 12, 1935. Polish statesman. As a young medical student he was arrested for participation in the attempt to kill Czar Alexander II of Russia, and was exiled (1887) to Siberia, where he remained until 1892. On his return to Poland, he became a member of the Socialist Party, joining its central committee shortly thereafter and becoming editor of its clandestine newspaper Robotnik. When the Russian police discovered the existence of the newspaper and arrested him again (1900), he feigned insanity and was sent to an insane asylum, whence he escaped. He went abroad, living first at London and then at Cracow, and illegally visiting Russian Poland to further the activities of his party. During the Russo-Japanese war (1904), he went to Japan, where he tried, without success, to win Japanese support for the Polish revolutionary movement. Later he became commander of the semi-military formations of the Polish Socialist Party. He organized similar groups in Austrian Poland, anticipating the coming conflict between the Central Powers and Russia in World War I, and recruiting his future officers among university students. From this developed the Polish Legion, which under his command took an active part against Russia in World War I. However, being suspect to the German authorities because of his political aspirations, he was interned by them in 1917. Set free after Germany's defeat in 1918, he returned to Warsaw and became head of the new Polish state (1918). His claims were rivaled by those of the more conservative Polish government that had existed in London during the war and in order to secure Allied recognition he accepted Ignace Jan Paderewski as premier. Following military operations against the Bolsheviks, the Lithuanians, and others (1920), he was nominated marshal of Poland. At his orders, Polish troops occupied Vilna, which was claimed by Lithuania. With the adoption of the constitution of 1921, he went into retirement (1922), but four years later his coup d'état against the Peasant party government of Wicenty Witos brought him back leadership of the state, though nominally he was only minister of war in the cabinet and Ignace Moscicki was president. He accepted the premiership in October, 1926, and held it until 1928. In 1930 he was again premier. His regime was dictatorial. He tried to strengthen Poland's international position by building up the country's military forces and stabilizing its internal conditions. He was among the first to sense the danger of the Nazi regime in Germany, and submitted to the nations of western Europe a plan to occupy Germany (1933) in order to remove the threat of expansion under Hitler. Upon the rejection of his plan, he concluded, at Hitler's request, a ten-year non-aggression pact with Germany (1934). In 1935 he engineered the adoption of a new constitution, based on a fascist model, that effectively suppressed democratic machinery and set up what was called a "conducted democracy." It left control in the hands of the military and when Pilsudski died one year later he was succeeded by Gen. Edward Smigly-Rydz.

Piltown Man (pîlt'oun). Type of prehistoric man known from a skull unearthed in Sussex, England, in 1911-12, and identified as having lived in the early Pleistocene period. The difficulty of classifying and evaluating this skull was made more difficult by the finding nearby of a fossil lower jaw which was unmistakably anthropoid. Hence the Piltown Man was originally thought to represent a genus of early Pleistocene primates having certain human characteristics, and this position is still held by some anthropologists. The skull bone is thick, but the forehead is high and nonprimate, and lacks the conspicuous brow ridges typical of most prehistoric men. A few scholars hold that the juxtaposition of a primate jaw and an almost modern-type skull invalidates the finds altogether. Others suggest disregarding the jaw, and that the Piltown skull postulates the existence of homo sapiens as a contemporary of Neanderthal Man.

Pilumnus (pî.lum'nus). See the entry Picumnus and Pilumnus.

Pilwitz (pîl'vîts). In medieval Germanic folklore, a disease demon, who became associated with ruining crops. Later he took on a more mischievous and teasing aspect and was said to tangle children's hair.

Pim (pim), Bedford Clapperton Trevelyan. b. at Bideford, England, June 12, 1826; d. at Deal, England, Sept. 30, 1886. English admiral. In 1859-60 he surveyed the Nicaraguan canal route across Central America.

Pima (pî'mâ). Group of Indian tribes located in the Gila and Salt river valleys of Arizona, and throughout a large area of Sonora, Mexico. They are closely related to the Papago. Their language belongs to the Piman group of the Uto-Aztecan linguistic family. Today ab. 5,500 Pima Indians survive on reservations in S Arizona.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔ, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Piman (pě'man). Group of American Indian languages belonging to the Uto-Aztecan stock. The Piman group includes Pima proper, Papago, Tepehuan, and others. Groups speaking Pima languages are found in Arizona and in NW and W central Mexico.

Pimenta (pě.măn'tă'), Diogo Bernardes. See Bernardes, Diogo.

Pimentel (pě.men.tel'), Eleonora. Maiden name of Fonseca, Marchesa di.

Pimlico (pim'li.kō). Five ecclesiastical districts, forming a part of Westminster metropolitan borough, in SW London, in the County of London, ab. 3 mi. SW of Saint Paul's, Buckingham Palace and Victoria Station are in Pimlico.

Pin (pān), Patrice de La Tour du. See La Tour du Pin, Patrice de.

Pinacoteca di Brera (pě'nă.kō.tă'kă dē bră'ră). See Brera.

Pinafore (pin'a.fōr). [Full title, H.M.S. Pinafore, or The Lass that Loved a Sailor.] Operetta in two acts by Sir Arthur Sullivan, with a libretto by W. S. Gilbert, first performed at the London Opéra Comique Theatre on May 25, 1878.

Pinang (pi.nang'). See Penang.

Pinao (pě.nă'ō). See Pijaos.

Pinar del Río (pě.năr' del rē'ō). Province in W Cuba. Capital, Pinar del Río; area, 5,212 sq. mi.; pop. 398,794 (1943).

Pinar del Río. City in SW Cuba, capital of Pinar del Río province, ab. 100 mi. SW of Havana; the center of trade for the tobacco district called Vuelta Abajo. 26,241 (1943).

Pinatubo (pě.nă.tō'bō). Mount. See under Pampanga.

Pinaud (pě.nă'ō), Pierrette Ignace. See Favart, Marie.

Pincas (ping'kas), Julius. See Pascin, Jules.

Pinch (pinch). Schoolmaster in Shakespeare's The Comedy of Errors.

Pinch, Ruth. In Charles Dickens's novel Martin Chuzzlewit, a pretty little person, unreasonably grateful to the Pecksniffs for their patronage of her brother Tom Pinch.

Pinch, Tom. In Charles Dickens's novel Martin Chuzzlewit, an ungainly, kindhearted man of sterling qualities, in the employment of Mr. Pecksniff.

Pinchback (pinch'bak), Pinckney Benton Stewart. b. at Macon, Ga., May 10, 1837; d. Dec. 21, 1921. American politician. He was elected lieutenant governor of Louisiana in 1871, was acting governor (1872-73), and was elected U.S. senator from Louisiana in 1873, but not seated. He was admitted to the bar in 1886.

Pinchbeck (pinch'bek), Christopher. b. c1670; d. 1732. London watchmaker. He invented an alloy which resembled gold, once much used in cheap jewelry. The word "pinchbeck" hence came to be applied to sham or spurious things.

Pinchiang (bin'jyāng'). See Harbin.

Pinchot (pin'chō), Gifford. b. at Simsbury, Conn., Aug. 11, 1865; d. at New York, Oct. 4, 1946. American conservationist, chief of the U.S. Forest Service until 1910. He was graduated from Yale University in 1889, began the first systematic forest work in the U.S. at Biltmore, N.C. (1892-94), was a member of the national forest commission (1895-96), and was appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt to the committee on organization of government scientific work in 1903, to the commission on public lands in the same year, and to the committee on department methods in 1905. He was appointed a member of the Inland Waterways Commission in 1907. In 1910, Pinchot brought to public notice his suspicion that his superior, Secretary of the Interior Richard A. Ballinger, was taking from the public reserve certain lands and resources for the use of private interests. President Taft investigated, found the charges baseless, and Pinchot was dismissed. He became president of the National Conservation Association in 1910. He taught (1903-06) forestry at Yale and cofounded the Pinchot School of Forestry there. After being commissioner (1920-22) of forestry in Pennsylvania, he was governor (1923-27, 1931-35) of that state. He published The White Pine (1896; with H. S. Graves), The Adirondack Spruce (1898), The Fight for Conservation (1910), and others.

Pinchwife (pinch'wif), Mr. In William Wycherley's comedy The Country Wife, the anxious husband of Mrs.

Marjory Pinchwife, the "country wife," taken by Wycherley from Molière's play L'École des femmes.

Pincian Hill (pin'shi.an). [Italian, Monte Pincio (pēn'chō); Latin, Mons Pincius (pin'shi.us).] Hill in the N part of Rome, extending in a long ridge E from the Tiber River. It was not one of the Seven Hills, though separated by but a narrow interval from the Quirinal. In antiquity, as at the present day, it was noted for its beautiful gardens. The superb view from it toward Saint Peter's is famous.

Pinckney (pingk'nī), Charles. b. at Charlestown (Charleston), S.C., Oct. 26, 1757; d. there, Oct. 29, 1824. American politician and diplomat, noted as the author of the "Pinckney draft" of the federal Constitution. He was educated at Charlestown, where he was admitted to the bar, and as a lieutenant of militia took part in the siege of Savannah (October, 1779). Taken prisoner when the British seized Charlestown, he remained in enemy hands until June, 1781. He was a member (1779-80) of the South Carolina house of representatives and served (1784-87) as a delegate to the Congress of the Confederation. In March, 1786, he recommended calling a general convention for revising and amending the Articles of Confederation and in May, 1786, entered a motion for the appointment of a grand committee "to take into consideration the affairs of the Nation." His claim to remembrance, and one that has often been exaggerated, derives from his authorship of the "Pinckney draft," which included an estimated 31 or 32 features ultimately incorporated in the Constitution. He supported ratification in his home state, served in the state privy council, and served (1789-92) as governor. He was president of the state constitutional convention (1790) and in 1795 again became governor. By this time he had aligned himself with the Republicans and actively opposed the Federalists. He became (1798) a U.S. senator and in March, 1801, was appointed U.S. minister to Spain, handling there the delicate negotiations involving the claims convention and the securing of Spanish consent to Napoleon's sale of Louisiana to the U.S. He left Spain for America in October, 1805, took his seat in the South Carolina general assembly, and in 1806 became governor of his state for a fourth term. He was again a member of the general assembly (1810-12, 1812-14) and in 1818 was elected to Congress, where he served for one term.

Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth. b. at Charlestown (Charleston), S.C., Feb. 25, 1746; d. there, Aug. 16, 1825. American soldier, politician, and diplomat; brother of Thomas Pinckney. He was educated in England, where he attended the Westminster School, Christ Church College, Oxford, and the Middle Temple at London. Admitted to the bar in England (1769), he traveled in that country and on the Continent before returning to America in 1769. He was elected (1769) to the provincial assembly, was admitted to the South Carolina bar (1770), and in 1773 became acting attorney general for Camden, Georgetown, and Cheraw. He became (January, 1775) a member of the provincial congress, in which he served on several important committees. In June, 1775, he became ranking captain of the 1st Regiment of South Carolina troops, subsequently became a major, and in June, 1776, was advanced to the rank of colonel. He participated (June, 1776) in the defense of Fort Sullivan, was for a time aide to Washington and took part in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and commanded his regiment in the Florida campaign (1778) and at the siege of Savannah. He was taken prisoner after the capitulation of Charlestown, was exchanged in 1782, and became (Nov. 3, 1783) a brevet brigadier general shortly before leaving the service. He served (1778) in the lower house of the state legislature and in the state senate (1779), of which he was chosen president. He was again elected (1782) to the lower house of the legislature and in 1787 was a delegate to the Federal Convention, where he took a leading role. He was a member of the South Carolina convention (1788) for ratification of the Constitution and was a member of the state constitutional convention of 1790. He was major general (1795-98) of the state militia. In 1796, after having declined several offers of public office made by George Washington, he became U.S. minister to France, where he later played a part in the X.Y.Z. affair. The exclamation "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute," erroneously credited to Pinckney, has been attributed to Robert Goodloe Harper. During the crisis with France, Pinckney was commissioned (July 19, 1798) commander of all the posts and forces in Kentucky and Tennessee and in the area south of Maryland. He was later assigned to the command of the cavalry forces, and was discharged from the military service on June 18, 1800. He was the Federalist candidate for president in 1804 and 1808. He was the first president of the South Carolina Society of the Cincinnati, helped found the South Carolina College, and became (1810) the first president of the Charleston Bible Society, holding that post until his death.

Pinckney, Henry Laurens. b. at Charleston, S.C., Sept. 24, 1794; d. there, Feb. 3, 1863. American politician, journalist, and writer; son of Charles Pinckney. He was Democratic member of Congress from South Carolina (1833-37). He became (1823) owner and chief editor of the Charleston Mercury, and was its editor until 1832.

Pinckney, Thomas. b. at Charleston (Charleston), S.C., Oct. 23, 1750; d. there, Nov. 2, 1828. American soldier, politician, and diplomat; brother of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney. Educated in England, he attended the Westminster School, Christ Church College, Oxford, and the Middle Temple at London. He was admitted to the English bar in 1774 and traveled on the Continent before returning to South Carolina toward the close of 1774. He joined (1775) a company of rangers as a lieutenant and later became a captain in the 1st South Carolina Regiment. He was employed in recruiting and engineering duties and from 1776 to 1778 was at Fort Moultrie. He was promoted (May 17, 1778) to the rank of major, and participated in the Florida campaign (1778), the battle of Stono (1779), the siege of Savannah (1779), and the siege of Charleston (1780). Sent on a mission before the fall of Charleston occurred, he returned to the Southern theater of war as a member of General Horatio Gates's staff and was wounded and captured at the battle of Camden. He later served at Yorktown. He was elected (1787) governor of South Carolina, was president of the state convention (1788) for ratification of the federal Constitution, and was a member (1791) of the lower house of the legislature. He became (January, 1792) U.S. minister to Great Britain and in April, 1795, was appointed special commissioner and envoy extraordinary to Spain, where he secured the signing (Oct. 27, 1795) of the treaty of San Lorenzo el Real which, among other things, provided for Spanish recognition of the U.S. right of free navigation of the Mississippi. Pinckney returned to the U.S. in September, 1796, and as Federalist candidate for vice-president was defeated in the elections of that year. He served (1797-1801) in Congress and in the War of 1812 was commissioned major general in charge of the district reaching from North Carolina to the Mississippi River. He commanded the forces at the end of the Creek War and handled the treaty negotiations which concluded it. He achieved some reputation as an agriculturist. He was elected (1806) president of the South Carolina Society of the Cincinnati.

Pinckneyville (pingk'ni.vil). City in S Illinois, county seat of Perry County. 3,299 (1950).

Pindar (pin'dar). b. at Cynoscephalæ, near Thebes, Greece, c522 B.C.; d. at Argos, 443 B.C. Greatest of the Greek lyric poets. He resided chiefly at Thebes, but spent about four years at the court of Hieron in Syracuse. Little is known of his life. His work includes 44 Epinicia (Victory Odes) to the winners of the Olympian, Pythian, Nemean, and Isthmian games. Many fragments are extant, including Hymns to Persephone, to Fortune, and the like), Pæans (to Apollo of Delphi and Zeus of Dodona), Choral dithyrambs to Dionysus, ProceSSIONAL songs, Choral songs for maidens, Choral dance-songs, Encomia (laudatory odes), Scotia (festive songs to be sung at banquets by a comus or festive troop), and Dirges (to be sung to the flute, with choral dance). The earliest of the Epinicia apparently is the 10th Pythian Ode, 592 B.C.; the latest, the 5th Olympian, 452 B.C.

Pindar, Peter. Pseudonym of Wolcott, John.

Pindareos or Pindaris or Pindaricus or Pindharies (pin.dar'ez). [Eng. trans., "Plunderers."] In 18th-century Indian history, a horde of mounted robbers, notorious for their rapacity. They first appeared about the end of the 17th century, and infested the possessions of the East India Company and the surrounding country in the 18th century. They were disorderly and mercenary horsemen, organized for indiscriminate raiding and looting. They were dispersed in 1817-18 by Francis Rawdon-Hastings, Marquis of Hastings, then governor general of Bengal.

Pindus (pin'dus). Range of mountains in Greece, between Thessaly on the E and Epirus on the W. Greatest elevation, abt. 7,665 ft.

Pin e Almeida (pañ ē āl.mā'da), Miguel Calmón du. See Calmón du Pin e Almeida, Miguel.

Pineau (pē.nō), Christian. b. at Chaumont, Haute-Marne, France, 1904-—. French political leader, active in the Resistance during World War II and a cabinet member after the liberation of France. As a member (1941-43) of the Resistance he made several secret trips to London. He was deported (1943) to Germany. A leader of the Socialist Party and an active trade-unionist, he was minister of supply (1945) and of transportation and public works (1947).

Pine Bluff (pin). City in S Arkansas, county seat of Jefferson County, on the Arkansas River abt. 38 mi. SE of Little Rock; cottonseed-oil mills, railroad repair shops, stockyards, and lumber mills. 37,162 (1950).

Pinedo (pē.nā'dō), Francesco de. b. 1890; d. at New York, Sept. 2, 1933. Italian aviator, a general in the Italian air force. Flying a Savoia craft, he made (Feb. 8-April 6, 1927) an intercontinental (Europe-Africa-South America-North America) flight of 25,200 miles. On May 20, 1927, the day that Charles A. Lindbergh began his flight from New York to Paris, he took off from Newfoundland for Rome, but he was forced down in the Azores. He was killed in a crash as he departed from New York for a nonstop flight to the Near East.

Pinega (pē.nyē'ga). River in NW U.S.S.R., in the Arkhangelsk oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, which joins the (Northern) Dvina abt. 50 mi. SE of Arkhangelsk. Length, abt. 407 mi.

Pine Grove. Former name of Grove City, Pa.

Pine Hill. Borough in SW New Jersey, in Camden County. 2,546 (1950).

Pinehurst (pin'herst). Unincorporated community in NE Massachusetts, in Billerica township. 2,905 (1950).

Pinehurst. Winter resort in C North Carolina, in Moore County. It is noted for its golf courses and for the wintering of race horses. The community is not incorporated (it is privately owned in its entirety). Pop. abt. 1,300.

Pinel (pē.nel), Philippe. b. at St.-André, Tarn, France, April 20, 1745; d. at Paris, Oct. 25, 1826. French physician. He is noted for the improvements which he effected in the treatment of the insane. He wrote Nosographie philosophique (1798) and other works.

Pine Lawn. Town in E Missouri, in St. Louis County; a western suburb of St. Louis. 6,425 (1950).

Pinellas Park (pi.nel'as). Town in W Florida, a northwestern suburb of St. Petersburg. 2,924 (1950).

Pinelo (pē.nā'lo), Antonio. [Original name, Antonio de León.] b. probably at Córdoba, in what is now Argentina, c1590; d. at Seville, Spain, c1675. Spanish lawyer and author. In 1637 he was appointed royal historiographer. Employed to codify the Spanish colonial laws, he completed, in 1635, his Recopilación general de las leyes de las Indias, made authoritative by royal order in 1680, and published in 1681 (Madrid, 4 vols.). It was several times revised. Pinelo also published various works on America and on colonial law, a life of Toribio, archbishop of Lima (1653), and Biblioteca Oriental y Occidental, náutica y geográfica (Madrid, 1629), the first bibliography of the Spanish colonies.

Pinero (pi.nir'ō), Sir Arthur Wing. b. at London, May 24, 1855; d. there, Nov. 3, 1934. English dramatist, actor, and essayist, noted chiefly for his realistic, socially conscious dramas on the pattern established by Henrik Ibsen. The only son of John Daniel Pinero (originally Pinheiro), a Portuguese Jew practicing law in London, he was educated at London schools and at the Birkbeck Institute (later College). He was on the stage (1874-81, 1885), acting in modern roles, and playing Claudius and other Shakespearean parts with Sir Henry Irving. Author of £200 A Year (1877), Two Can Play At That Game (1877), The Money-Spinners (1880), The Squire (1881), fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; rñ, then; ð, d o r j; s, s o r sh; t, t o r ch;

The Rector and The Rocket (both 1883), The Iron Master (1884), adapted from the French of Georges Ohnet, In Chancery (1884), The Magistrate (1885), Mayfair (1885), adapted from Victorien Sardou, The Schoolmistress and The Hobby-Horse (both 1886), Sweet Lavender (1888), The Profligate (1889), The Cabinet Minister (1890), Lady Bountiful (1891), The Princess and the Butterfly (1897), Treasure of the Wells (1898), The Gay Lord Quex (1899), A Wife Without A Smile (1904), Mid-Channel (1909), The "Mind-the-Point" Girl (1912), The Big Drum (1915), Quick Work (1919), A Seat in the Park and The Enchanted Cottage (both 1922), and A Cold June (1932). His best work was done in the social drama or problem play, as in The Second Mrs. Tanqueray (1893), The Notorious Mrs. Ebb-smith (1895), The Benefit of the Doubt (1895), Iris (1901), Letty (1903), His House in Order (1906), and The Thunder-bolt (1908). As a student of his craft, Pinerolo wrote Browning as a Dramatist (1912), Craft Louis Stevenson as a Dramatist (1914), and "The Theater in the 'Seventies'" (1929, for The Eighteen Seventies, a volume edited by H. Granville-Barker).

Pinerolo (pē.nā.rō'lo). [French, Pignerol.] Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Torino, ab. 22 mi. SW of Turin: manufactures of woolen and cotton textiles, leather, and paper. It has a Romanesque cathedral of the 11th century, with Gothic additions of a later period. The town passed to the house of Savoy in 1418, and was an important fortress until 1713; it was three times temporarily in French possession (1536-74, 1631-93, 1801-14). Buildings of tourist interest were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 21,600 (1936); of town, 15,363 (1936).

Pinerolo, Pacification of. Treaty concluded by the English Commonwealth under Cromwell with France in 1655, providing for the cessation of the Waldensian persecution by the Duke of Savoy.

Pines (pīnz), Isle of. [Spanish, Isla de Pinos.] Island of the West Indies, formerly belonging to Spain, ab. 40 mi. S of the W part of Cuba, of which it is a political dependency. It was discovered by Columbus in 1494, and was long notorious as a resort of pirates. In April, 1907, the U.S. Supreme Court decided that the Isle of Pines is not U.S. territory. It is now a municipality of the province of Havana, Cuba. Chief town, Nueva Gerona; area, ab. 1,200 sq. mi.

Pines of Rome (rōm), The. [Italian title, Pini di Roma.] Tone poem for orchestra by Ottorino Respighi, second in a set of three, first performed at Rome in 1924.

Pine Tree Flag. Standard of colonial Massachusetts, in use from the end of the 17th century. The pine tree symbol later appeared in flags employed by patriots during the American Revolution.

Pine Tree Shilling. Coin issued (1652) by the mint established by the Massachusetts colony in 1651. The mint, which was set up to remedy the shortage of currency, also issued threepence and sixpence pieces. It was shut down in 1683.

"Pine Tree State." Nickname of Maine.

Pineville (pīn'vil). City in SE Kentucky, county seat of Bell County, on the Cumberland River, in a coal-mining area; shipping point for lumber and coal, 3,890 (1950).

Pineville. Town in C Louisiana, in Rapides Parish: twin town of Alexandria. Its industries include fishing and the manufacture of stone monuments, 6,423 (1950).

Ping Yang (pīng'yāng). See Pyeongyang.

Pinhã de Leiria (pē.nyāl' de lā.rē'a). See under Leiria, town.

Pinhoiro (pē.nyā'rō), José Feliciano Fernandes. See Fernandes Pinheiro, José Feliciano.

Pini di Roma (pē'nē dī rō'mā). Italian title of Pines of Rome, The.

"Pink City of Rajputana" (rāj.pū.tā'nā). See Jaipur, city.

Pinkerton (pīng'kér.ton), Allan. b. at Glasgow, Aug. 25, 1819; d. at Chicago, July 1, 1884. American detective, founder of the Pinkerton Agency. The son of a police sergeant, he left (c1842) for America, where he became a cooper at Dundee, Ill. His work as a detective brought him local attention, and he became (1846) deputy sheriff of Kane County. Later made deputy sheriff of Cook County, he settled at Chicago and in 1850 was the only detective on that city's police force. In that year he entered into partnership with E. G. Rucker in setting up a private detective agency, one of the first in the U.S., and a short time later became sole proprietor of the establishment. Pinkerton's role in solving a series of Adams Express robberies brought him national renown. He was commissioned (January, 1861) by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad to safeguard its property, and through this connection learned of the assassination threat against Abraham Lincoln, whose inaugural train was scheduled to pass through Baltimore. Together with some of Lincoln's associates, Pinkerton made the plans for Lincoln's revised schedule which brought the president-elect through Baltimore on the night of Feb. 22-23, 1861. He later organized and operated a secret service for General George B. McClellan in the Ohio Department; Pinkerton himself traveled in disguise through three Southern states. He subsequently set up his headquarters at Washington, D.C., and took charge of counterespionage work in the national capital, operating under the pseudonym "Major E. J. Allen." Resigning late in 1862, he became an investigator of claims made against the government. After the war he resumed the operation of his agency, founding branches at New York and Philadelphia and continuing the protective work on the yearly payment basis introduced by him in 1860. A slight paralytic stroke suffered in 1869 compelled him to withdraw from active investigation and to assume only general direction of the agency, which for a time specialized in labor and industrial work, as, for example, in the Molly Maguires disorders in Pennsylvania. He wrote Strikers, Communists, Tramps and Detectives (1878), Criminal Reminiscences and Detective Sketches (1879), The Spy of the Rebellion (1883), and Thirty Years a Detective (1884).

Pinkerton, John. b. at Edinburgh, Feb. 17, 1758; d. at Paris, March 10, 1826. Scottish historian, antiquary, and miscellaneous writer. He published Two Dithyrambic Odes on Enthusiasm and Laughter (1782), an Essay on Medals (1784), Ancient Scottish Poems (1786), Dissertation on the Origin and Progress of the Scythians or Goths (1787), Enquiry into the History of Scotland (1790), Iconographica Scotica (1797), and others.

Pinkham Notch (pīng'kam). Pass in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, leading from the Glen House southward: major skiing center.

Pinkie (pīn'jyāng). See Harbin.

Pinkie (pīn'ki). Place ab. 6 mi. E of Edinburgh, where the English under the protector Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, totally defeated (Sept. 10, 1547) the Scots.

Pinkney (pīng'ni), Edward Coote. b. at London, Oct. 1, 1802; d. at Baltimore, April 11, 1828. American poet; son of William Pinkney. He published Rodolph, and Other Poems (1825).

Pinkney, William. b. at Annapolis, Md., March 17, 1764; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 25, 1822. American lawyer, politician, and diplomat, U.S. attorney general (1811-14) under Madison. He studied medicine for a time but soon turned to law and was admitted to the bar (1786). He was a member (1788) of the state convention for ratifying the Constitution, voting against its adoption, and served (1788-92) in the state legislature. He became (1792) a member of the state executive council and was serving as chairman of the council board upon his resignation in 1795. Chosen (1796) by Washington to adjust U.S. maritime claims under the Jay Treaty, he spent the following eight years at London. He resumed his practice at Baltimore in 1804 and became (Dec. 1, 1805) attorney general of Maryland, a post he held for only six months. In April, 1806, Jefferson appointed him joint commissioner with James Monroe to negotiate with the British cabinet on reparations and impressments, and in October, 1807, he succeeded Monroe as U.S. minister to Great Britain. The ensuing difficulties over maritime policy led him to break relations (Feb. 28, 1811) and upon his return to the U.S. Pinkney was appointed (Dec. 11, 1811) attorney general under President Madison, a post he held until his resignation on Feb. 10, 1814. Writing pamphlets under the pseudonym "Publius" he supported the War of 1812; he was wounded while serving as a major of militia at the battle of Bladensburg (Aug. 24, 1814). He served (1815-16) in Congress, resigning when he was appointed minister to Russia, which post he left in February, 1818. He served (1819-22) in the U.S. Senate, where he played a part in effecting the Compromise of 1820.

Pinna (pin'a). Ancient name of Penne.

Pinnacles of Dan (dan). See under Dan River.

Pinneberg (pin'e.berk). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, ab. 8 mi. W of Hamburg; canneries; lumber mills; machine, shoe, leather, and chemical factories. Numerous East German refugees have settled in the town and the surrounding district since the conclusion of World War II. The increase of population in the period 1939-46 was 79.1 percent. 23,932 (1946), 26,426 (1950).

Pino (pē'nō), Joaquín del. b. c1730; d. at Buenos Aires, April 11, 1804. Spanish soldier and colonial administrator.

Pinos (pē'nōs), Isla de. Spanish name of Pines, Isle of.

Pinos Puente (pē'nōs pwen'tō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Granada, ab. 10 mi. NW of Granada. 13,186 (1940).

Pinsk (pink). Town in W U.S.S.R., in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated among marshes ab. 140 mi. SW of Minsk. It is an important center of river transit trade, and has woodworking and lumbering industries. 30,000 (est. 1940).

Pinsk Marshes. See Pripet Marshes.

Pinta (pin'ta; Spanish, pēn'tā), La. One of the two smaller vessels of Columbus on his first voyage. It was a little larger than the Niña, and was commanded by Martín Alonso Pinzón.

Pintner (pint'nēr), Rudolf. b. at Lytham, England, Nov. 16, 1884; d. at Yonkers, N.Y., Nov. 7, 1942. American psychologist, who specialized in intelligence tests. He was professor of psychology (1917-21) at Ohio State University, and professor of education (1921 et seq.) at Teachers College, Columbia University. His works include A Scale of Performance Tests (1917), The Mental Survey (1918), Intelligence Testing (1923), and Educational Psychology (1929).

Pinto (pin'tō). See Pakawa.

Pinto (pēn'tō), Alexandre Alberto da Rocha Serpa. See Serpa Pinto, Alexandre Alberto da Rocha.

Pinto (pēn'tō), Aníbal. b. at Santiago, Chile, 1825; d. at Valparaíso, Chile, 1884. Chilean statesman, president (1876-81) of Chile; son of Francisco Antonio Pinto. He was minister of war and marine under Federico Errázuriz Zañartu (1871-76), and succeeded him as president (Sept. 18, 1876-Sept. 18, 1881). Pinto was the first declared liberal elected to the presidency after 1830. During his term the war with Bolivia and Peru (War of the Pacific) was commenced (1879).

Pinto (pēn'tō), Edgar Roquette. b. at Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 25, 1884-. Brazilian physician, naturalist, anthropologist, essayist, and short-story writer. Rondônia (1916) is his best-known work.

Pinto, Fernão Mendes. b. near Coimbra, Portugal, c1509; d. near Lisbon, Portugal, July 8, 1583. Portuguese adventurer and traveler in the East (China and Japan). He wrote an account of his travels entitled Peregrinação (1614), a work that was then considered by many to be made up of fabrications but has since been shown to be extremely accurate, considering the limitations of his times. It is now generally recognized as one of the great travel books of all time.

Pinto (pēn'tō), Francisco Antonio. b. at Santiago, Chile, 1785; d. there, July 18, 1858. Chilean general and politician, president (1827-29) of Chile. He was minister of the interior and of foreign relations in 1824. Early in 1827 he was elected vice-president, and on the resignation of Ramón Freire became president (May 8, 1827). He resigned in July, 1829; two months later he resumed the post by a regular election; but, a revolution being imminent, he again resigned on Nov. 2, 1829.

Pinturaria (pin.tū.ri.ä). Ancient name of Tenerife.

Pinturicchio (pin.tō.rēk'kyō). [Original name, Bernardino di Betti.] b. at Perugia, Italy, 1454; d. at Siena, Italy, Sept. 11, 1513. Italian painter, of the school of Perugia, noted for his frescoes and panels. Many of his principal works are at Rome (in the Vatican and Church of Santa Maria del Popolo) and at Siena.

Pinza (pēn'za; Italian, pēn'tsā), Ezio. b. at Rome, May 18, 1895-. American basso. He made his operatic debut at Rome in 1919, and presently was singing at La Scala, Milan, under the baton of Arturo Toscanini. There he attracted the interest of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, who engaged him to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, where he was well received and became a permanent member of the company. His versatility is illustrated by the fact that he has sung leading roles in such varied works as Die Meistersinger, Tristan und Isolde, Mignon, Faust, Lakmé, Aida, La Juive, The Barber of Seville, Norma, La Sonnambula, Louis, L'Elisir d'Amore, Cog d'Or, Don Giovanni, The Marriage of Figaro, and Boris Godunoff, his performances in the last three of these being especially esteemed. In 1949 he captured the attention of an even wider audience by his appearance in the musical comedy South Pacific.

Pinzgau (pint'sgaw). Region in C Austria, in Salzburg, comprising the upper valley of the Salzach River, SW of the city of Salzburg. It is bounded on three sides by ranges of the Alps, and is divided into the Upper, Middle, and Lower Pinzgau. It is famous for its horses.

Pinzón (pēn.thōn'), Francisco Martín. b. c1440; d. c1493. Brother of Martín Alonso and Vicente Yáñez Pinzón, and pilot of the Pinta on Columbus's first voyage.

Pinzón, Martín Alonso. b. at Palos de la Frontera, Spain, c1441; d. there, 1493. Spanish navigator; brother of Francisco Martín and Vicente Yáñez Pinzón. He was the head of a family of shipbuilders at Palos, and had made many voyages. There is a story that on one of these, in a French ship, he was driven by a storm from Africa to the coast of Brazil; but this is generally discredited. Another story is that he found at Rome an old manuscript which he gave to Columbus and in which it was stated that Asia might be reached by sailing westward. It is more probable that he joined Columbus in his voyage of 1492 because he was part owner of the smaller vessels and had, with his brothers Francisco and Vicente, aided in Columbus's preparations for the voyage. He commanded the Pinta. In November, 1492, he parted company with Columbus on the coast of Cuba; he was the first to discover Hispaniola, and rejoined the admiral on the coast of that island on Jan. 6, 1493. Columbus afterward asserted that he had deserted with the intention of returning to Spain. During the return voyage the Pinta was separated from the Niña in a storm (Feb. 14) and eventually reached Bayona, a port of Galicia. Thence Pinzón sent a letter to the sovereigns with an account of the discovery, and sailed on to Palos de la Frontera, reaching it on the same day as Columbus (March 15). His death, shortly after, is said to have been hastened by chagrin because Columbus received the honor of the discovery.

Pinzón, Vicente Yáñez. b. at Palos de la Frontera, Spain, c1400; d. c1524. Spanish navigator; brother of Francisco Martín and Martín Alonso Pinzón. He commanded the Niña in the first voyage of Columbus in 1492. Early in December, 1499 (according to some, Jan. 13, 1500), he left Palos de la Frontera in command of four exploring ships, crossed the equator, being the first Spanish commander to do so, struck the coast of Brazil, probably near Cape São Agostinho (St. Augustine), thence followed it N and NW, discovering the mouth of the Amazon, and, after passing between Trinidad and the mainland, touching at Hispaniola and sailing as far as Costa Rica, returned to Spain in September, 1500. Some suppose that Amerigo Vespucci was with him on this voyage, but he was probably with Alonso de Ojeda. In 1506 Pinzón was associated with Juan Díaz de Solís in an exploration of the Gulf of Honduras and a small portion of SE Yucatán. In 1508-09 he was again with Solís in an exploration of the E coast of South America, from Cape St. Augustine S probably as far as the 40th parallel.

Pioche de la Vergne (pyōsh de la vērny'), Marie Madeleine. Maiden name of La Fayette, Marie Madeleine Pioche de la Vergne, Comtesse de.

Piojes (pyō'shā). [Also: Pioches, Pioxes (pyō'shāz).] Tribe of South American Indians formerly dwelling on the lower Napo and Putumayo rivers, near the Colombian border. They were an agricultural and fishing people. Formerly they were assigned to the Betoyan linguistic stock, which is now called Tucano. The language of the Pioje proper is one of the numerous dialects of the Encabellado language, which belongs to the western division of Tucano.

Piombino (pyòm.bě'nō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Livorno, situated on a promontory projecting into the Mediterranean Sea, ab. 45 mi. S of Leghorn (Livorno) and opposite the island of Elba. It is one of the centers of the Italian iron and steel industry. There is a castle of the 15th century. In the Middle Ages, the town belonged to Pisa, was under the Visconti of Milan (1399 et seq.), passed to Spain in 1603, was occupied by French in 1801. It belonged to Tuscany in the period 1815-60. The castle suffered serious bomb damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 27,672 (1936); of town, 23,144 (1936).

Piombino, Principality of. Former small principality, adjoining and including the town of Piombino.

Piombo (pyòm'bō), Fra Sebastiano del. b. in Venice, 1485; d. at Rome, June 21, 1547. Italian painter of the Venetian school. His real name was Luciani, but he was commonly called del Piombo from his office of keeper of the leaden seals, which he held under Clement VII and Paul III. He was a pupil of Giovanni Bellini, and afterward of Giorgione, and was called to Rome c1509 by Agostino Chigi to assist in decorating the Farnesina with frescoes. Meantime his portraits in oil had won him fame. Among the best of this period are the so-called Fornarina in the Uffizi at Florence. Piombo was intimately associated with Michelangelo, and is said to have painted the Resurrection of Lazarus which is in the National Gallery, London, with his assistance. In 1527 he went to Venice, and there probably painted the portrait of Andrea Doria, now in the Doria Palace at Rome. He returned to Rome in 1529. In 1531 he became keeper of the seals and took religious orders.

Pioneers, The. Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1823.

Pioneers, The. Novel by Katherine Susannah Prichard, published in 1915.

Pioneers of France in the New World. Historical work by Francis Parkman, published in 1865.

Pioneers! O Pioneers! Poem by Walt Whitman, published in Drum-Taps (1865) and included in the supplement to the 1867 edition of Leaves of Grass.

Piotrków (pyō'tēr.kōf). [German, Petrikau; Russian, Petrkov.] Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Łódź, ab. 84 mi. SW of Warsaw: woolen and cotton textile industries; tool manufactures. The parish church, in the brick-Gothic style, dates from the 13th century; the churches of the Bernhards, Dominicans, Jesuits, of the 17th and 18th centuries, are in the baroque style. Piotrków was formerly a place of assembly for the Polish diet and the seat of a high Polish tribunal. It belonged to Russia from 1814 to 1919. Pop. 40,141 (1946).

Piotrowska (pyō.trōf'skā), Gabrjela. Maiden name of Zapolska, Gabrjela.

Pious Coquette, The. One of five historical tales in The Gallants (1927), by Lily Adams Beck under the pseudonym E. Barrington.

Pious Fund Case. First case decided (1902) by the Permanent Court of Arbitration at the Hague. The Pious Fund of the Californias had been established in the 17th century to maintain Roman Catholic missions in Upper and Lower California, and during the 19th century the fund had been taken over by the Mexican government, which guaranteed payment of the interest. When Upper California came to the U.S. by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848), payments to the Upper California missions ceased. A claim made in 1875 resulted in an award to the California bishops by an arbitrator. Another claim in 1899 was referred to the Hague Tribunal and resulted in the court's decision that the matter was in fact adjudicable and that payment was to be in Mexican legal tender.

Piove di Sacco (pyō'vā dē sāk'kō). [Ancient name, Plebs Sacci.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Padova, ab. 18 mi. SW of Venice: agricultural commune. Under various rulers in the Middle Ages, Piove di Sacco came under Venetian sovereignty in 1405. Pop. of commune, 15,272 (1936); of town, 4,399 (1936).

Pioxes (pyō'shāz). See Piojes.

Piozzi (pi.oz'i; Italian, pyōt'sē), Hester Lynch. See Thrale, Mrs.

Pip (pip). Negro cabin boy in Moby Dick by Herman Melville.

Pip. Hero of Charles Dickens's Great Expectations. His original full name (which is virtually never used) is Philip Pirrip.

Pipchin (pip'chin), Mrs. In Charles Dickens's Dombey and Son, a disagreeable old woman, proprietress of an "infantine boarding-house of a very select description" at Brighton, where little Paul Dombey was sent for his health.

Piperno (pē.per'nō). Former name of Privero.

Piper, The. Drama by Josephine Preston Peabody, produced in 1909.

Piper (pī'pēr), Tom. One of the six traditional male characters who perform in the English morris dance.

Piper of Hamelin (ham'lin) or Hameln (hām'eln). See Pied Piper of Hamelin.

Pipes (pīps), Tom. In Tobias Smollett's Peregrine Pickle, the attendant of Peregrine at school, and Commodore Truncheon's former boatswain.

Pipestone (pip'stōn). City in SE Minnesota, county seat of Pipestone County: creameries and red granite quarries. 5,269 (1950).

Pipil (pī.pē'l). Collective term for several Nahuatl-speaking Indian tribes or colonies which migrated S from C Mexico to SE Mexico, S Guatemala, and W El Salvador at some time before the Spanish conquest. Archaeological researches indicate that the Pipil shared a number of cultural characteristics with the Toltec and Zapotec, and that they carried on an extensive trade with various Maya groups and such other neighboring peoples as the Nicarao, Chorotega, and Sigua.

Pippa Passes (pip'a). Dramatic idyl by Robert Browning, published in 1841.

Pippin (pī.pē'n). German form of Pepin.

Piqua (pī'kwā, -wā). [Former name, Washington.] City in W Ohio, in Miami County, on the Miami River ab. 70 mi. NW of Columbus: manufactures of steel, shovels, and knitted textiles. It was settled in 1797 and renamed (1816) for the Shawnee word meaning "a man risen out of the ashes"; became (1815) a center for the linseed oil industry, and by 1890 was an important manufacturing center. 17,447 (1950).

Pique-Dame (pēk.dām). [Eng. trans., "Queen of Spades."] Opera in three acts by Peter Tschaiakovsky, with a libretto by the composer's brother, Modeste, adapted from Pushkin, first produced at St. Petersburg, Dec. 19, 1890.

Piracicaba (pē'ra.sē.kā'ba). Town in SE Brazil, in the state of São Paulo. 46,611 (1950).

Piræus (pī.rē'us). [Also: Peiraëus, Peiraieus, Peiraievs, Piræius.] Seaport of Athens, Greece, in the nomos (department) of Attica and Boeotia, situated on the Saronic Gulf ab. 5 mi. SW of Athens: chief port of Greece, important for imports; also a leading commercial center. It is the third largest city of Greece and the main center of its manufacturing industry. It was founded by Themistocles and Pericles, was destroyed by Sulla in 86 B.C., and has been rebuilt in modern times. It was in ancient times connected with Athens by the "Long Walls," and is now connected by a railway. In World War II the city was heavily damaged by German air raids in April, 1941. Pop. 184,980 (1951).

Pirandello (pē.rān.del'lo), Luigi. b. at Girgenti, Sicily, June 28, 1867; d. at Rome, Dec. 10, 1936. Italian dramatist and novelist. At the beginning of his literary career, he was chiefly supported by an allowance from his father; but marriage with a woman of his father's choice turned out unhappily; a professorship of Italian literature which he was constrained to accept, and which he held for 24 years (1897-1921), became irksome; and fame eluded him until 1921, when his drama Sei Personaggi in cerca d'autore (Six Characters in Search of an Author) won international acclaim and established him at once among the principal figures in modern Italian literature. His unique qualities, earlier perceived by a few discerning critics including James Joyce, were thereafter recognized in Italy and abroad. Earlier plays were successfully revived, and Pirandello formed his own theatrical troupe, which produced his works in Europe and America. His most successful later dramatic works were Enrico IV (Henry IV, 1922) and Come tu mi vuoi (As You Desire Me, 1930), the last-named being made into a successful motion picture featuring Greta Garbo. His success as a playwright also led to wider appreciation of his novels, the most popular of which are L'Esclusa (The Outcast, 1901), Il Fu Mattia Pascal (The Late Mattia Pascal, 1923), I Venti e i giovani (The Old and the Young, 1928), and Uno, nessuno, centomila (One, None, and a Hundred Thousand, 1933). Of his short stories, numbered by the hundreds, collections in English translation have been published under the titles Horse in the Moon (1932), Better Think Twice about It (1935), and The Medals and Other Stories (1939). In a great many of the short stories and some of the novels, the fantastic form of his plots proves a deterrent to the projection of his ideas, but in the most noted of his plays his philosophy shines through with intriguing clarity. It is not difficult to see how that philosophy, pessimistic and supercilious toward human hopes, aspirations, and capabilities, led to Pirandello being numbered among the intellectuals who embraced fascism. He was decorated by the Italian and the French governments, and in 1934 was awarded the Nobel prize for literature.

Piranesi (pĕ.rā.nā'zē). Giovanni Battista (or Giambattista). b. at Venice, 1720; d. at Rome, Nov. 9, 1778. Italian engraver and architect. He went to Rome about 1735 to study both architecture and engraving, and though his father tried to constrain him to practice architecture in his native city, at Rome he remained most of his life thereafter. He literally fell in love with Rome, that is to say with the memory of its olden glories, with the melancholy ruins of its greatness, and to a lesser extent with its more modern monuments. At the direction of Pope Clement XIII he worked on the restoration of some of the old churches, but the known results of his architectural efforts are generally considered less than admirable. His real vocation was the making of an engraved record of "the grandeur that was Rome," and of this he made a notable career. He wrote of his own work that it "will descend to posterity, and will last so long as there will be men desirous of knowing all that has survived of the ruins of the most famous city of the universe." His activities coincided with, and gave impetus to, the revival of interest in classical forms and motifs, which was largely to dominate art, and especially design and decoration, in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Among his more than 1,000 copperplates is a unique and famous group of 16 known as the Carceri, being monumental, technically superb views of prisons and prisoners, all imaginary, which Piranesi claimed to have seen in the delirium of a fever.

Pirano (pĕ.rā'nō). Town in the Free Territory of Trieste, on the SW Coast of the Gulf of Trieste, ab. 14 mi. SW of Trieste. Medieval walls and towers have been preserved, and there is a cathedral of the 14th century, with later additions. The port has fisheries, and a trade in wine and olive oil. Near here, in 1177, the Venetian fleet defeated the Genoese. The town was under Venetian rule 1283-1797, was under Austria in the 19th century, and was under Italy from 1919 to 1945. In 1947 it was incorporated into the Free Territory of Trieste. 15,117 (1936).

Piran Round (pir'an). Ancient theater in Cornwall, England. In early times it was the scene of sports exhibitions, combats, and rustic councils. The ancient Cornish mystery plays were performed here to large audiences as late as Shakespeare's day.

Pirassununga (pĕ'ra.sō.nōng'ga). City in S Brazil, in the state of São Paulo. 12,790 (1950).

Pirata (pĕ.rā'tā). Opera by Vincenzo Bellini, produced at Milan in 1827.

Pirate, The. Novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1822.

Pirate of the Gulf. See Laffite, Jean.

Pirates, War with the. War against the pirates of the Mediterranean, who were suppressed in 67 B.C. by Pompey (appointed by the Gabinian Law to deal with them).

Pirates of Penzance (pen.zans'). The. Comic opera by Sir Arthur Sullivan, with a libretto by W. S. Gilbert, first produced at London and New York in 1879.

Piratinunga (pĕ'ra.tē.nōng'ga). Indian name for the village which has become São Paulo, Brazil.

Pirayú (pĕ.rā.yū'). City in S Paraguay, in Paraguairi department. Pop. ab. 10,000.

Pirene (pi.rē'nē). See under Acrocrinthus.

Pirenne (pĕ.rēn). Henri. b. at Verviers, Belgium, Dec. 23, 1862; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 24, 1935. Belgian historian. Author of the monumental Histoire de Belgique (7 vols., 1900-32), he was the first among Belgian historians to stress the economic, social, and religious factors of history. Among his other works are Les Anciennes Démocraties des Pays-Bas (1909) and Les Villes du moyen âge (1927).

Pirgos (pĕ.r'gós). See Pyrgos.

Pirineos (pĕ.rē.nā'ōs). Spanish name of the Pyrenees.

Pirithous (pi.rith'ūs). In Greek legend, one of the Lapithae; a son of Zeus and a friend of Theseus. The famous battle between the Lapithae and the Centaurs took place on the occasion of his wedding to Hippodamia. Later Pirithous accompanied Theseus to Hades in an attempt to abduct Persephone. Theseus alone escaped; Pirithous was bound to a rock.

Pirmasens (pir'mā.zens). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Palatinate, French Zone, formerly in the Rhenish Palatinate, Bavaria, ab. 45 mi. NW of Strasburg. It was formerly the center of the German shoe and leather industries, and still has numerous shoe factories. It also has manufactures of shoe machinery, rubber goods, and chemicals. However, the industrial importance of Pirmasens has steadily declined since World War I. Here on Sept. 14, 1793, the Prussians under the Duke of Brunswick defeated the French under Jean Victor Moreau. The town belonged to France in the period 1794-1814, and passed to Bavaria in 1816. It suffered considerable damage in World War II. The population declined in the period 1939-46 by 24.8 percent. 37,859 (1946), 41,972 (1950).

Pirna (pi.rnā). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Saxony, situated on the Elbe River near the Czechoslovakian border, ab. 12 mi. SE of Dresden; tourist center in the region called Sächsische Schweiz ("Saxon Switzerland"). It has stone quarries, and paper, cellulose, glass, rayon, and other industries. The Rathaus (town hall) dates from the 16th century. Pirna received town privileges in 1240, passed to Meissen in 1291, to Bohemia in 1298, and once more to Meissen in 1405. In the Seven Years' War, the Saxon army was surrounded here by the Prussians and forced to surrender on Oct. 17, 1756. Pop. 37,426 (1946).

Pirnatza (pĕr.nāt'sā). See Pamisos.

Piro (pĕ.rō). Tribe of North American Pueblo Indians, now extinct, formerly occupying several pueblos in C New Mexico. They were greatly reduced by Apache warfare in the 17th century (in fact, abandonment of whole regions by the Piro is ascribed to Apache attacks before the arrival of the Spaniards). Their language, Piro, now extinct, belonged to the Tiwa group of the Tanoan family of languages.

Piro. Tribe of South American Indians of E Peru, occupying the forest region around the Apurimac and Ucayali rivers. They congregated in the missionary villages in the 17th and 18th centuries, but tired of the new life and returned to their aboriginal life and customs, wife-stealing from neighboring tribes and taking captives to be sold into slavery to the whites. Their language, Piro, embraces several dialects (including Chontaquiro and Simirinch), and belongs to the Montaña group of the Pre-Andean division of the Arawakan family of languages.

Piron (pĕ.rōh). Alexis. b. at Dijon, France, July 9, 1689; d. at Paris, Jan. 21, 1773. French epigrammatist and playwright. He wrote the comedy La Métromanie (1738), and vaudevilles.

Pirot (pĕ.rōt). Town in E Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Moravska, SE of Niš. It was ceded to Serbia by Turkey in 1878. Here, on Nov. 26-27, 1885, the Bulgarians defeated the Turks. 13,033 (1948).

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; d, d o r; s, s o r; t, t o r; ch;

Pir Panjal (pēr pun.jäl'). Range of mountains in S Kashmir. The highest portion of the range has a length of 80 mi. Its peaks rise to 14,000 and 15,000 ft.

Pirquet (pir.kä'), Baron Clemens von. b. at Hirschstetten, near Vienna, May 12, 1874; d. at Vienna, Feb. 28, 1929. Austrian pediatrician. He detected (1906) allergy, a term introduced by him in 1907, discovered (1907) the very important cutaneous tuberculin reaction which is named after him, studied serum disease and tuberculosis of childhood, introduced (1908) the concept of allergy in tuberculosis, and invented (1928) a new kind of an isolation bed for newborn babies.

Pirrie (pir'ī), William. b. near Huntly, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 1807; d. Nov. 21, 1882. Scottish surgeon.

Pirrip (pir'ip), Philip. See under Pip.

Pirro (pēr'ō), André. b. at St.-Dizier, France, Feb. 12, 1869; d. 1943. French musicologist. He was named professor at the Schola Cantorum in 1896 and at the Sorbonne in 1912. Author of L'Orgue de J. S. Bach (1894), J. S. Bach (1906), Descartes et la Musique (1907), and Les Clavecinistes (1925).

Pirsson (pir'son), Louis Valentine. b. at New York, Nov. 3, 1860; d. Dec. 8, 1919. American geologist, professor of geology in the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University from 1897. He was assistant editor of the American Journal of Science, and was connected with the U.S. Geological Survey. His publications include Rocks and Rock Minerals (1908).

Piruas (pēr'ō'ās). Name given by the licentiate Fernando de Montesinos, about the middle of the 17th century, to a supposed dynasty of Indians who are said to have ruled over a large extent of territory in Peru and Bolivia and to have preceded the sway of the Inca tribe. The authentic Indian traditions collected carefully by the Spaniards (c1542), and even previously, make no mention of the Piruas; and there appears to be no foundation for the tale which Montesinos either invented or misunderstood, using it for the purpose of concocting a history of Peru dating back to untold centuries. The supposed connection of the Piruas with Tiahuanaco is imaginary.

Pisa (pē'zā; Italian, pē'sā). Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany. Capital, Pisa; area, ab. 946 sq. mi.; pop. 341,423 (1936).

Pisa. [sq. name, Pisae.] City and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, the capital of the province of Pisa, situated on the Arno River ab. 6 mi. from the Mediterranean Sea. Industries produce glass, ceramics, china, alabaster and marble products, and cotton textiles. It is the seat of a university, founded in 1338. Galileo was born here. Pop. of commune, 72,468 (1936); of city, 49,471 (1936).

Architecture. Pisa has a notable cathedral, started 1063, a Romanesque basilica with a white marble façade, five naves, and beautiful ancient bronze portals. The Baptistery, started in 1152, contains a pulpit by Niccolò Pisano (1260), with Biblical reliefs. The best known of its buildings, however, is the leaning bell-tower (campanile), with eight stories, started in 1173, and finished in 1350 by Tommaso Pisano (the obliqueness results from the sinking of the foundation). Other churches and secular buildings, almost all heavily damaged in World War II, are: San Francesco and San Paolo a Ripa d'Arno (13th century), Santa Maria della Spina (13th century), Santo Stefano dei Cavalieri (16th century); the very old churches of San Niccolò and San Michele (10th century), and many others; the archiepiscopal palace, the palace of the Medici, the Palazzo del Comune (town hall), Palazzo Agostini, Palazzo dei Cavalieri di San Stefano, Palazzo dell'Orologio; a medieval citadel; and the Loggia del Mercato (1603-05). The roof of the Campo Santo was destroyed by fire, and the intense heat and subsequent exposure caused discoloration, loosening, and in some cases complete ruin of the many frescoes on its walls. The cathedral group was, however, saved. Many buildings have been or are being repaired. Among those totally destroyed was the church of SS. Cosma e Damiano; more than half of the Palazzo Medici was ruined.

History. In ancient times one of the 12 federated towns of Etruria, it became a Roman colony in 180 B.C. In the early Middle Ages it was one of the most prominent commercial and maritime cities of Italy; it defeated the Saracens in the 11th century and conquered Sardinia, Corsica, and the Balearic Islands. It held to the Ghibelline faction in the 12th century, but lost in the subsequent struggle for power with Genoa. Defeated in the naval battle of Meloria (1284), it ceded Corsica to Genoa, and Sardinia to Aragon. A church council (Council of Pisa) took place here in 1409. In World War II it was tenaciously defended by the Germans from July 31 to Sept. 2, 1944.

Pisa, Council of. Ecclesiastical council held at Pisa in 1409 for the purpose of healing the papal schism. It deposed the rival popes Gregory XII and Benedict XIII. Alexander V was elected by the cardinals.

Pisa, Leonardo da. See Leonardo da Pisa.

Pisac (pē.sāk'). Village in S Peru, in Cusco department, on the Vilcamayo River ab. 15 mi. NE of Cusco. It is noted for its remains of Inca architecture, including a large fortress, almost perfectly preserved, a temple, numerous terraces, and rock-tombs. Pop. ab. 1,000 (1940).

Pisae (pi'sē). Ancient name of Pisa.

Pisagua (pē.sā'gwā). Seaport in Tarapacá province, in NW Chile (formerly in Peru): a center of the nitrate industry. It was bombed by the Chileans on April 18, 1879, and attacked and taken by them November 2, in the War of the Pacific. Pop. under 5,000 (1940).

Pisan (pē.sān), Christine de. See Christine de Pisan.

Pisan Cantos (pē'zān). See under Cantos.

Pisanello (pē.zā.nel'lo). [Original name, Antonio Pisano; also called Vittore Pisano.] b. near Verona, Italy, between 1380 and 1397; d. at Rome, 1455 or 1456. Italian painter and medallist. Little is known of his antecedents, his training, or indeed of his life, other than that as one of the most imaginative, creative, and competent of early Italian Renaissance painters and the greatest of Italian medallists, he was patronized by several of the chief rulers and nobles of his time, especially by Lionello d'Este, lord of Ferrara. He excelled in striking characterization of real and legendary persons and in spirited, minutely observed renditions of animals, such as the champing war horses in his Saint George Mounting His Horse, a fresco which survives in the Pellegrini Chapel of the Church of Sant'Anastasia at Verona, and the stags, horse, hound, bear, and birds which enliven The Miraculous Stag Appearing to Saint Eustace, a treasure of the National Gallery at London. The National Gallery of Art at Washington displays his portrait of a noble lady of the Este family. But most of his paintings, especially his frescoes at Rome, Venice, Pavia, Florence, and Verona, have disappeared or been destroyed; other than the Saint George already mentioned, the only surviving example of his work in fresco is an Annunciation in the church of San Fermo Maggiore at Verona. His medals, considered the finest struck since ancient times, have fared better. He made no less than seven medals of Lionello of Ferrara, and also commemorated, among others, John Palaeologus, emperor of the Byzantine Empire, and the rulers of Milan, Mantua, Verona, and Naples.

Pisano (pi.sā'ni.ō). Servant of Posthumus in Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Pisano (pē.zā'nō), Andrea. [Original name, Andrea da Pontederra.] b. 1270; d. at Florence, c1349. Italian sculptor. He was early apprenticed to Giovanni Pisano, and devoted much time to the study of the antique sarcophagi in the Campo Santo at Pisa. At 35 years of age he is said to have visited Venice, where he made several statues for the façade of Saint Mark's (San Marco), and made designs for the arsenal, subsequently finished by Filippo Calendario. After his return from Venice he made (1330) the bronze door of the baptistery in Florence, upon which rests his chief title to fame. He also executed the bas-reliefs designed by Giotto for the lower story of the campanile, and some figures on the façade of the duomo (cathedral). He strengthened the Palazzo Vecchio with great walls and fortifications to render it a safe residence for Walter de Brienne, titular duke of Athens, whom the Florentines had made governor of the city.

Pisano, Giovanni. b. at Pisa, Italy, 1240; d. 1320. Italian architect and sculptor; son of Nicola Pisano. From 1266 to 1267 he worked with his father upon the pulpit in the cathedral of Siena. In 1268 he went to Naples to design the Church of the Franciscans and the episcopal palace. In 1278 he went to Pisa on the death of his father.

At this time he transformed the Oratory of Santa Maria del Porto into the present Church of Santa Maria della Spina, the first edifice built in Italy in the Gothic style, and built the first and most beautiful Campo Santo in Italy; in the Camp Santo are still many works by Giovanni. About 1289 he made the monument of Pope Urban IV at Perugia, and in 1290 the shrine of San Donato at Arezzo.

Pisano, Giunta. See Giunta Pisano.

Pisano, Leonardo. See Leonardo da Pisa.

Pisano, Nicola. b. at Pisa, Italy, c1220; d. there, c1278. Italian sculptor and architect; said to have been the son of Pietro da Siena, a notary. He founded a new school of sculpture in Italy. In 1260 he produced the famous pulpit in the baptistry at Pisa. In 1265 he began the Arca di San Domenico at Bologna, in which he was assisted by Fra Guglielmo Agnelli. In 1266 he began the pulpit of the cathedral at Siena, assisted by his son Giovanni and his pupils Arnolfo del Cambio, Donato, and Lapo. In 1269 Charles of Anjou commissioned him to erect the abbey and convent of La Scorgola to commemorate the victory of Tagliacozzo, which occurred in the neighboring valley. In 1274 was begun the fountain at Perugia, finished by his son Giovanni. The 24 statuettes of this fountain which are ascribed to Nicola Pisano are simply designed and broadly treated.

Pisanus (pī.sā'nus), Bartholomaeus Albicius. Latinized name of Albizzi, Bartolomeo.

Pisatis (pī.sā'tis). See under ancient Elis.

Pisaurum (pī.sō'rum). An ancient name of Pesaro.

Piscataqua (pī.skat'a.kwa). River in New Hampshire and partly on the boundary between New Hampshire and Maine. It is formed by the union of the Salmon Falls and Cochecho rivers, and flows into the Atlantic Ocean ab. 3 mi. SE of Portsmouth. Length (including the Salmon Falls), ab. 50 mi.

Piscataquis (pī.skat'a.kwis). River in Maine, joining the Penobscot ab. 30 mi. N of Bangor. Length, ab. 70 mi.

Piscator (pī.skat'ōr), Erwin. b. at Marburg, Germany, 1893—. German stage director and playwright. After graduation from acting school and three years' military service during World War I, he took an interest in the art of the Berlin dadaists but soon devoted himself to the political theater in Germany. In 1920 he opened a theater, the Tribunal, at Königsberg, in East Prussia, and later served as director of the important Volksbühne (1924–27), from which he resigned after political conflicts with the management over producing Storm Over Gotthland (1926), a play about a medieval revolt. In 1927 he renovated an old theater in western Berlin, the Nollendorf, and produced there a series of socially challenging plays, such as We Live, Rasputin, and The Good Soldier Schweik (1928), in a new "epi" style. He placed the scenery on conveyor belts so that it could rush past the performer, and used treadmills by means of which the actors could give the illusion of traversing great distances. He employed narrators, cartoons, slides, and motion-picture sequences to enlarge the dramatic scene and increase its significance as social commentary. Piscator, who also collaborated on The Good Soldier Schweik, a dramatization of a Czech novel by Jaroslav Hasek, proceeded to stage old and foreign plays such as The Lower Depths and What Price Glory? in a novel manner, supplementing the original play with socially significant actions and details. After the rise of Hitler, Piscator went to Russia, where he made a film, and to Paris, where he taught at a dramatic school. In 1940, after coming to New York, he founded the Dramatic Workshop, which was an adjunct to the New School for Social Research until 1949. Here he founded and directed the Studio Theatre, and produced original treatments of King Lear, Klabund's version of the Chinese classic The Circle of Chalk, Dan James's The Winter Soldiers, Bruckner's version of Nathan the Wise, and other European and American plays. After several seasons Piscator transferred his productions to two theaters, the President in the Broadway area, and the Roof-top Theatre in downtown New York, where he produced classics and new plays. Two of his most notable productions were Jean Paul Sartre's The Flies (April, 1947) and Robert Penn Warren's All the King's Men (January, 1948). Piscator also wrote a dramatization of Theodore Dreiser's American Tragedy, which was produced in Europe and America.

Piscennae (pī.sen'ē). Latin name of Pézenas.

Pisces (pī.sēz). Constellation and sign of the zodiac; the fishes. The figure represents two fishes united by a ribbon attached to their tails. One of the fishes is Ea, the other S, of the square of Pegasus. In the zodiac it is the twelfth sign and now the sign in which the vernal equinox occurs.

Pischel (pīsh'el), Richard. b. at Breslau, Jan. 18, 1849; d. at Madras, India, Dec. 26, 1908. German Indologist, notable for studies of the Vedas, Indian drama, and the Prakrit languages.

Piscis Australis (pī.sīs ōs.trā'lis). Ancient southern constellation, the Southern Fish. It contains the 1.3-magnitude star Fomalhaut, which is 30 degrees S of the equator. The figure represents a fish which swallows the water poured out of the vase by Aquarius.

Piscis Volans (pī.sīs vō'lanz). [Also, Volans.] One of the southern constellations introduced in the early 17th century. It is situated W of the star β Argus, and contains two stars of the fourth magnitude.

Pisco (pē'skō). City in W Peru, in Ica department, on the Pacific coast. It exports approximately one third of the country's cotton and grape products. Dating from colonial times, the city is divided into "old-world" Pisco Pueblo and modern Pisco Plaza, 14,609 (1940).

Pisek (pē'sek). Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of České Budějovice, in W central Bohemia, ab. 55 mi. S of Prague, between České Budějovice and Příbram. It has a church dating from the 11th century and a castle from the 15th century. There are woolen and machine factories, and various other industries, 16,858 (1947).

Pisgah (pīz'gah). In Biblical geography, a mountain of Abrahim, in Moab, NE of the Dead Sea; sometimes identified with Jebel Siaghah, in Jordan, Mount Nebo, from which Moses viewed the promised land of Canaan, was one of its summits.

Pishacha (pī.shā'cha). In Hindu mythology, the name of a class of malevolent demons, who frequent cemeteries and cause disease. They are the souls of those who have died by violence. Perhaps originally (as is inferred from the epithets of Pishachii in Rigveda I, xcxi, 5) they were personifications of the ignis fatuus. They are called the "flesh-eating Pishachas" in Atharva-Veda (VIII, ii, 12).

Pishin (pī.shēn). See Quetta-Pishin.

Pishon (pī'shon). See under Eden, Biblical.

Pishpai (pīsh'pī). Rarely used name for the third-magnitude star μ Geminorum.

Pishpek (pīsh'pek'). Former name of Frunze.

Pishtaka (pīsh.tā'ka). See Fox river, SE Wisconsin.

Pisides (pī.sī'dēz) or Pisida (pī.sī'da), Georgius. Latin name of George the Pisidian.

Pisidia (pī.sī'dī.a). In ancient geography, a territory in Asia Minor. It was bounded by Phrygia on the N, Isauria and Cilicia on the E, Pamphylia on the S, and Lycia on the SW, and was traversed by the Taurus Mountains. It was conquered by Rome.

Pisistratidae (pī.sīs.tratī.dē). Hippias and Hipparchus, the two sons and successors of Pisistratus.

Pisistratus (pī.sīs'tra.tus). [Also Pisistratus.] b. c605 B.C.; d. 527 B.C. Tyrant of Athens (560, 554–527 B.C.), a friend of Solon. He was opposed in his attempts to control the city by the powerful clan of the Alcmaeonids and their aristocratic allies, who succeeded in having Pisistratus expelled from the city in 560 soon after he had seized power and again in 556. He returned in 554 and thenceforth retained and consolidated his power, leaving his sons Hippias and Hipparchus in control of the city after his death. Pisistratus oriented Athenian diplomacy towards Ionia in an effort to make the Aegean Sea the area of Athenian hegemony. In the latter years of his reign he commissioned a learned body to establish a definitive text of the Iliad and the Odyssey; this version is the one from which all subsequent texts of Homer are derived.

Pisistratus Caxton (kaks'ton). See Caxton, Pisistratus.

Piskov (pīskof'). See Pskov.

Piso (pī.sō), Calpurnius. Name of a family of the Calpurnii gens distinguished in Roman history. Among its members were the following: Lucius, a censor, consul, and author of the second half of the 2nd century B.C.; Lucius, a politician, father-in-law of Julius Caesar, consul in 58 B.C. and later a member of the party of Mark Antony; Gneius, governor of Syria under Tiberius, and the reputed murderer of Germanicus; Gaius, the leader of an unsuccessful conspiracy against Nero in 65 A.D. who committed suicide when the plan fell through; and Lucius, the successor of Galba for four days, put to death by Otho (69 A.D.).

Pissarro (pě.să.rō). Camille. b. in St. Thomas, West Indies, July 10, 1839; d. at Paris, in November, 1903. French impressionist painter. He was sent to Paris to be educated, returned home and essayed a business life, but went back to France in 1855. He was at one time associated with Monet and for a short time with the pointillists. He painted the boulevards of Paris, the streets of Rouen, and the landscape of Normandy.

Pisseu de Heilly (pě.sé.dé.yē), Anne de. See Étampes, Duchesse d'.

Pissevache (pě.sə.văsh). Waterfall in the canton of Valais, Switzerland, near Martigny. Height, 215 ft.

Pissis (pě.sēs). Aimé. b. at Brionde, Haute-Loire, France, May 17, 1812; d. at Santiago, Chile, 1888. French naturalist.

Pisticci (pě.tēt'chē). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lucania, in the province of Matera, situated near the Salandrella Cavone River, S of Matera. Pop. of commune, 11,560 (1936); of town, 11,145 (1936).

Pistoia (pě.s.tō.yā). Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany. Capital, Pistoia; area, ab. 368 sq. mi.; pop. 210,950 (1936).

Pistoia. [Also: Pistoia; Latin, Pistoria.] City and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Firenze, situated near the Ombrone River ab. 20 mi. NW of Florence. It produces needles, metal articles (particularly firearms), garments, and macaroni. Its arms manufacture was formerly famous (although the word "pistol" is not, as some have too hastily supposed, derived from Pistoia). Pop. of commune, 71,963 (1936); of town, 29,532 (1936).

Architecture. The cathedral dates from the 12th century and the baptistery from the 14th century. Other interesting churches are San Giovanni Fuorcivitas (12th-14th centuries), with a Romanesque facade, and Sant' Andrea (12th century). There are a number of fine secular buildings, such as the Ospedale del Ceppo (14th century), the palazzo del commune (town hall), and various palaces. Considerable damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of tourist interest, including the cathedral and the baptistery. Most of these have been or are being repaired. The Ospedale del Ceppo was not damaged.

History. A Roman town in ancient times, and later part of the early medieval margravate of Tuscany, it became a free city in 1115, and was a leader (c1200 et seq.) in the development of European banking techniques.

Pistoia, Cino da. See Cino da Pistoia.

Pistol (pis'tol). Character in Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor, in King Henry IV, part II, and also introduced in King Henry V: a bully and swaggerer, a companion of Falstaff. He is the modification of the regular Italian type, the "Thraso."

Piston (pis'ton). Walter. b. at Rockland, Me., Jan. 20, 1894—. American composer and musical educator. In his youth he intended to be a painter, and studied to that end; but music gradually became his dominant interest, and after studying harmony, theory, and counterpoint while an undergraduate at Harvard University, he went to Paris and became a pupil of Nadia Boulanger. Returning to the U.S., in 1926 he joined the teaching staff of Harvard, and in 1928 was introduced to the American musical public when the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky produced his Symphonic Piece. In 1932 Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Society played his Suite for Orchestra. Thereafter his very varied works had numerous performances. These works include three symphonies, a Concerto for Orchestra, a Concerto for Piano and Chamber Orchestra, a ballet, The Incredible Flutist, string quartets, a piano trio, and chamber music. He has sometimes also composed expressly for radio presentation. His compositions are in the main classical in form, logical in structure, but harmonically experimental and radical; they are never programmatic. In 1944 he became professor of music at Harvard, and in 1948 he was awarded the Pulitzer prize in music. He is the author of Principles of Harmonic Analysis (1933), Harmony (1941), and Counterpoint (1947).

Pistoria (pis.tō'ri.a). Latin name of Pistoia.

Pistyan (pis'tvān). German name of Piešťany.

Pit and the Pendulum. The. Story by Edgar Allan Poe, published (1843) in The Gift.

Pit: A Story of Chicago. The. Novel by Frank Norris, posthumously published in 1903. The book is the second in the uncompleted "Epic of Wheat" trilogy.

Pitcairn (pit'kārñ). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County: railroad repair shops; coal mining, manufactures of bricks, 5,857 (1950).

Pitcairn, John. b. in Fifehire, Scotland, 1722; killed at Bunker Hill, Boston, June 17, 1775. British officer (major), commander of the advanced force in Thomas Gage's expedition to Lexington and Concord, April 19, 1775.

Pitcairn Island. Island in the S Pacific Ocean, between Easter Island and Tahiti. It is of considerable historic interest from its connection with the mutineers of the Bounty. Area, ab. 5 sq. mi.; pop. 134 (1951).

Pitch Baby. See Tar Baby.

Pitcher (pich'ēr). Molly. See McCauley, Mary Ludwig Hays.

Pitch Lake (pich). Asphalt lake in SW Trinidad, British West Indies. The asphalt is the result of oil seepages and occupies ab. 114 acres.

Pitești (pě.těsh't', -tesh'tē). Town in S Rumania, in the province of Muntenia, situated on the Arges River, ab. 70 mi. NW of Bucharest: junction of important routes over the Carpathian Mountains; petroleum center. The town suffered much damage from air raids in World War II. 29,007 (1948).

Pithecanthropus (pith'ē.kan'thrō.pūs). Extinct genus of early men. Fossil remains of individual members have been found in Java in geological strata dating from the early Middle Pleistocene period. Three different types are known:

Pithecanthropus erectus Dubois. The so-called Java Man, a being with upright posture and a body of about human size and proportions, but with a brain capacity below that of modern man. The type was a rather close relative of Sinanthropus or the Peking Man.

Pithecanthropus robustus. A larger variety with bones of tremendous thickness.

Meganthropus palaeojavanicus. A more primitive type of giant size. (An even taller hominid, Gigantopithecus, double the size of a male gorilla, or 1½ times the size of Meganthropus, lived in China.) It seems likely that the more archaic Meganthropus represents an earlier phylogenetic stage than P. robustus and that the latter precedes P. erectus. They may have lived during different geological periods, although they were found at the same level; fluvial deposits may have placed earlier dislodged bones and more recent ones in the same geological formation. Further excavations may decide whether they were contemporaries or not, and whether they represent different phylogenetic stages or group variations within the same evolutionary phase.

Homo Modjokertensis. An infant skull from the second half of the Lower Pleistocene (first interglacial period), the oldest human remains known from Asia. The infantile character and state of preservation of the skull prevent any definite correlation with the Pithecanthropus group.

Homo Soloensis. Type of fossil man from Java, morphologically more advanced than Pithecanthropus, dating from the early Upper Pleistocene period or third glacial cycle.

Homo Wadjakensis. Type of fossil man from Java, a less primitive form than Soloensis, possibly related to contemporary Australian aborigines. Its age is uncertain, but has been tentatively set at the end of the Upper Pleistocene period. There is practically nothing known about the cultures of these earliest types of men in Java. Numerous large, rough, palaeolithic implements such as choppers, scrapers, and handaxes were found near Patjitan, close to central Java's southern coast, and later at other sites in Java and Sumatra. All pieces were surface finds, and consequently no certain geological age could be fixed. Movius, Hooton, and others feel they are representatives of the culture of P. erectus. Some others, however, consider them as contemporary with H. Solensis or think they may belong to several different geological periods. An entirely different type of palaeolithic implement was recovered from Upper Pleistocene strata at Singaran near Solo (Soerakarta), in C Java, such as small flakes, blades, points, and scrapers. These may have belonged to H. Solensis. Very similar tools, together with hoes or hammers of deer antler, were found in the Solo River valley, presumably also at Upper Pleistocene levels. They were, however, excavated so unscientifically that no definite conclusions could be reached. The possibility exists that they too may be documents of the culture of Solo Man.

Pithecus (pith.e.kû'sə). An ancient name of Ischia.

Pithiviers (pi.tē.vyā). Town in C France, in the department of Loiret, ab. 25 mi. NE of Orléans. It is a center of the grain and wine trade, has sugar refineries, and produces special pastries. 7,111 (1946).

Pithom (pi'thōm). In Biblical geography, one of the stone cities built in Egypt by the Israelites. It was determined by Edouard Naville to be near the modern Tell el Maskhutah, ab. 12 mi. from Ismailia, on the Suez Canal. In the time of the Greek dynasty its name became Heroopolis, which the Romans abridged to Eros.

Pitilaga (pē.tē.lā'gā). See Pilaga.

Pitkin (pi'tkin), Timothy. b. at Farmington, Conn., Jan. 21, 1766; d. at New Haven, Conn., Dec. 18, 1847. American lawyer, politician, and historian. He published Statistical View of the Commerce of the United States (1816) and A Political and Civil History of the United States from the year 1763 to the close of Washington's Administration (1828).

Pitkin, Walter Boughton. b. at Ypsilanti, Mich., Feb. 6, 1878— . American writer, professor of journalism (1912 et seq.) at Columbia. Author of The Art and Business of the Short Story (1913), How to Write Stories (1922), The Psychology of Happiness (1929), Life Begins at Forty (1932), Making Good Before Forty (1939), On My Own (1944), The Best Years (1946), and other books.

Pitkin, William. b. probably at Marylebone, London, 1635; d. Dec. 15, 1694. American colonial lawyer and judge. Arriving (c1659) at Hartford, Conn., he became prominent as a lawyer and served (1690-94) on the Court of Assistants and also as a member of special courts. He achieved a reputation as a defender of Connecticut's colonial rights.

Pitkin, William. b. at Hartford, Conn., April 30, 1694; d. Oct. 1, 1769. American colonial judge and governor; grandson of William Pitkin (1635-94). He was active in colonial military defense, was presiding judge (1735-52) of the county court, judge (1741-54) and chief judge (1754 et seq.) of the superior court, served (1754) as a delegate to the Albany Congress, where he was a member of the committee which drew up the confederation plan, and in 1765 was elected governor of Connecticut, a post he held until his death.

Pitkin, William. b. 1725; d. Dec. 12, 1789. American jurist and manufacturer; son of William Pitkin (1694-1769). During the Revolutionary War he operated a powder mill which furnished Connecticut with powder supplies, and subsequently manufactured glass, snuff, and forgings. He served (1766-85) as assistant on the governor's council, was a member of the council of safety during the Revolution, and was judge (1769-89) of the superior court of Connecticut, of which he was chief judge at the time of his death.

Pitlochry (pit.loch'ri). Police burgh, containing the villages of Pitlochry and Moulis, in C Scotland, in Perthshire, situated on the river Tummel near Killiecrankie, ab. 11 mi. NW of Dunkeld, ab. 469 mi. N of London by rail. The town has a whisky-distilling industry, and a hydroelectric development is under construction here. 2,413 (est. 1948).

Pitman (pit'man). Borough in SW New Jersey, in Gloucester County; summer resort. 6,960 (1950).

Pitman, Benn. b. at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, England, July 24, 1822; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 28, 1910. Anglo-American stenographer; brother of Sir Isaac Pitman. After lecturing on shorthand in England, he came to America in 1852 and settled at Cincinnati, where he founded the Phonographic Institute. He was official reporter of some of the state trials at the close of the Civil War. In 1856 he invented an electrochemical process of relief engraving, and from 1873 to 1892 lectured on art and taught wood-carving in the Cincinnati Art Academy. He published The Reporter's Companion (1854), Manual of Phonography (1854), History of Shorthand (1858), Life of Sir Isaac Pitman (1902), and others.

Pitman, Sir Isaac. b. at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, England, Jan. 4, 1813; d. at Bath, England, Jan. 22, 1897. English phonographer, remembered as the originator and principal first teacher of a system of shorthand stenography based upon phonetics rather than orthography; brother of Benn Pitman. The system, which bears his name, is still in wide use. He published in 1837 his first treatise on shorthand, entitled Stenographic Soundhand. After the establishment of the Phonetic Society in 1843, he devoted himself wholly to the propagation of his system of shorthand, and was the head of the Phonetic Institute at Bath. He was also identified with the movement for spelling reform. He was knighted in 1894.

Pitney (pi'ni), Mahlon. b. at Morristown, N.J., Feb. 5, 1858; d. Dec. 9, 1924. American politician and lawyer, a justice (1912-22) of the U.S. Supreme Court. He was graduated (B.A., 1879) from the College of New Jersey (later Princeton University), was admitted to the bar, and began his practice at Dover, N.J. He served (1895-99) as a Republican member of Congress and in 1898 was elected to the New Jersey state senate. He served (1901-08) on the New Jersey supreme court, was named (1908) chancellor of the state, and in 1912 was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Pitoeff (pē.to'ef), Georges. b. at Tiflis, Georgia, in Russia, 1886; d. at Paris, 1939. French actor, stage director, and producer. He went to Paris in 1919, performed at various Parisian art theaters, and (after establishing his own company) gave simplified stylized productions of psychological and experimental drama, favoring Pirandello and Lenormand, as well as the Russian playwrights Gorki and Andreyev. Also notable were his revivals of classics, in which he generally appeared with his wife, Ludmilla Pitoeff.

Pitoeff, Ludmilla. b. at Tiflis, Russia, 1896; d. at Paris, Sept. 15, 1951. French actress; wife of Georges Pitoeff. Her most famous roles were Saint Joan, Nora (in A Doll's House), and Camille. Joint productions with her husband included much of Pirandello, Schnitzler's Reigen, Andreyev's He Who Gets Slapped, Hamlet, and many new French plays. After her husband's death she came to New York; her one Broadway appearance was in The House in Paris (1944).

Piton des Neiges (pē.tōn dā nez). See under Réunion.

Pitoni (pē.tō'nē), Giuseppe Ottavio. b. at Rieti, Italy, March 18, 1657; d. Feb. 1, 1743. Italian choirmaster, composer of much religious music.

Pitrè (pē.trē'), Giuseppe. b. at Palermo, Italy, Dec. 21, 1841; d. there, April 10, 1916. Italian folklorist, who served as professor (1910 et seq.) at Palermo. Author of Biblioteca delle tradizioni popolari siciliane (History of Popular Sicilian Traditions, 1871 et seq.).

Pitris (pi'triz). In Hindu belief, the semideified spirits of the departed. They are the objects of Shraddhas, or rites designed to hasten their attainment of sainthood, accompanied by offerings of food for the ancestors and the Brahmins.

Pit River Indians (pit). See Palaihnihan.

Pitt (pit), Mr. See Mr. Pitt.

Pitt, William. [Title, 1st Earl of Chatham; called the Elder Pitt and the Great Commoner.] b. at Westminster (now part of London), Nov. 15, 1708; d. at Hayes, Kent, England, May 11, 1778. English statesman and orator. He studied at Trinity College, Oxford, and obtained a cornet's commission in the dragoons (but was dismissed when he published a satire against George II). From the famous pocket borough of Old Sarum, which his family owned, he entered Parliament, as a Whig, in 1735, and in 1746 became vice-treasurer of Ireland in Henry Pelham's administration. He was in the same year promoted to the office of paymaster-general, which he retained under the Duke of Newcastle. Disappointed in his hope of advancement, and also in disagreement with Newcastle over foreign policy, he attacked the government in 1755, and was deprived of office. With considerable reluctance, after Newcastle's resignation, George II asked Pitt to form a government in 1756; the result pleased no one: Pitt lacked knowledge of party politics, and was able neither to hold a working majority nor to revitalize the military effort against France (at this time Pitt was secretary of state under the nominal prime ministership of the Duke of Devonshire; actually Pitt was head of the government). He resigned in April, 1757, but returned in early summer to form a coalition with the Duke of Newcastle, who became premier, with Pitt as secretary of state; this combination was immediately successful: Newcastle held Parliament in line, and Pitt had a free hand in matters of foreign policy. He adopted vigorous measures in prosecution of the Seven Years' War, and the period which followed is one of the most brilliant in English history. Pitt resigned again in 1761, when he failed to receive the support of the rest of the ministry for a war with Spain. He became premier on the fall of Rockingham in 1766, was created Viscount Pitt and Earl of Chatham, but resigned in 1768, owing to ill health. He opposed the stubborn and foolish policy of George III toward the American colonists (to whom, however, he certainly never wished to grant independence; his last appearance in the House of Lords, on April 7, 1778, was in order to protest against the dismemberment of the British Empire by any acknowledgment of their independence).

Pitt, William. [Called the Younger Pitt.] b. at Hayes, near Bromley, Kent, England, May 28, 1759; d. at Putney (now part of London), Jan. 23, 1806. English statesman; second son of William Pitt, 1st Earl of Chatham, and Lady Hester Grenville, daughter of Hester, Countess Temple. He is considered by many to have been the greatest of all English prime ministers. In 1773 he entered Pembroke Hall (now Pembroke College), Cambridge. In 1780 he was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn and elected member of Parliament for Appleby. On Feb. 26, 1781, he attracted attention with his first speech, in favor of Edmund Burke's plan for various economies in government. In a speech on May 7, 1782, he attacked the existing electoral system and moved an investigation, being defeated by a narrow majority. In July, 1782, he became chancellor of the exchequer and leader of the House of Commons in Shelburne's ministry, which resigned March 31, 1783. On the downfall of "the coalition" of North and Fox, Pitt became prime minister, first lord of the treasury, and chancellor of the exchequer (December, 1783). He faced considerable hostility in Parliament, but had the king and a vast portion of the English electorate behind him; he therefore refused to resign, despite his defeat in early 1784 on measure after measure, and won a clean majority in the election of March, 1784. He thereafter held office until 1801, one of the longest ministries in English history. During this period he was able to introduce major reforms in financing the public debt, in customs duties, and in the administration of India (which he took out of the hands of the East India Company). In the pressing problem of Parliamentary reform, however, he was able to do nothing; and presently he was faced with the urgent question of a British policy toward France. The French Revolution in 1789 was at first regarded with favor in England, and as late as the spring of 1792 Pitt hoped for peace. When finally dragged into the struggle (1792-93), his activity was political rather than military. His policy was frustrated by Napoleon on the Continent, but at home it met with no opposition; by 1799 the largest possible minority in Parliament was 25. At this time, and subsequently, he was the chief architect of great coalitions against Napoleon. His internal administration was extremely severe. Jacobinism was suppressed, and the Habeas Corpus Act repeatedly suspended. His policy in Ireland was based on corruption of the most flagrant sort, but it achieved the immediately useful end of the union of 1800 (which had the effect of quieting for a short time the spirit of revolt that had produced the rising of 1798); however, his attempt to achieve Roman Catholic emancipation was opposed by the king, and he resigned on March 14, 1801. The Addington ministry, which succeeded, was made up of Pitt's supporters. It fell after the failure of the treaty of Amiens, and Pitt's second administration began May 10, 1804. Napoleon's attempted invasion of England failed through the vigilance of Nelson, but the coalition of England, Russia, and Austria, with which Pitt opposed him on the Continent, was wrecked at Ulm and Austerlitz in 1805. Pitt, completely prostrated by these disasters, retired to his villa at Putney (now part of London) on Jan. 11, 1806, and there he died less than two weeks later.

Pitta (pĕ'tā). Sebastião da Rocha. See Rocha Pitta, Sebastião da.

Pittacus (pit'ā.kus). b. in Lesbos, c.650 b.c.; d. c.569 b.c. Greek politician and poet, one of the Seven Wise Men of ancient Greece. He was chiefly responsible for the overthrow (c.611) of the reigning tyrant of Mytilene, and himself became tyrant in 589. His ten-year rule (which ended with voluntary resignation) securely established democratic government in the city.

Pitti Palace (pĕ'tĭ). See under Florence, Italy.

Pitt Island (pit). See under Chatham Islands.

Pittman (pit'man). Key. b. at Vicksburg, Miss., Sept. 19, 1872; d. at Reno, Nev., Nov. 10, 1940. American politician and lawyer. He practiced law at Seattle, Wash. (1892-97) and Tonahap, Nev. (1901 et seq.). Senator (1913-40) from Nevada, he was president pro tem of the 73rd-76th Congresses, and headed (1933-40) the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

Pittman Act. Measure sponsored by Key Pittman, and passed by the U.S. Congress in 1918. It provided for the purchase, at a minimum price of one dollar an ounce on the domestic market, of a new supply of silver to replace the melting down and export of a quantity of the metal not exceeding 350 million dollars. In order to prevent a contracted currency, the Federal Reserve Board was allowed to issue Federal Reserve bank notes equal to the amount of the silver dollars disposed of under the terms of the act.

Pittsburg (pits'bĕrg). City in C California, in Contra Costa County, N of San Francisco, named for Pittsburgh, Pa.; manufactures of corrugated iron, tin plate, wire, and nails. 12,763 (1950).

Pittsburg. City in SE Kansas, in Crawford County, in a coal-mining district. 19,341 (1950).

Pittsburg. City in E Texas, county seat of Camp County, NE of Dallas: residential community. 3,142 (1950).

Pittsburgh (pits'bĕrg). [Also (at one time) Pittsburg; called the "Iron City," the "Smoky City."] City in SW Pennsylvania, county seat of Allegheny County, at the confluence of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. The second largest city in the state, it is one of the world's leading centers for the manufacture of iron, steel, and glass. Subsidiary industries produce air brakes, switches, signals, railroad cars, hardware, aluminum products, food products, paper, coke, by-products of coke, chemicals, cork, clay products, and refined petroleum. It is the seat of the University of Pittsburgh, Duquesne University, the Carnegie Institute of Technology, and the Mellon Institute. In the 18th century, there was a French fort on its site (called Fort Duquesne); it was in an attempt to take it that Braddock was defeated in the battle of the Monongahela on July 9, 1755. It was finally taken in 1758. Fort Pitt (named for the elder William Pitt) was built in 1759, and Pittsburgh was settled in 1764. Pop. of city, 671,659 (1940), 676,806 (1950); of urbanized area, 1,532,953 (1950).

"Pittsburgh of Japan" (ja.pan). See Yawata.

"Pittsburgh of the South." See Birmingham, Ala.

Pittsburg Landing (pits'bĕrg), Battle of. See under Shiloh.

Pittsfield (pits'fĕld). City in W Illinois, county seat of Pike County. 3,564 (1950).

Pittsfield. Town (in Maine the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in C Maine, in Somerset County; trading center for an agricultural community. Pop. of town, 3,909 (1950); of village, 3,012 (1950).

Pittsfield. City in W Massachusetts, county seat of Berkshire County, ab. 29 mi. SE of Albany. It was incorporated in 1761, and has manufactures of textiles, electrical machinery, thread, and metal products. 53,348 (1950).

- Pittston (pīts'ton). City in E Pennsylvania, in Luzerne County, on the Susquehanna River near the mouth of the Lackawanna River, ab. 8 mi. SW of Scranton; anthracite coal-mining. 15,012 (1950).
- Pityusa (pit.i.ū'sā). Ancient name of Spetsal.
- Pityusae (pit.i.ū'sē). See under Baleares.
- Piura (pyō'ra). Department in NW Peru, bordering on Ecuador, Tumbes department, and the Pacific Ocean. Capital, Piura; area, 15,239 sq. mi.; pop. 519,763 (est. 1950).
- Piura. City in NW Peru, capital of Piura department, near the Pacific coast. It was founded by Pizarro. 24,620 (est. 1950).
- Piura River. River in NW Peru, in the department of Piura, flowing W to the Pacific Ocean. Length, ab. 200 mi.
- Pius I (pi'us), Saint. d. 155. Pope from 140 to 155; a brother of HERNAS, author of The Shepherd. He resisted the Gnostic heretics.
- Pius II. [Original name, Enea Silvio Piccolomini.] b. near Siena, Italy, Oct. 18, 1405; d. Aug. 15, 1464. Pope from 1458 to 1464. He studied at the universities of Siena and Florence, and in 1431 became secretary to the bishop of Fermo, whom he accompanied to the Council of Basel. He at first supported the council in its contest with Pope Eugenius IV, but afterward sided with Eugenius against the council. He was for a time poet laureate at the court of the emperor Frederick III. He condemned appeals from the Pope to a council in the bull Eccerrabilis. Early in his life he wrote a novel, Eurialus and Lucretia, and, during his pontificate, Commentaries relating to his own times.
- Pius III. [Original name, Francesco Todeschini Piccolomini.] b. at Siena, Italy, May 29, 1439; d. at Rome, Oct. 18, 1503. Pope for four weeks in September and October, 1503.
- Pius IV. [Original name, Giovanni Angelo Medici.] b. at Milan, Italy, March 31, 1499; d. at Rome, Dec. 9, 1565. Pope from 1559 to 1565. He reopened the Council of Trent in 1562, and issued a bull confirming its decisions in 1564. He created his nephew, Saint Charles Borromeo, a cardinal. Kinship with the Milanese Medici was claimed by the prouder, more famous Florentine house for the first time when this Pope acceded to the throne.
- Pius V, Saint. [Original name, Michele Ghislieri.] b. at Bosco, near Milan, Italy, Jan. 17, 1504; d. May 1, 1572. Pope from 1566 to 1572. A Dominican, he taught philosophy and theology for 16 years. Created cardinal in 1557 by Pope Pius II, he was elected Pope on Jan. 7, 1566. Of austere and holy life, he promoted reform, encouraged Christian unity, and supported Don John of Austria in his campaign against the Turks.
- Pius VI. [Original name, Giovanni Angelo Braschi.] b. at Cesena, Italy, Dec. 27, 1717; d. at Valence, France, Aug. 29, 1799. Pope from 1775 to 1799. The French stripped him of parts of his dominions (the States of the Church) in 1791 and 1796, and of the remainder in 1798. In 1798 he was carried as a prisoner to Valence, in France, where he died.
- Pius VII. [Original name, Gregorio Luigi Barnaba Chiaramonti.] b. at Cesena, Italy, Aug. 14, 1740; d. Aug. 20, 1823. Pope from 1800 to 1823. Elected to the papal chair at Venice on March 14, 1800, he ratified the concordat with France in 1801, and consecrated Napoleon as emperor in 1804. His opposition to French aggression brought on the formal annexation of the States of the Church to France in 1800, and his own imprisonment first in Italy and afterward in France (1809-14). He was restored to Rome and to his temporal dominions in 1814.
- Pius VIII. [Original name, Francesco Xaviero Castiglioni.] b. at Cingoli, near Ancona, Italy, Nov. 20, 1761; d. at Rome, Nov. 30, 1830. Pope from 1829 to 1830. He reigned for only 20 months.
- Pius IX. [Original name, Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti.] b. at Sinigaglia, near Ancona, Italy, May 13, 1792; d. at Rome, Feb. 7, 1878. Pope from 1846 to 1878. He became archbishop of Spoleto in 1827, and was elected Pope on June 16, 1846. His great objective at the time of his accession was to bring about a confederation of the Italian states under the papal supremacy. With this object in view, he placed himself at the head of the movement for reform, proclaimed an amnesty to political offenders, reorganized the municipal government of Rome, and granted a constitution to the States of the Church. Frightened, however, by the increasing demands of the populace, he fled to Gaeta in November, 1848, while a republic was proclaimed at Rome. He was restored by the aid of the French in 1850, and henceforth maintained an attitude of uncompromising conservatism. A large part of his dominions were annexed by Victor Emmanuel in 1860, and he was altogether deprived of his temporal power in 1870. In 1864 he issued the famous Syllabus of modern errors. Under him the doctrine of papal infallibility was proclaimed by the Vatican Council, on July 18, 1870.

Pius X. [Original name, Giuseppe Sarto.] b. at Riese, near Treviso, Italy, June 2, 1835; d. Aug. 20, 1914. Pope from 1903 to 1914. He was made bishop of Mantua in 1884, cardinal and patriarch of Venice in 1893, and was elected Pope on Aug. 4, 1903. A man of singularly holy life, he promoted frequent communion and liturgical reform, corrected marriage legislation, and authorized the codification of Canon Law completed under Benedict XV. He was beatified in 1951.

Pius XI. [Original name, Achille Ratti.] b. at Desio, in Lombardy, Italy, May 31, 1857; d. Feb. 10, 1939. Pope from 1922 to 1939. Of a peasant family (his father was in the spinning business), he was educated in the minor seminary of the archdiocese of Milan and at the Lombard College in Rome. Ordained priest on Dec. 20, 1879, he took three ecclesiastical degrees in 1882. After teaching at Milan, he joined the Ambrosian Library, becoming its prefect in 1907. In 1914 he was made prefect of the Vatican Library. He served as apostolic visitor to Poland and was its first nuncio. He supervised the plebiscite in Upper Silesia, as a member of the Inter-Allied Commission, after World War I. In 1921 Pope Benedict XV made him archbishop of Milan and a cardinal. He was elected Pope on Feb. 6, 1922. Pius XI during his long pontificate energetically promoted ecclesiastical studies, reformed the Vatican Library, developed the Vatican radio station, and encouraged worldwide missionary activity. He vigorously promoted lay participation in non-political Catholic action. Under him a concordat was negotiated with Italy, and the Vatican City came into existence as an autonomous state. Author of many encyclical letters, he wrote with particular emphasis on Christian marriage (1930), on Christian education (1929), and on the priesthood (1935). Preoccupied with social reform, he wrote Quadragesimo anno (1931) on reconstructing the social order; a foe of communism, he severely condemned it in Divini Redemptoris (1937). The racism and extreme nationalism of the Nazis he rejected in Mit Brennender Sorge (1937).

Pius XII. [Original name, Eugenio Pacelli.] b. at Rome, March 2, 1876— Pope (1939—). Ordained in 1899, he taught law in the Roman Seminary, entered the papal secretariat of state, and became an official of the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, under Cardinal Gasparri. After serving as nuncio to Bavaria, he became first nuncio to Berlin after establishment of the German republic. He negotiated the concordat with Germany in 1929, and was then created cardinal, becoming papal secretary of state in 1930. In 1936 he visited the U.S. He was elected Pope on March 2, 1939. To the papacy he brought great diplomatic ability, and encouraged international organization as a guarantee of peace. The supranational character of the Church he emphasized by creating cardinals of many nationalities. He has written lengthy and scholarly encyclicals on the unity of the human race (1939), on the Mystical Body of Christ (1943), and on the sacred liturgy (1947). In 1950 he proclaimed the dogma of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary.

Pius, Antoninus. See Antoninus Pius.

Pius, Metellus. See Metellus, Quintus Caecilius (d. c64 B.C.).

Pivot City. Nickname at one time applied to Geelong, Victoria, Australia; so named from the importance it was once expected to have in the future of the colony.

Piyadasi (pē.yā.dā'sē). See Asoka.

Pizarro (pī.zār'ō; Castilian Spanish, pē.thār'ō; American Spanish, pē.sār'ō). Name of a Spanish family prominent in the early history of South America. Francisco Pizarro was its most famous member.

Pizarro. English play, translated from Kotzebue's Die Spanier in Peru (1790). It is generally listed with the works of Richard Brinsley Sheridan (who produced it at London in 1799, but certainly did not translate it).

Pizarro, Francisco. b. at Trujillo, Estremadura, Spain, c1471; slain at Lima, Peru, June 26, 1541. Spanish conquistador, remembered as the conqueror of Peru. He was the illegitimate son of a Spanish officer (under whom Francisco is said later to have served in Italy) and passed his early years as a swineherd. It is not known exactly when he went to America, but he first appears in American history at Darien, where, for a short time, he was left in charge of the colony (1510). He was with Balboa in the discovery of the Pacific (1513), and in 1519 settled at Panama. Here, in 1522, he joined with Diego de Almagro and a priest named Fernando de Luque in a scheme for conquest toward the south, whence rumors had come of a rich empire. They purchased two small vessels, and Pizarro left Panama on Nov. 14, 1524, with one ship and about 100 men, following the coast to about the seventh northern parallel. After enduring great suffering, he was obliged to return (1525). Almagro, who had sailed later and passed him, met with no better success. They sailed again in larger vessels (about September, 1526), penetrated to the equator, explored the Gulf of Guayaquil, and saw large cities and evidences of wealth. Almagro now returned for reinforcements, leaving Pizarro and a part of the men on a little island just above the equator, where they suffered greatly. The new governor of Panama refused to authorize further exploration, and sent two ships to take Pizarro off; but he, with 16 of his men, chose to remain rather than give up the scheme, and was left on the island. Another vessel arrived about December, 1527, with positive orders to take them off; but instead of obeying, they used the vessel for further exploration. This time they reached Tumbes and other Inca towns, were well received, saw evidences of great wealth, and at length returned to Panama with the assurance that they had discovered the long-sought southern empire. Pizarro now hastened to Spain, where (July 26, 1529) he received a concession to conquer and govern Peru. Returning to Panama with a large company, including his three half brothers, Pizarro sailed for the south in January, 1531, with three vessels and 185 men; landed at the island of Tumán in the Gulf of Guayaquil, where he was joined by Hernando de Soto with reinforcements; and thence crossed to Tumbes and pushed inland. On Nov. 15, 1532, he reached Cajamarca, where the Inca Atahualpa was encamped with a large army. On the next day the Inca was treacherously seized, and his attendants were massacred. He was promised his liberty if he would fill a room with gold, and he actually did collect through his officers 326,539 pesos of gold and 51,610 marks of silver, equal to 4,605,670 ducats, estimated at 15 million dollars of modern money. In the end the captive was slain (Aug. 29, 1533) on a false charge of conspiring against the Spaniards. Almagro arrived soon after, but too late to share in the distribution of the booty. Hitherto there had been no armed resistance, but in the march to Cusco which followed, the Spaniards were repeatedly attacked. Nevertheless, on Nov. 15, 1533, Pizarro entered Cusco. Manco Inca thereupon tendered his submission, and Pizarro made a puppet monarch of him; he himself was the real ruler, and Cusco was pillaged and turned into a Spanish city. In January, 1535, he founded Lima as his capital; soon after he received from Spain the title of marquís, and his territory was defined as extending from the Santiago River southward for 270 leagues. Almagro, at the same time, was granted the region adjoining this on the south, and he set out with an army to conquer Chile. Meanwhile Benalcázar, with a part of Pizarro's force, had conquered Quito, and Pizarro took possession of it. In April, 1536, the Indians rose in revolt under Manco, and for a time threatened to drive the Spaniards out, but were finally conquered. Almagro, returning from Chile, claimed Cusco as lying within his territory, and war followed (1537) between him and Pizarro. Almagro was defeated (April 26, 1538) at Las Salinas, and soon after was executed. His followers were generally allowed to go free; but they plotted against Pizarro, and at length a party of them attacked him in his palace, and slew him, together with several attendants.

Pizarro, Gonzalo. b. at Trujillo, Estremadura, Spain, c1506; executed at Cusco, Peru, in April, 1548. Spanish conquistador; half brother of Francisco Pizarro, whom he followed in the conquest of Peru. He took part in the defense of Cusco in 1536, was imprisoned by Almagro in April, 1537, but escaped, led the infantry in the defeat of Almagro at Las Salinas on April 26, 1538, and subsequently served in Charcas, where he received a grant of the rich Potosí mines. In 1539 he was made governor of Quito. In 1541-42 he led an unsuccessful expedition eastward of Quito to the Napo River, and was deserted there by Orellana, who made the first descent of the Amazon. In 1544 he consented, after some hesitation, to lead the opposition to Vasco Núñez Vela and the "New Laws"; war ensued; and Vela was defeated and killed at the battle of Anaquito on Jan. 18, 1546. Pizarro was recognized by the colonists as ruler, and his officers seized the Isthmus of Panama. The Spanish government now (1546) sent Pedro de la Gasca, with extraordinary powers, to take possession of the government. By politic means he obtained possession of the isthmus. Pizarro refused to treat with him, and Gasca landed at Tumbes (June 13, 1547). Alarmed by numerous desertions, Pizarro attempted to retreat southward. At Huarina, near Lake Titicaca, he and his lieutenant, Carbajal, met and defeated the royalist force of Centeno. Pizarro now returned to Cusco, and met the army of Gasca in the valley of Sacasahuana (or Sacahuamán) on April 9, 1548, but his disheartened soldiers deserted or fled, and there was no battle. Pizarro gave himself up, and was executed soon after.

Pizarro, Hernando. b. at Trujillo, Estremadura, Spain, c1474; d. there, 1578. Spanish conquistador; half brother of Francisco Pizarro, whom he accompanied (1531) to Peru, returning to Spain in January, 1534, with the royal fifth of the ransom of Atahualpa. He went back to Peru, commanded the defense of Cusco against Manco Inca in 1536, and was seized by Almagro on April 18, 1537. He was released on his promise to leave the country. Instead of doing so, he took command of his brother's army, defeated Almagro at Las Salinas on April 26, 1538, and put him to death. For this conduct he was afterward kept in mild confinement in Spain for 20 years (1540-60).

Pizarro, Pedro. b. at Toledo, Spain, 1514; d. in Peru, after 1571. Cousin of Francisco Pizarro, who employed him as a page in 1530. He was an eyewitness of most of the scenes in the conquest of Peru, and during the rebellion of Gonzalo Pizarro narrowly escaped hanging because he sided with the king. In 1571 he finished his Relaciones del descubrimiento y conquista de los Reynos del Perú, one of the best extant sources on the conquest of Peru.

Pizarro e Araujo (pě.zăr'ró ē ā.ra.o'zhô). José de Souza Azevedo. b. at Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 12, 1753; d. there, May 14, 1830. Brazilian historian. He took orders and occupied various ecclesiastical positions at Rio de Janeiro, besides traveling extensively in the interior. His Memórias históricas da capitania do Rio de Janeiro, e das demais capitanias do Brasil (9 vols., 1820-22) is one of the most important works on the history of Brazil.

Piz Bernina (pěts ber.ně'nā). See under Bernina.

Pizi (pě'tsē). See Gall.

Piz Languard (pěts lāng.gwārd'). Peak in the Alps of Graubünden, Switzerland, E of Pontresina. Elevation, 10,715 ft.

Piz Linard (pěts lē.nārd'). See under Silvretta.

Piz Rusein (pěts rō.sān'). See Tödi.

Pizzetti (pěts.tsä't'ē), Ildebrando. b. at Parma, Italy, Sept. 20, 1880—. Italian composer. He taught (1908 et seq.) at the Musical Institute of Florence, and was its director after 1917; professor (1936 et seq.) at the Conservatory of Saint Cecilia, Rome. Among his compositions is the incidental music for La Nave; among his choral works is De Profundis (1937).

Pizzo (pě'tsô). Seaport in S Italy, in the province of Catanzaro, ab. 24 mi. SW of Catanzaro, on the Gulf of Santa Eufemia. Murat was executed here in 1815.

P. K. Pseudonym of Rosegger, Peter.

Place (pläs), Francis. b. Nov. 3, 1771; d. Jan. 1, 1854. English reformer, considered to have been the first canpaign manager in English electoral history and widely known to his contemporaries as "the Radical Tailor of Charing Cross." He was a disciple of Jeremy Bentham and long active in the trade-union movement. Starting life as a common laborer, he organized (1793) the strike of leather-breeches makers at London and was, therefore, blacklisted for 18 months. During this period, in extreme poverty, he studied mathematics, law, history, and economics. He organized (1794) and was active in the London Corresponding Society, an effort to promote working-class education. His first success in a political maneuver came with the election (1807) of Sir Francis Burdett to Parliament. This was followed by acquaintance with William Godwin (1810), James Mill (1810), Bentham (1812), and Robert Owen (1813). Sir Samuel Romilly wrote of Place that he had sufficient influence to determine who should be a member of Parliament. Personally disliking publicity, he was untiring in providing members of Parliament and newspaper editors with information, in drafting petitions, in organizing agitation, and in managing Parliamentary committees. His efforts were crowned by the repeal (1824) of the Combination Act (which prohibited certain types of union organization). During the reform crisis (1832) his influence reached a peak. His placard inciting people to "Go for Gold and Stop the Duke" was a great influence in bringing about the failure of the Duke of Wellington, who opposed Parliamentary reform, to form a government.

Place de la Bastille (plás de lá bást.èy'). [Also, La Bastille.] Square at Paris, on the site of the Bastille, at the end of the Rue St.-Antoine. After the revolution of 1830 a column was erected here to commemorate the three eventful days of July of that year. In the revolution of 1848 the strongest barricade of the insurgents was placed at the entrance of the Faubourg St.-Antoine to the east of the Place, and Archbishop Affre was killed there. In 1871 it was one of the revolutionary strongholds, being captured only after a desperate struggle on May 25, 1871.

Place de la Concorde (kòh.kòrd). Square at Paris, N of the Seine and W of the Tuileries. In the French Revolution it was called the Place de la Guillotine. It has also been called at other times the Place de la Révolution and the Place Louis XV. In 1792 the statue of Louis XV, which had stood in the center, was pulled down and replaced by a plaster statue of Liberty, near which was the guillotine. Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, and many of the nobility were beheaded here. Its present name dates from 1795.

Place de la Grève (grév). Place of execution of ancient Paris. Until the creation of the Place du Carrousel, it was the largest open square in the city, was also used as a market, and was the point most intimately associated with the business of the city. For this reason it was chosen for the location of the Hôtel de Ville, which now stands there. The space in front of it, formerly the Place de la Grève, is now called Place de l'Hôtel de Ville. Besides being the place for the execution of criminals, innocent victims have been shot here in nearly every revolution that has occurred in Paris. The name la Grève (meaning "the strand") was given to it on account of its position on the bank of the Seine.

Place du Carrousel (dū ká.rò.zel). Square at Paris, N of the Seine and W of the Louvre. Its name is derived from the tournament held here in 1662.

Placentia (plá.sen'sha). Small seaport in Newfoundland, Canada, on the S shore of Placentia Bay, ab. 63 mi. SW of St. John's. It was here that the original French settlement in North America was made. A military and naval base is situated near the town. 614 (1951).

Placentia. Ancient name of Piacenza.

Placentia Bay. Inlet of the Atlantic Ocean, on the S coast of Newfoundland, separated from Trinity Bay on the N by a narrow isthmus. Length, ab. 65 mi.

Place Royale (plás rwá.yál). La. [Full title, The Place Royale ou l'Amoureux extravagant (ò lá.mò.ré eks-trá.vá.gãh).] Comedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1634.

Placerville (plás'érvil). City in C California, county seat of El Dorado County, ab. 40 mi. NE of Sacramento; named for a method of extracting rich surface gold deposits. 3,748 (1950).

Placetas (plá.sá'tás). City in C Cuba, in Las Villas province. 19,693 (1943).

Place Vendôme (plás vãn.dòm). Square at Paris, N of the Seine. It was designed by Louis XIV. Napoleon I erected a triumphal column here in 1806.

Placid (plás'id). Lake. Lake in NE New York, notable as a resort place in the Adirondacks. Elevation, 1,860 ft.; length, ab. 5 mi.

Placidia (plá.sid'iá), Galla. See Galla Placidia.

Plácido (plá.sé'rido). Pseudonym of Valdés, Gabriel de la Concepción.

Placillas (plá.sé'yás), Battle of. See Valparaíso, Battle of.

Plagiary (plá'jĩ.ä.rĩ), Sir Fretful. Character in The Critic, by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. It is a satirical portrait of Cumberland, said to have been written in revenge for the latter's behavior at the first night of The School for Scandal.

Plague, The. See Peste, La.

Plague of Serpents, The. Powerful ceiling picture by Tintoretto, in the Scuola di San Rocco at Venice. There are many figures scattered in flight and death before swarms of small but monstrous flying and writhing snakes, beneath a sky covered with black clouds, but illuminated in one place by the descent of an angel of mercy.

Plague Year, A Journal of the. See Journal of the Plague Year, A.

Plaideurs (plé.dér), Les. Comedy by Racine, printed in 1668. It is a severe satire on the legal profession, and at first was unsuccessful, but afterward became extremely popular.

Plain, Sea of the. See under Dead Sea.

Plain, the. In the French legislature at the time of the French Revolution, the floor of the house, occupied by the more moderate party; hence, that party itself, as distinguished from the Mountain, or radical party.

Plain Dealer, The. A comedy by Wycherley, produced in 1674 and printed in 1677. It is an obvious adaptation of Molière's Le Misanthrope.

Plainfield (plán'fèld). Town in E Connecticut, in Windham County, ab. 14 mi. NE of Norwich. 8,071 (1950).

Plainfield. Town in C Indiana, W of Indianapolis, in Hendricks County. 2,585 (1950).

Plainfield. City in N New Jersey, in Union County, ab. 24 mi. SW of New York; residential and industrial suburb. 42,366 (1950).

Plain Language from Truthful James (jámz). Ballad by Bret Harte, published in 1870. It is also known under the title The Heathen Chinese.

Plain of Sharon (shá'ron). See Sharon, Plain of.

Plains (pláinz). Township in E Pennsylvania, in Luzerne County, in an anthracite coal area. It adjoins Wilkes-Barre on the E. 12,541 (1950).

Plains of Abraham (á'bra.ham). See Abraham, Plains of.

Plainview (plán'vü). City in W Texas, county seat of Hale County, N of Lubbock, in an irrigated wheat, alfalfa, and cotton producing area. 14,044 (1950).

Plainville (plán'vil). Town in C Connecticut, in Hartford County; manufactures of steel bearings and electrical goods. 9,994 (1950).

Plainwell (plán'wel). City in SW Michigan, near Kalamazoo, in Allegan County. 2,767 (1950).

Plaisance (plé.záns), Duke of. Title in English of Lebrun, Charles François.

Plaisirs et les jours (plé.zér ä lá zhör), Les. Short stories and sketches (1896; Eng. trans., Pleasures and Regrets, 1949) by Marcel Proust, published with a preface by Anatole France, and, in the original edition, drawings by Madeleine Lemaire. Some of the stories are preliminary explorations of themes Proust later employed in his novel À la recherche du temps perdu.

Planché (plán.shá'), James Robinson. b. at London, Feb. 27, 1796; d. May 30, 1880. English dramatist and writer on head-dress and costume. He wrote, translated, or adapted more than 150 plays.

Planck (plángk), Gottlieb Jakob. b. at Nürtingen, Württemberg, Germany, Nov. 15, 1751; d. Aug. 31, 1833. German Protestant theologian, professor of theology at Göttingen from 1784. His chief work is Geschichte des protestantischen Lehrbegriffs (1781-1800).

Planck, Max Karl Ernst Ludwig. b. at Kiel, Germany, April 23, 1858; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Oct. 4, 1947. German physicist, noted for his formulation (1900) of the quantum theory. He was awarded (1918) the Nobel prize in physics. He attended the universities of Munich and Berlin, was professor of physics (1885-89) at the University of Kiel, and held (1889-1926) the same post at the University of Berlin. He made noted studies in thermodynamics, theoretical physics, heat radiation, and optics. He published Law of Radiation (1901), setting forth the quantum theory, the basis for which had been created by his investigations in the radiation from black bodies. Author of Vorlesungen über Thermodynamik (1897), Vorlesungen über die Theorie der Wärmestrahlung (1906), Einführung in die theoretische Physik (5 vols., 1916-30), and Das Weltbild der neueren Physik (1929).

Plançon (plān.sōn), Pol Henri. b. at Fumay, France, June 12, 1854; d. at Paris, in August, 1914. French bass singer. He made his debut in 1877 and first sang as Mephisto in Faust at Paris in 1883.

Plancus (plang'kus). Roman soldier, orator, and consul (42 B.C.). He served under Julius Caesar in the Gallic and civil wars, and attached himself successively to Brutus, Antony, and Octavius (it was he who proposed in the senate that the title of Augustus should be bestowed on the last named). Horace addressed to him Ode vii, Book I.

Planes (plā'nās), Vicente López. See López y Planes, Vicente.

Planquette (plān.ket), Robert. [Full name, Jean Robert Julien Planquette.] b. at Paris, July 31, 1848; d. there, Jan. 28, 1903. French operetta composer, notably of Les Cloches de Corneville (1877), which was performed in English as The Chimes of Normandy. Among his other stage works are Rip van Winkle (1882), Surcouf (1887), Paul Jones (1889), Panurge (1895), and Mam'zelle Quat'Sous (1897).

Plantagenet (plan.tā'jē.net), Geoffrey. See Geoffrey IV the Handsome.

Plantagenet, George. See Clarence, Duke of.

Plantagenet, House of. Line of English kings (1154-1399), sometimes also called Angevin (from Anjou, from which French line the Plantagenets were descended). The house was founded by Henry II, son of Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, and Matilda, daughter of Henry I of England. The kings of this house were Henry II (1154-89), Richard I (1189-99), John (1199-1216), Henry III (1216-72), Edward I (1272-1307), Edward II (1307-27), Edward III (1327-77), and Richard II (1377-99). It became extinct in the direct line on the death of Richard II in 1400, the year after he was deposed.

Plant City (plant). City in C Florida, in Hillsborough County, E of Tampa; processing and shipping point for strawberries, citrus fruit, and vegetables. 9,230 (1950).

Plantin (plān.tān), Christophe. b. near Tournai, France, 1514; d. at Antwerp, Belgium, 1589. French printer at Antwerp. He published a polyglot Bible (1569-72).

Plaquemine (plak'e.min, plak'min). Town in SE Louisiana, parish seat of Iberville Parish. 5,747 (1950).

Plasencia (plā.sen'thyā). Town in W Spain, in the province of Cáceres, abt. 45 mi. NE of Cáceres. It has an agricultural trade, and manufactures of cork, leather, and pottery. Medieval walls with numerous gates and towers are preserved. 16,255 (1940).

Plaskett (plas'ket), John Stanley. b. near Woodstock, Ontario, Canada, 1865; d. Oct. 17, 1941. Canadian astronomer, known as an authority on star motion, galaxy rotation, and interstellar matter. He discovered "Plaskett's Twins," a pair of large stars which had previously been listed as one star.

Plas Newydd (plās ne'wryd). See under Llangollen.

Plassey (plas'y). Place in Bengal, India, on the Hooghly River abt. 85 mi. N of Calcutta. Here on June 23, 1757, a British force (3,200) under Clive defeated the Bengal army (50,000). The battle was of tremendous importance in that it effectively secured the establishment of British power in India.

Plastic Age, The. Novel by Percy Marks, published in 1924.

Plastiras (plās.tē'rās), Nicholas. b. at Karditsa, Greece, 1883. d. at Athens, July 26, 1953. Greek statesman, one of the 1922 triumvirate which forced the abdication of Constantine I. Active in the resistance during Axis occupation in World War II, he was prime minister and minister of war, navy, air, and merchant marine after the liberation of Greece in 1945, and later was prime minister again (1950, 1951-52).

Plata (plā'tā), Colonies of the. See Buenos Aires, viceroyalty.

Plata, La. See La Plata.

Plata, Río de la. [Also: La Plata, Plata River, River Plate; formerly, River of Solis.] Broad estuary between Uruguay and Argentina. It is formed initially by the union of the Uruguay and the Paraná rivers, but actually comprises an arm of the Atlantic Ocean. The cities Buenos Aires and Montevideo are situated on it. Length, abt. 225 mi.

Plateaea (plā.tē'ā). [Also, Plateaeae (plā.tē'ē).] In ancient geography, a city in Boeotia, Greece, situated at the foot of Mount Cithaeron, abt. 30 mi. NW of Athens. It was allied with Athens, furnished a contingent against the Persians at Marathon in 490 B.C., was the scene of a famous battle in 479, was unsuccessfully attacked by the Thebans in 431, besieged by the Spartans and their allies in 429, and taken in 427. It was rebuilt in 387, again destroyed by the Thebans c372, and rebuilt in 338.

Plateaea, Battle of. Victory gained in 479 B.C. by the Greeks under Pausanias over the Persians. It resulted in the final repulse of the Persian invasion of Greece. Traditional accounts of the battle place the total of the Greek force at upwards of 100,000 and of the Persian force at about 300,000, but most modern historians consider these figures much too high.

Plate (plāt), River. See Plata, Río de la.

Plateau (plā.tō), Joseph Antoine Ferdinand. b. at Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 14, 1801; d. at Ghent, Belgium, Sept. 15, 1883. Belgian physicist, professor of experimental physics and astronomy at Ghent (1835-71); noted for his researches in molecular forces and in optics. His chief work is Statique expérimentale et théorique des liquides (1873).

Platen (plā'ten), August. [Title, Count von Platen-Hallermund (or -Hallermünde).] b. at Ansbach, Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 24, 1796; d. at Syracuse, Sicily, Dec. 5, 1835. German poet. In 1815, as a Bavarian lieutenant, he was in the field against France. Subsequently he studied linguistics at Würzburg and Erlangen; afterward he traveled much abroad, particularly in Italy and the South. Among his poems are especially to be mentioned his sonnets and the Ghaselen, written in the Persian form of the "gazel," the first of which appeared in 1821; he also wrote odes, idylls, songs, and ballads. In 1826 appeared the satiric comedy Die verhängnisvolle Gabel, directed against the so-called fate tragedies; and in 1829 Der romantische Edipus, aimed at Heine, Immermann, and other German romantics. His collected works appeared at Stuttgart, in 1876, in two volumes.

Platière (plā'tyēr), Jean Marie Roland de la. See Roland de la Platière, Jean Marie.

Platine Provinces or Colonies (plā'tin). [Spanish, Colonias del Río de la Plata.] Collective name for the former Spanish colonies adjoining the Río de la Plata and its tributaries. These were at first included in the colony of Paraguay, but Buenos Aires was separated in 1620 and Montevideo (now Uruguay) was made subject to Buenos Aires in 1750. In 1776 the entire area was united in the viceroyalty of La Plata, which later (1810 et seq.) took a leading part in the struggle for independence and formally asserted its autonomous status in 1816 under the name United Provinces of the Río de la Plata.

Platine States. Collective name for the South American countries bordering on the Río de la Plata and its tributaries; at present, Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay.

Plato (plā'tō). [Original name, Aristocles.] b. 428 or 427 B.C.; d. at Athens, 348 or 317 B.C. Greek philosopher, associate of Socrates ("my elderly friend") until the latter's death, and founder of the Academic School, of which Theaetetus, Eudoxus, and Aristotle were members. Plato's parents, Ariston and Perictione, were of aristocratic birth, but from association with other members of his family he became familiar with the background and outlook of democracy, in its Periclean form. As a young man of ability, he would naturally have proceeded to take part in public life, but for the tragic death, in 399 B.C., of Socrates. For a time thereafter he withdrew to Megara, to the home of Euclides, and there is a tradition that he spent some years in travel, visiting Egypt, Cyrene, Sicily, and parts of Italy, before returning to Athens in 387 B.C., and founding the Academy. In later life (367 and 361 B.C.) he was invited to Syracuse, with the idea of initiating its ruler, Dionysius II, into the philosophy suitable for a "philosopher-king." But jealousies and misunderstandings made the situation impossible, and Plato's freedom of movement was for a time curtailed. On the return voyage, it is said that his vessel was intercepted, and that Plato, as a captured enemy alien, was exposed for sale in the slave market at Aegina. He was purchased by a former pupil, who restored him to the Academy, which he never again left. Plato himself regarded academic teaching as his main activity, but shortly after the death of Socrates he commenced the series of Dialogues upon which, for the modern reader, his influence as a great philosopher chiefly depends. In the earlier Dialogues we see depicted a "Socrates made young and handsome," the embodiment of courage, temperance, justice, and wisdom: moving freely in society, among young men, among intellectuals, sometimes in happy, sometimes in trying circumstances. Always we feel his challenge to "tend our souls," i.e., to become "friends of ideas," members of the new spiritual Academy. The Dialogues are dramatic, not doctrinal, presentations. Nevertheless, the modern reader finds himself impelled to participate in the discussions, and to construct from somewhere within himself what he takes to be implied in the Socratic ideal of reflective citizenship. This is always something beyond the "tendancy of the soul," which was all that Socrates himself claimed as the content of his mission in life. In the series of Dialogues culminating in the Republic, the modern reader senses the pull of a consistent philosophy: uncompromising idealism applied to the construction of a perfect human community. Such a community exists only in idea; but the neophyte is urged to walk in its ways, whatever his local citizenship. Actually, what emerges in the mind of the modern reader is usually a mirror-image of what idealism that reader's mind possesses within itself. Accordingly, what is acclaimed as "the philosophy of Plato" varies with the background and outlook of the acclamer. Nevertheless, it is upon the subjective interaction of modern minds with the Dialogues representing "middle Platonism," especially the Republic, that Plato's great influence still depends. It is thought to go beyond the teaching of Socrates, but not beyond the spirit of his teaching. The later Dialogues are more technical. They throw light upon the studies pursued in the Academy and provide a somewhat abstract and arid intellectual training. They also present views of three rival philosophic schools: an abstract idealism, a concrete and rather naive realism, and a form of humanism which is regarded as a precursor of modern pragmatism. The earlier idealism is apparently refuted (in the Parmenides), the highest good is sought in "the mixed life" (Philebus), and in the latest Dialogue (The Laws), the transcendentalism of the Republic is withdrawn in favor of a "second best" or "model" city, in which full justice is done to the teachings of experience. At the same time, the Laws ends with an expression of faith in the Academy as the most vital of social institutions.

Plato. fl. 428-389 B.C. Athenian comic poet. He is ranked among the very best of the poets of the Old Comedy. He carried on a poetic contest with Aristophanes, and attacked the demagogues Cleon, Hyperbolus, Agryrhos, and Cleophon. Fragments only of his works are extant.

Plato. Large crater in the moon.

Plato. Greek bust in bronze, of the first half of the 4th century B.C., in the Museo Nazionale, Naples, once supposed to represent the great philosopher. Many consider it a beard-type of Dionysius; some the famous Poseidon of Tarentum.

Platonick Lovers, The. Tragicomedy by Sir William D'Avenant, printed in 1636.

Platonov (plá.tó'nov), Sergey Feodorovich. b. at Chernigov, Russia, June 28, 1860; d. in exile at Samara, a port on the Volga, Jan. 10, 1933. Russian historian. He served as professor (1890 et seq.) at the University of Moscow, and also (1920 et seq.) as a member of the Russian Academy for Sciences at Leningrad.

Platt (plát), Charles Adams. b. at New York, Oct. 16, 1861; d. Sept. 12, 1933. American landscape painter and etcher. In his later years he occupied himself chiefly with the design of buildings and of landscape areas, as in the case of the Freer Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. He wrote Italian Gardens (1892).

Platt, Orville Hitchcock. b. at Washington, Conn., July 19, 1827; d. at Meriden, Conn., April 21, 1905. American politician, noted for his authorship of the Platt Amendment (1901). He abandoned teaching for the study of law, was admitted to the bar (1850), and subsequently established his law practice at Meriden, where he devoted himself to patent, corporation, and real-estate law. Active in state politics, he was clerk of the state senate (1855-56) and served (1857) as secretary of state for Connecticut. He was a member (1864) of the state house of representatives and served as its speaker in 1869. After serving as state's attorney for New Haven County, he was elected a U.S. senator, holding that post from 1879 until his death. He became (1881) chairman of the patents committee and was responsible for the international copyright law (March 3, 1891) which effectively terminated literary piracy. He was chairman of the committee on territories (1887-93) and as a member of the finance committee took a prominent part in drafting the Dingley Tariff. He also had a leading role in the shaping of foreign policy during the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, and as chairman of the committee on Cuban relations, framed and introduced the Platt Amendment to an army appropriation bill. After McKinley's assassination, Platt became a close associate of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Platt, Thomas Collier. b. at Owego, N.Y., July 15, 1833; d. March 6, 1910. American political boss. He attended Owego Academy and Yale, established himself as a druggist at Owego, and was elected (1859) county clerk. He left office to return to business, but remained active in Republican state politics. Cultivating the friendship of Roscoe Conkling, he became the latter's close associate and rose to power in state politics. He served two terms in Congress after his election in 1874, became (1879) secretary and a director of the United States Express Company and its president in 1880, when he moved to New York. A Republican "Stalwart," he massed his forces behind Garfield in 1880 and was elected (1881) to the U.S. Senate, resigning from that body during a dispute over patronage. He returned to political power in 1888, although he was alienated from President Harrison on the issue of patronage. After 1894 he became the absolute boss of New York state Republican politics. Theodore Roosevelt's relative independence of Platt during the former's service as governor of New York led Platt to "kick Roosevelt upstairs" by having him nominated vice-presidential candidate at the Republican convention in 1900. Platt's power declined rapidly after the state convention in 1902 turned down his candidature for lieutenant governor.

Platt, William. b. in Cheshire, England, June 14, 1885-; British army officer, commander in chief (1941-45) of the East African command.

Platt Amendment. Series of provisions, named for Senator Orville Hitchcock Platt of Connecticut, added by the U.S. Congress to the army appropriation bill of March 2, 1901, and incorporated in the U.S. treaty with Cuba (May 22, 1903). The U.S., by the Teller Amendment of 1898, had disclaimed any intention of exercising sovereignty over Cuba and had promised to leave the government in the hands of the Cuban people. In 1900 a Cuban convention drew up a constitution without any provision for future relations with the U.S. The U.S. government's unwillingness to acquiesce in this situation brought about the adoption of the Platt Amendment. The latter contained eight articles, all of which (with the exception of the fifth, drafted by General Leonard Wood) were drawn up by Elihu Root. The most important articles provided that Cuba would make no treaty impairing the independence of Cuba, nor permit any foreign power to gain a foothold on the island; that Cuba would not assume any public debt for the discharge of which the fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīnc; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pull; th, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; ordinary revenues of the island would be inadequate; that Cuba would consent to the U.S. exercising its right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence; and that Cuba would agree to selling or leasing to the U.S. lands necessary for coaling or naval stations. The amendment, which was long bitterly resented by most Cubans, remained in effect until 1934.

Platte (plat). [Also, Nebraska River.] One of the largest tributaries of the Missouri. It is formed by the union, in Lincoln County, Neb., of the North Platte and the South Platte, and joins the Missouri at Plattsmouth, ab. 18 mi. S of Omaha. The North Platte rises in N Colorado, and flows through Wyoming and W Nebraska; the South Platte rises in C Colorado, and flows through that state and W Nebraska. Total length, including North Platte, ab. 900 mi.; it is not navigable.

Plattensee (plät'en-zä). German name of Balaton, Lake.

Platter (plät'ér), Thomas. b. at Grächen, Switzerland, 1499; d. at Basel, Switzerland, 1582. Swiss scholar and author, writing in German. He was the son of a poor farmer, but determined to acquire for himself the humanistic knowledge of his period. After having met Zwingli he espoused the cause of the reform movement. Working at a number of trades in order to support himself in his studies, his proficiency in classical languages and in Hebrew attracted the attention of the authorities and he was made principal of the Basel Gymnasium (advanced secondary school). In his last year he wrote an autobiography which was posthumously published and is still considered by many to be one of the most vivid accounts of that tumultuous period, as well as a fascinating document of human resourcefulness and spiritual strength.

Platteville (plät'vil). City in SW Wisconsin, in Grant County; seat of the Wisconsin Institute of Technology and a state teachers college. 5,751 (1950).

Platting (plät'ing). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Lower Bavaria-Upper Palatinate, situated on the Isar River, ab. 78 mi. NE of Munich. It is a railroad junction, with manufactures of machinery and various wooden articles. The Church of Saint Jakob dates from the 11th century. 10,713 (1946).

Plattner (plät'nér), Karl Friedrich. b. at Kleinwaltersdorf, near Freiberg, Saxony, Germany, Jan. 2, 1800; d. at Freiberg, Jan. 22, 1858. German chemist and metallurgist, long a professor at Freiberg. He was noted for his work in developing blowpipe analysis.

Plattsburg (plät'sbürg). City in NE New York, county seat of Clinton County, on Lake Champlain at the mouth of the Saranac River; manufactures of wood pulp and paper products. It has been important as a lumber-milling center since 1785. Near it, on Lake Champlain, a naval victory was gained on Sept. 11, 1814, by an American fleet under Macdonough over a British fleet under Downie (while, at the same time, American land forces under Macomb repulsed the British under Prevost). 17,738 (1950).

Plattsmouth (plät'smuth). City in E Nebraska, county seat of Cass County, near the junction of the Platte and Missouri rivers; vegetable canneries and manufactures of refrigerator cars and ceramics. 4,874 (1950).

Plauen (plou'en). [Also, Plauen im Vogtland (im föcht'lánt).] Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Saxony, situated on the Weisse Elster River, ab. 22 mi. SW of Zwickau; chief place in the Vogtland district of Saxony and an important manufacturing town. It is a center for the weaving of white cotton goods, and has manufactures of trucks, radio equipment, and textile machinery. The Johanniskirche (Church of Saint John) dates from the 12th century; there are remains of medieval fortifications. The population decrease in the period 1939-46 was 22.6 percent. 87,778 (1946).

Plausible (plô'zi.bl), Lord. In Wycherley's comedy The Plain Dealer, an insinuating fop, in love with Olivia.

Plautus (plô'tus). [Full name, Titus Maccius Plautus.] b. at Sarsina, Umbria, Italy, c254 B.C.; d. 184 B.C. Roman comic dramatist. Although he was unquestionably the most famous and most popular of ancient Roman writers of comedy, the details of his life are virtually unknown. It seems reasonably certain that he was intimately connected with the stage from a comparatively early age, if only because of the remarkable knowledge of stage technique manifested in his plays (indeed, his works remain today among the most widely read and enjoyed of the Latin classics). He drew much from Menander and the other dramatists of the Greek New Comedy (including stock characters, such as the clever, unscrupulous slave, and stock situations, involving mistaken identity and carefully contrived misunderstandings between two lovers), but he wrote in the popular idiom of his day. As a result his plays do not merely ape those of the Greeks, but are vigorous, often coarse, always amusing examples of practical stagecraft. His works were read and often adapted by such later writers as Molière, Jonson, and Shakespeare. Of his comedies, 21 (nearly all complete) are extant. Among them are Amphitruo, Captivi, Aulularia, Trinummus, Rudens, Miles Gloriosus, Mostellaria, Pseudolus, and Menæchmi.

Plavis (plä'vis). Latin name of the Piave.

Play (plä), Pierre Guillaume Frédéric Le. See Le Play, Pierre Guillaume Frédéric.

Playboy of the Western World, The. One-act play (1907) by John Millington Synge. It is the story of Christy Mahon, a farmer's son, who believes that he has killed his father, Old Mahon. He is regarded as a hero by the girls until the father appears, with nothing more serious than a wound in his head, and gives Christy a good licking. Among the other characters in the play are Margaret Flaherty ("Peegen Mike") and her father, Michael James Flaherty. When first produced at the Abbey Theatre at Dublin, the play led to actual riots (some of the spectators objected to it on the ground that it represented the Irish as glorifying a patricide).

Player Queen, The. Play (1922) by William Butler Yeats.

Players, The. New York club founded by Edwin Booth, incorporated in 1888. "Its objects are the promotion of social intercourse between the representatives of the dramatic profession and of the kindred professions of literature, painting, sculpture, and music, and the patrons of the arts; the creation of a library relating especially to the history of the American stage; and the preservation of pictures, bills of the play, photographs and curiosities connected with such history." It is located at 16 Gramercy Park.

Playfair (plä'fär), John. b. at Benzie, Forfarshire (now Angus), Scotland, March 10, 1743; d. at Edinburgh, July 20, 1819. Scottish mathematician and physicist. He entered St. Andrews University at 14 years of age. In 1785 he succeeded Dugald Stewart as professor of mathematics at Edinburgh. His works include On the Arithmetic of Impossible Numbers (1779), Elements of Geometry (1795), Illustrations of the Huttonian Theory of the Earth (1802), Proof of Natural Philosophy (1805), An Account of the Lithological Survey of Schellhallion (1811), and Natural Philosophy (1812-16).

Playfair, Sir Lyon. [Title, 1st Baron Playfair of St. Andrews.] b. at Meerut, Bengal, India, May 21, 1819; d. at London, May 29, 1898. British chemist and Liberal politician. He was appointed professor of chemistry at the University of Edinburgh in 1858. He was elected to Parliament in 1868, and was postmaster general (1873-74) and chairman of the committee of ways and means and deputy speaker of the House of Commons (1880-83). He published Primary and Technical Education (1870), On Teaching Universities and Examination Boards (1872), and others.

Playfair, Sir Nigel. b. 1874; d. Aug. 19, 1934. English actor and manager. He was manager (1919-32) of the Lyric Theatre at Hammersmith, London, where he produced (1919) John Drinkwater's Abraham Lincoln and revived (1920) Gay's The Beggar's Opera (the revival amazed the world of the theater by running for 1,463 performances).

Plaza Lasso (plä'sä lä'sô), Galo. b. at Quito, Ecuador, Feb. 17, 1906—. Ecuadorian statesman, president of Ecuador (1948-52). Educated in the U.S., he served as an attaché of the Ecuadorian legation at Washington. He returned to Ecuador where, after 1933, he managed a large agricultural establishment. In 1937 he became a member of the Quito city council, and in 1938 became mayor of the city. He served (1938-41) as minister of national defense. From 1944 to 1946 he was ambassador to Washington, and he was a delegate (1945) to the San Francisco conference to organize the United Nations. He became a senator in 1946 and in 1948 was elected president. When he finished out his term in 1952, he became the first president of Ecuador to have done so since the time of José Tamayo, president from 1920 to 1924.

Pleasant Grove. City in N central Utah, near Provo, in Utah County. 3,195 (1950).

Pleasant Hills. Unincorporated community in W California, in Contra Costa County. 5,686 (1950).

Pleasant Hills. Borough in SW Pennsylvania, S of Pittsburgh; residential suburb. 3,803 (1950).

Pleasant Island. Former name of Nauru.

Pleasanton (plez'ən.tən). City in S Texas, ab. 30 mi. S of San Antonio. 2,913 (1950).

Pleasanton (plez'ən.tən), Alfred. b. at Washington, D.C., June 7, 1824; d. there, Feb. 17, 1897. American general. He became a major of cavalry in the Army of the Potomac in February, 1862, served through the Peninsular Campaign, became brigadier general of volunteers in July, 1862, was engaged in the battles of South Mountain, Antietam, and Fredericksburg, distinguished himself at Chancellorsville, and commanded the cavalry at Gettysburg.

Pleasant Riderhood (rī'dér.hüd). See Riderhood, Pleasant.

Pleasant Ridge. City in SE Michigan, in Oakland County; suburban community. 3,594 (1950).

Pleasant Valley. Former name of Avoca, Pa.

Pleasant Valley Siding. Former name of Dickinson, N.D.

Pleasantville (plez'ant.vil). City in S New Jersey, in Atlantic County; residential community; truck gardening. 11,938 (1950).

Pleasantville. Village in SE New York, in Westchester County; suburban community. It is the home of the Reader's Digest. 4,861 (1950).

Pleasures of Hope. Poem by Thomas Campbell, published in 1799.

Pleasures of Memory. Poem by Samuel Rogers, published in 1792.

Pleasures of the Imagination. Didactic poem by Marl Akenside, published in 1744.

Plebs Sacci (plebz sak'si). Ancient name of Pieve di Sacco.

Plehe (plā'vé), Vyacheslav Konstantinovich. b. c. 1846; d. at Warsaw, Poland, July 28, 1904. Russian official. He was educated at Warsaw and at St. Petersburg, and held various positions in the ministry of justice, becoming prosecutor at St. Petersburg. In 1881 he was appointed director of the state police, in 1883 assistant to the minister of the interior, and in 1894 secretary of state for Finland and a member of the council of the empire. As governor of Finland he was hostile to the Finnish nationalists and inaugurated a policy of repression. In 1902 he became minister of the interior. His administration was marked by the massacre of the Jews at Kishinev, the spoliation of the Armenian Church, the exile of Russian noblemen holding liberal opinions, and a policy of ruthless severity towards the peasantry and the working classes. He was killed by a bomb thrown under his carriage as he was leaving Warsaw to make his weekly report to the czar.

Pleiad (plē'ad) or Pléiade (plā.yād). Name given in literature to several groups of seven poets living at the same time, notably to such a group at Alexandria in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus. These were Lycophron, Theocritus, Aratus, Nicander, Homer, Apollonius of Rhodes, and Callimachus. The name has been applied to other similar groups, especially in the 16th century to that formed by Ronsard with Joachim du Bellay, Antoine de Baif, Jodelle, Pontus de Tyard, Dorat, and Rémi Belleau. These united in a close league to impose a classical form on French language and literature. They had many followers.

Pleiades (plē'a.dēz, plī'-). [Also, Pleiads (plē'adz, plī'-).] Cluster of third-magnitude and fainter stars in the constellation Taurus, conspicuous on winter evenings 24 degrees N of the celestial equator, and coming to the meridian at midnight in the middle of November. There were anciently said to be seven Pleiades, although only six were conspicuous to the naked eye, then as now; hence the suggestion of a lost Pleiade. In Greek mythology they were the daughters of Atlas and the nymph Pleione, and were changed into stars either after their death or during their flight from Orion. Literally, Pleiades means "The Weepers"; they are also called the Seven Sisters, and were named Alcyone, Merope, Celaeno, Electra (the usual "missing Pleiade," said to have left her place in order not to see the fall of Troy), Sterope or Asterope, Taygeta, and Maia. These names, with those of the parents, have been applied by astronomers since Riccioli (1665) to the group (which actually contains several hundred stars, and is upwards of 325 light years distant from the earth).

Pleistocene Period (plī'stō.sēn). Geologic period following the Pliocene, marked by the rise of man and by several widespread glaciations, whence it is sometimes called the Ice Age. See table at end of Vol. III.

Plekhanov (pli.nā'nof), Georgy Valentinovich. b. in Tambov province, Russia, Nov. 26, 1857; d. in Finland, May 30, 1918. Russian revolutionist and political philosopher. Although of an aristocratic family, during his student days he joined the Narodniki or Populist Party, and was a leader of a popular demonstration they staged at St. Petersburg in 1876, but when some of them adopted a terrorist program he affiliated with the Marxists; and being exiled from Russia in 1880, he shortly thereafter joined in establishing a Marxist group at Geneva, at which Swiss city he mostly lived until 1917, becoming in time the intellectual leader of Russian Social-Democracy. In the 1890's and early 1900's he and Vladimir Ilyich Lenin were closely associated, and in 1900 they established the newspaper Iskra (The Spark), which was to be very influential in developing the revolutionary principles and policies which led to Bolshevism. In 1903, at the time of the decisive Bolshevik-Menshevik split in the Russian Social-Democratic Party, Plekhanov sided with the Bolsheviks, but his subsequent advocacy of collaboration with the Mensheviks led to Lenin's resignation from Iskra. Plekhanov at different times sided with one or the other of the two factions, but when Russia entered World War I his patriotic stand, calling for "revolutionary defense" of the country, definitely alienated him from the Bolsheviks, who were eager to utilize the war to overthrow Czarism. After the abdication of the czar in 1917 he returned to Russia, refused an invitation to join the provisional government, but supported its attempt to keep Russia in the war, and vigorously opposed all Bolshevik plans and proposals. The success of the Bolshevik Revolution in October (new style, November), 1917, sent him into exile in Finland for the few remaining months of his life. The basis of Plekhanov's opposition to the Bolshevik policy at that time seems to have been his rigid belief in the Marxist theory that a backward country like Russia, very little industrialized, could not pass to socialism without first going through (and profiting from) the industrial stages of capitalism. Thus he could not accept Lenin's audacious proposal to build socialism on a foundation of the peasantry as well as on the industrial workers. Some of his writings, such as Socialism and Anarchism and Fundamental Problems of Marxism, have appeared in English translations.

Plener (plā'ner), Baron Ernst von. b. at Eger, Austria, Oct. 18, 1841; d. at Vienna, April 30, 1923. Austrian statesman, a leader of the Austrian liberals. He was a member of parliament (1873-93) and minister of finance (1893-95). He wrote Erinnerungen (3 vols., 1911-21).

Pless (ples). German name of Pszczyna.

Plessis (plē.sē), du. Family name of Cardinal Richelieu, and of the various Ducs de Richelieu.

Plessis-les-Tours (plē.sē.lā.tör). Ruined castle near Tours, France, noted as the residence of Louis XI.

Plessis-Marly (-mār.lē), Seigneur du. Title of Mornay, Philippe de.

Plessis-Robinson (-ro.bān.sōn), Le. See Le Plessis-Robinson.

Plessisville (plēs'ī.vil). Village in S Quebec, Canada, ab.

51 mi. SW of the city of Quebec; center of the maple sugar industry in the area. 5,094 (1951).

Plethon (plē'thon), Gemistus. See Gemistus, Georgius.

Plattenberg (plet'en.berk). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, in the Sauerland district, ab. 24 mi. SE of Dortmund; manufactures of wire, screws, nails, and steel and aluminum articles. During World War II the 14th-century Church of Saint Lambert suffered some damage. The population increase in the period 1939-46 was 22.7 percent. 22,546 (1946), 24,172 (1950).

Pleven (plev'en). [Also, Plevna.] Department in NW Bulgaria, bounded by Rumania on the N, the departments of Plovdiv and Stara Zagora on the S, the departments of Ruse and Shumen on the E, and the departments of Sofia and Vratsa on the W. Capital, Pleven; area, 5,960 sq. mi.; pop. 1,056,436 (1946).

Pleven. [Also, Plevna.] City in NW Bulgaria, capital of the department of Pleven, ab. 60 mi. NE of Vratsa; trade center for cattle, fruit, wine, and attar of roses; manufactures of wool, cotton, and silk. 38,997 (1946).

Pleven (plev'en), René. b. at Rennes, France, April 15, 1901—, French political leader and businessman, a leading official of the Free French regime during World War II. He joined General de Gaulle in June, 1940, was minister of colonies (1943-44), and minister of finance (1944-45). He served (1945 et seq.) as a moderate republican deputy, and was premier (1950-51, 1951-52), minister of defense (1949, 1952), and vice-premier (1951).

Plevna (plev'nā). See Pleven, Bulgaria.

Pleyel (pli'e'l; French, ple-yel), Ignaz Joseph. b. at Ruppersthal, near Vienna, June 1, 1757; d. Nov. 14, 1831. Austrian composer, chiefly of instrumental music. He was a pupil of Haydn, and founded (1807) a piano factory at Paris.

Pliable (pli'a.bl). Character in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. He deserts Christian at the first difficulty.

Pliant (pli'ant), Dame. Handsome foolish widow in Ben Jonson's comedy The Alchemist. She is finally married to Lovewit.

Pliant, Sir Paul and Lady. Characters in Congreve's comedy The Double Dealer. Lady Pliant is noted for her easy virtue and awkwardly assumed prudery, and her insolence to her uxorious old husband.

Plieksans (plyek'shāns), Janis. See Rainis, Janis.

Plimmeth Plantation (plim'eth), History of the. Work by William Bradford, begun probably soon after the landing of the Pilgrims in 1620. The manuscript, completed in 1651, was later lost and did not come to light until 1855. It was first published in its entirety in 1856.

Plimsoll (plim'sol), Samuel. b. at Bristol, England, Feb. 10, 1824; d. June 3, 1898. English merchant and philanthropist. In 1854 he started in the coal trade at London, and began also to interest himself in the welfare of merchant sailors. In 1865 he entered Parliament for Derby. In 1876 his Merchant Shipping Act was passed, to prevent ships from going to sea in an unsafe condition (and, specifically, to prevent them from overloading by insisting that their hulls should not be submerged below a safe point indicated, then and since, by a painted strip known as the "Plimsoll line"). He published Our Seamen in 1873, and in 1890 Cattle Ships, exposing the cruelties of that trade.

Plylimmon (plim'lin'mon). See Plylimmon.

Pliny (plin'i). [Called Pliny the Elder; full Latin name, Gaius Plinius Secundus.] b. at Novum Comum (now Como), Italy, 23 A.D.; perished in the eruption of Vesuvius, 79 A.D. Roman naturalist. He went to Rome in his early youth, served in Africa, and was, at the age of 23, commander of a troop of cavalry in Germany. He returned to Rome and studied law, was procurator in Spain under Nero (c70-72), and was charged with other official duties in various parts of the empire. His literary work, which was conducted with extraordinary industry in the intervals of his official labors (scarcely a waking moment of day or night being left unoccupied), extended into the departments of tactics, history, grammar, rhetoric, and natural science. Of his writings, only his Natural History (Historia naturalis) is extant; it is a scientific encyclopedia, very elaborate and of great value. His death, an account of which is preserved in a letter of the younger Pliny, was the result of his efforts to observe more closely the eruption of Vesuvius and to aid those who were in danger.

Pliny. [Called Pliny the Younger; full Latin name, Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus.] b. at Novum Comum (now Como), Italy, 62 A.D.; d. 113. Roman author; nephew of the elder Pliny. He was a consul in 100, and later (111 or 112) governor of Bithynia and Pontica. He was a friend of Trajan and Tacitus. His Epistles and a eulogy of Trajan have been preserved. The most celebrated of his letters is one to Trajan concerning the treatment of the Christians in his province.

Pliocene Period (pli'ō.sēn). See table at end of Vol. III. Plisnier (plēz.nyā), Charles. b. at Ghlin-lez-Mons, Belgium, Dec. 13, 1896; d. at Brussels, Belgium, July 17, 1952. Belgian writer, noted for his novels depicting the decline of bourgeois families, and as the first non-French recipient (1938) of the Prix Goncourt. Two of his works have been translated into English: Mariages (1936) and Meurtres (5 vols., 1939-41).

Plivier (plē.vēr'), Theodor. b. at Berlin, Feb. 17, 1892—, German novelist, known for his Des Kaisers Kulis (1930; Eng. trans., The Kaiser's Coolies, 1931), a bitter denunciation of the treatment of the common sailor in World War I (the revolution of 1918 in Germany started from conditions such as he describes). His Zwölf Mann und ein Kapitän, written later, also deals with the sailor's life. His experiences in Russia during World War II resulted again in a popular war book, Stalingrad (1949).

Plock (plōtsk). [German, Plözk.] Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, situated on the Vistula River ab. 60 mi. NW of Warsaw. It is a river port, with distilleries and brickworks. The Roman Catholic cathedral, in the Romanesque style, erected in the 12th century, altered in the 15th and 18th centuries, contains tombs of Polish kings and nobles. It was seriously damaged in World War II. One of the chief towns of ancient Poland, Plock belonged to Prussia (1793-1806), to the duchy of Warsaw (1807-13), to Russia (1814-1918), and passed to Poland in 1919. Fighting occurred here in both World Wars. 28,508 (1946).

Ploërmel (plō.er.mel). Town in W France, in the department of Morbihan, ab. 35 mi. SW of Rennes. The town has a number of buildings in the Breton Renaissance style. The Church of Saint Armel, built in the period 1511-1602, with beautiful stained-glass windows, was damaged during World War II. 6,036 (1946).

Ploesti (plō.yesh't', -yesh'tē). [Also, Ploveschi.] City in S Rumania, in the province of Munténia, ab. 36 mi. N of Bucharest; railroad junction. It is the chief refining center for the largest oil fields in SE Europe. The city suffered much damage from air raids in August, 1943. It was captured by the Russians on Aug. 31, 1944. Pop. 95,632 (1948).

Ploetz (plēts), Alfred. b. at Swinemünde, Germany, Aug. 22, 1860; d. at Ammersee, Germany, March 20, 1940. German physician. He was one of the founders of racial hygiene in Germany, and is also known for his studies on social anthropology and mutation.

Plomb du Cantal (plōn dü kān.tāl). See Cantal, Plomb du.

Plombières-les-Bains (plōn.byer.lā.bān). Village in E France, in the department of Vosges, ab. 15 mi. S of Épinal. It is a popular health resort in the Vosges Mountains. 1,452 (1946).

Plomer (plō.mēr'), William (Charles Franklyn). b. in the northern Transvaal, Africa, Dec. 10, 1903—, British novelist. Educated at Rugby, he was a farmer in the Stormberg Mountains in South Africa, resided at Johannesburg, and was a trader in Zululand. Author of the novels Turbott Wolfe (1926), Sado (1931; American title, They Never Come Back, 1932), The Case Is Altered (1932), The Invaders (1934), Double Lives (1943), and D'Arfey's Curious Relations (1945). His collections of short stories include I Speak of Africa (1928), Paper Houses (1929), The Child of Queen Victoria (1933), and Visiting the Caves (1936). He is the author of a biography, Cecil Rhodes (1933).

"Plon-Plon" (plōn.plōn). See Bonaparte, Prince Napoléon Joseph Charles Paul.

Plornish (plōr'nish), Mrs. Plasterer's wife in Charles Dickens's Little Dorrit: "a young woman, made somewhat slatternly in herself and her belongings by poverty."

Plot, The. Historical novel by Henry Christopher Bailey, published in 1922. The title refers to the Popish Plot (1678) of Titus Oates, one of the characters, who appears with Charles II, Shaftesbury, Buckingham, Duke of Monmouth, and the Duke of York.

Plotinus (plō.ti'nus). b. at Lycopolis, Egypt, c204 A.D.; d. in Italy, c270. Greek philosopher, remembered for the formulation of the basic principles of Neoplatonism. He studied at Alexandria under Ammonius Saccas, and afterward taught philosophy at Rome. His works (called Enneads) were edited by Creuzer in 1835. "The relation in which Plotinus stood to his predecessors among the Greek philosophers is very easily stated. He had made himself acquainted with every system, and culled from them all whatever seemed to support his solution of the great problems of thought and existence. Plato is the chief authority and the starting-point in his speculations. But he takes full cognizance of Aristotle, whose system of categories he directly opposes; and he endeavours in all essential points to identify the doctrines of the Old Academy and the Lyceum. To effect this, he is obliged to have recourse to an overstrained latitude of interpretation, sometimes making his own inferences from opinions half expressed, and not unfrequently quoting from memory. Although he is strongly at variance with the Stoics on the grounds of knowledge, treating with great contempt their doctrine of intellectual conception, he borrows a good deal from Chrysippus wherever he can find an agreement even in expression. The older writers also furnished him with suggestive materials. He was acquainted with Anaxagoras, Democritus, Empedocles, Parmenides, and the most ancient Pythagoreans. And he refers directly to the later Peripatetics Aristoxenus and Diacarchus. He cannot, then, be termed strictly or exclusively a Neo-Platonist."

Ploug (ploug). Parmo Carl. b. Oct. 29, 1813; d. Oct. 27, 1894. Danish poet and journalist. After 1829 he studied philology at the Copenhagen University. His first contributions to literature were student songs which he published under the pseudonym Paul Rytter. From 1841 he was editor of the journal Fædrelandet (The Fatherland). In 1861 appeared his collected poems (Samlde Digte), and in 1869 Nyere Sange og Digte (Recent Songs and Poems). He took an active part in politics; in 1848-49 he was a member of the Constitutional Convention, from 1854 to 1857 a member of the Folketing, and from 1859 he was a member of the Landsting.

Plougastel-Daoulas (plō.gās.tel.dā.ō.lās). Town and commune in NW France, in the department of Finistère. SE of Brest. It is a center for the cultivation of early vegetables. The region is picturesque and the inhabitants have preserved many old folk-customs. The famous Calvary and the bridge connecting the town with Brest were very badly damaged in 1944. Pop. of commune, 6,894 (1946); of town, 2,010 (1946).

Plouharnel (plō.ā.rnel). Village in the department of Morbihan, France, ab. 17 mi. W of Vannes. It is known for its megalithic monuments.

Plovdiv (plōv'dif). Department in S Bulgaria, bounded by Greece on the S, the department of Stara Zagora on the E, the department of Sofia on the W, and the department of Pleven on the N. Capital, Plovdiv; area, 6,115 sq. mi.; pop. 876,993 (1946).

Plovdiv. [Greek, Philippopolis; German, Philippopol; ancient name, Eumolpias.] City in S Bulgaria, capital of the department of Plovdiv, situated on the Maritsa River N of the Rhodope Mountains, ab. 82 mi. SW of Sofia; road and railroad junction. It is an important trade center, especially in wheat, silk, tobacco, and attar of roses; manufactures include attar of roses, spirits, and beer. A Thracian town in ancient times, it was captured by Philip II of Macedonia in 342 B.C. (and renamed after him). It was made the capital of Thrace by the Romans. It came under Turkish rule in 1317. It was the capital (1878-85) of the autonomous province of Eastern Rumelia. 99,883 (1934), 125,440 (1946).

Plow (plou). See Wain, Charles's.

Plowman (plou'man), George Taylor. b. at Le Sueur, Minn., Oct. 19, 1869; d. at Cambridge, Mass., March 26, 1932. American architect and etcher, known for his prints of covered bridges. He is widely represented in museums and libraries in the U.S., France, and England.

Plowman's Tale, The. Poem once attributed to Chaucer, appearing in Thynne's 1542 edition (but not in that of 1532). It was thought to have been written by the author of Piers Plowman's Crede, and inserted as a supplementary Canterbury Tale. It is frequently confused with both Piers Plowman's Crede and Piers Plowman.

Ploesych (plō.yesh'chē). See Ploesti.

Plözk (plötsk). German name of Plöck.

Pluche (plush), Charles James de la. A pseudonym of Thackeray, William Makepeace.

Plücker (plük'ér), Julius. b. at Elberfeld, Germany, June 16, 1801; d. at Bonn, Germany, May 22, 1868. German mathematician and scientist, considered by many to have been the greatest analytic geometer of all time. He studied at Bonn, Heidelberg, Berlin, and Paris, and taught mathematics at Bonn (1826-33) and Halle (1834-36). In 1836 he returned to Bonn, where he taught mathematics and physics until his death. For 20 years he contributed prolifically to coordinate geometry, introducing new methods and ideas (such as homogeneous, line, and plane coordinates). His disclosure of the relationships known as "Plücker's equations" was regarded by Cayley as the greatest discovery of modern times in the field of geometry. Plücker published more voluminously than any other analytic geometer, for he wrote, besides numerous papers, five substantial books on the subject: Analytisch-geometrische Entwicklungen (2 vols., 1828-31), System der analytischen Geometrie (1835), Theorie der algebraischen Curven (1839), System der Geometrie des Raumes (1846), and Neue Geometrie des Raumes (2 vols., 1868-69). Plücker devoted most of the last 20 years of his life to physical researches in magnetism, crystallography, and spectrum analysis. His mathematical and physical papers were collected and published in two volumes in 1895-96 as Gesammelte wissenschaftliche Abhandlungen.

Plumb (plum), Glenn Edward. b. at Clay, Iowa, Sept. 30, 1866; d. at Washington, D.C., Aug. 1, 1922. American railroad lawyer, notable as the originator (1919) of the Plumb plan for government ownership of railroads, which was endorsed by the American Federation of Labor and the National Nonpartisan League, and debated in Congress, but never voted upon.

Plume (plôm), Captain. The "recruiting officer," the principal character in Farquhar's comedy of that name. He is a gay and gallant soldier, irresistible to women, for whom he cares less than for his profession. It was a favorite part with Garrick and Macready.

Plumed Knight. Epithet frequently applied to James G. Blaine, first by Robert G. Ingersoll at the Republican national convention at Cincinnati in 1876 in a speech supporting Blaine's nomination for the presidency.

Plumer (plō'mér), Herbert Charles Onslow. [Title, 1st Viscount Plumer.] b. March 13, 1857; d. at London, July 16, 1932. English soldier. He served in the Boer War and World War I, was governor (1919-25) of Malta, and high commissioner (1925-28) of Palestine.

Plumer (plum'ér), William H. b. at Newbury, Mass., June 25, 1759; d. at Epping, N.H., Dec. 22, 1850. American politician. He was a U.S. senator from New Hampshire (1802-07) and governor of New Hampshire (1812-13, 1816-19).

Plum Island (plum). Small island in NE Massachusetts, lying S of the mouth of the Merrimack River, parallel to the coast. Length, ab. 8 mi.

Plum Island. Small island belonging to Suffolk County, New York, NE of Long Island, near the E entrance to Long Island Sound.

Plummer (plum'ér), Caleb. In Charles Dickens's Cricket on the Hearth, a poor and careworn old toymaker. His spirit is crushed with hopeless depression, but he conceals his hardships from his blind daughter Bertha with a pathetic attempt at cheerfulness, and describes his daily life to her as prosperous and happy.

Plummer, William Edward. b. at Deptford, England, March 26, 1849; d. May 22, 1928. English astronomer, director of the Liverpool Observatory. In 1895 he became examiner in astronomy to the University of Edinburgh.

Plumptre (plump'trē), Edward Hayes. b. at London, Aug. 6, 1821; d. at Wells, England, Feb. 1, 1891. English theological and classical scholar. He graduated from Oxford (University College), where he became a fellow of Brasenose in 1844, was chaplain (1847) and later (1864)

professor of New Testament exegesis at King's College, London, and in 1881 became dean of Wells. From 1869 to 1874 he was one of the revisers of the Old Testament. He published commentaries, and translated into English verse Sophocles (1865) and Aeschylus (1868).

Plunket (plung'ket), William Conyngham. [Title, 1st Baron Plunket.] b. in County Fermanagh, Ireland, in July, 1765; d. Jan. 5, 1854. Irish lawyer and politician. He was called to the Irish bar in 1787. In 1798 he entered the Irish Parliament for Charlemont, and opposed (1800) Pitt's scheme for union of Ireland with the United Kingdom. In 1803 he was one of the prosecutors of Emmet. In Pitt's second administration (1804) he became solicitor general and later attorney general for Ireland, and sat in the imperial Parliament in 1812 as member for Trinity College, Dublin. He was one of the foremost orators of his day. He was made chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas and raised to the peerage in 1827, and was lord chancellor of Ireland (1830-34, 1835-41).

Plunkett (plung'ket), Charles Peshall. b. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 15, 1864; d. there, March 24, 1931. American naval officer.

Plunkett, Edward John Moreton Drax. See Dunsany, Lord.

Plunkett, Sir Horace Curzon. b. Oct. 24, 1854; d. March 26, 1932. Irish politician. He was educated at Eton and Oxford. He was engaged in ranching in the U.S. (1879-89), and on his return to Ireland devoted himself to the advancement of agriculture. In 1894 he founded the Irish Agricultural Organization Society. He was a Unionist member of Parliament (1892-1900), and vice-president of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland (1899-1907). He sat (1922-23) in the Irish Free State senate. He published Ireland in the New Century (1904), Noblesse Oblige: an Irish Rendering (1908), and Rural Life Problems in the United States (1910).

Plunkett-Erle-Drax (-er'nl.ér'l'draks'), Reginald Aylmer Ranfurly. b. 1880—. British naval officer; brother of Lord Dunsany. He was director (1919-22) of the Royal Staff College at Greenwich, England, naval aide-de-camp (1927-28) to George V, and headed (1939) a British military and naval mission to Moscow.

Plurabelle (pló'ra.bel), Anna Livia. See Anna Livia Plurabelle.

Plutarch (pló'tárk). b. at Chaeronea, Boeotia, Greece, c16 A.D. Greek historian, celebrated as the author of 46 "Parallel Lives" of Greeks and Romans. He also wrote various philosophical, ethical, and other works, grouped as Opera moralia. He was a Platonist, but occupied himself chiefly with ethical and religious reflections. "In spite of all exceptions on the score of inaccuracy, want of information, or prejudice, Plutarch's lives must remain one of the most valuable relics of Greek literature, not only because they stand in the place of many volumes of lost history, but also because they are written with a graphic and dramatic vivacity, such as we find in few biographies, ancient or modern."

Pluto (pló'tó). In Greek mythology, a cult name of Hades, god of the infernal regions. The word means "rich one" or "wealth-giver," and thus he is associated with Plutus. Pluto is commonly the name used for him in the Persephone abduction myth. The Romans called him Dis.

Pluto. Most remote known planet, revolving at a mean distance of 3,675,000,000 mi. from the Sun in an orbit with larger eccentricity (0.249) and inclination (17 degrees, 18 minutes, 48 seconds) than any other major planet. Aphelion distance is 4,589,000,000 mi.; perihelion distance is 2,751,000,000 mi., 49 million mi. inside Neptune. However, the inclination and orientation of the orbits are such that the two planets cannot approach closer than 240 million mi. Pluto was discovered by Tombaugh at the Lowell Observatory in 1930 as a result of a search instituted in 1916 by Percival Lowell. Being 39.5 times as far from the Sun as the Earth, observation is difficult and the diameter is uncertain, probably ab. 6,000 mi. The mass is difficult to determine in the absence of a satellite or a long series of observations, but evidence points to a value of about 7 times 10²¹ tons, comparable to that of the Earth. The stellar magnitude is 14.3 or 15.000-300 that of Mars at opposition. The temperature is about -230 degrees Centigrade.

Plutus (pló'tus). In Greek mythology, a personification of wealth; a son of Iasion and Demeter, and intimately associated with Irene, goddess of peace, who is often represented in art holding the infant Plutus. Zeus is said to have blinded him in order that he might not bestow his favors exclusively on good men, but should distribute his gifts without regard to merit (however, by some accounts he was later cured and gave wealth only to those whom he could see were honest).

Plutus. A pseudonym of Bernhard, Georg.

Pluviôse (plü.vyôz). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the fifth month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 with Jan. 20; in 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13 with Jan. 21; and in 12 with Jan. 22.

Pluvius (plü'vi.us). In Roman mythology, a surname of Jupiter in reference to his function as rain-giver.

Plymouth (plim'uth). Town in W Connecticut, in Litchfield County, 6,771 (1950).

Plymouth. City, county borough, naval station, and seaport in SW England, in Devonshire, situated on Plymouth Sound between the estuaries of the river Plym (Cattewater) and the river Tamar (Hamoaze) ab. 38 mi. SW of Exeter, ab. 226 mi. SW of London by rail. Plymouth includes Devonport in the county borough, and Stonehouse may be considered part of Plymouth. It is one of the chief naval stations of the country, ranking second to Portsmouth. Plymouth Sound is accessible to the largest ships, and Plymouth rivals Southampton as a port of entry for passengers from Australia, New Zealand, India, South Africa, South America, the West Indies, and Baltic and Mediterranean ports. It suffered severe air-raid damage during World War II, but has been largely rebuilt. Exports are nonferrous ores and local building-stone. Objects of interest are the breakwater, the dockyard at Devonport (which was called Plymouth Dock until 1824), the citadel, and the Hoe (an elevated promenade and park). Plymouth was the starting point of the expedition against the Spanish Armada in 1588, and the last point touched by the Mayflower in 1620. It was unsuccessfully besieged by the Royalists in the English Civil War. Pop. of county borough, 208,985 (1951).

Plymouth. City in N Indiana, county seat of Marshall County; shipping center, 6,704 (1950).

Plymouth. Town (in Massachusetts the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in SE Massachusetts, county seat of Plymouth County, on a bay on the Atlantic coast, ab. 35 mi. SE of Boston; manufactures of rope and cultivation of cranberries. Points of tourist interest are the Pilgrim Hall, Burial Hill, Plymouth Rock, Pilgrim Monument (commenced in 1859), and Cole's Hill. It is the oldest New England town. The Pilgrim Fathers landed here Dec. 21, 1620. Pop. of town, 13,608 (1950); of village, 10,540 (1950).

Plymouth. City in SE Michigan, in Wayne County; manufactures of air rifles, 6,637 (1950).

Plymouth. Town in N New Hampshire, in Grafton County, 3,039 (1950).

Plymouth. Town in E North Carolina, county seat of Washington County, at the head of Albemarle Sound, ab. 74 mi. SW of Norfolk, Va.; fisheries, canneries, and lumber mills. It was established in 1780 and was virtually demolished by several naval engagements during the Civil War. In the harbor, on Oct. 27, 1864, Lieutenant William Barker Cushing destroyed by torpedo the Confederate ram Albemarle, 4,486 (1950).

Plymouth. Borough in E Pennsylvania, in Luzerne County, on the Susquehanna River ab. 20 mi. SW of Scranton; coal mining, 13,021 (1950).

Plymouth. City in E Wisconsin, in Sheboygan County; noted as a cheese-marketing center, 4,543 (1950).

Plymouth. A former name of St. Helens, Ore.

Plymouth Brethren. [Also: Darbyites, Plymouthites (plim'uth.its).] Sect of Christians which attracted (1830) notice at Plymouth, England, and later extended over Great Britain, the U.S., and among the Protestants of France, Switzerland, Italy, and elsewhere in Europe.

Plymouth Colony. Colony established (1620) in the SE part of what is now the state of Massachusetts by the English Pilgrims. It formed (1643-84) with Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, and New Haven the New England Confederacy, and was formally united with Massachusetts Bay in 1691.

Plymouth Dock. See under Devonport and Plymouth, England.

Plymouth Rock. Rock at Plymouth, Mass., alleged to have been the landing place of the Pilgrims in 1620.

Plymouth Rock. A former name of St. Helens, Ore.

Plymouth Sound. Inlet of the English Channel, in SW England, between Devonshire and Cornwall.

Plynlimmon (plin'lim'on). [Also, Plinlimmon.] Mountain in S Wales, in Cardiganshire, near the Cardiganshire-Montgomeryshire boundary, ab. 11 mi. W of Llandidloes. The river Wye has its source here. Plynlimmon consists of three peaks forming part of a larger mountain group. Elevation, 2,468 ft.

Pízeň (pe'zeny'). Kraj (region) of Czechoslovakia, in W Bohemia. Capital, Pízeň; area, ab. 3,045 sq. mi.; pop. 544,913 (1947).

Pízeň. [German, Pilsen.] City in Czechoslovakia, capital of the kraj (region) of Pízeň, in W Bohemia, situated at the junction of several branches forming the Berounka River SW of Prague. It is an important railroad junction and the seat of the state railway administration. It has a number of important industries, among which the Skoda engineering plants and the municipal brewery are outstanding. The Skoda Works produce many types of machinery, vehicles, and war materials, employing more than 10,000 workers. The municipal brewery, founded in 1342, has famous cellars and was the original producer of the "Pilsener" type of light beer. The tower of the Gothic Church of Saint Bartholomew is the highest church tower in Bohemia, and the town hall, dating from the 16th century, is one of the most remarkable Renaissance buildings in Bohemia. The first printing establishment in Bohemia was founded at Pízeň in 1476. The city was one of the scenes of the alleged conspiracy of Wallenstein in 1634. Pop. (including suburbs), 117,814 (1947).

Pneumatomachi (nū.ma.tom'á.ki). See Macedonians, followers of Macedonius.

Pnompenh (nom'pen', pe.nóm'pen'). [Also: Panom-peng, Phnôm-Penh.] City in SW Indochina, SE Asia, the capital of Cambodia, situated on the Mekong River ab. 125 mi. NW of Saigon. There are several rice mills, a cotton-ginning mill, and fish-drying facilities in the city. It is an important river port and road junction, with railroad connections to Thailand (Siam) and to Saigon, 124,000 (1946).

Pnong (pe.nóng'). See Phnong.

Pnyx (niks). Hill between the Museum Hill and the Hill of the Nymphs, above the Agora, in the group SW of the Acropolis, at Athens, Greece; also, a famous ancient place of public assembly established on the N slope of this hill, beneath the summit. The place of assembly consists of a terrace, bounded at the back by a vertical cutting 13 ft. high in the rock at the summit of the hill, and supported by a curved retaining wall of early date, built of well-jointed polygonal masonry in huge blocks. Some of the courses of this retaining wall have disappeared, so that the terrace now slopes downward, while originally it was level or ascended slightly toward the back. The length of the terrace is 395 ft., and its width 212 ft. The back wall is not straight, but forms an open obtuse angle, at the apex of which projects a huge cube of rock, rising from three steps and ascended by a small flight of steps in the angle at each side. This is the bema, or orators' platform, from which Demosthenes and the other great Athenian political orators delivered their harangues.

Po (pō). [Latin, Padus, Eridanus.] Largest river in Italy. It rises in Monte Viso in the Alps on the French border, flows NE and then generally E, traversing a wide, fertile, and nearly level plain, and empties by several mouths into the Adriatic Sea. Its chief tributaries are the Tanaro and Trebbia on the right, and the Dora Baltea, Sesia, Ticino (draining Lago Maggiore), Adda (draining Lake Como), Oglio (draining Lake Iseo), and Mincio (draining Lake Garda) on the left. The chief places on its banks are Turin, Piacenza, and Cremona. Length, ab. 405 mi.; navigable to above Turin.

Po. In C and E Polynesia, the primal darkness that preceded the creation of gods and men; also, the underworld, home of certain supernaturals and (with local exceptions) of the dead.

Pō (pē). See Tibet.

Poage Settlement (pōg). Former name of Ashland, Ky.

Poás (pō.äs'). Volcanic mountain in C Costa Rica. Elevation, ab. 9,050 ft.

Pobedy Peak (po.by'e'di). See under Tien Shan.

Pobiedonostsef (po.by.e.do.nós'tsif), Konstantin Petrovitch. See Pobedyonostsef, Konstantin Petrovich.

Poblacht na h'Eireann (pu'blácht na he'rin). Irish name of the Irish Republic.

Pobedyonostsef (po.by.e.do.nós'tsif), Konstantin Petrovich. [Also, Konstantin Petrovitch Pobiedonostsef.] b. at Moscow, 1827; d. at St. Petersburg, March 23, 1907. Russian jurist and statesman, procurator of the Holy Synod of Russia (1880-1905). He studied at the Imperial School of Law at St. Petersburg, became an official of the senate in Moscow, was professor of civil law in the University of Moscow (1860-65), was instructor in the theory of law and administration to the sons of Alexander II, and became a senator at St. Petersburg in 1868, and a member of the Council of the Empire in 1872. He was always an uncompromising advocate of absolutism in government and an opposer of all liberal reform, and he did much to strengthen the influence of the Orthodox Greek Church on Russian policy.

Pocahontas (pō.ká.hon'tas). b. c.1595; d. at Gravesend, England, in March, 1617. American Indian princess, noted for her alleged rescue of Captain John Smith. Her real name was Matoaka, the Indian term pocahontas (playful one) having been used for several of the daughters of Powhatan, leader of the Powhatan confederacy in Virginia. She was supposedly a child of ten years of age when the English first came (1607) to Virginia. According to the narrative of Captain John Smith, she saved his life after his capture (1608) by Powhatan. The veracity of the story is still a subject for dispute among historians. Seized as a prisoner by the English in 1613, she was instructed in the Christian faith and took the name of Rebecca. An English gentleman, John Rolfe, was so smitten with her that he secured permission to marry her from Governor Dale, to whom the connection appeared useful as a means of keeping the good will of the Virginia Indians. The marriage took place in April, 1614, at Jamestown and resulted in an eight-year peace between the English and the Indians. Going to England in 1616, Pocahontas was received as a princess and was presented to the king and queen. She died while making preparations to return to Virginia.

Pocahontas. City in NE Arkansas, county seat of Randolph County. 3,840 (1950).

Pocahontas. Town in SW Virginia, in Tazewell County: coal mining. 2,410 (1950).

Pocasset (pō.kas'et). See Portsmouth, R.I.; also Tiverton, R.I.

Pocatello (pō.ká.tel'ō). City in SE Idaho, county seat of Bannock County, on the Port Neuf River. It is the seat of Idaho State College. 26,131 (1950).

Pocci (pot'che), Count Franz von. b. at Munich, March 7, 1807; d. there, May 7, 1876. German poet and musician, known for his puppet plays (Dramatische Spiele für Kinder, 1850; Lustiges Komödienbüchlein, 1859-73). He also illustrated an edition of Grimm's fairy tales.

Pocket (pok'et), Herbert. In Charles Dickens's Great Expectations, a warm-hearted young man who becomes a close friend of Pip. His life is filled with schemes for making a great and quick success, and in the end his dreams are actually realized (with the secret help of Pip) when he becomes a partner in the firm of Clarrikier and Company. He marries Clara Barley.

Pocket-Handkerchief, Autobiography of a. Romance by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1843 as Le Mouchoir.

Pococke (pō'kok), Edward. b. 1604; d. 1691. English Orientalist and Biblical commentator. In 1630 he became English chaplain at Aleppo; in 1636 he was appointed professor of Arabic at Oxford, and in 1648 professor of Hebrew. He published Specimen Historiae Arabum (1649), Porta Mosis (1655), The Annals of Eutychius in Arabic and Latin (1658), and others.

Pococke, Richard. b. at Southampton, England, 1704; d. 1765. English traveler, bishop of Ossory (1750-65) and of Meath (1765). He was educated at Corpus Christi fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ð, d or j; ʃ, s or sh; t, t or ch;

College, Oxford, and traveled in the East (1737–40). He published Description of the East (1743) and Observations on Palestine (1745).

Pocomoke City (pō'kō.mōk). [Called Pocomoke.] Town in SE Maryland, in Worcester County, near the Virginia border: shipping point for fertilizer, canned goods, and oil. 3,191 (1950).

Poços de Caldas (pō'sōs dē kāl'das). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais: spa. 19,680 (1950).

Poděbrad (pō'dye.brät). George of (or Jifi z). See George of Poděbrad.

Poděbrady (pō'dye.brä.di). [Also: Poděbrad (pō'dye.brät). German, Podiebrad.] Town and spa in Czechoslovakia, in C Bohemia, in the kraj (region) of Praha, situated on the Labe (Elbe) River between Nymburk and Kladan, ab. 32 mi. E of Prague. There is a castle, a Gothic cathedral, and a museum; industries include a brewery, a glass factory, and a sugar refinery. 10,540 (1947).

Podgorica (pōd'gō.rē.sā). Former name of Titograd.

Podgórze (pōd'gō'zhe). Former town in S Poland, on the Vistula River opposite Kraków. Since 1919 it has been part of Kraków.

Podiebrad (pō'dye.brät). German name of Poděbrady.

Podiebrad, George of (or Jifi z). See George of Poděbrad.

Po di Primaro (pō dē prēmā'rō). Lower course of the Reno River, in Italy.

Podium (pō'di.um). A medieval name of Le Puy.

Podkamena (pot.kā'my.na). See Tunguska, Stony.

Podkamennaya Tunguska (pot.kā'my.na.ya tūn.gōs.kā). Russian name of Tunguska, Stony.

Podlachia (pod.lā'ki.ä). Old division in the E part of Poland.

Podmokly (pōd'mō.kli). See under Děčín-Podmokly.

Podmore (pōd'mōr). Frank. b. Feb. 5, 1856; d. Aug. 15, 1910. English author. He was educated at Pembroke College, Oxford. He was especially interested in spiritualism and psychical phenomena, and was an active member of the Society for Psychical Research. Among his published works are Apparitions and Thought-Transference (1894), Studies in Psychical Research (1897), Modern Spiritualism (1902), Robert Owen (1906), and The Newer Spiritualism (1911).

Podmoskovnyy Basseyn (pod.mos.kōv'ni bā.sā'n). Russian name of Moscow Basin.

Podol (pō'dōl). Village in Czechoslovakia, in NE Bohemia, between Mnichovo Hradiště and Turnov. It was the scene of the first engagement between the Prussians and the Austrians in the Austro-Prussian War (1866).

Podolia (pō.dō'li.ä). [Also, Podolsk.] Former guberniya (government) in SW Russia, on the Rumanian frontier, and surrounded on other sides by the former governments of Volhynia, Kiev, Kherson, and Bessarabia. Capital, Kamenets.

Podolsk (pō.dōlsk'). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Moscow oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 24 mi. S of Moscow. A center of heavy industry, it was damaged by bombing during World War II; it has manufactures of sewing machines, oil-refining equipment, boilers, and cement. 72,422 (1939).

Podrecca (pō.drek'kä), Vittorio. b. at Caidale del Friuli, Italy, 1853— Italian puppeteer, marionette producer, and author. He won international fame with the Teatro di Piccoli, which he founded at Rome in 1912, presenting his productions in the hall of the old Palazzo Rospigliosi. He included miniature versions of operas by Rossini, Mozart, Donizetti, Respighi, and others, as well as abbreviated plays by Shakespeare, Gozzi, and modern playwrights.

Podsnap (pōd'snap), Mr. Character in Charles Dickens's Our Mutual Friend. He is a smiling, eminently respectable man, who always knows exactly what Providence means: "And it was very remarkable (and must have been very comfortable) that what Providence meant was invariably what Mr. Podsnap meant. These may be said to have been the articles of faith of a school which the present chapter takes the liberty of calling, after its representative name, Podsnappery."

Podyachev (pō.dyā'chif), Semyon Pavlovich. b. at Obolyanovo, Moscow, Russia, Feb. 8, 1866; d. 1934. Russian writer of fiction. An established author under the old regime, he joined the Communist Party in 1918 and continued to write in a gloomy vein about village life. His memoirs were published posthumously in 1935.

Poe (pō), Edgar Allan. b. at Boston, Jan. 19, 1809; d. at Baltimore, Oct. 7, 1849. American poet, short-story writer, and critic. His father abandoned the study of law to go on the stage, and married an actress, who died, a widow, at Richmond, Va., in December, 1811. The infant Edgar was taken into the family of John Allan, a Richmond tobacco merchant, who was his godfather. His education was begun at a private school in Richmond, but in 1815 he was taken by the Allans on a trip to England and Scotland, and was placed in the Manor House School at Stoke-Newington, where he remained until 1820. After further schooling at Richmond, he entered (1826) the University of Virginia, where during his short stay he did excellently in his studies, but ran up such bills for liquor and gambling debts that Allan brought him back to Richmond and put him to work in his counting-room. From this employment Poe ran away early in 1827, going to Boston, where he managed to publish, anonymously, his first book, Tamerlane and Other Poems. In later times a copy of this book was to be valued at a small fortune, but in 1827 it could neither feed nor clothe its author, who accordingly in May of that year enlisted in the U.S. army under the name of Edgar A. Perry. In 1829 he was reconciled with Allan, who procured his discharge from the army and his appointment as a cadet at the U.S. Military Academy, at West Point. However, the first Mrs. Allan died in 1829, and when Allan remarried in 1830 Poe felt that his prospects of much further support, or of any inheritance, from that quarter, had vanished, and by neglect of duties he deliberately brought about his discharge from West Point in 1831. His resources were genius and ambition; his liabilities were his impracticality, the lack of an American public capable of appreciating what he could offer, and his personal weaknesses, including a degree of intemperance. In 1833 he went to live in the home of an aunt at Baltimore, and conceived a passionate love for her daughter, his cousin Virginia Clemm, whom he married in May, 1836, when she was 13 years of age. At Richmond in 1829 he had published a second volume, Al Aaraaf, Tamerlane, and Minor Poems, and between then and 1833 he wrote several short stories, one of which, The Manuscript Found in a Bottle, brought him a prize of 100 dollars and attracted the notice of the novelist John Pendleton Kennedy, on whose recommendation Poe was employed on the editorial staff of The Southern Literary Messenger, at Richmond. Here his work was brilliant, bringing the magazine fame and increased circulation; but moving in convivial circles, he became intemperate and unreliable, and lost his position in January, 1837. With his wife he went to New York, where they lived precariously by his literary hackwork, until in 1838 he was made editor of The Gentleman's Magazine, at Philadelphia, and later of Graham's Magazine. During these years, wholly abstaining from alcohol, he won increasing fame and respect as a poet, a story writer, and a critic. A collection of his stories was published in 1840 under the title Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque, and at this time he first began to publish detective stories. In 1844 he moved to New York with his beautiful and adored wife and her mother, to whom he was gratefully devoted. Nathaniel P. Willis employed him as an editor of the Evening Mirror. In that paper on Jan. 29, 1845, appeared Poe's poem The Raven, and he awoke to find himself famous; The Raven was reprinted far and wide, and was a classic from the moment it saw print. Soon after this event, Poe became editor of the Broadway Journal, and in October of that year seemed to have realized his long-held ambition to own a literary periodical; he bought control of the Broadway Journal, but went into debt to do so; the venture was financially disastrous, publication ceased at the end of the year, and Poe found himself once more in straitened circumstances. Early in 1846 he, Virginia, and Mrs. Clemm therefore moved to the small cottage in Fordham, which is now a national shrine. Virginia had been ailing for some years; she died in January, 1847, and Poe only slowly recovered from the shock of this tragedy. Feeling desperately the need of married companionship, which alone, he knew, could save him from his weakness for drink, he tentatively courted several women poets, and actually became engaged to one of them, Sarah Helen Whitman (but her friends managed to break off the match). On a visit to Richmond, seeking help toward a new venture in the magazine field, he met the widow Shelton, who, 20 years earlier, as Elmira Royster, had been his boyhood love. They became engaged, his friends in the Virginia capital raised money to give Poe a new start, and on Sept. 30, 1849, he left for New York to wind up his affairs there. On October 3 he was found, critically ill and penniless, in a Baltimore saloon; four days later he died, without having regained consciousness. That Poe was, at his best, one of the greatest lyric poets ever to write in English, is now seldom questioned; The Raven, Ultime, Annabel Lee, The Haunted Palace, Lenore, The Sleeper, the first T. Helen, and a handful more of his poems have lost none of their magic in the passage of more than a century. He was also one of the most discerning American critics of his day, making not a few enemies by his deflation of swollen local reputations (though, amusingly enough, unable to write other than flatteringly of any female poet). Both his hair-raising tales of "the grotesque and arabesque" and his ingenious, exciting mystery and detective stories enlarged the area of fiction. Until about the end of the second decade of the 20th century he was everywhere in Europe the best known and most admired of American writers. In France especially, his influence upon poetry and fiction has been profound and extensive.

Poe, Orlando Metcalfe. b. at Navarre, Ohio, March 7, 1832; d. at Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2, 1895. American Union officer and engineer. He was chief engineer (1863-64) of the Army of the Ohio, and was chosen (1864) chief engineer by Sherman. As superintendent (1883 et seq.) of river and harbor improvements on Lakes Superior and Huron, he was responsible for the ship channel between Chicago, Duluth, and Buffalo, the construction of the dry dock in St. Mary's Falls Canal, and the design and building of the locks at Sault Ste. Marie.

Poe (pō), William. [Original surname, Pole.] b. at London, July 22, 1852; d. Dec. 13, 1934. English actor and theater manager, an authority on Shakespeare.

Poe (pō), Hans. b. at Berlin, April 30, 1869; d. there, June 14, 1936. German architect and scenic designer, considered by some as the most individual of modern German architects. Among the many buildings designed by him were the I. G. Farben administrative buildings (1930) at Frankfurt on the Main (which served as headquarters for the U.S. occupation force after World War II).

Poema del Cid (pō.ā'mā del thē'n). Spanish name of Cid, Song of the.

Poems of West and East. Volume by V. Sackville-West, published in 1917.

Poeppig (pōp'pīg), Eduard Friedrich. See Pöppig or Poeppig, Eduard Friedrich.

Poe Gough (pō'gōf), Hubert de la. See Gough, Hubert de la Poer.

Poetaster, or His Arraignment, The. Satire by Ben Jonson, acted in 1601 and printed in 1602. It was thought to be a direct attack on Dekker and Marston, whereupon Dekker produced his Satiricist, or the Unruffling of the Humorous Poet. In 1603 and 1604, however, Jonson collaborated with each of them.

Poe at the Breakfast Table, The. Series of sketches by Oliver Wendell Holmes, published in 1872; a sequel to The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table (1858) and The Professor at the Breakfast Table (1860).

Poetelia (pō.e.tē'l'ya). Ancient name of Strongoli.

Poetic Principle, The. Lecture by Edgar Allan Poe, delivered (1848-49) in several cities and posthumously published (1850) in The Union Magazine. The author asserts the value of the short poem, extols the merit of beauty, and pleads for art for art's sake. The essay is an extension of the critical views set forth in The Philosophy of Composition (1846).

"Poet of Despair." Epithet of Thomson, James (1834-82).

Poetry: A Magazine of Verse. Monthly publication founded (1912) at Chicago by Harriet Monroe and edited by her until 1936. It has published work by T. S. Eliot, Carl Sandburg, Ezra Pound, Vachel Lindsay, and Hart Crane.

Poets' Corner. Space in the E side of the S transept of Westminster Abbey, containing the tablets, statues, busts, or monuments of Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Chaucer, Milton, Spenser, and other British poets, actors, divines, and great men. Some of them are buried near or under their monuments.

Poe's Youth, A. Historical novel by Margaret Louisa Woods, published in 1924.

Poe y Aloy (pō.ā'fē.ā'loi'), Felipe. b. at Havana, Cuba, May 26, 1799; d. there, Jan. 28, 1891. Cuban naturalist. From 1839 he was director of the museum at Havana, and he was long a professor in the university. His writings on Cuban ichthyology and entomology are important.

Poffenberger (pōf'en.bēr.gēr), Albert Theodore. b. Oct. 23, 1885. American psychologist. Author of The Sense of Taste (1917), Applied Psychology—Its Principles and Methods (1927), Principles of Applied Psychology (1942), and other books.

Pogany (pō.gā'ni), Willy. [Full name, William Andrew Pogany.] b. at Szeged, Hungary, Aug. 24, 1882. American illustrator, mural painter, stage and costume designer. He has illustrated many books, designed a number of theatrical settings, and from 1930 to 1940 was a motion-picture art director. He has also painted many murals.

Pogge (pō'gē), Paul. b. at Ziersdorf, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, Dec. 24, 1838; d. at Luanda, Angola, Africa, March 17, 1884. German explorer in Africa.

Poggendorf (pōg'en.dōrf), Johann Christian. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 29, 1796; d. at Berlin, Jan. 24, 1877. German physicist, noted for his researches in magnetism and electricity, and also for publication of the original edition of what has now the standard biographical reference work in the physical sciences. He edited Annalen der Physik und Chemie from 1824, and published Biographisch-literarisches Handwörterbuch (1857-63) and others.

Poggibonsi (pōd.jē.bōn'sē). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Siena, NW Siena. During World War II, fire destroyed the roof of the Church of San Lucechese, and works by Orcagna and others were damaged by heat or exposure to the elements. Pop. of commune, 13,866 (1936); of town, 6,443 (1936).

Poggio Bracciolini (pōd.jō.brāt.chō.lē'nē), Giovanni (or Gian) Francesco. b. at Terracina, Tuscany, Italy, 1380; d. 1459. Italian scholar and author. He was secretary of the papal curia, became historiographer to Florence and chancellor in 1453, and wrote satires, moral essays, a History of Florence, a notable collection of Facetiae, and others. His greatest contribution to letters lay in his discovery, in various monasteries, of classical manuscripts, such as eight Ciceronian orations, some fragments of Lucræti, and a complete set of Quintilian's writings. He also brought about the unearthing in Germany of 12 plays of Plautus.

Pogodin (pō.gō'dyin), Nikolay Fyodorovich. b. 1900. Russian playwright. There are English translations of three of his plays (notably Tentpo) in Six Soviet Plays, edited by Eugene Lyons (1934).

Pogram (pō'gram), Elijah. In Charles Dickens's Martin Chuzzlewit, an American, a public benefactor and a member of Congress. Most readers, on both sides of the Atlantic, now find the character an amusing one, but at the time (1843) of the original publication of Martin Chuzzlewit, Pogram (and most of the other American characters in the book) were resented by many readers in the U.S.

Po Hai (bō' hāi'). [Former name, Gulf of Chihli (or Pe-chi-li, or Petchili).] Arm of the Yellow Sea, situated E of China, off the provinces of Hopei and Liaoning. The river Huang Ho empties into it near its S shore. Length (including the Gulf of Liaotung), ab. 290 mi.

Pohl (pōl), Hugo von. b. at Breslau, Aug. 25, 1855; d. at Berlin, Feb. 23, 1916. German admiral, chief of the German naval staff in World War I. An exponent of strategic defense, he frustrated Alfred von Tirpitz's plans for committing the German fleet to a decisive engagement with the British during the early years of the war. It was thus partly because of Pohl that the heavy surface vessels of the German navy played only a minor part in the war, and that the strategy of submarine warfare finally prevailed to the exclusion of virtually all else.

Pohl, Johann Emanuel. b. at Kamnitz (now Kamenice), in Bohemia, Feb. 22, 1782; d. at Vienna, May 22, 1834. Austrian botanist.

Pohl, Richard. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 12, 1826; d. at Baden-Baden, Germany, Dec. 17, 1896. German music critic and composer, ardent advocate of Richard Wagner and friend of Franz Liszt. Author of Akustische Briefe (1853), Richard Wagner (1883), Franz Liszt (1883), and Hector Berlioz (1884).

Poictesme (pwā.tem'). Fictional medieval country which provides the setting for Jurgen (1919) and other romances by James Branch Cabell.

Poictiers (pwā.tyā'). Former spelling of Poitiers.

Poincaré (pwā.kä.rä'), Jules Henri. b. at Nancy, France, April 29, 1854; d. at Paris, July 17, 1912. French mathematician, professor (1881 et seq.) in the Faculty of Sciences at Paris; cousin of Raymond Poincaré. He did important work on the theory of functions, especially as applicable to physics and measurement of mechanical systems. He wrote Cours de physique mathématique (1890), Électricité et optique (1890-91), Thermodynamique (1892), Les Méthodes nouvelles de la mécanique céleste (1892-99), Théorie des tourbillons (1893), Les Oscillations électriques (1894), Capillarité (1895), Calcul des probabilités (1896), La Science et l'hypothèse (1902), and others.

Poincaré, Lucien. b. 1862; d. at Paris, March 9, 1920. French physicist, mathematician, and educator. He became (1902) inspector general of public instruction. Author of The New Physics and Its Evolution (1907), Electricity, Present and Future (1908), and others.

Poincaré, Raymond. b. at Bar-le-Duc, Meuse, France, Aug. 20, 1860; d. at Paris, Oct. 15, 1934. French statesman and lawyer, president of France during World War I; cousin of Jules Henri Poincaré. After a prominent career as a lawyer at the Paris bar, he became (1887) a deputy, quickly drawing attention to himself as a speaker. He was a strong republican in point of view. He became (1893) minister of public instruction, prepared reform of the French universities, and was finance minister (1894) and minister of public instruction (1894). He was elected president of the Chamber of Deputies, opposed (1900-06) the radical program of the government, became (1903) a senator, returned to activity as a lawyer, and became (1906) finance minister. He was named premier during the Agadir crisis (1912) and elected (1913) president of the republic. He played a significant role behind the scenes in French diplomacy during his administration. At the end (1920) of his term of office, he was reelected a senator, became (1922) premier again during the reparations crisis, ordered the occupation (1923) of the Ruhr, was defeated in the elections of 1924, and resigned the premiership. He returned (1926) to power during a grave financial crisis, and stayed in office until he became severely ill (June, 1929). His principal work is Au service de la France: Neuf années de souvenirs (1926 et seq.).

Pointexter (poin'deks.tēr), George. b. in Louisa County, Va., 1779; d. at Jackson, Miss., Sept. 5, 1853. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Mississippi (1817-19), governor of Mississippi (1819-21), and U.S. senator (1830-35).

Pointexter, Joseph Boyd. b. at Canyon City, Ore., April 14, 1869; d. Dec. 3, 1951. American jurist and government administrator who served (1934-42) as governor of the Territory of Hawaii.

Poins (poinz). In Shakespeare's Henry IV, a dissolute, witty companion of Prince Henry and Falstaff.

Poinsett (poin'set), Joel Roberts. b. at Charlestown (Charleston), S.C., March 2, 1779; d. near Statesburg, S.C., Dec. 12, 1851. American politician and diplomat, U.S. secretary of war (1837-41) under Van Buren. He was schooled in the U.S. and England, studied law privately, abandoning it to go on a tour of Europe and western Asia, and in 1810 became special agent for the U.S. in the Rio de la Plata region and Chile. He returned to Charleston in May, 1815, and entered state politics, being elected (1816, 1818) to the South Carolina legislature. He served (1821-25) in Congress and during the period August, 1822-January, 1823, was on a special mission to Mexico. Appointed (March, 1825) the first U.S. minister to Mexico, he served there until January, 1830. Upon his return he became the leader of the South Carolina Unionist party during the nullification controversy and was instrumental in organizing militia forces in support of the Unionist viewpoint. After the controversy subsided, Poinsett retired to private life, emerging in 1837 to take the post of secretary of war in President Van Buren's cabinet. He opposed the secession movement of 1847-52 and refused to attend the Nashville Convention (1850). He wrote Notes on Mexico (1824). The plant genus Poinsettia, a member of which is a popular Christmas decoration, is named in his honor.

Poinset (pwān.sō), Louis. b. at Paris, Jan. 3, 1777; d. there, Dec. 15, 1859. French mathematician, noted for his work on the mathematics of rotating bodies. Among his works is Éléments de statique (1803).

Point, The. Former name of Keokuk, Iowa.

Point Counter Point. Novel by Aldous Huxley, published in 1928.

Point de Galle (point de gāl, gal). See Galle.

Pointe (pwānt). French word for "point"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Pointe-à-Pitre (pwānt.ā.pētr). City and commune in C Guadeloupe, French West Indies, on the Caribbean Sea; chief commercial town; seaport for rum and sugar. Pop. of commune, 41,323 (1946).

Pointe aux Trembles (pwānt ō trān.ble). Town on the E coast of Montreal Island, Quebec, Canada, ab. 11 mi. N of Montreal, 8,241 (1951).

Pointe Claire (point klār). Town on Montreal Island, Quebec, Canada, on the S side of the island, on Lake St. Louis, ab. 15 mi. from Montreal, 8,753 (1951).

Pointed Roofs. Novel by Dorothy M. Richardson, published in 1915. It is the first section of Pilgrimage (1938), a novel sequence in 12 parts employing the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Pointe-Noire (pwānt.nwār). Chief port of French Equatorial Africa, and new capital (1950 et seq.) of Middle Congo territory, a few miles N of the border of Cabinda. It is connected with Brazzaville, to the NE, by the territory's only railroad. Its development was undertaken by the French in 1934 and by 1939 the port was in use. Improvements continued so that today it is the biggest port on the African coast between Lagos and Capetown. The largest airport in the country is situated here. Pop. ab. 22,000.

Point Four. Fourth major plank in President Truman's inauguration address in January, 1949. It proposed that the U.S. take the leadership in providing technical assistance and advice to underdeveloped parts of the world. It was President Truman's contention that the U.S. could, by making available its technical and industrial knowledge to nations needing or desiring development of their economies and improvement of their standards of living, provide a powerful stimulus for the democratic way of government which could be further aided by the American investment potential.

Points (pwānt.ē), Jean Bernard Louis Desjean, Baron de. b. 1645; d. near Paris, 1707. French naval officer. He commanded an expedition which took Cartagena, New Granada, on May 2, 1697, and besieged (1704-05) Gibraltar by sea. He published Relation de l'expédition de Carthagène (1698).

Point Levi (lē.vi). See Lévis.

Point Pelee National Park (pē'lē). Canadian national park (established 1918) on a headland projecting into Lake Erie from the SW part of Essex County, Ontario, Canada. It is a recreational area and game preserve. Area, ab. 6 sq. mi.

Point Pleasant. Borough in E New Jersey, on the Atlantic coast near Asbury Park; summer resort. 4,009 (1950).

Point Pleasant. City in W West Virginia, county seat of Mason County, near the confluence of the Kanawha and Ohio rivers. It was incorporated as a town in 1833. Here on Oct. 10, 1774, the American settlers under Andrew Lewis defeated the Shawnee Indians in what has been called the first battle of the Revolution. 4,596 (1950).

Point Pleasant Beach. Borough in E New Jersey, on the Atlantic Coast near Point Pleasant; summer resort. 2,900 (1950).

Poiré (pwá.rá). Emmanuel. See Caran d'Aché.

Poise (pwáz). Jean Alexandre Ferdinand. b. at Nîmes, France, June 3, 1828; d. at Paris, May 13, 1892. French composer of comic operas. Among them are Bonsoir voisin! (1853), Les Charmées (1855), La Surprise d'amour (1878), and L'amour médecin (1880; after Molière).

Poisson (pwá.són). Siméon Denis. b. at Pithiviers, France, June 21, 1781; d. at Paris, April 25, 1840. French mathematician, especially noted for his application of mechanics to physics. He served as a professor (1802 et seq.) at the École Polytechnique, Paris. Among his works is Traité de mécanique (1811).

Poissey (pwá.sé). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, on the Seine River W of St-Germain-en-Laye, ab. 14 mi. NW of Paris. It is a river port and has a Romanesque church from the 12th century. The town is the site of a distillery. A conference took place (1561) here between Catholics and Protestants, but failed, however, to achieve conciliation. 13,375 (1946).

Poitevin (pwát.ván). Prosper. b. c1810; d. at Paris. Oct. 29, 1884. French grammarian, lexicographer, and man of letters. Among his works are Nouveau dictionnaire universel de la langue française (1854-60), Grammaire générale et historique de la langue française (1856), and Cours pratique de littérature française (1865).

Poitiers (pwá.tyá). [Former spelling, Poictiers; ancient name, Limonium.] Town in W France, the capital of the department of Vienne, between Tours and Angoulême. A quiet town, seat of a Roman Catholic bishopric and a university, it is architecturally one of the most interesting places in France because of its early medieval Romanesque monuments. The cathedral of Saint Pierre dates from the 12th and 13th centuries. The churches of Sainte Radegonde and Saint Hilaire-Le-Grand and the baptistry of Saint Jean are from the same period. The museum of the antiquities of the west contains mainly archaeological collections. The town was Christianized in the 3rd century. Nearby, King Clovis defeated the Visigoths (507) and Charles Martel defeated the Arabic invaders (732) in celebrated battles. Poitiers was several times in English hands, notably during the Hundred Years' War. One of the great battles of that war was fought near here, Edward the Black Prince defeating (Sept. 19, 1356) the French under John II, who with his son Philip the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was captured. The town suffered some damage in World War II. 48,546 (1946).

Poitiers, Battle of. See Tours, Battle of.

Poitiers, Diane de. See Diane de Poitiers.

Poitiers, Treaty of. See Bergerac, Treaty of.

Poitou (pwá.tó). Region and former government in France. The capital was Poitiers. It was bounded by Brittany and Anjou on the N, Touraine on the NE, Berry and Marche on the E, Angoumois, Saintonge, and Aunis on the S, and the Bay of Biscay on the W. It contained Haut-Poitou in the E and Bas-Poitou in the W, and corresponded nearly to the departments of Vendée, Deux-Sèvres, and Vienne. It was governed in the Middle Ages by counts. With Eleanor of Aquitaine it passed to France in 1137, and in 1152 to Henry of Anjou (who became Henry II of England in 1154). It was conquered by Philip II of France c1205, and retained by treaty in 1259; was ceded to Edward III of England in 1360, and recovered by Bertrand Du Guesclin a few years later; and was united finally to the French crown by Charles VII.

Pokanoket (pó.ka.nó'ket). See Wampanoag.

Pokomam (pó.kó.mám'). Tribe of Central American Indians, numbering some 50,000, in S Guatemala near the border of El Salvador. Their language, called Pokomam, belongs to the Quichoid group of the Mayan linguistic stock.

Pokomo (pó.kó.mó). [Also, Wapokomo.] Bantu-speaking people of E Africa, inhabiting the valley of the Tana River in E Kenya. Their population is estimated at 18,000 (by I. Schapera, Some Problems of Anthropological Research in Kenya Colony, 1949). They comprise 13 independent subgroups, the Korokoro, Malinkote, Malalulu, Zubaki, Ndura, Kinakomba, Gwano, and Ndera on the upper river, and the Mwina, Ngatana, Dzrunza, Buu, and Kalindi on the lower river. Each subgroup is ruled by a council of elders (Wazee) whose senior member is called Haju. They have exogamous patrilineal clans and age grades which are based on circumcision. They practice agriculture, and their staple food is rice. Sheep and goats are raised, and cattle are sometimes bought from the Galla.

Pokrovsk (pó.krófsk'). Former name of Engels, U.S.S.R. Pola (pó.lá). Italian name of Pula, Yugoslavia.

Polabians (pó.lá'bi.ánz). Slavic people formerly occupying the Baltic coasts of N Germany and the lower Elbe valley, who became completely Germanized. Their language, which belonged to the western branch of the Slavic family, has been extinct since the 18th century.

Polacco (pó.lák'kó). Giorgio. b. at Venice, Italy, April 12, 1875—. Italian operatic conductor who directed in Italy, Portugal, Poland, Russia, Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, and the U.S. He conducted (1911-12) the first English production of The Girl of the Golden West, and was known as an interpreter of Richard Wagner. He first appeared at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in 1912, and until 1917 was employed there as principal Italian conductor.

Pola de Lena (pó.lá dā lā'nā). See Lena.

Poland (pó'land). [Polish, Polska; German, Polen; Latin, Polonia; official name, Rzeczpospolita Polska.] Country in E central Europe, bounded on the N by the Baltic Sea, on the NE, E, and SE by the U.S.S.R., on the S and SW by Czechoslovakia, and on the W by Germany (Russian Zone of occupation). Capital, Warsaw; area, 121,131 sq. mi.; pop. 24,976,926 (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Poland is on all sides surrounded either by Russian territory or by countries allied to the U.S.S.R. The terrain on the frontiers is open except on the S border, where Poland is separated from Czechoslovakia by the various Silesian mountain ranges and by the Carpathian Mountains. The Bug River on the E (Curzon line) and the Oder (Odra) and Neisse (Nysa) rivers on the W cannot be considered natural barriers. The N part of Poland, bordering on the Baltic Sea and on the Kaliningrad oblast (region) of the U.S.S.R. (formerly East Prussia), is a region of numerous hills and lakes. The only extensive flat area here is the delta of the Vistula. The C portion of Poland, extending across the country from Germany to the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, is flatter, and quite level in many parts. Progressing S from this region, the S part of Poland becomes hillier, finally culminating in the Carpathian Mountains, which rise to over 8,000 ft. on the S border. Poland is drained by the Vistula and Oder rivers and their tributaries, which flow in broad valleys; the soil, apart from the sandy N and mountainous S border territories, is fertile and is largely under cultivation. The climate is continental in character, with warm summers and long, cold winters. Precipitation is adequate for farming, though somewhat less than in W Europe.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Until World War II, Poland was a predominantly agrarian country; now industrial and commercial pursuits are of increasing importance. Rye and potatoes are the most important products of Polish agriculture, followed by oats, wheat, barley, and sugar beets; other products, such as tobacco, flax, hemp, vegetables, and fruit, are of secondary importance. In 1947, 13.1 percent of the total area was in meadows and pastures; cattle, pigs, sheep, and horses are raised in considerable numbers. In the same year, 22.5 percent of the total area was in forests, with beech and oak forests prevailing in the mountainous S regions, pine and spruce forests elsewhere in the country. Poland is rich in mineral resources, containing in Upper Silesia the second largest coal-mining district in Europe; another coal-mining district is in Lower Silesia around Walbrzych (Waldenburg). Lignite, iron, zinc, and lead ores are also mined; there are salt mines and petroleum wells in Galicia. The industrial structure of Poland is in a period of transformation, partly because of the inclusion of former German territory, partly because of the changes brought about or to be brought about by economic planning, that is, by the Three-Year Plan ending in 1949 and by the Six-Year Plan extending to 1955; by the end of this period the formerly predominant light and consumer industries are to be associated with equally important heavy industries. Various food industries, lumber industries, cotton, woolen, and linen textile industries, shoe, leather, glass, and ceramics industries were the predominant Polish industries in the past; the Six-Year Plan contemplates a rate of growth 250 percent in the metal and machine industries, including motor vehicles, and a rate of growth of 200 percent in the chemical industries, compared with a rate of growth of merely 30, 50, and 100 percent in the woolen, cotton, and linen industries, respectively, and of 25 percent in the sugar industry. Also, the Six-Year Plan contemplates rectifying the uneven distribution of industries. In the provinces of Kraków, Katowice, Wrocław, Zielona Góra, and Łódź, comprising ab. 20 percent of the total territory of Poland, are now concentrated 71.5 percent of all industrial workers, while the provinces of Olsztyn, Białystok, and Lublin, comprising ab. 22 percent of Polish territory, employ only 1.7 percent of all industrial workers. At the same time Poland's highways and railroads are being improved, but at present are not equal either in number or in quality to comparable systems in most countries of C and W Europe. In Stettin (Szczecin), Danzig (Gdańsk), and Gdynia Poland now has first-rate harbors on the Baltic Sea, in addition to a number of smaller ports. Key industries have been nationalized or are under government control; according to the law of Jan. 3, 1946, all industrial undertakings employing over 50 workers are placed under the control of the central industrial boards; it is estimated that the private sector in Poland's industrial and commercial life now amounts to less than 10 percent of the total output. Agricultural cooperatives have been formed, but agricultural property is largely parceled out to small landholders; large private estates, formerly typical of Polish agriculture, have been confiscated.

History. The frontiers of Poland, like those of Germany, show wide variations throughout history. Poland became a nation in the 10th century by a union of a number of Slavic tribes in the region of the Vistula and Oder basins; the center was first Gniezno, later Kraków. Christianity was introduced in 966 via Bohemia; the bishopric of Poznań (Posen) was organized in 988 as a dependency of the German archbishopric of Magdeburg; the independent archbishopric of Gniezno was organized in 1000, in connection with the pilgrimage of the emperor Otto III to the tomb of the martyred Saint Adalbert, the missionary to the Slavs. Under the Piast dynasty (10th-14th centuries), Pomerania, Lusatia, and Moravia were first controlled by Poland, but were later lost to east German colonization. The Slavic dukes of Silesia and Pomerania attached themselves to the German emperor in the 12th century and settled their territories with German peasants and burghers. Conrad I of Mazovia in 1226 granted territories E of the Vistula to the Teutonic Order for protection against the incursions of the heathen Prussians; the Order subsequently Christianized and Germanized the area from Pomerania in the W to the borders of Lithuania in the E; thus Poland was deprived of her exit to the Baltic Sea, creating one of the most vexing problems of subsequent Polish history. At the same time Poland expanded toward the E, gaining vast areas E of the Neman (Niemen) and Bug rivers. This advance was interrupted by the Mongol invasion (1241), which drove as far west as Legnica in Silesia, before it was checked. In the reign of the last ruler of the Piast house, Casimir III, in the 14th century, the eastward move was resumed, and Poland acquired Volhynia, Podolia, and Galicia, while Silesia was abandoned to the Bohemian crown. German and Jewish settlers from the west were invited to settle the deserted country, found cities, and promote commerce. Poland reached the height of its power and prosperity in the 14th-16th centuries. The Teutonic Order was defeated in 1410; the disaffection of the subjects of the Order forced its leaders in the second peace of Toruń, or Thorn (1466), to cede its western territories while receiving East Prussia as a fief from the Polish crown. Poland was in this period open to the influences stemming from the Renaissance and Reformation movements, was the chief supplier of C and W Europe with grain and lumber, and was developing institutions of self-government and cultural pluralism.

However, on the extinction of the Jagiellon dynasty, the crown became elective (1572-1772), and special rights granted to the nobility resulted in progressive dispersal of power, exploitation of peasants and burghers, and permanent weakness of the central authority. The union of Lithuania and Poland (1569) had created a vast and overextended eastern empire which in the 17th and 18th centuries became subject to attacks by Sweden as well as Russia. At the same time a revolt of the Cossacks and peasants of the Ukraine against their Polish overlords shook the power of the empire from within. In the west, the great elector of Brandenburg received sovereignty over East Prussia (1657), thus creating the basis of the Prussian state. In the south, however, in Podolia and before Vienna, Poland was victorious against the Turks. Eventually, by the three partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, Poland was divided among Russia, Prussia, and Austria. Russia received the lion's share in the east, Prussia and Austria the older Polish lands to the west; the reforms of the diet of 1788-91 and the insurrection of 1793-94 were of no avail. In 1807, Napoleon I created out of a part of old Poland the Duchy of Warsaw, but in 1815, at the Congress of Vienna, Poland was partitioned once more, large parts of Austrian and Prussian Poland going to Russia; only the territory of Kraków remained independent until 1846. The regions E of the Neman and Bug rivers passed to Russia proper; the W parts of Russian Poland received a special status as "Congress Poland." During the 19th century, Poland was a submerged nation; insurrections in Russian Poland in 1830-31 and in 1863-64 were bloodily suppressed; all vestiges of former self-government abandoned; and the use of the Russian language imposed for all educational and administrative purposes. Smaller insurrections occurred in Austrian and Prussian Poland in 1848. In the Prussian Polish provinces the struggle was between German efforts at colonization on the one hand and Polish counter efforts at cultural revival on the other. The cultural and political position of the Poles was strongest in Austria; Galicia, after 1867, was administered by Polish governors, and a minister for Polish affairs was appointed to the central government at Vienna. Important to the Polish nationalist movement were the Polish émigré intellectuals centered in Paris, and later also the masses of Poles who had come to the U.S. Around the turn of the 19th and 20th centuries, the National-Democratic Party took a turn toward pan-Slavism and cooperation with Russia while the Polish Socialists remained anti-Russian in their orientation. In World War I, the former supported the Allies from the start while the Socialists, prior to 1917, tended toward the Central Powers. On Nov. 5, 1916, Germany and Austria proclaimed the independence of Poland but failed to fix boundaries and failed to gain popular support. On Nov. 9, 1918, the independence of Poland was proclaimed by a workers' and peasants' council at Lublin; on Nov. 10, 1918, Pilsudski assumed supreme power at Warsaw and was subsequently confirmed by the constituent assembly. On June 28, 1919, the treaty of Versailles recognized the independence of Poland. The plebiscites of 1921 brought half of Upper Silesia to Poland, but left territories with German majorities in West and East Prussia in German hands. Poland gained access to the Baltic Sea at Gdynia; Danzig became a free territory under the supervision of the League of Nations. The Curzon line was established as the frontier between Russia and Poland on Dec. 8, 1919; Pilsudski's attempt to gain further territories to the east by armed intervention led to a Russian counter-offensive which was checked only at the gates of Warsaw; the frontier was then fixed considerably to the east of the Curzon line. As a result, Poland included ab. 40 percent national minorities within its borders, Ukrainians, Germans, and Jews constituting the largest groups; there were also White Russians and Lithuanians. The protection of the national minorities which had been stipulated by the minority treaties agreed upon at Versailles (1919) was counteracted by nationalistic pressures. In 1926, a one-party system was established leading to the constitution of April 23, 1935, which strengthened the president's prerogatives and semi-fascist tendencies in the army as well as in the civilian administration. On Sept. 1, 1939, Germany invaded Poland, thereby precipitating World War II; on Sept. 17, 1939, Russian troops entered E

Poland; on Sept 28, 1939, the Germans and Russians established a line of demarcation between their respective zones of occupation. After the German attack on Russia, on June 22, 1941, the Germans took possession of all of Poland. The wartime German administration of Poland was far more ruthless than in any other German-occupied country in Europe. The country was systematically ruined, more than half of its industrial wealth destroyed, rural property confiscated in favor of German settlers, slave labor recruited, and concentration camps established. Genocide was practiced toward the Jews of Poland, who were systematically exterminated. Total casualties amounted to six to seven millions of people. The city of Warsaw received particularly cruel treatment. The Jewish population was herded into a ghetto, isolated, starved, and finally deported in groups to death camps, particularly that at Treblinka. On April 19, 1943, when the original population of ab. 350,000 had been reduced to 40,000, the uprising occurred which ended with total extermination of the Warsaw Jews. The Polish population offered sporadic resistance until the uprising under General Bor started on Aug. 1, 1944, which was likewise bloodily suppressed. The entire city of Warsaw was laid in ruins. The Russians marched into Warsaw on Jan. 17, 1945; by March, 1945, their armies, together with Polish contingents formed in the U.S.S.R., had occupied the entire country.

Present Government. On July 21, 1944, the Polish Committee of National Liberation was formed at Lublin and recognized by the U.S.S.R.; on Sept. 6, 1944, the committee decreed the agrarian reform under which estates of more than 50 hectares of arable land were divided among the peasants; in December, 1944, the committee was transformed into a provisional government; it was supplemented on June 28, 1945, by Polish leaders who had been living abroad as exiles since 1939; on Jan. 3, 1946, the bill of nationalization of the key branches of industry was passed by the national council; on Jan. 19, 1947, elections to the parliament took place; on Feb. 7, 1947, Boleslaw Bierut was elected (by parliament) president of the Republic of Poland; on Feb. 19, 1947, the provisional constitution was adopted; on Dec. 15, 1948, and Nov. 27, 1949, respectively, the United Workers' Party and the United Peasants' Party were formed, abolishing all other parties in the country. On March 20, 1950, the bill on formation of national councils as organs of the local administration was adopted. The country is now ruled after the model of the U.S.S.R., with which it is closely allied.

Culture. Education is free; elementary and secondary education up to the age of 18 is compulsory. There are 11 universities and 15 other academic institutions, such as technical, medical, agricultural, and other schools of a specialized type. The majority of the population is Roman Catholic by religion. The struggle between church and state and the present general trend of education is resulting, however, in the growth of groups of atheists and freethinkers. The Jews of Poland numbered more than three millions prior to World War II and, although impoverished, constituted the backbone of the Jewish people in Europe; after the war only ab. 300,000 of them were left, half of them refugees returning from Russia; the rest had been murdered during the period of German occupation. The majority of these have now emigrated to Israel, mostly via temporary D.P. camps in the American Zone of occupation in Germany; the remaining number, ab. 30,000, are concentrated in Silesia. Many Poles from the eastern territories have migrated west and are now resettled in the western provinces formerly belonging to Germany. The Germans, the erstwhile majority population in Silesia, Pomerania, East Prussia, and Danzig, either returned voluntarily to Germany or were expelled; this practically reestablishes the German-Slavic frontier of the early Middle Ages, wiping out the history of many centuries and constituting a Slavic victory of undreamed-of proportions.

Poland, Luke Potter. b. at Westford, Vt., Nov. 1, 1815; d. at Waterville, Vt., July 2, 1887. American politician and jurist. He became chief justice of the supreme court of Vermont in 1860, was a U.S. senator from Vermont (1865-67), and was a member of Congress (1867-75, 1883-85).

Poland, Partitions of. 1. Between Russia, Prussia, and Austria in 1772; agreed to by Poland in 1773. Prussia received the greater part of West Prussia and the Netze (Netze) district; Austria received Galicia and the county of Szepes (Zips) in Hungary; and Russia received everything E of the Dnieper and Dvina rivers. 2. Between Russia and Prussia in 1793. Prussia received nearly all of Posen (Poznań), and the W part of what was later known as Russian Poland. Russia received all the territory in the E provinces of Poland extending from Moldavia to Livonia. 3. Between Russia, Prussia, and Austria in 1795. Prussia took a large part of Russian Poland, including Warsaw; Austria received part of Russian Poland between the Bug and Vistula rivers and the Pilica (a branch of the Vistula); and Russia received all the remainder, situated E of the Neman (Niemen) and Bug rivers. 4. Between Germany and the U.S.S.R. in 1939. By the treaty signed by these two powers on September 28, Germany received the western provinces which had been under Prussian rule before 1914, and established a government general in C Poland. An area of approximately 75,000 sq. mi. in the eastern provinces was subsequently absorbed by the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic.

Poland, Russian. Name of the former ten Russian governments corresponding in area to the kingdom of Poland formed in 1815. Situated in the W part of Russia, it was bounded by Prussia on the N and W and Austria on the S, and consisted of the governments of Suwałki, Łomża, Siedlce, Lublin, Kielce, Radom, Warsaw, Płock, Kalisz, and Piotrków. The capital was at Warsaw.

Polaris (pō.lār'is). Double or triple star of the second magnitude, α Ursae Minoris, situated near the North Pole of the heavens; the polestar. It still serves as a guide in navigation. It is now about $1\frac{1}{4}$ degrees from the pole, very nearly in a line with the two stars in Ursa Major (α and β) which form the further edge of the so-called Big Dipper. About 5,000 years ago the polestar was α Draconis, and in about 12,000 it will be α Lyrae.

Polášek (pō.lā'shek; Czech, pō.lā'shek), Albin. b. at Frenštát, in Moravia, Feb. 14, 1879—r. American sculptor. Among his monuments and busts are the Theodore Thomas Memorial at Chicago and the portrait bust of Daniel Boone for the American Hall of Fame.

Polastron (pō.lās.trōn), Yolande Martine Gabrielle de. See Polignac, Duchesse de.

Polcyn Zdrój (pōl'ch'in zdrō'j). [German, Polzin.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Kozłanin, formerly in Pomerania, Germany, ab. 120 mi. E of Stettin; health resort. It was allotted to Poland in 1945. Pop. 6,920 (1939), 3,939 (1946).

Pole (pōl), Reginald. b. at Stourton Castle, Staffordshire, England, March 3, 1500; d. at London, Nov. 18, 1558. English Roman Catholic prelate, archbishop of Canterbury (1556-58). He was the son of Sir Richard Pole and Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, niece of Edward IV. He entered Magdalen College, Oxford, and at the age of 21 went to Padua to complete his education, returning in 1527. In 1532 he went again to Italy, and was created cardinal Dec. 22, 1536, though he was not a priest. He quarreled with Henry VIII over the matter of Henry's divorce from Catherine of Aragon; the king, angered by Reginald's threat of punishment, caused a bill of attainder to be passed against him and set a price on his head. His mother was thrown into the Tower and beheaded; his brother, Henry, also lost his head for the implied treason of discussing the matter with Reginald. Reginald made several attempts to obtain the intervention of Francis I of France and Charles V of the Holy Roman Empire, but was not successful. In 1545 he was a legate-president of the Council of Trent. On the death of Edward VI (1553) he was sent to England as papal legate to assist Queen Mary Tudor. Pole, who was only in deacon's orders, desired to marry the queen, and she for a time favored the project, but it was finally abandoned and she married Philip II of Spain. After the burning of Thomas Cranmer, Pole was ordained priest, and on March 22, 1556, was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury. His legation as papal ambassador to England was canceled by Paul IV. His death occurred on the day after that of the queen. He was largely responsible for the persecution of Protestants during her reign, but his quarrel with the fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Pope revolved about his refusal to burn heretics indiscriminately.

Pole, William. b. at Birmingham, England, April 22, 1814; d. at London, Dec. 30, 1900. English musician and civil engineer. He was professor of civil engineering (1859-67) at London University College. Author of The Story of Mozart's Requiem (1879) and The Philosophy of Music (1879) in addition to works on engineering and whist, besides other papers on music.

Pole, William. Original name of Poel, William.

Pole, William de la. [Titles, 4th Earl and 1st Duke of Suffolk.] Executed 1450. English politician, grandson of Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk. He was a prominent soldier under Henry V and in 1428 commanded the English armies in France. As a leading minister under Henry VI, he strove to reach some peaceful agreement with France. He negotiated the marriage (1445) of Henry and Margaret of Anjou and in many ways sought to soothe the troubled situation. But because of his exalted position as the king's principal adviser his enemies, especially those in the war party, sought constantly for a way to depose him. The chance came when a truce, for which England had given up what was to the war party a scandalous amount of territory, was broken and the war began again. He was accused of crimes against the good of the state and sentenced by the House of Commons to five years in exile. This failed to satisfy his enemies, and the ship that was carrying him into banishment was stopped off the coast at Dover and William was beheaded. His letter of farewell to his small son appears in the Paston Letters.

Polemon (pol'ē.mon). d. 273 B.C. Platonic philosopher of Athens, the successor (315 B.C.) of Xenoerates as president of the Academy.

Polen (pō'len). German name of Poland.

Polenz (pō'lents), Wilhelm von. [Also, Polentz.] b. at Ober-Cunewalde, Germany, Jan. 14, 1861; d. at Bautzen, Germany, Nov. 13, 1903. German novelist, at one time an officer in the German army. His writing career began with naturalistic sketches, while he lived among the Zola disciples at Berlin. Retiring then to his Saxon estate he produced several novels: Der Pfarrer von Brietendorf (1893), Der Büttnerbauer (1895), and Der Grabenhäuser (1896). Shortly before his death he visited the U.S. and wrote about it in Das Land der Zukunft (1903).

Polésine (pō'lē.sē.nā). District in Italy between the lower Adige and the lower Po rivers, chiefly comprising the province of Rovigo, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto. It is fertile alluvial land, including the Po delta, much of which was formerly swampland.

Polesk (pō'lyesk'). Russian name of Labiau.

Polexandre (pō'lēg.zāndr'). Romance by Marin Le Roy Gomberville. It was published in 1632, and enjoyed a high reputation. It was the earliest of the heroic romances, and seems to have been imitated by Gautier de Costes de la Calprenède and Georges de Scudéry.

Polgár (pō'lgār). [Also, Tiszapolgár.] Town in NE Hungary, near the Tisza River, between Debrecen and Miskolc. 15,167 (1941).

Polgar (pō'lgār), Alfred. b. at Vienna, Oct. 27, 1875.—Austrian short-short-story writer and essayist.

Policastro (pō'lē.kās'trō). [Ancient names, Pyxus, Buxentum.] Small seaport in Italy, in the province of Salerno, situated on the Gulf of Policastro (an arm of the Tyrrhenian Sea) ab. 60 mi. SE of Salerno.

Polignac (pō'lē.nyák). Armand Jules Marie Héraclius, Duc de. b. Jan. 17, 1771; d. March 2, 1847. French politician; son of the Duchesse de Polignac. He was imprisoned (1804-13) for complicity in the anti-Napoleonic conspiracy of Cadoudal.

Poligné, Duchesse de. [Maiden name, Yolande Martine Gabrielle de Polastron.] b. c1749; d. at Vienna, 1793. French noblewoman. She was an influential favorite of Marie Antoinette, and, having accumulated a huge fortune and become a principal object of the hatred of the growing revolutionary faction, was one of the first to emigrate in 1789.

Polignac, Jules Auguste Armand Marie, Prince de. b. May 14, 1780; d. at St.-Germain, France, March 29, 1847. French politician and diplomat; son of the Duchesse de Polignac. He was imprisoned for complicity in the conspiracy of Cadoudal in 1804, was ambassador to Great Britain (1823-29), and was minister of foreign affairs and premier (1829-30). He signed the ordinances of July 25, 1830 (leading to the revolution of July), and was imprisoned (1830-36).

Polignano a Mare (pō'lē.nyā'nō ā mā'rā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, situated on the Adriatic Sea between Bari and Brindisi, ab. 20 mi. SE of Bari. A picturesque town, it is a fishing port and a tourist center. Pop. of commune, 10,884 (1936); of town, 9,250 (1936).

Poligny (pō'lē.nyē). Town in E France, in the department of Jura, situated in a valley NE of Lons-le-Saunier. It is a resort and a center for excursions. The stalactite caves of Baume are nearby. 4,056 (1946).

Poling (pō'ling), Daniel Alfred. b. at Portland, Ore., Nov. 30, 1884.—American clergyman, author, and editor. He was the Prohibition Party's candidate for governor of Ohio in 1912, and was for many years prominent in the Prohibition movement. In 1922 he was called to the pastorate of the Marble Collegiate Church at New York, and he was pastor of the Baptist Temple at Philadelphia from 1936 to 1948. He has been president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, editor of the Christian Endeavor World and of the Christian Herald, director of the Presbyterian Ministers' Life Insurance Fund, and a trustee of Bucknell College. He is the author of syndicated newspaper columns under the headings Americans All and My Faith Today. His books include Mothers of Men (1914), Huts in Hell (1918), Learn to Live (1923), What Man Needs Most (1923), Youth and Life (1929), Opportunity Is Yours (1940), Your Daddy Did Not Die (1944), and Prayers for the Armed Forces (1950), as well as a number of novels.

Poliorettes (pō'lī.ōr.sē'tēz), Demetrius. See Demetrius I (of Macedonia).

Polish (pō'lish), Mrs. Character in Ben Jonson's comedy The Magnetic Lady.

Polish Corridor (pō'lish). Strip of territory belonging to the republic of Poland from 1919 to 1939, containing most of the lower course of the Vistula, but excluding Danzig. It provided Poland with access to the Baltic Sea, but only by cutting squarely across what was then still German territory, separating East Prussia from the remainder of Germany. Even though Germany had free transit privileges across the Corridor, it was never willingly accepted by most Germans, who contended that it constituted an artificial domain made up of territory which was rightfully German. Neither was it ever entirely satisfactory to the Poles, who considered it meager satisfaction at best of their demand for territory along the Baltic. The Corridor was established with little real ethnic justification (most of the people in its larger towns were then German, although the rural population was almost entirely Polish), but Poland did have a historical claim to the territory involved. During the period 1919-39, Poland built several railroad lines in the Corridor, and developed the port of Gdynia as an outlet to the sea. In March, 1939, Hitler demanded the return of part of the Corridor to Germany, a condition which the Polish government found unacceptable (in effect, Hitler was demanding a "corridor through the Corridor"; Polish acceptance of his demand would therefore have united German territory, but divided Poland into two parts). Friction over the matter did not abate during the summer, and was a nominal cause of the German invasion of Poland (Sept. 1, 1939), which marked the beginning of World War II in Europe. Length, ab. 90 mi.; width, 20 to 50 mi.

Polish Succession, War of the. War which broke out in 1733, owing to a disputed election to the throne of Poland. Stanislas Leszczyński was supported by France, Spain, and Sardinia, and Augustus III (Elector of Saxony) by Austria and Russia. It was ended by the peace of Vienna (1738), by which Augustus III was acknowledged; the fighting had ended in 1735.

Polistena (pō'lē.s'tā.nā). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria, in the province of Reggio di Calabria, ab. 32 mi. NE of Reggio di Calabria; agricultural market town. The Chiesa Madre dates from the 16th century. The town was largely destroyed by the earthquake of 1793. Pop. of commune, 11,000 (1936); of town, 9,690 (1936).

Politian (pō'lish'an). [Italian, Angelo Poliziano; Latin, Angelus Politianus; original name, Angelo Ambrogini.] b. at Montepulciano, Tuscany, July 14, 1454; d. at Florence, Sept. 24, 1494. Florentine humanist and poet. He became tutor to Lorenzo de' Medici's children when he was less than 20 years of age (after he had demonstrated his scholarship in a translation of part of the Iliad into Latin). Politian lectured at the University of Florence to such students as Johann Reuchlin and William Grocy on Latin and Greek literature. He was one of the principal poets of the Italian Renaissance; his Orfeo is one of the earliest plays in Italian, and his many works of lyric poetry show rare feeling for the music of the language. Politian also wrote original Latin poetry, such as the Manto, Rusticus, Nutricia, and Ambr; he translated from the Greek into Latin such writers as Herodian, Plato, Plutarch, and Epictetus. His critical and philological essays appeared in the Miscellanea (1489).

Politian: a Tragedy. Uncompleted blank-verse play by Edgar Allan Poe, not published in its entirety until 1923. Sections of it were published (1835-36) in the Southern Literary Messenger.

Political Action Committee. [Called the PAC.] In U.S. history, a body set up in 1944 under the sponsorship of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) for the purpose of lending labor support to national and local political candidates.

Political Consultative Conference. Body set up at Chungking (December, 1945) but meeting at Nanking (from January, 1946) to implement General George C. Marshall's efforts at mediation of the Kuomintang-Communist conflict. It included representatives of the Kuomintang, Democratic League, and Communist Party, and some nonpartisans. Its failure was followed by full-scale civil war, won by the Communists, who called (1949) a People's Political Consultative Conference which resulted in the establishment at Peiping of the People's Republic of China.

Politlick Would-be (pō'l'it'ik wūd'bē), Sir. See Would-be, Sir Politlick.

Politics. Treatise on the state, by Aristotle, embodying a history and analysis of existing forms of government and of previous political theories.

Politzer (pō'lit'sēr), Adam. b. at Alberti, Hungary, Oct. 1, 1835; d. at Vienna, Aug. 10, 1920. Austrian ear specialist. He was a pioneer of modern methods in the therapy, diagnosis, and surgery of the ear. He devised a method of opening up the blocked Eustachian tube and a method of illuminating the ear drum (1873). He also invented (1863) a bag for inflating the middle ear in treatment of diseases of the ear, described otosclerosis (1895), and described a test for deafness of one ear.

Polixène (pō'lek'sen). Assumed name of Madelon in Molière's comedy Les Précieuses ridicules.

Polixenes (pō'lik'sē'nēz). King of Bohemia in Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale.

Pollyros (pō'lyē'rōs). See Polygyros.

Poljica (pō'lyē-tsā). Town in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Hercegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Zetska, situated on the Trebinjica River, NE of Dubrovnik. It is a station on the railroad line from Dubrovnik to Mostar, 13,450 (1931).

Polk (pōk). Borough in W Pennsylvania, in Venango County; residential and mountain resort community. Settled c1798, it was incorporated in 1886, 4,004 (1950).

Polk. A former name of Chariton, Iowa.

Polk, Frank Lyon. b. at New York, Sept. 13, 1871; d. there, Feb. 7, 1943. American lawyer and government official. He was president (1908-09) of the New York Civil Service Commission and the city's corporation counsel (1914-15). He was counselor (1915-19) for the U.S. Department of State, headed the U.S. delegation at the peace conference (July-December, 1919) at Paris, and was acting U.S. secretary of state (1918-19).

Polk, James Knox. b. in Mecklenburg County, N.C., Nov. 2, 1795; d. at Nashville, Tenn., June 15, 1849. Eleventh President of the United States. When he was a child his father settled in Tennessee and became a prosperous farmer, but young James was too frail for farm work, and so was allowed to continue his education. He graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1818, after which he returned to Tennessee, studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1820, and set up in practice in the little city of Columbia. He came quickly to the fore in his profession and in politics, and served in the state legislature (1823-25) before beginning his service (1825-39) in the House of Representatives. A devoted follower (and protégé) of Andrew Jackson, hard-working, astute, and skillful in debate, Polk was the leader of the Democrats in the House by the time (1829) Jackson became president, and in that capacity did much to bring about enactment of the measures desired by Jackson to disestablish the Bank of the United States. In 1835 he was elected speaker of the House, holding the chair as long as he served in that body, displaying firmness and patience in the face of much abuse (including efforts to goad him into duels). His party drafted him as its candidate for governor of Tennessee in 1839; he was elected in that year, but defeated in 1841 and 1843. As the presidential campaign of 1844 approached, Jackson withdrew his support of Martin Van Buren because of the latter's opposition to the annexation of Texas, and in a deadlocked Democratic convention Jackson's influence brought about the nomination of Polk, an avowed annexationist. He was elected by a narrow margin over the Whig candidate, Henry Clay, and, with some months still to go to his 50th birthday, became the youngest President of the United States up to that time. He set his administration four objectives: reduction of the tariff, establishment of an independent U.S. treasury, settlement of the Oregon boundary dispute, and the acquisition of California; and it has been said that no other president ever so fully achieved his stated aims. To be sure, he compromised on the Democratic campaign demand for possession of the Oregon territory up to the border of Alaska; he proposed to the British instead the extension to the Pacific of the border between the U.S. and British America along the 49th parallel. When the British rejected the offer he withdrew it, and presently the British government itself made the same proposal, which Polk accepted. The acquisition of California, unfortunately, was not so peacefully accomplished. Texas having been annexed in 1845, and the U.S. having large monetary claims against Mexico, Polk proposed to forgive these claims and to pay Mexico 15 to 20 million dollars as the purchase price of California. The Mexican government refused to consider the proposal, and Polk was preparing to ask Congress to declare war on a basis of the unpaid claims, when on May 9, 1846, word was received of a clash between American and Mexican troops. This occurred in an area along the Texas-Mexico border which was claimed by both countries. Polk got his declaration of war when he informed Congress that Mexicans had invaded American territory and shed American blood on American soil; but many of his critics and opponents, including Congressman Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and even General Zachary Taylor, hinted that American forces had been sent into the disputed region to provoke just such trouble as occurred; and the belief was widespread that Polk was motivated by a purpose to add slaveholding states to the Union. The success of American arms forced Mexico, for the price she could have had for the sale of California, to cede not only that territory but a vast area of the Southwest besides, about a million square miles in all. The situation created by these events made Polk's reelection impossible, and in fact at the beginning of his term he had renounced any purpose to succeed himself. He died not much more than three months after leaving the White House.

Polk, Leonidas. b. at Raleigh, N.C., April 10, 1806; killed in action at Pine Mountain, near Marietta, Ga., June 14, 1864. American Protestant Episcopal bishop and Confederate general; son of William Polk. He attended the University of North Carolina and while a cadet at West Point, from which he graduated in 1827, became interested in religion. Resigning his army commission late in 1827, he became a student at the Virginia Theological Seminary, was ordained in April, 1830, and was raised to the priesthood in May, 1831. He served as assistant rector of Monumental Church at Richmond until ill health compelled him to resign. After making a European tour, he became (1838) missionary bishop of the Southwest, and in 1841 became bishop of Louisiana. He was active in founding the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., and laid that institution's cornerstone in 1860. After some hesitation, he accepted Jefferson Davis's offer of a commission as major general in the Confederate army, entering the forces on June 25, 1861. He fortified the Mississippi River and was succeeded by Albert Sidney Johnston on Sept. 15, 1861, after Polk's troops seized Columbus, Ky. He was assigned to the defense of the Mississippi River, defeated Grant in a minor engagement (Nov. 7, 1861) at Belmont, Mo., took part in the battle of Shiloh, and became (Oct. 10, 1862) a lieutenant general. He was criticized by Braxton Bragg for failing to execute orders at Chickamauga, and was later killed in action.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pinc; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pull; thēn; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Polk, Thomas. b. in Cumberland County, Md., c1732; d. at Charlotte, N.C., Jan. 26, 1794. American Revolutionary soldier and legislator. Named (1776) colonel of the 4th North Carolina continental regiment, he participated in the battle of Brandywine and was at Valley Forge. He was appointed (1780) commissary general of provisions for North Carolina as well as commissary of purchases for the Continental troops, and was elected (1786) to the Continental Congress.

Polk, William. b. near Charlotte, N.C., July 9, 1758; d. at Raleigh, N.C., Jan. 14, 1834. American Revolutionary soldier and politician; son of Thomas Polk. As a major (1776 et seq.) of the 9th regiment of the North Carolina line, he served at Charleston and joined (1777) Washington's army in New Jersey, took part in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and wintered at Valley Forge. As a regimental commander, he fought at Friday's Ferry, Orangeburg, Fort Mott, Etowah Springs, Watboo Creek, and Quinby. He was a representative (1785, 1786, 1787, 1790) in the North Carolina house of commons, and supervisor (1791-1808) of internal revenue for North Carolina.

Pollaiuolo (pól.lä.ywó'lo), Antonio. b. at Florence, Italy, 1429; d. at Rome, 1498. Italian painter and sculptor; uncle of Simone Pollaiuolo. He was originally a goldsmith, and of his work in this line we have examples in the bas-reliefs of the Feast of Herod and the Dance of Herodias's Daughter, which he made for the silver altar in the Opera del Duomo at Florence. As a niellist he ranks with the best of his time. He is said to have been the first painter who had a practical knowledge of anatomy from dissection. He was called to Rome c1480 by Pope Innocent VIII to make the bronze monument of his predecessor, Sixtus IV (finished 1493), one of the most original tombs of the time. He also made the tomb of Innocent VIII.

Pollaiuolo, Simone. [Called the Il Cronaca.] b. at Florence, Italy, 1457; d. 1508. Italian architect; nephew of Antonio Pollaiuolo. His surname Il Cronaca (meaning "the chronicler") stemmed from his habit of story-telling. On account of some misdemeanor (the details of which are now lost) he was obliged to flee from Florence to Rome, where he busied himself with study of the ancient monuments. Returning to Florence, he completed the Strozzi Palace, begun by Benedetto da Maiano. His masterpiece (1504) is the Church of San Bartolomeo at San Miniato, which was much admired by Michelangelo. He also built the great hall of the Palazzo Vecchio at Florence. He became a disciple of Savonarola.

Pollard (pól'ard), Alfred William. b. 1859; d. March 8, 1944. English bibliographer. He was assistant (1883-1909) in department of printed books in the British Museum, becoming assistant keeper (1909) and keeper (1917). He served as professor of English bibliography (1919-32) at King's College, University of London, and was a director (1930 et seq.) of the Early English Text Society. He was the author of Early Illustrated Books (1893), Italian Book Illustrations (1894), Fine Books (1912), and other works, and coauthor of Census of Shakespeare (1916). He contributed the chapter on Shakespeare's text to the Cambridge Companion to Shakespeare Studies (1934), was chief editor of Short Title Catalogue of Books Printed in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and of English Books Printed Abroad, 1475-1640 (1926), and edited the Globe Chaucer (1898).

Pollard, Charles Louis. b. at New York, March 29, 1872; d. Aug. 16, 1945. American botanist.

Pollard, Edward Alfred. b. in Nelson County, Va., Feb. 27, 1831; d. at Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 16, 1872. American journalist and historian, editor of the Richmond Examiner during the Civil War. His works include Southern History of the War (1866), The Lost Cause (1866), Lee and his Lieutenants (1867), Life of Jefferson Davis, with the Secret History of the Southern Confederacy (1869), and others.

Pollen (pól'en), Arthur Joseph Hungerford. b. 1866; d. Jan. 28, 1937. English expert in naval gunnery. He invented the "AC" automatic fire-control system which revolutionized naval gunnery during World War I.

Pollentia (pól'en.shi.a). In ancient geography, a place in Italy, ab. 28 mi. S of Turin; the modern village on the site is Pollenza. Here in 402 or 403 a battle was fought between the Romans under Stilicho and the Visigoths under Alaric. This is generally said to have been a decisive Roman victory, but according to Cassiodorus and Jordanes the Goths put the Roman army to flight.

Pollenza (pól'en.tsa). See under Pollentia.

Pollio (pól'ió), Gaius Asinius. b. c76 B.C.; d. at Tusculum, Italy, 5 A.D. Roman politician, military commander, author, and patron of literature; an adherent of Julius Caesar. He was consul in 40 B.C., and was governor of Transpadane Gaul for Mark Antony. He defeated the Parthians in Illyria in 39. He was a patron of Vergil and Horace. Only fragments of his works survive.

Pollo (pól'yó), Anastasio el. Pseudonym of del Campo, Estanislao.

Pollock (pól'ok), Channing. b. at Washington, D.C., March 4, 1880; d. at Shoreham, N.Y., Aug. 17, 1946. American critic, playwright, novelist, and essayist. He was a drama critic (1905-19) for Ainslee's, The Smart Set, and The Green Book. His plays include A Game of Hearts (1900), The Sign on the Door (1919), The Fool (1922), The Enemy (1925), Mr. Moneybags (1928), The House Beautiful (1931), and Stranglehold (1932). Among his novels are Behold the Man (1900) and The Synthetic Gentleman (1934). He was also the author of The Adventures of a Happy Man (1939) and Guide Posts in Chaos (1942).

Pollock, Sir Charles Edward. b. Oct. 31, 1823; d. at Putney (now part of London), Nov. 21, 1897. English judge; son of Sir Jonathan Frederick Pollock and brother of Sir William Frederick Pollock. He was a baron of the exchequer (1873) and a justice of the high court (1875-79).

Pollock, Sir Frederick. b. at London, Dec. 10, 1845; d. there, Jan. 18, 1937. English jurist and philosophical writer; son of Sir William Frederick Pollock. He was professor of jurisprudence in University College, London (1882-83), of common law in the Inns of Court (1884-90), and of jurisprudence in the University of Oxford (1883-1903). He was appointed (1914) judge of the Cinque Ports admiralty court. Author of Principles of Contract (1876), Digest of the Law of Partnership (1877), Spinoza (1880), The Land Laws (1882), Introduction to the History of the Science of Politics (1890), and others.

Pollock, Sir George. b. at Westminster, London, June 4, 1786; d. Oct. 6, 1872. English general. He commanded the British army in Afghanistan in 1842, and entered Kabul in September, after having fought his way through the Khyber Pass.

Pollock, Sir John. b. at London, Dec. 26, 1878—. English dramatist and historian; son of Sir Frederick Pollock. He was admitted (1906) to the bar, and was Red Cross commissioner (1915-18) in Russia. His plays include The Invention of Dr. Metzler (1905), Rosamond (1910), Mlle. Diana (1913), The Luck King (1921), The Vulture (1931), and The King's Arms (1939). He was a translator of Henrik Ibsen's and Eugène Brieux's plays, and adapted Tolstoy's Anna Karenina for the English stage. Author also of The Popish Plot (1903), The Bolshevik Adventure (1919), Anatole France Himself (1925), Anatole France Abroad (1927), and The Everlasting Bonfire (1940).

Pollock, Sir Jonathan Frederick. b. Sept. 23, 1783; d. Aug. 23, 1870. English jurist, attorney general (1834-35, 1841-44).

Pollock, Sir William Frederick. b. April 13, 1815; d. Dec. 24, 1888. English barrister, remembered chiefly as a member of the little society whose debates are celebrated in Alfred, Lord Tennyson's In Memoriam; son of Sir Jonathan Frederick Pollock and brother of Sir Charles Edward Pollock. He was appointed a master of the court of exchequer (1846) and to the ancient office of queen's remembrancer (1874).

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895); 158 U.S. 601 (1895). [Also called the "Income Tax Cases."] Two U.S. Supreme Court decisions involving the constitutionality of the income tax provisions of the Wilson-Gorman Tariff of 1894. The majority opinion in the first case held that the tax, since it was a direct one, was in violation of the constitutional provision requiring apportionment among the states according to population. It also invalidated the tax upon income from state and municipal bonds. The court, however, remained silent upon the constitutionality of the entire income tax statute. After the case was reargued, all of the income tax provisions of the act were declared unconstitutional. Popular resentment aroused by the decision led to agitation resulting in the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment (1913).

Pollock (pŏl'ŏk), Robert. b. at Moorhouse, Renfrewshire, Scotland, 1798; d. at Southampton, England, Sept. 18, 1827. Scottish religious poet. He was educated at Glasgow University. His chief work, The Course of Time, was published in 1827, six months before his death.

Poll Sweedlepipe (pŏl swē'dl.pīp). See Sweedlepipe, Paul (or Poll).

Pollux (pŏl'uks). [Also, Polydeuces.] In Greek mythology, the twin brother of Castor, one of the Dioscuri.

Pollux. [Also, Polydeuces.] Orange star of magnitude 1.2 (β Geminorum).

Polly (pŏl'i). Ballad-opera by John Gay. It is a sequel to The Beggar's Opera. It was ready for the stage in 1728, but was suppressed by the government, some members of which had been satirized in the first opera. Gay published it, however, in 1729.

Polly, Alfred. Hero of H. G. Wells's novel The History of Mr. Polly (1910).

Polly, Aunt. Tom Sawyer's strait-laced but affectionate aunt in The Adventures of Tom Sawyer (1876) and The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (1884), by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain.

Polyanna (pŏl.i.ana). Eternally optimistic heroine of several of the novels of Eleanor Porter. She is usually thought of as a child, but actually the author took her through marriage (without any basic change of personality) in later books.

Polly Honeycombe (hun'ikōm). English farce, the first play written by George Colman the elder. It was first played in 1760, and was a satire mocking what Colman considered to be the addled readers of sentimental novels (such works, on the pattern of Pamela, then attracted the almost feverish devotion of a considerable body of readers).

Polly Peachum (pē'chum). See under Peachum.

Polo (pŏl'ŏ), Marco. b. at Venice, Italy, c1254; d. there, c1324. Venetian traveler. His father and uncle left Constantinople for the Crimea on a commercial enterprise in 1260. Their business eventually brought them to Bukhara, where they fell in with some envoys of Kublai Khan. They were persuaded to accompany the envoys to Kublai, whom they found either at Cambaluc (Peiping) or at Shangtu, north of the Great Wall. Kublai received them well, and sent them as his envoys to the Pope with a request for one hundred educated men to instruct his subjects in Christianity and in the liberal arts. The brothers arrived at Acre in 1269. They obtained from Gregory X, who had just been elected, two Dominicans who turned back at an early stage of the return journey. The brothers left Acre on the journey in 1271, accompanied by Marco, then 17 years of age. They traveled through Khurasan, then the Oxus to the Pamir, by Kashgar, Yarkand, and Khotan, to Lob Nor, and across the great desert of Gobi to Tangut, thence to Shangtu, where they found Kublai Khan in 1275. They were kindly received, and retained in the public service. Marco rose rapidly in the emperor's favor, and was employed in important missions in various parts of the empire. With his father and uncle, Marco left China in 1292, as escorts of a Mongol bride for the Khan of Persia, and after many adventures reached Venice by way of Sumatra, India, and Persia in 1295. In 1298 Marco was taken prisoner in the battle of Curzola between the Venetians and the Genoese. He was detained for a year at Genoa. Here he dictated in the French language to a fellow captive, Rusticiano of Pisa, an account of his adventures, which ultimately obtained a wide popularity, inasmuch as his report was virtually the only source of material in Europe on central Asia. Much that is apparently fantastic traveler's tales appears in the account, but basically the book is factual.

Pollock (pŏl'ŏtsk). See Polotsk.

Polonia (pŏl'ŏ.ni.a). Latin name of Poland.

Polonius (pŏl'ŏ.ni.us). In Shakespeare's Hamlet, the father of Ophelia, and the king's chamberlain.

Polonus (pŏl'ŏ.nus), Martinus. See Martin of Tropau.

Polotsk (pŏl'ŏtsk). [Also, Polock.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 130 mi. N of Minsk, on the (western) Dvina, ab. 59 mi. NW of Vitebsk; sawmills; food-processing industries. It was stormed by the French in 1812. Pop. ab. 25,300 (1933).

Polotsk, Principality of. Medieval principality of Russia, in the basin of the Dvina River.

Polovtsy (pŏl'ŏf.tsi). [Also: Kuman, Polovtsi (pŏl'ŏf.tsi).] Turkic peoples who invaded S Russia in the 11th to 13th centuries A.D. They comprised many independent tribes which extended by 1080 from the Volga to the Danube. Badly defeated by the Kievan Russians in 1103-20, as recounted in the epic Tale of the Host of Igor, the Polovtsy then streamed into the Balkans. They set up a short-lived dynasty in Bulgaria and also occupied much of Hungary. The Polovtsy were overwhelmed by the Mongol invasions.

Polska (pŏl'skă). Polish name of Poland.

Poltava (pŏl'tă.va). [Also, Pultowa.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 75 mi. W of Kharkov; rail junction; meat-packing, flour-milling, canning, leather, and machine construction industries. Near Poltava was fought a decisive battle between Peter the Great and Charles XII of Sweden, in which the latter was defeated (1709). During World War II the city was occupied by German forces from September, 1941, to Sept. 23, 1943. Pop. 130,305 (1938).

Poltoratsk (pŏl'tŏ.rătsk'). Former name of Ashkhabad.

Polwarth (pŏl'wă.rth), Baron. A title of Hume or Home, Sir Patrick.

Polybe (pŏl.īb). Pseudonym of Reinach, Joseph.

Polybius (pŏl'ī.bi.us). b. at Megalopolis, Arcadia, Greece, c204 B.C.; d. c122 B.C. Greek historian. He was in the service of the Achaean League, was taken as a political prisoner to Rome c169, and became a friend of the younger Scipio Africanus. He was released in 151, and was later engaged in settling the affairs of Achaia. He went to Egypt in 181, with his father and Aratus, as an ambassador of the Achaean League. He was the author of a history of Rome from 220 to 146 B.C. in 40 books, five of which, with fragments of others, have been preserved; it is an attempt at accurate re-creation of history, with occasional excursions into such subjects as the art of warfare, the Roman constitution, and the philosophy of history.

Polycarp (pŏl'i.kărp). b. before 69 A.D.; burned at Smyrna, c155. Christian martyr, bishop of Smyrna; author of an extant epistle to the Philippians. Little is actually known of his life: he appears to have been a pupil of the apostle John and the teacher of Irenaeus. He is said to have traveled to Rome about 150 A.D. to discuss the date of Easter and, according to some accounts, was killed during the persecution of the Christians there. The accepted story is that he was burned at the stake in the arena at Smyrna during a period of persecution there.

Polychronicon (pŏl.i.kron'ī.kon). Chronicle of universal history, by Ranulf Higden, written by him to 1342; a continuation was added to the year 1413. It begins with a sketch of the history of the known world, with lives of Adam, Abraham, and other Biblical characters, and brings its entries down to the time of writing. The original section (to 1342) was translated from Latin into English in 1387 by John de Trevisa.

Polycletus (pŏl.i.klēt'us) or Polycletus (-klī'tus). [Sometimes called Polycletus of Sicyon (sīsh'ŏn, sī's-).] fl. in the last part of the 5th century B.C. Greek sculptor and architect. He is associated with the high development of abstract proportion which characterizes Greek sculpture.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lûte, pûll; ęn, then; đ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

He seems to have realized the athletic type or ideal to the entire satisfaction of the Greek world, and made a figure embodying the accepted proportions, which was called "the canon." This canon is supposed to have been a simple figure carrying a spear (doryphoros), described by Pliny and properly represented by several replicas. The best of these was found at Pompeii, and is in the museum at Naples. Another statue of almost equal importance is mentioned by Pliny, and called diodomenos (i.e., an athlete binding a fillet about his head). The best replica is in the British Museum. The most important monumental work of Polyclctus was the chryselephantine Hera at Argos, represented by the so-called Ludovisi Juno. Polyclctus the Younger. fl. c400 B.C. Greek sculptor of Argos.

Polycrates (pōlik'rātēz). Put to death, c522 B.C. Tyrant of Samos from c536 (or 532) to 522. He was a patron of literature and art. He built a large fleet and soon controlled shipping in the eastern Mediterranean, to the annoyance of the Persians. According to Herodotus, Polycrates suggested an alliance with Amasis of Egypt, but Amasis refused on the ground that Polycrates had been too fortunate up to that time and was therefore bound to fall through the envy of the gods. Legend has it that to emphasize his point, Amasis advised Polycrates to attempt to get rid of a valuable possession; Polycrates threw a ring into the sea, only to have it returned within a few days in a fish presented to him by a fisherman. Eventually, Polycrates was trapped into coming to the mainland by Oroetes, satrap of Lydia, and was crucified at Magnesia for his piracies.

Polydeuces (pōli.dō'sēz). See Pollux.

Polydore (pōli.dōr). Name assumed by Guiderius in Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Polydore. In Thomas Otway's tragedy The Orphan, the brother of Castalio.

Polydorus (pōli.dō'rus). Rhodian sculptor, associate of Agesander in carving the Laocöon group.

Polydorus. In Greek legend, the youngest son of Priam and Heuba. He was killed by Achilles when Troy fell. In another legend, he was sent to Polyestor, a king of Thrace, bearing much gold; and Polyestor murdered him for the gold.

Polyeucte (pōli.yēkt). Play by Pierre Corneille, issued in 1641 or 1642. It is frequently called his greatest work. Polyeucte, the hero, is deeply in love with his wife, Pauline, but will not recant his Christian vows in order to remain with her. His death as a martyr converts her to Christianity.

Polyeucte. Opera in five acts, by Charles Gounod, first produced at Paris on Oct. 7, 1878. The libretto, by Paul Jules Barbier and Michel Carré, is based on Pierre Corneille's drama.

Polygnotus (pōli.gnō'tus). b. on the island of Thasos; fl. in the middle of the 5th century B.C. Greek painter. He was identified with Cimon in the reconstruction of Athens, and seems to have had about him a large school or force of assistants. Polygnotus introduced transparent draperies and many realistic effects.

Polygyros (pōli.j'i.ros; Greek, pōl'g'yē.rōs). [Also, Polyiros.] Town in N Greece, in S Macedonia, the capital of the nomos (department) of Chalcidice, ab. 30 mi. SE of Salonika. 4,243 (1941).

Polyhymnia (pōli.him'ni.a). [Also, Polyimnia (pōlim'ni.a).] In Greek mythology, the Muse of the sublime hymn and also of pantomime and the religious dance. In art she is usually represented in a meditative attitude, heavily draped, and without any attribute.

Polyhymnia or Polymnia (pōlim'ni.a). Asteroid (No. 33) discovered by Jean Chacornac at Paris, Oct. 28, 1854.

Polynesia (pōli.nē'zhā, -shā). Large area in the C Pacific Ocean, sparsely dotted with islands. It is approximately triangular, bounded by a line from Hawaii on the N (near the Tropic of Cancer) to Easter Island on the E; by another from Easter Island to New Zealand on the S; and by a third from New Zealand back to Hawaii, forming a W boundary. The international date line or 180th parallel of longitude is sometimes given as the W boundary. No boundary in this direction can be exact, for what marks off Polynesia from other islands in the Pacific is the race and culture of the native inhabitants; and in the area W of the date line and S of the equator, native peoples and cultures are mixed. A few small islands inhabited by Polynesians lie farther west, in regions predominantly Melanesian or Micronesian; while one group of large islands, Fiji, is mainly Polynesian in parts, although a Melanesian element underlies the local mixtures and apparently dominates some localities. The largest and most populous groups of islands in Polynesia are New Zealand, Hawaii, the Society Islands (including Tahiti), Samoa, and Tonga. It is now established that the native Easter Islanders have always been Polynesians, notwithstanding speculations about a mysterious vanished race. Polynesia is remote from any continent and, as the anthropologist Ralph Linton has pointed out, was the last large habitable region of the earth to be occupied by man. Reaching it involved crossing wider stretches of open sea than even the Vikings ever braved. On their long voyages the Polynesians traveled mainly in double canoes, more capacious and somewhat steadier than the outrigger canoes used for shorter journeys. Attempts to retrace the Polynesian voyages of settlement have fascinated anthropologists and amateurs since the time of first European exploration. Almost all possible starting points have been suggested, as well as some impossible ones, notably hypothetical islands or continents since sunk in the sea. There is no geological or oceanographic evidence for the submergence of large bodies of land in the Pacific since man appeared on earth. The sum of competent opinion now holds that the Polynesians set out from SE Asia by way of the neighboring Indonesian islands. What route or routes they followed after that is not certain, but there is good evidence that both Melanesian and Micronesian islands were stepping stones for some of the canoes that kept pushing eastward through the centuries. Racially the Polynesians are regarded as a mixture of all three of the great stocks into which most of mankind can be divided. The most widely accepted account postulates that a people of Caucasoid type began the long eastward journey perhaps from as far west as India; that on their way they met and interbred with an unspecialized Mongoloid or Proto-Malay people; and later, among islands inhabited by Oceanic Negroes, underwent further mixture with that strain. At any rate, the relatively high degree of uniformity in physical type throughout Polynesia suggests that whatever mixing went into the formation of this type preceded arrival in Polynesia. Polynesians are a tall, brown-skinned people with wavy, but not frizzy, hair; they are famous for their good looks. The Polynesians brought with them a language classified as a branch of the Malayo-Polynesian linguistic family. Local variations have developed in Polynesia, but all are basically so similar that they amount to dialects of one language. Relationship with Melanesian, Micronesian, and Indonesian languages is more remote, but still well established. Some linguists maintain that a connection can be traced still further, with the Mon and Khmer languages of India. The original settlers in Polynesia were masters of both of the great inventions (domestication of plants and of animals) that enable human beings to produce food rather than merely gather it. The islands of Polynesia, for all their charm of scenery and climate, were not hospitable in the matter of foodstuffs, and the Polynesians had to bring their food along: coconut, breadfruit, taro, yam, banana, sugar cane, arrowroot, and turmeric. They brought, too, the paper mulberry, useful for making bark cloth. Three domestic animals (pig, dog, and fowl) were also introduced by the Polynesians. One important food plant, the sweet potato, is native to tropical America, but pre-European in parts of Polynesia; it seems to establish early contact with America. As evidence for the place of origin of the islanders, however, it is far outweighed by the other plants listed, as well as by linguistic and other cultural relationships which point toward Indonesia and ultimately Asia. The fundamental Polynesian social groups are made up of individuals who can trace descent to a common ancestor. Descent is reckoned primarily in the male line, but can be counted through females either to bridge a gap or to gain status. Seniority, based on order of birth, confers rank, and the senior individuals in kin groups typically inherit chiefly titles. In some areas descent groups were mixed by conquest and migration, so that the inhabitants of the districts ruled by particular chiefs were not all akin. Rank was reinforced by religion. Chiefly genealogies went back to the gods; indeed, the most important gods were deified ancestors. From them, according to the degree of seniority, their descendants inherited divine power called mana. Mana is impersonal, and may also attach to places, occasions, words; in sum, to almost any manifestation. Mana is dangerous unless rightly approached; thus whatever has mana is tapu, that is, forbidden except under specified circumstances. On the concept of tapu, or taboo, was built up the system of rules and sanctions that regulate conduct in Polynesia. In Hawaii and, to a somewhat lesser extent, in New Zealand, Polynesian culture has been nearly submerged under the influence of recent immigration from Europe and North America. In small and remote islands much of it persists to this day. Christianity has supplanted Polynesian religion, except for remnants of belief, everywhere except in Rennell and Bellona islands, S of the Solomons, and partly in Tikopia, another western outlier. Foreign governments, mainly British, French, and American, have also assumed political power except in Tonga, the sole remaining Polynesian kingdom. Even there the British consul acts as adviser to the queen in foreign relations. In many of the tropical islands, however, local affairs are still in the hands of the chiefs.

Polynices (pol.i.ni'sēs). In Greek legend, a son of Oedipus and Jocasta, and brother of Eteocles. Polynices and Eteocles agreed to rule Thebes year and year about, but Eteocles refused to descend from the throne at the end of his year. Polynices thereupon sought the aid of Adrastus, and the famous expedition of the Seven against Thebes was made to restore him. The two brothers killed each other in single combat.

Polyolbion (pol.i.ol'bi.on). [Also, Poly-Olbion.] Poem by Michael Drayton, published 1613-22. His longest poem, it consists of 30 "songs" filled with antiquarian knowledge. Its full title is not without interest: Poly-Olbion. A Chorographical Description of All the Tracts, Rivers, Mountains, Forests, and Other Parts of This Renowned Isle of Great Britain, With Intermixture of the Most Remarkable Stories, Antiquities, Wonders, Rarities, Pleasures, and Commodities of the Same.

Polyphemus (pol.i.fē'mus). In Greek legend, a one-eyed giant, the chief of the Cyclopes, and son of Poseidon, celebrated in the Odyssey. He kept Odysseus and several of his companions prisoners in his cave and devoured one a day, until the clever Odysseus made him drunk, put out his one eye, and managed to escape with the remnant of his companions by hiding himself and them under the bellies of the ogre's sheep as they passed out of the cave to graze.

Polysperchon (pol.i.spēr'kon). d. after 303 B.C. Macedonian general in the service of Alexander the Great. He succeeded Antipater as regent in 319. He was superseded by Cassander, son of Antipater.

Polytechnique (po.lē.tek.nēk), École. See École Polytechnique.

Polyxena (po.li.k'sē.nā). In Greek legend, daughter of Priam and Hecuba, and bride of Achilles. At her marriage to Achilles, the latter was slain by Paris, and the Greeks later sacrificed her to appease his shade. In another story, Polyxena fell in love with the hero Achilles, ran away from Troy to join him in the Greek camp, and killed herself at his death. She was the subject of a lost tragedy by Sophocles, and of the tragedies Hecuba by Euripides and Troades by Seneca. She is not mentioned by Homer.

Polyxena. Tragedy by J. B. Niccolini, Florentine writer, in the style of Count Vittorio Alfieri, produced in 1811.

Polzin (pōl'zin). German name of Polczyn Zdrój.

Pomare (pō.mā'ra). fl. 1769; d. 1803. First ruler of all Tahiti and, nominally, of all the Society Islands and the Tuamotus. Born about the middle of the 18th century, he traced descent from chiefs of several islands, including the lowly Tuamotus. When Captain Cook first visited Tahiti in 1769, Pomare was chief only of a district of Tahiti, and was outranked by at least one other chief. His rise to power was due to skill in politics more than prowess in war, though he was physically imposing, being six feet four inches tall. He owed much to the help of the British, especially the mutineers of the Bounty. He was declared ruler of all Tahiti and Moorea in 1793, and later acquired nominal authority over the rest of the Society group and the Tuamotus.

Pomaria (pō.mā'ri.a). Latin name of Tlemcen.

Pombal (pōm.bāl'). [Also, Pompal.] Town and concelho (commune) in C Portugal, in the province of Beira Litoral and district of Leiria, ab. 15 mi. NE of Leiria: wine and cork trade. Pop. of concelho, 32,699 (1940); of town, 8,503 (1940).

Pombal, Marquis de. [Title of S Sebastião José de Carvalho e Mello.] b. at Soure, near Coimbra, May 13, 1699; d. at Pombal, May 8, 1782. Portuguese statesman. After a somewhat dissolute youth, he was sent as ambassador to London (1739), and then to Vienna (1745). In 1749 he became foreign secretary and minister of war. After the accession of King Joseph (1750), he became, for the duration of the reign, the virtual ruler of Portugal. His policy was one of ruthless aggrandizement of the royal power, and resulted in his making many enemies. He greatly expanded Portuguese industry, though his placing of the wine industry under government monopoly caused serious civil disturbances at Oporto; he developed the financial system and the military, fostered the colonial empire in the East and in Brazil, and supported commerce and agriculture; his aim was consistently to make of Portugal an economically independent and self-sufficient state. He came into conflict with the Church over the power of the Inquisition, and eventually expelled the Jesuits from all Portuguese territory. After the Lisbon earthquake of 1755, he followed a policy of "Bury the dead and feed the living" (a saying sometimes ascribed to him); he rebuilt Lisbon as a more beautiful city. After his exposure of a plot against the king's life in 1759, he held complete sway. Joseph's death in 1777 was the signal for Pombal's enemies to attack him; he was dismissed by Maria I and forbidden to come within 20 leagues of the court.

Pomerania (pom.e.rā'n.i.a). [German, Pommern.] Region and former province of Prussia, with its capital at Stettin. It was bounded by the Baltic Sea on the N, West Prussia on the E, West Prussia, Brandenburg, and Mecklenburg on the S, and Mecklenburg on the W. The surface is nearly level. The people are mostly engaged in agriculture, the rearing of livestock, and coasting and foreign trade. There were three government districts (Stettin, Stralsund, and Köslin); further Pomerania (Hinterpommern), E of the Oder River, and Hither Pomerania (Vorpommern), W of the Oder River, are historical divisions. The early inhabitants were Celts, followed by Wends. Christianity was introduced in the 12th century, and the territory attracted considerable numbers of German settlers. The E part fell in 1648 to Brandenburg, the W part to Sweden. In 1720 Sweden ceded to Prussia the territory E of the Peene River, and the remainder of Swedish Pomerania was ceded to Prussia in 1815. The entire area has been under Polish control since the end of World War II. Area, 11,631 sq. mi.

Pomeranian Haff (pom.e.rā'n.i.ən hāf). See Stettiner Haff.

Pomeranus (pom.e.rā'nus), Doctor. See Bugenhagen, Johann.

Pomerene (pom'e.rēn), Atlee. b. at Berlin, Ohio, Dec. 6, 1863; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 12, 1937. American lawyer and politician. He was elected (1910) lieutenant governor of Ohio, and served as U.S. senator (1911-23). He was cosponsor (1918) of the Webb-Pomerene Act allowing American firms engaged in foreign trade to combine their foreign activities. He was named (1924) one of two investigating counsel in the "Teapot Dome" oil scandal. He served (1932-33) as chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Pomeroy (pom'e.roi). Village in SE Ohio, county seat of Meigs County, on the Ohio River ab. 82 mi. SE of Columbus, in a coal and salt mining area: manufactures of metal rigs, reels, chemicals, lumber, and oil-well supplies, 3,656 (1950).

Pomeroy, John Norton. b. at Rochester, N.Y., April 12, 1828; d. Feb. 15, 1885. American educator and writer on law. He was the founder and first editor of the West Coast Reporter.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; π, then; ſ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Pomeroy, Seth. b. at Northampton, Mass., May 20, 1706; d. at Peekskill, N.Y., Feb. 19, 1777. American colonial and Revolutionary soldier. He was by trade a gunsmith, and entered the colonial military service early in life. He was a major in the Massachusetts forces at the capture of Louisburg in 1745, and in 1755 was a lieutenant colonel under Ephraim Williams, at whose death he succeeded to the command of the regiment and gained a victory over the French under Baron Ludwig August Dieckau in the battle of Lake George. From 1774 to 1775 he served as a delegate to the Massachusetts provincial congress, by which he was elected a brigadier general in 1775. He served as a volunteer private in the Battle of Bunker Hill in 1775, and a few days later was named by Congress senior brigadier general, but declined the appointment. In 1776 he led a force of militia to the relief of the army under Washington.

Pomfret (pum'fret, pom'-). Colloquial and usual name of Pontefract, England.

Pomfret, Countess of. Title of Fermor, Henrietta Louisa.

Pomfret, John. b. 1667; d. in November, 1702. English poet, rector of Maulden in Bedfordshire. He was the author of The Choice or Wish: A Poem written by a Person of Quality (1700), a poem very popular in the 18th century.

Pomigliano d'Arco (pòm.mē.lyā nō dār'kō). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria, in the province of Napoli, situated near the N slope of Mount Vesuvius, NE of Naples: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 13,907 (1936); of town, 11,505 (1936).

Pommer (pom'ēr). Doctor. See Bugenhausen, Johann.
Pommer, Gustav Adolf. b. at Graz, Austria, June 27, 1851; d. at Innsbruck, Austria, Dec. 29, 1935. Austrian pathologist. He made important studies on the pathological histology of bones and joints, chiefly on osteoarthritis deformans and (1920) on bone cysts.

Pommern (pom'ēr'n). German name of Pomerania.

Pommersches Haf (pom'ēr.shes häf). See Stettiner Haf.

Pomo (pō'mō). [Also, Kulanapa.] Collective term for four North American Indian subtribes, the languages of which form a family of the same name. They once inhabited the C coast and adjacent interior of California N of San Francisco Bay. Several remnant groups are still found in communities in the area.

Pomoerium (pō.mē'ri.um). In ancient Rome, an area surrounding the earliest walls of Roma Quadrata, whose boundary was traced, in accordance with a religious ceremony of Etruscan origin the ritual of which is now forgotten, by a plow drawn by a cow and a bull. The area of the Pomoerium was held sacred, and was kept free of dwellings.

Pomona (pō.mō'nā). See also Mainland, Orkney Islands.

Pomona. City in S California, in Los Angeles County, ab. 25 mi. E of Los Angeles: chief trade center and shipping point for an orange-growing area. 35,405 (1950).

Pomona. In Roman mythology, the protecting goddess of fruit trees.

Pomona. Asteroid (No. 32) discovered by Goldschmidt at Paris, Oct. 26, 1854.

Pompador (pom'pa.dōr, -dōr; French, pōn.pa.dōr), Marquise de. [Title of Jeanne Antoinette Poisson le Normant d'Étiolles.] b. at Paris, Dec. 29, 1721; d. at Versailles, April 15, 1764. Chief mistress of Louis XV of France. A beautiful and witty woman, she became, soon after her marriage to the nephew of her protector, a banker, the toast of middle-class Paris. She met the king at a ball in 1744 and in 1745 became his titular mistress. Until her death, she controlled the king and his internal and foreign policies, examining his mail, checking his appointments to office, and, when her position was threatened, even deliberately supporting his liaisons with other women. She changed the traditional French policy of containment of Austria to one of alliance; the result was the disastrous Seven Years' War. Her desire to lead society caused her to patronize such men as Voltaire, Quésnay, and Boucher, but hand in hand with this went a wild extravagance that brought her enemies in all classes.

Pompaelo (pom.pē'lō). Ancient name of Pamplona, Spain.

Pompal (pōm.pāl'). See Pombal.

Pompano Beach (pom'pa.nō). City in SE Florida, in Broward County, N of Miami. The principal industries are truck gardening and fishing. 5,682 (1950).

Pompée (pōn.pā). Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1642 or 1643.

Pompeia (pom.pē'ā). fl. 61 B.C. Second wife of Julius Caesar, and a granddaughter of Sulla. The marriage, solemnized in 67, was ended in 61 B.C. when Caesar divorced Pompeia upon allegations of misconduct during the celebration of the mysteries of Bona Dea, the third person of the triangle being the notorious Clodius. That the future master of Rome may not have had absolute proof of his charges is sometimes inferred from his famous statement on this occasion, that "Caesar's wife must be above suspicion."

Pompéia (pōm.pē'ya), Raul de Ávila. b. at Angra dos Reis, Brazil, April 12, 1863; committed suicide at Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 25, 1895. Brazilian novelist and journalist, an advocate of the abolition of slavery and a propagandist of the republican cause. Under the republic he became editor of the Diário Oficial and director of the National Library of Brazil. He is chiefly remembered for his autobiographical novel Ateneu (1888).

Pompeii (pom.pē'ē). Ancient city in Italy, situated on the Bay of Naples ab. 13 mi. SE of Naples, nearly at the foot of Mount Vesuvius. It was a flourishing provincial town, containing many villas. It was severely injured (63 A.D.) by an earthquake, and was totally destroyed (79) by an eruption of Vesuvius. Owing to the preservation of the ruins practically intact to the present day by the layer of ashes and pumice that buried them, the remains of Pompeii afford in many ways the most complete information we possess of Roman material civilization. Some excavations were made on the site in antiquity, in the effort to recover buried treasure, but Pompeii and its tragic end were soon forgotten. In 1748 some peasants came accidentally upon a few ancient works of art in a ruined house, and the Bourbon sovereigns of Naples thereupon caused searches to be made for similar objects. Between 1808 and 1815 Joachim Murat instituted the first scientifically conducted excavations. After his fall the work went on more or less irregularly until the Bourbon kingdom ended in 1860. It thereafter progressed with system and regularity under Giuseppe Fiorelli. Most of the oval area included within the walls has now been thoroughly explored. The great theater, of the time of Augustus, is one of the most perfect of Roman antiquity, semicircular in plan, with a diameter of 322 ft. The temple of Isis is a small Corinthian tetrastyle prostyle structure raised on a basement in a peristyle court upon which open the lodgings of the priests. Many interesting objects connected with the cult were found here, and skeletons of the priests amid surroundings indicating that they had sought, too late, to flee. The so-called House of Castor and Pollux is curious as being a double house with a large peristyle court common to the two parts. Each part has its atrium and all its subdivisions complete. The exterior contrasts with the usual plainness by its stucco decoration in panels and arabesques. The so-called House of Marcus Lucretius is a double house, remarkable also for having had three stories, and for its beautiful reception room (tablinum) and dining room. The so-called House of Meleager is notable for its paintings and other decorations. In the atrium there is a marble table supported by winged griffins. The peristyle court, with 24 Ionic columns, is the finest in Pompeii. The so-called House of Pansa is one of the largest and most elaborate dwellings of Pompeii, measuring 120 by 300 ft. The so-called House of the Faun is perhaps the best in style of the ancient city. The usual wall paintings are here replaced by mosaics. The famous Dancing Faun and the mosaic of the Battle of Issus came from this house.

Pompeii. Modern community approximately on the site of the ancient Roman town, in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, near the S slope of Mount Vesuvius, E of Torre Annunziata. It is an administrative unit (commune) comprising parts of the communities of Boscoreale, Gragnano, Seafati, and Torre Annunziata; it is a notable tourist center. Although considerable bomb damage was sustained by the old Roman town during World War II, it was believed that except for some of the wall paintings all could be repaired or restored. Pop. of commune, 11,792 (1936); of town, 4,178 (1936).

Pompeiiopolis (pom.pā.op'fō.lis). See under Soli.

Pompeius Magnus (pom.pē.us mag'nus), Sextus. [English, Pompey; called Pompey the Younger.] b. 75 B.C.; killed at Miletus, 35 B.C. Roman soldier; son of Pompeius (Gnaeus Pompeius). His forces were defeated by Julius Caesar at Munda in 45. He became powerful as commander of a fleet on the coasts of Sicily and Italy, and by cutting off Rome's grain supply from Africa hoped to starve the Romans into receiving him again. He was defeated in a naval battle by Agrippa in 36, and fled to Asia Minor, where he was captured and executed.

Pompeu de Souza Brazil (pōm.pā'ō dē sō'za bra.zēl'), Thomaz. b. near Sobral, Ceará, Brazil, June 6, 1828; d. at Fortaleza, Brazil, Sept. 2, 1877. Brazilian publicist and author.

Pompey (pom'pī). [Called Pompey the Great; full Latin name, Gnaeus Pompeius Magnus.] b. 106 B.C.; murdered in Egypt, 48 B.C. Roman general. He served in the Social War in 89, and as a partisan of Sulla (83-81) in Italy, Sicily, and Africa. He commanded against the Marians in Spain (76-72), aided in suppressing the Servile Insurrection in 71, and was consul with Crassus in 70. He was appointed by the Gabinian Law commander in the war against the pirates, whom he subdued in 67, and by the Manilian Law commander in the East in 66. He ended the war with Mithridates, annexed Syria and Palestine, and was given a triumph at Rome in 61. He formed with Julius Caesar and Crassus the first triumvirate in 60, and was consul (55). Pompey's wife Julia was Caesar's daughter, but her death in 54, followed by that of Crassus in 53, led to an intensification of the differences between Caesar and Pompey. He became the champion of the senate and conservative party, was maneuvered into a position in which he was required to disband his followers, began the civil war with Caesar in 49, and was totally defeated by Caesar at Pharsala in 48. He attempted to seek refuge in Egypt but was killed by one of his old followers as he landed.

Pompey. In Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, the clownish servant of Mistress Overdone.

Pompiilius (pom.pī'lī.us), Numa. See Numa Pompilius.

Pomptinae Paludes (pompt.tī'nē pā.lō'dēz). Latin name of the Pontine Marshes.

Pompton Lakes (pompt'pton). Borough in N New Jersey, in Passaic County: site of a training camp much used by professional boxers. 4,654 (1950).

Ponape (pō'nā.pā). See under Caroline Islands.

Ponca (pong'ka). North American Indian tribe, of the Dhegiha division of the Siouan language family, originally inhabiting the Ohio River valley, and after various migrations and flights, settled in NE Nebraska. Today ab. 1,300 of them survive on reservations in Oklahoma and Nebraska.

Ponca City. [Former name, New Ponca.] City in N Oklahoma, in Kay County, in an agricultural, livestock, and petroleum producing area: petroleum refining, grain storage, and dairy processing. 20,180 (1950).

Ponce (pōn'sā). City on the S coast of Puerto Rico: second largest city; seaport. 99,492 (1950).

Ponce, Manuel M. b. 1886—. Mexican composer and pianist. Composer of symphonic works, a piano concerto, and chamber music.

Ponceau (pōn.sō), Pierre Étienne du. See Du Ponceau, Pierre Étienne.

Ponce de León (pōn'thā dā lā.ōn', pōn'sī), Juan. b. at San Servos, Campos, Spain, c1460; d. in Cuba, 1521. Spanish explorer, noted for his discovery (1513) of Florida while supposedly searching for the legendary fountain of youth. He is thought to have accompanied Columbus on his second voyage (1493) and in 1502-04 took part in the conquest of Higüay (eastern Hispaniola), of which he was appointed governor. Learning (c1508) of alleged quantities of gold in San Juan de Puerto Rico, he went to the island, where he found the promised treasure; after returning to Hispaniola, he secured authority to lead an expedition for the conquest of Puerto Rico, of which he was appointed governor in 1509. While in Puerto Rico, he amassed a fortune; according to tradition, he left the island after hearing from Indians of another island called Bimini, a human paradise in which, it was said, there was a spring whose waters held the power of rejuvenation. Commissioned by King Ferdinand II of Aragon to undertake the voyage of discovery, he was also made governor for life. He started out (March 3, 1513) from Puerto Rico and on April 2, 1513, reached the coast of Florida at a point slightly north of what is now called Indian River Inlet. The name Florida was given to the land by the Spaniards either because its discovery occurred at the time of the Easter feast (Pascua Florida) or because of its lush vegetation. He later continued southward to Key West and then coasted along the west-Florida mainland between Cape Romano and Charlotte Harbor. Eventually his course took him northwestward of San Salvador, to the island of Eleuthera. Giving up the search for the fountain of youth, he returned to Puerto Rico and later to Spain. Again, in September, 1514, he was commissioned by the king to seek and colonize the island of Bimini, but his plans were impeded by an expedition he led against the Indians in the islands to the south of Puerto Rico. In 1521 he sailed for Florida at the head of 200 men, was wounded there during a battle with the Indians, and was brought to Cuba, where he died. His remains rest in the Dominican Church of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Ponce de León, Luis. b. at Belmonte, Spain, 1528; d. 1591. Spanish scholar, theologian, and poet. He was provincial (1591) of the order of Saint Augustine, and professor of theology and sacred literature at the University of Salamanca. He was examined by the Inquisition and imprisoned, but finally was set free.

Poncelet (pōn's.lē), Jean Victor. b. at Metz, France, July 1, 1788; d. at Paris, Dec. 22, 1867. French mathematician and military engineer, inventor of Poncelet's hydraulic wheels for developing power from low falls of water, and one of the founders of modern projective geometry. His works include Traité des propriétés projectives des figures (1823) and Cours de mécanique appliquée aux machines (1826). He became a brigadier general, and in 1848 was appointed commander of the national guard of the department of the Seine.

Ponchatoula (pon.cha.tō'lā). Town in SE Louisiana, in Tangipahoa Parish: shipping point for winter strawberries and vegetables. 4,090 (1950).

Ponchielli (pōng.kyē'lē), Amilcare, b. near Cremona, Italy, Sept. 1, 1834; d. at Milan, Italy, Jan. 16, 1886. Italian composer. Among his operas are I Promessi Sposi (1856), Le Due Gemelle, a ballet (1873), I Lituani (1874), La Gioconda (1876), Il Figliuolo prodigo (1880), and Marion Delorme (1885). He is perhaps best known for the "Dance of the Hours" from La Gioconda.

Pond (pond), Irving Kane. b. at Ann Arbor, Mich., May 1, 1857; d. at Washington, D.C., Sept. 29, 1939. American architect. From 1886 he practiced architecture at Chicago, in partnership with his brother. He was president (1910-11) of the American Institute of Architects.

Pond, James Burton. b. at Cuba, N.Y., June 11, 1838; d. June 21, 1903. American lecture manager. He joined the staff of and bought (1875) with George H. Hathaway the lecture bureau of James Redpath at Boston, and later established (1879) his own office at New York. He managed Henry Ward Beecher, Henry M. Stanley, Arthur Conan Doyle, Bill Nye, Mark Twain, and others. Author of A Summer in England with Henry Ward Beecher (1887) and Eccentricities of Genius (1900).

Pond, John. b. at London, 1767; d. at Blackheath, London, Sept. 7, 1836. English astronomer. In 1811 he succeeded Nevil Maskelyne as astronomer royal. He made great improvements in the Greenwich Observatory equipment; he published a star catalogue in 1833.

Pond, Raymond Haines. b. at Topeka, Kan., March 3, 1875; d. at College Station, Tex., July 26, 1911. American botanist. His studies related especially to enzymes, fermentation, and the fixation of nitrogen.

Pondiac (pon'dī.ak). See Pontiac.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; τη, then; d, d o r j; s, s o sh; t, t o r ch;

Pondichéry (pón.dě.shā.rē). [Also: Pondicherry, Pondicherri (pon.dich'erī, -sherī); Indian name, Pudichéri.] Capital of French India, on the E coast, ab. 104 mi. S of Madras. It has one of the best anchorages to be found on the Bay of Bengal. It is a major point of export for oilseeds. The town contains several spinning and weaving mills, rice mills, and oilseed mills. It was originally occupied (c1572) by the French, was several times conquered and temporarily held by the British, but was finally restored to the French in 1816. It is the chief place of a small French district. Area of district, 112 sq. mi.; pop. 222,572 (1948); pop. of Pondichéry commune, 59,835 (1948).

Pondo (pon.dō). See Mpondo.

Pondoland (pon.dō.land). Territory in S Africa, a former British possession and now one of the Transkeian Territories of Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated SW of Natal and S of Griqualand East along the coast. In 1894 it was annexed to Cape Colony. When that colony became (1910) a province in the Union, Pondoland was included. Pop. ab. 270,000.

Ponferrada (pōn.fēr.rā'ferrā). [Latin, Interamium Flavium.] Town in NW Spain, in the province of León, ab. 50 mi. W of León; agricultural trade. It has ruins of a 12th-century castle of the Templars. 13,008 (1940).

Pongol (pong.gol). In Hindu religion, the New Year's feast of S India, celebrated in January. It is a family festival featuring the eating of new rice. The new rice is boiled in a new pot, and is anxiously watched, for if it boils rapidly the new year will be good; if too slowly, bad luck will follow. Bonfires are built in the streets (these are intended to keep the sun god awake).

Pongoue (pōn.gwā). See Mpongwe.

Poniatowski (pō.ni.ātōf.skē). Prince Józef Antoni. b. at Warsaw, May 7, 1763; drowned in the Elster River. Germany, Oct. 19, 1813. Polish general; nephew of Stanislaus II (Stanislaus Augustus Poniatowski). He served (1792) against Russia and in the insurrection of 1794, commanded the Polish contingent in the French campaigns, and was minister of war in the duchy of Warsaw. He invaded (1809) Galicia, and was made a French marshal in 1813. He fought at Leipzig, and lost his life at the close of the battle.

Poniatowski, Józef Michał. [Title, Prince of Monte Rotondo.] b. at Rome, Feb. 20, 1816; d. at London, July 3, 1873. Polish composer; nephew of Prince Józef Antoni Poniatowski. He settled at Paris in 1854, and was senator under the Empire. He composed a number of operas, the first (Giovanni da Procida) in 1838.

Poniatowski, Stanislaus Augustus. See Stanislaus II.
Pons (pōn). Town in W France, in the department of Charente-Maritime, situated on the Seugne River, ab. 32 mi. SE of Rochefort. It produces leather and hosiery, and has an old castle and a church from the 12th century. 4,442 (1946).

Pons (ponz; French, pōns), Lily. b. at Cannes, France, April 16, 1904— . Operatic soprano. She made her operatic debut (1928) as Lakmé at the Mulhouse Municipal Opera, France, made her U.S. debut (1931) as Lucia at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and toured South America, Canada, Australia, Europe, and Great Britain. She married (1923) August Mesritz, from whom she was divorced in 1933, and married (1938) André Koclanetz, orchestra conductor.

Pons Aelii (ponz ē'l.i). Latin name of Newcastle, England.

Pons Ariolicae (ponz ā.rī.ō.lī'sē). Latin name of Pontarlier.

Ponselle (pon.sēl'), Carmela. [Original surname, Ponzillo.] b. at Schenectady, N.Y., June 7, 1892— . American mezzo-soprano; sister of Rosa Melba Ponselle. She joined (1925-26) the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, appearing with it as Amneris in Aida, Laura in La Gioconda, and Santuzza in Caratteristi.

Ponselle, Rosa Melba. [Original surname, Ponzillo.] b. at Meriden, Conn., c1895— . American operatic soprano; sister of Carmela Ponselle. She made her first appearance (1918) with the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, as Donna Leonora in La Forza del Destino, with Enrico Caruso, and made her London debut (1929) in the title role of Bellini's Norma. Among her other main roles have been the title characters in Carmen and Aida, Rachel in La Juive, Violetta in La Traviata, and Giulietta in La Vestale.

Ponson (pōn.sōn'). See under Gamotes Islands.

Ponsonby (pūn'son.bī), Arthur Augustus William Harry. [Title, 1st Baron Ponsonby of Shulbrede.] b. 1871; d. at Hindhead, Surrey, England, March 23, 1946. English politician, diplomat, and author; son of Sir Henry Frederick Ponsonby. He held posts (1894-1902) in the diplomatic service, was private secretary (1906-08) to Prime Minister Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and served (1908-18) as member of Parliament. He was a member (1918-40) of the Labour Party, undersecretary (1924) for foreign affairs, parliamentary secretary (1929) in the ministry of transport, and led the opposition (1931-35) in the House of Lords. His books include The Decline of Aristocracy (1912), Wars and Treaties (1917), Samuel Pepys (1928), Casual Observations (1929), Queen Victoria (1933), and others. He received the James Tait Black memorial prize for Henry Ponsonby (1942).

Ponsonby, Sir Henry Frederick. b. at Corfu, Ionian Islands, Dec. 10, 1825; d. at East Cowes, on the Isle of Wight, England, Nov. 21, 1895. English statesman. He fought (1855-56) in the Crimean War, and was appointed equerry to Albert, the prince consort. He was sent (1862) to Canada in command of a battalion, and was stationed in Canada during the American Civil War. Appointed (1870) private secretary to Queen Victoria, he held this position until shortly before his death.

Ponsonby, William. b. c1546; d. before September, 1604. English publisher, remembered for his connection with Edmund Spenser. His first publication was John Alday's Praise and Dispraise of Women (1579); his last was Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch's Lives. In 1590 he published Spenser's Faerie Queene (books I-III; books IV-VI, 1596), also bringing out Spenser's Complaints (1591), Amoretti (1595), and Colin Clout's Come Home Again (1595), and several other volumes by the poet.

Ponsonby, Sir William. b. 1772; killed at Waterloo, June 18, 1815. English general. He served (1811 et seq.) in Spain, and was killed by French lancers while leading a brigade at Waterloo.

Pons Vetus (ponz vē'tus). Latin name of Pontevedra.
Ponta Delgada (pōn'tā del.gā'da). District in the Azores Islands. Capital, Ponta Delgada; area, ab. 326 sq. mi.; pop. 176,707 (1950).

Ponta Delgada. Town and concelho (commune), the chief town of the Azores Islands and of the island of São Miguel, situated on the SW coast of the island; capital of the district of Ponta Delgada. A winter resort, with beautiful gardens, it has a good harbor, and a trade in pineapples, citrus fruit, earthenware, and other articles, chiefly with Great Britain. It was used as a base by the American navy in World Wars I and II. Pop. of concelho, 64,801 (1940); of town, 18,022 (1940).

Pontaderra (pōn.tā.der'rā'), Andrea da. See Pisano, Andrea.

Ponta Grossa (pōn'tā grō'sa). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Paraná; shipping point for lumber and cattle, and also for bananas, beef, rice, and tobacco. 44,130 (1950).

Pont-à-Mousson (pōn.tā.mō.sōn). Town in E France, in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, on the Moselle River, ab. 17 mi. NW of Nancy. It is a river port, and has blast furnaces and iron foundries. It suffered much damage in World Wars I and II. The church of Saint Martin, from the 13th and 15th centuries, was among the buildings seriously damaged in World War II. 10,239 (1946).

Ponta Porã (pōn'tā pō.rā'ā). Former territory in SW Brazil, now in Mato Grosso. Capital, Ponta Porã; area, 42,039 sq. mi.; pop. 101,517 (est. 1945).

Ponta Porã. Town in SW Brazil, in Mato Grosso state, formerly capital of Ponta Porã territory. Pop. under 5,000 (1940).

Pontarlier (pōn.tār.liyē). [Latin, Pons Ariolicae.] Town in E France, in the department of Doubs, on the Doubs River, ab. 30 mi. SE of Besançon. It is a center for winter sports in the Jura Mountains and has a number of diversified industries, including the manufacturing of precision instruments, brushes, cheese, chocolate, and liquors. Commerce with Switzerland is very active. 12,722 (1946).

Pontassieve (pōn.tās.sye'vā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Firenze, situated at the junction of the Sieve and Arno rivers, ab. 10 mi. E of Florence; railroad repair shops. Pop. of commune, 15,000 (1936); of town, 4,108 (1936).

Pont-Audemur (pōn.tōd.mer). Town in NW France, in the department of Eure, situated at the junction of the Sébec and Risle rivers, ab. 18 mi. SE of Le Havre. The church of Saint Ouen dates from the 11th century. A large part of the town was destroyed in World War II, 6,119 (1946).

Pontchartrain (pon'char.trān). Lake. Shallow lake in SE Louisiana, N of New Orleans. It is connected by the Rigolets River with Lake Borgne and the Gulf of Mexico. Length, ab. 40 mi.; greatest width, ab. 25 mi.; area, ab. 600 sq. mi.

Pont du Gard (pōn dū gār). See Gard, Pont du.

Ponte (pōn'tā), da. See Bassano.

Ponte, Lorenzo da. See Da Ponte, Lorenzo.

Ponteach (pōn'ti.ak). See Pontiac.

Pontecorvo (pōn.tā.kōr.vō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Frosinone, situated on the Garigliano River ab. 53 mi. NW of Naples. Pop. of commune, 14,437 (1936); of town, 6,241 (1936).

Pontecorvo, Prince of. See Charles XIV (of Sweden and Norway).

Pontedera (pōn.tā.dē.rā). Town and commune in N central Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pisa, on the Arno River ab. 15 mi. E of Pisa; textile and foodstuffs industries. Pop. of commune, 17,890 (1936); of town, 10,573 (1936).

Ponte de Sor (pōn'tē de sōr). Town and concelho (commune) in C Portugal, in the province of Pribatejo and district of Santarém, situated on the Sor River E of Santarém; agricultural trade. Pop. of concelho, 18,814 (1940); of town, 10,534 (1940).

Pontefract (pōn'tē.frakt). [Colloquially and usually called Pomfret.] Municipal borough and market town in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated near the confluence of the rivers Aire and Calder, ab. 12 mi. SE of Leeds, ab. 183 mi. N of London by rail. It contains the ruins of Pontefract Castle, built in 1080, the scene of Richard II's murder in 1399, taken and dismantled by the Parliamentarians in 1649. The principal industries are nursery and market gardening. The town is known for a licorice candy called "Pomfret Cakes." 23,173 (1951).

Ponten (pōn'ten), Josef. b. at Raeren, Belgium, June 3, 1883; d. 1940. German novelist and short-story writer. Many of his stories, including "Insel" and "Der Meister," were published in the collection Novellen (1937). He is the author also of the novel Der babylonische Turm (1918), on which he spent more than six years, and of the panoramic novel sequence Volk auf dem Wege, in which he proposed to show the history of German emigration to various parts of the world. In preparation he traveled to North America (1928-29), North Africa (1931), the Balkans (1932, 1933, 1934), and South America (1936). The ten-volume project includes Die Väter zogen aus (1934), Im Wolgaland (1933), and Rheinisches Zwischen-spiel (1937).

Ponte Nova (pōn'tē nō'va). City in E Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 15,420 (1950).

Pontes (pōn'tēs). Latin name of Staines.

Pontes (pōn'tēs), Felisberto (or Feliberto) Caldeira Brant. See Caldeira Brant Pontes, Felisberto (or Feliberto).

Ponte Vecchio (pōn'tā vek'kyō). Bridge in Florence, Italy, over the Arno River; a picturesque structure with three wide arches, rebuilt in 1345. The roadway is bordered on both sides by little shops, except over the middle arch, where there is an opening. Over the south row of shops is carried a gallery, built by Vasari, connecting the Pitti Palace with the Uffizi and the Palazzo Vecchio. This was the only one of the Florentine bridges over the Arno to survive World War II; heavy damage was sustained by the buildings on its approaches, but those on the bridge itself could largely be saved or restored.

Pontevedra (pōn.tā.bā'thriā). Province in NW Spain, bounded by La Coruña on the N, Lugo and Orense on the E, Portugal on the S, and the Atlantic Ocean on the W; part of the region of Galicia. The surface is mountainous, the climate mild and oceanic; there are sardine and oyster fisheries along the coast. Capital, Pontevedra; area, 1,695 sq. mi.; pop. 652,720 (1950).

Pontevedra. [Latin, Pons Vetus.] Town in NW Spain, the capital of the province of Pontevedra, situated at the head of a bay on the Atlantic Ocean, ab. 65 mi. SW of Lugo. A commercial port and naval station, it has coast-wise shipping and considerable sardine fisheries. There are also leather, pottery, hat manufactures. Medieval fortifications are preserved. 36,968 (1940).

Ponthieu (pōn'tyē). Region and medieval countship in N France, for a time in the government of Picardy, now forming part of the department of Somme. The capital was Abbeville. It was conquered by William of Normandy (later William I of England) in 1056. In the later Middle Ages it fluctuated between England, Burgundy, and France.

Pontia (pōn'shā) or Pontiae (pōn'shi.ē). Ancient names of the island of Ponza.

Pontiac (pōn'ti.ak). [Also: Ponteach, Pondiac.] d. 1769. American Indian chief. He came into prominence during the siege of Detroit (1763-64), when he attempted to take the British garrison by treachery and surprise and afterward loomed as the main threat to British security in the region. It is thought that Pontiac, and the Indians led by him, were determined to break the truce made with the British by other Indians; and although he may not have started the resistance which has gone down in colonial history as "Pontiac's War" or "Pontiac's Conspiracy," his adamant opposition, carried on from his headquarters on the Maumee River and at Detroit, gave him a prominent place in the events of 1764-66. He eventually made peace with the British. It is generally agreed that his death occurred by violence, but the identity of the killer or killers is still a matter of conjecture. The role assigned to Pontiac by popular legend is much exaggerated, and has been elaborated by some of the inaccuracies in Francis Parkman's narrative, The History of the Conspiracy of Pontiac (1851).

Pontiac. City in NE Illinois, county seat of Livingston County, on the Vermilion River; trading and railroad center of an agricultural region. A branch of the state penitentiary is located here, 8,990 (1950).

Pontiac. City in SE Michigan, county seat of Oakland County, on the Clinton River ab. 23 mi. NW of Detroit; manufactures of automobile bodies and parts, taxicabs, trucks, rubber products, and varnish. Pop. of city, 73,681 (1950); of urbanized area, 92,573 (1950).

Pontiac's War or Pontiac's Conspiracy. In American history, an Indian war (1763-66) between the settlers and garrisons on the western frontier and the Indians from tribes including the Delawares, Wyandots, Shawnees, and Ojibwas. The Indians captured Mackinaw, Presque Isle, and other forts, and unsuccessfully besieged Detroit. Although the war takes its name from Pontiac, an Ottawa Indian chief, the extent of his leadership and influence in organizing the rising is still open to conjecture.

Pontian (pōn'shān, -shān). [Also, Pontianus (pōn-shi.ā'nus).] b. at Rome; d. in Sardinia, at an unknown date. Pope from 230 to 235. Banished to Sardinia by the emperor Maximinus, Pontian resigned his pontificate Sept. 28, 235, to make way for a successor, Anteros. His body was brought to Rome for burial in the catacombs of Callistus by Pope Fabian.

Ponticus (pōn'ti.kus). See Lucullus, Lucius Licinius.

Pontifical Choir. [Also, Sistine Choir.] Papal choir group, composed of 32 choral chaplains resident at Rome. A collegiate body, it sings at all religious services personally conducted by the Pope.

Pontifical Zouaves (zō.āvz'). See Zouaves, Papal.

Pontigny (pōn'tēn.yē). Village in the department of Yonne, France, near Auxerre, noted for its ruined abbey. Its abbey church, a simple early Gothic structure, is the most perfect surviving Cistercian church. Its windows are narrow lancets; there is no triforium; and, except for the beautiful polished rose-granite shafts of the choir, there is almost no ornament. The length is 354 ft.; the height, 68.

Pontine (pōn'tē.nā), Isole. Italian name of the Ponza Islands.

fāt, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔ, then; ɟ, d or j; ʃ, s or sh; ʔ, t or ch;

Pontine Islands (pon'tin, -tín). Ancient name of the Ponza Islands.

Pontine Marshes. [Latin, Pomptinae Paludes.] Former marshy district in the region of Latium, C Italy, between the Tyrrhenian Sea and the Volscian Mountains, and extending ab. 31 mi. from Terracina to near Velletri. From ancient times it had been a notoriously malarial swampland, due to a lack of natural drainage, until it was drained and improved in the 1920's and 1930's; new settlements were founded in this period, among which are the towns of Latina (formerly Littoria) and Pontinia. It is traversed by the Appian Way. The coastal portion of the area was the scene of Allied landings (1943) in World War II.

Pontisarae (pon.tis'a.rē). A Latin name of Pontioise.

Pontius Pilatus (pon'ti'us pilā'tus). See Pilate, Pontius.

Pontivy (pôn.tē.vē). Town in NW France, in the department of Morbihan, ab. 30 mi. NE of Lorient. It consists of a picturesque old town, and a new town built at the beginning of the 19th century (when it was called Napoléonville). The Church of Notre-Dame-de-la-Joie is in flamboyant Gothic style. 10,878 (1946).

Pont-l'Abbé (pôn.lā.bā). Town in NW France, in the department of Finistère, situated on an estuary SW of Quimper. It is a fishing port and the capital of the bigouden region, noted for the faithfulness with which the ancient folk costumes are preserved by its population. 6,563 (1946).

Pontllanfraith (pôn.tlān.vrith'). See under Mynyddislwyn.

Pont Neuf (pôn nef). Bridge over the Seine in Paris, near the Louvre, built by Henry IV.

Pont-Nevelles (pôn.nwā.yel). Battle of. [Also, Battle of the Hallue.] Battle fought Dec. 23, 1870, at Pont-Nevelles (a village near Amiens, France), between the French under Louis Léon César Faidherbe and the Germans.

Pontoise (pôn.twāz). [Latin, Briva Isarae, Pontisarae.] Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated at the junction of the Viosne and Oise rivers, ab. 17 mi. NW of Paris. It is an important grain and flour trade center and has metalworking establishments. It was frequently contested between England and France in the Middle Ages. The Church of Saint Maclou dates from the 13th-15th centuries. The town was seriously damaged during World War II. 11,009 (1946).

Ponton (pon'ton). Mungo. b. at Balgreen, near Edinburgh, Nov. 23, 1802; d. probably at Clifton, near Bristol, England, Aug. 3, 1880. Scottish inventor of a method of permanent photography. His paper entitled A Cheap and Simple Method of Preparing Paper for Photographic Drawing in which the Use of Any Salt of Silver is Dispensed With announced (1839) the important discovery that the action of sunlight renders bichromate of potassium insoluble. This discovery more than any other made permanent photography possible.

Pontoppidan (pôn.tôp'i.dān). Henrik. b. at Fredericia, Denmark, July 24, 1857; d. Aug. 21, 1943. Danish writer of short stories and novels, noted for his sober depiction of idealists searching for happiness, especially in Det forjættede Land (The Promised Land, 3 vols., 1891-95) and Lykke-Per (Lucky Peter, 8 vols., 1898-1904). He won the Nobel prize for literature in 1917 (with Karl Gjellerup).

Pontremoli (pôn.trē.mô.lē). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Massa e Carrara at the foot of the Apennines, N of La Spezia. It has a cathedral of the 17th century and a castle. Pop. of commune, 14,537 (1936); of town, 3,801 (1936).

Pontresina (pôn.trā.zē.nā). Village in SW Switzerland, in the canton of Graubünden, in the Upper Engadine valley, ab. 5,910 ft. above sea level: the starting point for excursions in the Bernina Mountains, and a summer and winter resort. 757 (1941).

Pontus (pon'tus). In ancient geography, a country in Asia Minor. It was bounded by the Pontus Euxinus (Black Sea) on the N, Colchis on the E, Armenia on the SE and S, Cappadocia on the S, Galatia on the SW, and Paphlagonia on the W. It became independent of Persia in the 4th century B.C., and rose to great power with extended boundaries under Mithridates VI. After the victories of Pompey (66 B.C.) it was reduced to its former limits, and was eventually made a Roman province.

Pontus. In Greek religion, a personification of the sea. He is variously mentioned as both son and consort of Gaea, the earth goddess, and as the father of Nereus, Ceto, Phorcus, and others.

Pontus Euxinus (ñk.sí'nus). Latin name of the Black Sea.

Pont-Viau (pôn.vyô). Town in S Quebec, Canada, NW of Montreal: residential suburb. 5,129 (1951).

Pont-y-Mynach (pôn.ti.mi'näch). See Devil's Bridge.

Pontypool (pon.ti.pól'). Urban district, market town, and manufacturing center in W England, in Monmouthshire, ab. 2 mi. SW of Abersychan, ab. 144 mi. W of London by rail. The town is on the South Wales coal field, and has manufactures of iron and steel. The first tin-plate industry in Britain was established here in 1720. Pop. 42,683 (1951).

Pontypridd (pon.ti.prid', -prēn'). [Also, Newbridge.] Urban district and manufacturing town in S Wales, in Glamorganshire, situated at the confluence of the rivers Rhondda and Taff, ab. 6 mi. NW of Caerphilly, 158 mi. W of London by rail. The river Taff is crossed here by a remarkable bridge of one arch. 38,622 (1951).

Ponza (pôn'tsā). [Ancient name, Pontia or Pontiae.] Chief island of the Ponza group, situated in the Tyrrhenian Sea ab. 67 mi. W of Naples: a place of exile for state prisoners under the early Roman emperors.

Ponza Islands. [Italian, Isole Pontine; ancient name, Pontine Islands.] Group of small volcanic islands W of Naples, belonging to the province of Latina and compartimento (region) of Latium, Italy. It includes Ponza, Palmarola, and Zannone. The group was used as a place of banishment under the Romans, and again under Mussolini. 6,457 (1936).

Ponzillo (pôn.tsel'lo), Carmela. Original name of Ponselle, Carmela.

Ponzillo, Rosa Melba. Original name of Ponselle, Rosa Melba.

Pooh-Bah (pō'bā). Character in the comic opera The Mikado, by Gilbert and Sullivan, who fills a large number of offices.

Pool, the. Part of the river Thames, in SE England, in London, lying between London Bridge and the Isle of Dogs.

Poole (pōl). Municipal borough, market town, seaport, and seaside resort in SW England, in Dorsetshire, situated on Poole Harbour, an inlet of the English Channel, ab. 4 mi. W of Bournemouth, ab. 20 mi. E of Dorchester, and ab. 113 mi. SW of London by rail. It ships blue clay and a fine grade of pipe clay. 82,958 (1951).

Poole, Ernest. b. at Chicago, Jan. 23, 1880; d. Jan. 10, 1950. American writer. He was a war correspondent in Germany and France (1915), Russia (1917), and England (1940-41). Author of the plays None So Blind and A Man's Friends. His novels include The Harbor (1915), His Second Wife (1918), Beggar's Gold (1921), Millions (1922), Danger (1923), Silent Storms (1927), The Destroyer (1931), Nurses on Horseback (1932), One of Us (1934), Giants Gone (1942), and The Great White Hills (1946). He received the first Pulitzer prize for fiction (1918) for the novel His Family (1917). The Bridge (1940) is autobiographical.

Poole, John. b. c1786; d. at London, in February, 1872. English playwright. His best-known work is Paul Pry, produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, in 1825. Among his other works are Deaf as a Post, Little Pedlington and the Peddlingtonians, a satire (1839), and A Comic Miscellany (1845).

Poole, Reginald Lane. b. at London, March 29, 1857; d. at Oxford, England, Oct. 28, 1939. English historian and educator; grandson of Sophia Lane and nephew of Reginald Stuart Poole. He was assistant in the department of manuscripts in the British Museum (1880-81), assistant editor, later joint editor with S.R. Gardiner, and finally sole editor of the English Historical Review (1885 et seq.), and lecturer on modern history at Jesus College, Oxford (1886-1910).

Poole, Reginald Stuart. b. at London, Feb. 27, 1832; d. Feb. 8, 1895. English archaeologist; son of Sophia

Lane. He became conservator of the department of coins and medals of the British Museum in 1870. He published many important catalogues of coins and medals.

Poole, Sophia Lane. Married name of Lane, Sophia.

Poole, Stanley Lane. See Lane-Poole, Stanley.

Poole, William Frederick. b. at Salem, Mass., Dec. 24, 1821; d. at Chicago, March 1, 1894. American librarian, bibliographer, and historical writer, originator of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature (1848). At the time of his death he was librarian of the Newberry Library at Chicago.

Poole Harbour. Inlet of the English Channel, in SW England, in Dorsetshire, lying immediately N of the Isle of Purbeck (a peninsula). Poole municipal borough is situated on the N side of the harbor. The harbor is one of the best on the S coast of England. Length, ab. 7 mi.; greatest width, ab. 5 mi.

Poona (pō'na). [Also, Poonah.] District in Bombay, Union of India, ab. 80 mi. SE of the city of Bombay; sugar, tobacco, rice, millet, and teakwood. 1,950,976 (1951).

Poona. [Also, Poonah.] Capital of the district of Poona, Bombay, Union of India, on the Muta River ab. 80 mi. SE of Bombay. Situated near the crest of the Western Ghats and commanding one of the passes to Bombay, it is the hot-weather capital of the state of Bombay and an important military station. It was taken by the British in 1817. Pop. 480,982 (1951).

Poopó (pō.ō.pō'), Lake. [Also: Allagas, Pampa Aullagas.] Swampy lake in W Bolivia, N of Potosí, Bolivia, which receives the Desaguadero River from Lake Titicaca. It has no outlet. Elevation, ab. 12,106 ft.; length, ab. 180 mi.; area, ab. 1,000 sq. mi.

Poor (pōr), Charles Lane. b. at Hackensack, N.J., Jan. 18, 1806; d. at New York, Sept. 27, 1951. American astronomer, lecturer and professor of astronomy (1903-10) and professor of celestial mechanics (1910-44) at Columbia. He invented several navigational devices. Author of The Action of Jupiter upon the Comet V (1889), The Solar System (1908), Simplified Navigation for Ships and Aircraft (1918), Gravitation versus Relativity (1922). The Relativity Deflection of Light (1926), What Einstein Really Did (1930), Men Against the Rule (1937), and other works.

Poor, Henry Varnum. b. at Andover, Me., Dec. 8, 1812; d. at Brookline, Mass., Jan. 4, 1905. American railway economist and journalist. Editor (1849-63) of the American Railroad Journal, he founded, with his son Henry William Poor, the annuals Manual of the Railroads of the United States (1868; which continued until 1924, as Poor's Manual), Poor's Directory of Railway Officials (1886-95), and Poor's Handbook of Investment Securities (1890-92).

Poor, Henry Varnum. b. at Chapman, Kan., Sept. 30, 1888-. American painter, known for his murals in the U.S. Department of Justice and Department of Interior buildings at Washington, D.C., and in the administration building at Pennsylvania State College. He taught art at Stanford University and the California School of Fine Arts, turned temporarily after World War I to ceramics, and became professor of art at Columbia University and president of the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture, at Skowhegan, Me.

Poor, Henry William. b. at Bangor, Me., June 16, 1844; d. April 13, 1915. American banker and economist; son of Henry Varnum Poor (1812-1905). With his father, he began (1868) the publication of Manual of the Railroads of the United States.

Poorbunder (pōr.bun'dér). See Porbandar.

Poor Clares, Order of. See under Saint Clare (or Clara) of Assisi.

Poore (pōr), Benjamin Perley. b. near Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 2, 1820; d. May 29, 1887. American newspaper correspondent, editor, and author. Before he reached the age of 20, Poore became the editor of the Southern Whig at Athens, Ga., and in 1841 became attaché of the American legation in Belgium. He went (c1844) to Paris where, as agent of the Massachusetts legislature, he amassed copies of documents in the French archives pertaining to American history. These were later published as Collection de manuscrits contenant lettres, mémoires et autres documents historiques relatifs à la Nouvelle-France (4 vols., 1883-85). Returning to the U.S. in 1848, he became editor of the Boston Daily Bee and subsequently of the American Sentinel (Philadelphia). In 1854 he became Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal and other newspapers, gradually achieving renown as a columnist under the by-line "Perley," familiar to American readers for more than 30 years. He was editor of the first issue (1865) of the Congressional Directory. Under the name "Ben: Perley Poore" he wrote The Rise and Fall of Louis Philippe (1848), Life of Gen. Zachary Taylor (1848), The Early Life and First Campaigns of Napoleon Bonaparte (1851), The Life and Public Services of John Sherman (1880), and Perley's Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis (2 vols., 1886).

Poore, Henry Rankin. b. at Newark, N.J., March 21, 1839; d. at Orange, N.J., Aug. 15, 1940. American painter and writer on art. His Far Hills was bought by the Brazil government; New England Wastes is in the New Zealand National Museum. Author of Pictorial Composition, The Conception of Art, Thinking Straight on Modern Art, Art's Place in Education, and others.

Pooree (pō're). See Puri.

Poor Gentleman, The. Comedy by George Colman the younger, produced at Covent Garden Theatre, London, in 1801, and printed in 1802.

Poor Hermits. See Fratricelli.

Poor House, Over the Hills to the. Poem by Will Carleton, published in Farm Ballads (1873).

Poor Ladies, Order of. See under Saint Clare (or Clara) of Assisi.

Poor Poems and Rotten Rhymes. Volume of verse by A. P. Herbert, published in 1910.

"Poor Priest, the." See Bernard, Claude.

Poor Richard (rich'ard). See under Bonhomme Richard.

Poor Richard's Almanack. Almanac published (1733-58) at Philadelphia by Benjamin Franklin under the pseudonym Richard Saunders. It was noted for its maxims.

Poor Robin (rob'in). Almanac which first appeared in 1663, and was discontinued in 1828. Robert Herrick is said to have assisted in the first numbers.

Poor Tom (tom). Novel by Edwin Muir, published in 1932.

Poor White. Novel (1920) by Sherwood Anderson.

Popayán (pō.pā.yán'). City in SW Colombia, capital of Cauca department, on the Cauca River, in the Andes, in an area of precious metals; academic and ecclesiastical center, and home of the poet Guillermo Valencia and of seven Colombian presidents. The "kingdom" of Popayán (so called from Payán, an Indian chief) was conquered by Sebastián de Benalcázar, who founded the city as his capital in 1536. It suffered much during the 19th century from civil wars and earthquakes. 18,292 (1938).

Pope (pōp), Alexander. b. at London, May 21, 1688; d. at Twickenham, Middlesex, England, May 30, 1744. English poet, remembered as perhaps the chief exponent of the heroic couplet in the history of English literary technique, and as one of the outstanding satirists of world literature. He lived much of his life in a villa at Twickenham, near London. Born a Roman Catholic in a country which was at that time violently anti-Catholic, he had an irregular education, but read extensively in English and Latin poets. His Pastorals, circulated in manuscript, early attracted the attention of such older writers as William Wycherley. Pope became the close friend of prominent literary and political figures, including in particular Jonathan Swift, Viscount Bolingbroke, and other Tory wits and statesmen. Pope was small in stature and suffered from a spinal ailment, but led a surprisingly active life. His best-known works fall into three periods: The first included Pastorals (1709), An Essay on Criticism (1711), The Rape of the Lock (1712; revised 1714), Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, and Eloisa to Abelard (1717). The second period was noteworthy for his translations of the Iliad (1715-20) and the Odyssey (1725-26). The third period included The Dunciad (1728; revised 1743), An Essay on Man (1733-34), and various ethical epistles and satires, of which particular note may be made of Epistle IV, Of the Use of Riches (1731), with account of Timon's villa, and The Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot (1735), with its portrait of Atticus. Pope's quarrels with Joseph Addison and others are notorious, but recent scholarship tends to place the blame less on Pope than formerly, and his reputation is higher now than at any time since the early 19th century. The modern reader will find much of Pope's best writing in the vigorous colloquial style of his satirical and ethical poems.

Pope, Franklin Leonard. b. at Great Barrington, Mass., Dec. 2, 1840; d. there, Oct. 13, 1895. American electrician. He became assistant engineer of the Russo-American Telegraph Company in 1864, and made the first exploration of the country between British Columbia and Alaska in surveying a route for an overland telegraph. He was one of the inventors of the ticker used in stock exchanges, and was the inventor of the rail circuit for automatically controlling electric block-signals on railroads.

Pope, John. b. in Prince William County, Va., 1770; d. in Washington County, Ky., July 12, 1845. American politician; brother of Nathaniel Pope. He was Democratic U.S. senator from Kentucky (1807-13), president pro tempore of the Senate (1811), governor of Arkansas Territory (1829-35), and member of Congress from Kentucky (1837-43).

Pope, John. b. at Louisville, Ky., March 16, 1822; d. at Sandusky, Ohio, Sept. 23, 1892; son of Nathaniel Pope. American soldier, a Union general in the Civil War. He was graduated (1842) from West Point and served in the Mexican War, emerging as a brevet captain. In the years before the Civil War he served on various tours of duty as a topographical engineer, becoming a first lieutenant in 1853 and a captain in 1856. He was (April 15-July 29, 1861) mustering officer at Chicago, and as a brigadier general of volunteers joined General J. C. Frémont's command in Missouri. He commanded (March-April, 1862) the Army of the Mississippi during H. W. Halleck's operations and opened the river almost down to Memphis. He became (March 21, 1862) a major general of volunteers and took part in the operations leading up to, and after, Corinth. He was made a brigadier general in the regular army while organizing the Army of Virginia, but continued to serve as a major general of volunteers. Amid insubordinate difficulties arising from jealousy of rank, he led the Army of Virginia in the operations leading up to his defeat at Second Bull Run (Aug. 27-30, 1862). He was relieved of his command on Sept. 5, 1862, and was assigned to the Department of the Northwest. He became (January, 1865) commander of the Division (later Department) of the Missouri and on March 13, 1865, in recognition of his services on the Mississippi River in the spring of 1862, received a commission as brevet major general in the regular army. In 1867 he commanded the 3rd military district in the South; he was commander (1868-70) of the Department of the Great Lakes, commander (1870-83) of the Department of the Missouri, being promoted (Oct. 26, 1882) to the permanent rank of major general, and commanded (1883-86) the Department of California and Division of the Pacific.

Pope, John Russell. b. at New York, April 24, 1874; d. Aug. 27, 1937. American architect, who designed the National Gallery of Art at Washington, D.C., and many other public buildings and monuments. He was a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, a chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and a member of the National Academy of Design and the Academy of Arts and Letters; served on the National Commission of Fine Arts and the Federal Board of Consulting Architects.

Pope, Nathaniel. b. at Louisville, Ky., Jan. 5, 1784; d. at St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 22, 1850. American statesman; brother of John Pope (1770-1845) and father of John Pope (1822-92). He was appointed (1809) secretary of the Illinois territory, served as territorial delegate (1816-18) to Congress, composed (1818) the resolution for the admission of Illinois as a state, and was a federal district judge (1819-50) for Illinois.

Pope, Sir William Jackson. b. at London, 1870; d. at Cambridge, England, Oct. 17, 1939. English chemist, known for his researches in molecular dissymmetry, crystallography, improvement of dyestuffs, stereochemis-try, and organic chemistry. He revealed the first optically active sulfur, tin, and selenium compounds, and developed the process for direct synthesis of mustard gas which made possible its production in quantity during World War I.

Pope-Hennessy (-hen-'e.si), Una. [Maiden name, Birch.] b. 1876; d. at London, Aug. 16, 1949. English writer. Author of Three English Women in America (1929), The Aristocratic Journey (1931), The Laird of Abbotsford (1932), Edgar Allan Poe: A Critical Biography (1934), The Closed City (1938), Agnes Strickland (1940), Durham Company (1941), Charles Dickens (1943), and A Czarina's Story (1948).

Poperinge (pō'pe.ring; Flemish, pō'pe.ring.e). [Also, Poperinghe (pō'pe.raŋg).] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, situated near the French border, ab. 7 mi. W of Ypres. Trade center of a hops and hemp growing district, it has ceramics and shoe industries. The town suffered considerable damage in World War I, but went relatively unscathed in World War II. 12,405 (1947).

Popham (pōp'am), Sir Henry Robert Moore Brooke. b. Sept. 18, 1878; d. at Halton, England, Oct. 20, 1953. British aviator, commander in chief (1940-41) of British forces in the Far East as air chief marshal. He was governor (1937-39) of Kenya. He assumed the additional surname of Popham in 1904.

Popham, Sir John. b. in Somerset, 1531; d. June 10, 1607. English jurist, lord chief justice of England (1592-1607). He was presiding justice at the trials of Sir Walter Raleigh for conspiracy (1603) and of Guy Fawkes for attempted assassination of the king (1606).

Popish Plot. In English history, an alleged conspiracy of the Roman Catholics in 1678 to murder Charles II and control the government in the interest of the Roman Catholic Church. The story was chiefly contrived by Titus Oates, and, as the result of circumstantial evidence found by investigators, raised popular hysteria to such heights that many Roman Catholics were killed.

Popitz (pō'pits), Johannes. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Dec. 2, 1884; executed at Berlin, 1945. German government official. He served (1925-20) as state secretary for finance, as minister without portfolio (1932-33) in Kurt von Schleicher's cabinet, and as Prussian finance minister (1933 et seq.). He was active in the abortive attempt to assassinate Hitler in July, 1944.

Poplar (pōp'lar). Metropolitan borough in E London, in the County of London, situated on the river Thames ab. 4 mi. E of Fenchurch Street Station. It includes the Blackwall district, and the Isle of Dogs, containing the East India Docks, the West India Docks, and Millwall Dock. 73,544 (1951).

Poplar Bluff. City in SE Missouri, county seat of Butler County, on the Black River, in an iron and clay mining region. 15,064 (1950).

Popo (pō'pō), Grand. See Grand Popo.

Popo, Little. See Anácho.

Popo Agie (pō.pō'zi.e). See under Big Horn River.

Popocatepetl (pō.pō.kat'ē.pet.l, pō.pō.kā.tā'pet.l). Volcano in S central Mexico, ab. 40 mi. SE of Mexico City. It is surmounted by a crater 2,000 ft. in width, and is one of the highest peaks of North America. Elevation, ab. 17,887 ft.

Popolo d'Italia (pō'pō.lō dē.tā'lyā), II. See II Popolo d'Italia.

Popol Vuh (pō.pōl' vō). [Also, Popul Vuh.] Manuscript written in the 16th century in the Quiché Indian language, but with a modified Latin alphabet, which records fragments of the pre-conquest mythology, religion, and history of the Quiché Indians in Guatemala.

Popov (pō'pōf'), Aleksandr Serafimovich. See Serafimovich, A.

Popp (pōp), Augustin. See Waldeck, Heinrich Suso.
Poppaea Sabina (pō.pē'a.sā.bī'nā). d. 65 A.D. Wife of Otho, and mistress, and subsequently wife, of Nero. She was divorced from the former and married the latter in 62. She is usually blamed as the person who chiefly influenced Nero in his murder of his wife Octavia, her sister Antonia, his mother Agrippina, the philosopher Seneca, and others. He is said to have kicked her so severely in a fit of rage that she died.

Popper (pô'per), David. b. at Prague, Dec. 9, 1843; d. Aug. 7, 1913. Bohemian cellist. His compositions include the Sacaband and Garotte and other popular pieces for his instrument, and he also published Violoncello School in four volumes.

Pöppig or Pöppig (pö'p'ih), Eduard Friedrich. b. at Plauen, Saxony, Germany, July 16, 1798; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 4, 1868. Prussian naturalist and explorer in North America, Cuba, Chile, Peru, and the Amazon basin.

Popular Concerts. Institution organized (1858) at London by Sir Julius Benedict. With the addition (1859) of classical numbers to the programs, regular and "pop" concerts were given alternately. The last concerts in this series were given in 1898.

Popular Front. Term used to describe the working alliance of parties opposed to fascism which came into being in various parts of the world in the 1930's. The term is most often applied specifically to alliances of communist and noncommunist parties of the left, as with the Communist and Socialist parties of France and Spain, which formed governments in their respective countries under the banner of the Popular Front. The Spanish Popular Front fell in the Civil War; the French, torn by internal dissensions, was succeeded by the government of Edouard Daladier.

Populist Party. [Also, the People's Party.] In U.S. history, a political organization formally established (May, 1891) at Cincinnati, with backing chiefly from agrarian elements and labor groups. The party, whose official designation was the People's Party, held its first national convention at Omaha in July, 1892. The chief planks of the Populist platform included the public ownership of railroads, telegraphs, and telephones, the free and unlimited coinage of silver, an increase in the per capita amount of paper money, and a graduated income tax. The Populist animus was directed against the gold standard and Eastern financial interests accused of fostering and controlling monopoly. The party's presidential candidate in 1892 was James B. Weaver, who received 22 electoral votes. In 1896, 1900, and 1908, the Populists backed the presidential candidacy of William Jennings Bryan. The party's power and following waned rapidly after 1908.

Popul Vuh (pö.pöl'vö). See Popol Vuh.

Porcelin (pö.k'lan), Jean Baptiste. See Molière.

Porbandar (pör.bun'dar). [Also: Porebandar, Poorbunder.] Seaport in the peninsula of Kathiawar, Union of India, ab. 275 mi. NW of Bombay, on the Arabian Sea. The foreign trade from this port was once considerable. 48,493 (1911).

Porché (pör.shä), François. b. at Cognac, France, 1877; d. 1914. French poet and critic. Author of poems collected in À chaque jour (1904), Au loin, peut-être (1909), Le Dessous du masque (1914), and other books, as well as of numerous studies of contemporary and recent poets. He was considered particularly expert in the history of the symbolist school, especially the branch represented by Paul Verlaine.

Porcia (pör'sha). See Portia.

Porcina (pör'si.na). Surname of Lepidus, Marcus Aemilius (consul 137 B.C.).

Porcius (pör'shus), Azolinus. Latinized name of Azo.

Porcius Festus (fös'tus). See Festus, Porcius.

Porco (pör'kö). Village in Bolivia, ab. 22 mi. SW of Potosí. Near it were the most productive silver mines of the Incas, and they were worked with immense profit by the Spaniards for a long time after the conquest. It was miners from Porco who discovered the still richer deposits at Potosí.

Porcuna (pör.kö'nä). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 25 mi. NW of Jaén. 13,493 (1940).

Porcupine (pör'kü.pín), Peter. Pseudonym of Cobbett, William.

Porcupine, The. Play by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published in 1915.

Porden (pör'den), Eleanor Ann. Maiden name of Franklin, Eleanor Ann.

Pordenone (pör.dä.nö'nä). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Friuli-Venezia Giulia, in the province of Udine, between Udine and Treviso. Important for its cotton-textile manufactures, it also produces paper and agricultural machinery. It has a Gothic cathedral (started in the 13th, and finished in the 15th century) and a town hall of the 13th century. Both the cathedral and palazzo comunale (town hall) sustained damage to roofs and windows in World War II, but both were repairable and no art treasures were lost.

Pop. of commune, 22,174 (1936); of town, 12,179 (1936).

Porbandar (pör.bun'dar). See Porbandar.

Porges (pör'ges), Otto. b. at Brandeis (Brand's) in Bohemia, April 1, 1879—, Austrian clinician. He introduced (1929) gastrophotography and developed (1908) a variation of the Wassermann test for syphilis (called the Meier-Porges test). He introduced also a pregnancy test, demonstrated (1909) hypoglycemia in patients with Addison's disease, and described hypochloric uremia.

Porgy (pör'gi). Novel by DuBoise Heyward, published in 1925. The dramatized version (written with his wife, Dorothy Heyward) was awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1927. The story, which formed the basis for Gershwin's opera Porgy and Bess (1935), is laid against the background of Catfish Row, the Negro tenement district on the Charleston waterfront.

Porgy, Captain. Comic character in The Partisan (1835), Woodcraft (1854), and other historical romances by William Gilmore Simms.

Pori (pö'ri). [Swedish, Björneborg.] Town in SW Finland, in the lään (department) of Turku-Pori, situated on the Gulf of Bothnia NW of Helsinki. It is furthest north of Finland's comparatively ice-free Bothnian harbors, and has machine, textile, paper, and pulp manufactures. 43,983 (1951).

Po River (pö). See Po.

Porjus (pör'yus). Village in N Sweden, in the län (county) of Norrbotten, situated on the Lule River, ab. 65 mi. S of Kiruna: site of the largest hydroelectric power development in N Sweden.

Porkkala (pör'kä.lä). Leased territory in S Finland, occupying a peninsula, adjacent parts of the mainland, and numerous islands on the N coast of the Gulf of Finland. At the nearest point, it is ab. 11 mi. SW of Helsinki. The area was leased to the U.S.S.R. for 50 years as a military and naval base by the treaty of 1947. The main railroad from Helsinki to Turku (Åbo) passes through the territory; trains are permitted transit with drawn blinds, and upon payment of a transit fee by Finland to the U.S.S.R. Area, ab. 150 sq. mi.

Pornic (pör'nék). Sea-bathing resort in the department of Loire-Inférieure, France, ab. 28 mi. W of Nantes.

Pornichet (pör'nê.shê). Resort in the department of Loire-Inférieure, France, near St.-Nazaire.

Poro (pör'ö). See under Camotes Islands.

Porokoto (pör'ö.kö'tö). [Also: Porocoto, Purucoto.] Tribe of South American Indians of N Brazil, occupying the region of the upper Rio Branco. Their language is classified in the Roraima group of the central branch of the northern division of the Caribian linguistic family. They are today greatly reduced in numbers and are united with the Maucusi tribe, who are of the same classification.

Poromushir (pör'ö.mu.shir'). See Paramushir.

Poros (pör'ros). [Also: Kalauria; ancient name, Kalauria.] Island E of Argolis, S Greece, in the nomos (department) of Attica and Boeotia, situated on the Saronic Gulf, ab. 7 mi. S of Aegina, near the coast of Argolis. It contained in ancient times a temple of Poseidon. Demosthenes died here in 322 B.C. Length, ab. 5 mi.; area, 8 sq. mi.; pop. 6,449 (1936).

Porphyry (pör'fir'i). [Latin, Porphyrius (pör'fir'i.us); original name, Malchus.] b. at Tyro, or Batanea (Bashan), c.233 A.D.; d. at Rome, c.305. Neo-Platonic philosopher, a disciple of Plotinus, and teacher of philosophy at Rome. He wrote a treatise against the Christians (15 books), a life of Plotinus, a life of Pythagoras, works on Aristotle, commentaries, chronicles, and others. He is credited with originating the Tree of Porphyry, a logical device for analyzing by a succession of dichotomies. His Latin name, meaning "purple," is a punning allusion to his name Malchus, which means "king" in Syrian.

Porpora (pör'pö.rä), Niccolò (or Nicola) Antonio. b. at Naples, Italy, Aug. 19, 1686; d. there, c.1766. Italian singing master and composer. He was the instructor of Farinelli, Caffarelli, and others, and is said to have been the greatest singing-master that ever lived. He composed between 30 and 40 operas and cantatas, oratorios, sonatas, fugues, and others.

Porras (pôr'ras). Belisario. b. at Las Tablas, Panama, Nov. 28, 1856; d. at Panama, Aug. 28, 1942. Panamanian jurist, president (1912-16, 1920-24) of Panama. He also served as minister to the U.S. (1910) and as acting president (1918-20). During his first administration the Panama Canal was opened (August, 1914) to traffic and a treaty defining boundaries between the republic and the Canal Zone was ratified (September, 1914).

Porrentruy (pôr.rân.trû'é). [German, Pruntrut.] Town in NW Switzerland, at the northern extremity of the canton of Bern, situated near the French border. 6,121 (1941).

Porretanus (pôr.e.tâ'nus), Gilbertus. See Gilbert de la Forée.

Porretta (pôr.ret'tà), Lady Clementina della. See Clementina, Lady.

Porrima (pôr'i.ma). Third-magnitude binary star γ Virginis.

Porsanger Fjord (pôr.sâng.ér). Inlet of the Arctic Ocean, penetrating Norway SE of North Cape. Length, ab. 75 mi.

Porsena (pôr.se.nâ), Lars. [Also, Porsenna (pôr.sen'â).] In Roman legend, a king of Clusium in Etruria, who gained power over Rome in the 6th century. He was celebrated in the legends of Tarquin, Horatius Cocles, and others.

Porsgrunn (pôr.sgrûn). Town in SE Norway, in the fylke (county) of Telemark, at the mouth of the Skienselva (Skien River) on the coast; fertilizer, metal, chinaware, and other manufactures. 9,003 (1946).

Porson (pôr'son), Richard. b. at East Ruston, Norfolkshire, England, Dec. 25, 1759; d. Sept. 25, 1808. English classical scholar. He was a child prodigy, whose education at Eton and Cambridge was subsidized by patrons. His Letters to Archdeacon Travis, on the spurious verse I John V. 7 (1788-89) aroused great interest, but resulted in severe criticism of its author, although its scholarship has been shown to be exemplary. In 1792 he was elected Regis professor of Greek at Cambridge. His brilliant scholarship was displayed in subsequent years in his editions of Euripides and Aeschylus and in his notes on such other Greek writers as Aristophanes and Hesychius. He advanced not only textual criticism but also knowledge of Greek meter.

Porta (pôr'ta), Baccio della. See Bartolommeo, Fra.

Porta, Giambattista della. b. at Naples, Italy, c.1540; d. there, 1615. Italian natural philosopher. He founded the Academy Secretorum Naturae at Naples, and was a member of the Academy Dei Lincei at Rome. His physical experiments contributed to optics and the knowledge of light, although he was more interested in magic and alchemy than in scientific investigation. His chief work is Magia naturalis (1569).

Portaas (pôr'tas), Herman Theodore. Original name of Wildenvey, Herman Theodore.

Port Adelaide (ad'ê.lâd). Seaport in S Australia, the port of the city of Adelaide, South Australia, situated on the Gulf of St. Vincent. It forms a part of the metropolitan area of Adelaide. 33,382 (1947).

Portadown (pôr.tâ.doun'). Municipal borough, market town, and linen-manufacturing center in Northern Ireland, in Ulster province and County Armagh, situated on the river Bann ab. 24 mi. SW of Belfast. 16,600 (est. 1949).

Portaels (pôr'tâls), Jean François. b. at Vilvorde, Belgium, May 1, 1818; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 8, 1895. Belgian painter, from 1878 director of the academy at Brussels.

Portage (pôr'tâj). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Cambria County, in a bituminous coal area. 4,371 (1950).

Portage. [Former name, Portage City.] City in S Wisconsin, county seat of Columbia County, on the Wisconsin River and on the canal joining the Wisconsin and Fox rivers, ab. 87 mi. NW of Milwaukee; manufactures of hosiery, shoes, granite products, and beer. 7,334 (1950).

Portage Falls. Cascade 110 ft. in height, in the middle course of the Genesee River, in W central New York.

Portage Lake. Lake in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, ab. 65 mi. NW of Marquette, connected with Keweenaw Bay.

Portage la Prairie (lâ prâr'i). City in the province of Manitoba, Canada, midway between Brandon and Winnipeg, ab. 58 mi. W of the latter; distributing center for the extensive wheat-growing area surrounding it; site of several manufacturing plants; summer resort. 8,511 (1951).

Portageville (pôr'tâj.vîl). City in SE Missouri, in New Madrid County; agricultural trading center. 2,662 (1950).

Portal (pôr'tâl), Sir Charles Frederick Algernon. [Title, 1st Viscount Portal of Hungerford.] b. at Hungerford, Berkshire, England, May 21, 1893—. British air force officer. He was director (1937-38) of organization at the air ministry, chief (1940) of the bomber command, and chief (1940-45) of the air staff.

Port Alberni (al.bér'nî). Small seaport in the S central section of Vancouver Island, British Columbia, Canada, connected with the sea on the W by a narrow but navigable sea passage. It is connected with other points on the island by railroad. 7,845 (1951).

Portalegre (pôr.ta.le'gre). District in E central Portugal, in the province of Alto Alentejo. Capital, Portalegre; area, ab. 2,368 sq. mi.; pop. 197,838 (1950).

Portalegre. Town and concelho (commune) in E Portugal, in the province of Alto Alentejo; capital of the district of Portalegre, ab. 101 mi. NE of Lisbon; textile manufactures. Pop. of concelho, 26,115 (1940); of town, 11,005 (1940).

Portales (pôr.tâ'les). City in E New Mexico, county seat of Roosevelt County, in an irrigated valley; shipping center for sweet potatoes, peanuts, tomatoes, strawberries, grapes, and dairy products. 8,112 (1950).

Portales (pôr.tâ'les), Diego José Victor. b. at Santiago, Chile, June 26, 1793; killed at Valparaíso, Chile, June 6, 1837. Chilean politician. He became (1830) minister of war, and from that time exerted influence which made him practically ruler of Chile. He treated the protesting liberals with great severity, and to him were mainly due the institutions which kept the conservatives in power for more than 40 years. Portales was elected vice-president and was again minister of war under Joaquín Prieto (September, 1835 et seq.). Having declared war on Peru, he was reviewing the troops when a mutiny broke out, and he was imprisoned and shot.

Port Alfred (al'fred). Town on the Saguenay River, Quebec, Canada, situated at the head of one of the arms of the river midway between the St. Lawrence River and Lake St. John. 3,937 (1951).

Portalis (pôr.tâ'les), Jean Étienne Marie. b. at Bausset, France, 1745; d. at Paris, Aug. 25, 1807. French jurist and statesman. He was a member (1795-97) of the Council of Ancients, became (1801) director of public worship, and was minister of public worship in 1804. He was chief editor of the Code Civil.

Port Allegany (al'é.gâ'nî). Borough in N Pennsylvania, in McKean County on the Allegheny River; glass, toy, and silk manufactures. 2,519 (1950).

Port Allen (al'en). Town in S central Louisiana, parish seat of West Baton Rouge Parish. It is an industrial community, near Baton Rouge. 3,097 (1950).

Porta Maggiore (pôr'tâ mäd.jô'ri). Ancient gate in the walls of Rome. It consists of two arches, and was designed to carry the waters of two aqueducts over two great highways. These arches open between three rusticated piers, and the attic bears inscriptions recording the construction by Claudius and restorations by Vespasian and Titus.

Port Angeles (an'je.lés). City in NW Washington, county seat of Clallam County, in the Olympic Mountains. 11,233 (1950).

Porta Romana (pôr'tâ rô.mä'nä). See Arch of Augustus.

Port Arthur (är'thër). [Chinese, Lüshun, Lüshun-kow; Japanese, Ryojun, Ryojun-ko.] Town and naval station in NE China, in the province of Liaoning, near the extremity of the Liaotung Peninsula, Manchuria, in what was formerly the territory of Kwantung; the terminus of a branch of the South Manchurian Railway. It was captured by the Japanese on Nov. 24, 1894, during the first Sino-Japanese War, but returned to China, by whom it was leased to Russia in 1898. The Russians developed it as their eastern warm-water port, and the lease was transferred to Japan by the Treaty of Portsmouth in 1905. In 1945 the port was returned to China, and by Sino-Russian agreement (August, 1945) was made a joint naval base for a 30-year period. It has been included (since 1949) in the special municipality of Port Arthur-Dairen. 44,394 (1946).

Port Arthur. City in W Ontario, Canada, capital of Thunder Bay district, situated on the NW shore of Lake Superior, ab. 3 mi. from Fort William. It is a rail terminus and an important grain port. Pop. of city, 31,161 (1951); of metropolitan area (including Fort William), 71,191 (1951).

Port Arthur. City in E Texas, in Jefferson County, on Sabine Lake, near the Gulf of Mexico: the leading U.S. pipe-line terminus and a major refining, shipbuilding, and petroleum-exporting port. The impetus for industrial development was supplied in 1895 by Arthur Edward Stilwell, for whom the city was named. Pop. of city, 57,530 (1950); of urbanized area, 82,150 (1950).

Port Arthur-Dairen (-d'i-rén'). Special municipality in NE China, in Manchuria, occupying the S extremity of the Liaoting Peninsula, in Kwantung Territory. The U.S.S.R. has special rights and privileges within this zone, in accordance with an agreement reached with China in 1945. Area, 1,312 sq. mi.; pop. 1,054,465 (1950).

Port-au-Prince (pòrt'ô-prin'; French, pòr.tô.prans). [Former name, Port-Républicain.] City in SW Haiti, on a bay of the Caribbean Sea; capital and chief city. It was founded in the middle of the 18th century, and has several times been devastated by earthquakes and fires. 142,840 (1950).

Port-aux-Basques (pòr.tô.bask'). Western terminus of the Newfoundland railway, situated on the SW corner of Newfoundland, near Cape Ray. It is the island's chief port of entry from Canada and the U.S. and is connected with the mainland by ferry. Pop. (with the adjacent community of Channel), 2,634 (1951).

Porta Westphalia (pòr.tà.west.fà'l'ya). Latin name of the Westphalian Gate.

Port Barton (bàr'ton). See Barton, Port.

Port Blair (blàr). Colony and convict settlement belonging to the Union of India, in South Andaman, Andaman Islands, Indian Ocean; established by the British in 1858. Pop. (including convicts) 19,487 (1941).

Port Bonbonon or Bombonon (bòm.bôn.nôn'). See Bonbonon, Port.

Port Bouet (pòr bwe). See under Abidjan.

Port Carbon (kàr'bon). Borough in E Pennsylvania, in Schuylkill County, on the Schuylkill River; residential suburb of Pottsville. 3,024 (1950).

Port Castries (kàs.tré, kàs'trés). See Castries.

Port Chester (chès'tér). [Former names: Saw Log, Saw Pit.] Village in SE New York, in Westchester County, ab. 22 mi. NE of New York; manufactures of ammonia, candy, nuts and bolts, furnaces, coal and gas ranges, soft drinks, and cartons. 23,970 (1950).

Port Clinton (klín'ton). Village in N Ohio, county seat of Ottawa County, at the mouth of the Portage River; manufactures of canned foods and boats. It was platted in 1828, and named for De Witt Clinton. 5,541 (1950).

Port Colborne (kòl'börn). Lake port in S Ontario, Canada, on the N shore of Lake Erie at the S end of the Welland Canal. There are industries in the town, but its chief importance lies in its position as a terminus of the canal. 8,275 (1951).

Port Cornwallis (kòrn.wol'is). Former British settlement on North Andaman, Andaman Islands, Indian Ocean. It now belongs to the Union of India.

Port Cortez (kòr.tez'). See Puerto Cortés, Honduras.

Port Culion (kò.lí.ôn'). See Culion, bay and town.

Port-de-Bouc (pòr.de.bòk). Town in SE France, in the department of Bouches-du-Rhône, situated on the Mediterranean Sea opposite the mouth of the Rhone River, between Marseilles and Arles. It is a port on the canal from Arles to Bouc and connected with the Étang de Berre by the Canal of Martigues. It has shipyards, chemical and other factories, and fisheries. It suffered damage during World War II. 6,163 (1946).

Port de La Calle (pòr de là.kál). See La Calle.

"Porte Crayon" (pòrt'krá'ôn). Pseudonym of Strother, David Hunter.

Porte étroite (pòrt è.tròit), La. [English title, Strait Is the Gate.] Short novel (1909; Eng. trans., 1924) by André Gide, which studies the course of a completely pure and virtuous love. It was conceived by the author as the antithesis of his earlier exploration of immoralism, L'Immoraliste (1903).

Portel (pòr.tèl), Le. See Le Portel.

Port Elizabeth (è.liz'â.bèth). Seaport in S Africa, in Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated on Algoa Bay ab. 438 mi. from Capetown and ab. 384 mi. from Durban by sea. It is the second largest city of the province and an important industrial center, with shoe and metal-goods factories and several American automobile assembly plants. It has important foreign commerce and is one of the chief harbors of the Union. Pop. 133,400, including 58,904 Europeans (1946).

Porteous Riots (pòr'tyus). Riots at Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1736. They originated in a disturbance at a smuggler's execution, when Captain John Porteous, chief of the city guard, ordered his troops to fire on the crowd. Sixteen or seventeen persons were killed or wounded. Porteous was tried for murder and condemned, but was reprieved, whereupon a mob dragged him from the prison and hanged him, on September 7. This incident is the starting point of Sir Walter Scott's The Heart of Midlothian.

Porter (pòr'tér), Andrew. b. in Montgomery County, Pa., Sept. 24, 1743; d. at Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 16, 1813. American Revolutionary soldier and surveyor. He served at the battles of Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, and Germantown, accompanied (1779) John Sullivan's expedition against the Indians in New York, and supervised (1781) the manufacture of ammunition, at Philadelphia, for the siege of Yorktown. He served as a commissioner (1785-87) for running the W and N boundaries of Pennsylvania, and was surveyor general (1809-13) of Pennsylvania.

Porter, Anna Maria. b. at Durham, England, 1780; d. Sept. 21, 1832. English novelist; sister of Jane Porter and Sir Robert Ker Porter. She wrote Artless Tales (1793-95), Walsh Colville (1797), Octavia (1798), The Lake of Killarney (1804), Honor O'Hara (1826), and The Baroness (1830).

Porter, Arthur Kingsley. b. at Stamford, Conn., Feb. 6, 1853; lost off Inishboffin island, Ireland, July 8, 1933. American archaeologist, professor of the history of art (1920-24) and of fine arts (1924 et seq.) at Harvard. His four-volume Lombard Architecture (1915-17) was given the Grande Médaille de Vermeil of the Société Française d'Archéologie. Author also of Medieval Architecture (1908), Beyond Architecture (1918), Spanish Romanesque Sculpture (1928), and Crosses and Culture of Ireland (1931).

Porter, Cole. b. at Peru, Ind., June 9, 1893—. American composer and lyricist. He abandoned his early intention to be a lawyer, and turned to the study of music at the Music School of Harvard University and with the French composer Vincent D'Indy. He attained his first successes with his scores for Hickory Koo (1921) and the Greenwich Village Follies (1923), and went on to become one of the most popular musical-comedy composers of his time. Among the successful Cole Porter shows have been Fifty Million Frenchmen (1929), Anything Goes (1934), Jubilee (1935), Red, Hot, and Blue (1936), Dubarry Was a Lady (1939), Panama Hattie (1940), Let's Face It (1941), Something for the Boys (1942), Mexican Hayride (1943), Kiss Me, Kate (1948), and Out of This World (1950). He has also written the music for a number of motion pictures, including Born to Dance (1936), Rosalie (1937), Broadway Melody (1940), and You'll Never Get Rich (1941).

Porter, David. b. at Boston, Feb. 1, 1780; d. at Pera, Constantinople, March 3, 1843. American naval officer. He entered the navy in 1798, served in the Tripolitan War (1801-03), being captured with the Philadelphia, was commander of the commerce raider Essex in the War of 1812, taking it into the Pacific, the first time a U.S. naval vessel had been there, and was defeated and taken prisoner in battle near Valparaiso (March 28, 1814). He commanded a squadron in the West Indies in 1823 but caused a diplomatic upset by forcing an apology from the authorities of a town in Puerto Rico for arresting one of his officers; he was recalled (1824), court-martialed, and suspended. He resigned in 1826. He was commander of Mexican naval forces (1826-29), and U.S. chargé d'affaires and then minister to Turkey (1831-43).

Porter, David Dixon. b. at Chester, Pa., June 8, 1813; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 13, 1891. American admiral; son of David Porter. He entered the navy in 1829, and served in the Mexican War. He commanded the mortar fleet under David Farragut on the Mississippi River in 1862, aided in the reduction of Vicksburg in 1863, participated in the Red River expedition in 1864, and commanded the naval forces in the attack on Fort Fisher (December, 1864-January, 1865). He was made vice-admiral in 1866 and admiral in 1870. He was superintendent (1865-69) of the U.S. Naval Academy.

Porter, Edwin S. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., 1870; d. at New York, April 30, 1941. American inventor and pioneer in the motion-picture industry. He joined with Thomas A. Edison in his development of the motion-picture camera, and produced (1899) the first story film, The Life of an American Fireman, for Edison. He also produced (1903) The Great Train Robbery, acclaimed as one of the most influential motion pictures of all time.

Porter, Eleanor. [Maiden name, Hodgman.] b. at Littleton, N.H., Dec. 19, 1868; d. May 23, 1920. American novelist and short-story writer, noted as the creator of the cheerful character "Pollyanna." Author of Cross Currents (1911), The Turn of the Tide (1908), The Story of Marco (1907), Pollyanna (1913), Just David (1916), Oh, Money! Money! (1918), and The Tie That Binds (1919).

Porter, Fitz-John. b. at Portsmouth, N.H., Aug. 31, 1822; d. at Morristown, N.J., May 21, 1901. American soldier, a Union general in the Civil War; nephew of David Porter. He was graduated (1845) from West Point and served in the Mexican War, from which he emerged as a brevet major. He was made a brigadier general of volunteers on May 17, 1861. He served in the Shenandoah Valley, commanded a division and later a corps in the Peninsular Campaign, and after the termination of that action was transferred to the Army of Virginia under John Pope. His role in the disastrous defeat at Second Bull Run (Aug. 27-30, 1862) drew charges from General Pope of Porter's disobedience, disloyalty, and misbehavior in face of the enemy. Porter was relieved of his command (November, 1862) and faced a trial by court-martial which found him guilty. He was cashiered on Jan. 21, 1863; in 1879 a board of general officers reported in his favor after reviewing the case; in 1882 President Arthur remitted the part of Porter's sentence disqualifying him from holding federal office; in August, 1886, he was reappointed colonel of infantry in the army dating back without pay to May 14, 1861, and was almost immediately retired. After being cashiered in 1863 he worked as a mining superintendent in Colorado and was in business (1865-71) at New York. He later held various government posts in New Jersey and at New York, his last one being that of cashier of the New York post office.

Porter, Gene Stratton. b. in Wabash County, Ind., Aug. 17, 1863; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 6, 1924. American novelist. Her works include The Song of the Cardinal (1902), Freckles (1904), At the Foot of the Rainbow (1908), A Girl of the Lumberlost (1909), Music of the Wild (1910), The Harvester (1911), Laddie (1913), Michael O'Halloran (1915), Friends in Feathers (1917), A Daughter of the Land (1918), The White Flag (1923), Jesus of the Emerald (1923), The Keeper of the Bees (1925), and The Fire Bird, poems (1922).

Porter, Harold Everett. [Pseudonym, Holworthy Hall.] b. at Boston, Sept. 19, 1887; d. at Torrington, Conn., June 20, 1936. American writer. Author of Pepper (1915), Paprika (1915), What He Least Expected (1917), Dormie One (1917), The Man Nobody Knew (1919), Egan (1920), Rope (1921), and Colossus (1930).

Porter, Henry. fl. 1596-99. English dramatist. He was one of the authors for the Admiral's Men and, according to the entries in Philip Henslowe's diary, wrote several plays. The only one surviving is The Two Angry Women of Abington (c1598), a comedy of English middle-class domestic life.

Porter, Horace. b. at Huntington, Pa., April 15, 1837; d. May 29, 1921. American general in the Civil War. He was a member of U. S. Grant's staff, with the rank of lieutenant colonel, from April, 1864, to the end of the war, and served (1869-73) as his private secretary. He was ambassador to France (1897-1905), and a delegate from the U.S. to the Hague Conference in 1907.

Porter, Jane. b. at Durham, England, 1776; d. at Bristol, England, May 24, 1850. English novelist; sister of Anna Maria Porter and Sir Robert Ker Porter. She made a great reputation as a romantic novelist. She wrote Thaddeus of Warsaw (1803), The Scottish Chiefs (1810), Tales Round a Winter Hearth (with her sister, 1826), and The Field of Forty Footsteps (1828).

Porter, Jermain Gildersleeve. b. at Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 8, 1852; d. April 14, 1933. American astronomer, noted for his astrometric researches. He was associated (1878-84) with the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, and was director (1884-1930) of the Cincinnati Observatory.

Porter, Katherine Anne. b. at Indian Creek, Tex., May 15, 1894—. American novelist and short-story writer. Author of Flowering Judas (1930), Hacienda (1934), Noon Wine (1937), Pale Horse, Pale Rider (1939), The Leaning Tower (1944), The Days Before (1952), and other books.

Porter, Noah. b. at Farmington, Conn., Dec. 14, 1811; d. at New Haven, Conn., March 4, 1892. American educator. He was professor of metaphysics and moral philosophy at Yale (1846-71), and was president of the university (1871-86). He was the editor in chief of the editions of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary published in 1864 and 1880, and of Webster's International Dictionary of the English Language (1890). Among his works are The Human Intellect (1868), Books and Reading (1870), Science of Nature versus the Science of Man (1871), Elements of Moral Science (1885), Life of Bishop Berkeley (1885), and Kant's Ethics (1886).

Porter, Peter Buell. b. at Salisbury, Conn., Aug. 14, 1773; d. at Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 20, 1844. American general, U.S. secretary of war (1828-29) under John Quincy Adams. He was a member of Congress from New York (1809-12, 1815-16), and served with distinction in the War of 1812, especially at Chippewa and Lundy's Lane (1814).

Porter, Sir Robert Ker. b. at Durham, England, 1777; d. at St. Petersburg, Russia, May 4, 1842. English painter of battle scenes; brother of Jane and Anna Maria Porter. In 1804 he became painter to the emperor of Russia. In 1808 he accompanied Sir John Moore's expedition in Spain, and later was British consul in Venezuela. He left Venezuela for St. Petersburg, and died there.

Porter, Samuel. b. at Farmington, Conn., Jan. 12, 1810; d. there, Sept. 3, 1901. American teacher of the deaf.

Porter, Sarah. b. at Farmington, Conn., Aug. 16, 1813; d. Feb. 17, 1900. American educator, founder (1843) of Miss Porter's School for Girls at Farmington, Conn.

Porter, William David. b. at New Orleans, La., March 10, 1809; d. at New York, May 1, 1864. American commodore in the Civil War; son of David Porter. He served on the lower Mississippi (1861-62).

Porter, William Sydney. [Pseudonym, O. Henry.] b. at Greensboro, N.C., Sept. 11, 1862; d. at New York, June 5, 1910. American journalist and short-story writer. He left school at 15, worked in a drug store for five years, and went to Texas for his health in 1882. After two years on a sheep and cattle ranch, he went in 1884 to Austin, where he found employment as a druggist and as a bookkeeper, and later in the Texas Land Office. He married Athol Estes in 1887, and in 1891 became a bank teller. For one year (1894-95) Porter conducted a humorous weekly, The Rolling Stone, which led to his employment by the Houston Daily Post as a columnist and cartoonist. In 1896, after indictment for embezzlement of the Austin bank's funds, he ran away to New Orleans, where he did newspaper reporting, and thence went to Honduras, which furnished the local color for the short stories he later rewrote into his only novel, Cabbages and Kings (1904). He returned to Texas upon hearing of his wife's illness (1897). After her death, he stood trial (1898), was convicted, and sentenced for five years to the Columbus (Ohio) Penitentiary, where he wrote about a dozen stories which were published in various magazines. Released (1901) for good behavior after three years, he went to Pittsburgh and thence to New York (1902). Porter tried numerous pseudonyms, finally settling on "O. Henry" (probably from seeing articles signed by a French pharmacist of that name in druggists' handbooks). Thereafter, until his death, he contributed at the rate of once a week to the New York Sunday World, Ainslee's, American, Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, McClure's, Munsey's, and many other magazines. His stories are humorous, ironic, and deftly plotted, presenting a vivid, varied, and honest picture of American life (language, dress, customs, politics, morals, and manners, both urban and rural) during the decade 1900-10. Possibly excepting Mark Twain, no writer can be called more truly, typically, or colorfully American than O. Henry. He was as a writer equally at home in New York City, in the small towns of the South, and on the ranches of the West. Such stories as "The Gift of the Magi," "An Unfinished Story," "The Furnished Room" (in The Four Million, 1906), "A Municipal Report" (Strictly Business, 1910), "The Rose of Dixie," "The Hiding of Black Bill" (Options, 1909), "Cupid à la Carte," "The Caballero's Way" (Heart of the West, 1907), and many others, are still widely anthologized. Other volumes of stories include The Trimmed Lamp (1907), The Voice of the City (1908), The Gentle Gaffer (1908), Roots of Destiny (1909), and, published posthumously, Whirligigs (1910), Sizes and Sevens (1911), Rolling Stones (1912), Waifs and Strays (1917), O. Henryana (1920), Postscripts (1923), and O. Henry Encore (1939). See O. Henry Biography, by C. Alphonso Smith (1916), O. Henry, the Man and His Work, by E. Hudson Long (1949), and A Bibliography of William Sydney Porter (O. Henry), by Paul S. Clarkson (1938).

Porterdale (pôr'tér.däl). Town in N Georgia, in Newton County: manufactures of twine, rubber hose, and textiles. 3,207 (1950).

Porter Proposition (pôr'tér). Convention accepted by 39 nations at the Hague Conference of 1907 which permits, under certain circumstances, armed intervention by one nation against another to compel payment of contractual debts, public or private, owed to a citizen of the intervening nation. Proposed by Horace Porter on behalf of the U.S., it insisted upon arbitration as a preliminary step and condoned force only if the debtor nation refuses to arbitrate or to abide by the judgment of the arbitrating commission. It was put forth as an alternative to the Drago Doctrine, which repudiated intervention under any circumstances. In actual practice, acceptance of the Porter Proposition signalized international acceptance of the U.S. as the dominant power in the Western Hemisphere: the type of unilateral military action by European powers which had brought the Drago Doctrine into being could not now occur; on the other hand, military intervention was still possible if arbitration failed. In the eyes of many Latin Americans, who well understood the dominant role which would be played by the U.S. in any arbitration proceedings, this simply meant that the U.S. would now decide when and for what reasons intervention might be permitted. To those who supported the Drago Doctrine, intervention under any circumstances whatever could be viewed only as a violation of national sovereignty, and for this reason the Porter Proposition, which did not explicitly rule out the use of external force, was never willingly accepted by the governments of most of the republics south of the Rio Grande.

Porterville (pôr'tér.vil). City in C California, in Tulare County, N of Los Angeles: processing and shipping point for oranges, olives, fruits, and vegetables. 6,904 (1950).

Portes Gil (pôr'tās nēl'). Emilio. b. at Ciudad Victoria, Mexico, Oct. 3, 1891—. Mexican lawyer and political leader, provisional president (December, 1928-February, 1930) of Mexico. He was four times chosen a national deputy (1916-20), was provisional governor (1920) and governor (1925-28) of the state of Tamaulipas, served as minister of the interior (1928), and was provisional president (1928-30) of Mexico following the assassination of Álvaro Obregón. He was minister (1931-32) to France, attorney general (1932-34), and minister of foreign affairs (1934-36). Author of a new Mexican civil code, and of the law abolishing the death penalty in federal districts and territories.

Porte St.-Antoine (pôrt sañ.tāñ.twāñ). Triumphal arch, formerly standing at Paris, through which the Rue St.-Antoine passed, N of the spot where the Bastille stood. A gate was built here in 1380, and on Sept. 14, 1574, Henry III, on his return from Poland, made his triumphal entry through it. A beautiful Renaissance arch was erected to commemorate the event. In 1660 Louis XIV also made a triumphal entry at this gate, and the arch was further embellished. It was demolished in 1778, but the river gods from the spandrels of the arch were afterward built into the gate of the Beaumarchais garden, and are now in the Cluny museum.

Porte St.-Denis (sāñ.dē.nē). Triumphal arch on the Boulevard St.-Denis, Paris, built in 1672 in honor of the victories of Louis XIV in the Low Countries. It has a single archway with reliefs above, Victories in the spandrels, and warlike trophies adorning simulated obelisks on each side. The width is 82 ft., and the height 81.

Porte St.-Martin (sāñ.mār.tāñ). Triumphal arch on the Boulevard St.-Martin, Paris, built in 1674 in honor of Louis XIV. It commemorates the taking of Besançon and the victories over the Imperialists. It has a large archway between two small ones, with reliefs in the spandrels of the large opening. Above the cornice there is an attic. The height and breadth are both 57 ft.

Port Everglades (ev'ér.glādz). See under Port Lauderdale, Fla.

Port Famine (fam'in). Place in S Patagonia, S of Punta Arenas, so named by the English sea captain Thomas Cavendish in the late 16th century when he found there the starving remnants of a Spanish colony established (c1580) to protect the Strait of Magellan against non-Spanish sea traffic.

Port Farina (fā.rē.nā). See Porto Farina.

Port Folio (pôrt fō'li.ō). The. Philadelphia literary magazine (1801-27) founded by Joseph Dennie. Originally a weekly, it became a monthly in 1809. The publication was arch-conservative, predicting failure for American democracy.

Port Francqui (pôr frāñ.kē). [Also, Ilebo.] Important railroad terminus in the Belgian Congo, in C Africa. It is situated at the head of navigation of the Kasai River, one of the chief tributaries of the Congo, above its confluence with the Sankuru. It is the terminus of the Bas-Congo-Katanga Railroad which, via Elisabethville, connects it with the railroad of Northern Rhodesia and thus with Capetown. The Bas-Congo-Katanga line was built with great difficulty (completed in 1928) to provide an alternative all-Congo route for transporting the ores of the Katanga which had been shipped via the Benguela Railway. The line is 650 mi. long, and is eventually to extend another 480 mi. to Léopoldville.

Port-Gentil (pôr.zhāñ.tē). Small seaport in Gabon territory, French Equatorial Africa, situated on Cape Lopez, on the W coast of Africa. It has lost much activity to the newer port at Pointe-Noire because of the latter's rail facilities. Pop. ab. 10,000.

Port Gibson (gib'son). Town in SW Mississippi, county seat of Claiborne County, near a tributary of the Bayou Carlisle: cotton-growing center. 2,920 (1950).

Port Gilbert (gil'bért). Former name of Racine, Wis.

Port Glasgow or Port Glasgow (glas'gō, -kō; glās'-). [Originally called New Port.] Parliamentary burgh, seaport, and shipbuilding center in S Scotland, in Renfrewshire, situated on the S bank of the river Clyde, ab. 17 mi. W of Glasgow, ab. 422 mi. N of London by rail. The first dry dock in Scotland was built here in 1812. Pop. 21,519 (est. 1948).

Port Gubat (gō'bāt). See Gubat.

Port Hamilton (ham'il.tŏn). Former name of Kyomon.

Port Harcourt (hār'kört, -kört). Town in W Africa, an important seaport in Eastern Provinces, Nigeria, situated on the Bonny River in the E part of the Niger River delta. It is the coastal terminus of the railway line to the coal fields of Udi and the tin mines of the highlands. A fast-growing port, it is achieving increasing importance. It ships tin to Europe, and coal to points along the W African coast; trades also in palm oil. 45,000 (est. 1950).

fāt, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔ, then; ɟ, d or ʝ; s or sh; ʒ, t or ch;

Port Hawkesbury (hòks'ber'í, -bér.í). Port on the S side of Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, Canada, connected with the mainland by a ferry: terminus of the Cape Breton Island rail line. 1,034 (1951).

Portlough (pòrth.kòl'). Urban district and seaside resort in S Wales, in Glamorganshire, situated on Bristol Channel ab. 6 mi. SW of Bridgend, ab. 175 mi. W of London by rail. The town has a small harbor and an excellent golf course. 9,529 (1951).

Port Hope (hòp). Lake port in Durham County, Ontario, Canada, situated on Lake Ontario ab. 61 mi. NE of Toronto; site of an important radium and uranium extraction plant, which utilizes pitchblende concentrate from the Port Radium mining district on the E shore of Great Bear Lake. 6,548 (1951).

Porthos (pòr.tòs; Anglicized, pòr'thòs). One of the "three Musketeers" in The Three Musketeers, and its sequels, by the elder Alexandre Dumas. He is noted for his great size and strength and his inordinate love of display.

Port Hudson (hud.sòn). Place in East Feliciana Parish, La., situated on the Mississippi ab. 91 mi. NW of New Orleans. It was besieged by Union forces under Nathaniel Prentiss Banks in May, 1863, and surrendered July 8.

Port Hueme (we.né.mé). Town in SW California, in Ventura County, on the Pacific coast. It has a dredged harbor usable by craft of modest size, and is a shipping point for lemons grown in the vicinity. 3,024 (1950).

Port Huron (hù.ròn). City in SE Michigan, county seat of St. Clair County, at the influx of the Black River into the St. Clair, ab. 56 mi. NE of Detroit; shipping point for oil; manufactures of auto parts, cement, brass fittings, auto and refrigerator parts, paper, and textiles. The city is on the Canadian border, and is linked with Sarnia, Ontario, by a highway bridge and a railroad tunnel. 35,725 (1950).

Portia (pòr'sha). [Also, Porcia.] d. 42 B.C. Wife of Marcus Brutus, said to have killed herself by swallowing live coals. In Shakespeare's Julius Caesar she does so while insane from anxiety over her husband.

Portia. Principal female character in Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice; an heiress in love with Bassanio. Portia is noted for her law-court defense of Bassanio's friend Antonio, resisting the demand of Shylock for a pound of flesh from Antonio's body.

Portici (pòr.té.ché). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Bay of Naples ab. 5 mi. SE of Naples; seaside resort. It has a small port, fisheries, garment and printing shops, and chemical plants. The former royal Neapolitan castle, erected in the 18th century and surrounded by large gardens, has served since 1873 as an agricultural institute. Near here is the site of ancient Herculaneum, covered in ancient times by volcanic lava. Pop. of commune, 26,049 (1936); of town, 26,009 (1936).

Portile de Fier (pòr.tsé'lá dá fyér'). Rumanian name of the Iron Gate.

Portillo de Uspallata (pòr.té'yò dá òs.pá.yá.tá). Spanish name of Uspallata Pass.

Portillo y Rojas (pòr.té'yò é rō.nás), José López. See López-Portillo y Rojas, José.

Portimão (pòr.té.mou'ñ). [Also: Vila Nova (or Vilanova) de Portimão; Latin, Abicada.] Town and concelho (commune) in S Portugal, in the province of Algarve and district of Faro, situated on the S coast of Portugal, ab. 112 mi. SE of Lisbon; sardine and tuna fisheries; important fish-canning factories. Pop. of concelho, 21,223 (1940); of town, 14,712 (1940).

Portinari (pòr.té.ná.ré), Beatrice. See Beatrice Portinari.

Port Jackson (jak'sòn). See Jackson, Port.

Port Jefferson (jef'é.r.sòn). Unincorporated community (but commonly accepted the status of a village) in SE New York, on the N shore of Long Island; residential suburb. 3,296 (1950).

Port Jervis (jér'vis). City in SE New York, in Orange County, on the Delaware River ab. 60 mi. NW of New York; railroad yards and shops; manufactures of glass. It was settled c1698. Pop. 9,372 (1950).

Port Láirge (lòr'ge). Irish name of County Waterford. Portland (pòr'tlaud). Town in C Connecticut, in Middlesex County, near the Connecticut River. It was long important for shipbuilding and quarrying. 5,186 (1950).

Portland. Urban district in SW England, in Dorsetshire, situated upon and coextensive with the Isle of Portland, ab. 147 mi. SW of London by rail. Portland Castle was built by Henry VIII in 1520. Pop. 11,324 (1951).

Portland. City in E Indiana, county seat of Jay County, ab. 46 mi. SE of Port Wayne. It is in a farming region, and has manufactures of overalls, shirts, and jackets. 7,064 (1950).

Portland. [Indian name, Machigonne; early English name, Falmouth.] City in SW Maine, county seat of Cumberland County, on Casco Bay. The largest city in the state, it is a railroad center and shipping and fishing port. It was settled by the English in 1632, was bombarded by the British in the Revolutionary War; had its name changed to Portland in 1786, became a city in 1832, and was devastated by a fire in 1866. It was the birthplace of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Nathaniel Parker Willis, and Cyrus H. K. Curtis. Pop. of city, 77,634 (1950); of urbanized area, 113,499 (1950).

Portland. Village in S central Michigan, in Ionia County NW of Lansing; grain milling and automobile manufactures. 2,807 (1950).

Portland. Former town in New Brunswick, Canada, now part of St. John.

Portland. [Called the "City of Roses."] City in NW Oregon, county seat of Multnomah County, on the Willamette River just above its confluence with the Columbia, ab. 110 mi. from the mouth of the Columbia; largest city in the state. The leading agricultural center for the Northwest, it is second to Boston as the largest U.S. wool center. Important for ocean shipping, the principal products handled are lumber, wheat, and flour. It is also a manufacturing center for wool textiles, flour, cereals, canned and preserved fruits, vegetables, meats, butter, cheese, and lumber products. It is the seat of the University of Portland and Reed College. Laid out in 1845 and incorporated in 1851 as a city, it was devastated by a fire in 1873. Pop. of city, 305,394 (1940), 373,628 (1950); of urbanized area, 512,643 (1950).

Portland, Dukes and Earls of. Titles held by various members of the Bentinck family.

Portland, Isle of. Peninsula in SW England, in Dorsetshire, projecting into the English Channel, connected with the mainland by Chesil Bank, and terminating in a cape called the Bill of Portland, which has a lighthouse. It is coextensive with the urban district of Portland. Portland Stone (a limestone much used for building purposes, notable in that it may be freely cut in any direction) is extensively quarried. Near here, on Feb. 18, 1653, an indecisive battle was fought between the English fleet under Robert Blake and the Dutch under Maarten Tromp. Length, ab. 4 mi.; breadth, ab. 2 mi.

Portland, Race of. Dangerous current in the English Channel, off the coast of SW England. It occurs in a sea passage between the Isle of Portland, in Dorsetshire, and a neighboring reef, the Shambles.

Portland Vase. Urn of blue transparent cameo-cut glass, ten inches high. It was discovered (c1630) in a sarcophagus near Rome. It is so called from William Henry Cavendish Bentinck, 3rd Duke of Portland, who bought it in 1787 from Sir William Hamilton (its original purchaser in 1770), and placed it in the British Museum in 1810.

Port Lavaca (la.vak'a). City in S Texas, county seat of Calhoun County. It has petroleum refineries, and fisheries for shrimp and oysters. 5,599 (1950).

Portlock (pòr'tlòk). Town in SE Virginia, in Norfolk County, near Portsmouth. It was incorporated in 1940. 3,809 (1950).

Port Louis (lò'sis, lò'í). Seaport, commercial center, and capital of the British crown colony of Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, situated on the NW coast. It was taken by the British in 1810. Pop., including suburbs, 69,471 (1947).

Port-Lyautey (pòr.té.ò.tá'; French, pòr.lyò.tá). [Former name, Kénitra.] Seaport in NW Africa, in French Morocco, on the Atlantic coast near the mouth of the Sebou River, in the N part of the country. It is connected by rail with Casablanca to the SW, with Fez to the E, and with Tangier to the N. The town was named after Marshal Louis Hubert Lyautey, the French conqueror of Morocco. It served as a communications base for Allied forces in World War II. 56,604 (1947).

Port Mahon (ma.hōn'). See Mahón.

Port Moresby (mōrz/bi). Town in SE New Guinea, the administrative center and chief port of the Territory of Papua, situated on the E side of the Gulf of Papua; also provisional capital of the Australian-mandated Territory of New Guinea. It was named after Captain John Moresby, who discovered the excellent harbor in 1873. Close by is the Astrolabe copper field of ab. 2,240 acres. The port is connected to Australia and the rest of New Guinea by air and steamship. In World War II the Japanese tried but failed (1942) to take the town and it became a major Allied base. Pop. ab. 1,500.

Port Natal (na.tal'). Former name of Durban.

Port Neches (nech'ez). City in SE Texas, on the Neches River, in Jefferson County. It has port facilities with access to the Gulf of Mexico, and is of growing importance for its petroleum refineries, production of synthetic rubber, and allied chemical manufactures. 5,448 (1950).

Pôrto (pôr'tô). [Also, Oporto.] District in N Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral. Capital, Oporto; area, ab. 881 sq. mi.; pop. 1,051,924 (1950).

Pôrto Alegre (pôr'tô a.legrê). Commercial and industrial city in S Brazil, a seaport; capital of the state of Rio Grande do Sul. Situated at the confluence of five rivers, and with three airfields, it exports agricultural products; industrial output includes textiles, chemicals, and metals. The city was founded in 1742. Pop. 381,964 (1950).

Pôrto-Alegre (pôr'tô a.legrê), Manuel de Araújo. b. at Rio Pardo, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, Nov. 29, 1806; d. at Lisbon, Portugal, in December, 1879. Brazilian poet, critic, dramatist, painter, and architect. He lived several years in Europe and was one of the advocates of Romanticism in Brazil. Among his poetical works are A Destruição das florestas (1846), O Corcovado (1847), Brasilianas (1863), and Colombo (1866), the longest poem ever written in Portuguese.

Porto Bardia (pôr'tô bār.dê'ā, bār'dyā). See Bardia.

Portobelo (pôr'tô bel'ô). Also: Portobello (pôr'tô bel'ô), Puerto Bello. Village in N Panama, in Colón province, ab. 20 mi. NE of Colón. The bay was discovered and named by Columbus, in 1502. It was unimportant until 1597, when it officially replaced Nombre de Dios, nearby, as the Caribbean port of Panama, and hence of Peru. Every year a fleet arrived from Spain, and returned laden with treasure. It was taken and sacked by the English captain William Parker (1602), by Henry Morgan (1668) and by other buccaners (1679), and by Edward Vernon (1739).

Porto d'Anzio (pôr'tô dān'tsyô). Former name of Anzio.

Porto Empedocle (em.pe'dô.klā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Agrigento, situated on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 4 mi. SW of Agrigento. It has a port, constructed in the 18th century and since enlarged, one of the principal shipping centers for Sicilian sulfur; large sulfur refineries; stone quarries; building industries, macaroni manufacture. Part of the port was constructed with massive blocks taken from the Temple of Jupiter at Agrigento. In World War II an Allied landing took place here in the invasion of Sicily, in July, 1943. Pop. of commune, 14,764 (1936); of town, 13,834 (1936).

Porto Farina (fā.re'nā). [Also, Port Farina.] Small seaport in N Africa, on the coast of Tunisia ab. 25 mi. N of Tunis, near the site of the ancient Utica.

Portoferraro (pôr'tô fer.rā'yô). Town and commune in Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Livorno, the chief place in the island of Elba, situated on the N shore of the island: iron and steel works. Napoleon I lived here while he was on Elba, from March 3, 1814, to Feb. 24, 1815. In the town hall and in the Villa San Martino, where he lived, are a library and a museum of Napoleonic souvenirs. Pop. of commune, 11,650 (1936); of town, 7,682 (1936).

Port of London (lun'don). See London, Port of.

Port of New York Authority. Public agency established in 1921 by the states of New York and New Jersey to administer the port facilities of the New York City area. Its jurisdiction covers the waterfront of New York Bay and the rivers leading into it, the Newark and New York City airports, and the tunnels under, and the George Washington Bridge over, the Hudson River.

Port-of-Spain (-spān'). [Spanish, Puerto de España.] City in NW Trinidad, British West Indies, on the Gulf of Trinidad; capital and chief commercial city; exports sugar, cacao, and coconuts. The Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture is nearby. 102,878 (1946).

Portogallo (pôr'tô.gāl'ô), Marcantonio. Italian name of Portugal, Marcos Antônio da Fonseca.

Portogruaro (pôr'tô.grô.ā'rô). [Also, Porto Gruaro.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Venezia, ab. 34 mi. NE of Venice; agricultural commune, with small industries. There is a Gothic palazzo del commune (town hall) of the 14th century, and various medieval palaces and churches. Connected with the Adriatic Sea by a canal, Portogruaro is an old communications center for the traffic between upper Germany and Venice. Pop. of commune, 18,425 (1936); of town, 4,977 (1936).

Portolá (pôr'tô.lā'), Don Gaspar de. b. c1723; d. c1784. Spanish captain serving in Mexico and California, sometimes called "first governor" of the latter. By government order he transferred (1767-68) the Lower California missions from the expelled Jesuits to the Franciscans, and went with Father Junipero Serra, Franciscan president, from Loreto overland to San Diego when the latter place was founded in 1769. Thence he led a party to Monterey, but arrived at the bay of San Francisco by mistake. He returned to San Diego by Monterey, and in 1770 reached Monterey again. San Carlos mission being then organized, he departed for Mexico by ship in July of that year, having been in Upper California little more than a year assisting Junipero. Since no government existed and the settlements were barely started, the title "governor" is hardly appropriate. He served later (1776) as governor of Puebla, Mexico.

Portomaggiore (pôr'tô.mād.jô'rā). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, in the province of Ferrara, ab. 14 mi. SE of Ferrara; agricultural commune, in a very fertile district. In World War II the parish church here was demolished. Pop. of commune, 25,008 (1936); of town, 4,164 (1936).

Porto Maurizio (pôr'tô mou.rê'tsyô). Former name of Imperia, province.

Porto-Novo (pôr'tô.nô.vô). Capital of Dahomey, French West Africa, situated on a lagoon near the Bight of Benin and connected with Cotonou, the chief port of Dahomey, by a railroad line. It is the chief business and commercial center. 30,827 (1948).

Porto Novo (pôr'tô nô.vô). Small seaport on the Coromandel Coast of the Union of India, S of Madras. Here on July 1, 1781, the British (ab. 8,500) under Sir Eyre Coote defeated Hyder Ali (with ab. 40,000 men).

Porto Plata (pôr'tô plā'tā). See San Felipe de Puerto Plata.

Porto-Riche (pôr.tô.rêsh), Georges de. b. at Bordeaux, France, May 20, 1849; d. at Paris, Dec. 5, 1930. French playwright. Author of Amoureuse (1891), which, played by the actress Réjane at the Odéon Theater, is credited with having broken the sway of naturalism on the French stage. His other plays, which include La Chance de Françoise (1888), Le Passé (1897), Le Vieux Homme (1911), Le Marchand d'Estampes (1917), and Les Vrais Dieux (1929), added little to his reputation.

Porto Rico (pôr'tô rê'kô). See Puerto Rico.

Porto Santo (pôr'tô sun'tô). Small island of the Madeira group, ab. 30 mi. NE of Madeira.

Porto Santo Stefano (pôr'tô sän'tô ste'fā.nô). See under Monte Argentario.

Porto Seguro (pôr'tô se.gô'rô). Seaport in E Brazil, in the state of Bahia. At this point Pedro Álvares Cabral took possession of Brazil for Portugal, in April, 1500. The town was founded in 1535. Pop. under 5,000 (1940).

Porto Seguro. Captaincy of Brazil, granted in 1534 to Pero de Campos Tourinho. It comprised the coastal area from the Mucury River northward 50 leagues. After the death of Campos Tourinho it fell into decay, and later was united to Bahia, of which it now forms the S part.

Porto Seguro, Viscount of. Title of Varnhagen, Francisco Adolfo de.

Porto Tolle (pôr'tô tôl'ā). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Rovigo, situated in the Po delta S of Chioggia; agricultural commune; sugar refinery. Pop. of commune, 16,445 (1936); of town, 3,137 (1936).

Porto Torres (pôr.tô tôr.ràs). [Ancient name, Turris Libisonis.] Town and commune in W Italy, on the island of Sardinia, in the province of Sassari, situated on the Gulf of Asinara NE of Sassari: exports iron ore. The Cathedral of San Gavino is a Romanesque building of the 11th century. A Carthaginian and then a Roman settlement, the town still has remains of ancient times. Pop. of commune, 6,567 (1936); of town, 6,438 (1936).

Porto-Vecchio (pôr.tô.vek.kyô) or Porto Vecchio (pôr.tô.vek.kyô). Town on the French island of Corsica, in the department of Corse, situated on the SE coast of the island, N of Bonifacio. It has remains of old fortifications. In the vicinity are deposits of salt and cork-oak forests. 3,339 (1946).

Porto Velho (pôr.tô.ve.lyô). [Sometimes, Velho.] Capital of Guaporé territory, in W Brazil: a railway terminus on the Madeira River, trade center for Bolivia. 10,205 (1950).

Portoviejo (pôr.tô.vye.hô). [Also, Puertoviejo.] City in W Ecuador, capital of Manabí province: baskets, hats, and tropical produce. 13,998 (est. 1944).

Porto Viro (pôr.tô.vê.rô). [Former name, Taglio di Porto Viro.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Rovigo, situated on the Po River at 20 mi. E of Rovigo; the seat of the commune is at Contarina. The territory, formerly covered with swamps, has been drained in recent decades and is very fertile. Pop. of commune, 23,652 (1936); of town, 4,500 (1936).

Portpatrick (pôr.pat.'rik) or Port Patrick (pôr.pat.'rik). Civil parish and seaport in S Scotland, in Wigtonshire, situated on the North Channel, on the peninsular portion of Wigtonshire (the Rhinns of Galloway), ab. 6 mi. SW of Stranraer, ab. 413 mi. N of London by rail. It was formerly an important port for trade between Scotland and Ireland. 1,101 (1931).

"Port Peanut." Nickname of Mikindani.

Port Radium. [Also, Eldorado Mines.] Mining settlement in N central Mackenzie district, Northwest Territories, Canada, on the E shore of Great Bear Lake ab. 875 mi. N of Edmonton, Alta. In 1930 pitblende ore was found here, and mining operations began. In 1939 ab. 33,400 tons of ore were mined, which yielded ab. 140 tons of uranium and 70 lbs. of radium at the refinery at Port Hope, Ontario. In 1940 the mine ceased operation, but in 1942 the Canadian government reopened the mine, and expropriated it in January, 1944. Port Radium is the greatest source of uranium in North America. Pop. ab. 250 (1946).

Portrait of a Celibate. American title of Nor Many Waters.

Portrait of a Lady, The. Novel by Henry James, published in 1881.

Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, A. Autobiographical novel by James Joyce, published in 1916. The novel is notable for the author's early utilization of the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Port Republic (rê.pub.'lik). Place in Rockingham County, Va., on the Shenandoah River ab. 90 mi. NW of Richmond. Here on June 9, 1862, the Confederates under Thomas Jonathan ("Stonewall") Jackson defeated a Union force under James Shields.

Port-Républicain (pôr.râ.pub.lê.kân). Former name of Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

Port Rex (rêks). Former name of East London.

Port Richmond (rich'mônd). Section of New York City, in the borough of Richmond (Staten Island), on the Kill van Kull: a business district. It is a terminal point of the Bayonne Bridge, which leads to and from Bayonne, N.J. Aaron Burr lived here at the time of his death (1836).

Port-Royal (rô.'gal; French, pô.rwâ.yâl). Cistercian abbey for nuns, ab. 17 mi. SW of Paris. It was founded in 1204, was reformed under the abbess Jacqueline Marie Angélique Arnauld in 1608, was called Port-Royal des Champs after the establishment (1626) of a branch house at Paris (called Port-Royal de Paris), and became noted as a center of Jansenism. The older establishment became famous for its schools and as a center of learning; it was suppressed in 1709. Port-Royal de Paris continued until 1790.

Port Royal (rô.'gal). Former name of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia.

Port Royal. Former name of Beaufort, S. C.

Port Royal Sound. Inlet of the Atlantic, on the S coast of North Carolina, at the mouth of the Broad River.

Portrush (pôr.rush'). Urban district, seaport, and seaside resort in Northern Ireland, in Ulster province and County Antrim, ab. 6 mi. N of Coleraine. Portrush is the most famous seaside resort on the N coast of Ireland, ab. 7 mi. SW of the Giant's Causeway, with which it is connected by an electric railway. 4,052 (1947).

Port Said (sâ.'êd'). Seaport in Egypt, at the N end of the Suez Canal, between the Mediterranean Sea and Lake Manzala. Founded in 1860 during the building of the Suez Canal, it is the terminus of many steamship lines, an important coaling station, and the N terminus of the railway which parallels the canal; it is ab. 107 mi. from Suez and ab. 149 mi. from Cairo. The operating headquarters of the Suez Canal Company are situated in the city. The harbor covers an area of ab. 570 acres and requires constant dredging. Pop., with suburbs, 178,432 (1947).

Portsea (pôr.t'sê). District and ward of Portsmouth, England, on Portsea Island N of Portsmouth proper. 21,339 (1931).

Portsea Island. Island in S England, in Hampshire, situated in Portsmouth Harbour, on which Portsmouth is located. It is ab. 4 mi. long and ab. 3 mi. wide.

Portslade-by-Sea (pôr.t'slâd). Urban district in SE England, in East Sussex, ab. 4 mi. W of Brighton, ab. 54 mi. S of London by rail. 13,572 (1951).

Portsmouth (pôr.t'smuth). City, county borough, naval station, and seaport in S England, in Hampshire, situated on reclaimed land (Portsea Island) on Portsmouth Harbour, ab. 27 mi. SE of Southampton, ab. 78 mi. SW of London by rail. Besides Portsmouth proper (the naval garrison), it includes the adjoining Portsea (where the naval dockyard is located), Landport (the civilian workers' quarter), and Southsea (a seaside resort). Gosport, opposite, where part of the naval establishment is located, may be considered to be properly a part of Portsmouth. Portsmouth is the principal naval station of England, and is noted for its fine harbor. Near it is the roadstead of Spithead. The dockyard at Portsea is the most important in the country. Portsmouth has aircraft factories and a small clothing industry, catering mainly to the naval establishment. The Church of Saint Thomas Becket is notable. Portsmouth rose to importance in the 13th century and was strongly fortified in the 16th century. Pop. of county borough, 233,464 (1951).

Portsmouth. City in SE New Hampshire, in Rockingham County, on the Pisetaqua River ab. 3 mi. from its mouth. It is the only seaport in the state, is noted for its excellent harbor, has manufactures of shoes and buttons, and is a summer resort. Near it (on islands situated in Kittery, Me.) is the Portsmouth Navy Yard. The city was settled in 1623; it was the capital of New Hampshire (except for a short period) until 1807. It was the boyhood home of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. 18,830 (1950).

Portsmouth. City in S Ohio, county seat of Scioto County, at the confluence of the Scioto and Ohio rivers, ab. 90 mi. SE of Cincinnati: manufactures of shoes, paper boxes, stoves, and bricks. It was an important port on the Ohio and Erie Canal and was the childhood home of the actress Julia Marlowe. 36,798 (1950).

Portsmouth. Village near the city of Kingston, Ontario, Canada, on the N shore of Lake Ontario at the point where the lake empties into the St. Lawrence River. 3,411 (1951).

Portsmouth. [Early name, Pocasset.] Town in SE Rhode Island, in Newport County: residential and resort community. It was founded in 1638. Pop. 3,683 (1940).

Portsmouth. Independent city in SE Virginia, formerly county seat of Norfolk County, on the W side of the Elizabeth River, opposite Norfolk: important for its coal exports, shipyards, dry docks, and railroad yards. It is the site of the Norfolk Navy Yard. 80,039 (1950).

Portsmouth, Treaty of. Treaty of peace between Japan and Russia, signed at Portsmouth, N.H., Sept. 5, 1905, which ended the Russo-Japanese War. The czar and the mikado signed duplicate copies on Oct. 14, 1905. The conference was held in the U.S. in response to an invitation issued by President Theodore Roosevelt. Russia sent as peace commissioners Count Sergei Witte and Baron Roman Rosen; Japan sent Barons Jutaro Komura and Kogoro Takahira. Among the treaty's important clauses were the evacuation of Manchuria by both powers and its return to China, Russian acknowledgment of Japanese interests in Korea, the transfer to Japan of Russia's lease to Liaotung Peninsula, and the transfer to Japan also of the S half of Sakhalin.

Portsmouth, Treaty of. Treaty signed on Jan. 15, 1948, at Portsmouth, England, by British Foreign Minister Bevin and the foreign minister of Iraq. It gave fuller recognition to Iraq's sovereignty by ending the maintenance of British troops and aircraft in Iraq and abolishing the British military mission. A joint defense board was established, Iraqi facilities were promised in case of war, and economic assistance was pledged to Iraq.

Portsmouth and Aubigny (6.bē.nyē), Duchess of. See Kéroualle, Louise Renée de.

Portsmouth Harbour. Inlet of the English Channel, in S England, in Hampshire. Portsmouth is located upon it. Length, 4 mi.; width, 3 mi.

Port St. Joe (sānt jō). Town in NW Florida, in Gulf County, on the Gulf of Mexico. It is a resort community, with fisheries (and such allied industries as fertilizer and fish-oil manufactures). 2,752 (1950).

Port-St.-Louis-du-Rhône (pōr.sān.lwē.dū.rōn). Town in SE France, in the department of Bouches-du-Rhône, situated near the mouth of the Rhone River S of Arles. It is a seaport as well as a river port, connected with the sea by a canal which makes use of the mouth of the Rhone River unnecessary. Town and harbor installations were damaged in World War II. 3,982 (1946).

Port Sudan (so.dan'). Chief port in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, in Kassala province on the Red Sea coast about opposite Mecca. It is connected by rail with Khartoum and Wadi Halfa. 53,800 (est. 1949).

Port Sunlight (sun'lit). See under Bebington.

Port Swettenham (swet'en.am). Seaport and town in the Federation of Malaya, in the state of Selangor. It is the port nearest the city of Kuala Lumpur, and is situated on the Strait of Malacca, ab. 20 mi. W of Kuala Lumpur. However, the harbor is poor and most of the trade is coastal (the largest volume of material from the hinterland is exported by way of Singapore or Penang). Pop. ab. 10,000.

Port Townsend (toun'zend). [Former name, Scow Bay.] City in NW Washington, county seat of Jefferson County, on Puget Sound N of Seattle: tourist resort; manufactures of pulp and paper. It was settled in 1851. Pop. 6,888 (1950).

Portugal (pōr'tū.gal; Portuguese, pōr.tō.gāl'). [Official name, República Portuguesa; Latin, Lusitania.] Country in SW Europe, occupying the W part of the Iberian Peninsula, bounded on the E and N by Spain, on the W and S by the Atlantic Ocean; an independent republic. Capital, Lisbon; area, 34,240 sq. mi.; pop. 7,902,590 (1950); including the Azores and Madeira islands: area, 35,430 sq. mi.; pop. 8,490,455 (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Portugal is a maritime country, with a number of good harbors, particularly at the mouths of the Tejo (Tagus), Douro (Duero), Sado, and Guadiana rivers, while the land frontier with Spain runs through rough, mountainous territory, separating the country effectively from the other chief centers of population on the Iberian Peninsula. The most mountainous part of Portugal is in the N, reaching 6,532 ft. in the Serra da Estrela; the C part, between the Douro and Tejo rivers, is filled with hilly elevations which, in the Serra da Sintra (or Cintra), reach the coast of the Atlantic Ocean, N of Lisbon. South of the Tejo valley stretch high tablelands; large parts of the S coastline, particularly between Cape Espichel (near Lisbon) and Cape St. Vincent (São Vicente), are flat and sandy. The climate, milder and more humid than that of Spain, is oceanic in character, with warm summers and mild winters. The dry period during the summer extends over six months in the southern province of Algarve, while it lasts only two months in the northern province of Trás-os-Montes.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Agriculture provides the principal source of livelihood, with wine, olive oil, grain, and cork the chief products (Portugal is the leading cork-producing country in the world). Various kinds of fruit are cultivated, and cattle, pigs, sheep, and goats are raised. Fisheries are of great importance along the coast, specializing in sardine, tunafish, and lobster fishing; canned sardines in oil are among the chief articles of export. Sea salt is produced in considerable quantities. Portugal possesses considerable mineral wealth but, for want of electric power, many valuable deposits remain still unworked. Coal, pyrite, copper, wolfram, tin, and iron ore are found. Industry is not highly developed; only the textile industry (at Oporto, Lisbon, and Coviã) and the fish-canning industry (in Setúbal and Matosinhos) are of more than local importance. Portuguese shipping, apart from the fishing fleet, is not large.

History: Ancient and Medieval. The territory of Portugal was originally inhabited by the Iberian tribe of the Lusitanians, who were subjected to Roman rule in the 2nd century B.C. In the 5th century A.D. the country was overrun by the Visigoths; the Visigothic territory fell in the 8th century into the hands of the Moors. The history of Portugal proper begins with the history of the Christian reconquest, which started in the 11th century in the N, in the region between the Minho and Douro rivers, and was carried out first by rulers of Castile and Leon, who granted Portugal to Henry of Burgundy in 1095. Many French crusaders were drawn into the country and the Moors were pushed southward until the southernmost province, Algarve, was reached in the 13th century; Lisbon was taken with the aid of British crusaders in 1147. At the same time, independence from Castile was confirmed in various battles.

Colonial Period. Colonial expansion started in the reign of King John I (1385-1433) with the conquest of the Moroccan seaport of Ceuta (1415); John's youngest son, Henry the Navigator, started naval expeditions along the W coast of Africa, reaching step by step to Madeira, the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands, the Guinea coast, and starting the trade in Negro slaves which remained largely in Portuguese hands until the 17th century. By the end of the 15th century, the sea route to India by way of the Cape of Good Hope was found by Vasco da Gama, the power of the minor Moslem rulers around the Indian Ocean shattered, and the riches of the East poured into Portugal; Lisbon developed into the commercial emporium of Europe, outshining even the Italian city republics; at the same time, Portuguese settlement in Brazil started. The New World was divided between Spain and Portugal in 1494 according to a line of demarcation fixed by Pope Alexander VI. The reign of King Emanuel I marks the height of Portuguese power; however, the link by marriage between the royal houses of Spain and Portugal led to the expulsion of the Jews and Moors, thus depriving the country of the commercially most active segments of its population, and resulted in the occupation of the country by Spain; in 1581, the Portuguese Cortes (parliament) recognized Philip II of Spain as king of Portugal. The Spaniards were driven from the country by a revolutionary uprising in 1640 which brought the house of Braganza to the throne of Portugal; but meanwhile the Dutch and in part the British had occupied large parts of the Portuguese colonial empire and taken over the Portuguese trade connections; in the late 17th century, Portugal became an English ally, with very close economic ties (confirmed by treaty in 1703).

18th and 19th Centuries. The power of the Jesuit order was broken by the Marquis de Pombal in 1759 and long-needed reforms introduced, but Pombal was dismissed in 1777. The country was occupied by the French from 1807 to 1814, and John VI transferred his court to Brazil, where he remained even after the downfall of Napoleon I, leaving Portugal proper in the hands of a regency until the revolt of 1820; the subsequent attempt to return Brazil to the status of a colony brought the independence of Brazil under John's son, Pedro I who (as Pedro IV of Portugal) introduced a liberal constitution which, in turn, caused the insurrection of Dom Miguel (1828-34). Party strife and widespread corruption throughout the remainder of the 19th century led finally to the assassination of King Charles I in 1908 and the proclamation of the republic, on Oct. 5, 1910.

The Republic. Under the republic, as had been the case fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; TH, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; in the latter days of the monarchy, the country was paralyzed by internal dissension until General Carmona seized the government, on July 9, 1926; he became president of the republic under a system of military dictatorship which survived revolutionary outbreaks in 1927 and 1931. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar has been prime minister during the entire period. The constitution, providing for an elected president, a national assembly, a corporative chamber, and a privy council, was adopted in 1933.

Culture. Portugal is an entirely Catholic country. According to the Concordat of May 7, 1940, the spiritual mission of the Roman Catholic Church according to canon law is recognized; divorces are forbidden to parties married by the Church. Compulsory education was introduced in 1911, but 49 percent of the population was still illiterate in 1940. The country has three universities, one institute of technology, and various other institutions of higher learning.

Portugal (pôr.tô.gál'). Marcos Antônio da Fonseca, [Italian, Marcantonio Portogallo.] b. at Lisbon, Portugal, March 24, 1762; d. at Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 7, 1830. Portuguese composer of operas. He was appointed (1800) director of the San Carlos Theater at Lisbon, and went (1810) to Brazil with the royal court. His operas, in both Portuguese and Italian, include La Confusione nata dalla somiglianza (1793) and Adrasto (1800).

Portugalete (pôr'tô.gál.ă.tă). Town in N Spain, in the province of Vizcaya, on the Bay of Biscay ab. 5 mi. NW of Bilbao. It is the outer harbor of Bilbao. 10,612 (1940).

Portugal y Villena (pôr.tô.gál' ē bē.lyā'nā), Pedro Melo de. See Melo de Portugal y Villena, Pedro.

Portuguesa (pôr.tô.gă'să). State in NW Venezuela. Capital, Guanare; area, 5,869 sq. mi.; pop. 120,984 (1950).

Portuguesa River. River in NE Venezuela. It rises in the state of Portuguesa, flowing SE to join the Apure River at San Fernando. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Portuguese (pôr'tû.gēz, pôr'tû.gēz'). Romance language spoken in Portugal and Brazil. It belongs to the western division of Indo-European languages.

Portuguese East Africa (af'ri.kă). Name sometimes given to the Portuguese colony of Mozambique.

Portuguese Guinea (gin'î). Colony of Portugal, on the coast of W Africa. It is bounded on the N by Sénégal, on the E and S by French Guinea, and on the W by the Atlantic Ocean; the boundaries were decided by a convention with France in May, 1886. It includes also the adjacent Bissagos islands. Its most important products are rice, wax, ivory, rubber, and hides. Bissau is the capital and chief port; area, 13,948 sq. mi.; pop. 517,249 (1950).

Portuguese India (in'di.ă). Collective name for the Portuguese colonial possessions in India, comprising Goa, Damão, and Diu. They were acquired by the Portuguese in the 16th century, and are the surviving remnants of formerly much more extensive possessions. They are ruled as a colony, under an appointed governor general. Since India and Pakistan obtained their independence in 1947, there has been considerable agitation by Indians for the cession of Portuguese India to the Union of India. Capital, Nova Goa (Pangim); area, 1,537 sq. mi.; pop. 624,177 (1940).

"Portuguese Rome" (rôm). See under Braga, city.

Portuguese Timor (tê.môr'). See under Timor.

Portuguese West Africa (af'ri.kă). See Angola, modern Portuguese colony.

Portunus (pôr.tû'nus). [Also, Portumnus (pôr.tum'nus).] In Roman mythology, a god, protector of ports and harbors. It is thought he may originally have been associated with Janus as protector of doors, gates, and entrances.

Portus Albus (pôr'tus al'bus). Latin name of Algeciras.

Portus Caietæ (kă.yē'tê). An ancient name of Gaeta.

Portus Cale (kă'lê). Ancient name of Oporto.

Portus Dubris (dû'bris). A Latin name of Dover, England.

Portus Gaditanus (gad.i.tă'nus). Latin name of Puerto Real, Spain.

Portus Gallorum (gă.lô'rûm). Medieval name of Oporto.

Portus Lunæ (lô'nê). Ancient name of Spezia, Gulf of.

Portus Magnus (mag'nus). An ancient name of Almeria, city.

Portus Magnis (mă.gô'nis). Ancient name of Mahón.

Portus Trajani (tra.jă'nî). An ancient name of Civita-vecchia.

Port-Vendres (pôr.văndr). [Ancient name, Portus Veneris (pôr'tus ven'ê.ris).] Seaport in the department of Pyrénées-Orientales, France, on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 18 mi. SE of Perpignan. It has a commodious harbor, one of the safest on the Mediterranean. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Port Victoria (vik.tô'ri.ă). See Victoria.

Port Vue (vû'). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, near Pittsburgh. 4,756 (1950).

Port Washington (wosh'ing.ton). Unincorporated community in SE New York, in Nassau County, on Long Island, on Manhasset Bay; summer resort. Under the new urban definition established for use in the 1950 census it was counted with adjoining urban communities; the last official enumeration was 10,509 (1940).

Port Washington. City in SE Wisconsin, county seat of Ozaukee County; manufactures of clothing, office equipment, woodwork, chairs, rubber goods, and machinery, and processing of fish products. 4,755 (1950).

Porus (pô'rûs). Killed c318 B.C. Indian king who reigned between the Hydaspes and Acesines (in what is now the northern Punjab). He was defeated and captured by Alexander the Great in a battle on the Hydaspes in 326. According to Plutarch, when questioned as to how he wished to be treated he replied, "Like a king." He was thereupon restored to his kingdom by Alexander. After the latter's death he was treacherously killed by the Macedonian general Eudemus.

Porvoo (pôr'vô). [Swedish, Borgå.] Small seaport in the lääni (department) of Uusimaa, Finland, on the Gulf of Finland E of Helsinki. 8,667 (1951).

Pory (pôr'î), John. b. in England, c1570; d. at London, in September, 1635. English pioneer in America, and geographical writer.

Porz (pôr'ts). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Rhine River SE of Cologne. It has manufactures of paperware, glass, and machinery. 31,553 (1950).

Posadas (pô.să'ruăs). City in E Argentina, capital of Misiones territory, ab. 525 mi. N of Buenos Aires; river port, with meat-packing and flour-milling industries; trade center for tobacco, yerba maté, fruit, and livestock. 37,588 (1947).

Posadas, Gervasio Antonio de. b. at Buenos Aires, June 19, 1757; d. there, July 2, 1832. Argentine politician. Through the influence of the Lautaro Society, a political group formed to further the cause of independence from Spain, he was elected supreme director or president of the Platine Provinces on Jan. 22, 1814, holding the position for a year. With him the executive power was first placed in the hands of one person.

Posadowsky-Wehner (pô.ză.dôf'skê.vă'nêr), Count Arthur von. b. at Grossglogau (Glogów), in Silesia, June 3, 1845; d. at Naumburg, Germany, Oct. 23, 1932. German statesman, Prussian minister of the interior from 1897 to 1907. He drafted Bülow's tariff of 1902 which favored agrarian interests, and resigned when Bülow discontinued cooperation with the Center Party.

Poschiavo (pôs.kyă'vô). [German, Puschlav.] District in Switzerland, in the canton of Graubünden, S of the Engadine valley, on the Italian frontier; its population is chiefly Italian.

Poschiavo. Chief town in the Poschiavo district, in SE Switzerland, in the canton of Graubünden, situated in a fertile plain. 3,978 (1941).

Poschinger (posh'ing.êr), Heinrich von. b. at Munich, Germany, Aug. 31, 1845; d. at Bollène, France, Aug. 8, 1911. German historian, notable as Bismarck's journalistic collaborator. Author and editor of many books on Bismarck, such as Preussen im Bundestag, 1851-59 (1882-84).

Poseidon (pô.sî'dôn). In Greek mythology, one of the chief Olympian gods; brother of Zeus, and lord of the sea and navigation. Originally, however, he was a god of earthquakes and water. Earthquakes and storms arose when Poseidon shook his trident. He was also a god of horses. Among his more interesting amours were those with Medusa, whence he begot the winged horse, Pegasus, and with Demeter, who turned herself into a horse to escape him. Poseidon, however, turned himself into a stallion and begot by her the wonderful speaking horse, Arion. Other of his offspring were Triton, the giant Orion, and the one-eyed Cyclops, Polyphemus. His consort was the Nereid Amphitrite, and his attendant train was composed of Nereids, Tritons, and sea monsters of every form. In art he is a majestic figure; his most common attributes are the trident, the dolphin, and the horse, which he was reputed to have created during his contest with Athena for supremacy in Attica. The original Roman or Italic Neptune became assimilated to him.

Poseidonius (pos.i.dō'ni.us). See Posidonius.

Posen (pō'zēn). German name of Poznań.

Posey (pō'zi), Thomas. b. in Virginia, July 9, 1750; d. at Shawneetown, Ill., March 19, 1818. American general and politician. He served in the Revolutionary War and in the Indian wars, was U.S. senator from Louisiana (1812-13), and was governor of Indiana territory (1813-16).

Posidonia (pos.i.dō'ni.a). Original name of Paestum.

Posidonius (pos.i.dō'ni.us). [Also, Poseidonius.] b. at Apamea, Syria; fl. at the beginning of the 1st century b.c. Greek Stoic philosopher, teacher at Rhodes, especially of Cicero. Of his voluminous work on history, natural philosophy, the gods, meteorology, and other subjects, nothing survives.

Posillipo (pō.sē'lē.pō). [Also, Posilipo (-sē'-).] Ridge SW of Naples, Italy, famous for its ancient grotto.

Positive Atall (poz'itiv a.tō'l'), Sir. See Atall, Sir Positive.

Posonium (pō.zō'ni.um). Latin name of Bratislava.

Posse (pō'sā), Pablo Iglesias. See Iglesias Posse, Pablo.

Possession Island. See under Crozet Islands.

Pössneck (pis'nek). Town in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Thuringia, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Thuringia, ab. 35 mi. SE of Erfurt: lumber, textile, leather, porcelain, and chocolate manufactures. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 26.2 percent. 20,247 (1946).

Post (pōst). City in NW Texas, county seat of Garza County: trading and manufacturing center in an agricultural area. 3,141 (1950).

Post, Emily. [Maiden name, Price.] b. at Baltimore, c1873—American columnist and writer on modern manners and social etiquette. She originally wrote several novels, and is a contributor to various newspapers and magazines. She is the author of Etiquette (1st ed., 1922), which, because of its distinction between essential good manners and mere good form, has become the standard work on American social behavior; "what Emily Post says" is a guide to normal social usage. She is author also of How to Behave Though a Debutante (1928), the Emily Post Cook Book (1951), and others.

Post, George Browne. b. at New York, Dec. 15, 1837; d. Nov. 28, 1913. American architect. During the Civil War he served in the field (1861-62), becoming colonel of the 22nd New York infantry; afterward he resumed architectural practice at New York. Among the buildings designed by him are the New York produce, cotton, and stock exchanges, the College of the City of New York, the New York World Building, the Wisconsin state capitol, and the Montreal stock exchange. He was appointed a collaborator of the U.S. Forest Service and a member of the National Advisory Board of Fuels and Structural Materials in 1906, and a member of the Bureau of Fine Arts in 1909. He was president of the New York Architectural League (1893-98) and of the American Institute of Architects (1896-99), and became an associate of the National Academy of Design in 1907 and an academician in 1908.

Post, George Edward. b. at New York, Dec. 17, 1838; d. Sept. 29, 1909. American medical missionary and botanist, noted for his translations into Arabic of standard medical texts. He was professor (1868 et seq.) and dean of what is now the American University at Beirut. Author of Plantae Postianae (1890-1900), Flora of Syria, Palestine, and Egypt (no date), and articles for Hastings's Dictionary of the Bible and others.

Post, Melville Davison. b. at Romines Mills, W.Va., April 19, 1871; d. at Clarksburg, W.Va., June 23, 1930. American novelist, creator of the lawyer-detective character Randolph Mason. Author of The Strange Schemes of Randolph Mason (1896), The Man of Last Resort (1897), The Mystery at the Blue Villa (1919), The Man Hunters (1926), The Bradmoor Murder (1929), and The Silent Witness (1930), as well as The Revolt of the Birds (1927), a textbook on the detection of crime, Dwellers in the Hills (1901), about cattle-buyers, The Gilded Chair (1910), a love story, and The Mountain School Teacher (1922), a modern allegorical account of the life of Christ.

Post, Wiley. b. near Grand Plain, Tex., Nov. 22, 1899; d. in N Alaska, Aug. 15, 1935. American aviator. He flew (1931) around the world with Harold Gatty in eight days, 15 hours, and 51 minutes, and was the first to accomplish (1933) a solo flight around the world, in slightly over seven days. He perished in an airplane crash with Will Rogers.

Postgate (pōst'gāt), Margaret Isabel. Maiden name of Cole, Margaret Isabel.

Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club (pik'wīk), The. See Pickwick Papers.

Posthumus Leonatus (pōst'ū.mus lē.ō.nā'tus). Husband of Imogen in Shakespeare's Cymbeline. His wager as to her fidelity is the turning point of the play.

Postillon de Longjumeau (pōst.tē.yōn də lōn.zhū.mō), Le. Opéra comique in three acts by Adolphe Adam, with a libretto by De Leuven and Brunswick, produced at Paris on Oct. 13, 1836.

Postl (pōst'l), Karl. Original name of Sealsfield, Charles.

Post Office Department, U.S. Department of the national government which was formally established as an executive department in 1874, although the postal organization which had been in existence under the Articles of Confederation was extended by legislation (1789) under the Constitution. The practice of calling it a department, however, did not begin until after 1825. The U.S. Post Office is headed by a postmaster general who enjoys cabinet rank, but the office did not have regular cabinet status until Postmaster General William T. Barry was invited (1829) by President Andrew Jackson to attend cabinet meetings. As a rule, the postmaster generalship has been occupied by men who have rendered outstanding political service to the party in power. The Post Office Department, with headquarters at Washington, D.C., maintains more than 41,000 post offices throughout the U.S., employs approximately 313,000 workers, handles about 38 billion pieces of mail a year, and does an annual business of over 16 billion dollars. Among its additional services are the Railway Post Office and the Postal Savings System.

Postojna (pō'stoi.nā). [Italian, Postumia; German, Adelsberg.] Town in NW Yugoslavia, in the region of Istria and federative unit of Slovenia (formerly in the Italian province of Venezia Giulia, which was ceded to Yugoslavia by the Italian peace treaty of 1947), situated ab. 22 mi. NE of Trieste. It is famous because of its cave, which is more than 5 mi. long and one of the noted stalactite caverns in the world. 3,804 (1936).

Postumia (pōs.tō'mi.ā). Italian name of Postojna.

Postumia gens (pōs.tō'mi.a). Roman patrician gens. Its most distinguished family was Albus or Albinus.

Pöstyén (pesh'tyän). Hungarian name of Piész'tany.

Posušje (pō'sō.i.she). Town and township in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Hercegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Primorska, between Mostar and Split. 12,583 (1931).

Posymanski (pō.sī.mān'skē), Alfred. See Savoir, Alfred.

Potaro (pō.tā'rō). River in C British Guiana, South America, flowing NE to join the Essequibo River. Kaieteur Falls are on it. Length, ab. 100 mi.

Potawatomi (pot.ə.wot'o.mi). [Also: Pottawatami, Pottawatomī.] North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting the greater part of the S portion of Michigan, but now much reduced in numbers, with tribal remnants in Oklahoma, Michigan, and Ontario. Traditionally they were of identical origin with the Ojibwa and Ottawa fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; τη, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Indians. They are known to have existed in the 17th century in the Green Bay region of Wisconsin, but were driven by the Sioux to the S end of Lake Michigan, whence they migrated in the 18th century into parts of Illinois, Indiana, and S Michigan. In the 19th century Potawatomi groups moved into Kansas, Oklahoma, and Canada. A land-holding group in Oklahoma are called "Citizen Potawatomi." They speak an Algonquian language.

Potchefstroom (póch'f.stróm). Town in S Africa, the oldest town in the Transvaal, Union of South Africa, situated in the W part of the province, ab. 89 mi. SW of Johannesburg. It is the educational center for the W section of the province. Development of gold resources in nearby areas is planned. Pop. 27,205, including 13,750 Europeans (1946).

Poteau (pó.tó'). City in E Oklahoma, county seat of Le Flore County; coal mining, lumbering, cotton and vegetable production, and glass manufactures. 4,776 (1950).

Potemkin (po.tyóm'kin), Prince Grigory Aleksandrovich. b. in the government of Smolensk, Russia, Sept., 1736; d. in Bessarabia, Oct. 16, 1791. Russian politician and general, chief favorite of the empress Catherine II. He participated in the plot that replaced Peter III with Catherine and soon became her lover. He distinguished himself (1769) against the Turks and after 1771 became the most powerful person at court, retaining his influence even after Catherine had taken other lovers. His ambitious plans for extending her empire included reconquest of Byzantine domains, acquisition of the Crimea, and colonization of the steppes. He built a fleet in the Black Sea that was of great use in the Turkish War of 1787-92. Crimea was annexed (1783) and Potemkin became its governor; the famous story of Catherine's tour of 1787, when Potemkin is supposed to have built and peopled villages along her route to impress her with his ability, is exaggerated, but his administrative abilities, great as they were, never matched his ambitious imagination. He built (1778 et seq.) the Kherson arsenal and the Sebastopol harbor. He was commander in chief in the second Turkish War but died before he could finish peace negotiations for a victorious Russia.

Potenza (pó.tén'tsá). Province in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata. Capital, Potenza; area, ab. 2,392 sq. mi. (1936); pop. 376,486 (1936).

Potenza. [Ancient name, Potentia (pó.tén'sha).] Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata, the capital of the province of Potenza, situated above the Basento River, E of Naples; agricultural district; seat of a bishopric. The churches of San Francesco and San Michele Arcangelo date from the 12th and 13th centuries, with later additions; the cathedral dates from the 18th century. A Ghibelline town, it rebelled against Charles of Anjou in 1269. The older town, situated more in the plain, was largely destroyed by an earthquake in 1273; the newer town, on the hill, was heavily damaged in 1857. Parts of the cathedral were harmed by bombs in World War II, but the damage is largely repairable. Pop. of commune, 25,103 (1936); of town, 18,872 (1936).

Potez (pó.tá, pó.tez), Henry. b. c.1891—. French airplane manufacturer. He established (1919) his own factory, managed nationalized plants as well as privately owned factories, and was named (1948) to supervise research on aircraft motors.

Potgieter (pót'gē.tēr), Andries Hendrik. b. c.1800; d. 1853. Boer leader. He led one of the groups of Dutch settlers in the Great Trek (1835 et seq.) to the territory beyond the Vaal River in search of land where they might escape growing British restrictions on slavery. After severe fighting with the Matabele, the Boers took possession of the land. In 1852 Potgieter made his peace with Andries Pretorius, leader of another group of Boers, and agreed to a consolidation of Boer forces in the Transvaal region.

Potgieter, Everhardus Johannes. b. at Zwolle, Netherlands, June 17, 1880; d. Feb. 3, 1875. Dutch poet, novelist, and essayist. He founded (1837) the cultural monthly De Gids. In it he published his essays on art and criticisms of contemporary literature, including Jan, Jannetje en hun jongste kind (1842) and Het Rijksmuseum (1844). His satirical poetry is typified by Zangen des Tijds (Songs of Time). Because of his powerful imagery, keen intellect, and great knowledge of international literature (as for example, in his In de regen, an imaginary conversation with Nathaniel Hawthorne; translated into English), he was the acknowledged leader of the realistic-romantic movement in Dutch literature (1840-70). At first his aim was to revive the spirit of old Holland with works such as Liedekens Van Bontekoe (Songs of Bontekoe, 1843). After his withdrawal from public life his poetry came to full development with Florence (1868), a long philosophic epic written in tercets and dedicated to Dante's memory, and Nalatenschap van en Landjonker (Estate of a Country Squire, 1875), a volume of fantasies. Potgieter was highly interested in the development of the U.S.; his poem Mount Vernon, the unfinished Abraham Lincoln, and some minor poetry were written in the years of the American Civil War.

Pothier (pó.tyā), Dom Joseph. b. at Bouzemon, France, Dec. 7, 1835; d. at Conques, Belgium, Dec. 8, 1923. French monk and authority on medieval music. His chief work is Les Mélodies grégoriennes (1880).

Pothier, Robert Joseph. b. at Orléans, France, Jan. 9, 1699; d. there, March 2, 1772. French jurist. Among his works are an edition of the Pandects of Justinian (1748-52) and Traité des obligations (1761).

Poti (pó.tē). Seaport in the U.S.S.R., in the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 170 mi. W of Tiflis (Tbilisi), situated on the Black Sea at the mouth of the Rion River; shipping point for wine, citrus fruits, and manganese ore. 16,200 (1933).

Potidaea (pó.ti.dē'a). [Also, Cassandreia.] In ancient geography, a city in Macedonia, situated on the isthmus joining the peninsula of Kassandra to the mainland, in lat. 40°11' N., long. 23°20' E. It revolted against Athens in 432 B.C. in one of the preliminaries to the Peloponnesian War and was reduced in 429. It was rebuilt by Cassander, and called Cassandreia.

Potiguaras (pó.tē.gwá'raz). [Also, Potivaras.] Tribe of South American Indians of E Brazil, formerly occupying parts of the coast between the Paranaíba and Paraíba rivers. They became extinct in the 18th century. They were one of many tribes belonging to the Tupinamba group of the coastal division of the Tupi linguistic stock.

Potiphar (poti.fār, -fār). [Also, Putiphar.] In Old Testament history, the chief officer of Pharaoh and the owner of Joseph. Gen. xxxix.

Potiphar Papers, The. Collection of satirical articles by George William Curtis, published in 1853.

Potiphar's Wife. In Old Testament history, the wife of Pharaoh's chieftain, Potiphar. She was enamored of Joseph, slave and steward in Potiphar's household, and tried to seduce him. Joseph refused her advances and in revenge she tore his robe, screamed for help, and accused him of improper advances. Joseph was imprisoned for the alleged crime. In some rabbinical versions of the legend, her false accusation was exposed and Joseph was exonerated.

Potivaras (pó.tē.vā'raz). See Potiguaras.

Potomac (pó.tō'māk). River in E U.S., formed by the union, SE of Cumberland, Md., of a north branch that rises in the Allegheny Mountains of West Virginia, near Maryland, and a south branch that rises in NW West Virginia. It forms the main boundary between Maryland on the N and West Virginia and Virginia on the S, and empties by a wide estuary into Chesapeake Bay. Its chief tributary is the Shenandoah. Length, ab. 287 mi.; navigable to Washington, D.C.

Potomac, Army of the. Principal Union army in the American Civil War. It was organized by General George B. McClellan in 1861. In 1862, under him, it served in the Peninsular Campaign, and later in the Antietam campaign. In November, 1862, General Ambrose Burnside took command, and the army was defeated at Fredericksburg in December. In January, 1863, General Joseph Hooker assumed command; in May it was defeated at Chancellorsville. Under General George Meade it won the victory of Gettysburg, in July, 1863. It continued under the tactical command of General Meade during General U.S. Grant's operations of 1864-65.

Potorose (pó.tō.rō'sā), Conference of. Meeting (1921) near Trieste of all nations within whose boundaries was included territory formerly belonging to Austria-Hungary. The conference sought to alleviate the economic restrictions and barriers imposed by the new frontiers. It issued a protocol covering measures for the removal of barriers in transport, communications, and trade. Though never ratified, the protocol did become the basis of several special arrangements between the Balkan States.

Potosí (pō.tō.sē'). Department in SW Bolivia: important metal deposits. Capital, Potosí; area, 41,297 sq. mi.; pop. 534,399 (1950).

Potosí. City in S central Bolivia, capital of Potosí department, once (1545 et seq.) the world's richest source of silver and the home of 160,000 people. In the 20th century it has regained some of its former importance with the development of tin mining. Elevation, ab. 13,100 ft.; pop. 45,758 (1950).

Potrero de las Vacas (pō.trā'rō dā lāz nā'kās). One of the high mesas in C New Mexico, on the summit of which stand the ruins of an ancient pueblo, abandoned long before the 16th century. In its vicinity are also the largest statues of Indian origin known to exist in the Southwest. They represent two pumas carved out of the rock.

Potsdam (pots'dam; German, pots'dām). City in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, on the Havel River ab. 15 mi. SW of Berlin. The Havel widens here into a number of lakelike bodies of water, surrounded by woods, parks, and garden suburbs, making Potsdam a favorite resort for Berliners; there are few industries (flour mills, canneries, railroad repair shops). The city and the surrounding area contain a number of architecturally and historically remarkable monuments. The Stadtschloss, of the 17th and 18th centuries, is a large building in the baroque style; the Marmor Palais dates from 1757-90; the Französische Kirche (French Church) was erected by Knobelsdorf in 1752; the Nikolai-kirche (Church of Saint Nicholas) was started by Schinkel, and finished by Persius (1837-50); the Friedenskirche (Peace Church), also by Persius, contains the tomb of Frederick III; the Garrison Church (1732), with the tombs of Frederick William I and Frederick the Great, was destroyed during World War II, while lesser damage was suffered by the other buildings. The most remarkable monument is the castle and park of Sans-Souci, erected (1745-47) for Frederick the Great, a fine example of 18th-century residential and garden architecture. Other buildings in or near Potsdam are: the Orangerie (1850-56), the New Palace (1763-69), and the Rathaus (town hall), dating from 1753. Potsdam was of little importance until French Huguenot refugees were admitted here by Frederick William, the Great Elector of Brandenburg, in 1685; thereafter it was the favorite residence of the Brandenburg electors and Prussian kings. On Nov. 3, 1805, Prussia and Russia concluded here the treaty of Potsdam, which was directed against France; immediately after the conclusion of World War II, the Potsdam Conference took place here between President Truman, Marshal Stalin, and Prime Minister Churchill (who was succeeded during the Conference by the newly elected Attlee) and their advisers, dealing primarily with the administration of Germany. 113,568 (1946).

Potsdam (pots'dam). Village in N New York, in St. Lawrence County, ab. 24 mi. E of Ogdensburg; marketing center for a dairying region. 7,491 (1950).

Potsdam Agreement of 1910. Meeting (November, 1910) at Potsdam, Germany, of the Russian czar Nicholas II and the German emperor William II, which provided the occasion for discussion by their ministers, Sergei Sazonov and Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, of a wide range of questions. Among the results of this conference were an agreement by each nation not to enter into combinations of nations having aggressive tendencies toward the other, a German promise to support the status quo in the Balkans so as to ease Russo-Austrian relations, agreement on the preservation of Turkey, and a Russian promise of noninterference with the Berlin to Baghdad Railway, as well as a German promise not to seek concessions in Persia.

Potsdam Conference. Conference of the Big Three (the U.S., Great Britain, and the U.S.S.R.) held at Potsdam, near Berlin, from July 17 to Aug. 2, 1945, following the conclusion of the European phase of World War II. It was the first Allied conference during World War II attended, in their official capacities, by U.S. President Harry S. Truman and British Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee (Winston S. Churchill represented Great Britain during the opening phases of the conference). General agreement was reached on German disarmament, demilitarization, levels of industries, reparations, and denazification. The transfer of the administration of the German provinces E of the Oder-Neisse line to Poland, as accomplished by the U.S.S.R., was accepted by the U.S. and Great Britain. Though the final boundaries were to be defined by the future peace conference, the Western Powers agreed to the removal of all Germans living E of the Oder-Neisse line, as well as those from SE Europe. Agreements were also reached on the establishment of quadripartite control over Austria, on improvement of the Allied control commissions in the Balkan countries, and on Tangier and Iran. On July 26, the U.S., Great Britain, and China issued from Potsdam a proclamation defining terms of surrender for Japan.

Pott (pot), August Friedrich. b. at Nettelrede, Hanover, Germany, Nov. 14, 1802; d. at Halle, Prussia, Germany, July 5, 1887. German philologist, professor at Halle from 1833. He published Etymologische Forschungen (1833-36), Die Zigeuner in Europa und Asien (1844-45), Die Personennamen (1853), and others.

Pottawatami (pot.a.wot'a.mi) or Pottawatomi (-o.mi). See Potawatomi.

Potter (pot'er), Alonzo. b. at La Grange, Dutchess County, N.Y., July 6, 1800; d. at San Francisco, July 4, 1865. American Protestant Episcopal bishop; brother of Horatio Potter. He became bishop of Pennsylvania in 1845.

Potter, Eliphalet Nott. b. Sept. 20, 1836; d. Feb. 6, 1901. American Episcopalian clergyman and educator; son of Alonzo Potter. He became president of Union College in 1871, and of Hobart College (Geneva, N.Y.) in 1884.

Potter, Henry Codman. b. at Schenectady, N.Y., May 25, 1835; d. at Cooperstown, N.Y., July 21, 1908. American Protestant Episcopal bishop; son of Alonzo Potter. He became assistant bishop of New York in 1883, and bishop in 1887. He began the building of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. His interest in social welfare led him to institute the attack on Tammany in 1900 that brought the investigation by the Committee of Fifteen and the election of Seth Low.

Potter, Horatio. b. at La Grange, Dutchess County, N.Y., Feb. 9, 1802; d. at New York, Jan. 2, 1887. American Protestant Episcopal bishop; brother of Alonzo Potter. He became bishop of New York in 1861.

Potter, Israel. See Israel Potter: His Fifty Years of Exile.

Potter, John. b. at Wakefield, Yorkshire, England, c1674; d. Oct. 10, 1747. English prelate and classical scholar, archbishop of Canterbury (1737-47). He studied at Oxford, graduating in 1692, and was appointed divinity professor there in 1707. He was bishop of Oxford (1715-37). He wrote an excellent work on Greek antiquities (Archaeologia Graeca, 2 vols., 1697-98), and edited the works of Lycophron, Clemens Alexandrinus, and others.

Potter (po'ter), Louis Joseph Antoine de. b. at Bruges, Belgium, April 26, 1756; d. there, July 22, 1859. Belgian revolutionist, a member of the provisional government in 1830.

Potter (pot'er), Nathaniel. b. in Maryland, 1770; d. at Baltimore, Jan. 2, 1843. American physician.

Potter, Paul. b. at Enkhuizen, Netherlands, Nov. 20, 1625; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Jan. 27, 1654. Dutch painter. In 1631 his family settled at Amsterdam, and in the following year Paul went to study painting under Jakob de Weth the elder. He was made a member of the guild of Saint Luke at Delft in 1646, and later at The Hague. He resided in the latter place from 1649 to 1652; he then returned to Amsterdam. Among his pictures is A Young Bull (1647), which is in The Hague museum.

Potter, Paul Meredith. [Original name, Walter A. Maclean.] b. at Brighton, England, June 3, 1853; d. March 7, 1921. American playwright and journalist. He was foreign editor (1876-83) of the New York Herald, and a member (1888) of the editorial staff of the Chicago Tribune. Author of The Ugly Duckling (1890), The American Minister (1892), Sheridan or the Maid of Bath (1893), The Victoria Cross (1894), The Conquerors (1898), the stage adaptation of George Du Maurier's Trilby (1895), the dramatization of Ouida's Under Two Flags (1901), and the musical comedies The Queen of the Moulin Rouge and The Girl from Rectors.

Potter, Robert Brown. b. at Schenectady, N.Y., July 16, 1829; d. Feb. 19, 1887. American Union officer in the Civil War; son of Alonzo Potter.

Potteries (pot'ē.ri.iz), the. District in C England, in Staffordshire, comprising Stoke-on-Trent, Hanley, Burslem, Longton, Tunstall, Fenton, and Newcastle-under-Lyme. It is located on the North Staffordshire coal field. The district is the chief center of the English ceramics industry. Much of the clay is now brought from Cornwall, Devonshire, and Dorsetshire. Josiah Wedgwood's "Etruria" factory was founded near Hanley in 1769. The district is connected with its port of Liverpool by the Trent and Mersey Canal. There is also a smelting industry in the district. The district, ab. 8 mi. long and 3 mi. wide, is very densely populated.

Potters Bar. Urban district in SE England, in Middlesex, ab. 3 mi. N of Barnet, ab. 13 mi. N of King's Cross Station, London. The district is mainly residential, but has some agricultural land and a small factory zone. 17,163 (1951).

Potter's Field. Old burial-place for strangers at Jerusalem. For its history, see Aceldama.

Pottier (po.tyā), Edmond. b. at Saarbrücken, Germany, Aug. 13, 1855—. French archaeologist, curator of the collection of antiquities at the Louvre, director of excavations at Myrina, Asia Minor. Author of La Necropole de Myrina (1886-88; with Salomon Reinach) and Vases antiques du Louvre (1897 et seq.).

Pottinger (pot'ing.jer), Sam Henry. b. in County Down, Ireland, 1789; d. at Valetta, Malta, March 18, 1854. British diplomat and colonial governor. In 1804 he was a cadet in India. When the Opium War began he was ambassador to China, and signed the treaty of Nanking, which opened the ports of China, Aug. 29, 1842. He was governor (1843-44) of Hong Kong. In 1844 he was privy counselor, from 1846 to 1847 governor of the Cape of Good Hope, and from 1847 to 1854 governor of Madras.

Pottle (pot'l), Frederick Albert. b. at Lovell, Me., Aug. 3, 1897—. American educator, noted as an editor of the writings of James Boswell. He served as professor of English (1930 et seq.) at Yale, and was Emily Sanford professor (1942-44) and Sterling professor (1944 et seq.) there. Author of Shelley and Browning (1923), A New Portrait of James Boswell (1929), The Private Papers of James Boswell: a Catalog (with Marion S. Pottle, 1931), and others; editor of The Private Papers of James Boswell from Malahide Castle (1930-34, being vols. 7-18 of a comprehensive edition), Boswell's London Journal, 1762-1763 (1950), Boswell in Holland, 1763-1764 (1952), and others.

Pottstown (pots'toun). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Montgomery County, on the Schuylkill River, ab. 34 mi. NW of Philadelphia: manufactures of metal products and textiles. Laid out c1754, it was incorporated in 1815. Pop. 22,559 (1950).

Pottsville (pots'vil). City in E Pennsylvania, county seat of Schuylkill County, on the Schuylkill River, ab. 93 mi. NW of Philadelphia, in an anthracite coal area: manufactures of machinery, boilers, mine cars, hoisting engines, and pumps. 23,640 (1950).

Pouancé (pwañ.sā). Town in W France, in the department of Maine-et-Loire, ab. 35 mi. NW of Angers. It has a ruined castle of the 13th to 15th centuries. 3,218 (1946).

Pouget (pō.zhe), Jean François Albert du. See Nadaillac, Jean François Albert du Pouget, Marquis de.

Poughkeepsie (pō.kip'si). City in SE New York, county seat of Dutchess County, on the E bank of the Hudson River, ab. 64 mi. N of New York: manufactures of cream separators, oil clarifiers, ball bearings, clothing, and cough drops. It was a principal river port before the opening of the Erie Canal. It is the seat of Vassar College. It was settled by the Dutch at the end of the 17th century, was made (1777) state capital, and became a city in 1854. Pop. 41,023 (1950).

Pougin (pō.zhāñ), Arthur. [Pseudonym of François Auguste Arthur Paroisse-Pougin.] b. at Châteauroux, France, Aug. 6, 1834; d. at Paris, Aug. 8, 1921. French musician and writer on music. He published biographies of Meyerbeer (1864), Bellini (1868), Rossini (1871), Boieldieu (1875), Verdi (1881), and others, and the supplement to the musical biographies of F. J. Fétis (1878-80).

Pouillet (pō.ye), Claude Servais Mathias. b. at Cuzance, Doubs, France, Feb. 16, 1791; d. at Paris, June 15, 1868. French physicist. His chief work was Éléments de physique expérimentale et de météorologie (1827).

Poujoulat (pō.zhō.lā), Jean Joseph François. b. at La Fare, Bouches-du-Rhône, France, Jan. 26, 1800; d. at Paris, Jan. 5, 1880. French historian and politician. He was a member of the Constituent Assembly (1848) and of the Legislative Assembly. He wrote Histoire de Jerusalem (1841-42), Histoire de Saint Augustin (1844), and Histoire de la révolution française (1847).

Poul (pōl). See Fulani.

Poulenc (pō.lanh), Francis. b. at Paris, Jan. 7, 1899—. French composer. He joined (1917) the noted group called "The Six," of which Arthur Honegger, Georges Auric, Louis Durey, Darius Milhaud, and Germaine Tailleferre were also members. Among his compositions are the one-act comédie-bouffe Le Gendarme incompétent (1920), the ballet Les Biches (1924), songs, piano selections, and chamber music, including several sonatas.

Poulet (pō.lēt). See Paulet.

Poulett Thomson (pō.lēt tom'son), Charles Edward. See Thomson, Charles Edward Poulett.

Poulsen (poul'sen), Frederik. b. at Dalsgaard, Denmark, March 7, 1876—. Danish archaeologist, who served (1915 et seq.) as curator at the Carlsberg Glyptotek at Copenhagen. Author of Den graeske Kunst (Greekt Art, 1905), Der Orient und die frühgriechische Kunst (The East and Early Greek Art, 1912), and Oraklet i Delfi (The Oracle of Delphi, 1919).

Poulsen, Valdemar. b. at Copenhagen, Nov. 23, 1869; d. 1942. Danish electrical engineer. He invented (1898) the telegraphone, a recording telephone employing the magnetization of a steel wire. He also invented (1903) the high-frequency arc transmitter named for him and widely used in radio and wireless communication in Europe and the U.S.

Poulson (poul'son), Zachariah. b. at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1761; d. there, July 31, 1844. American publisher, editor (1800-39) of Poulson's American Daily Advertiser, successor to the Pennsylvania Packet, first daily newspaper in the colonies. He published Poulson's Town and Country Almanac (1788-1801), Robert Proud's History of Pennsylvania (1797-98), and Journals of the General Conventions of Delegates from the Abolition Societies of the United States (1794-1801).

Poultney (pōl'tni). Town in C Vermont, in Rutland County, in a slate-quarrying area; seat of Green Mountain Junior College. It was settled in 1771. Pop. 2,936 (1950).

Poulton (pōl'ton), Sir Edward Bagnall. b. at Reading, England, Jan. 27, 1859; d. at Oxford, England, Nov. 20, 1943. English zoologist and entomologist, who advocated and expounded the Darwinian doctrine of organic evolution by natural selection. Among his writings are Charles Darwin and the Theory of Natural Selection (1896), Essays on Evolution (1903), and Charles Darwin and the Origin of Species (1900).

Poulton-le-Fylde (pōl'ton.le.fild). [Also, Poulton.] Urban district and small market town in NW England, in Lancashire, situated near the river Wyre, ab. 6 mi. S of Fleetwood, ab. 224 mi. NW of London by rail. 7,672 (1951).

Poultry-Yard, The. Painting by Jan Steen (1660), in the royal gallery at The Hague, Netherlands. The scene is a court traversed by a stream. Pigeons and chickens are feeding, while ducks swim in the water, and a peacock sits in a tree. On steps at one side a young girl is sitting with a lamb, and talks with two men, one of them carrying a basket of eggs.

Pound (pound), Sir Dudley. [Full name, Alfred Dudley Pickman Rogers Pound.] b. Aug. 29, 1877; d. at London, Oct. 21, 1943. English admiral who served (1839-43) as first sea lord and chief of the British naval staff. He commanded the Colossus during the battle of Jutland (May 31-June 1, 1916). He was director of plans (1922-25) for the admiralty, lord commissioner (1927-29) of the admiralty, and commander in chief (1936-39) in the Mediterranean.

Pound, Ezra. [Full name, Ezra Loomis Pound.] b. at Hallowell, Idaho, Oct. 30, 1885—. American poet, essayist, and critic. He became one of the leading American expatriate writers, traveling (1907 & seq.) in Italy, Spain, and France, residing (1909-24) at London and Paris, and on the Italian Riviera (1924 & seq.). During World War II he held an official post in the Italian Fascist government and broadcast anti-Allied propaganda over the Rome radio. Following the surrender of Italy, he was brought (1945) to the U.S. to stand trial on the charge of high treason, and was subsequently committed to a hospital after being adjudged insane. His winning (1949) of the Bollingen prize aroused a storm of protest. He was the editor (1914) of the first anthology of Imagist poetry and edited (1917-19) the Little Review at London. His published volumes of poetry include A Lume Spento (1908), Personae (1909), Exultations (1909), Provença (1910), Canzonni (1911), Ripostes (1912), The Sonnets and Ballade of Guido Cavalcanti (translation, 1912), Cathay (1915; translation from Chinese, based upon notes of Ernest Fenollosa, American Orientalist), Unbra (1920), and a project under the title Cantos, including A Draft of XVI Cantos (1925), A Draft of XXX Cantos (1930), Eleven New Cantos (1934), The Fifth Decad of Cantos (1937), Cantos LI-LXXI (1940), and Pisan Cantos (1948). Among his prose works, some of which reveal his political and social views, are The Spirit of Romance (1910), Pavannes and Divisions (1918), Instigations (1920), Imaginary Letters (1930), How to Read (1931), ABC of Economics (1933), Make It New (1934), Social Credit and Impact (1935), Jefferson and/or Mussolini (1935), Polite Essays (1936), Guide to Kulchur (1938), and What Is Money For? (1939).

Pound, Louise. b. at Lincoln, Neb., June 30, 1872—. American educator, linguist, folklorist, and authority on the English ballad; sister of Roscoe Pound. She served as senior editor (1925-33) of American Speech.

Pound, Roscoe. b. at Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 27, 1870—. American botanist and jurist, professor of law at Harvard University from 1910, and dean (1916-51) of the law school there; brother of Louise Pound. He was director of the Botanical Survey of Nebraska (1892-1901), judge of the supreme court of Nebraska (1901-03), dean of the college of law at the University of Nebraska (1903-07), and professor of law at Northwestern University (1907-09) and at the University of Chicago (1909-10). He published Phytogeography of Nebraska (1898; with F. E. Clements) and Criminal Justice in America (1930).

Pounds (pound), John. b. at Portsmouth, Hampshire, England, June 17, 1766; d. Jan. 1, 1839. English shoemaker and teacher of poor children. With an average of 40 children at a time, he taught by asking questions and reading handbills; other subjects included some arithmetic, cooking, and shoemaking. Recognition of his influence came only after his death. His ideas have since been widely accepted and praised in American, English, and Scottish publications.

Poupard (pö.pär), François. b. at Le Mans, France, 1661; d. Oct. 31, 1709. French anatomist. He studied medicine at Paris and at Reims, where he received his medical degree. Poupard's ligament is named after him.

Pouqueville (pök.vél), François Charles Hugues Laurent. b. at Merlerault, Orne, France, Nov. 4, 1770; d. at Paris, Dec. 28, 1838. French writer and traveler, noted especially for his works on Greece.

Pour le Mérite (pör.le.mä.rét). Prussian order composed of two classes, military and civil. The first class was founded by Frederick the Great in 1740 (the seeming paradox of a German order with a French name may be accounted for by the fact that Frederick was a devout admirer of French literature and culture). The badge is a blue enameled cross adorned with the letter F, the words pour le mérite, and golden eagles. After 1810 it was given exclusively for distinction on the field. The second class (or second order) was founded by Frederick William IV in 1842 for distinction in science and art.

Pourrat (pö.rä), Henri. b. at Ambert, near Puy-de-Dôme, France, 1887—. French novelist. Author of Sur la colline ronde (1912, with Jean Angeli), Dans l'herbe des trois vallées (1927), La Ligne verte (1929), Le Bosquet pastoral (1931), and others. His novels, considered masterpieces of regionalist writing, are set in the Auvergne country where, because of chronic invalidism, he has spent most of his life.

Pourri (pö.ré), Mont. [Also, Thuria.] Peak in the Tarentaise Alps, in SE France. Elevation, ab. 12,430 ft. Pourtales (pö.r.tä.les), Count Friedrich von. b. at Oberhofen, Switzerland, Oct. 24, 1853; d. at Nauheim, Germany, May 3, 1928. German diplomat. As German ambassador to Russia (1907-14), he attempted to prevent Russia from going to war against Germany. He published his memoirs concerning the outbreak of World War I (1919; revised ed., 1928).

Pourtales, Guy de. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, 1884; d. at Montana, Switzerland, June 14, 1941. French writer. Author of novels, including La Cendre et la flamme (1910) and Solitudes (1916), he later turned to criticism and biography. Best known of his later works is a series of critical essays, De Hamlet à Swann (1925). He won the Prix du Roman of the French Academy for his La Pêche miraculeuse (1937; Eng. trans., Shadows Around the Lake, 1938).

Pushkin (pösh'kin), Alexander. See Pushkin, Aleksandr Sergeyevich.

Pouso Alegre (pö'zö a.le.grê). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 12,923 (1950).

Poussin (pö.sän), Baron Charles de La Vallée. See de La Vallée Poussin, Baron Charles.

Poussin, Gaspar. [Original name, Gaspar Doughtet.] b. at Rome, in May, 1613; d. there, May 25, 1675. French landscape painter; brother-in-law and pupil of Nicolas Poussin.

Poussin, Nicolas. b. near Le Grand Andelys, France, in June, 1594; d. at Rome, Nov. 19, 1665. French historical and landscape painter. He went to Rome in 1624, studied with Dufresnoy the sculptor, returned to Paris in 1640, was patronized by Louis XIII, and settled finally at Rome in 1642. Among his works (chiefly in the Louvre) are The Deluge, Plaque of the Philistines, Rape of the Sabines, Moses, Triumph of Truth, and Rebekah and Eliezer. He decorated the Grande Galerie of the Louvre, and his pictures are to be found in virtually all of the principal galleries of Europe.

Poutsma (pöuts'mä), H. b. at Gorredijk, Netherlands, 1856; d. 1937. Dutch grammarian, who taught English language and literature in the Amsterdam schools. Author of A Grammar of Late Modern English (1904 & seq.).

Póvoa de Varzim (pö'vwa.de.var.zêñ). Town and concelho (commune) in W Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral, in the district of Porto, ab. 20 mi. N of Porto (Oporto): seaside resort; sardine fisheries. Pop. of concelho, 31,693 (1940); of town, 14,441 (1940).

Powder (pou'dér). River in Wyoming and SE Montana which joins the Yellowstone. Length, ab. 375 mi.

Powderly (pou'dér.li), Terence Vincent. b. at Carbondale, Pa., Jan. 22, 1849; d. at Washington, D.C., June 24, 1924. American labor leader, lawyer, and government official, noted as the head of the Knights of Labor. He was employed (1869-77) as a machinist, finally leaving that trade to devote himself entirely to labor activity. In 1871 Powderly joined the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union, in whose affairs he took a prominent part, and in April, 1874, became organizer for the Industrial Brotherhood in western Pennsylvania. He was initiated (1874) into the secret order of the Knights of Labor, joined its Seranton assembly in 1876, and became (Feb. 24, 1877) corresponding secretary of the recently established district assembly. He was a member of the committee on constitution of the First General Assembly of the Knights of Labor (January, 1878) and in 1879 became Grand Worthy Foreman of the order. Chosen (September, 1879) Grand Master Workman (General Master Workman after 1883), he held this post until November, 1893, a period spanning the rise and decline of the Knights of Labor. His leadership of what was then the largest labor organization in the U.S. was based on reform through education; he opposed strikes in favor of arbitration, and envisaged the gradual elimination of the wage system through its displacement by producers' cooperatives. He helped secure the alien contract labor law of 1885 and was elected (1878, 1880, 1882) mayor of Scranton, Pa. When the Knights of Labor began losing power in face of the rising American Federation of Labor, Powderly retired. Having already begun the study of law, he was admitted to the bar (1894) and subsequently (1897) to practice before the supreme court of Pennsylvania, and before the Supreme Court of the U.S. in 1901. A supporter of the Republican Party in the 1890's, he was appointed (March, 1897) U.S. commissioner general of immigration by President McKinley. Removed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1902, he was appointed (1906) special representative of the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate the causes of emigration from Europe. He became (July 1, 1907) head of the division of information of the Bureau of Immigration, holding that post until 1921, when he became a member of the board of review of the Immigration Department. He was active in that capacity until his last illness, and occasionally served as commissioner of conciliation for the Labor Department. He wrote Thirty Years of Labor, 1859 to 1889 (1889).

Powell (pou'el). Town in NW Wyoming, in Park County; agricultural trade center. There are petroleum and natural-gas reserves in the vicinity. 3,804 (1950).

Powell (pō'el), Baden. b. at Stamford Hill, near London, Aug. 22, 1796; d. at London, June 11, 1860. English scientific writer.

Powell, Baden Fletcher Smyth Baden-. See Baden-Powell, Baden Fletcher Smyth.

Powell, Cecil Frank. b. at Tonbridge, Kent, England, Dec. 5, 1903-. English physicist. He became (1928) research assistant to A. M. Tyndall at Bristol, and began (c1938) investigating problems in nuclear physics. His development (1946) of a means of making visible, by means of a photographic emulsion viewed through a microscope, the tracks of subatomic particles, and his discovery (1947) therefrom of the heavy π (pi) meson (with others) led to his receiving the 1950 Nobel prize in physics. Since 1948 he has been Melville Wills professor of physics at the University of Bristol.

Powell (pou'el), Charles Stuart. b. in England, 1749; d. April 26, 1811. English actor. He was manager of the Haymarket Theatre, London, and appeared in the first dramatic representation at Boston (Aug. 13, 1792).

Powell, Dawn. b. at Mt. Gilead, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1897-. American writer. Author of She Walks in Beauty (1928), The Bride's House (1929), Dance Night (1930), The Story of a Country Boy (1934), Turn, Magic Wheel (1936), My Home Is Far Away (1944), The Locusts Have No King (1948), Sunday, Monday, and Always (1952), and other books. Her plays include Jig Saw and Big Night.

Powell (pō'el), Frederick York. b. at London, Jan. 14, 1850; d. at Oxford, England, May 8, 1904. English historian, teacher, and translator. He was lecturer in law (1874-94) at Christ Church, and regius professor of modern history (1894-1904) at Oxford. He was instrumental in founding (1885) The English Historical Review, and in establishing (1899) Ruskin College. Author of Early England to the Norman Conquest (1876), Old Stories from British History (1882), and History of England from the Earliest Times to the Death of Henry VII (1885).

Powell, Sir George Smyth Baden-. See Baden-Powell, Sir George Smyth.

Powell (pou'el), John Wesley. b. at Mount Morris, N.Y., March 24, 1834; d. at Haven, Me., Sept. 23, 1902. American geologist and ethnologist. He served in the Civil War, attaining the rank of lieutenant colonel of volunteers. After the war he served as professor in Illinois colleges and conducted the survey of the Colorado valley from 1870. He was on the staff of the U.S. Geological Survey from 1875, was head of the bureau of ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution (1879-1902), and from 1880 to 1894 was director of the Geological Survey. He published Exploration of the Colorado River of the West (1875), Introduction to the Study of Indian Languages (1880), Studies in Sociology (1887), Canyons of the Colorado

(1895), Truth and Error (1898), and many special scientific reports.

Powell, Lazarus Whitehead. b. in Henderson County, Ky., Oct. 6, 1812; d. there, July 3, 1867. American politician. He was governor of Kentucky (1851-55), and a Democratic U.S. senator (1859-65).

Powell, Lyman Pierson. b. at Farmington, Del., Sept. 21, 1866; d. at Morristown, N.J., Feb. 10, 1946. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman, educator, and author. He was president (1913-18) of Hobart College and its women's branch, William Smith College, and rector (1926-35) of Saint Margaret's Church at New York.

Powell, Maud. b. at Peru, Ill., Aug. 22, 1868; d. at Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 8, 1920. American violinist. She made her debut at a New York Philharmonic concert in 1885, and made extensive tours in Europe and America. She introduced many new violin works to the American public, including concertos by Tchaikovsky and Sibelius.

Powell, Richard Stillman. See Barbour, Ralph Henry.

Powell (pō'el), Sir Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-. See Baden-Powell, Sir Robert Stephenson Smyth.

Powell (pou'el), Willie. Sincere but weak hero of A Young Man from the South (1917), novel by Lennox Robinson.

Powell's Islands. See South Orkney Islands.

Power (pou'ér), Cecil. Pseudonym of Allen, Grant.

Power, Eileen. b. Jan. 9, 1889; d. Aug. 8, 1940. British economic historian, well known as a scholar and writer for the general public. She was professor of economic history at the London School of Economics (1931-40). Author of The Paycockes of Coggeshall (1919), Medieval English Nunneries (1922), and Medieval People (1924); and joint editor with R. H. Tawney of Tudor Economic Documents (1924), with M. Postan of Studies in the History of English Trade in the 15th Century (1932), and with J. H. Clapham of Cambridge Economic History of Europe (vol. I, 1941).

Power, Frederick Belding. b. at Hudson, N.Y., March 4, 1853; d. at Washington, D.C., March 26, 1927. American chemist, noted for his researches into the chemical constituents of chaulmoogra seeds and oil, used in the treatment of leprosy. He was professor (1880-83) of analytical chemistry at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, organizer, dean, and professor (1883-92) of the school of pharmacy at the University of Wisconsin, director (1896 et seq.) of the Wellcome Chemical Research Laboratories at London, and head (1916 et seq.) of the phytochemical laboratory of the bureau of chemistry in the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Power, Frederick Tyrone. b. at London, May 2, 1869; d. in California, Dec. 30, 1931. American actor, remembered for his performances in poetic and heroic parts; grandson of Tyrone Power (1797-1841) and father of Tyrone Edmund Power (b. 1914). He appeared opposite Minnie Maddern Fiske in Becky Sharp (1899) and Mary of Magdala (1902), played the lead (1903) in Stephen Phillips's Ulysses, played (1905) with Mrs. Leslie Carter in Adrea, and was later leading man opposite Julia Marlowe. He was also a motion-picture actor (1927 et seq.).

Power, Marguerite. See Blessington, Marguerite, Countess of.

Power, Tyrone. b. at Kilmacthomas, County Waterford, Ireland, Nov. 2, 1797; lost at sea, in March, 1841. Irish comedian; grandfather of Frederick Tyrone Power. He first appeared at London in 1822, and made successful tours in the U.S. (1833-35 and 1840-41). On March 21, 1841, he embarked on the steamship President, which was sighted on the 24th, but was never heard from again.

Power, Tyrone Edmund. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, May 5, 1914-. American actor; son of Frederick Tyrone Power. He first appeared at Chicago as an extra in The Merchant of Venice (1931), and later played in Romance (1931). He played his first motion-picture role in Tom Brown of Culver (1932), and starred (1936 et seq.) in such films as Lloyd's of London, Alexander's Ragtime Band, Suez, Marie Antoinette, The Rains Came, Blood and Sand, The Razor's Edge, Nightmare Alley, and Captain from Castile.

Power and the Glory, The. Historical novel by Sir Gilbert Parker, published in 1925.

Power of Love, The. Work by Mary de la Rivière Manley (1720), consisting of the novels: The Fair Hypocrite, The Physician's Stratagem, The Wife's Resentment, The Husband's Resentment in Two Examples, The Happy Fugitive, and The Perjured Beauty.

Power of Sympathy; or, the Triumph of Nature, The. Novel published anonymously in 1789. Often called the "first American novel," it was written by William Hill Brown, but for many years it was considered to be the work of Sarah W. Morton.

Powers (pou'ərz), Hiram. b. at Woodstock, Vt., July 29, 1805; d. at Florence, Italy, June 27, 1873. American sculptor. He modeled and repaired wax figures in a museum at Cincinnati for seven years, went to Washington in 1835 with a view to modeling busts of celebrated men, and established himself at Florence in 1837. Among his chief works are The Greek Slave (1843), Il Penseroso, The Fisher Boy, America, Eve, California, and The Indian Girl.

Powers, James T. b. at New York, April 26, 1862; d. there, Feb. 10, 1943. American actor and singer, chiefly known for comedy roles in musical comedies and light operas.

Powers, Thomas E. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., July 4, 1870; d. at Long Beach, Long Island, N.Y., Aug. 14, 1939. American cartoonist associated (1896-1937) with the Hearst newspapers and specializing in political cartoons.

Powhatan (pou.a.tan'). [Given name, Wa-hun-sen-a-cawh or Wa-hun-son-a-cock.] d. 1618. American Indian chief, head of the Powhatan confederacy in early 17th-century Virginia. At the time of the first British expedition to Virginia (1607), Powhatan was said to be some 60 years old. He was crowned "emperor" in 1609. The marriage of his daughter Pocahontas to the English gentleman John Rolfe, in April, 1614, ushered in a period of good relations between the English settlers and the Indians.

Powhatan. North American Indian tribe, now extinct, formerly inhabiting the tidewater area and E portion of Virginia. The language was of the Algonquian family. The Powhatan confederacy was composed of five other Virginia tribes subjugated by Powhatan himself in the late 16th century; later it embraced some 30 tribes altogether, living in more than 200 settlements. These Indians resented (and retaliated against) white encroachment and were hostile to the colonists until the marriage of Powhatan's daughter Pocahontas to John Rolfe. But mutual hostility and massacre prevailed again after Powhatan's death. By the middle of the 17th century, the confederacy had given up much of its territory; in the early 18th century the tribes scattered and the confederacy dissolved.

Powis or Powys (pō'is). Ancient Celtic principality in the E part of Wales.

Powis, Earls, Marquises, and Dukes of. Titles held by various members of the Herbert family.

Powlett (pō'let). See Paulet.

Pownall (pou'nal), Sir Henry Royds. b. at London, Nov. 19, 1887—, British army officer. Director (1938-39) of military operations and intelligence at the War Office, and chief (1939-40) of the British Expeditionary Forces general staff, he was British chief of staff (1942-44) in the southwest Pacific and southeast Asia.

Pownall, Thomas. b. at Lincoln, England, 1722; d. at Bath, England, Feb. 25, 1805. Colonial governor of Massachusetts. He was lieutenant governor of New Jersey in 1755, governor of Massachusetts (1757-60), and later a member of Parliament, where he first supported the Whigs against the government's policy of taxing the colonists and then, after the fighting had started, supported the war. He published The Administration of the Colonies (1764).

Powys (pō'is). See also Powis.

Powys, John Cowper. b. at Shirley, Derbyshire, England, Oct. 8, 1872—. English novelist, poet, and critic; brother of Theodore Francis Powys and Llewelyn Powys. Among his novels are Wolf Solent (1929), A Glastonbury Romance (1933), Maiden Castle (1937), and Owen Glendower (1941). His verse includes Wolfsbane, Mandradora, and Samphire. Author also of the philosophical The Complex Vision, The Religion of a Sceptic, and In Defense of Sensuality (1930); the critical works Visions and Revisions,

The Meaning of Culture (1930), and Rabelais (1947); an autobiography; and Morwyn (1937) and The Pleasures of Literature (1938).

Powys, Llewelyn. b. at Dorchester, England, Aug. 13, 1884; d. at Clavadel, Switzerland, Dec. 2, 1939. English novelist, essayist, and traveler; brother of John Cowper Powys and Theodore Francis Powys. Suffering from tuberculosis, he traveled abroad for his health, visiting Switzerland (1909-14) and Kenya colony, British East Africa (1914-19). He was at New York (1920-25) as a journalist, in Palestine (1928), in the West Indies (1930), and again in Switzerland (1936-39). Author of Thirteen Worthies (1923), Pathetic Fallacy—A Study of Christianity (1930), Impassioned Clay (1931), Now that the Gods Are Dead (1932), and Earth Memories (1934), critical essays and studies; Apples Be Ripe (1930) and Love and Death (1939), novels; Confessions of Two Brothers (1916), Skin for Skin (1925), and The Verdict of Bridgegoose (1926), autobiographies; Life of Henry Hudson (1928); The Cradle of God (1929) and A Pagan's Pilgrimage (1931), descriptions of Palestine; Ebony and Ivory (1923) and Black Laughter (1924), sketches and stories of African life; Rats in the Sacrifice (1937) and A Baker's Dozen (1940), collected essays.

Powys, Theodore Francis. b. at Shirley, Derbyshire, England, 1875—. English writer; brother of John Cowper Powys and Llewelyn Powys. His books include Black Bryony (1923), Mark Only (1924), Mockery Gap (1925), Mr. Tasker's Gods (1925), Innocent Birds (1926), Mr. Weston's Good Wine (1927), The House with the Echo (1928), Kindness in a Corner (1930), The White Paternoster (1930), Unclay (1931), The Two Thieves (1932), and Goat Green (1937).

Poydras (poi'dras'; French, pwá.drás), Julien de Lande. b. near Nantes, France, April 3, 1746; d. in Pointe Coupée Parish, La., June 23, 1824. American merchant, philanthropist, and poet. He arrived (c1768) at New Orleans, and by means of itinerant peddling, he acquired a plantation, established a trading post, and expanded his mercantile and real-estate holdings. He was a benefactor of the Charity Hospital and the Poydras Female Orphan Asylum, and bequeathed 30,000 dollars to Pointe Coupée Parish for the endowment of an academy, and an equal sum to the parishes of Pointe Coupée and Baton Rouge to provide dowries for indigent girls. Author of La Prise du Morne du Baton Rouge (1779), commemorating the French capture of the English fort at Baton Rouge.

Poyning's (poi'ningz), Sir Edward. b. 1459; d. 1521. English soldier and administrator. After fleeing from England as a conspirator against Richard III, he became a supporter of the Earl of Richmond and accompanied him when he returned (1485) to England to become Henry VII. He was governor of Calais in 1493 and in 1494 went to Ireland as deputy of the viceroy, Prince Henry (later Henry VIII). He wiped out the last of the supporters of the impostor Perkin Warbeck and convened the parliament of Drogheda (1494) which passed Poyning's Law. After 1496 he was warden of the Cinque Ports and served on various diplomatic missions for Henry VII and Henry VIII.

Poyning's Law. [Also, Statute of Drogheda.] Two acts of the Irish Parliament in 1494, named for Sir Edward Poyning. They had a serious and lasting effect upon Irish affairs. Their most important provisions were that all English laws "lately made" (which was construed to include all prior English laws) should be in force in Ireland, and that thereafter no parliament should sit in Ireland without the license of the king and his council, and that no act passed by such parliament should be effective unless affirmed by them. These acts are sometimes called the Statute of Drogheda, from the parliament where they were adopted. They were repealed in 1782.

Poynter (poin'ter), Sir Edward John. b. at Paris, March 20, 1836, of English parents; d. at London, July 26, 1919. English historical painter, who became president of the Royal Academy in 1896. From 1871 to 1879 he was professor of art at University College, London; from 1894 to 1904 he was director of the National Gallery; from 1896 to 1918 he was president of the Royal Academy. He is represented in museums throughout the British Isles and the Empire. Among his principal works are Psyche in the Temple of Love (Liverpool), The Queen of Sheba Visiting Solomon (Sydney), and The Ides of March (Manchester).

Poynting (poin'ting), John Henry. b. at Monton, near Manchester, England, Sept. 9, 1852; d. March 30, 1914. English physicist, professor of physics in the University of Birmingham from 1880, and dean of the faculty of science. He determined experimentally (1891) the constant of gravitation and did important work on light pressure and electrical field phenomena. He published A Text-book of Physics (with J. J. Thomson) and others.

Poyser (poi'zér), Mrs. Character in George Eliot's novel Adam Bede: a vigorous, hard-working countrywoman, keen, clever, and inclined to shrewishness, living with her husband on one of Squire Donithorne's farms.

Požarevac (pô.zhá're.váts). [German, Passarowitz.] Town in E Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dunavska, situated ab. 38 mi. SE of Belgrade, near the Moravia River: commercial center. An important peace treaty, unfavorable to the Turks, was concluded here in 1718 between Austria and Venice on the one side and Turkey on the other. 15,388 (1948).

Poznań (pôz'nány'). [German, Posen.] Województwo (province or voivodship) in W Poland, formed (1945) from the former Polish provinces, plus parts of Brandenburg, Pomerania, and Lower Silesia. Capital, Poznań; area, ab. 15,152 sq. mi.; pop. ab. two million.

Poznań. [German, Posen.] City in NW Poland, capital of the województwo (province) of Poznań, on the Warta (Warthe) River ab. 167 mi. W of Warsaw. It has the largest locomotive factory in Poland, and various other machine and metal industries. There are also manufactures of synthetic rubber, clothing, furniture, chemicals, textiles, and foodstuffs. The university, founded by the Germans in 1903, was re-founded as a Polish university in 1919. The cathedral, with a 14th-century Gothic interior and an 18th-century baroque exterior, standing on the site of an earlier 10th-century church, was largely destroyed during World War II. Poznań, one of the oldest cities in Poland, has been a chief seat in both the 19th and 20th centuries of the German Ostmarkenpolitik, by which Prussia sought to Germanize the formerly Polish parts of Prussia through systematic colonization with new settlers, and of the Polish nationalistic movement, trying to promote Polish culture. The city was returned to the new Republic of Poland in 1919, was occupied by the Germans on Sept. 12, 1939, and liberated by the Russians on Feb. 23, 1945, after heavy fighting. 291,577 (est. 1950).

Pozoblanco (pô.thô.blāng'kô). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, situated on a high plateau ab. 35 mi. N of Córdoba; galena mines; marble quarries; agricultural trade. 16,702 (1940).

Pozsony (pôz'hôny'). Hungarian name of Bratislava.

Pozzallo (pôz.tsal'ô). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Ragusa, situated on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 15 mi. SE of Ragusa: seaport; fisheries; agricultural trade center. Pop. of commune, 10,090 (1936); of town, 9,723 (1936).

Pozzo di Borgo (pôz'tsô di bôr'gô), Count Carlo Andrea. b. near Ajaccio, Corsica, March 8, 1764; d. at Paris, Feb. 15, 1842. Russian diplomatist, early in life a Corsican patriot opposed to the Bonaparte family. When French troops occupied the island, he fled to England. He entered the Russian diplomatic service in 1803, and was noted for his hostility to Napoleon. The complex politics of the period forced him to leave Russia, and later Vienna, but England was consistently a refuge. He signed the peace of Paris in 1815 and was Russian ambassador to France (1814-35) and to England (1835-39).

Pozzuoli (pôz.tswô'le). [Latin, Puteoli; Greek, Dikaearchia.] Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Bay of Pozzuoli ab. 7 mi. W of Naples: health resort and fishing port. Pozzuoli is noted for its Roman ruins, including harbor installations, amphitheater, houses, and temples (the so-called Temple of Serapis is really an ancient market place). Founded by political refugees from the Greek island of Samos in 529 B.C., it became a Roman colony in 194 B.C. and developed into one of the greatest ports of Italy (it was the port of the town of Cumae), and a winter and seaside resort for wealthy Romans; it declined later in competition with the Roman port of Ostia. Buildings of tourist interest escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 29,690 (1936); of town, 24,594 (1936).

Pozzuoli, Bay of. Northwestern arm of the Bay of Naples.

P. P., Clerk of this Parish, Memoirs of. Work by John Arbuthnot, a satire on Gilbert Burnet's History of My Own Time.

Prada (prá'rá), Manuel González. See González Prada, Manuel.

Pradier (prá.dyá), James. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, May 23, 1792; d. near Paris, June 14, 1852. Swiss sculptor. Most of his works are at Paris (including Phryne, Psyche, Venus and Cupid, and others).

Pradilla (prá.thé'lyá), Francisco. [Full name, Francisco Pradilla y Ortiz (é dr.téth').] b. at Villanueva de Gállego, Spain, July 24, 1848; d. at Madrid, Nov. 1, 1921. Spanish historical, genre, and landscape painter, who was director of the Spanish Academy at Rome and the Prado Museum at Madrid. He was made a member of the French Institute. Among his more popular works are Bathers in the Brook, Roman Countryside, Spanish Savanna, and Jeanne the Crazy.

Prado (prá'ruô). Chief fashionable promenade of Madrid.

Prado. Museum of painting and sculpture maintained by the Spanish government at Madrid. It is one of the world's great repositories of art, rich especially in examples of the work of El Greco, Velásquez, Goya, Ribera, and other Spanish masters, but also housing some of the greatest paintings of the Flemish, German, and Venetian schools. During the Spanish Civil War (1936-39), some of its greatest treasures were sent abroad for safety, and fortunately, though the building sustained some damage from aerial bombardment, the invaluable collection was unharmed.

Prado (prá'dô), Eduardo Paulo da Silva. b. at São Paulo, Brazil, Feb. 27, 1860; d. there, Aug. 30, 1901. Brazilian journalist, essayist, and political writer. A monarchist, he wrote against the republican regime. Among his books are Viagens (1886), Fastos da ditadura militar no Brasil (1890), and his best-known work, A Ilusão americana (1893), a diatribe against the U.S.

Prado (prá'ruô), Juan de. b. in León, Spain, 1716; d. there, c1771. Spanish general. Made governor of Cuba (Feb. 7, 1761), he surrendered the island to the English under George Keppel, 3rd Earl of Albemarle (Aug. 13, 1762). For this he was tried and condemned to death, but the sentence was commuted.

Prado, Mariano Ignacio. b. 1826; d. 1901. Peruvian soldier and politician. In February, 1865, he declared against Juan Antonio Pezet, whose temporizing policy with the Spaniards had made him very unpopular. Pezet resigned, and Prado was named supreme chief in December. He at once formed a close offensive and defensive alliance with Chile, and declared war against Spain. On May 2, 1866, the attack of the Spanish fleet on Callao was repulsed. Prado, whose position was unconstitutional, was forced to leave the country in January, 1868. He returned some years after, and was regularly elected president, assuming office on Aug. 2, 1876. In 1879 war, the War of the Pacific, broke out with Chile. After the Peruvians had been repeatedly defeated in the south, President Prado left the government in the hands of Vice-President La Puerta, and on Dec. 17, 1879, sailed for Europe, ostensibly to raise a loan and buy ironclads. Shortly thereafter the presidency was seized by Nicolás de Piérola.

Prado, Pedro. b. 1886—. Chilean novelist, poet, painter, architect, and diplomat, acknowledged leader of the arts in his country today. He has written Alsino (1920), Un Juez rural (1924), and others.

Praed (práid), Rosa Caroline Mackworth. [Maiden name, Prior.] b. in Queensland, Australia, March 27, 1851; d. at Torquay, England, April 13, 1935. Australian novelist. Among her books are An Australian Heroine (1880), Nadine (1882), The Head Station (1885), The Romance of a Station (1889), and As a Watch in the Night (1900).

Praed, Winthrop Mackworth. b. at London, July 26, 1802; d. there, July 15, 1839. English poet, best known as a writer of light verse or socialite. In 1822 he was a principal contributor to Knight's Quarterly Magazine. Called to the bar in the Middle Temple in May, 1829, he was Tory member of Parliament for St. Germans (1830-32), afterwards member for Great Yarmouth, and still later for Aylesbury until his death. His collected poems were published in 1864, his prose essays in 1887, and his political poems in 1888.

Praeneste (præ.nes'tē). In ancient geography, a city in Latium, Italy, ab. 22 mi. E of Rome; the modern Praenestina. It was built probably as early as the 5th century B.C., often opposed to Rome, especially in 380 A.C. and in the Latin War (340-338), and allied with Rome until the time of the Social War (90-88), when it received the Roman franchise. It was taken by the partisans of Sulla from the Marians under the younger Marius in 82, was a favorite summer resort of the Roman nobility (the residence of Augustus, Horace, Tiberius, and Hadrian), celebrated for the temple and oracle of the goddess Fortuna. There are few ruins remaining.

Praenestine Way (præ.nes'tin, -tin). See Via Praenestina.

Praesepe (præ.sē'pē). Open cluster of telescopic stars, appearing as a nebula to the naked eye, in the breast of the Crab: ε Cancri.

Praestiglar (præ.stj'läär). In the German Faust legend, the long-haired, red-eyed dog that was the constant attendant of Faust. He was believed to be the Devil in dog form.

Præstø (præ.st'vō). Amt (county) of Denmark, in S Zealand, bounded by Copenhagen and Sorø, the Great Belt, and the Baltic Sea. Capital, Præstø; area, 654 sq. mi.; pop. 119,091 (1945).

Praetorian Camp (præ.tō'ri'an). [Also, Pretorian.] Camp at ancient Rome, first permanently established by Tiberius, outside the city walls. It formed a square of ab. 1,500 ft. to a side, and was enclosed by a brick-faced wall 10 ft. high, strengthened with towers at its gates. The camp was included by Aurelian in his new line of fortifications, and still forms an abrupt projection in the wall on the NE. The fortifications of Aurelian are three times as high as those of Tiberius, and not so well built. The latter, embedded as they are in the newer work, can still be followed for a considerable distance. Within the camp there were monumental buildings with mosaics and marble incrustation. Constantine abolished the Praetorian Guard, and pulled down the wall of their camp on the side toward the city.

Praetorian Guard. [Also, Pretorian.] Roman troops assigned to personal protection of the emperor.

Praetorius (præ.tō'ri'ūs), Michael. [Original name, Schultheis or Schultz.] b. at Kreuzberg, Thuringia, Germany, Feb. 15, 1871; d. at Wolfenbüttel, Germany, Feb. 15, 1921. German music historian and composer, remembered chiefly for his Syntagma musicum (1615-20), a musical history. His many compositions include Polyhymnia, Musae Sionae, and the secular Musa Aonia.

Prag (prāk). German name of Prague.

Praga (prā'gā). Former suburb of Warsaw, Poland, situated on the right bank of the Vistula River. It was stormed by the Russians under Suvorov on Nov. 4, 1794. In World War II it was occupied by the Russians in 1944. It is now a part of the city of Warsaw.

Pragel (prā'gel). Alpine pass in the canton of Schwyz, Switzerland, between 25 and 30 mi. SE of Lucerne. It was the scene of severe fighting between the Russians, under Suvorov, and the French in September, 1799.

Prager (prā'gēr), Richard. b. at Hanover, Germany, Nov. 30, 1883; d. in the U.S., c.1943. German astronomer, noted for compiling and calculating standard catalogues, bibliographies, and ephemerides of variable stars.

Pragmatic Sanction. Term first applied to certain decrees of the Byzantine emperors, regulating the interests of their subject provinces and towns; then to a system of limitations set to the spiritual power of the Pope in France in 1438, which laid the foundations of the so-called Gallican Church. Lastly, it became the name for an arrangement or family compact, made by different rulers, regarding succession to sovereignty, the most noted being the instrument by which the emperor Charles VI, being without male issue, endeavored to secure the succession through his female descendants. The Pragmatic Sanction of Charles VI. provided: (1) that the lands belonging to the house of Austria should be indivisible; (2) that in the absence of male heirs these lands should devolve upon Charles's daughters (the eldest of whom was Maria Theresa), according to the law of primogeniture; and (3) that in case of the extinction of this line the inheritance should pass to the daughters of his brother and predecessor as emperor, Joseph I. and their descendants. It was over the legality of this instrument that the War of the Austrian Succession was fought.

Pragmatism: A New Name for Some Old Ways of Thinking. Lectures by William James, published in 1907. Its sequel is The Meaning of Truth (1909). The lectures were delivered (1906-07) at the Lowell Institute and at Columbia University. The author states his philosophic position as a pragmatist, placing his credence in pluralism and in truth empirically ascertained by action.

Prague (prāg, prāg). [Czech, Praha; German, Prag.] Capital of Czechoslovakia and of the kraj (region) of Praha, situated on both sides of the Vltava (Moldau) River near the center of Bohemia but in the W part of the country as a whole. It is divided into 20 districts including the former suburbs, which have been annexed to the city. Although it is one of the newest national capitals of Europe, it is one of its oldest and most picturesque cities, the ancient residence of kings and emperors, filled with the relics of various cultures. It preserves Gothic and baroque architectural elements side by side with modern buildings. Modern Prague is a rail and air communications center with machine, milling, and brewing industries. 922,284 (1947).

Chief Divisions and Buildings. The main part of the city is on the right bank of the Vltava River and includes the historical districts of Staré Město, Nové Město, and Josefov. Among medieval buildings are the Powder Tower, the old town hall, the churches of Saint Henry, Saint Mary-in-the-Snow, and Our Lady of Týn. The Carolinum and Clementinum contain parts of the ancient University of Prague. In the district of Josefov is the location of the ancient Jewish ghetto of Prague, of which the Gothic Old-New-School Synagogue and a part of the old Jewish cemetery still stand. Several bridges, among which the Charles Bridge (Czech, Most Karlov) is outstanding, connect the main part of the city with the quarter on the left bank, the so-called Little Town (Czech, Malá Strana; German, Kleinseite). The Little Town is dominated by Castle Hill, with the castle of Hradčany (German, Hradschin). In the Little Town is the church of Saint Nicholas, completed by Kilian Ignaz Dientzenhofer in 1752, and a number of splendid Renaissance and baroque palaces formerly belonging to the Bohemian aristocracy. The former palace of Count Schonborn is now the American legation. The Hradčany itself faces a large square. The oldest part of the castle was built in 1333; additions were made in 1541, 1614, and 1756-74. After 1918, the castle was occupied by presidents Masaryk and Beneš.

Cultural Institutions. Charles University, one of the oldest of Europe, was founded by Emperor Charles IV in 1348, was the scene of controversies between Germans and Czechs almost from its inception, was given over to Jesuit administration in 1654, was divided into a German and a Czech university in 1882, but since 1918 has been maintained (except for the period 1939-45) only as a Czech institution. The university library, the library of the Museum of Bohemia, the municipal library, and the library of the Monastery of Strahov contain together more than 1,500,000 volumes, manuscripts, and incunabula. There is also an institute of technology, and commercial, art, and musical academies. There are a number of Czech theaters and newspapers (the German theaters and newspapers have disappeared since World War II).

Industry and Trade. Prague is the seat of the leading banking, insurance, and commercial institutions of Czechoslovakia. The Prague trade fair is held in March fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d, or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

and September. The industries are widely ramified: Prague is the center of Czechoslovak glove-making; the Walter works are leaders in aircraft production; there are machine, metal, enamel, electrotechnical, and automobile factories, railroad shops, textile, shoe, leather, food, wood, paper, and ceramics industries, and printing and publishing establishments. The majority of these enterprises are now under government control.

History. The foundation of Prague is ascribed to Libusa, the legendary ancestress of the house of Přemysl. It was settled after the 6th century. A German colony was established in the 11th century and Germans and Czechs have fought for the dominating influence in the city ever since. It acquired great importance in the later Middle Ages as the seat of the Bohemian kings and in the third quarter of the 14th century as the capital of the Holy Roman Empire and its leading cultural and intellectual center. The Přemyslid kings were succeeded by the house of Luxembourg. Emperor Charles IV raised Prague to a high rank among the cities of the empire and founded the university, but when his successor Wenceslas IV limited the privileges of the Germans at the university in favor of the Czechs in 1409, many German students and professors withdrew and founded the University of Leipzig. The center of the Hussite reform movement, the town suffered in the ensuing wars. In 1526, the Bohemian Estates elected the Hapsburg Archduke Ferdinand (later Emperor Ferdinand I) of Austria king of Bohemia. Under Emperor Rudolph II, the collection of art and astronomical studies, guided by Tycho Brahe and Johann Kepler, were furthered. The Reformation caused violent rifts, the Thirty Years' War started and ended here, and Prague changed hands repeatedly between the contending religious and political parties. Prague was besieged or occupied by Bavarians, Saxons, French, and Prussians during the War of the Austrian Succession and the Seven Years' War. In the 18th century the Germanization of the city seemed to proceed rapidly, but at the same time a revival of Czech nationalist sentiment made itself felt. The use of the German language declined through the 19th century. The Jewish community of Prague, one of the oldest in Europe, was almost entirely wiped out during the Nazi occupation. After 1945, the last remnant of the Germans of Prague left for Germany, and Prague is now uncontestedly and totally a Czech city.

Prague, Articles of. See under Calixtines.

Prague, Compactata of. Settlement of the Bohemian controversy by the Council of Basel (1431-36), by which the Hussites were granted the use of the cup in the Eucharist.

Prague, Peace of. Treaty concluded between the emperor Ferdinand II and the elector of Saxony, John George I, in 1635, by which the latter received Lusatia.

Prague, University of. See Charles University.

Praguerie (prăg.rē). Unsuccessful insurrection (1440) in France, in opposition to the establishment of a standing army. King Charles VII attempted to assert the royal power and was opposed by the nobility, whose independence had grown during the recently concluded Hundred Years' War. The name was given to the uprising because of a similar contemporary revolt in Prague, where Luxembourg kings were then reigning.

Praha (pră.hă). Kraj (region) of Czechoslovakia, in C. Bohemia. Capital, Prague; area, ab. 3,757 sq. mi.; pop. 2,014,938 (1947).

Praha. Czech name of Prague.

Praia (pră.ya). Capital and chief port of the Cape Verde Islands, situated on São Tiago island. It is an important coaling station. Pop. ab. 6,000.

Prairial (pră.rī.äl). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the ninth month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1 to 7 with May 20, and in 8 to 13 with May 21.

Prairial Insurrection. Unsuccessful insurrection of the populace in Paris against the Convention, on the 1st Prairial, year 3 (May 20, 1795).

Prairid (pră.rī'd). Hybrid type of Indian, resulting from the intermixture of either Centralid and Pacificid or Sylvid and Pacificid types. Broad heads and broad flat faces are characteristic of this group which, as its name implies, was common on the plains of the central U.S. Prairie, The. Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1827. It is the last in chronological order of his "Leather-Stocking Tales."

Prairie du Chien (pră.rī du shēn'). City in SW Wisconsin, county seat of Crawford County, on the Mississippi River ab. 89 mi. W of Madison; the second oldest settlement in the state. 5,392 (1950).

Prairie La Crosse (la krōs'). Former name of La Crosse, Wis.

Prairie Rapids. Former name of Waterloo, Iowa.

"Prairie State." Nickname of Illinois.

Prairieville (pră.rī.vīl). Former name of Waukesha, Wis.

Praise of Folly. [Latin, Encomium Moriae.] Satirical work by Desiderius Erasmus, published in 1511, directed against the clergy and others.

Praise of Women. Poem formerly erroneously attributed to Geoffrey Chaucer.

Prajadhipok (pră.jă'di.pōk). See Rama VII.

Prajapati (pră.jă'pā.tē). In the Rig-Veda, an epithet of several gods, applied especially to Savitri, to Soma, and to Indra and Agni. Once in the Rig-Veda, and often in the Atharva-Veda and Yajusanyaisanhita and in the Brahmanas, Prajapati is a creator and supreme god over the other gods of the Vedic period. This Prajapati becomes the Brahma of later philosophical speculation. The name is also given to the seven or ten Rishis from whom mankind is descended.

Prajna Paramita (pră.j'nă pă.ră.mi.tă). In Mahayana Buddhism, a female personification of supreme wisdom, and as such the activating energy of the Buddha. Prajna means "knowledge" or "wisdom" (especially a priori as opposed to empirical knowledge); prajna is the wisdom that leads to Nirvana and as such is the paramita or the highest of all virtues. Prajna Paramita as goddess is the consort of Adi-Buddha; his activating energy and also the activating energy of all redeemers. Prajna Paramita is also the title of the principal Sutra of the Mahayana school of the Buddhists, or Great Vehicle. These texts are of the 1st or 2nd century A.D. They are regarded as a manifestation of the wisdom of the Buddha, and Buddhist transcendental idealism is based on them.

Prakrit (pră.krit). General name under which are comprised the various languages which appear to have arisen in India out of Sanskrit during the centuries immediately preceding our era. They form the connecting link between Sanskrit and the modern Indo-European languages of India. The sacred languages of the Buddhists of Ceylon (Pali) and the Jains of India (Jaina Prakrit) are only different forms of Prakrit, and Pali seems to have been chosen as the Buddhist sacred language to appeal to the sympathies of the people. In Alexander the Great's time Prakrit seems to have been the spoken dialect of the people. The language of the rock-inscriptions of King Asoka, which record the names of Antiochus and other Greek princes (c250 B.C.), is also a form of Prakrit, and it is found on the bilingual coins of the Greek kings of Bactria. It plays an important part in all the ancient Hindu dramas, the higher male characters speaking Sanskrit, the women and subordinate male characters using various forms of Prakrit, the language varying according to the rank of the speaker. The oldest Prakrit grammarian, Vararuchi, distinguishes four dialects, while the Sahityadarpana enumerates 14.

Pralaya (pră.lă.ya). In Hindu cosmogony, the cataclysm which ends every age of the world.

Prall's Island (prōlz). Small island of New York City, included within the borough of Richmond, and situated in the Arthur Kill NW of Staten Island.

Pram (prām), Christen Henriksen. b. in Norway, Sept. 4, 1756; d. on the island of St. Thomas, Nov. 25, 1821. Danish poet.

Prambanan (prām.bā.nān'), Chandi. Large complex of buildings including five temples grouped around the largest Siva Temple (Lara Jongrang) in C Java, dating from c900 A.D. The temples stand on a square platform which is surrounded by three rows of 156 sepulchral monuments enshrining the ashes of monks. An abundance of reliefs show scenes from the Ramayana and the Hindu pantheon.

P'ra Nang Klao (prā' nāng' klou'). See Rama III.

Prandtl (prān'tl), Ludwig. b. at Freising, Germany, Feb. 4, 1875; d. at Göttingen, Germany, in August, 1953. German physicist, known for investigations in the fields of mechanics, aerodynamics, and hydrodynamics.

Prang (prāng), Louis. b. at Breslau, in Silesia, March 12, 1824; d. in California, June 14, 1909. American lithographer. He established (1856) a lithographic business at Boston which, during the Civil War, published maps of the war areas. Beginning in 1865 he printed what he himself called "chromos," lithographic reproductions of famous works of art to be sold to a mass market; despite the often inaccurate color, these pictures had incalculable influence in fostering appreciation of art. He also manufactured a brand of water colors that were popular for many years and began (1875) to market Christmas cards in the U.S. He founded (1882) the Prang Educational Company to publish books for use in the schools as aids to drawing classes.

Prantl (prān'tl), Karl von. b. at Landsberg, Bavaria, Germany, Jan. 28, 1820; d. at Oberstdorf, Bavaria, Sept. 14, 1888. German philosophical writer. His chief work is Geschichte der Logik im Abendlande (1855-70).

P'ra P'utt'a Loet La Nop'alai (prā' pōt'ta lō'et' lā nōp'ā'li). See Rama II.

P'ra P'utt'a Yot Chulalong (prā' pōt'ta yōt' chō.lā.lōk'). See Rama I.

Prasad (prāsād'), Rajendra. b. Dec. 3, 1884—. Indian nationalist leader and politician, president (1950 et seq.) of the Republic of India and chairman (1946 et seq.) of the Indian constituent assembly. A leading figure in the nationalist movement, he served as president (1932, 1934, 1939, 1947) of the Indian National Congress and was frequently a member of the Congress Working Committee. Author of India Divided (1947).

Pratagarh (pra.tāp'gar). [Also: Partabgarh, Pertabgarh, Pratabgarh (tāb-).] Former state in India, now incorporated into Rajasthan, Union of India, ab. 140 mi. NE of Ahmedabad; cattle raising and subsistence farming. Area, 873 sq. mi.; pop. 91,967 (1941).

Pratagarh. [Also: Partabgarh, Pertabgarh, Pratabgarh.] District in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, NE of the city of Allahabad; rice, wheat, sugar, barley, and cotton. Area, 1,457 sq. mi.; pop. 1,110,734 (1951).

Pratella (prā.tē.lā), Francesco Ballila. b. at Lugo, Romagna, Italy, Feb. 1, 1880—. Italian composer, an exponent of ultra-futurism in musical composition. Among his works are the opera Lilia (1905), the orchestral poem Romagna, the orchestral dance La Guerra, and organ and piano works.

Pratensis (pra.ten'sis), Jodocus. A Latinized name of Josquin des Prés.

Prater (prā'tēr). Public park in Vienna. It is on an island formed by the Danube and the Danube Canal, and is covered with forest trees and intersected with magnificent drives and walks.

Prättigau (prā'tē.gou) or Prättigau (pret'ē.gou). Alpine valley in E Switzerland, in the N part of the canton of Graubünden, bordering on the province of Vorarlberg, Austria.

Pratishakhya (prā.ti.shā'kya). Name of each of a class of phonetic-grammatical treatises, each, as the name ("belonging each several text") indicates, having for subject one principal Vedic text and noting all its peculiarities of form. Their real purpose is to show how the continuous śaṅkhya text is to be reconstructed out of the pada or word-text, in which the individual words are given separately in their original form, unaffected by śaṅkhi or the influence of the words which immediately precede and follow. Four are extant: that of the Rig-Veda, that of the Black Yajur-Veda, that of the White Yajur-Veda, and that of the Atharva-Veda.

Prato (prā'tō). [Also, Prato in Toscana (in tōs.kā.nā).] Town and commune in N central Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Firenze, situated ab. 11 mi. NW of Florence. It is one of the centers of the Italian woolen industry (its woolen fabrics have been known since the 13th century), and also of silk and cotton manufactures. The Cathedral of San Stefano (13th and 14th centuries) is a Gothic building with bell tower; it contains sculptures by Michelozzo and Donatello, murals by Fra Filippo Lippi, and terra cotta by Andrea della Robbia. The Church of San Domenico is in the Romanesque style, the Church of Santa Maria delle Carceri in the Renaissance style. There is a castle of the 13th, and palaces of the 14th century. The Galleria Comunale has a valuable collection of Italian paintings. The cathedral suffered some damage in World War II, but its works of art were unharmed; Santa Maria delle Carceri was also damaged, but its sculptured decorations by della Robbia had been removed to a safe place; frescoes in San Bartolomeo were salvaged, although the building was destroyed. Pop. of commune, 70,206 (1936); of town, 28,646 (1936).

Prato (prā'tō), Josquinus a. A Latinized name of Josquin des Prés.

Pratola Peligna (prā'tō.lā pā.lē'nyā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise, in the province of L'Aquila, ab. 30 mi. SE of L'Aquila; agricultural trade center. Pop. of commune, 10,444 (1936); of town, 9,637 (1936).

Pratt (prat). City in S Kansas, county seat of Pratt County. 7,523 (1950).

Pratt, Bela Lyon. b. at Norwich, Conn., Dec. 11, 1867; d. at Boston, May 18, 1917. American sculptor who designed many war memorials and monuments. He was an instructor in modeling (1893-1917) at the Boston Museum. He became (1900) an associate of the National Academy of Design, and was also a member of the National Sculpture Society and the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Among his principal works are the soldiers' and sailors' monument at Malden, Mass., a statue of Nathan Hale at Yale University, and a series of four medallions, The Seasons, in the Congressional Library at Washington, D.C.

Pratt, Sir Charles. [Titles: 1st Baron and 1st Earl Camden.] b. in Devonshire, England, 1714; d. at London, April 18, 1794. English jurist, lord chancellor (1766-70), and president of the council (1782-83 and 1784-94).

Pratt, Charles. b. at Watertown, Mass., Oct. 2, 1830; d. at New York, May 4, 1891. American philanthropist. He accumulated a large fortune, chiefly in the oil trade. He is best known as the founder of the Pratt Institute at Brooklyn, which was incorporated in 1886 and opened in 1887.

Pratt, Edwin John. b. at Western Bay, Newfoundland, Feb. 4, 1883—. Canadian poet. He was professor (1919 et seq.) of English at Victoria College of the University of Toronto, and editor of Canadian Poetry Magazine. He was awarded the annual governor general's poetry award for The Fables of the Goats and Other Poems (1937). Author also of Newfoundland Verse (1923), The Witches' Brew (1926), Titans (1926), The Iron Door (1927), Verses of the Sea (1930), Many Moods (1933), Dunkirk (1941), Still Life (1943), They Are Returning (1945), and Behind the Log (1947).

Pratt, Eliza Anna. [Maiden name, Farman.] b. at Augusta, N.Y., Nov. 1, 1837; d. at Warner, N.H., May 22, 1907. American writer and editor of juveniles. She was editor of the children's magazines Wide Awake (1875-93) and Babyland (1877 et seq.) and of Little Men and Women (1895-99) and Little Folks (1897-1900), both merged with Babyland. Author of A Little Woman: A Story for Other Little Women (1873), A White Hand: A Story of Noblesse Oblige (1875), The Cooking Club of Tu-Whit Hollow (1876), Sugar Plums: Poems (1877), Mrs. White's Party, and Other Stories (1879), and The Little Cave-Dwellers (1901).

Pratt, Enoch. b. at North Middleborough, Mass., Sept. 10, 1808; d. Sept. 17, 1896. American industrialist and philanthropist, founder (1880) of the Enoch Pratt Free Library at Baltimore, the first in the U.S. to establish lending branches. Arriving (1831) at Baltimore, he organized the firm of E. Pratt and Brothers, iron commission merchants, acquired (1872) the controlling interest in the Maryland Steamboat Company, was president (1890-96) of the National Farmers' and Planters' Bank of Baltimore, and invested heavily in two fire insurance firms. He donated the land for the Cheltenham reform school for Negro children, and was interested in the Maryland School for the Deaf and Dumb at Frederick, Md.

Pratt, Francis Ashbury. b. at Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 15, 1827; d. Feb. 10, 1902. American inventor and machinist. Employed (1854-64) at the Phoenix Iron Works at Hartford, Conn., he organized (1865) with Amos Whitney and served as president (1865-98) of the Pratt and Whitney machine-tool works. He inaugurated during the Civil War the manufacture of interchangeable parts for firearms. He instigated the adoption of a standard system of gauges, and invented a machine for planing metal (1869), a gear-cutting machine (1884), and a milling machine (1885).

Pratt, Orson. b. at Hartford, N.Y., Sept. 19, 1811; d. at Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 3, 1881. American apostle and missionary of the Mormon Church. He joined the Mormon Church in 1830, and became an apostle in 1835. He possessed an extensive knowledge of higher mathematics, and wrote Cubic and Biquadratic Equations (1866) and others.

Pratt, Richard Henry. b. at Rushford, N.Y., Dec. 6, 1840; d. at San Francisco, March 15, 1924. American soldier and educator of Indians. He served with the 11th Indiana Cavalry during the Civil War. As lieutenant with the 10th Cavalry, he participated (1868-69, 1874-75) in the campaigns against the Cheyenne, Comanche, and Kiowa. He was the organizer (1878-79) of the Indian Branch at Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute in Virginia, and founded (1879) and headed (1879-1904) at Carlisle Barracks, Carlisle, Pa., the first nonreservation Indian school, authorized (1882) by Congress and now known as Carlisle Indian Industrial School.

Pratt, Silas Gamaliel. b. at Addison, Vt., Aug. 4, 1846; d. at Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 30, 1916. American pianist, composer, and teacher. He founded (1906) the Pratt Institute of Music and Art at Pittsburgh, Pa., serving (1906-16) as its president. Among his compositions are the lyric opera Antonio, and the operas Zenobia and Ollantay; among his cantatas is The Last Inca. He also wrote the orchestral works Lincoln Symphony, Centennial Overture, Prodigal Son, and Ode to Peace, as well as numerous songs and piano selections.

Pratt, Thomas Willis. b. at Boston, July 4, 1812; d. July 10, 1875. American civil engineer and inventor, deviser (1844) of the "Pratt Truss" for bridges.

Pratt, Waldo Selden. b. at Philadelphia, Nov. 10, 1857; d. at Hartford, Conn., July 29, 1939. American musician and teacher. He was professor of music and hymnology (1882-1917) at Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn. He was music editor for the Century Dictionary, editor of the American supplement to Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians, and editor of the New Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians. Author of History of Music (1907) and Music of the Pilgrims (1921).

Prättigau (pret'ē.gau). See Prättigau.

Pratts Siding (prats). Former name of Helper, Utah.

Prattville (prat'vil). City in C Alabama, county seat of Autauga County, ab. 12 mi. NW of Montgomery; cotton gins. 4,385 (1950).

Pravda (prav'da). Russian daily newspaper, first published as the voice of the Bolshevik party at St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) in May, 1912, and later (1917 et seq.) at Moscow. The paper, whose name in Russian means "Truth," was founded by N. I. Lenin and was edited (1917 et seq.) by Joseph Stalin and L. B. Kamenev. It is the official organ of the central committee of the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R. (Izvestia, the other principal Russian daily journal, is the newspaper of the presidium of the supreme council of the U.S.S.R.), and is the prototype of other Communist Party newspapers in the several republics and regions of the union.

Pravia (prä'vya). Commune in NW Spain, in the province of Oviedo, ab. 20 mi. NW of Oviedo, 11,203 (1940).

Praxeas (prak'sē.as). Anti-Montanist of the late 2nd century, from Asia Minor. He visited Rome (190-198) and there persuaded the Pope (Victor I) not to accept the Montanists. He was accused by Tertullian, after the latter's own error, of having taught Monarchianism at Carthage.

Praxidike (prak.sid'ikē). In Greek religion, three goddesses of justice, especially of retribution. They were often solemnly sworn by, but always in the open air (even their temple had no roof). The singular form of the name was an epithet of Persephone.

Praxiteles (prak.sit'ē.lēz). b. at Athens about the end of the 5th century B.C. Greek sculptor. His activity lasted until about the time of Alexander the Great, or 336 B.C. Nearly threescore of his works are mentioned in old writers. The characteristics of his work are shown in the statue of Hermes and Dionysus, identified by Pausanias's description. Various figures in modern museums are supposed to be copies of his work. Among them are the Satyr of the Capitol (the Marble Faun of Hawthorne's novel); a much more beautiful torso discovered in the Palatine, and now in the Louvre; the Apollino of the tribune in Florence; and the Apollo Sauronotus of the Vatican. His most celebrated work was the Aphrodite of Chnidos, which, next to the Zeus of Phidias, was the most admired of the statues of antiquity.

Pray (pri), Isaac Clark. b. at Boston, May 15, 1813; d. at New York, Nov. 28, 1869. American journalist, theater manager, actor, playwright, and poet. In 1846 he went on the stage at London, and played such parts as Alexander, Hamlet, Othello, Sir Giles Overreach, and others. Among his plays are The Old Clock, dramatized from his novel (1836), Cæcilia, The Broker of Florence, and other works. He was particularly successful in training pupils for the stage.

Prayer Book. See Book of Common Prayer.

Prayer of Twenty Millions. The. Letter (Aug. 19, 1862) written by Horace Greeley to President Abraham Lincoln demanding that Lincoln should definitely commit himself to the emancipation of Negro slaves. In this attitude, Greeley spoke for a large and powerful anti-slavery element in the North; though not formally allied with the Garrison abolitionists, Greeley had, through the columns of the New York Tribune, persistently denounced slavery. Lincoln's reply (Aug. 22, 1862), justifying the war as one for the preservation of the Union, is one of the most notable of his pronouncements.

Prayers of Steel. Poem in free verse by Carl Sandburg, published in Cornhuskers (1918).

Préault (prä.ö), Antoine Auguste. b. at Paris, Oct. 8, 1809; d. there, Jan. 11, 1879. French sculptor. He made the famous medallion of Silence for the Jewish cemetery at Père Lachaise in 1848, the statue of General Marceau (1850), the Christ of the Church of Saint-Gervais, La Vierge aux épines (1866), Paul Huet (1870; funeral medallion), and others.

Pré aux Clercs (prä ö kler), Le. Strip of land in old Paris, which extended from the wall of Philippe Auguste to the present Champ de Mars, between the abbey of St.-Germain des Prs and the river. It must have belonged originally to the abbey, but was at an early date transferred to the university and used as a park or campus by the students.

Pré aux Clercs. Le. Opera by Louis Hérold, produced at Paris on Dec. 15, 1832.

Preble (preb'l). Unincorporated community in E Wisconsin, in Brown County; agricultural trading center. 5,092 (1950).

Preble, Edward. b. at Falmouth (now Portland), Me., Aug. 15, 1761; d. there, Aug. 25, 1807. American naval officer. He served in the Revolutionary War, and afterward was in the merchant service, becoming master of his ship. He entered the navy (1798) as a lieutenant and in 1799 was captain in charge of a convoy to the East Indies. He commanded, as captain of the Constitution and commodore of the Mediterranean squadron, the naval expedition against Morocco and Tripoli in 1803-04, but his failure to force a definite conclusion to the affair and his failure (1804) in an attack on Tripoli caused him to be relieved by Samuel Barron.

Preble, George Henry. b. at Portland, Me., Feb. 25, 1816; d. at Boston, March 1, 1885. American admiral and naval writer; nephew of Edward Preble. He entered the navy as a midshipman in 1835, commanded the Katahdin and the St. Louis during the Civil War, was promoted captain in 1867, commodore in 1871, and rear admiral in 1876, and was retired in 1878. He wrote History of the Preble Family in America (1868), Our Flag: Origin and Progress of the Flag of the United States of America (1872), and others.

Pre-Cambrian Era (prä.kam'brī.an). The geological age preceding the Paleozoic Era. See table at end of Volume III.

Precaution. First novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1820.

Pre-Chellean Period (prē.shēl'ē.ən). See under Chellean Period.

Précieuses Ridicules (prā.syēz rē.dē.kül), Les. Comedy by Molière, produced in 1659. The play was directed against the affectations and unreal language of the members of literary coteries which, with that of the Hôtel de Rambouillet as the chief, had long been prominent in French society.

Preciosa (prā.tse.ō.zā). Play by the German actor P. A. Wolff (1782-1838), adapted from Cervantes's story of The Little Gypsy. With music by Karl Maria von Weber, it was produced at Berlin in 1821.

Precious Bane. Novel by Mary Webb, published in 1924. It was awarded the 1925 Femina-Vie Heureuse prize.

Predil Pass (prā'dil). Alpine pass in N Italy, connecting the valleys of the Drava and Isonzo rivers.

Preedy (prē'di). George Runnell. A pseudonym of Long, Gabrielle Margaret Vere.

Preetz (prāts). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated on the Schwentine River ab. 11 mi. SW of Kiel: sawmills, dairies, canneries, and chemical factory. 12,218 (1950).

Preface to Morals, A. Philosophical work by Walter Lippmann, published in 1929.

Pregel (prā'gel). River in what was formerly East Prussia, now part of the U.S.S.R. It is formed by the union of the Inster and Angerapp, and flows into the Frisches Haff ab. 5 mi. below Königsberg (Kalinigrad). Length, ab. 80 mi.

Pregl (prā'gl). Fritz. b. at Laibach, Austria (now Ljubljana, Yugoslavia), 1869; d. at Graz, Austria, 1930. Austrian analytical chemist. He was the primary creator of the quantitative microanalysis of organic compounds, for which he was awarded the 1923 Nobel prize in chemistry.

Prejudices. Six series of critical essays by H. L. Mencken, published in 1919, 1920, 1922, 1924, 1926, and 1927.

Preliminaries of Versailles (vēr.sālz', vēr.sī'). See Versailles, Preliminaries of.

Prell (prel), Hermann. b. at Leipzig, Germany, April 29, 1854; d. at Dresden-Loschwitz, Germany, May 18, 1922. German painter and sculptor. From 1870 to 1880 he was at Rome, then returned to Berlin to teach fresco painting at the Academy. He later taught at Dresden (1892-1917). A list of his works includes Prometheus (sculpture), Rest on the Flight to Egypt and Judas Iscariot, frescoes in the city halls at Worms and Danzig, Venus Anadyomene, and Portrait Figure of King Friedrich Augustus III of Saxony.

Preller (prel'ēr), Friedrich. b. at Eisenach, Germany, April 25, 1804; d. at Weimar, Germany, April 23, 1878. German landscape painter. Among his best works are landscapes illustrating the Odyssey, in the museum at Weimar.

Preller, Ludwig. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 15, 1809; d. at Weimar, Germany, June 21, 1861. German antiquary, chief librarian at Weimar from 1846. His chief work is Griechische Mythologie (1854-55).

Prelude, The. Philosophical poem by William Wordsworth, published posthumously in 1850, but written some 50 years earlier.

Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune (prā.lūd ā lā.premā.dē.dē fōn). Full title of Après-midi d'un faune, L'.

Préludes (prā.lūd), Les. Orchestral tone poem by Franz Liszt, first performed at Weimar on Feb. 23, 1854. The composition is based on a poem by Alphonse de Lamartine.

Prelude to Adventure, The. Novel by Hugh Walpole, published in 1912.

Pre-Malay (prē.mā'lā). See Proto-Malay.

Premont (prē'mont). Town in S Texas, in Jim Wells County: agricultural trading center. 2,619 (1950).

Premph (premp'h). fl. 1888-96. King of the Ashanti nation at the time it was defeated by the British at the end of the 19th century. This defeat ended a century of wars between Ashanti and British troops, and resulted in a 28-year exile for Premph.

Prence (prens) or Prince (prins), Thomas. b. in England, 1600; d. at Plymouth, Mass., March 29, 1673. American colonist, one of the pilgrims on the Fortune. He was governor of Plymouth Colony (1634-35, 1638, and 1657-73).

Prendergast (pren'dēr.gast), Maurice Brazil. b. at St. Johns, Newfoundland, Canada, 1859; d. Feb. 1, 1924. American painter, member of "The Eight" and exhibitor at the Armory Show (1913). Although influenced by French pointillism, he made many pictures of American subjects and developed an individual style of painting in small patterns. Brought up at Boston, he began his career by painting showcards, worked his way to France (1884) on a cattle boat with his brother, studied (1884-89) at Paris, and between other trips to France and Italy (c.1892-1910, 1919, 1912), made picture frames and painted water colors of the Massachusetts coast, pictures of people in Central Park, and landscapes in New Hampshire. His last years were spent at New York. His works include Camp Vittorio Emmanuel, Siena (1898-99), East River (1901), Promenade (1915), and others.

Prensa (prān'sā), La. Argentine newspaper, founded by José C. Paz on Oct. 18, 1869, at Buenos Aires. One of the leading journals of the Western Hemisphere, La Prensa is noted as a crusading newspaper in whose columns matters of public welfare are given a full hearing. Its Sunday feature section is widely distributed; the paper offers free legal advice and runs a free medical clinic as part of its public-service program. In 1951 the newspaper became the center of an international cause célèbre. A strike of railroad workers was broken by the Perón regime in Argentina and, when La Prensa commented on the strike, it was met by a government-inspired strike of news vendors. Because of the disorders incident in this strike, the paper was suspended by the government; its editor, Alberto Gainza Paz, fled the country. After a suspension of some ten months, the paper was again published in November, 1951, but not by its original owners.

Prentice (prent'is), George Dennison. b. at Preston, Conn., Dec. 18, 1802; d. at Louisville, Ky., Jan. 22, 1870. American journalist, poet, and humorist.

Prentiss (prent'is), Benjamin Mayberry. b. Nov. 23, 1819; d. Feb. 8, 1901. American general. He defeated the Confederates under Generals Theophilus H. Holmes and Sterling Price at Helena, Ark., July 4, 1863.

Prentiss, Charles. b. at Reading, Mass., Oct. 8, 1774; d. at Brimfield, Mass., Oct. 20, 1820. American journalist and author.

Prentiss, Elizabeth Payson. b. at Portland, Me., Oct. 26, 1818; d. at Dorset, Vt., Aug. 13, 1878. American novelist and writer of juveniles; wife of George Lewis Prentiss. Her best-known work is Stepping Heavenward (1869). She also wrote the Little Susy series and Flower of the Family (1854).

Prentiss, George Lewis. b. at West Gorham, Me., May 12, 1816; d. March 18, 1903. American Presbyterian clergyman and educator, professor (1871-97) at Union Theological Seminary.

Prentiss Seargent Smith. b. at Portland, Me., Sept. 30, 1808; d. near Natchez, Miss., July 1, 1850. American orator and politician. He was elected to Congress from Mississippi in 1838.

Prenzlau (prents'lou). [Also, Prenzlou (prents'lō).] Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, ab. 58 mi. NE of Berlin: sugar-refining, flour-milling, metalworking, and tobacco industries; agricultural trade. Medieval town walls are preserved. The Marienkirche (1290-1343) and the Jakobikirche (1275-1343) are churches in the Gothic style; the Rathaus (town hall) dates from 1725. Prenzlau received town privileges in 1234, and passed to Brandenburg in 1250. Near it, on Oct. 25, 1806, a Prussian army under Friedrich Ludwig, Prince von Hohenlohe, in retreat from Jena, surrendered to the French under Joachim Murat. 17,669 (1946).

Preradović (prā.rā'dō.vich), Paula. b. at Vienna, Oct. 12, 1887—. Austrian writer, considered the leading contemporary lyric poet among Austrian women writers. She is also well known as a writer of novels and short stories. Her works are characterized by strong, colorful fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lîte, pûll; rûr, then; ð, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; flamboyance and by exotic Southeast European backgrounds.

Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood (prĕ.răf'ă.ĕ.lĭ.t). Band of artists, originally consisting of Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, and J. E. Millais (joined later by William Michael Rossetti, Thomas Woolner, F. G. Stephens, and James Collinson), who united in 1848 with a view of adopting a closer study of nature, and as a protest against academic dogma. The Germ was started in 1850, but only four numbers were published. Its avowed object was to "enforce and encourage an entire adherence to the simplicity of nature." The principle was applied to the writing of poetry as well as to painting. Ruskin earnestly advocated the school, whose methods he defined as the effort "to paint things as they probably did look and happen, not as, by rules of art developed under Raphael, they might be supposed gracefully, deliciously, or sublimely to have happened." A storm of vituperative criticism raged round the brotherhood for five years, and finally spent itself on their successors. By 1854 the band was practically broken up by divergence of methods.

Prerov (pĕr.shĕ'rôf). [German, Prerau (pră'rou).] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Olomouc, in N central Moravia, ab. 13 mi. SE of Olomouc. The town has various industries, a Gothic town hall, and a castle dating from the 16th century. 21,041 (1947).

Prés (pră), Josquin des. See Josquin des Prés.

Presanella (pră.ză.nĕ.lă). Group of the Alps in S Tyrol, connected with the Adamello Alps, and separated from the Ortler group by the Tonale Pass. Elevation of Monte Presanella, 11,686 ft.

Prescot (pres'kôt). Urban district, market town, and industrial center in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 8 mi. E of Liverpool, ab. 197 mi. NW of London by rail. It is an important coal-mining center, situated on the Lancashire coal field. Industries include rolling mills and wire-drawing mills, especially of aluminum and copper. 12,474 (1951).

Prescott (pres'kôt). City in C Arizona, county seat of Yavapai County, in a gold, silver, copper, lead, and zinc mining area. Much of the trade of the city is derived from cattle and Arizona-cow ranchers. 6,764 (1950).

Prescott. City in SW Arkansas, county seat of Nevada County; trade and shipping center for an agricultural and fruit-producing area. 3,960 (1950).

Prescott. Town in SE Ontario, Canada, county seat of Grenville County, situated on the St. Lawrence River opposite Ogdensburg, N.Y. It is an important river port and possesses a large grain elevator. 3,518 (1951).

Prescott, Richard. b. in England, 1725; d. there, in October, 1788. British general. He served in the Seven Years' War, came to Canada in 1773, and had command of the British force in Rhode Island in 1777, when he was captured by William Barton.

Prescott, Robert. b. in England, 1725; d. near Battle, England, Dec. 21, 1816. British general. He served in the Revolutionary War, and was colonial governor in Canada (1796-99).

Prescott, Samuel. b. at Concord, Mass., Aug. 19, 1751; d. at Halifax, Nova Scotia, c1777. American Revolutionary patriot, remembered for successfully completing (April 18, 1775) the warning ride from Boston after the capture of Paul Revere. Escaping the British troops, he rode into Concord and aroused the minutemen. He was in service (1776) at Ticonderoga. Captured by the British and jailed, he died before his release.

Prescott, William. b. at Groton, Mass., Feb. 20, 1726; d. at Pepperell, Mass., Oct. 13, 1795. American soldier. He served in the expedition to Nova Scotia in 1755, and commanded at the Battle of Bunker Hill (June 17, 1775) after building the fortifications on Breed's Hill the night before.

Prescott, William Hickling. b. at Salem, Mass., May 14, 1796; d. at Boston, Jan. 25, 1859. American historian. While he was an undergraduate at Harvard one of his eyes was injured by a piece of bread thrown by a fellow student, and in a short time he became nearly blind. Notwithstanding this drawback, he was able to make careful researches, principally in Spanish history, employing a reader and using a special writing-case. He obtained from Spain a large number of valuable manuscripts. His principal works are History of the Reign of Ferdinand and Isabella the Catholic (1838), History of the Conquest of Mexico (1843), History of the Conquest of Peru (1847), and History of the Reign of Philip II (unfinished, 1855-58). He also wrote several miscellaneous historical and critical works. Prescott's painstaking scholarship laid the basis for the work of later historians, whose works have superseded his.

President. American frigate, built at New York in 1794, a sister ship to Constitution and United States. At the beginning of the War of 1812 it was flagship of the squadron commanded by Captain John Rodgers. On Jan. 15, 1815, it defeated the British ship Endymion, but surrendered to her consort.

Presidente Perón Province (pră.sĕ.thĕn'tă pă.rôn'). See Chaco, Argentina.

Presidente Prudente (pră.zĕ.dăn'tĕ prô.dăn'tĕ). City in S Brazil, in the state of São Paulo, 27,312 (1950).

Presidential Range. See under White Mountains.

Presidential Succession Act. Act of the U.S. Congress (Jan. 19, 1886), as amended by the act of July 18, 1947, providing for succession to the office of the president in the event of death or disability on the part of both the president and the vice-president. The next in the line of succession is the speaker of the House, then the president pro tempore of the Senate, and then the heads of the various national executive departments, in the following order: State, Treasury, Defense, Justice, Post Office, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor.

Prešov (prĕ.shôf). Kraj (region) of Czechoslovakia, in E Slovakia. Capital, Prešov; area, ab. 3,280 sq. mi.; pop. 448,358 (est. 1948).

Prešov. [Hungarian, Eperjes; German, Eperies.] Town in Czechoslovakia, capital of the kraj (region) of Prešov, in E Slovakia, situated on the Torysa River, N of Košice. The town has various industries and is a trading center for agricultural products. The old town walls are still standing. The town was founded by German colonists c1200, but has since acquired Slovakian character. It was the scene of a mass execution of Protestants by the imperial general Antonio Caraffa in 1687. The town belonged to Hungary until 1920, when it was ceded to Czechoslovakia. 18,932 (1947).

Presque Isle (presk'il'). City in NE Maine, in Aroostook County. It is a processing and shipping center for potatoes. It is the site of the annual Northern Maine Fair, held in September. 9,954 (1950).

Pressburg (pres'bûrk; Anglicized, pres'berg). German name of Bratislava.

Pressburg, Peace of. Treaty concluded between France and Austria, Dec. 26, 1805. Austria ceded her Venetian possessions to the kingdom of Italy, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, Passau, and other areas to Bavaria, and her Swabian possessions to the South German states. Bavaria and Württemberg were made kingdoms. Austria received the principality of Salzburg and some smaller possessions.

Pressensé (prĕ.sĕn.să), Edmond Dehaut d. b. at Paris, Jan. 7, 1824; d. April 8, 1891. French Protestant theologian, orator, and statesman. His works include Histoire des trois premiers siècles de l'église chrétienne (1858-77), Discours religieux (1859), Jésus-Christ, sa vie, son temps, et son œuvre (1866), Études évangéliques (1867), Concile du Vatican (1871), and Les Origines (1882).

Pressensé, Francis Dehaut d. b. at Paris, Sept. 30, 1853; d. there, Jan. 19, 1914. French political leader; son of Edmond Dehaut de Pressensé. He was one of the principal organizers of the unification (1905) of the French Socialist Party. After taking a leading role in the Dreyfus Affair as a defender of Captain Dreyfus, he joined the Socialist movement, and served (1902-14) as a deputy.

Presser (pres'ĕr), Theodore. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., July 3, 1848; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 28, 1925. American music publisher and philanthropist. He was the founder and head of the Theodore Presser Company publishing firm, which brought out The Étude. He established the Music Teachers' National Association (1876), the Presser Foundation (1916), and the Presser Home for Retired Music Teachers (1906).

Prestatyn (pres.tăt'in). Urban district, seaside resort, and small market town in N Wales, in Flintshire, situated on the Irish Sea ab. 8 mi. NW of Holywell, ab. 206 mi. NW of London by rail, 8,809 (1951).

Prester John (pres'tér jon). [Meaning "John the Priest" or "John the Presbyter."] Legendary Christian monarch believed, in the 12th century, to have made extensive conquests and to have established a powerful empire somewhere in Asia "beyond Persia and Armenia," or, according to other accounts, in Africa (Ethiopia). Marvelous tales were told of his victories, riches, and power. Among the marvels reported from Prester John's kingdom were: a fountain from which three drafts ensured everlasting youth and complete lack of poverty and crime, an herb which dispelled demons, ants which mined gold, a magic mirror which revealed plots, and Prester John's couch of sapphire which ensured chastity. Extravagant reports purporting to have been written by him to the Byzantine emperor Manuel Comnenus and to other potentates were circulated. Pope Alexander III sent him a letter by a special messenger (who never returned). The foundation of the legend is uncertain. Sir John Mandeville gives this account of the name: an emperor of the Orient, who was a Christian, went into a church in Egypt on the Saturday in Whitsun week, where the bishop was ordaining priests. "And he beheld and listend the servys fulle telledy." He then said that he would no longer be called emperor, but priest, and that he would have the name of the first priest of the church, which was John. Since that time he has been called Prester John.

Pré-St.-Gervais (prä.sän.zher.ve), Le. See Le Pré-St.-Gervais.

Preston (pres'ton). County borough, market town, seaport, and manufacturing center in NW England, in Lancashire, situated on the river Ribble (navigable to ocean-going ships), near the head of the estuary, ab. 28 mi. NE of Liverpool, ab. 209 mi. NW of London by rail. It has cotton and rayon textile industries, and makes fine cotton shirtings. Preston also manufactures textile machinery and electrical equipment. Here, on Aug. 17-19, 1648, the Parliamentarians (about 10,000) under Oliver Cromwell totally defeated the Scottish Royalists under James Hamilton, 1st Duke of Hamilton; and here in November, 1715, the Jacobites were defeated by the British troops and compelled to surrender. The town was occupied by the Young Pretender, Charles Edward Stuart, in November, 1745. Pop. 119,243 (1951).

Preston. City in SE Idaho, county seat of Franklin County, in an irrigated farming area, 4,045 (1950).

Preston. Town in S Ontario, Canada, in the S part of Waterloo County, ab. 30 mi. NW of Hamilton, 7,619 (1951).

Preston, George F. A pseudonym of Warren, John Byrne Leicester.

Preston, Harriet Waters. b. at Danvers, Mass., Aug. 6, 1836; d. at Cambridge, Mass., May 14, 1911. American writer and translator. She lived in France and Great Britain for some time and was particularly noted for her translation of Frédéric Mistral's Mirèio in 1873. She also translated The Life of Madame Swetchine (1865), Portraits de femmes from Sainte-Beuve (called Celebrated Women) and Troubadours and Trouvères (1876), A Year in Eden (1886), and others.

Preston, John Smith. b. near Abingdon, Va., April 20, 1809; d. at Columbia, S.C., May 1, 1881. American orator. A Louisiana plantation owner, he became a Secessionist leader and Confederate general. From 1863 to 1865 he was in charge of the bureau of conscription at Richmond. He fled to England at the end of the war, but returned to the U.S. in 1868.

Preston, Margaret. [Maiden name, Junkin.] b. at Milton, Pa., May 19, 1820; d. March 28, 1897. American writer. Author of Silverwood, A Book of Memoirs (1856), a prose narrative; Beechenbrook, a Rhyme of the War (1865), a narrative poem; and two collections of verse, Old Songs and New (1870) and Cartoons (1875).

Preston, William. b. near Louisville, Ky., Oct. 16, 1816; d. at Lexington, Ky., Sept. 21, 1887. American politician. He was member of Congress from Kentucky (1852-55), U.S. minister to Spain (1858-61), and a Confederate general.

Preston, William Ballard. b. at Smithfield, Montgomery County, Va., Nov. 29, 1805; d. there, Nov. 16, 1862. American politician, U.S. secretary of the navy (1849-50) under Taylor. He was Whig member of Congress from Virginia (1847-49), and a Confederate senator. Preston, William Campbell. b. at Philadelphia, Dec. 27, 1794; d. at Columbia, S.C., May 22, 1860. American politician and orator. He was Democratic U.S. senator from South Carolina (1837-42), and president of South Carolina College (1845-51).

Prestonpans (pres.ton.panz'). Municipal burgh in S Scotland, in East Lothian, situated on the S bank of the Firth of Forth, ab. 9 mi. E of Edinburgh, ab. 384 mi. N of London by rail. Here on Sept. 21, 1745, the Jacobites (chiefly Highlanders) under Charles Edward Stuart, the Young Pretender, defeated the British troops (Royalists) under Sir John Cope, 2,903 (est. 1948).

Prestonsburg (pres'tonz.bèrg). Town in E Kentucky, county seat of Floyd County; trading center for an agricultural and soft-coal mining area, 3,585 (1950).

Prestwich (pres'twich). Municipal borough in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 4 mi. NW of Manchester, ab. 188 mi. NW of London by rail. The town has a cotton-bleaching industry, but is mainly residential in character, 34,387 (1951).

Prestwich, Sir Joseph. b. at Clapham, London, March 12, 1812; d. at Shoreham, Kent, England, June 23, 1896. English geologist, professor of geology at Oxford (1874-88). A wine merchant by trade until he was 60, he carried on studies of London and Hampshire stratigraphy; his A Geological Inquiry Respecting the Water-bearing Strata of the Country Around London (1851) was a standard work. He later studied paleolithic and eolithic (then as yet unnamed) remains and demonstrated the existence of man in the Pleistocene era.

Prestwick (pres'twik). Police burgh and holiday resort in S Scotland, in Ayrshire, situated near the Firth of Clyde, ab. 3 mi. N of Ayr, ab. 403 mi. N of London by rail. The town has a very important international airport, 11,670 (est. 1948).

Prete (prä'tä), Carlo P. del. b. 1897; d. Aug. 16, 1928. Italian aviator. With Captain Arturo Ferrarin, he set (June, 1928) an aerial endurance record of 58 hours and 37 minutes. Again with Ferrarin, he flew (July 3-5, 1928) a Savoia craft over a distance of 4,466 miles from Italy to Brazil, setting a nonstop distance record for the time.

Prete Genovese (prä'tä jä.nö.vä'zä), Il. See Strozzi, Bernardo.

Prete Rosso (prä'tä rós'só), Il. See Vivaldi, Antonio.

Preti (prä'té), Mattia. Original name of Calabrese, II.

Pretoria (prä'tó'ri.a). City in S Africa, capital of the Transvaal and seat of the executive government of the Union of South Africa. The city is situated in the S central part of the Transvaal, ab. 43 mi. N of Johannesburg and ab. 999 mi. NE of Capetown. It is the residence of the governor general and of the ministers and diplomatic representatives (who move to Capetown when parliament is in session). The city possesses many fine buildings, monuments, and homes. The city is also famous for its jacaranda trees. Pretoria is the site of the principal steel mills in the Union of South Africa, and also has tanning, cement, and ceramic industries. The railroad to the Limpopo River extends northward from here; a line also connects the city with Lourenço Marques, Mozambique. Pop. 168,054, including 106,982 Europeans (1946).

Pretorian Camp and Pretorian Guard (prä'tó'ri.an). See Praetorian Camp and Praetorian Guard.

Pretorius (prä'tó'ri.us; Dutch, prä'tó'rē.us), Andries Wilhelmus Jacobus. b. in Cape Colony, Africa, 1799; d. at Magaliberg, in the Transvaal, July 23, 1853. Boer pioneer and leader; father of Martinus Wessels Pretorius. A prosperous farmer, whose forebears were among the earliest white settlers of South Africa, he joined the Great Trek which started in 1835, crossing the mountains into Natal, where in 1838 he was chosen commandant-general of the migrants, and at the head of a hastily assembled Boer force, avenged upon the Zulus their slaughter, in the previous year, of Piet Retief and his followers. At the same time he led the Boer resistance to British domination of Natal, but eventually accepted British rule. In 1847 he was delegated to bring to the attention of the governor of Cape Colony the complaints of the Boer farmers against the British policy of permitting a large immigration of African natives into Natal, and assigning them lands which conflicted with Boer claims. The governor refused to receive either Pretorius or any communication from him, and consequently in January, 1848, many of the Natal Boers, under Pretorius's leadership, trekked again, this time crossing to the northward of the Vaal River. War with the British ensued, with varying fortunes, until in January, 1852, the British, by the Sand River Convention, recognized the independence of the Transvaal Republic, which the following year became the South African Republic. When Andries Pretorius's son, Martinus Wessels Pretorius, became that republic's first president, a new city to serve as the country's capital was laid out and named Pretoria in honor of Andries Pretorius.

Pretorius, Martinus Wessels. b. in Cape Colony, Africa, 1819; d. at Potchefstroom, in the Transvaal, May 19, 1901. Boer soldier and statesman, first president of the South African Republic; son of Andries Wilhelmus Jacobus Pretorius (1799-1853). He succeeded his father, at the latter's death in 1853, as commandant-general of the Transvaal Boers, and in 1854, in revenge for the killing of 23 Boers by Kaffirs, led an expedition which took toll of the natives to the number of about 3,000. Elected president of the South African Republic in 1857, in pursuit of his great hope of uniting that country and the Orange Free State, he became president of the latter also in 1859, but resigned that office in 1863. Re-elected president of the South African Republic in 1864 and 1869, he was chiefly instrumental in awakening among the faction-ridden Transvaal Boers a spirit of national unity. In 1868, when gold was reported discovered in Bechuanaland, Pretorius undertook to annex that vast region to the Republic, as well as territory to the eastward as far as Delagoa Bay. When the Portuguese reasserted their ancient claim to the latter area, Pretorius yielded; nor did he succeed in extending Boer control over much of Bechuanaland. Next, diamonds were discovered along the lower Vaal River, and the government of the Republic asserted its right to that district, but in 1871 Pretorius, without consulting his colleagues in government, referred the question to the arbitration of the lieutenant governor of Natal. The latter's decision was adverse to the Boer cause, and though Pretorius acquiesced, the Volksraad (national legislature) rejected the settlement, and the president resigned in November, 1871. The British aggression in 1877 brought him back to active service of his country, and together with Paul Kruger and Piet Joubert he organized the resistance which forced the British to renounce their proclaimed annexation and to recognize a second time the independence of the South African Republic. He lived to see the final extinction of that independence 20 years later.

Pretty Lady, The. Novel by Arnold Bennett, published in 1918.

Prettyman (prĭt'man), Prince. Whimsical character, in George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham's play The Rehearsal, who alternates between being a fisherman and a prince, and is in love with Cloris. His embarrassments are amusing and numerous. He was intended to ridicule Leonidas in John Dryden's Marriage à la Mode.

Preuss (prois), Hugo. b. at Berlin, Oct. 28, 1806; d. there, Oct. 9, 1925. German jurist and statesman. A pupil of Rudolf von Gneist and of Otto von Gierke, he taught government at the University of Berlin and at the Berlin academy for economics (1909 et seq.). Active in Berlin city politics and a member of the Progressive Party, he was made state secretary of the interior by President Ebert. From February to June, 1919, he served as minister of the interior, but resigned because he rejected the Versailles Treaty. A member of the Prussian diet, he drafted the Weimar constitution. His draft called for more centralization than the final version. His main works were Entwicklung des deutschen Städtewesens (1913), Deutschlands republikanische Reichsverfassung (1922), Der deutsche National Staat (1924), and numerous articles published in Theodor Barth's Die Nation and in Friedrich Naumann's Die Hyle.

Preuss, Johann David Erdmann. b. at Landsberg, Germany, April 1, 1755; d. at Berlin, Feb. 24, 1868. Prussian historian, historiographer of the royal house of Brandenburg. He published works on Frederick the Great.

Preussen (proi'sen). German and Danish name of Prussia.

Preussische Jahrbücher (proi'she yär'bü'chèr). German monthly for politics, history, and literature, founded (1858) at Berlin by Rudolf Haym and edited by him in collaboration with Heinrich von Treitschke, who later (1866 et seq.) continued the periodical alone. In its editorial policy the monthly reflected liberal views of German nationalism under Prussian leadership. The name was chosen in deference to the Haltische Jahrbücher für deutsche Wissenschaft und Kunst, which the "young Hegelians," Arnold Ruge and Ernst Echtermeyer, had published (1838-41) as an antiromantic, anti-idealistic, and even antireligious journal and which, after its suppression in Prussia, had appeared for a while at Dresden under the title of Deutsche Jahrbücher.

Preussisch-Eylau (proi'sish'i'lou). Former official name of Bagrationovsk.

Preussisch-Stargard (proi'sish.shtär'gärt). German name of Starogard.

Preveza (pre've.zä). Nomos (department) in N Greece, in Epirus. Capital, Preveza; area, ab. 445 sq. mi.; pop. 56,710 (1951).

Preveza. [Also, Prevesa.] Town in NW Greece, the capital of the nomos (department) of Preveza, situated in Epirus at the entrance to the Gulf of Arta, near the site of the ancient Nicopolis. It superseded this Roman town and was taken by the French from the Venetians in 1797 and by Ali Pasha from the French in 1793. In 1912 it was captured by the Greeks from the Turks, 9,637 (1940).

Prevost (pre'vō), Augustine. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, c1725; d. in England, May 5, 1786. British general in the American Revolutionary War.

Prevost, Sir George. b. at New York, May 19, 1767; d. Jan. 5, 1816. British general; son of Augustine Prevost. He became commander in chief in British North America in 1811, and was defeated by the Americans at Plattsburg in 1814.

Prévost (prä.vō), Jean. b. 1901; d. in the French Resistance, 1944. French critic and novelist. Author of several novels including Les Frères Bouquiquant (1930), Rachel (1932), Le Sel sur la plaie (1935), as well as of Les Epicuriens français (1931) and much miscellaneous literary criticism. A disciple of Alain and a graduate of the Superior Normal School and the School of Oriental Languages, he began contributing to the Nouvelle Revue Française in 1924, became editorial secretary of the Naïre d'Argent magazine in 1925, and later served on the staff of Europe.

Prevost (prä.vō), Jean-Louis. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, May 12, 1833; d. there, in October, 1927. Swiss physiologist. He is known for important studies on physiology published (1900 et seq.) in the Travaux du laboratoire de physiologie, and for his work (1868) on the deviation of the eyes and the rotation of the head in certain cases of hemiplegia (called Prevost's law or sign).

Prévost (prä.vō), Marcel. [Full name, Marcel Eugène Prévost.] b. at Paris, March 1, 1862; d. at Vianne, France, April 1, 1941. French novelist, dramatist, and critic. Author of La Confession d'un amant (1891), Les Demi-Vierges (1894), Les Vierges fortes (1900), and others. His plays were dramatizations of his novels. He was a regular contributor to Figaro (1902 et seq.) and was for many years editor of the Revue de France. Son of a government official, and a strong defender of the bourgeois virtues, he was himself until 1890 a government-employed engineer. In 1927 his Retraite ardente was condemned by the Vatican. Among his other works are Le Scorpion (1887), Maïmoiselle Jaufré (1889), Lettres des femmes (1892), L'Heureux Ménage (1901), Lettres à Françoise (1902), Le Pas révéle (1903), La Plus Faible (1904), La Princesse d'Erminge (1904), L'Accordeur aveugle (1905), Monsieur et Madame Moloch (1906), Femmes (1907), Lettres à Françoise mariée (1908), and Febronie (1933).

Prévost d'Exiles (prä.vō deg.zël), Abbé Antoine François. [Known as Abbé Prévost.] b. at Hesdin, in Artois, French Flanders, April 1, 1697; d. in the forest of Chantilly, France, Nov. 23, 1763. French novelist.

For 30 years he divided his time between the Jesuits' schools, the army, society, and the cloister. Finally he took monastic vows, but fled from the Benedictine monastery at St.-Maur and resided six years in the Netherlands and England. He made a livelihood by means of his pen, and at the outset drew largely upon his own fund of personal experiences for the subject-matter of his writings. He achieved success with his Mémoires d'un homme de qualité (1728-32). Then he wrote Histoire de M. Cleveland, fils naturel de Cromwell, ou le philosophe anglais (1732-39), and his celebrated masterpiece, Histoire du chevalier Des Grieux et de Manon Lescaut (1733). A periodical publication, Le Pour et le Contre, in 20 volumes, extended over seven years, beginning in 1730. He also wrote Le Doyen de Killerie (1735), Histoire de Marguerite d'Anjou (1740), Campagnes philosophiques (1741), Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire de Malte (1741), L'Histoire d'une Grecque moderne (1741), Histoire de Guillaume le Conquérant (1742), Mémoires d'un honnête homme (1745), Histoire générale des voyages (1745-70), Manuel lexique (1750), Le Monde moral (1760), Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire de la vertu (1762), Contes, aventures, et faits singuliers (1764), and Lettres de mentor à un jeune seigneur (1764). As a translator he rendered into French works of John Dryden, David Hume, Samuel Richardson, Cicero, and others.

Prévost-Paradol (prã.võ.pã.rã.dol), Lucien Anatole. b. at Paris, Aug. 8, 1829; committed suicide at Washington, D.C., July 20, 1870. French journalist and author, an opponent of Napoleon III. He served (1870) briefly as minister to the U.S. He wrote Revue de l'histoire universelle (1854).

Preyer (pri'ër), William. b. 1842; d. 1897. German physiologist and psychologist, sometimes referred to as the "father of child psychology." He worked principally in the fields of child psychology, vision, and hearing. After holding the chair of physiology at Jena (1869-88), he resigned to become a docent at Berlin, preferring the intellectual atmosphere at the latter university. His most important publication in psychology is Die Seele des Kindes (1882).

Priam (pri'am). In Greek legend, the king of Troy at the time of its siege by the Greeks. He was the husband of Hecuba, and the father of 50 sons, including Hector. Paris, and Polydorus, and also of the seeress Cassandra. He perished at the capture of Troy.

Priapus (pri.ä'pus). In Greek mythology, a god, a son of Dionysus and Aphrodite, the promoter of fertility of crops, cattle, and women. He is depicted as a faunlike deity with penis always erect. In Rome he was identified with Mutunus, another fertility god. The first fruits of garden and field were sacrificed to him. In the Middle Ages he became the protector of cattle, herds, shepherds, farmers, and fishermen, and of women in childbirth.

Pribičević (prẽ.bë'che.vich), Svetozar. b. in Croatia (in territory now part of Yugoslavia), 1875; d. 1938. Yugoslav political figure, active (1898-1918) in the South Slav nationalist movement and in efforts to find a sound basis for Serb-Croat relations in the new Yugoslav state. Leader of the Croat Democratic Party, he served as minister of the interior (1918-20) and of education (1920-22, 1924-25).

Pribilof Islands (prib'i.lof). Group of islands in Bering Sea, belonging to Alaska. They came into prominence in connection with the controversies between Great Britain and the U.S. concerning the seal fisheries.

Příbram (për.shi'brãm). [Also: Fříbram; German, Pibrans.] Town in Czechoslovakia in the kraj (region) of Praha, in W central Bohemia, ab. 33 mi. SW of Prague. It is an old mining town, with silver and lead mines in the vicinity. The industries produce machines, glass, gloves, flour, and other products. Near by is the Sacred Mountain (Heiliger Berg), one of the most frequented places of pilgrimage in Bohemia. 9,062 (1947).

Pribram (prẽ'brãm), Alfred Francis. b. at London, Sept. 1, 1859; d. 1942. Austrian historian. He served as professor (1894 et seq.) at the University of Vienna. Author of Österreich und Brandenburg 1685-1700 (1884-85). He edited historical documents such as Politische Geheimverträge Österreich-Ungarns 1879-1914 (Secret Political Treaties of Austria-Hungary, 1919).

Priblyov or Pribilof (prib'i.lof; Russian, prẽ.bi.lõf'), Gerasim. Russian navigator who in 1756 visited (their existence had been known since 1767) the group of islands in the Bering Sea which bears his name.

Price (pris). City in C Utah, county seat of Carbon County, in a coal-mining area, 6,010 (1950).

Price, Bonamy. b. in Guernsey, Channel Islands, May 22, 1807; d. at London, Jan. 8, 1888. English political economist. In 1868 he became professor of political economy at Oxford. He published The Principles of Currency (1869), Chapters on Practical Political Economy (1878), and others.

Price, Bruce. b. at Cumberland, Md., Dec. 12, 1845; d. at Paris, May 29, 1903. American architect. Among his more important works are several dormitories of Yale University, the Château Frontenac hotel at Quebec, and the Royal Victoria College at Montreal. He laid out (1885-86) Tuxedo Park, N.Y., and designed many of the residences within it.

Price, Byron. b. at Topeka, Kan., March 25, 1891—. American journalist and government official. He joined (1912) the Associated Press and served as its news editor (1922-27), Washington bureau head (1927-37), and executive news editor (1937-41). He was U.S. director of censorship (1941-45) by appointment of President F. D. Roosevelt. He served as director (1946-47) of the Hollywood Coordinating Commission, and as assistant secretary general (1947 et seq.) of the United Nations for administrative and financial services.

Price, Fanny. Heroine of Jane Austen's novel Mansfield Park.

Price, Fanny. In W. Somerset Maugham's novel Of Human Bondage, a physically unattractive woman who loves Philip Carey, who does not return her love. Unsuccessful in her ambition to become an artist, tired of loneliness, failure, and starvation, she hangs herself, leaving her pathetic possessions to Philip.

Price, Harry. b. at Shrewsbury, England, Jan. 17, 1881; d. at Pulborough, Sussex, England, March 29, 1948. English investigator of psychical phenomena. He founded (1925) the first English laboratory for scientific study of psychical phenomena.

Price, Ira Maurice. b. at Welsh Hills, Ohio, April 29, 1856; d. near Olympia, Wash., Sept. 18, 1939. American Oriental scholar. He was associate professor (1892-1900) and professor (1900-25) of Semitic languages and literatures at the University of Chicago. Author of A Syllabus of Old Testament History (1890), The Monuments and the Old Testament (1899), The Ancestry of Our English Bible (1907), and The Dramatic Story of Old Testament History (1929).

Price, John D. b. at Augusta, Ark., May 18, 1892—. American naval officer. He was Fleet Air Wings commander during the Pacific campaigns in World War II, and chief military government officer on Okinawa.

Price, Matilda. In Charles Dickens's novel Nicholas Nickleby, the bosom friend of Fanny Squeers. She afterward marries John Browdie. She is alluded to by Miss Squeers in their little unpleasantness as "base degrading Tilda."

Price, Richard. b. at Tynton, Glamorganshire, Wales, Feb. 23, 1723; d. at London, April 19, 1791. English philosophical writer. In 1757 he published Review of the Principal Questions in Morals, a statement much resembling that later produced by Immanuel Kant. He is best known as a writer on financial and political questions. As a result of his public support of the American cause in the Revolutionary War, in 1778 he was invited by the Continental Congress to help in the management of the national finances, but declined.

Price, Sterling. b. in Prince Edward County, Va., Sept. 20, 1809; d. at St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 29, 1867. American general. He was a Democratic member of Congress from Missouri (1845-46), when he resigned and raised a Missouri cavalry regiment for the Mexican War. He took part in General Stephen W. Kearny's march from Fort Leavenworth to Santa Fe, where he was left in command when Kearny proceeded to California. In 1847 he was promoted brigadier general of volunteers, and conquered Chihuahua. He was governor of Missouri (1853-57), and became a Confederate major general in Missouri at the beginning of the Civil War. He served at Wilson's Creek and captured Lexington in 1861, took part in the battles of Pea Ridge and Corinth in 1862, commanded at Iuka in 1862, and commanded the district of Arkansas (1863-64).

Price, William Thompson. b. in Jefferson County, Ky., Dec. 17, 1846; d. May 3, 1920. American drama critic. He was drama critic for the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal (1875-80) and the New York Star (1885-86), and established (1901) the first school of drama composition, the American School of Playwriting, at New York.

Price of Money, The. Four-act drama (1906) by Alfred Sutor.

Prichard (prič'hərd). City in SW Alabama, in Mobile County, near Mobile: cotton and chemical mills. In the decade between the last two U.S. censuses its population more than tripled, 6,084 (1940), 19,014 (1950).

Prichard, James Cowles. b. at Ross, Herefordshire, England, Feb. 11, 1786; d. at London, Dec. 23, 1848. English ethnologist and physician. In 1813 he published Researches into the Physical History of Man, and in 1831 Eastern Origin of the Celtic Nations.

Prichard, Katherine Susannah. b. at Levuka, Fiji, 1884—, Australian novelist. She worked as a journalist at Melbourne and London until 1919, when she married and took up residence in West Australia. She is the author of a long series of novels, including Working Bullocks (1926), Coonardoo (1929), The Roaring Nineties (1946), verse, and plays, and journalism supporting the Communist Party of Australia. She also wrote The Earth Lover (1932), poems; The Real Russia (1934); and a play, Bumby Innes (1940).

Pride (prid), Thomas. b. probably at Ashcott, near Glastonbury, England; d. Oct. 23, 1658. English Parliamentary officer. He was originally a drayman and brewer. At the beginning of the English Civil War he was ensign under Robert Devereux, 3rd Earl of Essex, and distinguished himself at Preston. On Dec. 6, 1648, he was delegated to "purge" the House of Commons of members that favored reconciliation with the king (the action has since been known as Pride's Purge). He was one of the judges of the king, and signed his death warrant.

Pride and Prejudice. Novel by Jane Austen, written in 1796 and published in 1813.

Prideaux (prid'ō), Humphrey. b. at Padstow, Cornwall, England, May 3, 1648; d. at Norwich, England, Nov. 1, 1724. English theological writer, dean of Norwich (1702-24). He wrote Marmora Oxoniensis ex Arundelianis . . . conflata (Description of the Arundel Marbles, 1676), The Validity of the Orders of the Church of England (1688), Connection of the Old and New Testaments in the History of the Jews (1716-18), a number of ecclesiastical tracts, and others.

Pride's Purge. In English history, the forcible exclusion from the House of Commons, Dec. 6, 1648, of all the members who were favorable to compromise with the royal party. This was effected by a military force commanded by Thomas Pride, in execution of orders of a council of Parliamentary officers. The remaining members, about 60, were known as the Rump Parliament.

Pridvorov (prĕ.dvō'rgf), Yefim Alexeyevich. See Bedny, Demyan.

Priego (prĕ.ā'gō), Count of. A title of Carrillo de Mendoza y Pimentel, Diego.

Priego de Córdoba (prĕ.ā'gō dā kōr'ñōs). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, ab. 48 mi. SE of Córdoba: agricultural trade; manufactures of liquors, leather, pottery, and cotton textiles. There is an old Moorish castle and medieval fortifications. 25,181 (1940).

Priene (prĕ.ē'nē). In ancient geography, an Ionian city in Caria, Asia Minor, N of Miletus. The site contains many ruins. The temple of Athena Polias, dedicated 340 B.C., was an Ionic peripteros of six by 11 columns, of marble, graceful in proportion and with delicate decorative sculpture.

Priest (prĕst), Ivy (Maude) Baker. b. at Kimberley, Utah, Sept. 7, 1905—. American politician. She served as president (1934-36) of the Utah Young Republicans and as director (1936-40) of the Western States Young Republicans. After 1944 she was Republican national committee woman from Utah and, when Dwight Eisenhower was elected president in 1952, she was named treasurer of the U.S.

Priest, Judge. Familiar character in the stories of Irvin S. Cobb.

Priestley (prĕst'li), Herbert Ingram. b. at Fairfield, Mich., Jan. 2, 1875—. American teacher and historian. He served as assistant curator (1912-20) and librarian (1920 et seq.) of the Bancroft Library at the University of California, and was named (1923) full professor of Mexican history at that university. His works include José de Gálvez, Visitor-General of New Spain, 1765-71 (1916), The Mexican Nation, a History (1923), and The Coming of the White Man (1929).

Priestley, J. B. [Full name, John Boynton Priestley.] b. at Bradford, Yorkshire, England, 1894—. English novelist, critic, and playwright. He was United Kingdom delegate (1946-47) to the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization conferences. His novels include The Good Companions (1929), which he dramatized (1931) with E. Knoblock, Angel Pavement (1930), Faraway (1932), Let the People Sing (1939), Blackout in Greiley (1942), and Festival (1951). Among his plays are Dangerous Corner (1932), Laburnum Grove (1933), Time and the Conways (1937), I Have Been Here Before (1937), Music at Night (1938), The Long Mirror (1940), An Inspector Calls (1946), and The Linden Tree (1947). He is author also of the commentaries English Journey (1934) and Out of the People (1941); the autobiographical Rain Upon Gadshill (1939); and the critical works The English Comic Characters (1925), The English Novel (1927), and George Meredith (1926) and Peacock (1927) in the English Men of Letters series.

Priestley, Joseph. b. at Fieldhead, near Leeds, Yorkshire, March 13, 1733; d. at Northumberland, Pa., Feb. 6, 1804. English clergyman and natural philosopher, especially celebrated as the discoverer of oxygen. He was the son of a nonconformist cloth-dresser, and was educated at a Dissenters' academy at Daventry. In 1755 he took charge of a small congregation at Needham Market, Suffolk, which was subsidized by both Independents and Presbyterians. In 1761 he was tutor in an academy at Warrington. In 1767 he published the History of Electricity, in which "Priestley rings" left on metal by an electrical discharge were explained and an attempt was made to explain the discharge phenomena of a Leyden jar. He adopted Socinian views on religion, and materialistic views on philosophy; Jeremy Bentham took his idea of morality aiming at "the greatest happiness of the greatest number" from Priestley's Essay on the First Principles of Government (1768). At this time began his researches in "different kinds of air." About 1772 he became literary companion to William Petty (then Lord Shelburne and later 1st Marquis of Lansdowne), and traveled with him in Holland and Germany, returning to Paris in 1774. In 1774 he announced his discovery of "dephlogisticated air," now called oxygen (after Lavoisier further investigated the gas and recognized in it the significance that Priestley had missed). Although he remained an adherent of the phlogiston theory, he made many important chemical discoveries, isolating such gases as nitrous oxide, carbon monoxide, and ammonia, and decomposing ammonia by electrical means. In 1780 he removed to Birmingham, and became associated with Matthew Boulton, James Watt, and Erasmus Darwin, grandfather of Charles Darwin. He published several works on religion in this period, one of them, History of the Corruption of Christianity (1782), being burned (1785) by order of the authorities. For sympathizing with the French Revolution (he had been made a citizen of the French republic) he was attacked in 1791 by a mob, his house was broken into and burned, and his manuscripts and instruments destroyed. In 1794 he removed to America, where he continued his religious writings, his scientific experiments, and his philosophic controversies.

Prieto (prĕ.ā'tō), Indalecio. b. at Bilbao, Spain, 1883—. Spanish journalist, politician, and statesman. He was a news vendor at Bilbao who rose to become the confidential agent of the liberal banker and businessman Horacio Echevarria. By 1922 Prieto edited and owned the paper Echevarria had sold, El Liberal de Bilbao. He rivaled Francisco Largo Caballero for the leadership of the Socialist Party, and is considered to have been more flexible and less authoritarian than the latter. He obtained his first ministerial post in the provisional government of the republic in 1931 and successively served as minister of finance (1931), public works (December, 1931-33), marine and air (1933), defense (May, 1937-April, 1938), and minister without portfolio (until 1939). He was a member of the government in exile until 1947, when he returned to France to become the leader of the Spanish rightist socialists. His speeches made in South America in 1938 and 1939 were collected under the title La Tragedia de España (1939).

Prieto, Joaquín. b. at Concepción, Chile, Aug. 20, 1786; d. at Valparaíso, Chile, Nov. 22, 1854. Chilean general and politician, president (1831-41) of Chile. He took a prominent part in the war for independence, was a leader of the conservative revolt of 1829-30, and by his victory over the liberal leader Ramón Freire at Lircay (April 17, 1830) decided the result for his party. On the death of Ovalle (March 21, 1831), Prieto became provisional president, soon after was regularly elected president, and by reelection retained the post until Sept. 18, 1841. On May 25, 1833, the constitution still in force was adopted. Prieto's war minister, Diego Portales, who had held the same post under Ovalle, suppressed a revolt in 1836, and the same year commenced a war with Peru which resulted (January, 1839) in the overthrow of the Peruvian-Bolivian Confederation.

Prig (prig), Betsey. Nurse, the friend and "frequent partner" of Squire Gamp, in Charles Dickens's novel Martin Chuzzlewit. Their quarrel is one of the famous comic scenes of English literature.

Prigent (pré-zhînt), Pierre Tanguy. See Tanguy-Prigent, Pierre.

Prigg v. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 16 Peters 539 (1842) (prig; pen.sil.vân'ya). U.S. Supreme Court decision holding that Congress had exclusive power over the rendition of fugitive slaves and that the states could not be obliged to enforce fugitive slave laws through state officers. A Pennsylvania law of 1826 governing fugitive slave labor was held unconstitutional on the ground that it had been superseded by the federal Fugitive Slave Act of 1793. Justice Joseph Story's assertion that Congress had such exclusive power over fugitive slaves was denounced by both Northerners and Southerners, and led to a series of personal liberty laws in Northern states which largely nullified the Fugitive Slave Laws.

Prigioni (pré-jô'nê), Le Mle. [Eng. trans. "My Prisons."] Work by Silvio Pellico, published in 1833, describing his prison life (1820-30).

Prignano (pré-nyâ'nê), Bartolommeo. Original name of Pope Urban VI.

Prilep (pré'lep). Town in S Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Macedonia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Vardarska, NE of Bitolj. It is a station on the railroad line connecting Bitolj with the main line from Belgrade to Salonika. It has a castle, several churches and mosques, and is a trading center for grain, tobacco, and wool. 26,763 (1948).

Prim (prêm), Juan. [Titles: Count de Reus, Marquis de los Castillejos.] b. at Reus, in Catalonia, Spain, Dec. 6, 1814; d. at Madrid, Dec. 30, 1870. Spanish statesman and general. He entered the army of the Cristinos in 1834, in the civil war between the Cristinos and the Carlists. As a progressive he was afterward one of the chief instruments in the overthrow of Espartero. While in command in 1860 of a division of reserves in the war against Morocco, he won the brilliant victory of Castillejos (January 1) which secured for him the title of marquis. He was a leader of the insurgents who deposed Queen Isabella in 1868, and became premier and minister of war, with the chief command of the army, in the provisional government established by them. He was fatally shot by an assassin (Dec. 28, 1870).

Primary Era. Name sometimes used for the Paleozoic Era. See table at end of Vol. III.

Prime (prim), Benjamin Youngs. b. at Huntington, Long Island, N.Y., Dec. 9, 1733; d. there, Oct. 31, 1791. American physician and writer of ballads. He began his medical practice at Easthampton, Long Island, and in 1761 obtained his medical degree at Leiden, setting up practice as a surgeon at New York in the same year. Active in the patriot cause, he expressed his sentiments in Columbia's Glory or British Pride Humbled . . . a Poem on the American Revolution, written in 1791, and Muscipula sive Cambromyomachia: The Mouse trap; or, Battle of the Welsh and the Mice, in Latin and English, with Other Poems in Different Languages by an American (1840). An earlier work was The Patriot Muse, or Poems on Some of the Principal Events of the Late War . . . by an American Gentleman (1764).

Prime, Edward Dorr Griffin. b. at Cambridge, N.Y., Nov. 2, 1814; d. at New York, April 7, 1891. American Presbyterian clergyman; grandson of B. Y. Prime and brother of S. I. Prime and W. C. Prime. He was ordained in 1839, served (1853, 1855-86) as editor of the New York Observer, and was chaplain (1854-55) of the U.S. diplomatic mission at Rome. Author of Around the World: Sketches of Travel Through Many Lands and Over Many Seas (1872) and others.

Prime, Samuel Irenaeus. b. at Ballston, N.Y., Nov. 4, 1812; d. at Manchester, VT., July 18, 1885. American editor, author, and Presbyterian clergyman; grandson of B. Y. Prime and brother of E. D. G. Prime and W. C. Prime. He became an editor of the New York Observer in 1840. He later was editor of the "Desk Drawer" department in Harper's Magazine. Among his works are Travels in Europe and the East (1855) and Letters from Switzerland (1860).

Prime, William Cowper. b. Oct. 31, 1825; d. Feb. 13, 1915. American author; grandson of B. Y. Prime and brother of E. D. G. Prime and S. I. Prime. He edited (1861-69) the New York Journal of Commerce and was professor of the history of art (1884-1905) at Princeton University. He wrote Tent Life in the Holy Land (1857), I Go A-Fishing (1873), and Pottery and Porcelain (1877).

Primo de Rivera (pré'mô dâ rê.bâ'riâ), José Antonio. b. 1903; executed at Madrid, in November, 1936. Spanish politician, founder of the Falange, the Spanish fascist movement and party; eldest son of Miguel Primo de Rivera y Orbaneja (1870-1930). He studied law and had practiced it for some years when he took over editorship of the party publication of the Falange Española, which he presently made also the organ of the JONS (Juntas Ofensivas Nacional Sindicalistas). On a trip to Germany he studied the organization of the National Socialist Party and upon his return organized the first national congress of the Falange Española on the German model. In 1934 he presided over the merging of the JONS and Falange Española. The new party then drafted and offered to the public a 26-point program which was to become the basic law of the Spanish state under the Franco government in March, 1939. At the outbreak of the Civil War in June, 1936, José Antonio was imprisoned, tried for and found guilty of treason, and executed.

Primo de Rivera y Orbaneja (ê ôr.bâ.ne'riâ), Miguel. See Rivera y Orbaneja, Miguel Primo de.

Primorskaya Oblast (pré.môr'ska.ya). Russian name of the Maritime Province.

Primorski Kral (pré.môr'ski krl). Former name of the Maritime Territory.

Primrose (prim'rôz), Sir Archibald. [Title, Lord Carrington.] b. 1617; d. 1679. Scottish baronet. He supported the Royalist cause in the English Civil War, and at the Restoration was made a lord of session, with the title of Lord Carrington.

Primrose, Archibald Phillip. See Rosebery, 5th Earl of.

Primrose, Charles. The vicar of Wakefield in Oliver Goldsmith's tale of that name. He is a sincere, humane, and simple-minded man, who preserves his modesty and nobility through hardship and good fortune.

Primrose, William. b. at Glasgow, Aug. 23, 1903—. Scottish violinist. He was a member (1930-35) of the London String Quartet. He came to the U.S. in 1937 as first violin of the NBC Symphony Orchestra then being organized under Arturo Toscanini. He formed (1938) his own quartet. Since 1942 he has appeared with many of the principal orchestras of the U.S. as a soloist; a number of composers have written viola concertos for him.

Primrose Hill. Eminence abt. 200 ft. high, N. of Regent's Park, London, commanding an excellent view. In the early part of the 19th century Chalf Farm, which is on the hill, was a popular place for duels.

Primrose League. In Great Britain, a league or combination of persons pledged to principles of Conservatism as represented by Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, and opposed to the "revolutionary tendencies of radicalism." The object of the league is declared to be "the maintenance of religion, of the constitution of the realm, and of the imperial ascendancy of Great Britain." The scheme of the organization was first discussed at the Carlton Club in October, 1883, and the actual league made its first public appearance at a grand banquet at Freemasons' Tavern in London a few weeks later. The organization of the league is by "habitations" or clubs; these obey the instructions of the Grand Council, and annually send delegates to the Grand Habitation, which is held at London on or near the 19th of April, the anniversary of Disraeli's death. A noteworthy feature is the enrollment of women, or "dames," who take an active part in all the business of the association, having an executive committee and a fund of their own. The name and the symbol of the league are derived from Disraeli's favorite flower.

Prince (prins), John Dyneley. b. at New York, April 17, 1868; d. there, Sept. 11, 1945. American philologist and diplomat. He was professor of Semitic languages (1892-1902) and dean of the graduate school at New York University (1895-1902), and professor of Semitic languages (1902-15), Slavonic languages (1915-21, 1933-35), and East European languages (1935-37) at Columbia. He served as U.S. minister to Denmark (1921-26) and Yugoslavia (1926-33). Author of Fragments from Babel (1939) and grammars of the Assyrian, Russian, Lettish, and Serbo-Croatian languages.

Prince, Morton. b. at Boston, Dec. 21, 1854; d. Aug. 31, 1929. American physician, teacher, and psychologist. After study in Europe, he established his practice at Boston, where he served at the Boston Dispensary (1882-86) and at the Boston City Hospital (1885-1913). Instructor (1895-98) in neurology at Harvard Medical School, he was professor of neurology (1902-12) at Tufts College Medical School, where he was professor emeritus (1912 et seq.), and served (1926-28) as associate professor of abnormal and dynamic psychology at Harvard University. He established and edited (1906-29) the Journal of Abnormal Psychology and was prominent as an expert in the field. Author of The Nature of Mind and Human Automatism (1883), The Dissociation of a Personality (1906), The Unconscious (1913), The Psychology of the Kaiser (1915), The Creed of Deutschtum (1918), and Clinical and Experimental Studies in Personality (1929).

Prince, The. [Italian, Il Principe.] Political treatise by Machiavelli, completed in 1513. It was an outgrowth of his Discorsi or comments on the history of Livy, and is a study of the founding and maintenance of a state, and of the character and policy of a successful ruler. It reflects the unscrupulousness of contemporary Italian politics, and the motive of its composition has long been a subject of a dispute. It is probable, however, that Machiavelli believed that the salvation of Italy was possible only through the intervention of an autocrat such as he portrayed.

Prince, Thomas. b. at Sandwich, Mass., May 15, 1687; d. at Boston, Oct. 22, 1758. American clergyman and historian, pastor of the Old South Church, Boston. He published Chronological History of New England (1736-55).

Prince, Thomas. See also Prence or Prince, Thomas. Prince, Walter Franklin. b. April 22, 1863; d. Aug. 7, 1934. American psychical researcher. He was an investigator (1917-20) and chief research officer (1920-25) for the American Society for Psychical Research. Author of The Doris Case of Multiple Personality (1915), The Psychic in the House (1925), The Case of Patience Worth (1927), Noted Witnesses for Psychic Research (1928), and The Enchanted Boundary (1930).

Prince Albert (al'bert). City in the province of Saskatchewan, Canada, on the N branch of the Saskatchewan River, almost in the center of the province. The city was first settled in 1870 and since then has remained the gateway to N Saskatchewan. It is an important trading center for the traders, trappers, and miners who inhabit the north country; it is also the location of several lumber industries utilizing the large forests N of the city. The city is connected by road and by rail with other points to the E, W, and S. 17,149 (1951).

Prince Albert National Park. Canadian national park in N Saskatchewan, N of Prince Albert, established by the Dominion government in 1927. Area, 1,496 sq. mi.

Prince and the Pauper, The. Novel by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain, published in 1882.

Prince Dorus (dō'rus). Poem by Charles Lamb, published in 1811.

Prince Edward Island (ed'ward). [Early French name, Île St.-Jean.] Island in S Gulf of St. Lawrence, forming the smallest province of the Dominion of Canada. It is separated from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia on the SW and S by Northumberland Strait. The province has flourishing agriculture, specializing in potato growing and dairy farming. Fur farming and oyster and lobster fisheries are also important. The principal communication links with the mainland are the ferry from Charlottetown to Pictou, N.S., and the rail ferry from Cape Tormentine, N.B., to Borden. There are 286 mi. of railroad line on the island. Government is vested in a lieutenant governor, and a legislative assembly of 30 members elected for five years. The island was visited by Cartier in 1534, and was settled by the French in the first half of the 18th century, was ceded by France to Great Britain in 1763, had its present name given it in 1798, and entered the Dominion in 1873. Capital, Charlottetown; length, ab. 130 mi.; greatest breadth, 34 mi.; area, 2,184 sq. mi.; pop. 98,429 (1951).

Prince George (jōrj). City in N central British Columbia, Canada, situated on the Fraser River and on the main transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railway; trading and shipping center for a stock-raising, mining, and lumbering area. 4,703 (1951).

Prince Igor (ē'gor). Opera in a prologue and four acts, begun by Alexander Borodin and completed by Nicholas Rimsky-Korsakov and Alexander Glazunov, first performed at St. Petersburg in 1890.

Prince Island or Prince's Island (prin'sez). See the island of Principe.

Prince of Parthia (pār'thi.ə). The. Tragedy by Thomas Godfrey, written in 1759 and published in 1765. When it was played at Philadelphia in 1767, it was the first professional performance of any play written by an American.

Prince of the Peace. A title of Godoy, Manuel de.

Prince of Wales (wālz). See Wales, Prince of.

Prince of Wales, Cape. Northwesternmost point of North America, projecting from Alaska into Bering Strait.

Prince of Wales and Repulse, Sinking of the. Naval disaster suffered by the British navy in World War II. It involved two battleships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse (the former one of the two most modern heavy British war vessels), which were dispatched in World War II to the Far East to help protect Singapore and the Dutch East Indies. After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor they constituted the major Allied naval force in the Far Eastern theater. Caught without air protection, they were sunk by Japanese planes off the E coast of Malaya on Dec. 10, 1941. The loss proved to be a decisive blow in the rapid Japanese conquest of SE Asia and Indonesia.

Prince of Wales Island. Island belonging to Alaska, W of the mainland. Length, ab. 130 mi.

Prince of Wales Island. Former official name of the island of Penang.

Prince Prettyman (prit'i.man). See Prettyman, Prince.

Princes Musicae (prin'seps mū'zi.sē). Epithet of Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da.

Principes Nominalium (nom.i.nā'l'ium). An epithet of Ockham or Ockam, William of.

Prince Rupert (rō'pért). Seaport in W British Columbia, Canada, planned in 1906 as the W terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and incorporated in 1910; today the W terminus of the Canadian National Railway. It is situated on an island in the mouth of the Skeena River and is a well laid out little city although the great port envisaged by its early planners has not developed. Prince Rupert has a large fish cannery and cold-storage plant, a shipyard, cellulose mill, and wheat elevators. 8,546 (1951).

Princes, Robbery of the. In German history, the abduction from Altenburg of the princes Ernst and Albert, sons of the elector Frederick II of Saxony, and founders of the Ernestine and Albertine lines, by Kunz von Kaufungen and others, in July, 1455.

Prince's Flats. Former name of Norton, Va.

Prince's Pawns, The. One of five historical narratives in The Gallants (1927), by Lily Adams Beck under the pseudonym E. Barrington.

Princess, The. Narrative poem by Alfred Tennyson, published in 1847. It contains such familiar lyrics as "Sweet and low," "The splendour falls on castle walls," "Tears, idle tears," and "Home they brought her warrior dead."

Princess Casamassima (ka.za.mas'i.ma), The. Novel by Henry James, published in 1886.

Princesse d'Auberge (prã.ses dö.berzh), La. [Flemish title, Herberg princesses; Eng. trans., "Princesses of the Inn."] Opera in three acts by Jan Bloekx, with a Flemish text by Nestor de Tièr translated into French by Gustave Lagye, first performed at Antwerp in 1896.

Princesse de Clèves (prã.ses de klev), La. Novel by the Countess de la Fayette, published in 1677. The scene is placed in the court of Henry II, but the chief characters are the author herself, her husband, François de la Rochefoucauld, and others of her contemporaries.

Princesse d'Élide, ou les Plaisirs de l'Île Enchantée (prã.ses däléd ö lä plèzër de lél äñ.shän.tä), La. Play by Molière, produced (1664) at Versailles: a court piece or comédie-ballet.

Princess Ida, or Castle Adamant (i'da: ad'a.mant). Operetta in three acts by Sir Arthur Sullivan, with a libretto by W. S. Gilbert, produced in 1884. It is a burlesque of Alfred Tennyson's The Princess.

Princess Nekayah (nè.kä'a). See Nekayah, Princess.

Princess of Cleve (klev). The. Comedy by Nathaniel Lee, produced in 1681 and printed in 1689. It was founded on the Countess de la Fayette's romance.

Princes Street (prin'sez). Principal street in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Princeton (prin'ston). City in N Illinois, county seat of Bureau County: marketing center for an agricultural area. 5,765 (1950).

Princeton. City in SW Indiana, county seat of Gibson County: manufactures of oil-well equipment, foodstuffs, and paint brushes. 7,673 (1950).

Princeton. City in SW Kentucky, county seat of Caldwell County: shipping point for tobacco and livestock. The principal industry is the mining of fluorspar. 5,388 (1950).

Princeton. Borough in C New Jersey, in Mercer County, ab. 44 mi. SW of New York: seat of Princeton University, the Institute for Advanced Study, the Princeton Theological Seminary, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, St. Joseph's College, Mercer Junior College, and Hun Preparatory School. Here on Jan. 3, 1777, a victory was gained by the Americans under Washington over a portion of the army of Cornwallis. The Continental Congress sat here in 1783. Pop. 12,230 (1950).

Princeton. City in S West Virginia, county seat of Mercer County: trading center for a coal-mining and agricultural area. It was settled in 1826. The courthouse was burned by Confederates in 1862. Pop. 8,279 (1950).

Princeton. Former name of Albia, Iowa.

Princeton University. Accredited, privately controlled institution of higher learning for men. Chartered in 1746 as the College of New Jersey, it held its first classes at Elizabethtown in 1747, moved to Newark before the end of that year, and to Princeton in 1756. Not until 1896 was the present name adopted. Founded by Presbyterians, it has long been nondenominational, but men of that persuasion are always among the self-perpetuating board of trustees which governs the institution, and it maintains academic relations with the Princeton Theological Seminary, an organ of the Presbyterian Church. The evolution of the college into the university has been marked by the establishment of a School of Engineering, a Graduate School, a School of Electrical Engineering, a School of Architecture, and a School of Public and International Affairs, which in 1948 was renamed the Woodrow Wilson School. The University's collection of upward of 1,100,000 books has for its principal repository the Harvey S. Firestone Memorial Library, and includes notable special collections of editions of Vergil and Horace, of Arabic manuscripts, of works on art and archaeology, and of books dealing with the French Revolution, with the American Civil War, and with international law and diplomacy. Many important books bear the imprint of the Princeton University Press, and the university sponsors the Public Opinion Quarterly, the Annals of Mathematics, and the Population Index. The resources of the Institute for Advanced Study, located at Princeton, are also available to the university.

Prince William Sound (wil'yam). Inlet of the Pacific Ocean, indenting the S coast of Alaska.

Princip (prën'tsep), Gavriló. b. in Bosnia, c1893; d. 1918. Political assassin. The annexation of Bosnia-Hercegovina by the Austro-Hungarian Empire in 1908 bred a spirit of resistance among Bosnian-Hercegovinian patriots, backed by Serbian nationalists. Princip, a young student, abetted by the Serbian secret society "Union or Death," assassinated Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria-Hungary and his wife, when they visited Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia-Hercegovina, on June 28, 1914. It is generally supposed that the Serbian government was aware of the plot, but investigators for the Austro-Hungarian government were unable to adduce evidence of that fact, though the relation of the society "Union or Death" to the assassination was clear. The upshot was the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum which led to World War I.

Principato Citeriore (prën.chè.pä'tò ché.tä.rè.ö'rä). Former name of the province of Salerno, Italy.

Principato Ulteriore (ö.l.tä.rè.ö'rä). Former name of the province of Avellino, Italy.

Principe (prin'si.pè; Portuguese, prën'sè.pe). [Also:

Prince Island, Prince's Island.] Small island off W Africa, belonging to Portugal, situated in the Bight of Biafra, ab. 125 mi. W of Rio Muni on the mainland. Discovered in 1471, it now constitutes, with São Tomé island to the S, the province of São Tomé and Príncipe. Its chief products are cacao, coffee, and cinchona bark. Area of both islands, 372 sq. mi.; of Príncipe, ab. 55 sq. mi.; of both islands, 60,490 (1940); of Príncipe, ab. 5,000.

Principe (prën'chè.pä), Il. Italian title of Prince, The.

Principe Galeotto (gä.lä.öt'ä). See Decameron.

Principia (prin.sip'i.a). [Full title, Philosophiæ Naturalis Principia Mathematica, meaning "The Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy."] Work by Sir Isaac Newton, composed chiefly in 1685-86, presented to the Royal Society on April 28, 1686, and first published (in Latin) in 1687 (edited by Edmund Halley). The second edition (1713) was edited by Roger Cotes. It is generally considered to have ushered in the modern age in astronomy, mechanics, and mathematical physics.

Prineville (prin'vil). City in C Oregon, county seat of Crook County: trading center for a stock-raising, dairying, and lumbering area. 3,233 (1950).

Pringle (pring'gl), Henry Fowles. b. at New York, Aug. 23, 1897—American journalist and biographer, professor of journalism (1936-43) at Columbia. His biographies include Alfred E. Smith—A Critical Study (1927), Big Frogs (1928), and The Life and Times of William Howard Taft (1939). He was awarded the 1932 Pulitzer prize in biography for Theodore Roosevelt—A Biography (1931). He was coauthor of Industrial Explorers (1928).

Pringle, Thomas. b. at Blaiklaw, in Teviotdale, Scotland, Jan. 5, 1789; d. at London, Dec. 5, 1834. Scottish poet, editor, librarian, and abolitionist. He edited the Edinburgh Monthly Magazine, the Edinburgh Star, a newspaper, and Constable's Edinburgh Magazine, and at Cape-town (1820 et seq.) the South African Journal and the South African Commercial Advertiser, until they were suppressed. He returned (1826) to London, where he became prominent in the Anti-Slavery Society. Author of Ephemerides (1828), African Sketches (1834, a volume of poems including the "Narrative of his Residence in South Africa"). His lyrics Emigrant's Farewell (written on leaving England) and Afar in the Desert, and the narrative poem The Bechuana Boy, are considered his best pieces.

Pringle-Pattison (-pat'is.ən), Andrew Seth. See Seth, Andrew.

Pringsheim (prings'him), Alfred. b. at Ohlau, Germany, Sept. 2, 1850; d. 1941. German mathematician, who contributed to the theory of numbers, the theory of functions, periodic partial fractions, infinite processes, and transcendental functions of infinite order.

Prinsenhage (prin'sen.hā.che). Town in S Netherlands, in the province of North Brabant: a suburb of Breda. 12,667 (1939).

Prinsep (prin'sep), Valentine Cameron. b. at Calcutta, India, Feb. 14, 1838; d. at London, Nov. 11, 1904. English painter. He abandoned the Indian civil service for art at the suggestion of G. F. Watts, and was elected associate of the Royal Academy in 1879 and academicien in 1894. In 1877 he was commissioned to paint The Declaration of Victoria as Empress of India in commemoration of the Durbar at Delhi.

Prinsterer (prin'ste.rér), Wilhelm Groen van. See Groen van Prinsterer, Wilhelms.

Printz (prins), Johan Björnsson. b. at Bottnaryd, Småland, Sweden, July 20, 1592; d. in Sweden, May 3, 1663. Governor of the American colony of New Sweden, a post to which he was appointed in 1642. He arrived (1643) at the colony along the Delaware River and served until 1653.

Prior (prī'or), Matthew. [Frequently called Matt Prior.] b. probably in East Dorset, July 21, 1664; d. at Wimpole (Robert Harley's country seat), Cambridgeshire, Sept. 8, 1721. English poet and diplomat. He was educated at Westminster under Dr. Richard Busby, and graduated from Cambridge (St. John's College) in 1686. In 1698 he was secretary to William Bentinck, 1st Earl of Portland, in his embassy to France. In 1699 he succeeded John Locke as commissioner of trade and plantations, and became undersecretary of state. In 1701 he was a member of Parliament for East Grinstead. He went as ambassador to Paris in 1712, was the principal negotiator (1713) of the Treaty of Utrecht, which was known as "Matt's Peace," was imprisoned in England (1715-17) during the triumph of the Whigs, and passed most of the rest of his life at his home, Down Hall in Essex. He was the author, with his friend Charles Montagu (later Earl of Halifax), of the City Mouse and Country Mouse (1687; a parody on Dryden's Hind and Panther). He collected his poems, and they were published in 1709 (Alma, or the Progress of the Mind and Solomon in 1718). In 1740 two volumes of his poems were published, with (alleged) memoirs, and some of his best poems which had not been printed before. His light verse is noted for its polished grace; he is known also as a wit and epigrammatist.

Prior Aymer (ā'mér). See Aymer, Prior.

Priores's Tale, The. One of Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. It is told by Madame Eglantine, and is a retelling of the medieval legend of the child of a Christian widow killed in Asia by the Jews. William Wordsworth wrote a modernized version.

Priorov (prī'or'ov), Nikolay Nikolayevich. b. at Arkhangelsk, Russia, 1885—. Russian orthopedist. His specialties are prosthetics, surgery, and orthopedics. He devised many apparatuses, among them a special apparatus for persons who have lost the use of both hands and both eyes, a corset for persons suffering from severe spinal curvatures, and an apparatus for the traction and treatment of fractures. He modified the Krukenberg operation, made plastic reconstruction of poliomyelitis victims by orthopedics, and corrected clubfoot.

Prio Socarrás (prē'ō sō.kār.rās'), Carlos. b. at Bahía Honda, Pinar del Río, Cuba, July 14, 1903—. Cuban statesman, president of Cuba (1948-52). An opponent of Gerardo Machado while he was yet a student, he became one of the original members of the Partido Revolucionario Cubano Auténtico, and the leader of the party in 1943. He entered the assembly in 1939 and the senate in 1940. He served as prime minister (1945-47) and as minister of labor (1947-48). In 1948 he was elected president to succeed Ramón Grau San Martín and in 1952 was deposed in the second coup d'état in 20 years engineered by Fulgencio Batista; he went into exile in Mexico.

Pripet (prīp'et). [Russian, Pripyat; Polish, Prypeć.] River in W U.S.S.R., in the Byelorussian and Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republics. It joins the Dnieper ab. 50 mi. N of Kiev. Length, ab. 500 mi.; navigable to Pinsk.

Pripet Marshes. [Also: Pinsk Marshes; Russian, Pripyat.] Swamp in the U.S.S.R., in S Byelorussian and NW Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republics. The Pripet River flows through it. Area, ab. 35,000 sq. mi.

Priscian (prish'an). [Full Latin name, Priscianus Caesariensis.] b. probably at Caesarea, in Mauretania; fl. at Constantinople, c500 A.D. Latin grammarian. His most famous work is Institutiones grammaticae, an 18-book work so popular in the Middle Ages that some 1,000 manuscript versions still exist.

Priscilla (prīsil'ā). Character in The Blithedale Romance, novel by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Priscilla. Heroine of The Courtship of Miles Standish (1858), by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Priscilla Mullens (or Molines, Mullines, or Mullins). Daughter of one of the signers of the Mayflower Compact. She married John Alden, another of the Pilgrims, in 1621 or 1623; according to William Bradford's history of the colony, they had 11 children.

Priscus (pris'kus), Helvidius. Roman patriot; son-in-law of Thrasca Paetus. He was exiled by Nero, and again by Vespasian, who put him to death. He was quaestor in Achaia under Nero, tribune of the people in 56, and later praetor.

Prishtina (prësh'tē.nā). See Prishtina.

Prishvin (prësh'ven), Mikhail Mikhailovich. b. at Khrushchevo, Orel, Russia, 1873—. Russian author. Gifted with a keen feeling for nature, he has written many animal stories and tales of primitive life. Kashchei's Chain (1923-30), an extensive autobiographic novel, is his major work. His two books available in English are Jon Sheng: the Road of Life (1936) and The Black Arab and Other Stories (1947).

Prisoner of Chillon (shī'l'on, shī'l'on). The. Poem by Lord Byron, published in 1816, inspired by the imprisonment of François de Bonnavard in the Castle of Chillon in Switzerland.

Prisrend (prēs'rent'). See Prizen.

Prishtina (prësh'tē.nā). [Also, Prishtina.] Town in SW Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Vardarska. NW of Skopje, with which it is connected by railroad. It is the marketing center of an agricultural region producing cereal, fruit, and tobacco. 19,628 (1948).

Pritchard (prich'ard), Hannah. [Maiden name, Vaughan.] b. 1711; d. at Bath, England, in August, 1768. English actress. She was noted both in tragedy and in comedy, and was Mrs. Siddons's greatest predecessor in the characters of Lady Macbeth and Queen Katharine. She excelled also in characters of intrigue and gaiety, as Lady Betty Modish and Lady Towneley.

Pritchett (prich'et), Henry Smith. b. at Fayette, Mo., April 16, 1857; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 28, 1939. American astronomer and geodesist, superintendent of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey (1897-1900). He was assistant astronomer in the U.S. Naval Observatory (1878-80), astronomer of the Morrison Observatory at Glasgow, Mo. (1880-81), professor of astronomy at Washington University, St. Louis (1881-97), president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (1900-06), and president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching (1916 et seq.). He instituted and wrote the introduction to the Carnegie Foundation report (1929) attacking the collegiate overemphasis on sports.

Pritchett, V. S. [Full name, Victor Sawdon Pritchett.] b. at Ipswich, Suffolk, England, Dec. 16, 1910—. English short-story writer and critic. Author of Marching Spain (1928), Clare Drummer (1929), The Spanish Virgin (1930), Dead Man Leading (1937), In My Good Books (1942), It May Never Happen (1945), and The Living Novel (1946).

Privas (prē.vā). Town in S France, the capital of the department of Ardèche, situated near the Rhone River, SW of Valence. It has silk manufactures. There are iron mines in the vicinity. A Calvinist stronghold, it was burned down by the troops of Louis XIII in 1629. Pop. 7,407 (1946).

Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft (hen'ri ri'kroft), The. Novel by George Gissing, published in 1903.

Priverno (prē'ver'nō). [Former name, Piperno.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Latina, ab. 47 mi. SE of Rome. Near it was the ancient Volscian city of Privernum. The cathedral, consecrated in 1183, dates mainly from the 13th century. A Volscian and a Roman town in ancient times, it became part of the papal domain as early as the 8th century. Some damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of tourist interest; however, except for some broken windows, the cathedral was unharmed. Pop. of commune, 13,673 (1936); of town, 1,812 (1936).

Prize Cases, 2 Black 635 (1863). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding President Lincoln's use of emergency powers in 1861 without having previously secured the authorization of Congress. Five of the nine justices joined in the majority opinion, which was rendered by Justice Robert Grier. The decision is significant for the judicial interpretation of the rebellion as a war and for its views on the powers and obligations of the president as commander in chief. "If a war be made by invasion of a foreign nation," said the court, "the President is not only authorized but bound to resist force by force. He does not initiate the war, but is bound to accept the challenge without waiting for any special legislative authority.

Whether the President in fulfilling his duties, as Commander-in-chief, in suppressing an insurrection, has met with such armed hostile resistance, and a civil war of such alarming proportions as will compel him to accord to them the character of belligerents, is a question to be decided by him, and this Court must be governed by the decisions and acts of the political department of the Government to which this power is entrusted."

Prizren (prē'zren). [Also, Prisrend.] Town in S Yugoslavia, in the autonomous province of Kosovo-Metohija, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Vardarska. It is situated near the Albanian border, NW of Skopje. It is the commercial center of a region which grows fruit, corn, and tobacco; it produces leatherware, pottery, and silks. Under the Turks, it was known for its manufacture of arms. It has a bazaar and a number of mosques and churches. The population is predominantly Mohammedan, and comprises Albanians, Turks, Serbians, and Greeks. 20,533 (1948).

Prizzi (prē'tsē). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Palermo, situated in the interior of the island, ab. 28 mi. S of Palermo: agricultural commune; garment and macaroni manufactures. Pop. of commune, 10,042 (1936); of town, 8,665 (1936).

Prjevalsky (pēr.zhi.väl'ski), Nikolai Mikhailovitch. See Przhvalsky, Nikolay Mikhailovich.

Proaucas (prō'ou'kās). Term sometimes applied to the South American Indian language group known usually as Araucanian.

Probus (prō'būs), Marcus Aurelius, b. at Sirmium, in Pannonia; killed near Sirmium, 282 A.D. Roman emperor ('276-282). He waged war successfully against the Germans in Gaul. He was killed by mutinous soldiers.

Prociada (prō'chē.dā). [Ancient name, Prochyta (prō'k'i-tā).] Island at the entrance of the Bay of Naples, ab. 13 mi. SW of Naples, belonging to the province of Napoli, Italy. The surface is rocky and volcanic. 9,452 (1936).

Proclamation of 1763. Royal proclamation (Oct. 7, 1763) by George III of Great Britain, prepared by William Petty, Earl of Shelburne, and Wills Hill, Earl of Hillsborough. Its most significant provision was the prohibition of settlement by colonists under British authority of the lands west of a line running along the Appalachian Mountains from the Floridas in the south to the lands of the Hudson's Bay Company in the north. The immediate background of the proclamation was Pontiac's War, and the measure, designed to be of a temporary character, was intended to conciliate the Indians. The reservation of the lands west of the Appalachians appeared to deprive the colonies of their western lands and to put an end to the widespread private speculation in these lands. It caused resentment among the colonists; its basic principle, incorporated in the Quebec Act of 1774 in regard to lands north of the Ohio, added fuel to the colonial grievances against the mother country.

Proclus (prō'klus) or Proculus (prō'q'ulus). b. at Constantinople, c.110, d. at Athens, 485. Greek Neo-Platonic philosopher. A Lycian by ancestry, he studied at Alexandria and Athens, taught in the latter city, and about 450 became the head of the Academy. Expounding paganism and decrying Christianity, he was shortly driven from Athens by Christian resentment, but was able to return within a year, and seems not to have been molested thereafter (though it appears that he found it expedient to practice his religious rites and ceremonies in privacy). He seems to have led an energetic life, lecturing several times each day, writing voluminously, praying and sacrificing, and observing pagan holy days. The imperial favor shown Christianity since the time of Constantine had led to an effort to achieve a synthesis of pagan polytheism, and the furthering of this objective was one of Proclus's chief concerns, together with the interpretation of the teachings of Plato, especially his theology, and of the writings of Aristotle. Central to Proclus's thought are the concepts of God as the first cause, and of the universal soul. He elaborated also the concept of triads, involving an original creative source, emanations from that source, and return to it. These aspects of Proclus's thought anticipated by 2,000 years the dialectical scheme of Hegel, who acknowledged their influence. Even more clearly Proclus influenced medieval Scholasticism, by positing a body of known truths and considering it the philosopher's task to establish their validity by deductive logic. Like other Neo-Platonists, Proclus taught the reality of theurgy, which also influenced Christian thought. He was, in fact, widely credited with miraculous powers. His influence in the West was spread by Latin translations of his writings and translations into Arabic, from which Latin versions were made. His principal known works are expositions of several of the Platonic dialogues, a treatise on Plato's theology, a summary of Neo-Platonism, several essays dealing with problems of providence and fate, commentaries in the fields of mathematics, astronomy, and grammar, and a self-composed epitaph which is included in the Palatine Anthology.

Progne (prō'gnē). In Greek legend, the daughter of Pandion, sister of Philomela, and wife of Tereus, by whom she became the mother of Itys.

Proconnesus (prōk'ō.nē'sus). Ancient name of Marmara island.

Procop or Prokop (prō'kop; Czech, prō'kóp), Saint. b. at Chataun, in Bohemia; d. March 25, 1053. Patron saint of Bohemia. He was educated in a Basilian monastery, later married, was ordained a priest of the eastern rite, and became canon of Prague. He retired from his family to a solitary place in the Sázava valley, and there built a church and monastery, of which he was abbot. He was canonized in 1204.

Procop (prō'kóp), Andrew. [Also: Andrew Prokop; Latinized, Andrew Procopius (prō.kō'pi.us); called Procopius the Great.] Killed in battle near Český-Brod, in Bohemia, May 30, 1434. Hussite leader. A married priest, he became (1424) commander of the Taborites, gained (June 16, 1426) the victory of Aussig (Ústí), and invaded Moravia, Austria, Hungary, Silesia, and Saxony. He rejected the Compactata of Prague, and was defeated (May 30, 1434) by the Calixtines in the battle of Český-Brod (Böhmisches-Brod).

Procopé (prō.kō.pā'), Hjalmar Johan Fredrik. b. at Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 8, 1889—, Finnish diplomat, minister to the U.S. during World War II. He was a leader (1915-19) in the Finnish independence movement, entered (1918) the diplomatic service, was (1918-19) a Helsinki town councilor, and served (1919-22, 1924-26) in the parliament. He was minister (1920-21, 1924-26) of trade and industry, a member (1921-39) of the committee on commercial treaties, foreign minister (1924-26, 1927-31) and minister to Poland (1926-27) and to the U.S. (1939-45).

Procopius (prō.kō'pi.us). b. at Caesarea, Palestine, probably c.490 A.D.; d. c.565. Byzantine historian. He accompanied Belisarius on various campaigns, and wrote histories of the Persian, Vandal, and Gothic wars in the time of Justinian. He was also the author of a work on the buildings of Justinian (De aedificiis) and of a secret history (Anecdota) directed against Justinian.

Procris (prŏ'kris). In Greek legend, the wife of Cephalus (a hero of Attica), by whom she was accidentally slain. She was accustomed to overhearing him call upon a breeze to cool him, and thinking it the name of a lover, jealously spied on him. Cephalus, noticing the movement of the bushes which hid her, threw his spear at what he thought was some wild beast, and thus killed his wife.

Procrustes (prŏ'krus'tēz). In Greek legend, a famous Attic robber. He had a bed (named from him the Procrustean bed) upon which his prisoners were tortured: those who were too short he stretched to fit it, and those who were too tall had their limbs cut to the proper length. He was killed by Theseus.

Procter (prŏk'tēr), Adelaide Ann. [Pseudonym, Mary Berwick.] b. at London, Oct. 30, 1825; d. there, Feb. 2, 1864. English poet; daughter of Bryan Waller Procter (Barry Cornwall), which includes "The Lost Chord" (set to music by Sir Arthur Sullivan), and many well-known hymns.

Procter, Bryan Waller. [Pseudonym, Barry Cornwall.] b. at Leeds, England, Nov. 21, 1787; d. at London, Oct. 5, 1874. English poet; father of Adelaide Anne Procter. He was educated at Harrow, and was a schoolmate of Lord Byron and Sir Robert Peel. In 1807 he went to London to study law. In 1820 he began writing under the pseudonym Barry Cornwall, and in 1831 was called to the bar. From 1832 to 1861 he was commissioner of lunacy. He wrote Dramatic Scenes and Other Poems (1819), A Sicilian Story (1821), Mirandola (1821; performed at Covent Garden in 1821), Flood of Thessaly (1823), Effigies Poetica (1824), English Songs (1832), and memoirs of Edmund Kean (1835), Charles Lamb (1866), Ben Jonson (1838), and Shakespeare (1843).

Proctor (prŏk'tŏr). [Former name, Proctorknott (-not).] Village in NE Minnesota, in St. Louis County near Duluth: agricultural trading center, with some shipping of iron ore. 2,693 (1950).

Proctor, Alexander Phimister. b. at Bosanquit, Ontario, Sept. 27, 1862; d. 1950. American animal sculptor and landscape painter. He executed the quadriga for the U.S. pavilion in the Paris Exposition (1900), the lions for the McKinley monument at Buffalo, and the tigers for the entrance to Nassau Hall at Princeton University, among others. His work is to be found in the public parks of Brooklyn, Denver, Pittsburgh, and other cities, and in the St. Louis Art Gallery, the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York, the buildings of the New York Zoological Society, the Toronto Museum, and elsewhere. He was elected a member of the National Academy of Design in 1904.

Proctor, Edna Dean. b. at Henniker, N.H., Sept. 18, 1829; d. at Framingham, Mass., Dec. 18, 1923. American author and poet. During the Civil War she did much to arouse public sentiment in the North by her patriotic prose and verse. Among her works are Poems (1867), A Russian Journey (1872), The Song of the Ancient People (1893), A Mountain Maid, and Other Poems of New Hampshire (1900), and Songs of America (1906).

Proctor, Frederick Francis. b. at Dexter, Me., c1851; d. at Larchmont, N.Y., Sept. 4, 1929. American vaudeville manager and theater magnate. Beginning his professional career as an acrobat, he became (1886) part proprietor of a theater at Albany, N.Y., and in 1889 became the owner of a legitimate theater at New York. After 1895 he devoted himself to the promotion and production of vaudeville, subsequently becoming the manager of 25 vaudeville theaters and road shows in the eastern part of the U.S. His interests were absorbed (1929) by the Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuit.

Proctor, Henry A. b. in Wales, 1765; d. at Liverpool, England, 1859. British general in the War of 1812.

Proctor, Redfield. b. at Proctorsville, Vt., June 1, 1831; d. at Washington, D.C., March 4, 1908. American statesman, U.S. secretary of war (1889-91) under Benjamin Harrison. He was appointed a lieutenant in the Union army in 1861 and rose to the rank of colonel, was several times a member of the Vermont legislature, and was lieutenant governor of Vermont (1876-78) and governor (1878-80). He was U.S. senator from Vermont from 1891.

He visited Cuba in 1898 and his speech on the condition of affairs in the island strongly influenced the policy of the U.S. government in entering the Spanish-American War.

Proctor, Richard Anthony. b. at Chelsea, London, March 23, 1837; d. at New York, Sept. 12, 1888. English astronomer. His practical work in measuring the rotation of Mars and charting the 324,198 stars of Argelander's catalogue is specially noteworthy. His works include Half-hours with the Stars (1867), Star Atlas (1870), Other Worlds Than Ours (1870), The Sun (1871), Borderland of Science (1873), The Expansion of Heaven (1873), Myths and Marvels of Astronomy (1877), and Old and New Astronomy (1888-92; completed by A. C. Ranyard).

Procyon (prŏ'siŏn). Principal star (α Canis Minoris) of the constellation Canis Minor, the eighth brightest in the heavens, magnitude 0.43. Of the 20 first-magnitude stars only Sirius and α Centauri are closer to the Earth than Procyon, which is 6.6 times 10¹⁴ mi. (11.2 light years) from the Earth.

Prodáná Nevěstá (prŏ'dá.nā nĕ'vye.stá). Czech title of Bartered Bride, The.

Prodigal Son, The. Oratorio by Sir Arthur Sullivan, produced at the Worcester Festival on Sept. 8, 1869.

Proem (prŏ'em). Poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, published in Poems (1849).

Professor, The. Novel by Charlotte Brontë, published in 1857 after her death.

Professor at the Breakfast-Table, The. Series of sketches (1858) by Oliver Wendell Holmes forming a sequel to The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, published in 1860.

Professor's House, The. Novel by Willa Cather, published in 1925.

Profeta (prŏ.fĕ'tā), Il. [French title, Le Prophète; Eng. trans., "The Prophet."] Opera in five acts by Giacomo Meyerbeer, with a libretto by Eugène Scribe, first produced at Paris on April 16, 1849.

Progreso (prŏ.grā'sŏ). City in SE Mexico, in Yucatán state: the seaport of Mérida. 11,990 (1940).

Progreso, El. See El Progreso.

Progress and Poverty. Economic treatise by Henry George, published in 1879, in which the author endeavors to fix the responsibility for the increase of individual poverty in the midst of national prosperity. Assigning the cause to private ownership of land and to the ratio of the rise in rent to the increase in the value of land, George suggests as a remedy the "Single Tax," whereby economic rent, which alone is subject to taxation, is virtually confiscated.

Progressive Conservative Party. Canadian political party, successor to the Conservative Party, and basing its program on a protective tariff.

Progressive Party. [Also known as the "Bull Moose" Party.] Political party organized by Theodore Roosevelt, who was named its candidate for the presidency on a slate with Hiram Johnson at a national convention (August, 1912) held at Chicago. The party had its roots in the National Republican Progressive League formed (1911) by the progressive Republicans led by Senator Robert LaFollette. The progressives passed leadership to Roosevelt, and, following the Republican renomination (June, 1912) of William Howard Taft, bolted the Republican Party. The Progressive Party's platform supported the move for political reforms (the direct primary, presidential preferential primaries, the popular election of U.S. senators, the initiative, referendum, and recall, and woman's suffrage) and promised an anti-injunction law and social insurance legislation. It further advocated the supervision of trusts by a federal trade commission, an inheritance tax, and currency reform. In the three-cornered campaign which followed, Woodrow Wilson was victorious, and the majority of the Progressives returned to the Republican Party in 1916. The nickname "Bull Moose" came from Roosevelt's characteristic assertion of vigor, "I feel like a bull moose."

Progressive Party. Political party whose forerunner was the Conference for Progressive Political Action set up in 1922, which was formed at a national convention held at Cleveland during July 4-6, 1924. The Progressive Party, which was later popularly known as the LaFollette Party, chose Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin as its presidential candidate and nominated Burton K. Wheeler of Montana for the vice-presidency. During the national campaign of 1924, it received support from a varied group including labor and agrarian organizations, and was endorsed by the American Federation of Labor (AFL) and the Socialist Party. The Progressive Party stressed labor and agricultural needs in its platform. It received some five million votes, but carried only one state, Wisconsin.

Progressive Party. Political party set up in 1948, whose forerunners were the National Citizens Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions. The party's Philadelphia convention chose Henry Wallace, former U.S. vice-president (1941-45), as its presidential candidate, and nominated Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho as his running mate. The party, which also supported local candidates in scattered areas, emphasized its opposition to official U.S. foreign policy, particularly that phase of it relating to the U.S.S.R. It polled approximately 1,100,000 votes in the presidential campaign of 1948.

Progrès Social Français (pro.grə so.sya:l frã.šã). See Croix de Feu, Les.

Prohibition Party. Political party founded upon the demand for the prohibition by the federal Constitution as well as by the laws of the several states, of the "manufacture, sale, importation, exportation, or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes." Its organization was begun in 1868 and the first national convention was held in 1872. It has nominated a candidate for the presidency in every national election since 1872.

Prokesh-Osten (prö.kesh.osh'ten), Count Anton von. b. at Graz, Styria, Austria, Dec. 10, 1795; d. at Vienna, Oct. 26, 1875. Austrian diplomat, author, and archaeologist. He was ambassador at Athens (1834-49), at Berlin (1849-52), at Frankfurt on the Main (1853-55), and at Constantinople (1855-71). He published travels and Geschichte des Abfalls der Griechen vom türkischen Reich (History of the Revolt of the Greeks from the Turkish Empire, 1867).

Prokofiev (prö.kö'fi.éf; Russian, prö.kö'fyif), Sergey Sergeyevich. b. at Sontsova, Russia, April 23, 1891; d. near Moscow, March 4, 1953. Russian composer. He studied at the St. Petersburg Conservatory under Rimsky-Korsakov. He was noted for his originality in harmony and rhythm. He received (1910) the Rubinstein prize for a piano concerto. Included among his compositions are The Buffoon (1915), performed (1921) by Diaghilev's ballet at Paris, and The Love for Three Oranges, an opera based on a story of Carlo Gozzi's. Among his orchestral works are Scythian Suite, Classical Symphony, Overture on Hebrew Themes, and Peter and the Wolf. He also composed several suites, including Lieutenant Kije from the music for a motion picture; the cantata Alexander Nevsky, also from a motion picture score; the ballet Romeo and Juliet; symphonies, concertos for piano, violin, and cello, piano sonatas and miscellaneous pieces, violin sonatas, operas, and other works.

Prokop (prö'kop; Czech, prö'kóp), Saint. See Saint Procop.

Prokop (prö'kóp), Andrew. See Procop, Andrew.

Prokopyevsk (prö.kö'pyf.sk). [Also, Prokopyevsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Kemerovo oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 18 mi. NW of Stalinsk; a major coal-mining city of the Kuznetsk Basin. 107,227 (1939).

Prokosch (prö'kosh), Eduard. b. at Eger, Austria, May 15, 1876; d. at New Haven, Conn., Aug. 11, 1938. American linguist, Sterling professor of Germanic languages (1929 et seq.) at Yale University. He was a cofounder of the Linguistic Society of America and its journal, Language. His works include Sounds and History of the German Language (1916), An Outline of German Historical Grammar (1933), and A Comparative German Grammar (1939). He also wrote Rhythmus und Persönlichkeit in Goethes Faust (1925). He was the father of Frederic Prokosch, the novelist.

Prokosch, Frederic. b. at Madison, Wis., May 17, 1908-19. American novelist and poet; son of Eduard Prokosch. Author of The Asiatics (1935), The Seven Who Fled (1937), Night of the Poor (1939), The Skies of Europe

(1941), The Conspirators (1943), Age of Thunder (1945), Idols of the Cave (1946), and other novels. His books of poetry include The Carnival (1938) and Chosen Poems (1944).

Prolegomena in Homerum (prö.le.gom'e.nã in hō.mē'rum). Critical work by F. A. Wolf, published in 1795, attacking the then commonly received theory of the Homeric poems and maintaining that the poems were the work of several authors.

Proliv Laperuza (prö.lyéf' lá.pyi.rō'za). Russian name of La Pérouse Strait.

Prome (pröm). Town in S central Burma, on the Irrawaddy River ab. 150 mi. N of Rangoon; trading center. It was taken by the British in 1825. Pop. 28,295 (1931).

Promessi Sposi (prö.mäs'sé spō'szē), I. [Eng. trans., "The Betrothed".] Novel by Alessandro Manzoni, his principal work, published 1825-26.

Promessi Sposi, I. Opera by Errico Petrella, first produced at Lecco, Italy, in 1869.

Prometheus (prö.mē'thē.us). In Greek mythology, the son of Iapetus and the ocean nymph Clymene, celebrated as the benefactor of mankind. For deceit practiced upon him by Prometheus in a sacrifice, Zeus denied to man the use of fire; but Prometheus stole it from heaven and brought it to earth in a hollow reed. For this he was chained, by order of Zeus, on a mountain (Caucasus), where daily his liver (which grew again at night) was consumed by an eagle. He was freed by Hercules. To counterbalance the acquisition of fire, Zeus sent woman to confuse mankind, giving Pandora, the first mortal woman, to Prometheus's brother, Epimetheus, for wife. Prometheus warned his brother against the gift, but Epimetheus married her anyway. In a late myth Prometheus is credited with having created mankind.

Prometheus. Drama projected by Goethe, begun in 1773. There remains only a monologue with this title.

Prometheus. [Full title, Die Geschöpfe des Prometheus.] Ballet (Opus 43) by Ludwig van Beethoven, produced at Vienna in 1802, with choreography by Salvatore Viganò. The overture to this work has become a standard concert piece.

Prometheus Bound. Tragedy by Aeschylus, of uncertain date. Prometheus, bound to the rocks by order of Zeus for stealing fire from heaven, resists all efforts to subdue his will and purpose, bids defiance to the father of the gods, and disappears in an appalling tempest. It is one of a trilogy, of which the other parts, Prometheus Unbound and Prometheus the Fire-bringer, have been lost. Elizabeth Barrett Browning published a poetical translation in 1833. Percy Bysshe Shelley produced a dramatic poem Prometheus Unbound, based on the Prometheus story.

Prometheus: The Poem of Fire. Symphonic poem (Opus 60) by Alexander Scriabin, his last composition for orchestra. Completed in 1910, it was first performed at Moscow on March 15, 1911, with Serge Koussevitzky conducting and Scriabin as pianist. The performance of this work introduced a wired keyboard which projected on a screen colored lights in harmony with the music.

Prometheus Unbound. Lyrical drama by Percy Bysshe Shelley, published in 1820.

Promise. Novel by Ethel Sidgwick, published in 1910.

Promise, Land of. See Canaan.

"Promised Land." See Canaan.

Promise of American Life, The. Social treatise by Herbert Croly, published in 1909, setting forth an interpretation of the democratic order in the light of modern industrial development. Theodore Roosevelt drew upon it for his doctrine of the "New Nationalism."

Promontorium Acanthium (prom.ontō'ri.um a.kan'shi.um). Latin name of Foreland, North.

Promontorium Damnonium (dam.nō'nī.um). Latin name of Lizard, the.

Promontorium Misenum (mī.sē'nūm). Latin name of Miseno, Cape.

Promontorium Sacrum (sã'krum). Latin name of St. Vincent, Cape.

Promontory or Promontory Point (prom'ont.tōr.i). See under Salt Lake Cut-off.

Promos and Cassandra (prö'mos; ka.san'dra). Play by George Whetstone, printed in 1578, but never acted.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lîte, pûll; ʔ, then; ɔ, d or j, s, s or sh; t, ɔ or ch;

Shakespeare took the story of Measure for Measure from this play, which is in two parts, and which was in turn taken from one of Cinthio's novels. In 1582 Whetstone translated it as a prose novel.

Promptorium Parvulorum, sive Clericorum (pomp-tō'ri-um pār.vū.lō'rum si'vē kler.i.kō'rum). English-Latin dictionary, said to have been the first in use. Promptorium should properly be promptuarium ("storehouse"), and is so spelled by Wynkin de Worde in his edition Promptuarium Parvulorum Clericorum (1510). The words were collected from various authors by Frate Galfridus (Geoffrey), called Grammaticus, a preaching friar, a "recluse of Bishop Lynne" in Norfolk. There are several manuscripts, and, besides Wynkin de Worde, Richard Pyonson printed it in 1499 and Julian Notary in 1508.

Propercius (prō.pēr'shus), Sextus. b. at Assisi, Italy, c50 b.c.; d. after 16 b.c. Roman elegiac poet, a friend of Maecenas, Vergil, and Ovid. His poems are largely amatory, celebrating his mistress Cynthia (whose real name was Hostia).

Prophète (prof.ɛt), Le. French title of Profeta, II.

Prophetsess, The. Play by John Fletcher and Philip Massinger, licensed in 1622 and printed in 1647.

"Prophets' Town." See under Brugg.

Propontis (prō.pon'tis). Ancient name of Marmara, Sea of.

Propriá (prō.prē.ä'). City in E Brazil, in the state of Sergipe. 12,962 (1950).

Propus (prō'pus). Ptolemy's name for the third-magnitude (but slightly variable) double star η Geminorum, in the northern foot of Castor.

Propylaea (prop.il.ä'). Monumental gateway to the Acropolis at Athens, begun 437 b.c. by Mnesicles. It consists of a central ornamented passage and two projecting wings, that on the N with a chamber (the Pinacotheca) behind its small portico. The central passage has on both W and E faces a magnificent hexastyle Doric portico. At about two thirds of its length it is crossed by a wall pierced with five doorways, the widest and highest in the middle. An inclined way passes through the wider middle intercolumniations of both great porches and the large central door; this way was flanked between the W portico and the door by six tall Ionic columns, whose capitals supply the most beautiful type of the order.

Propyläen (prō.pē.lä'en). German periodical issued at irregular intervals (1798-1800) by Goethe and Heinrich Meyer in collaboration with Schiller, Wilhelm von Humboldt, and others. It was intended to promote classicist principles, mainly in regard to the arts of design, to help eradicate the lingering rationalistic misconception of art as merely a skillful imitation of nature, and thus to provide a successor and supplement to Schiller's more exclusively literary Die Horen. The term means "vestibule" and was chosen with reference to the Propylaea of the Acropolis at Athens. In it Goethe published his essays Über Laokoön, Der Sammler und die Seinigen, Über Wahrheit und Wahrscheinlichkeit der Kunstwerke, Über den Dilettantismus, and others. The venture failed for lack of public support.

Proscritto (prō.skřēt'tō), II. [Eng. trans., "The Exile."] Opera by Otto Nicolai, produced at Milan in 1840. It was produced (1844), with alterations, as Die Heimkehr des Verbannten.

Proserpine (prō.sēr'pi.nē, pros'ēr.pin). Roman form of Persephone.

Proсна (prōs'nä). River in Poland, a tributary of the Warta (Warthe), which it joins ab. 38 mi. SE of Poznań (Posen). Length, ab. 142 mi.

Prospect Park (pros'pekt). Borough in N New Jersey, in Passaic County: residential community, near Paterson. 5,242 (1950).

Prospect Park. Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Delaware County, near Philadelphia. 5,834 (1950).

Prosperity. Poem attributed by William Morris to Geoffrey Chaucer. However, W. W. Skeat refused to accept it in the canon.

"Prosperity Robinson" (rob'in.sqn). Nickname of Robinson, Frederick John.

Prospero (pros'pe.rō). Rightful Duke of Milan in Shakespeare's The Tempest. He is represented as a wise and good magician (not a necromancer or wizard) living in exile on an island with his daughter Miranda.

Pross (pros), Solomon. [Also, John Barsad.] Spy and scoundrel in Charles Dickens's Tale of Two Cities. His sister, Miss Pross, a wild-looking but unselfish woman, becomes the instrument of vengeance, and accidentally kills Madame Defarge.

Prosser (pros'er). City in S Washington, county seat of Benton County: agricultural trading center. 2,636 (1950).

Prostějov (prō'stye.yōf). [German, Prossnitz (pros'nits).] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Olomouc, in C Moravia, ab. 11 mi. SW of Olomouc. It has clothing, shoe, and textile factories, a brewery, and metalworks. It is a center for the grain trade and of the clothing industry. The old town hall is used as a museum. There are a parish church and a castle dating from the 16th century. 31,718 (1947).

Protagoras (prō.tag'ō.ras). Dialogue of Plato; the narration by Socrates of a conversation which took place in the house of Callias, a wealthy Athenian, between himself, the sophists Protagoras, Hippias, and Prodicus, Hippocrates, Alcibiades, and Critias. The theme of this celebrated dialogue is virtue, its nature, unity, and teachableness; it is also a study of the sophistic teachers in the person of one of their best representatives, the famous Protagoras of Abdera. It closes with the well-known conclusion of Socrates that virtue is knowledge.

Protagoras of Abdera (ab.dir'a). b. c481 b.c.; d. c411 b.c. Greek sophist, the earliest of that class of teachers. He was driven from Athens on a charge of atheism, and his work On the Gods was publicly burned. He is best known from his famous dictum, "Man is the measure of all things: of those which are, that they are; of those which are not, that they are not."

"Protector, the." Epithet of Seymour, Edward.

Protectorado de Marruecos (prō.tek.tō.rä'müō dā mār-wä'kōs). Spanish name of Spanish Morocco.

Proterozoic Period (prō'te.rō.zō'ik). The latter part of the Pre-Cambrian Era. See table at end of Vol. III.

Protesilaus (prō.te.silä'us). In Greek legend, the first of the Greeks slain in the Trojan War. He was killed on the shore while landing. One version of the story says that Protesilaus knew that the first man to set foot on Trojan ground was destined to be killed, and took the fate upon himself.

Protestantenverein (prō.te.s.tän'ten.fēr.in'). [English, Protestant Union.] Association of German Protestants formed (1863) at Frankfurt on the Main for the purpose of achieving toleration, freedom from ecclesiastical domination, union of different churches in a national church, and the development of Protestantism.

Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism, The. Essay by Max Weber, translated (1930) from his Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Religionssoziologie (3 vols., 1920-21). It was an investigation into the historical antecedents and necessary elements in the birth, growth, and development of modern capitalism. The author located the conditions of its inception in the aggressive "getting ahead" prescriptions found in the ethics of the Protestant religion.

Proteus (prō'tē.us, prō'tūs). In classical mythology, a sea god, the son of Oceanus and Tethys, who had the power of assuming different shapes. If caught, however, and held fast through all his many changes until he reassumed his own shape, he was compelled to answer questions. In one legend, Menelaus, on his return from Troy, surprised Proteus and held him fast until Proteus revealed to him how to return home.

Proteus. One of the pair of chief characters in Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Proteus, Peregrinus. See Peregrinus Proteus.

Prothalamion (prō.thä.lä'mi.on). "Spousal verse" by Edmund Spenser, published under this name in 1596. It was written on the occasion of the marriage on the same day of Lady Katherine and Lady Elizabeth Somerset, the two daughters of the Earl of Worcester, to Henry Guilford and William Petre.

Prothero (prō'ti.e.rō), George Walter. b. in Wiltshire, England, Oct. 14, 1848; d. at London, July 10, 1922. English historian, writer, and editor; brother of Rowland Edmund Prothero. He was university lecturer in history and tutor at King's College, Cambridge (1876-94), professor of history at the University of Edinburgh (1894-99), and lecturer at Cambridge in 1903. In 1890 he succeeded his brother as editor of the Quarterly Review. He was coeditor (1901-12) of the Cambridge Modern History. Among his publications are Life and Times of Simon de Montfort (1877), Memoir of Henry Bradshaw (1880), and British History Reader (1898).

Prothero, Rowland Edmund. [Title, 1st Baron Ernle.] b. at Clifton on Teeme, Worcestershire, England, Sept. 6, 1852; d. near Wantage, Berkshire, England, July 1, 1937. English writer; brother of George Walter Prothero. He was editor of the Quarterly Review (1894-99). He was a member of Parliament (1914-19) and president of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (1916-19) during World War I. Among his works are Life and Correspondence of Dean Stanley (1893; with G. G. Bradley), Letters and Journals of Lord Byron (1898-1901), The Psalms in Human Life (1903), Letters of Richard Ford (1905), The Pleasant Land of France (1908), and others.

Protić (pró'tich), Stojan. b. at Kruševac, Serbia, 1857; d. at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, 1923. Serbian statesman, a founder of Yugoslavia. A leader of the Serbian Radical Party, he was a member of the national assembly (1903-25), minister of interior (1903-05, 1906-07, 1910-11, and 1912-14), and first prime minister (1918-19) of the Yugoslav state.

Proteogenes (pró'toj-é-néz). b. at Canuus, in Caria, Asia Minor (or at Xanthus in Lycia); fl. in the second half of the 4th century B.C. Greek painter of Rhodes. His most famous works were the Ialysus at Rhodes, afterward placed in the Temple of Ponce at Rome, and the Resting Satyr. Proteogenes and his work were greatly admired by his contemporary, Apelles.

Proto-Malay (pró'to-má'la) or Proto-Malaysian (-má-lá'zhan). [Also: Indonesian, Malaysian, Pre-Malay.] Subdivision of the Southern Mongoloid race, and the language of its members, characterized, in contrast to the later Deutero-Malay subdivision, by shorter stature, darker skin, longer head, broader nose, a greater frequency of wavy hair, and a lesser incidence of the Mongoloid fold. Typical groups are the Batak (Sumatra), Bahau Dyak (Borneo), Torajja (Celebes), and the Bontok, Nabaloi, Ifugao, and other mountain tribes of the Philippines.

Prou (pró), Maurice. b. at Sens, France, 1861; d. 1930. French historian. His main work was L'Acquisition de Gatinas par Philippe I^{er} (1898).

Proudhon (pró'dón), Pierre Joseph. b. at Besançon, France, July 15, 1809; d. at Passy, Paris, Jan. 19, 1865. French socialist and political theorist, a philosophical anarchist who had great influence on the syndicalist movement. He studied at the College of Besançon, and obtained (1839) from the Academy of Besançon a pension which enabled him to spend several years of study at Paris. He was afterward (1843-47) in the employ of a printing house at Lyons. At the outbreak of the February Revolution in 1848 he threw himself with ardor into the socialistic movement at Paris. He was elected a member of the Constituent Assembly, and founded the short-lived journals Le Peuple (1848-49), La Voix du Peuple (1849-50), and Le Peuple de 1850 (1850). He was imprisoned under the press laws (1849-52), and fled to Belgium to escape a sentence of imprisonment on the publication in 1858 of his work De la justice dans la révolution et dans l'église, but was amnestied in 1860. He also published Qu'est-ce que la propriété? (1840), Création de l'ordre dans l'humanité (1843), Système des contradictions économiques (1846), and La Révolution sociale, démontrée par le coup d'état (1852).

Proust (próst), Marcel. b. at Paris, July 10, 1871; d. there, Nov. 18, 1922. French novelist. Author of À la recherche du temps perdu (1913-27; 13 to 16 vols., according to the edition; Eng. trans., Remembrance of Things Past, 1922-32; for individual titles and dates, see À la recherche du temps perdu), Les Plaisirs et les Jours (1896; Eng. trans., Pleasures and Regrets, 1949), and Pastiches et Mlanges (1919). Translator of Ruskin's The Bible of Amiens (1934) and Sesame and Lilies (1906). An invalid from asthma from the age of nine, he was brought up in ease and luxury by his wealthy father. As a young man he frequented the salons of Mme. Arman de Caillavet and others and became known as a dilettante; his first book, published with a preface by Anatole France, bore the marks of the "decadentism" of the period. Following the deaths of his father (1904) and his mother (1905), he retired from society and began work on what was originally planned as a three-volume novel; over the years this developed into the "picture of the death of a society," À la recherche du temps perdu. Working in a cork-lined chamber, mostly at night, rarely seeing even his most intimate friends, he labored constantly in what he considered a race against death. The novel had not been completed when he died. A new, three-volume novel, Jean Santeuil, reconstructed by an editor from Proust's manuscripts and dated from 1899, was published in 1951.

Prout (prout), Ebenezer. b. at Oundle, Northamptonshire, England, March 1, 1835; d. Dec. 5, 1909. English musician. His compositions include orchestral, piano, church, and chamber music, but his theoretical works were more widely known. He was also highly regarded as a critic and writer on musical subjects.

Prout, Father. Pseudonym of Mahony, Francis. Prouty (prou'ti), Olive. [Maiden name, Higgins.] b. at Worcester, Mass., 1882— American author. Her books include Shila Dallas (1922), White Fawn (1931), and Lisa Vale (1938).

Provence (prov'vâns). Region and medieval county in SE France. Its capital was Aix. It occupied the area now in the departments of Var, Basses-Alpes, and Bouches-du-Rhône, and part of Vaucluse. The region is noted for its fruits and a variety of other products. It was made a Roman province (Provincia) 125-105 B.C., and was afterward part of Gallia Narbonensis. It was overrun by the Visigoths (West Goths) in the 5th century, and conquered by the Franks at the beginning of the 6th century. Then it was part of the kingdom of Theodoric, but 538 was reconquered by the Franks. The Saracens overran it in the 8th century. On the division of the Carolingian Empire in 843, it went to Lothair and later to Charles the Bald. Provence was later part of the kingdom of Arles, and was ruled by its own counts from 926. It passed (c1112) to the counts of Barcelona, and later to Aragon. Charles of Anjou founded the Angevin line of counts of Provence in 1246. It passed to Louis XI of France in 1481, and was united with the crown. Its inhabitants are Provençals, a designation now extended to include all dwellers in the SW part of France.

Provence, Marcel. See Joughandau, Marcel.

Proverbial Philosophy. Didactic work in blank verse by M. F. Tupper, published in four series (1838-67).

Proverbs. [Full title, The Proverbs of Solomon.] One of the books of the Old Testament, following the Book of Psalms. It is a collection of the sayings of the sages of Israel, taking its full title from the chief among them, though it is by no means certain that he is the author of a majority of them. Portions of the book are ascribed to other persons; chapters xxv to xxix are said to have been edited by the "men of Hezekiah," chapter xxx contains "the words of Agur," and xxxi. 1-9 "the words of Lemuel." The original meaning of hishle, the Hebrew word translated "proverb," is "a comparison." The term is sometimes translated "parable" in the English Bible; but, as such comparisons were commonly made in the East by short and pithy sayings, the word came to be applied to these chiefly, though not exclusively. They formed one of the most characteristic features of Eastern literature.

Providence (prov'idenz). City in W Kentucky, in Webster County. 3,905 (1950).

Providence. City in N Rhode Island, capital of the state and county seat of Providence County, on the Providence River at the head of Narragansett Bay; the largest city in the state. It is a port, and one of the principal commercial cities of New England. It has diverse manufactures, including machine tools, textile machinery, textiles, hardware, rubber goods, costume jewelry, paint, and silverware. It is an educational center, the seat of Brown University, Rhode Island College of Education, Rhode Island School of Design, and Providence College. It was founded by Roger Williams in 1636, was damaged by fire in King Philip's War in 1675, and suffered severely from a storm in 1815. It became a city in 1832. Pop. of city, 253,504 (1940), 248,674 (1950); of urbanized area, 583,346 (1950).

Providence. A former name of Annapolis, Md.

Providence River. Estuary formed by the Blackstone and other rivers at the N end of Narragansett Bay.

Provincetown (prov'ins.toun). Town in SE Massachusetts, in Barnstable County, at the extremity of Cape Cod peninsula: fishing and fish-packing plants; notable as a summer art colony. The Mayflower came to anchor here in 1620, before the landing at Plymouth. The Provincetown Players, a pioneering little-theater group, was organized here. 3,745 (1950).

Province Wellesley (welz'li). See Wellesley Province.

Provincia (prōvin'shi.ə, -sha). [Also: Gallia/Provincia,

Provincia Gallica (gal'i.ka).] In ancient geography, the part of Gaul conquered by the Romans at the end of the 2nd century B.C. It corresponded originally to the later Provence, Dauphiné, and Languedoc.

Provincias Internas (prō.bēn'si.əs.ēnter'nās). Colonial division of Spanish America. The name was vaguely used, as early as the 17th century, for the northern parts of New Spain or Mexico. In 1777 (by order of Aug. 22, 1776), a new government was formed under this name, completely separated from the viceroyalty of New Spain, and comprising Nueva Vizcaya (Durango and Chihuahua), Coahuila, Texas, New Mexico, Sinaloa, Sonora, and the Californias. The capital was Arizpe in Sonora, and the audience (audiencia) of Guadalajara retained its judicial authority; the governor was also military commandant. In 1786 and 1787-93 the government was again subordinate to the viceroy. When the final separation was made in 1793, California was attached to Mexico. Later the Provincias Internas were divided into two military districts, the Occidente and Oriente, California being united to the former; this change went into effect in 1810.

Provincias Orientales (prō.bēn'si.əs.ō.ryen.tā'lās). Official name of Oriente, Ecuador.

Provincias Unidas del Centro de América (prō.bēn'si.əs.ūnē'rhās del sen'trō dā ā.mā'rē.kā). Official name of the Central American confederated states, declared by the Constituent Congress, July 1, 1823. The provisional government was an executive of three members and the existing courts. With the constitution adopted Nov. 22, 1824, the name became Estados Federados de Centro-América.

Provins (pro.vah). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, ab. 50 mi. SE of Paris. It is an old town which prospered prior to the Black Death (1348) and the wars between England and France in the Middle Ages. It is now known for rose-growing, and has manufactures of porcelain, gasoline engines, and bricks. 9,386 (1946).

Provis (prō'vis). Assumed name of Magwitch, Abel.

Provisions of Oxford (oks'ford). See Oxford, Provisions of.

Provo (prō'vō). [Former names: Fort Utah, Provo City.] City in N Utah, county seat of Utah County, on Utah Lake ab. 40 mi. SE of Salt Lake City. Trading center for an agricultural area, it has coal mines, and manufactures of pig iron and steel. It is the seat of Brigham Young University. It was settled in 1849. Pop. 28,937 (1950).

Provoked Husband, The. Comedy begun by Sir John Vanbrugh, who wrote nearly four acts before his death (1726), under the title A Journey to London. It was finished by Colley Cibber, and produced in 1728.

Provoked Wife, The. Comedy by Sir John Vanbrugh, produced in 1697. It was revived in 1726, the year of his death.

Provoost (prō'vōst). Samuel. [Original surname, Provoost.] b. at New York, Feb. 26, 1742; d. Sept. 6, 1815. American clergyman, first Protestant Episcopal bishop (1786-1815) of New York. He became associated with Trinity Church at New York, and in 1784 was named chaplain of the Continental Congress. He conducted (1789) the services at Saint Paul's Chapel (New York) immediately following the inauguration of Washington as first President of the United States, and became (1789) chaplain of the U.S. Senate.

Pruckner (prük'nér). Caroline (or Karoline). b. at Vienna, Nov. 4, 1832; d. there, June 16, 1908. Austrian teacher of singing.

Prudden (prüd'en). Theophil Mitchell. b. at Middlebury, Conn., July 7, 1849; d. April 10, 1924. American pathologist and bacteriologist. He was professor of pathology (1891 et seq.) in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University.

Prudence Palfrey (prō'dens pōl'fri). Novel by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, published in 1874.

Prudentius (prū.den'shus). Aurelius Clemens. b. probably in Spain, 348 A.D.; fl. c.400. Latin poet, author of hymns and other poems on religious subjects; the chief poet of the early church.

Prudhoe (prūd'hō, -hō). Urban district in NE England, in Northumberland, situated on the river Tyne ab. 11 mi. W of Newcastle, ab. 279 mi. N of London by rail. 9,571 (1951).

Prudhomme (prū.dom). Monsieur Joseph. Self-satisfied character noted for his high-sounding but empty phrases, created by Henri Monnier in 1852. He is frequently quoted and referred to in French literature. His name was taken from the Old French term signifying "righteous man," used for a member of a council composed of workmen and employers, appointed for a settlement of disputes between the two classes.

Prudhomme, René François Armand Sully-. See Sully-Prudhomme, René François Armand.

Prud'hon (prūd'hōn). Pierre Paul. b. at Cluny, France, April 4, 1758; d. at Paris, Feb. 16, 1823. French historical and portrait painter. He won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1782, and lived at Rome seven years, returning to Paris in 1789, where his reputation was established in 1794. Among his works are Divine Justice and Vengeance Pursuing Crime (1808; in the Louvre), Rape of Psyche (1812), Demeter in the House of Naeaera, and Interview Between Napoleon I and Francis II after Austerlitz.

Prudnik (prūd'nēk). [German, Neustadt in Oberschlesien.] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Opole, formerly in Upper Silesia, Germany, situated SW of Opole, near the Czechoslovakian border: linen textile, shoe, and leather industries. There are medieval fortifications, and a parish church and convent of the 18th century. The town passed to Poland in 1945. Pop. 17,339 (1939), 10,860 (1946).

Prue (prō). Miss. In William Congreve's play Love for Love, a romping awkward country girl with a well-developed taste for a lover.

Prue and I. Sketches by George William Curtis, published in 1856.

Pruette (prō'ēt). Lorine Livingston. b. at Millersburg, Tenn.—American writer. Among her books are Women and Leisure: A Study of Social Waste (1924), G. Stanley Hall: A Biography of a Mind (1926), and the novels Saint in Ivory (1927) and School for Love (1936).

Prufrock and Other Observations (prō'frok). Collection of poems by T. S. Eliot, published in 1917.

Pruissen (prō'sen). Dutch name of Prussia.

Pruna (prō'nā). Pedro. b. at Barcelona, Spain, May 4, 1904—. Spanish cubist painter and designer, a follower of Picasso. He attended the School of Fine Arts at Barcelona, but was expelled at the age of 12 for revolutionary activities. He then worked for a jeweler, next as an illustrator, and at 14 was an expert picture restorer. The precocious boy went to Madrid and in 1920 to Paris, where he met and came under the influence of Picasso. Among his works are The Spirit of Youth, Reclining Venus, Maternity, Pietà, Nude with Red Hood, and sets for the ballets The Sailors and Pastoral.

Prunières (prūnyer). Henry. b. at Paris, May 21, 1886—. French musicologist, a specialist on the 17th and 18th centuries. He was the founder (1920) and editor of the Revue Musicale, and author of Lully (1910), Monteverdi (1921), and Cavalli et l'Opéra italien (1931).

Pruntnut (prunt'nót). German name of Porrentrup.

Prus (prūs). Boleslaw. [Pseudonym of Aleksander Glowacki.] b. at Hrubieszów, on the Lublin-Volhynia border, 1847; d. 1912. Polish reformer and novelist. He worked in a factory in order to learn conditions among the low-middle laboring class at first hand. His novels include, besides The Doll (1890), which was the forerunner of a whole school of Polish realistic fiction, The Returning Wave (1880), a story of the textile city of Łódź, and The Outpost (1886), based on the age-old struggle for land between German and Pole.

Prusa (prō'sa). Ancient name of Bursa.

Prusse (prūs). French name of Prussia.

Prussia (prush'a). [German and Danish, Preussen; Dutch, Pruisen; French, Prusse.] Former kingdom in N Germany, the most powerful and the largest state in area and population of the former German Empire. It was bounded by the North Sea, Oldenburg, Denmark, Mecklenburg, and the Baltic Sea on the N, Russia on the E, the Austrian Empire, the kingdom of Saxony, the Thuringian states, Bavaria, Hesse, and Alsace-Lorraine on the S, and Luxembourg, Belgium, and the Netherlands on the W. It comprised also the detached territory of Hohenzollern and several small exclaves. Among the islands belonging to Prussia were Rügen, Fehmarn, the North Frisian Islands, and Helgoland. Prussia was one of the principal manufacturing countries of the world. Its exports included, besides manufactured goods, timber, grain, wool, tobacco, and livestock. The kingdom was subdivided into 12 provinces, not including Berlin and Hohenzollern: East Prussia, West Prussia, Pomerania, Posen, Brandenburg, Saxony, Silesia, Hanover, Schleswig-Holstein, Westphalia, Hesse-Nassau, and the Rhine Province. Until the close of World War I the government was a hereditary constitutional monarchy, administered by a king and a Landtag consisting of two chambers: the Herrenhaus, or House of Lords, and the Abgeordnetenhaus of 433 members. About seven eighths of the inhabitants were Germans; the remainder included Poles, with a smaller number of Lithuanians, Danes, Wendes, and Czechs, and a few Wallons. Prussia had its origin in the Nordmark, which grew into the mark of Brandenburg, and which was united with the duchy of Prussia in 1618. The elector Frederick III assumed the title of Frederick I, King of Prussia, in 1701. Neuchâtel with other territory was acquired in 1707, and part of Gelderland in 1713. A large part of Swedish Pomerania was annexed in 1720. Prussia rose (1740-86) to high position among the European powers under Frederick II (Frederick the Great), whose reign was marked by the acquisition of Silesia in 1742 and the Seven Years' War (1756-63). By the first partition of Poland (1772) West Prussia was acquired with the Netze (Noteć) district and Ermeland. Prussia was at war with France (1792-95). By the partitions of Poland in 1793 and 1795 Posen and the Polish territories as far as the Vistula and Bug rivers and the Plica (a tributary of the Vistula) were annexed. Prussia lost to France its territories W of the Rhine in 1801, received in 1803 the bishoprics of Paderborn and Hildesheim, and large parts of Münster, Nordhausen, Goslar, Erfurt, the Eichsfeld, and Mühlhausen; received Hanover in 1805 in return for Ansbach, Cleve, and Neuchâtel; was totally overthrown (at Jena and other battles) by France in 1806; lost in 1807 about half its territories, including its possessions on the left of the Elbe River, Kottbus, and the larger part of its territories acquired from Poland in 1793 and 1795, and was reduced to a second-rate state; and took a prominent part in the overthrow of Napoleon (1814 and 1815). By the Congress of Vienna it recovered nearly all its former possessions (but not Hanover or the Polish territory lost in 1807), also parts of the electorates of Cologne and Trier (Treves), Swedish Pomerania, Berg, Jülich, Westphalia, Siegen, and large parts of Saxony (Wittenberg, Torgau, and others). It entered the Germanic Confederation, and belonged to the Holy Alliance. Revolutionary outbreaks occurred in 1848. It was at war with Denmark in 1848-49, and suppressed insurrections in Saxony, Baden, and elsewhere in 1849. Prussia, Saxony, and Hanover were united in an alliance in 1849. A constitution was adopted in its final form in 1850. Concessions were made to Austria in the Conference of Olmütz (Olomouc) in 1850. Prussia interfered in Schleswig-Holstein in 1851, and renounced its rights to Neuchâtel in 1857. After the accession of William I in 1861 a parliamentary struggle took place between Bismarck and the liberals. The complications resulting from the Danish war of 1864 led in 1866 to the war (in conjunction with Italy) against Austria allied with the south German states, Saxony, and Hanover. By the victory of 1866 Prussia acquired Hanover, Nassau, Frankfurt, Hesse-Kassel, and Schleswig-Holstein, became the first German state, and formed the North German Confederation. During the war between France and Germany in 1870-71 the new German Empire was formed, with the crown hereditary in the Prussian dynasty. After 1871 the history of Prussia generally is that of Germany; the state gradually became subordinate to the nation and during the Hitler regime became part of the unitary German state. After World War II Prussia was formally declared no longer to exist. Capital, Berlin; area, 134,616 sq. mi.

Prussia, East. See East Prussia.

Prussian Saxony (prush'an sak'sō.ni). See Saxony, Province of.

Pruszków (prōsh'kōf). Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, ab. 7 mi. SW of Warsaw. It has an electrical industry. 25,096 (1946).

Prut (prōt). [German, Pruth.] River in W U.S.S.R. It rises in the Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic and forms the boundary between that and Rumania for most of its length, joining the Danube E of Galați. Length, ab. 515 mi.; navigable to near Iași.

Prut, Peace of the. [Also, Treaty of Falczi.] Treaty concluded between Russia and Turkey, July 23, 1711. Peter the Great and his army (which had been blockaded near the Prut) were relieved; Azov and other possessions were ceded to Turkey; and it was stipulated that Charles XII of Sweden, then cut off from Sweden as a refugee in Turkey, should be permitted to return home unmolested.

Pruth (prōt). See Prut.

Prutz (prūts). Hans. b. at Jena, Germany, May 20, 1843; d. at Stuttgart, Germany, Jan. 29, 1929. German historian; son of Robert Eduard Prutz. Among his works were Kulturgeschichte der Kreuzzüge (Cultural History of the Crusades, 1883) and Preussische Geschichte (History of Prussia, 1900-02).

Prutz, Robert Eduard. b. at Stettin, Germany, May 30, 1816; d. there, June 21, 1872. German writer and professor (1849-59) of literature at Halle. He was one of a group of political poets (N. Becker, Max Schneckenburger, G. Herwegh) whose work for democracy in Germany during the 1840's led to their persecution by the government. His most famous contribution to this cause was a satirical comedy, Die politische Wochenstube (1843), for which he was convicted of less majesty, but later pardoned. He wrote poems, notably "Der Rhein" in 1840 (Gelichte, 1841; Herbstrosen, 1864), novels (Das Engelchen, 1851), and many historical and literary treatises (Die politische Poësie der Deutschen, 1845; Geschichte des deutschen Journalismus, 1845; Vorlesungen über die Geschichte des Theaters, 1847). He translated selected comedies of Holberg into German.

Pry (pri), Paul. See Paul Pry.

Pryce (pris), Richard. b. at Boulogne, France, 1864; d. at London, 1942. English novelist and dramatist. Author of An Evil Spirit (1887), The Ugly Story of Miss Wetherby (1889), Just Impediment (1890), Miss Maxwell's Affections (1891), Elementary Jane (1897), Jezabel (1900), The Successor (1901), Christopher (1911), Time and the Woman (1913), David Penstephen (1915), The Statue in the Wood (1918), Romance and Jane Weston (1924), and Morgan's Yard (1932); novels: Little Mrs. Cummin and The Visit (both 1910), plays: Helen with the High Hand (1914), The Old House (1920), Thunder on the Left (1925), and Frolic Wind (1935), plays adapted from novels. With Frederick Fenn, he was coauthor of the plays A Scarlet Flower (1903), Saturday to Monday (1904), Op-o'-Me-Thumb (1904), His Child (1906), and The Love Child (1921).

Prynne (prin), Hester. Principal character in The Scarlet Letter (1850), romance by Nathaniel Hawthorne. She is doomed to wear a scarlet A as a penance for adultery with her pastor.

Prynne, William. b. at Swainswick, near Bath, 1600; d. at London, Oct. 24, 1669. English Presbyterian lawyer, pamphleteer, and statesman. He graduated at Oxford in 1621, entered Lincoln's Inn in the same year, and was afterward called to the bar. In 1633 he published Histriomastix, an attack on actors and the stage. For indirectly criticizing the king and queen in this book he was sentenced (1634) by the Star Chamber to imprisonment, fined 5,000 pounds, expelled from his profession, degraded from his university degree, and set in the pillory, where he lost both his ears. He continued his writing from prison and in 1637 lost the stumps of his ears and was branded with S.L., for "seditious libeler," on both cheeks; he preferred to think of the letters as meaning "stigmata laudis," Laud's stigma, blaming the Anglican prelate for his troubles. In 1640 he was released by the Long Parliament. In 1643 he entered upon the prosecution of Archbishop Laud. His position led him into conflict with Presbyterians and Independents, with Commonwealth advocates and with the army, and with John Milton, whose ideas on divorce he attacked and who answered him in Colasterion. On Nov. 7, 1648, he obtained a seat in the House of Commons. He at once took the part of the king, and was included in Pride's Purge (Dec. 6, 1648). He was arrested by John Bradshaw June 30, 1650, and imprisoned. He was released Feb. 18, 1653. He was appointed by Charles II. keeper of the records in the Tower. In 1666-70 he published the Vindication of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction of the English Kings.

Pryor (pr'or), Roger Atkinson. b. near Petersburg, Va., July 19, 1828; d. at New York, March 14, 1919. American jurist. He was special minister to Greece under President Franklin Pierce in 1855, and was elected (1859) to Congress. He entered the Confederate service as a colonel in 1861 and was brevetted brigadier general in 1863, but later resigned his commission and reentered the service as a private soldier. He was a member of the Confederate congress in 1862. In 1865 he began the practice of law at New York, and in 1890 was appointed judge of the court of common pleas, to which office he was elected in 1891 for 14 years. By the revised constitution of 1894 the court of common pleas was abolished, and for the remainder of his term after Jan. 1, 1896, he was a justice of the supreme court of New York.

Pryor Creek. [Also, Pryor.] City in NE Oklahoma, county seat of Mayes County, in an irrigated agricultural area. There are mineral springs nearby. 4,486 (1950).

Prypec (pri pech). Polish name of the Pripet.

Przemyski (pshe'mish'el). City in S Poland, in the województwo (province) of Rzeszów, situated on the San River ab. 54 mi. W of Lvov, U.S.S.R., in the vicinity of the Russian border. It is located at the center of the former Austrian crownland of Galicia, near the present border between the U.S.S.R. and Poland and near the ethnic and linguistic frontier between Poles and Ruthenians (Ukrainians). In World War I, the Russians laid siege to the city from September to October, 1915, when the Austrian commander surrendered. The Germans and Austrians reconquered the city on June 3, 1915. In World War II, the Germans occupied it on Sept. 15, 1939. The population has declined owing to deportation during World War II of the Jewish population, formerly comprising 40 percent of the total. 51,380 (1931), 36,841 (1946).

Przerwa-Tetmajer (pshe'r'vā.tet.mā'yer), Kazimierz. See Tetmajer, Kazimierz.

Przesmycki (pshe'smits'kē), Zenon. b. 1861—. Polish critic and man of letters.

Przhëvskiy (për'zhe.väl'ski), Nikolay Mikhailovich. [Also, Nikolai Mikhailovich Przhevsky.] b. in the government of Smolensk, Russia, March 31, 1839; d. at Karakol (now Przhëvsk, in his honor), in Central Asia, Nov. 1, 1888. Russian explorer. He entered the military academy at St. Petersburg in 1860, taught history and geography in the military school at Warsaw (1864-66), and in 1867 was transferred to Irkutsk. From here he explored the region of the Ussuri River (1867-69), collecting botanical and ethnological information concerning SE Siberia and N Manchuria. He traveled in Mongolia and China (1876-73), in East Turkistan and Tibet (1876-77 and 1879-80), and in Mongolia and Tibet (1883-85). Besides geographical knowledge of regions hitherto unexplored, he secured large and valuable collections of plants and animals. Among his discoveries were the wild camel and an early horse, known as Przhëvsky's horse. In September, 1888, he set out on another expedition to Tibet, but died beside the lake Issyk Kūl, at a town, Karakol, whose name was afterward (1889) changed by the Russian government to Przhëvsk in honor of the explorer. He published the results of his travels in several works in the Russian language, two of which have appeared in English under the titles Mongolia, the Tangut Country, and the Solitudes of Northern Tibet (1876) and From Kufu across the Tian-Shan to Lob-nor (1879).

Przibram (për'zhë'brām). See Přibram.

Przybyszewski (pshe'bi.shef'skē), Stanisław. b. at Łojewo, in Kujawy, Poland, 1868; d. 1927. Polish writer. He was influenced powerfully by the Scandinavians, especially Strindberg, whose disciple he became. In his early works, written in German (Talennesse, 1893, and Satan-skinder, 1897), he outlined a new philosophy, which exalted feeling at the expense of reason. His period of greatest influence was two years (1899-1900) at Kraków as editor of the journal of the neoromanticists. His works include the novel Homo Sapiens (1898; Eng. trans., 1915), and the dramas For Happiness (1900; Eng. trans., 1912) and Snow (1903; Eng. trans., 1920).

Przyjaciel (pshe'yā'chel). A pseudonym of Nowaczyński, Adolf.

Psalm of Life, A. Didactic poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, published in Voices of the Night (1839).

Psalms. [Also, The Book of Psalms; sometimes called Psalter.] Book of the Old Testament which contains 150 psalms and hymns. The authorship of a large number of the psalms is ascribed traditionally to David. Many of them, however, are supposed to date from the time of the exile or later. The name "Psalter" is usually restricted to those versions or of compends from which are arranged especially for the services of the church. The translation of the Psalter in the Book of Common Prayer is not that of the Authorized Version, but that of the earlier version of Coverdale's Bible.

Psamtik I (sam'tik). [Also: Psametik (sam'et'ik); Greek, Psammethichos (sa.met'i.kos); Latin, Psammethichus (sa.met'i.kus).] Reigned 663-609 B.C. Egyptian king, the founder of the XXVth dynasty. Originally an Assyrian puppet ruler, he freed Egypt from Assyrian rule, opened the country to the Greeks, and reunited the kingdom.

Psamtik III. [Also: Psametik; Greek, Psammethichos; Latin, Psammethichus.] King of Egypt (525 B.C.), son of Ahmose II. He was defeated at Pelusium by Cambyses III (525 B.C.), and Egypt became a Persian province.

Psellus (sē'lus), Michael. [Called "Pselus the Elder."] b. in Andros, Greece. Byzantine author who lived in the second half of the 9th century; his works are all lost.

Psellus, Michael Constantine. [Called "Pselus the Younger."] b. at Constantinople, 1020; d. after 1105. Byzantine philosopher and author. He became powerful during the reign of Constantine IX and retained his position during the reigns of Isaac I and Constantine X. On the death of the latter, his pupil Michael VII came to the throne and Psellus acted as his prime minister. Among his numerous works on politics, history, science, music, theology, and other fields is Opus in quatuor mathematicas disciplinas—arithmetica, musica, geometria, et astronomia (1532).

Pseudo-Ambrosius (sō'dō.am.brō'zhus). See Ambroster.

Pseudodoxia Epidemica, or an Enquiry into Vulgar Errors (sō'dō.dok'si.a.epi.dem'i.kā). Often known as Vulgar Errors. Work by Sir Thomas Browne, published in 1646.

Pseudo-Isidorian Decretals (sō'dō.i.zi.dō'ri.ān). See False Decretals.

Pseudo-Smerdis (sō'dō.smēr'dis). See Smerdis, Pseudo-.

Psiloriti (psil.ō.rē'tē). Modern name of Ida, Mount.

Pskov (pskōf). Former guberniya (government) of Russia, surrounded by the governments of St. Petersburg, Novgorod, Tver, Smolensk, Vitebsk, and Livonia; now in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, incorporated in the Leningrad oblast (region).

Pskov. [Also, Piskov.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 175 mi. SW of Leningrad, situated on the Velikaya River; leather and shoe, agricultural machinery, woodworking, and food-processing industries. In the Middle Ages it was independent, sustaining close relations with Novgorod, carried on an extensive trade with the towns of the Hanseatic League, and successfully resisted the attacks of the Livonian Knights. It was conquered by Moscow in 1510. Pop. 59,898 (1939).

Pskov, Lake. [Estonian, Pihkva.] Lake in the U.S.S.R., the SE portion of Lake Peipus, on the border between Estonia and the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. Length, ab. 31 mi.

Psyche (sī'kē). In Greek mythology, a mortal maiden, beloved by Eros, the god of love, who after long tribulation and suffering was accorded her place among the gods as the equal of her god consort. Psyche as personification of the soul came into Greek mythology in the 4th–5th centuries B.C. Psyche as soul symbolized by a butterfly first appeared in the 5th century A.C. Before this the soul was conceived of and depicted either as a bird or as the spirit-double of the individual. For the myth, see Cupid and Psyche.

Psyche. Religious poem in 24 cantos, by Joseph Beaumont, published in 1648.

Psyche. Tragicomedy by Molière, Pierre Corneille, and Philippe Quinault, produced in 1670.

Psyche. Sixteenth asteroid, discovered by De Gasparis at Naples, March 17, 1852.

Psychologie des foules (psé.ko.lo.zhê dâ fôl), La. Most popular and theoretically significant work (1895, translated as The Crowd, 1922) by Gustave Le Bon. It pointed to a world that was becoming increasingly dominated by crowds. The author found that generically these collectivities exhibited the loss of individual consciousness and the emergence of an irresponsible, animal-like, collective crowd mind.

Pszczyna (pshe'i'nâ). [German, Pless.] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Katowice, formerly in Upper Silesia, Germany, ab. 15 mi. SE of Rybnik. It was formerly the seat of a noble family which was, prior to World War I, among the wealthiest families in Germany because of ownership of landed estates and coal-mining interests in both Upper and Lower Silesia; most of the property was located on Polish territory after the Upper Silesian plebiscite of 1921; it has since been confiscated. 9,731 (1946).

Ptah (ptâ). In Egyptian mythology, the chief god and creator, though not one of the oldest. He was the creative force (not solar), the divine builder, the vivifying intellectual power, honored especially at Memphis. He was represented as an idol in human form, holding the divine scepter including the ankh, which was the symbol of life.

Pteria (tir'i.a). In ancient geography, a place in Car. padoesia, Asia Minor; the modern Boğazkale, Turkey. It was the scene of a battle between Cyrus the Great and Croesus c.554 B.C.

P. T. Letters. Series of letters published by Alexander Pope.

Ptolemais (tol.e.mâ'is). In ancient geography, a city in Cyrenaica, W. of Cyrene.

Ptolemais. [Also, Ptolemais Theron (thê'ron).] In ancient geography, a town on the W coast of the Red Sea, ab. lat. 18° N.

Ptolemais. New Testament name of Acre, Palestine.

Ptolemy (tol'e.mi). [Full Latin name, Claudius Ptolemaeus.] b. at Alexandria; flourished in the first half of the 2nd century A.D. Alexandrian astronomer, geographer, and mathematician. His influence extended to the seventeenth century and was second only to that of Aristotle. His astronomic system is strictly geocentric, the sun, planets, stars, and heavens revolving about the earth, but, though it requires an intricate system to support his theory, the theory explains the phenomena Ptolemy knew; the Copernican system superseded it (16th and 17th centuries) because it was simpler, not because the Ptolemaic system was proved false. He elaborated trigonometry to accommodate astronomy as a mathematical discipline, and catalogued 1,025 stars. In his Geographical Treatise he first technically used the terms "parallel" and "meridian." He adopted Posidonius's wrong estimate of the size of the earth; his overestimate in the extent in longitude of Eurasia was one of the factors of Columbus's discovery. His recorded observations (at Canopus) extended from 127 to 151 A.D.

Ptolemy I (of Egypt). [Surnamed Soter, meaning "Savior" or "Preserver," and Lagî, "son of Lagus"; Latin, Ptolemaeus (tol.e.mâ'us).] b. c.367 B.C.; d. 285 B.C. King of Egypt (305–285), founder of the Greek dynasty in that country. He was the alleged son of Lagus, a Macedonian of ignoble birth, and Arsinoë; but, as Arsinoë had been the concubine of Philip II of Macedon, he was commonly supposed by his contemporaries to be the son of that monarch. He rose to a high command in the army under Alexander the Great, and in the distribution of the provinces on the latter's death in 323 obtained the government of Egypt. He formed an alliance with Antipater against Perdiccas, the regent in Asia, who invaded Egypt in 321 but was murdered by his own troops. In the involved struggles of the Diadochi (the "successors" of Alexander) he lost part of Syria. He afterward concluded an alliance with Cassander, Seleucus, and Lysimachus against Antigonus, who fell in the battle of Ipsus in 301. He assumed the title of king in 306. In 304 his efficient support of the Rhodians enabled the latter to repel a formidable attack by Demetrius, whence he received the surname Soter or Preserver. During his reign Alexandria became the Egyptian capital; the library was founded by him and he made the city a place where scholars could work. He abdicated in favor of his son Ptolemy II in 285.

Ptolemy II (of Egypt). [Surnamed Philadelphus; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. in the island of Cos, 309 B.C.; d. 247 B.C. King of Egypt (285–246); son of Ptolemy I. He annexed Phoenicia and Coele-Syria, encouraged commerce, literature, science, and art, and raised the Alexandrian Museum and Library, founded by his father, to importance. He completed the Pharos, and is credited with authorizing the Bible translation known as the Septuagint and the Egyptian history of Manetho.

Ptolemy III (of Egypt). [Surnamed Euergetes, meaning "Benefactor"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. c.282 B.C.; d. 222 B.C. King of Egypt (246–221); son of Ptolemy II, whom he succeeded in 247. To avenge the murder of his sister Berenice in a dynastic intrigue, he invaded (c.245) Syria and captured Babylon, but was recalled in 243 by a revolt in Egypt. He expanded the Egyptian fleet and gained control of the eastern Mediterranean, and further extended his domain by his marriage to Berenice of Cyrene.

Ptolemy IV (of Egypt). [Surnamed Philopator, meaning "Father-Loving"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. c.244 B.C.; d. 203 B.C. King of Egypt (221–203 B.C.); son of Ptolemy III. He defeated Antiochus the Great in 217, but in general he was an ineffective ruler; he held his throne by murdering several near relatives.

Ptolemy V (of Egypt). [Surnamed Epiphanes, meaning "Illustrious"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. c.210 B.C.; d. 181 B.C. King of Egypt (203–181 B.C.); son of Ptolemy IV. His dominions were overrun by Antiochus III, who had agreed to divide the Egyptian possessions with Philip V of Macedon, and saved only by the interference of Rome. He married Cleopatra, daughter of Antiochus, in the winter of 193–192, in accordance with a treaty of peace concluded with Antiochus some years previously. The Rosetta Stone commemorates his assumption of his majority in 196.

Ptolemy VI (of Egypt). [Surnamed Philometor, meaning "Mother-Loving"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. c.186 B.C.; d. 145 B.C. King of Egypt (181–145); son of Ptolemy V. The early years of his reign were a regency under his mother. He was captured during an invasion of Egypt by Antiochus IV, King of Syria, in 170, whereupon his younger brother Ptolemy VII proclaimed himself king. He was presently released by Antiochus, and for a time reigned conjointly with his brother. Expelled by his brother, he sought relief in person at Rome in 164, and was reinstated at Alexandria, his brother being forced to retire to Cyrene, which he was allowed to hold as a separate kingdom. He supported Demetrius II in the struggle in Syria against Alexander Balas and was killed in the battle near Antioch that saw Demetrius's final triumph.

Ptolemy VII (of Egypt). [Surnamed Euergetes (and called Ptolemy Euergetes II) or Physcon, meaning "Potbelly"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] b. c.184 B.C.; d. 116 B.C. King of Egypt (170–116). He was a younger brother of Ptolemy VI, on whose death in 145 he usurped the throne, putting to death the legitimate heir and marrying the widowed queen, his sister. (For history previous to this event, see Ptolemy VI.) He was expelled from Alexandria by the populace, who supported his wife, in 130, but recovered his capital in 127. His very evil reputation is probably due to his usurpation of the throne, the murder of the prince who would have been Ptolemy VII, and his later murder of his son by his sister, who would have succeeded him. He married (c.130) his wife's daughter by her first husband, Ptolemy VI.

Ptolemy VIII (of Egypt). [Surnamed Lathyrus or Soter, meaning "Savior," "Preserver"; called also Ptolemy Soter II; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] d. 81 B.C. King of Egypt (116-81); son of Ptolemy VII, on whose death in 116 he ascended the throne jointly with his mother, Cleopatra. He was in 108 expelled from Egypt by Cleopatra. He succeeded, however, in maintaining himself in Cyprus, which he held as an independent kingdom, until the death of his mother in 88, when he was recalled by the Alexandrians, who had in the meantime expelled his brother, who had reigned as Ptolemy IX.

Ptolemy IX (of Egypt). [Called Ptolemy Alexander I; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] d. 88 B.C. King of Egypt (108-88); brother of Ptolemy VIII. He was made joint ruler with his brother, and after his expulsion (108) ruled alone. After his brother's death, he was attacked and deposed by Ptolemy VIII, and was killed fighting against his brother in Cyprus.

Ptolemy X (of Egypt). [Called Ptolemy Alexander II; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] d. 80 B.C. King of Egypt (80 B.C.); son of Ptolemy IX. He ruled after the death of his uncle, Ptolemy VIII, having married the widow of his predecessor through the offices of the Roman Sulla. Ptolemy very shortly thereafter killed her and was murdered himself by an outraged mob.

Ptolemy XI (of Egypt). [Surnamed Neos Dionysus or Auletes, meaning "Flute-Player"; Latin, Ptolemaeus.] d. 51 B.C. King of Egypt (80-51); illegitimate son of Ptolemy VIII. He succeeded to the throne on the extinction of the legitimate line of the Ptolemies in 80 B.C. He was expelled by the populace in 58, but was restored by the Romans in 55.

Ptolemy XII (of Egypt). [Latin, Ptolemaeus.] d. 47 B.C. King of Egypt (51-47); son of Ptolemy XI. He ascended the throne jointly with his sister Cleopatra, whom he expelled in 49. The reinstatement of Cleopatra by Caesar in 48 gave rise to war. Ptolemy was defeated on the Nile, and was drowned in the flight.

Ptolemy XIII (of Egypt). d. 44 B.C. King of Egypt (47-44); brother of Cleopatra. For political reasons Julius Caesar had Cleopatra marry her adolescent younger brother, but she had him killed in order that her son by Caesar, Caesarion, might reign as Ptolemy XIV.

Ptolemy (of Mauretania). d. 40 A.D. King of Mauretania and last of the Ptolemaic line; son of Juba II and grandson of Antony and Cleopatra. He was summoned to Rome and put to death by Caligula (40 A.D.), whose cupidity had been excited by his great wealth.

Ptuj (ptō'j). [German, Pettau.] Town in NW Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Slovenia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dravska, situated on the Drava River ab. 15 mi. SE of Maribor. It is a station on the railroad line from Ljubljana to Budapest. It has a castle, a Franciscan monastery, and a museum of Roman antiquities. Wine is manufactured in the vicinity. There is a monument celebrating a Roman victory under Septimus Severus. Ptuj belonged to Salzburg in the Middle Ages, came under Hapsburg rule in 1555, was later incorporated into Styria, and was incorporated into Yugoslavia in 1919. Pop. 7,906 (1948).

Puasa (pō.ā'sā). Name given in Java to Ramadan, the Moslem month of fasting.

Public Faces. Novel by Harold Nicolson, published in 1932.

Publicity Acts. [Called "Federal Blue Sky Laws."] Two separate pieces of legislation passed by the U.S. Congress in 1903 and 1909 in a move to restrain malpractices involved in overcapitalization, stock inflation, and the sale of fraudulent securities. The act of 1903 established a Bureau of Corporations. The bill passed in 1909 imposed controls on securities transactions. These two laws introduced the principle of federal regulation and control of securities.

Publicola (pub.lik'ō.lā). See also Valerius, Publius.

Publicola. Pseudonym of Chaussard, Pierre Jean Baptiste.

Public Utility Holding Company Act. [Also known as the Wheeler-Rayburn Act.] Act passed by the U.S. Congress in 1935 which is administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), whose jurisdiction covers most U.S. gas and electric utility holding companies. The act, popularly known as the "death sentence" clause, comprises the first part of the Public Utility Act of 1935. The act provided for federal regulation of securities issued by such companies and imposed controls over their assets and over service contracts negotiated between the parent unit and its subsidiaries.

Public Works Administration. [Called the PWA.] U.S. government agency established by the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933 (NIRA) for the purpose of administering funds for a large-scale construction program designed to stimulate employment and to aid state and municipal governments. Among the many types of works projects authorized by the PWA were flood and soil erosion control, low-cost housing, public highway and parkway construction, and river and harbor improvements. Its official termination was begun in June, 1943.

Publiian Laws (pub.li'ian). In Roman history: 1. A law passed c471 B.C., through the efforts of the tribune Publius Volero. It transferred the election of tribunes from the centuries to the comitia tributa, and its passage marked the concession of the right of initiating legislation to the plebeians. 2. Laws proposed by Publius Philo c339 B.C. They provided that one censor must be a plebeian; the plebeians (laws passed by the comitia tributa) should apply to all citizens; and that laws presented to the centuries should be previously approved by the curiae.

Publius Aelius Hadrianus (pub'li.us ē'li.us hā.dri.ā'nus). Full Latin name of Hadrian.

Publius Cornelius Dolabella (kōr.nē'l'yus dol.ā.bel'ā). See Dolabella, Publius Cornelius.

Publius Ovidius Naso (ō.vi'd'i.us nā'sō). Full Latin name of Ovid.

Puca-uca (pō'ka.ū'mā). See Iquitos.

Puccini (pūt.chē'nē), Giacomo. [Full name, Giacomo Antonio Domenico Michele Secondo Maria Puccini.] b. at Lucca, Italy, June 22, 1858; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 29, 1924. Italian operatic composer, a pupil of Amilcare Ponchielli at the Milan Conservatory. His most important operas are Manon Lescaut (1893), La Bohème (1896), Tosca (1900), and Madame Butterfly (1904; revised 1905). La Fanciulla del West (The Girl of the Golden West) was produced in 1910. His other works include Il Taboraro (1918), Gianni Schicchi (1918), and Turandot (1926). He was considered one of the most talented and original of his school of Italian composers; his work is marked by constant melodic invention and is influenced to some extent by Oriental music.

Pucelle (pū.sēl), La. Epic by Jean Chapelain. Half of it was published in 1656, after being heralded for 20 years. It was ridiculed, and the other half was not printed.

Pucelle, La. Burlesque epic by Voltaire, published in 1762. He denied the authorship for some years.

"Pucelle, La." French epithet of Joan of Arc.

Puck (puk). [Also, Robin Goodfellow.] Mischievous household spirit of English folklore. Shakespeare introduces him in the Midsummer Night's Dream as the jester to King Oberon, and he plays many pranks in the wood near Athens. In Faust Goethe introduces him as a pervading, whimsical, perverse element rather than as an individual.

Puck. Weekly magazine (1877-1918) of humor and satire. Editors included Henry Cuyler Bunner, Harry Leon Wilson, and John Kendrick Bangs. Puck consistently attacked political corruption as exemplified by Tammany and other organized interests.

Pückler-Muskau (pük'ler.mūs'kou), Prince Hermann Ludwig Heinrich von. b. at Muskau, in Silesia, Oct. 30, 1785; d. at Branitz, Brandenburg, Germany, Feb. 4, 1871. German writer of travels.

Pudding (pūd'ing), Jack. Low-comedy character in English folk comedy. Like the parallel character in various European folk comedy, he is named for a hearty dish (he corresponds to the Dutch Pieckelhering, German Hanswurst, and others).

Pudd'nhead Wilson (pūd'n.ēd.hēd.wil'son), The Tragedy of. Novel (1894) by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain.

Pudicheri (pō.di.chā'ri). Indian name of Pondichéry.

Pudovkin (pō.dōf'kin), Vsevolod Ilarionovich. b. 1893; d. 1953. Russian motion-picture director. A theoretician, innovator, and a master of technique, he directed such notable films as The Mechanism of the Brain, Chess Fever, Storm Over Asia, and General Suworov. He was the author of books which have been translated into English as Film Technique (1933) and Film Acting (1935), in which he explored and elucidated the unique features of the motion picture as an art form.

Pudsey (pud'zi, -si). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 3 mi. E of Bradford, ab. 190 mi. N of London by rail. The town has manufactures of worsteds, 30,276 (1951).

Pudukkottai (pū.dū.k.kōt'tī). [Also: Pudukkottaj, Pudukota (pū.dū.kō'ta), Tondiman.] Former state in the Union of India, ab. 210 mi. SW of the city of Madras, now incorporated into Trichinopoly district of the state of Madras: peanuts, millet, coffee, and indigo. Area, ab. 1,185 sq. mi.; pop. 438,348 (1941).

Puebla (pwe'blā). State in S central Mexico, surrounded by the states of Veracruz, Oaxaca, Guerrero, Morelos, México, Tlaxcala, and Hidalgo. Capital, Puebla; area, 13,125 sq. mi.; pop. 1,595,920 (1950).

Puebla. [Full name, Puebla de Zaragoza (dā sā.rā.gō'sā'ti); formerly also La Puebla de los Angeles.] City in S central Mexico, capital of Puebla state, ab. 76 mi. SE of Mexico City. It has thriving trade, and manufactures include textiles, pottery, glass, tobacco products, and shoes. The city contains a cathedral and many religious establishments. It was founded in 1532. In the period 1855-58 it was the scene of several revolts by partisans of the church party, and was twice besieged and taken by President Comonfort. On May 5, 1862, the French were repulsed in an attack on the place, but it was taken by the French Marshal Elie Forey in 1863. Its old name was derived from the pious tradition that, at the time of the Spanish conquest, visions of angel hosts were seen in the heavens above its site. 138,491 (1940), 229,976 (1950).

Puebla, La. See La Puebla.

Puebla de Cazalla (dā kā.tā'lyā), La. See La Puebla de Cazalla.

Pueblo (pweb'lō). Second of the two divisions of the Anasazi pattern of North American Indian culture, so called because it is characterized by communal dwellings of masonry or adobe consisting of a series of rooms, often more than one story high. Unlike the Basket Maker Indians, who preceded them, the Pueblo Indians were good agriculturalists, made painted pottery, and practiced elaborate ceremonies in specially built structures known as kivas. They practiced hunting but no fishing because water was sacred. They raised cotton and knew weaving, and after the introduction of sheep made woolen as well as cotton textiles. Pueblo Indians have an elaborate and rich mythology, colorful and complicated ritual, and an elaborate ceremonialism. The kachinas still dance for fertility and cure; the snake dance is still performed to bring rain. There are four distinct linguistic stocks among the Pueblo: Tanoan, Keresan, Hopi, and Zuni. Pueblo culture first made its appearance c. 6700 A.D. and continues in existence today in the plateau region of the American Southwest, although its distribution is much more restricted than in prehistoric times, when Pueblo Indians were to be found as far north as Salt Lake City, east almost to Texas, and south beyond the Mexican border.

Pueblo (pū.eb'lō). City in C Colorado, capital of Pueblo County, on the Arkansas River ab. 106 mi. S of Denver; manufactures of iron, steel, machinery, and lead. 63,685 (1950).

Pueblo Bonito (pweb'lō bō.nē'tō). Largest of all Pueblo Indian ruins, in Chaco Canyon, N.M., occupied during the Great Pueblo period (919-1127 A.D.).

Pueblo Nuevo de Nuestra Señora de la Paz (pwe'blō nwā'no dā nwe's'trā sā.nyō'rā dā lā pās'). Original Spanish name of La Paz, Bolivia.

Puech (pū.esh), Aimé. b. at Béziers, France, 1860—. French Greek scholar. Author of Histoire de la littérature grecque chrétienne depuis les origines jusqu'à la fin du IV^e siècle (History of Greek Christian Literature from its Beginnings to the End of the IVth Century, 1928-30).

Puech, Denys Pierre. b. at Gavernac, France, 1854; d. 1942. French sculptor and medalist. He won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1884, and is best known for his monuments to Leconte de Lisle, King Edward VII, and Mussolini. Among his allegorical and mythological subjects are the figure of Oedipus as a child and André Chénier's Muse.

Puelche (pwe'chā). [Also, Pampas.] Generic term for various small groups of South American Indians formerly ranging the pampas of Argentina. They are now absorbed in various Araucanian and Tehuelchean groups. Many of the Gauchos of Argentina are descended in part from the Puelche, who eagerly adopted the horse after its introduction into South America and soon became expert horsemen. Their languages formed an independent family.

Puender (pūn'dér), Hermann. b. at Trier, Germany, April 1, 1888—. German government official. He served (1926-32) in the German reichschancellery under chancellors Marx, Müller, and Brüning. He was demoted in 1933, and arrested after the abortive plot to assassinate Hitler in July, 1944. Puender founded, after World War II, the Christian Democratic Union in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia and was mayor of Cologne from 1946 to 1948. He was appointed chairman of the German executive committee in the bizonal administration.

Puente Alto (pwen'tā āl'tō). City in C Chile, in Santiago province, 10,145 (1940).

Puenteareas (pwen.tā.ā'rā.ās). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, on the Tea River, a tributary of the Miño River, ab. 18 mi. SE of Pontevedra. 14,634 (1940).

Puente de Calderón (pwen'tā dā kāl.dā.rōn'). Spanish name of Calderón Bridge.

Puente-Genil (pwen'tā.nā.nē'l'). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, ab. 35 mi. S of Córdoba: agricultural trade; stone and lime quarries; soap, leather, and pottery manufactures; flour mills. 27,552 (1940).

Puerta de Banes (pwer'tā dā bā'nās). See Banes.

Puerto Ayacucho (pwer'tō ā.yā.kō'chō). City in S Venezuela, capital of Amazonas territory. 2,928 (1950).

Puerto Barrios (bār'ryōs). City in E Guatemala, capital of Izabal department, on an arm of the Gulf of Honduras: rail terminus and import center. 15,659 (1950).

Puerto Bello (bā'yō). See Portobello.

Puerto Caballos (kā.nā'yōs). See Puerto Cortés.

Puerto Cabello (kā.nā'yō). City in N Venezuela, in Carabobo state, on the Caribbean Sea: export center for coffee, copra, hides and cacao. It is noted for its fine harbor. Pop., including suburbs, 34,413 (1950).

Puerto Carreña (kā.rā.nyō). City in E Colombia, capital of Vichada commissary, at the Venezuelan border. 392 (1938).

Puerto Ceiba (sā'nā). See La Ceiba.

Puerto Colombia (kō.lōm'byā). [Also: Savanilla, Sabanilla.] Town on the N coast of Colombia, in Atlántico department; bathing resort. Formerly a large part of the commerce of Colombia passed through it to and from Baranquilla on the Magdalena River. 4,896 (1938).

Puerto Cortés (kōr.tās'). [Also: Port Cortez, Puerto Caballos.] City in NW Honduras, in Cortés department, on the Bay of Honduras ab. 100 mi. N of Comayagua; railway terminus. 7,019 (1940).

Puerto de España (dā es.pā'nyā). Spanish name of Port-of-Spain, Trinidad.

Puerto de la Cruz (dā lā krōth'). [Also, Puerto de Orotava (dā ō.rō.tā'sā).] Town in the Canary Islands, in the Spanish province of Santa Cruz de Tenerife, situated on the N shore of the island of Tenerife ab. 3 mi. NW of Orotava, of which it is the port. 10,695 (1940).

Puerto de Santa María (dā sán'tā mā.rē'ā). [Also, El Puerto.] Town in S Spain, in the province of Cádiz, on the Bay of Cádiz, ab. 8 mi. NE of Cádiz. It has a harbor and fisheries, exports sherry wines, and imports machinery and timber. There are large wine cellars, distilleries, soap and glass manufactures, and flour mills. The popular seaside resort of Playa de la Puntilla is nearby. 29,197 (1940).

Puerto Deseado (dā.sā.ā'thō). Seaport in SE Argentina, on the Atlantic coast. It is a rail terminus, and exports wool, hides, and meat. 3,312 (1947).

Puerto Limón (lā.mār'). See Cobjia, Chile.

Puerto Lamar (lē.mōn'). See Limón, town.

Puertollano (pwer.tō.lyā'nō). Town in C Spain, in the province of Ciudad Real, situated in the Sierra Morena ab. 25 mi. SW of Ciudad Real: coal, iron, lead, and manganese mines, 21,676 (1940).

Puerto Madryn (pwer.tō mā'thryn). Seaport in SE Argentina, in Chubut territory: rail terminus, and shipping point for wool, meat, and fish, 3,441 (1947).

Puerto Maldonado (māl.dō.nā'thō). [Also, Maldonado.] City in SE Peru, capital of Madre de Dios department, Pop. ab. 7,500 (1940).

Puerto México (me'hē.kō). Former name of Coatzacoalcas.

Puerto Montt (mōnt'). Seaport and rail center in SW Chile, on the Gulf of Ancud, capital of Llanquihue province: ships wool, lumber, and wheat. It has a tourist trade, 21,360 (1940).

Puerto Palos (pā'lōs). See Palos de la Frontera.

Puerto Plata (plā'tā). See also San Felipe de Puerto Plata.

Puerto Plata. Province in N Dominican Republic. Capital, San Felipe de Puerto Plata; area, 809 sq. mi.; pop. 131,179 (1950).

Puerto Princesa (prēn.sā'sā). Town in SW Philippine Islands, the capital of Palawan province, situated on the E coast of Palawan island, 3,326 (1948).

Puerto Principe (prēn.sē.pā). A former name of Camagüey.

Puerto Real (rā.āl'). [Latin, Portus Gaditanus.] Town in S Spain, in the province of Cádiz, situated on the Bay of Cádiz ab. 6 mi. E of Cádiz: seaport; fisheries; salt works. The fishing village of El Trocadero, with the Matagorda shippards, is nearby. The name of Puerto Real is derived from the fact that Ferdinand and Isabella of Castile rebuilt it in 1488. Pop. 14,854 (1940).

Puerto Rico (pwer.tō rē'kō). [Official name, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico; official Spanish name, Estado Libre Asociado de Puerto Rico; former spelling, Porto Rico.] Easternmost island of the Greater Antilles, and fourth largest of the West Indies, forming, with the adjacent islands of Vieques, Culebra, Mona, and Muertos and islets, a free overseas commonwealth of the U.S. Executive power is vested in a governor, elected for a term of four years by popular vote, and in his executive council. The legislature consists of a senate of 19 members and a house of representatives, of 39 members. Formerly a territorial possession of the U.S., Puerto Rico became a commonwealth in 1952 with the adoption of its own constitution; it is still represented in the U.S. Congress by a resident commissioner, however, and may not enact laws contrary to the U.S. Constitution. Capital, San Juan; area of commonwealth, 3,435 sq. mi.; of island, ab. 3,350 sq. mi.; pop. of commonwealth, 2,210,703 (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Most of Puerto Rico is mountainous or hilly; the plains consist of several relatively narrow coastal lowlands, and some interior valleys. The flat N coastal lowland extending from near Arecibo E nearly to the NE corner of the island is the most intensively cultivated and most densely populated portion of Puerto Rico, and has more than half of the total urban population of the island. The interior mountains reach an elevation of ab. 4,400 ft.; though not extremely high, they are very rough and dissected. Puerto Rico has a hot tropical climate, somewhat cooler in the mountains; the humidity varies greatly from extremely wet conditions in the mountains to rather dry conditions in the region bordering the S coast of the island, where irrigation is extensively used.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Agriculture in Puerto Rico is of two sharply contrasting types: commercial plantation agriculture, largely devoted to sugar cane, produced on relatively large units mostly owned or controlled by sugar corporations, and the small farm agriculture, growing chiefly subsistence crops of yams and tropical tubers, beans, and other vegetables, and also raising some livestock and commercial crops such as tobacco, coffee, pineapples, cotton, and fruits and vegetables for market. There is a large import of foodstuffs; sugar, tobacco, and rum are the chief products exported to the U.S. Manufacturing industries in Puerto Rico have hitherto largely been directly related to the products of agriculture: sugar processing, rum distilling, pineapple canning, and cigar manufacture, for example. In 1942, however, the plan of "Operation Bootstrap" was begun during the administration of Rexford G. Tugwell, then governor of Puerto Rico, and has been underway since; industries are expanding rapidly, and though many of these are primarily devoted to the production of goods for home consumption (including textiles, shoes, cement, and machinery), there are also industries which are primarily oriented to export to the U.S. market. A large amount of U.S. investment capital has been attracted to Puerto Rico by the special features of "Operation Bootstrap" (tax-exemption for a term of years; favorable labor and market conditions). About 94 percent of the foreign trade of Puerto Rico was with the U.S. in 1949; shipping and air services are excellent.

History. The island of Puerto Rico (called Borinquén by the native Indian inhabitants) was discovered by Columbus in 1493. According to some accounts he named it San Juan, which name was in common use until the 18th century. Subsequently the island was also known as San Juan de Puerto Rico, from its capital. Spanish colonization began in 1505; the Indian population was rebellious and was practically exterminated by the Spaniards and by disease; Negro labor was imported from Africa. The island remained a Spanish colony until the Spanish-American War; it was occupied by U.S. troops, and formally ceded by Spain to the U.S. on Dec. 10, 1898. The inhabitants received U.S. citizenship in 1917, and self-rule in 1948; in 1952 a new constitution was adopted and Puerto Rico became the first overseas commonwealth of the U.S.

Culture and Population. Puerto Rico remains predominantly Spanish in culture and language, and Roman Catholic in religion. The majority of the population are of European descent (chiefly Spanish), though there is a large mulatto and Negro minority. Poverty and unemployment in Puerto Rico have been the stimulus to a large migration to the U.S., which has particularly concentrated in New York City since the 1930's. There is a university, at Río Piedras. The first Commonwealth Day was celebrated on July 25, 1952, when Puerto Rico officially adopted its new flag.

Puertoviejo (pwer.tō.vye'hō). See Portoviejo.

Pueyrredón (pwa.rā.thōn'). Juan Martín de. b. 1777; d. near Buenos Aires, 1850. Argentine general and politician. He was supreme director or president of the United Provinces of La Plata from July, 1816, to June, 1819, when he resigned. It was owing to his support of José de San Martín that Chile was conquered (1817) by the patriots.

Pufendorf (pō'fen.dōrf), Baron Samuel von. b. near Chemnitz, Germany, Jan. 8, 1657; d. at Berlin, Oct. 26, 1694. German jurist, publicist, and historian, professor successively at Heidelberg and at Lund, and historiographer in Sweden and in Brandenburg. His chief work is De jure naturae et gentium (1672). He also wrote Elementa jurisprudentiae universalis (1660), De statu imperii germanici (1667), De rebus Suecicis (1676), a history of the Great Elector (1695), and others.

Puff (puf). Cowardly servant in David Garrick's Miss in her Tears.

Puff. Humbugging auctioneer in Samuel Foote's Taste. Puff. Publisher and vender of quack medicine in Samuel Foote's The Patron.

Puff. Bustling and impudent literary humbug in Richard Brinsley Sheridan's The Critic. He is the author of the tragedy rehearsed in the play, and past master in the art of puffing.

Pug (pug). Devil in man's shape in Ben Jonson's The Devil Is an Ass. He gives the title to the play, being made an ass of, much to his mortification.

Pugachev (pō.gā.chōf'). [Former names: Nikolaevski, Nikolaievsk, Nikolaievskaya Sloboda.] City in C U.S.S.R., in the Saratov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 130 mi. NE of Saratov: food-processing industries, 21,000 (est. 1933).

Puget (pū.zech), Pierre. b. at Marseilles, France, 1622; d. 1694. French painter, sculptor, engineer, and architect. In 1657 he designed and executed the Porte de Ville at Toulon, his first celebrated architectural composition. He also built the Halle au Poisson, Hospice de Charité, and many fine buildings at Marseilles. To this period belongs the Hercule Gaulois in the Louvre. After 1669 he executed his three principal works of sculpture: the Perseus and Andromeda, Milo of Crotona, and the bas-relief of Alexander and Diogenes now in the Louvre. The Milo of Crotona is often considered his best work. This was finished in 1682, and in 1683 placed in the garden of Versailles; it is now in the Louvre.

Puget Sound (pū'jet). Arm of the Pacific Ocean, penetrating into the state of Washington S from the Strait of Juan de Fuca, by which it is connected with the Pacific. It is divided into Puget Sound proper in the S and Admiralty Inlet in the N. It is noted for its depth and its fine harbors. Seattle and Tacoma are on its shores. Total length, ab. 80 mi.

Pughe (pū), William Owen. [Original name, William Owen.] b. at Tyn y Bryn, Wales, Aug. 7, 1759; d. June 4, 1835. Welsh antiquary. He published a Welsh-English dictionary (1793-1803) and, with others, Myyrnir Archæology of Wales (1801-07).

Pugin (pū'jin), Augustus Welby Northmore. b. at London, March 1, 1812; d. at Ramsgate, England, Sept. 14, 1852. English architect. He led the Church of England for the Roman Catholic Church when quite young. He made the designs for Killarney Cathedral, Adare Hall, a chapel at Douai, and many churches and buildings for that faith, and assisted Sir Charles Barry in the decorations of the new Houses of Parliament. He published Contrasts: or a Parallel between the Architecture of the 15th and 19th Centuries (1836), True Principles of Christian Architecture (1841), Glossary of Ecclesiastical Ornament (1844), and others.

Puglia (pō'lyā) or Puglie (pō'lyā). Italian names of Apulia.

Pugnani (pō.nyā'nē), Gaetano. b. at Turin, Italy, Nov. 27, 1731; d. there, June 15, 1798. Italian violinist, teacher, and composer of operas, ballets, concertos, sonatas, symphonies, and chamber music.

Pugno (pū.nyō), Stéphane Raoul. b. at Paris, June 23, 1852; d. at Moscow, Jan. 3, 1914. French pianist and composer. He was organist (1872-92) at the Church of Saint Eugène, and professor of harmony and piano (1892-1901) at the Paris Conservatory. His compositions include ballets, many light operas, songs, and piano pieces.

Pugs and Peacocks. Novel by Gilbert Cannan, published in 1920.

Puguli (pō.gō'lē). Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting a region in E Ivory Coast. Their population is estimated at ab. 5,000 (by M. Delafosse, Haut-Sénégal-Niger, 1912).

Puijo Hill (pō'jō). See under Kuopio, city.

Pujada Bay (pō.hā'dā). See under Davao, province.

Pujo (pū.zhō'), Arsène Paulin. b. near Lake Charles, La., Dec. 16, 1861; d. at New Orleans, Dec. 31, 1939. American legislator, U.S. congressman (1903-13). He was chairman (1911-13) of the Committee on Banking and Currency, and headed (1912) the subcommittee investigating "money trusts," that demonstrated many money abuses in Wall Street financing and, in part, was responsible for the adoption (1913) of the Federal Reserve Act.

Pujo, Maurice. b. 1872-. French journalist, a leader of the Action Française movement. He edited the newspaper L'Action Française and was tried (1945) with Charles Maurras on charges of collaboration with the Germans during World War II.

Pujo Committee Investigation. Subcommittee of the House Committee on Banking and Currency which carried out an investigation (1912-13) into the U.S. financial structure and its operations to determine whether concentration of banking control existed. Prominent American financiers including J. P. Morgan and George F. Baker appeared at the hearings conducted under Representative Arsène Pujo of Louisiana, the subcommittee's head. The comprehensive report of the committee, and the majority declaration holding that concentration of credit control was an accomplished fact, influenced subsequent legislation as the Federal Reserve Act of 1913 and the Clayton Act of 1914.

Pujol (pū.zhōl), Alexandre Denis Abel de. See Abel de Pujol, Alexandre Denis.

Purujan (pū.jū'nan). See under Maidu.

Pukhtun-Khtun (pōch.tū'n'chōn'). See Afghanistan.

Pukina (pō.ke'ng). See Puquina.

Pula (pō'lā). [Former name, Pulj; Italian, Pola; Latin, Pietas Julia.] Seaport city in NW Yugoslavia, in the region of Istria, in the federative unit of Croatia (formerly in the Italian province of Venezia Giulia, which was ceded to Yugoslavia by the Italian peace treaty of 1947). It is situated SE of Trieste and SW of Rijeka (Fiume). It has numerous and well-preserved Roman remains, including a triumphal arch, the Porta Aurea (golden gate); the Temple of Augusta and Rome (now a museum); and an imperial amphitheater with a seating capacity of 25,000. It has a cathedral dating from the 15th century, a town hall, and a marine museum. The spacious and sheltered harbor, one of the finest in Europe, served from 1556 as the chief arsenal of the Austrian navy. There are extensive wharves, docks, repair shops, and barracks. Shipbuilding is a major industry. 20,741 (1948).

Pulangi (pō.lāng'ē). See Mindanao River.

Pulaski (pō.lās'ki, pu-). Town in C Tennessee, county seat of Giles County; trading and shipping center for bluegrass, corn, cotton, wheat, and burley tobacco; tomato canneries. 5,762 (1950).

Pulaski. Town in SW Virginia, county seat of Pulaski County; shipping point for grain, iron, zinc, lumber, and coal; manufacturers of textiles and wood products. 9,202 (1950).

Pulaski (pō.lās'ki, pu-; Polish, pōlā'skē), Casimir. [Polish, Kazimierz Pulaski.] b. in Podolia, c1748; d. near Savannah, Ga., in October, 1779. Polish general in the American Revolution. He took part in the insurrection following the formation of the confederation of Bar in 1768, and escaped from Poland. He lived in Turkey and in France, where he met Benjamin Franklin and became interested in the American cause. Franklin gave him a letter to Washington and Pulaski came to the colonies. Entering the American service in 1777, he served at Brandywine, formed a cavalry corps called "Pulaski's regiment" in 1778 after a disagreement with Anthony Wayne, defended Charleston in 1779, and was mortally wounded near Savannah, Oct. 9, 1779.

Pulaski (pō.lās'ki, pu-), Fort. Fort on Cockspur Island, E Georgia, at the head of Tybee Roads, commanding both channels of the Savannah River. During the Civil War it was captured (April 10, 1862) by Union troops under General Hunter. The area was made a national monument in 1924.

Pulawy (pō.lā'vi). Town in E Poland, in the województwo (province) of Lublin, situated on the E bank of the Vistula River, ab. 32 mi. NW of Lublin. It is a station on the railroad line from Warsaw to Lublin. The Siemawsky Palace belonged formerly to the princely family of Czartorski, was confiscated by the Russians after the revolt of 1831, and now contains an agricultural institute. 9,128 (1946).

Pulcher (pul'kér). See Claudius, Appius (d. 48 B.C.).

Pulcheria (pul.kir'ia). b. Jan. 19, 399 A.D.; d. Feb. 18, 453. Byzantine empress (414-453); daughter of the Emperor Arcadius. She reigned (414-450) conjointly with her brother Theodosius II. Her rivalry with Eudocia, Theodosius's wife, resulted in Eudocia's banishment. On the death of her brother in 450 she married (apparently only in name, since she had taken a vow of chastity) Marcianus, whom she raised to the throne as her colleague.

Pulchérie (pul.shā.rē). Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1672.

Pulci (pōl'chē), Luigi. b. at Florence, Italy, Dec. 3, 1432; d. 1484. Italian romantic poet, the friend of Politian and Lorenzo de' Medici. Author of the burlesque epic Il Morgante Maggiore (1485).

Pulitzer (pul.it.sér, pū'it.sér), Joseph. b. at Makó, Hungary, April 10, 1847; d. aboard his yacht in Charleston Harbor, S.C., Oct. 29, 1911. American journalist and newspaper publisher, owner and editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the New York World and Evening World, and innovator in mass-appeal journalism. Failing to secure enlistment in a number of European armies after leaving home at the age of 17, he enlisted in the Union army through a recruiting agent at Hamburg, Germany, and came to the U.S. in 1864. He served throughout the last phases of the Civil War with the 1st New York (Lincoln) cavalry and after his discharge went to St. Louis, Mo., where he after a time became secretary of the Deutsche Gesellschaft. In 1868 he became a reporter on the Westliche Post, a German daily. He was elected (1869) to the lower house of the Missouri legislature and subsequently became a police commissioner at St. Louis. He was active as a Liberal Republican in behalf of Horace Greeley in the campaign of 1872 and afterward entered the Democratic Party. He was part proprietor (1871-73) of the Westliche Post and, after a trip abroad, purchased (Jan. 6, 1874) the bankrupt St. Louis Staats-Zeitung. He studied law and was admitted to the bar (1876) in the District of Columbia. In 1878 he bought the St. Louis Dispatch, which he soon combined to form the Post-Dispatch; it subsequently became one of the nation's most reputable and successful newspapers. Pulitzer bought (May 10, 1883) the New York World from Jay Gould and converted it into a highly successful venture based initially upon an appeal to the interests of workmen and then upon the exploitation of the sensational element in the news. Over the years, under the brilliant guidance of Pulitzer, the World became a national institution. Although Democratic in its policy, it became one of the leading independent voices of opinion in the U.S. and frequently attracted notice as a crusading organ. He served (1885-86) in Congress, from which he resigned, and in 1887 established the Evening World. Because of his poor physical and nervous condition, Pulitzer withdrew from the active management of his newspapers in 1887, formally announcing the move in 1890. In 1896 the World embarked upon a competitive war with William Randolph Hearst's dailies, during which the journals of both Pulitzer and Hearst descended to new lows in "yellow" journalism. Realizing that the excesses of the World had clouded its reputation, Pulitzer took over the management of the paper for a time and restored it to its former eminence. Although almost blind, he continued to exercise his personal influence over the paper and was largely responsible for its development into a high-minded journal of intelligent opinion. His bequest (1903) made possible the founding of the Pulitzer School of Journalism (at Columbia University) and the establishment of the annual Pulitzer prizes. The World and Evening World were sold and incorporated into the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain in 1931.

Pulitzer, Joseph. b. at New York, March 21, 1885—, American publisher; son of Joseph Pulitzer (1847-1911). He entered journalism in 1906, and became president of the Pulitzer Publishing Company and publisher (1912 et seq.) of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pulitzer, Ralph. b. at St. Louis, Mo., June 11, 1879; d. at New York, June 14, 1939. American publisher; son of Joseph Pulitzer (1847-1911). He was vice-president (1906-08) and president (1911-30) of the Press Publishing Company, publishers of the New York World and Evening World, until he sold them (1931) to the Scripps-Howard group. He was vice-president (1906 et seq.) of the Pulitzer Publishing Company, which brought out the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pulitzer Prizes. Annual awards for notable achievements in American journalism, letters, drama, and music, conferred by the trustees of Columbia University at New York, on recommendation of the advisory board of the graduate school of journalism of that institution, from the income of a fund set up (1903) by Joseph Pulitzer (1847-1911). In the field of journalism, awards have been made since 1917 for outstanding examples of editorial writing and of reporting; since 1918 for meritorious public service by newspapers; since 1922 for cartoons; since 1929 for correspondence; since 1942 for national telegraphic reporting, for international telegraphic reporting, and for news photography; and since 1948 for local reporting, for national reporting, and for international reporting. The award for meritorious public service is a gold medal; the other prizes, for achievement in journalism, letters, drama, and music, have each a money value of 500 dollars. In the field of the novel, Pulitzer Prizes have been awarded, among others, to Ernest Poole, Booth Tarkington, Edith Wharton, Willa Cather, Sinclair Lewis, Thornton Wilder, Oliver La Farge, Pearl S. Buck, Margaret Mitchell, John Phillips Marquand, John Steinbeck, Ellen Glasgow, Upton Sinclair, John Hersey, Robert Penn Warren, James A. Michener, James Gould Cozzens, and Conrad Richter. Drama awards have gone to playwrights of such diverse tendencies as Eugene O'Neill, Zona Gale, Owen Davis, Sidney Howard, George Kelly, Paul Green, Elmer Rice, Susan Glaspell, George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind, Ira Gershwin, Maxwell Anderson, Zoë Akins, Robert E. Sherwood, Thornton Wilder, William Saroyan, Russel Crouse, Howard Lindsay, Tennessee Williams, and Arthur Miller. In the classification of history, Pulitzer awards have gone to such books as James Ford Rhodes's A History of the Civil War, Rear Admiral William Snowden Sims's The Victory at Sea, Charles Warren's The Supreme Court in American History, Van Wyck Brooks's The Flowering of New England, Vernon Louis Parrington's Main Currents in American Thought, and Carl Sandburg's Abraham Lincoln: the War Years. Pulitzer Prizes for biography have been awarded to Henry Adams (posthumously) for The Education of Henry Adams, to Albert J. Beveridge for The Life of John Marshall, to Hamlin Garland for A Daughter of the Middle Border, to Michael Pupin for From Immigrant to Inventor, to Samuel Eliot Morison for Admiral of the Ocean Sea, to William Allen White for his Autobiography, and to Margaret Clapp for Forgotten First Citizens: John Bigelow, among others. Pulitzer poetry laureates have included Edna St. Vincent Millay, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Robert Frost, Amy Lowell, Leonora Speyer, Stephen Vincent Benét, William Rose Benét, Conrad Aiken, George Dillon, Archibald MacLeish, Robert Hilkey, Mark Van Doren, Leonard Bacon, W. H. Auden, and Carl Sandburg. Pulitzer awards in music, beginning in 1943, have gone to William Schuman, Howard Hansen, Aaron Copland, Leo Sowerby, Charles E. Ives, Walter Piston, Virgil Thompson, Gian-Carlo Menotti, and Douglas MacDowell Moore. A number of special citations have been conferred on individuals, newspapers, and organizations. Three traveling scholarships for students of journalism and one for students of art are also supported from Pulitzer funds.

Pulj (pöl'y). Former name of Pula.

Pulkovo (pöl'ko.və). [Former name, Pulkowa (pöl'ko.və).] Place in the U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 10 mi. S of Leningrad, noted for its observatory, at one time the most important in Russia, which was completed in 1939. It suffered damage during the siege of Leningrad in World War II.

Pullet (pül'et), Aunt. Selfish invalid, one of the principal characters in George Eliot's Mill on the Floss. She henpecks her husband, whose mission in life seems to be to flatter her and find her pills for her. She is the sister of Aunt Glegg and Mrs. Tulliver.

Pullman (pül'man). Section of the city of Chicago, formerly an independent model community, built by George M. Pullman for his employees, and annexed by Chicago in 1889.

Pullman. City in SE Washington, in Whitman County; shipping center for wheat; supply center for an agricultural area. It is the seat of the State College of Washington. 4,417 (1940), 12,022 (1950).

Pullman, George Mortimer. b. at Brocton, N.Y., March 3, 1831; d. Oct. 19, 1897. American inventor and industrialist, designer of the Pullman railroad car, which he devised in collaboration with his friend Ben. Field, of Albion, N.Y. Beginning as a storekeeper and cabinetmaker in the towns of Westfield and Albion, N.Y., he settled (1855) at Chicago, where he constructed (1858-59) three sleeping cars for the Chicago and Alton Railroad. With Ben Field, he devised such improvements as the folding upper berth (patented 1864) and an improved lower berth (patented 1865). The first car, the Pioneer, which incorporated the basic principles of the modern Pullman car, was built in 1864-65. He and Field founded (1867) the Pullman Palace Car Company, whose first plant was established at Palmyra, N.Y. He founded (1881) the town of Pullman, Ill., now part of Chicago. Among his other innovations in railroad equipment were the combined sleeping and restaurant car (1867), the dining car (1868), the chair car (1875), and the vestibule car (1887).

Pullman Strike. Strike of Pullman Parlor Car Company workers at Pullman (now part of Chicago), which began on May 11, 1894, soon after more than 2,500 Pullman employees joined the American Railway Union. When union members working on roads linked to the Chicago area walked out in sympathy, a general railway stoppage ensued. After an injunction issued by federal circuit court Judges P. S. Grosscup and C. D. Woods was defied by the strikers, President Cleveland, despite the resistance of Illinois governor John P. Altgeld to the move, dispatched federal troops to the Chicago area to end interference with the U.S. mails. The strike was broken after widespread rioting and destruction of property. Eugene V. Debs and other railway union leaders were subsequently tried and convicted for contempt of court.

Pulo Kalamantin (pó'lo ká.lá.mán'tín) or Kalimantan (ká.lí.mán'tén). Native name of Borneo.

Pulo-Penang (pó'lo.pé.náng). See Penang.

Pulotu (pó'lo.tó). In western Polynesia, the mythological afterworld, regarded as being on an island to the west or situated under the sea. Samoans regarded it as being on a definite, named island to which the dead returned and were renewed.

Pulteney (pult'ní, pólt'-), Sir William. [Title, Earl of Bath.] b. 1684; d. 1764. English statesman, secretary at war (1714-17) under Robert Walpole. After failure to receive a cabinet position from Walpole (1721), he became his antagonist (1725) on the speaking platform and in papers and contributed to the downfall of his government (1742) by stirring agitation against Spain (1739). He then refused a request to form a government (1742). His hope of becoming first lord of the treasury on Spencer Compton, Earl of Wilmington's death unrealized (1743), he sought to form a cabinet, at George II's behest, excluding Pitt, but failed (1746). Walpole said he feared Pulteney's tongue more than another man's sword.

Pulteney, Sir William. b. 1861; d. in Essex, England, May 14, 1941. English soldier who led the third British army corps in France during World War I.

Pultowa (pult.tó'vá). See Poltava.

Pultusk (pult.tó'sk). Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, situated on the Narew River, ab. 35 mi. N of Warsaw. Here in 1703 the Swedes under Charles XII defeated the Saxons. On Dec. 28, 1806, a battle was fought here between the French under Jean Lannes and the Russians under Count Levin Bennigsen; victory was claimed for both sides; the Russians retreated after the battle. In World War I the Germans conquered the town on July 24, 1915; it was again occupied by the Germans in 1939. Pop. 8,787 (1946).

Pulver (púlf'fär), Max. b. at Bern, Switzerland, 1859—. Swiss poet and philosopher writing in German. He is the author of the problem plays Robert der Teufel (1917) and Alexander der Grosse (1917).

Pulwul (pul'wul). See Palwal.

Pumacagua (pó.má.ká'gwá), Mateo García. b. near Cusco, Peru, 1738; executed at Sicuani, Peru, in March, 1815. Peruvian Indian general. In August, 1814, he headed a formidable insurrection against the Spaniards, occupied Arequipa, and at one time had 40,000 followers. He was defeated (March 11, 1815), captured, and put to death.

Pumarejo (pó.má.ré'hó), Alfonso López. See López Pumarejo, Alfonso.

Pumblechook (pum'bl.chúk), Mr. Pompous old gentleman in Charles Dickens's novel Great Expectations. He is Joe Gargery's uncle, and makes himself peculiarly odious to Pip by his patronage and his offensive habit of springing mathematical problems on him for solution.

Pumpelly (pum.pel'í), Raphael. b. at Owego, N.Y., Sept. 8, 1837; d. at Newport, R.I., Aug. 10, 1923. American geologist. He was geologist to the Japanese government (1890-63), professor of mining geology in Harvard University (1866-75), chief of division of the U.S. Geological Survey (1879-81, 1884-90), and conductor of explorations in Central Asia for the Carnegie Institution (1933-04). He was also state geologist of Michigan (1870-71), and director of the geological survey of Missouri (1871-73).

Puná (pó.ná'). Island of Ecuador, at the entrance of the Gulf of Guayaquil, which it shelters from the open sea. It is low, somewhat swampy, and partly covered with forest. Its original Indian inhabitants, a warlike people, submitted to the Incas c1500. Pizarro touched here with his forces in 1532, before invading Peru. Length, ab. 30 mi.; greatest width, ab. 17 mi.

Puna (pó.ná). See Despoblado.

Punch (punch). Violent-tempered, hump-backed, hooked-nosed puppet, with a squeaking voice, the chief character in the traditional English street puppet show called Punch and Judy. He kills his child for squalling, beats his wife (Judy) to death, belabors a policeman, escapes from prison, and outwits the Devil. Punch is the descendant of the Punchinello (French, Polichinelle) of the Italian commedia dell'arte; the part as it first appeared in England is thought to have been created by Silvio Fiorillo, a comedian, c1600. Punch first appeared in France as a puppet in the beginning of the reign of Louis XIV. The origin of Toby, his dog, is uncertain.

Punch. Satirical illustrated journal, published weekly at London. It was founded in 1841.

Pungwe (pung'gwe). [Also, Pungue.] River in SE Africa, in Mozambique, flowing into the Indian Ocean N of Sofala. It rises in Southern Rhodesia, and the railroad connecting that territory with the sea passes through its valley.

Punic Wars (pū'nik). [Also, Carthaginian Wars.] Three wars waged (264-241 b.c.; 218-201 b.c.; 149-146 b.c.) between Rome and Carthage, resulting finally in the total destruction not only of Carthaginian power, but also of Carthage itself. The first began in 264 b.c. Its nominal cause was the interference of the Romans in behalf of the Mamertines (besieged at Messina (now Messina), Sicily, by Hiero of Syracuse). Its actual cause was the inevitable (and irreconcilable) friction between the growing commercial ambitions of Rome, and the established position of Carthage as the chief trading community of the Mediterranean. The leading events were the following: naval battles of Mylae and Ecnomus; unsuccessful invasion of Africa by Regulus; battles of Panormus and Drepanum; campaigns of Hamilcar Barca (father of Hannibal) in Sicily; Roman naval victory (ending the war) at the Aegates (Aegadian) Isles, now the Egadi Islands) in 241 b.c. By the peace Carthage ceded western Sicily and paid a large indemnity. The seat of war was Sicily, Africa, and the Mediterranean. The second war began in 218 b.c. Its immediate cause was Hannibal's conquest of Saguntum (an ally of Rome) in 219. It was carried on in Spain, Italy, Sicily, and Africa. The following were the leading events: Hannibal's invasion of Italy after crossing the Alps in 218; battles of Ticino, Trebbia, Lake Trasimene, and Cannae; campaigns in Spain; conquest of Syracuse by Marcellus; invasion of Italy by Hasdrubal, defeated at the Metaurus; final defeat of Hannibal at Zama in 202. By the peace, 201 b.c., Carthage ceded possessions in Spain and the Mediterranean and paid a heavy tribute. Numidia became an ally of Rome, and the Carthaginian fleet was reduced. The chief commanders were Hannibal for Carthage and the elder Scipio Africanus and Fabius Maximus for Rome. The third war began in 149 b.c. Its nominal cause was the attack by Carthage on Massinissa. Carthage was besieged by land and sea by the younger Scipio Africanus, and was taken and destroyed in 146. (Scipio's terse report to the Roman senate exemplified the utterly ruthless quality of the enmity which finally existed between Rome and Carthage. The words of the report ("Carthago delenda est") were literally true: the city of Carthage was destroyed with a thoroughness which was to have few, if any, parallels until the 20th century, when improved weapons made wholesale destruction somewhat easier than it was for the Romans.) Carthaginian territory was divided between Rome and Numidia. Certain aspects of the Punic Wars have long attracted the keen interest of people who seek to interpret history as consisting of recurring comparable situations; however, as most historians point out, exactly parallel situations seldom, if ever, can be said to exist, and the comparison, too strictly made, of either Rome or Carthage to later world powers commonly entails a degree of subjective identification with one or the other participant in some later conflict which makes objective interpretation of the Punic Wars virtually impossible. In very recent times, some such people (but few historians) have seen a parallel between Carthage vs. Rome, and the U.S.

vs. the U.S.S.R. Although there are certain striking similarities (for example, Carthage was the dominant commercial power of the world, and had the world's most powerful navy—as does the U.S.; Rome was a power possessed of extremely powerful land forces, and a history of comparatively recent, overwhelming military successes against nearby peoples—as is the U.S.S.R.), there are also equally striking dissimilarities (for example, the rigid oligarchical structure of the Carthaginian government may hardly be compared to that of the U.S., and Carthaginian wealth stemmed overwhelmingly from the narrow base of buying and selling rather than production).

Punin Skull (pō.nēn'). Fossilized human skull found in the highlands of Ecuador, under circumstances suggesting association with the fossil remains of extinct animal forms. It is regarded by some archaeologists as representative of the physical type of the very early Indian population of South America.

Punjab (pun.jāb'). [Also: Panjab, Penjab, Punjaub (pun.jōb').] Region in N India, its name meaning "country of the five rivers," i.e., the five tributaries of the Indus (the Sutlej, Beas, Ravi, Chenab, and Jhelum); in an extended sense, a former lieutenant-governorship of British India, including the Punjab proper and adjacent regions, and situated NW of the United Provinces. The area is now divided into the state of Punjab (until recently, East Punjab), Union of India, and the province of Punjab (until recently, West Punjab), Pakistan. The surface is generally a plain; wheat is the leading crop, and corn, millet, and cotton are also grown. The Punjab is the country of the Sikhs. It formed part of the Mogul empire, was invaded by Nadir Shah and other conquerors in the 18th century, and was annexed by Great Britain in 1849. Area, 99,084 sq. mi.; pop. 28,418,819 (1941).

Punjab. [Former name, East Punjab.] State of the Union of India, comprising the E part of the Punjab region. Capital, Simla; land area, 37,428 sq. mi.; pop. 12,638,611 (1951).

Punjab. [Former name, West Punjab.] Province of Pakistan, comprising the W part of the Punjab region and the former states of Bahawalpur and Khairpur. Capital, Lahore, land area, 62,987 sq. mi.; pop. 18,814,201 (1951).

Punjabi (pun.jā'bē). See Panjab.

Punnah (pun.nā). See Panna.

Punnett (pun.ēt), Reginald Crundall. b. at Tonbridge, England, June 20, 1875—. English geneticist, originator of the sex-linked system of poultry breeding. He was professor of biology (1910–12) and genetics (1912–40) at Cambridge. Edited (1910–46) the Journal of Genetics; author of Mendelism (1905), Mimicry in Butterflies (1915), and Heredity in Poultry (1923).

Puno (pō.nō). Department in SE Peru, bordering on Bolivia. Capital, Puno; area, 26,140 sq. mi.; pop. 646,385 (1940), 768,384 (est. 1950).

Puno. City in SE Peru, capital of Puno department, near Lake Titicaca. 15,939 (1940).

Punt (pūnt). In Egyptian antiquity, a region identified with that part of the Somali country which is situated on the E coast of Africa, bordering the Gulf of Aden.

Punta Alta (pōn.tā al.tā). City in S central Argentina, in S Buenos Aires province, ab. 15 mi. SE of Bahía Blanca; rail junction and commercial center. 19,852 (1947).

Punta Arenas (ā.rā.nās). [Former name, Magallanes.] Capital of Magallanes province, in S Chile; a port on the Strait of Magellan. It is the principal commercial center of S Chile, with exports of wool, mutton, lumber, and hides; it has long been an important bunkering station for ships passing through the Strait of Magellan. It has also been noted as the world's southernmost city. 29,883 (est. 1950).

Punta de Obligado (dā ō.blē.gā'wōd). Low projecting bluff on the W side of the Paraná River in Argentina, between the provinces of Buenos Aires and Santa Fé. In 1845 the Argentine dictator de Rosas had it strongly fortified with batteries commanding the river and defended by 4,000 men. On November 20 the position was bombarded and taken by the combined English and French fleets.

Puntarenas (pōn.tā.rā'nās). [Also, Punta Arenas.] Province in S Costa Rica. Capital, Puntarenas; area, 3,955 sq. mi.; pop. 88,168 (1950).

Puntarvolo (pun.tār.vō.lō). In Ben Jonson's Every Man Out of His Humour, a knight affecting excessive romanticism.

Punxsutawney (pungk.su.tō'ni). Borough in W Pennsylvania, in Jefferson County, ab. 43 mi. NW of Altoona; railroad shops; coal mining. 8,969 (1950).

Pupienus Maximus (pū.piē'nus mak'si.mus), Marcus Clodius. d. 238. Roman emperor. He was appointed joint emperor with Decimus Caelius Balbinus in 238, in opposition to Maximin, who was shortly after killed by his own soldiers at the siege of Aquileia. Pupienus and his colleague were murdered by the Praetorian Guard at Rome before the beginning of August in the same year, after having reigned from about the end of April.

Pupilas do Sr. Reitor (pō.pē.lāzh do sē.nyōr' rā.tōr'), As. Work of fiction (1866–67) with which Júlio Diniz (1839–71) introduced the pastoral novel into modern Portuguese literature. It has remained one of the most beloved books in Portugal.

Pupillus (pū.pil'us), Orbilius. See Orbilius Pupillus. Pupin (pū'pin, pū.pēn'), Michael Idvorsky. b. at Idvor, Hungary (now in Yugoslavia), Oct. 4, 1858; d. at New York, March 12, 1935. American physicist, professor of electromechanics at Columbia University from 1901, especially known for his work in electricity. He was graduated from Columbia in 1883, studied at Berlin, and became instructor at Columbia in 1889. By an invention involving the use of spaced induction coils he greatly increased the distance over which telephonic and telegraphic messages could be transmitted by wire. He also performed valuable research in x-rays and radio transmission. His autobiography, From Immigrant to Inventor (1923), won the 1924 Pulitzer prize for biography. He wrote a number of technical articles and, among other books, The New Reformation (1927) and Romance of the Machine (1930).

Puquina (pū.kē'nā). [Also, Pukina.] Group of South American Indians inhabiting the high, cold regions around Lakes Titicaca and Poopó in Bolivia. They are tentatively lumped linguistically in a Uru-Chipaya-Puquina grouping, but many scholars insist that each language comprises an independent family in itself. It is reported that the Uru Indians call their language Puquina, but some scholars question whether this is the same Puquina reported by earlier researchers.

Purana (pō.rā'nā). Name of each of 18 Sanskrit works, important in their connection with the later phases of Brahmanism. They contain stories of the gods, interwoven with legendary tales of kings and rishis and other subjects. Though nominally tritheistic, they are practically polytheistic and yet essentially pantheistic. Their form is in general that of dialogues in which a well-known and inspired sage answers the questions of his disciples. The Puranas deal with the mythology and theology of creation, death, and re-creation, the periods of the Manus, genealogies of kings, and the four stages of all human life and effort: love, wealth, righteousness, and final liberation from the cycle of birth and rebirth.

Purbeck (pēr.bek), Isle of. Peninsula in SW England, in Dorsetshire, ab. 20 mi. E of Weymouth. A range of chalk hills crosses it from E to W. It is noted for its many quarries of Purbeck stone (a limestone used for building). The towns of Corfe Castle, with its castle ruins, and Swanage are located here.

Purcell (pēr.səl'). City in C Oklahoma, county seat of McClain County, on the Canadian River; cotton gins. It was settled in 1887. Pop. 3,546 (1950).

Purcell, E. M. b. at Taylorville, Ill., Aug. 30, 1912—. American physicist. He taught at Harvard (1938 et seq.), serving there as professor of physics (1943 et seq.). From 1941 to 1943 he was leader of a group investigating the fundamentals of radiation phenomena at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Purcell and Felix Bloch were awarded the 1952 Nobel prize in physics for their independent discoveries in the measurement of nuclear magnetic fields.

Purcell (pēr.səl), Henry. b. at Westminster, London, c1653; d. there, Nov. 21, 1695. English musician and composer. He was admitted as chorister in the Chapel

Royal, and in 1670 composed an ode for the king's birthday. In 1380 he composed his famous opera, Dido and Aeneas, for performance in a school. In 1676 he was a copyist at Westminster Abbey, and composed the music of Dryden's Aurengzebe, and Shadwell's Epsom Wells and The Libertine. In 1677 he wrote the music to Aphra Behn's tragedy Abdazar. Some of the songs in these compositions are still popular. In 1680 he was the organist of Westminster Abbey, and during the next five or six years composed most of his church music. In 1682 he was organist of the Chapel Royal. In 1683 he began to compose chamber music; and in 1686 wrote the music for Dryden's Tyrannic Love. He composed the anthem Blessed Are They That Fear the Lord, by command of the king, in 1688, the music for Dryden's King Arthur in 1691, and his greatest work, the Te Deum and Jubilate, written for Saint Cecilia's day, in 1694.

Purchas (pér'chas), Samuel. b. at Thaxted, Essex, England, c1575; d. at London, in September, 1626. English clergyman and author, known for his travel works. He published Purchas his Pilgrimage, or Relations of the World and the Religions observed in all Ages and Places in 1613; a second edition appeared in 1614, much enlarged. Four succeeding volumes, comprising articles from Hakluyt's publications and manuscripts, appeared in 1625 with the general title Hakluytus Posthumus, or Purchas his Pilgrimes: containing a History of the World, in Sea Voyages and Land Travels by Englishmen and Others. The fourth edition of Purchas his Pilgrimage was later usually sold with the latter work as if it were a succeeding fifth volume, and the five became known as Purchas's Pilgrims. The collection is of great historical value. Purchas also published Purchas his Pilgrim: Microcosmus, or the History of Man (1619) and The King's Tower (1623; a sermon).

Purdue (pér.dü'), John. b. in Huntington County, Pa., Oct. 31, 1802; d. at Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 12, 1876. American merchant and benefactor. Settling (1839) at Lafayette, Ind., he became prominent as a merchant in the adjacent region and subsequently founded a commission house at New York City. He donated (1869) 150,000 dollars toward the establishment at Lafayette of a land-grant institution, the Indiana Agricultural College, which subsequently became known as Purdue University.

Pure (pür), Simon. In Susannah Centlivre's comedy A Bold Stroke for a Wife, a Pennsylvania Quaker who is intended by the guardian of Ann Lovely, an heiress, to marry her. His name and personality are assumed by Colonel Fainwell in order to win the lady's person and fortune; hence arose the expression "the real Simon Pure," as he brings witnesses finally to prove that he was the owner of the name.

Pure Food and Drug Acts. Series of U.S. laws designed to eliminate fraudulent and harmful practices in the manufacture, branding, and advertising of foods and drugs sold on an interstate basis. The first two laws of this character were the Meat Inspection Act of 1906 and the Pure Food and Drug Act passed in the same year. Their enactment was in large measure attributable to the pressure of public opinion awakened by the writings of Harvey W. Wiley and the publication of Upton Sinclair's novel The Jungle. Supplementary federal laws were adopted in 1912, 1913, and 1923. In 1935 the passage of the Wheeler-Lea Act made illegal false or misleading advertising pertaining to foods, drugs, diagnostic and therapeutic devices, and cosmetics, where such advertising provisions are enforced by the Federal Trade Commission. Questions of false labeling are under the jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Administration.

Puret (pö'rät). [Also, Bouret.] Subgroup of the Kipsigis, a Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of SW Kenya, in E Africa.

Purgatoire (pér.gä.twär'). River in SE Colorado which joins the Arkansas River in Bent County. Length, ab. 185 mi.

Purgatorio (pör.gä.tör'é.ö), II. Second part of Dante's Divina Commedia.

Purgon (pür.gôn). One of Argan's physicians in Molière's Le Malade imaginaire. He is "all physician," a satire on the profession.

Puri (pür'i). [Also, Pooree.] District in Orissa, Union of India. S of the city of Cuttack; rice. Capital, Puri; area, ab. 4,000 sq. mi.; pop. 1,572,262 (1951).

Puri. [Also: Juggernaut, Jagannath.] City in Orissa, Union of India, ab. 50 mi. S of Cuttack, celebrated for its temple and the Juggernaut festival. 41,055 (1941).

Purić (pö'rieh), Božidar. b. at Belgrade, Serbia, 1891—, Yugoslav diplomat and statesman. He has served in numerous diplomatic posts and headed (1943-44) the Yugoslav government-in-exile at London.

Puri-Coroado (pö.ré.kö.rö.a'ö). See Coroado.

Purim (pö'rim, pö'rim). Jewish feast day in commemoration of the deliverance of the Jews in Persia from wholesale massacre, as related in the book of Esther. The feast falls on the 14th and 15th of Adar (in February or early March).

Puritani (pö.ré.tä'né), I. [Full title, I Puritani di Scozia.] Opera in three acts by Bellini with a libretto by Count Pepoli, first produced at Paris in 1835.

Puritanism (pö'ri.tan.i.z.m). Movement within the Church of England during the latter half of the 16th century and the first 70 years of the 17th century, leading to the rise of various separatist sects and to profound political changes. The name "Puritans" was first applied scornfully in 1564 to opponents of the Anglican hierarchy's directives in ritualistic matters; and it fell into disuse, in a partisan sense, after the Restoration. Historically, the ground was prepared for Puritanism by Henry VIII's establishment of a national church; by the continuance in that church of doctrines, ceremonies, and organizational forms similar to those of the Roman Catholic Church; by the persecutions under Queen Mary, which caused numerous English Protestants to flee to Geneva and other Calvinistic centers, where they adopted some of the doctrines of Calvinism and conceived an admiration for the Genevan form of church government; by the revulsion of virtuous and conscientious people from the licentiousness and profligacy of Tudor and Stuart England; by the absolutist tendencies of James I and Charles I, which bred resistance among all who cherished English liberties; by cumulative resentments against economic and social inequalities; and by widespread reading of the Bible, in which an armory of arguments was found for reform. The first skirmishes between Puritans and the established church regime occurred as early as the reign of Edward VI, when John Hooper, ordained bishop of Gloucester, refused to don the prescribed vestments, and numerous other ministers discarded the surplice, refused to make the sign of the cross in baptism, rejected the use of a ring in the marriage ceremony, and denounced various other "remnants of popery." Elizabeth, always the practical politician, was resolute to use the crown-controlled church to buttress her throne, and perceived that an hierarchical establishment, with enforced conformity of doctrine, and with emphasis on ceremony and trappings rather than on preaching and discussion, would best serve that end. These things accordingly had been provided for by Acts of Supremacy and of Uniformity in 1559. Nevertheless, opposition to the establishment spread, and even a demand for substitution of the presbyterian for the episcopal form of church government. Thomas Cartwright, professor of divinity at Cambridge, first gave voice to this program in 1571, and in the following year some of his followers addressed an Admonition to Parliament calling for sweeping reforms. Such things as these only hardened Elizabeth's determination, and in 1583 she established what has been called "a spiritual despotism" by means of an Ecclesiastical Commission with unlimited power to prescribe and enforce doctrine, to compel conformity, to deprive ministers of their livings, and to prescribe the religious teachings of schools and colleges. Among other things, all conventicles or gatherings for preaching and Bible reading in homes or other private places were forbidden. At least as early as 1567 small groups began to hold such meetings, and some of these moved toward separatism, under a conviction that neither an episcopal nor a presbyterian form of church organization was sanctioned by Holy Writ. By 1593 there seem to have been fully 20,000 such "Brownists," as they were called (from the chief spokesman of their tenets, Robert Brown). It was one of these groups, settled at Leiden, which supplied the little band of "Pilgrim Fathers" who in 1620 brought Puritanism to America. In 1603, at the accession of James I, the Millenary Petition, so called because it was intended that 1,000 clergymen would sign it (and it did in fact carry the assent of some 800 of them, about a tenth of all the ministers in the realm), was presented to the monarch, asking no change in church government, but again calling for the sweeping elimination of Roman Catholic survivals in doctrine, ceremonies, and the Book of Common Prayer. But when, in January, 1604, James, on the petition of Puritan divines, called the Hampton Court Conference, which included Anglican and Puritan representatives, and the last-named urged a change from episcopal to Presbyterian forms, the sovereign ended the parleys with the remark, "No bishop, no king!" It was, however, a suggestion made by the Puritans on this occasion which led to the new translation of the Bible known as the Authorized, or the King James, Version. James never relaxed his opposition; the Ecclesiastical Commission functioned remorselessly; yet Puritanism still spread as Bible reading increased. Great numbers of the small "Geneva Bible" were distributed. The Bible was, in fact, almost the only book known to most of the English people, and its influence on their thought, and on the events especially of the first half of the 17th century, was incalculable. Between the Puritans and Charles I, with his despotic pretensions and his Roman Catholic wife, an increasingly acute struggle was inevitable; it led to the Long Parliament, the Puritan Revolution, the rise of Oliver Cromwell, the beheading of the king, and the dictatorship of Cromwell. Until 1643 probably a majority of Puritans would have been satisfied with doctrinal changes of a Calvinistic tendency, elimination of "popish" ceremonial, and purification of morals and conduct, within an episcopal church. When the exigencies of the Civil War made it necessary for the English Parliament to accept the Solemn Covenant, Presbyterianism for a time was in the ascendant. But Separatism had grown apace; and Cromwell, finding the Separatists, by that time generally called Independents, his best soldiers, and that he could not have an army without them, successfully opposed all efforts to establish a Presbyterian Church in England, which, by the evidence of events in Scotland, would then have been as intolerant and despotic as ever the Anglican Church was alleged to be. Among the Independents were those who, being of the farming and laboring classes, combined with their revolt against religious formalism and despotism a determination to use the revolution to end economic and social evils and class distinctions, and were therefore known as Levellers. Once in power, Cromwell suppressed these radicals, who had helped greatly to put him in power, with sanguinary ruthlessness. The noble concept of religious tolerance, which from time to time had appeared here and there in the Christian world, found another small root among the Independents. In New England, the Separatist Pilgrims were followed by Puritans still adhering to the Church of England, but these presently, using to restraint of new conditions, adopted the Congregational form of organization. Tolerance was no part of the virtues or purposes of their leaders, yet among them tolerance grew, and in historical perspective, rather rapidly. If the term "Puritan" now evokes the image of a dour, fanatically joyless tribe, most of the earlier Puritans must surely be exempted. As we know by the instances of John Milton and others, they felt free to enjoy music, secular literature, and even dancing, games, sports, and the theater, within limits. The Puritans reprobated intemperance but never banned alcoholic beverages. Gradually, however, the rather grim implications of Calvinism and the intensive study of the Bible, in which, under conditions of struggle and persecution, their attention was not unnaturally drawn most of all to the gloomier and the more sanguinary books, great numbers of the Puritans did become rather glum and even (by modern standards) masochistic. Dancing, especially the village revels around the maypole, and music (excepting solemn hymns), were banned equally with gambling, loose sexual conduct, games and exhibitions, and indeed all pleasures and enjoyments. Identifying Sunday with the Jewish Sabbath, they forbade all but the most necessary work and absolutely all recreation on that day, even mere idle strolling; the day must be given to attendance at church and to prayer and Bible reading at home. Edward Dowden wrote that the Puritans' great fault was a "concept of God as the God of righteousness alone, and not as also the God of joy and beauty and intellectual light." The Puritan was likely to feel himself not only dedicated, but elect. But these people whose aim was "to walk in all the ways which God had made known or should make known to them" also contributed to England and America, and the world at large, qualities of moral earnestness which have flowered in many invaluable ways. In the course of their struggle they forwarded concepts of political liberty and social equality which were nowhere more edifyingly manifested than in the great days of New England liberalism. Moreover by eschewing extravagance in dress and living, by insisting on frugality, by exalting industry and seriousness of mind, Puritanism prepared its adherents to play a large role in the evolution and expansion of mercantilism and capitalism. Despite the reaction against it following the restoration of the monarchy under Charles II, Puritanism persisted as a vital influence in England, having obvious echoes in Methodism, in other nonconformist movements, and even in Chartism.

Puritan, or the Widow of Watling Street (wot'ling). The. Play published as "written by W. S." (William Shakespeare) in 1606. Various authorities have since attributed it to authors including Thomas Middleton, William Rowley, and Wentworth Smith.

Puritan's Daughter, The. Opera by Michael William Balfe, produced at London in 1861.

Purjabee (pér.já'bē). Pseudonym of Arnold, William Delafield.

Purkinje (pōr'kin.ye), Johannes Evangelista. [Czech, Jan Purkyně.] b. at Libochovice, in Bohemia, Dec. 17, 1787; d. at Prague, July 28, 1869. Czech physiologist, patriot, and poet. As a young man he entered a Roman Catholic teaching order with the intention of becoming a priest, but subsequently perceived that his real vocation was to medicine, to which accordingly he turned, receiving his medical diploma at Prague in 1819. In 1823 he became professor of physiology at the University of Breslau, and during his long tenure of that chair (until 1850) he did much to advance the development of laboratory techniques and laboratory training. From 1850 he was professor of physiology at Charles University in Prague. One of the greatest of microscopists, he made discoveries of fundamental importance in many fields, especially those of embryology and ophthalmology. His name is familiar to all physiologists through such terms as "Purkinje's cells" (in the cerebellum), "Purkinje's fibers" (in the heart), and "the Purkinje image" (a familiar subjective visual effect). A man of many interests and talents, he was an ardent patriot, working for the restoration of Czech national rights, and a poet, who in addition to his original verse made translations of Goethe and Schiller into the Czech language.

Purloined Letter, The. Detective story by Edgar Allan Poe, published in his volume Tales (1845).

Purmayah (pōr.má.yá'). In the Shahnamah, the wonderful cow, with the colors of the peacock, that nourished the infant Faridun. This was also the name of a brother of Faridun who, with another brother, Kayanush, sought to kill Faridun by rolling a rock upon him in his sleep; the rock was arrested by Faridun's magic power.

Purnea (pér'nē.a). [Also: Purneah, Purniah.] District in Bihar, Union of India, ab. 140 mi. E of Patna; rice, wheat, sugar, and tobacco. Capital, Purnea; area, ab. 4,998 sq. mi.; pop. 2,525,231 (1951).

Purnea. [Also: Purneah, Purniah.] Capital of the district of Purnea, Bihar, Union of India, ab. 140 mi. E of Patna; trading center, served by one rail line and two highways. 19,036 (1941).

Purnell (pér'nél'), Benjamin. [Full name, Benjamin Franklin Purnell.] b. at Mayville, Ky., March 27, 1861; d. Dec. 16, 1927. American founder of the religious group called the House of David. He wrote The Star of Bethlehem (1902), a statement of his religious doctrines, and organized (c1902) at Benton Harbor, Mich., a religious community based on his teachings. He had previously declared himself the Seventh Messenger, and now also designated himself as the younger brother of Christ; among his followers were some who thought him to be God. He was arrested (1920), tried (1927), and ordered banished from the colony. Among his other writings are The Rolling Ball of Fire (3 vols., 1915-25) and The Key of the House of David (1927).

Purniah (pér'n.i.ə). See Purnea.

Purple Island, The. Allegorical poem on the human body by Phineas Fletcher, published in 1633.

Pursh (pérsh), Fredrick. b. at Tobolsk, in Siberia, 1774; d. at Montreal, Canada, June 11, 1820. Russian botanist. He wrote Flora Americae Septentrionalis, or a Systematic Arrangement and Description of the Plants of North America (1814), and others.

Pursuit of Psyche (s'kē). Poem by W. J. Turner, published in 1931.

Purucoto (pū.rō.kō'tō). See Porokoto.

Purús (pū.rōs). River which rises in E Peru and flows through NW Brazil to join the Amazon. It was first explored in 1864. Length, ab. 2,000 mi.

Purvamimansa (pūr'vā.mi.mān'sā) or Purvamimamsa (-mām'sā). [Also, Karmamimamsa.] In Hindu philosophy, the more rationalistic of the systems of Vedie study that make up Vedānta.

Purvits (pūr'vits), Vilhelms. b. at Jurgensberg, Latvia, March 3, 1872; d. Jan. 18, 1945. Latvian landscape painter. He served (1919 et seq.) as director of the municipal art museum at Riga, professor of the faculty of architecture in the University of Latvia, and president (1919-34) of the Latvian academy of fine arts. As a painter he was an impressionist, although his work bordered on expressionism toward the end of his career.

Pusan (pō.sān'). [Japanese, Fusan, Husan.] Seaport in the SE part of Korea. The oldest and largest port in Korea, it has been extensively modernized and has fine rail connections with the rest of Korea. It exports rice, beans, fish, and raw cotton, and is the chief ferry port to Japan. Immediately after the outbreak (1950) of hostilities in Korea, it became a major supply base of the United Nations' forces, 400,156 (1946).

Puschlav (pūsh'lāf). German name of Poschiavo.

Pusey (pū'zi), Edward Bouverie. b. at Pusey, Berkshire, England, Aug. 22, 1800; d. Sept. 14, 1882. English theologian, a leader in the Oxford Movement (which has sometimes also been called Puseyism). His father's name was originally Bouverie, but the family, of Huguenot origin, became lords of the manor of Pusey, near Oxford, and hence altered its name. In 1819 he entered Christ Church, Oxford, and in 1823 became a fellow of Oriel. He was associated with John Henry Newman and John Keble. In 1828 he was regius professor of Hebrew at Oxford and canon of Christ Church. In 1835 he took part in the tractarian movement, and later was suspended for three years (1843-46) from the function of preaching for publishing The Holy Eucharist a Comfort to the Penitent. The practice of confession among the extreme ritualists (that is to say, the extreme "High Church" group) of the Church of England dates from his two sermons on "the entire absolution of the penitent" (1846). Among his works are Doctrine of the Real Presence (1855), The Real Presence (1857), and The Minor Prophets (1860). He was one of the editors of the Library of Translations from the Fathers and the Anglo-Catholic Library. He endeavored (1865 et seq.) to bring about a reunion of the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church, but he did not follow Newman into Roman Catholicism; moreover, there is no reason to believe that he ever basically questioned the point of view which led him to preach the sermon Rule of Faith (1851), which did much to halt withdrawals from the Anglican communion in favor of that of Rome.

Pushan (pō'shān). In Hindu mythology, a sun god (although the attribution is somewhat vague), frequently invoked in the Vedie hymns. He is variously a protector and multiplier of cattle, a patron of travelers and guardian of roads, and a guide of the dead to the other world. In the marriage ceremonial he is besought to take the bride's hand and bless her.

Pushkin (pōsh'kin). See Tsarskoe Selo.

Pushkin, Aleksandr Sergeyevich. [Also written Alexander Poushkin.] b. at Moscow, June 6, 1799; d. at St. Petersburg, Feb. 10, 1837. Russian writer. His mother was a descendant of an Abyssinian general in the service of Peter the Great, but his family, though of the nobility, was impoverished. He attended (1811-17) the lyceum at Tsarskoe Selo and entered the ministry of foreign affairs after finishing school. He embarked on a gay life at St. Petersburg, but in 1820 was exiled to southern Russia for writing an Ode to Liberty that came to the attention of the authorities. After a stay at Ekaterinoslav and Kishinev, he again shocked his superiors by joining several secret societies; he was sent to Odessa in 1823, again got into trouble, and was dismissed from the service. He was ordered to live at Mikhailovskoye, near Pskov, but later went to Moscow, where in 1825 he was persecuted by the new czar, Nicholas I, despite the fact that many of his friends, and perhaps Pushkin himself, were involved in the Decembrist revolt of that year. In 1831 he married Natalia Goncharova, and in 1832 regained his position in the foreign office. His wife's temperament did not match his, and he found moreover that he was being driven deep into debt by her extravagances and love of show. In addition, she gave him cause to be jealous; to defend her name, he fought a duel with her sister's husband's adopted son and was killed. His reputation had grown during the last years of his life and now increased to the point where he was generally recognized as the great Russian romantic poet. Many of his works are concerned with the Caucasus and the Crimea, a region he first visited in 1820 and to which he returned again and again. Among these are The Captive of the Caucasus (1822), The Fountain of Bakhchisarai (1822), The Robber Brothers (1822), The Gipsies (1823-24), all romantic poems in the manner of Byron, and A Voyage to Arzrum (1836), a travel account, and a number of lyrics. Pushkin's masterpiece, Eugene Onegin (1832), is a tale in verse influenced by Byronic ideas. This, as well as his short story, The Queen of Spades (1834), was set to music by Peter Tchaikovsky; Modeste Musorgsky made an opera of his Boris Godunov (1825), a historical drama, Rimsky-Korsakov did the same for The Golden Cockerel (1833), and Glinka turned Pushkin's first long poem, Ruslan and Ludmila (1820), also into opera. Pushkin's other work includes historical poems, like Poltava (1828) and The Bronze Horseman (1833); novels like The Captain's Daughter (1837) and Dubrovsky (1841); plays like Mozart and Salieri (1830), The Stone Guest (1830), and Rusalka (1836); Folk Tales (1831-32) and short stories, a group of which he published anonymously in 1831 as Tales by Belkin. These latter purported to be by one Ivan Belkin, and Pushkin playfully supplied him with background in a burlesque History of the Manor of Goryukhino (1857), in which Belkin appears. He wrote a serious History of the Pugachev Rebellion of 1773 (1834), a historical event that forms the background of The Captain's Daughter.

Pushtunistan (push.tō'n.i.stān). [Also: Pashtunistan, Pathanistan.] Area on the border between Pakistan and Afghanistan, in the North-West Frontier Province, over which conflict between the two countries regarding its status arose in 1949. The region, which had observed some measure of tribal autonomy in the days of British rule of India, is inhabited by Afridi Pathans; and in 1949 when Pakistan claimed it as part of her territory in the division of India, trouble arose with Afghanistan over the area's sovereignty. Late in 1949 the local tribesmen established the "Independent Territory of Pushtunistan"; sporadic border quarrels with Pakistan served in the following years to maintain tension in the area.

Püspökladány (püsh'pök.lō.dāny'). Town in E Hungary, between Karag and Debrecen: railroad junction. 15,494 (1948).

Puss-in-Boots (pus'in.bō'ts). Title and hero of an English nursery tale, translated in the 18th century from the French Chat Botté (1697), by Charles Perrault. This cat, by his cleverness, makes the fortune of his master, a miller's son, saves him from various dangers, and also wins for him high honors and a beautiful wife. Tieck published a German version of the story in 1795 as Der gestiefelte Kater.

Pusteria (pōs.tē.rē'ā). [German, Pustertal (püs'tér.tāl).] Alpine valley, one of the largest in the Tyrol. It comprises the valley of the Rienz and the upper valley of the Drava. Length, ab. 60 mi.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d or j; ʔ, s or sh; ʔ, t or ch,

Putbus (püt'būs). Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Mecklenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Pomerania, Prussia, the largest place on the island of Rügen. The town was founded in 1810. Pop. 6,381 (1946).

Puteaux (pit'ō). Town in N France, in the department of Seine, situated on the right bank of the Seine River opposite the Bois de Boulogne, between Suresnes and Courbevoie, W of Paris. It is a river port and a suburb of Paris. It has factories producing automobiles and airplanes. 37,369 (1946).

Puteoli (pūt'ē'ō.lī). Latin name of Pozzuoli.

Putignano (pō.tē.nyā'nō). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, ab. 25 mi. SE of Bari: textile industries; trade in grain, wine, almonds, and olive oil. Pop. of commune, 16,677 (1936); of town, 12,849 (1936).

Put In Bay or Put-in-Bay (pūt'in'bā'). Village in N Ohio, in Ottawa County, on South Bass Island, on Lake Erie, ab. 14 mi. N of Sandusky: summer resort. The harbor was used by Oliver H. Perry before and after the Battle of Lake Erie (Sept. 10, 1813), which is sometimes for this reason also called the Battle of Put In Bay. The Perry Memorial is nearby. 191 (1950).

Putiphar (pūt'fār, -fār). See Potiphar.

Putnam (put'nām). City in NE Connecticut, a county seat (with Willimantic) of Windham County, on the Quinebaug River: manufacturing and shipping point. 8,181 (1950).

Putnam, Arthur. b. at Waveland, Miss., Sept. 6, 1873; d. at Ville d'Avray, France, May 27, 1930. American sculptor. He has animal groups in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York (Snarling Jaguar), the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (The Death), and elsewhere.

Putnam, Brenda. b. at Minneapolis, Minn., June 3, 1890—. American sculptor, known for her portrait reliefs of children. Among her other works are Puck (Folger Library, Washington, D.C.), Memorial Angel (Rock Creek Cemetery, Washington, D.C.), and a bust of Harriet Beecher Stowe in the Hall of Fame, New York University.

Putnam, Charles Pickering. b. at Boston, Sept. 15, 1844; d. April 22, 1914. American physician and philanthropist; brother of James Jackson Putnam. He was a lecturer (1873-79) at the Harvard Medical School and was elected (1895) president of the American Pediatric Society. Active (1875 et seq.) in the formation and furthering of many charitable enterprises at Boston, he helped found (1873) the Boston Society for the Relief of Destitute Mothers and Infants, of which he was president (1904-14), and was the first chairman (1879 et seq.) of the Associated Charities of Boston.

Putnam, Frederic Ward. b. at Salem, Mass., April 16, 1839; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 14, 1915. American anthropologist, professor of American archaeology and ethnology at Harvard University (1886-1909) and professor of anthropology at the University of California (1903-09). He was curator of the Peabody Museum (Harvard) from 1875, and was curator of the department of anthropology in the American Museum of Natural History (New York) in the period 1894-1903.

Putnam, George Haven. b. at London, April 2, 1844; d. at New York, Feb. 27, 1930. American publisher and writer; son of George Palmer Putnam (1814-72). He studied (1860-62) at the universities of Paris and Göttingen, served (1862-65) in the Union army (entering as a private and being promoted to major), and was a prisoner in Libby prison and at Danville, Va., during the winter of 1864-65. He was a leader in the reorganization of the American Copyright League, and was largely instrumental in securing the passage of the international copyright bill of March, 1891. In 1891 he received the cross of the Legion of Honor. He was the author of Authors and Publishers (1883), The Questions of Copyright (1891), Authors and Their Public in Ancient Times (1894), The Artificial Mother (1894), Books and their Makers During the Middle Ages (2 vols., 1896-97), The Censorship of the Church of Rome and Its Influence on the Production and Distribution of Literature (2 vols., 1916-67), Abraham Lincoln (1939), A Prisoner of War in Virginia, 1864-5 (1912), Memories of my Youth 1844-1865 (1914), Memories of a Publisher, 1865-1915 (1915), and Some Memories of the Civil War (1924).

Putnam, George Palmer. b. at Brunswick, Me., Feb. 7, 1814; d. at New York, Dec. 20, 1872. American publisher. He became (1840) a member of the New York firm of Wiley and Putnam and settled (1841) at London, where he was sales agent for American books and served as a correspondent for New York journals. He founded (1853) Putnam's Monthly Magazine and established (1866) the publishing house of G. P. Putnam and Son, which became (1871) G. P. Putnam and Sons (and which was to become G. P. Putnam's Sons after his death). His magazine, suspended after the panic of 1857, was brought out again (1868) as Putnam's Magazine, and was absorbed (1870) by Scribner's Monthly. A pioneer in protecting authors' copyrights, he began his activity in behalf of this cause in 1837, when he became secretary of an international copyright organization.

Putnam, George Palmer. b. at Rye, N.Y., Sept. 7, 1887; d. at Trona, Calif., Jan. 4, 1949. American writer and publisher; grandson of G. P. Putnam (1814-72) and husband of Amelia Earhart. He was treasurer (1919-30) of the publishing firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, and editorial board chairman (1932-35) of Paramount Productions. He established (1939) the publishing firm of George Palmer Putnam, Inc. His books include In the Oregon Country . . . (1918), Soaring Wings (1939), Wide Margins: A Publisher's Autobiography (1942), and Duration (1943).

Putnam, Herbert. b. at New York, Sept. 20, 1861—. American librarian. He was librarian of the Minneapolis Athenaeum (1884-89), of the Minneapolis Public Library (1889-91), and of the Boston Public Library (1895-99). From 1899 until 1939 he was librarian of Congress.

Putnam, Israel. b. at Salem Village (now Danvers), Mass., Jan. 7, 1718; d. May 29, 1790. American Revolutionary soldier; cousin of Rufus Putnam. A veteran of the French and Indian Wars, he was active in the patriot cause as a member of the Sons of Liberty. He served (1766-67) in the Connecticut general assembly and in 1774 became chairman of the Brooklyn (Conn.) committee of correspondence. He became (October, 1774) lieutenant colonel of the 11th regiment of the Connecticut militia, and in April, 1775, left his farm to join the Revolutionary forces. He subsequently became a major general in the Continental Army and took a prominent part in the battle of Bunker Hill. After the siege of Boston he went to New York, where he was in command for a brief time before Washington arrived. Putnam took part in the Battle of Long Island and during the retreat from New York was responsible for supervising the removal of troops and supplies from that city. His refusal to obey Washington's orders on several occasions finally brought him before a court of inquiry, but he was exonerated and later placed at the head of the recruiting service in Connecticut. His later service with the Continental Army was of no military significance.

Putnam, James Jackson. b. at Boston, Oct. 3, 1846; d. Nov. 4, 1918. American neurologist; brother of Charles Pickering Putnam. Graduating from the Harvard Medical School in 1870, he studied neurology in Europe, and established a practice at Boston, where he set up (1872) one of the initial neurological clinics in the U.S. (at the Massachusetts General Hospital), and served as a lecturer (1874 et seq.) and professor of diseases of the nervous system (1893-1912) at the Harvard Medical School. An authority on the study of psychoneuroses, he was a founder (1875) and president (1888) of the American Neurological Association.

Putnam, Mary Lowell. b. at Boston, Dec. 3, 1810; d. there, 1898. American author; sister of James Russell Lowell.

Putnam, Nina Wilcox. b. at New Haven, Conn., Nov. 28, 1888—. American writer. Author of In Search of Arcady (1912), Adam's Garden (1916), It Pays to Smile (1920), The Making of an American Humorist (1929), the autobiographical Laughing Through (1930), and The Inner Voice (1940).

Putnam, Rufus. b. at Sutton, Mass., April 9, 1738; d. at Marietta, Ohio, May 1, 1824. American soldier and military engineer. In 1775 he entered the Continental Army as a lieutenant colonel. He was appointed chief engineer of the army, with the rank of colonel, in 1776. He had charge of the defense of New York by fortifications, and with his cousin Israel Putnam superintended the construction of the fortifications at West Point; was placed in command of the 5th Massachusetts regiment, serving with distinction in the campaign against Burgoyne; and in 1783 was appointed brigadier general. He was for several terms a member of the Massachusetts legislature, was aide to General Benjamin Lincoln during Shay's Rebellion in 1787, formed the Ohio Land Company, and in 1788 founded the town of Marietta, Ohio, the first permanent settlement in the eastern part of the Northwest Territory. He became judge of the supreme court of that territory in 1789, was appointed a brigadier general under General Anthony Wayne to act against the Indians, and as U.S. commissioner concluded an important treaty with eight tribes at Port Vincent (now Vincennes) in 1792. He was surveyor-general of the U.S. (1793-1803), and in 1803 was a member of the Ohio constitutional convention. To him was due the credit of the ordinance of 1787 which excluded slavery from the settlement of Ohio, and he has been called "the founder and father of Ohio."

Putnam, Ruth. b. at Yonkers, N.Y., July 18, 1856; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 12, 1931. American author; daughter of George Palmer Putnam (1814-72). Graduated (1878) from Cornell University, she devoted herself largely to a study of Dutch history, writing William the Silent, Prince of Orange; the Moderate Man of the Sixteenth Century (2 vols., 1895), A Mediaeval Princess: ... Jacqueline, Countess of Holland (1904), Charles the Bold (1908), and William the Silent, Prince of Orange, and the Revolt of the Netherlands (1911). Other works by her include Alsace and Lorraine from Caesar to Kaiser (1915), Luxemburg and Her Neighbors (1918), and Life and Letters of Mary Putnam Jacobi (1925).

Putney (put'ni). Ward of Wandsworth metropolitan borough, in SW London, in the County of London, situated on the S bank of the river Thames, ab. 6 mi. SW of Waterloo Station. Putney Heath was formerly notorious as a haunt of highwaymen. 34,718 (1931).

Putnik (pôt'nik). Radomir. b. at Kragujevac, Serbia, 1847; d. at Nice, France, 1917. Serbian general. He commanded the Serbian armed forces during the Balkan Wars (1912-13) and in World War I.

Putrid Sea (pû'trid). See Sivash.

Puttenham (put'en.am). George. d. 1590. English author; brother of Richard Puttenham. He was educated at Oxford. The Arte of English Poesie (1589) has been attributed both to him and to his brother.

Puttenham, Richard. b. c.1520; d. c.1601. English author; brother of George Puttenham.

Putti (pôt'té). Vittorio. b. at Bologna, Italy, March 1, 1880; d. there, Nov. 1, 1940. Italian orthopedist. He described for legs of unequal length a combination of osteotomy and prolonged skeletal traction (lengthening a long bone by as much as three or four inches with negligible displacement), described a vertebra hemi-spondylus (called Putti's vertebra), described (1929) early treatment of congenital dislocation of the hip, and coined the word "platyspondylus." He wrote an excellent history of prosthesis, a work on ancient Italian surgery, and others.

Puttick (put'ik), Edward. b. at Timaru, New Zealand, June 26, 1890-. New Zealand army officer. He served with New Zealand forces during both World Wars. In the period 1941-45, he was chief of the New Zealand general staff.

Puttkamer (put'kâ.mér), Robert Victor von. b. at Frankfurt on the Oder, Germany, May 3, 1828; d. at Karzin, in Pomerania, March 15, 1900. Prussian government official. He became minister of public instruction in 1879 and introduced (1880) an improved orthography (commonly called "the Puttkamer orthography") into the German public schools.

Püttlingen (püt'ling.en). Town in the Saar territory, ab. 10 mi. NW of Saarbrücken: coal mines, 12,920 (1939).

Putumayo (pô.tô.mä'yô). Commissary in SW Colombia. Capital, Mocoa; area, 10,220 sq. mi.; pop. 15,900 (est. 1950).

Putumayo River. [Also, in Brazil: Içá, Izá.] River of South America which rises near Pasto, S Colombia, flows E and SE through Colombia and Brazil, and joins the Amazon. A portion of the middle course has been claimed both by Ecuador and by Peru. Length, ab. 1,021 mi.; navigable for some 900 mi.

Put Yourself in His Place. Novel by Charles Reade, published in 1870.

Putzig (püt'sich), Bay of. [German, Putziger Weik (püt'siger vèk).] Western branch of the Gulf of Danzig.

Puvis de Chavannes (pü.vès de shä.vän), Pierre. b. at Lyons, France, Dec. 14, 1824; d. Oct. 24, 1898. French painter, notable as a muralist. He executed mural paintings for the Sorbonne (1886-89) and for the Boston Public Library (1894, 1896), among others.

Puy (pwé). Le. See Le Puy.

Puyallup (pü'al'up). Tribe of North American Indians formerly occupying the region of the mouth of the Puyallup River in W Washington. Their culture was typical North Pacific Coast culture, and they belonged to the Salishan linguistic stock. Several hundred survive on the Puyallup reservation in Washington.

Puyallup. [Former name, Franklin.] City in W central Washington, in Pierce County: canneries, sawmills, woodworking plants, and box factories, 10,010 (1950).

Puy-de-Dôme (pwé.de.dôm). Department in C France, bounded by Allier on the N, Loire on the E, Haute-Loire and Cantal on the S, and Corrèze and Creuse on the W. It corresponds to the N part of Auvergne and parts of Bourbonnais and of Forez. It is a mountainous department, with the population concentrated in the plain of Limagne and the city of Clermont-Ferrand. In antiquity Julius Caesar won here, at the ancient Gergovia, his decisive victory over the Gallic leader Vercingetorix. In the Middle Ages the region was at various times occupied by the English. It is famous for its mineral waters. Agriculture, particularly fruit culture, prevails in the plain of Limagne, while stockraising is more important in the mountainous sections. There are numerous stone quarries. First rank among the industries is taken by the food industries, such as dairying, sugar refining, brewing, and the manufacture of preserves, candies, and chocolates. Capital, Clermont-Ferrand; area, 3,000 sq. mi.; pop. 478,732 (1946).

Puy-de-Dôme. A peak of the Auvergne Mountains, situated in the department of Puy-de-Dôme ab. 6 mi. W of Clermont-Ferrand. On the summit there are an observatory and Roman ruins. Elevation, ab. 4,805 ft.

Puy-de-Sancy (pwé.de.sân.se). See under Dore, Monts.

Puy-en-Velay (pwé.ân.vé.lä). Le. Former name of Le Puy.

Pu-yi (pô'yé'). [Also: Henry Pu-yi; reign title, Hsüan-t'ung.] b. Feb. 11, 1906-. Emperor of China (1908-12) and Japanese puppet emperor of Manchukuo (1934-45). He succeeded to the throne upon the death of his uncle, Nov. 14, 1908, and abdicated on Feb. 12, 1912. He was appointed (1932) head of the Japanese-created state of Manchukuo and crowned (1934) emperor, bearing the reign name Kang Teh (which was so seldom used as to have literally no usage in the West). After the end of World War II, he asserted at a war-crimes trial (1946) that he had been forced by the Japanese to accept his role in Manchuria.

Pużak (pô'zhäk), Kazimierz. b. at Tarnopol (Ternopol), in the Ukraine, Aug. 26, 1883; reported to have died in a Polish prison in May, 1950. Polish lawyer and politician. During World War II he was chairman of the underground Council of National Unity, and played a leading part in the Warsaw uprising (1944). He was one of the 16 political leaders whom the Soviet regime seized and sentenced to prison (1945) after they had come to Moscow on the Russian invitation to negotiate a government of reconciliation. He returned to Poland, but was arrested again in 1947 by the Communist-dominated Polish government, and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

PWA. See Public Works Administration.

Pwyll (pwil). In Brythonic legend, a local king; husband of Rhiannon. In Brythonic mythology Pwyll was an otherworldly deity who exchanged kingdoms and personalities for one year with Arawn, lord and king of the Brythonic otherworld.

P'ya of U'tong (pyä; ð.tóng'). See Rama Tübidí.

Pyarnu (pyär'nö). Russian name of Pärnu.

Pyat (pä'), Félix. b. at Vierzon, Cher, France, Oct. 4, 1810; d. at St-Gratien, France, Aug. 4, 1889. French politician and dramatist. A member (1848) of the extreme socialist faction in the Constituent Assembly, he was one of those who signed (1849) the appeal to arms, and who escaped from France. He returned in 1870, and was a leader (1871) of the Commune.

Pyatigorsk or Piatigorsk (pyä.ti.görsk'). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Stavropol Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 130 mi. NW of Grozny, situated on an affluent of the Kuma River. It is a noted mountain resort and spa, and has flour-milling, wine, and metalworking industries. 62,575 (1939).

Pyatiletka (pyä.ti.let'ka). Russian name of the Five Year Plan.

Pydna (pid'na). In ancient geography, a town in Macedonia, situated near the Gulf of Salonika, ab. 30 mi. SW of Salonika. It is notable for the victory gained near it in 168 b.c. by the Romans under Aemilius Paulus over the Macedonians under Perseus, causing the overthrow of the Macedonian monarchy.

Pye (pi), Henry James. b. at London, Feb. 20, 1745; d. at Pinner, England, Aug. 11, 1813. English poet. He was educated at Oxford (Magdalen College), and became a member of Parliament in 1784. In 1790 he succeeded to the poet laureateship. In 1792 he was made a London police magistrate. He was a poet of remarkably limited talents (although not, perhaps, quite as bad in his verses as Byron was to suggest in his well-known blast against contemporary poets laureate) who tried humbly to please the throne with patriotic jingles; his only work of any scope was Alfred, an epic, published in 1801.

Pyngyang (pyung'yang'). See Pyeongyang.

Pygmalion (pig.mä'li.on). In Greek legend, a sculptor and king of Cyprus. He fell in love with an ivory statue which he had made, and at his request Aphrodite gave it life.

Pygmalion. Legendary king of Tyre. He was the brother of Queen Dido, and murdered her husband for his riches.

Pygmalion. Play by George Bernard Shaw, published in 1912. It deals with the transformation of a Cockney flower girl, Liza Doolittle, who, under the tutelage of Henry Higgins, a professor of phonetics, gains admission to polite society. It was the first of Shaw's plays to be filmed (1939).

Pygmalion and Galatea (ga.la.tē'a). Fairy comedy by W. S. Gilbert, produced in 1871.

Pygmies (pig'miz). [Also: Negrillos, Negritos.] In C Africa, a people of diminutive stature scattered throughout this area. The eastern Pygmies are known as Mbuti; this group includes the Aka, Èfé, and Sua. They inhabit the Ituri forests of NE Belgian Congo and number ab. 30,000. Scattered groups of central Pygmies are found between the Ubangi and Kasai rivers in NW Belgian Congo. The Giele of Cameroun and the Boku, Bongo Jongo, and Koa of the province of Gabon in French Equatorial Africa comprise the Western Pygmies. Pygmies vary in stature from ab. 52 to 58 in., and in skin color from reddish or yellowish brown to very dark. They are brachycephalic, and have woolly hair and Negroid features. They speak the Bantu or Sudanic languages of the Negro peoples with whom they live, exchanging their game and forest products for agricultural crops produced by their Negro protectors and rulers. Unlike these Negro peoples, the Pygmies do no ironworking or farming and have no domestic animals except the dog and occasionally the chicken; they engage only in hunting, gathering, and fishing. Descent is bilateral, and clans are lacking.

Pylades (pil'a.dēz). In Greek legend, the friend and companion of Orestes who accompanied him to Mycenae to avenge the death of Agamemnon. In Euripides' drama Orestes, Pylades is the husband of Electra.

Pylae Ciliciae (pil'ē silish'i.ē). Latin name of the Cilician Gates.

Pyle (pil), Ernie. [Full name, Ernest Taylor Pyle.] b. near Dana, Ind., Aug. 3, 1900; killed on Ie Island, near Okinawa, April 18, 1945. American newspaperman, remembered for his stories of combat soldiers in World War II. His career before the war was that of a competent, moderately successful columnist; his reports from London during the bombings of 1940 first revealed the remarkable ability which he had for telling the story of modest, ordinary people under conditions of extreme danger. From this to combat reporting, in which capacity he became not only deeply loved by many soldiers of all ranks, but also one of the most widely read newspapermen in American history, was a comparatively short step. He was killed by Japanese machine-gun fire just before the end of the war.

Pyle, Howard. b. at Wilmington, Del., March 5, 1853; d. at Florence, Italy, Nov. 9, 1911. American painter, illustrator, and writer. He studied at the Art Students' League of New York. The greater part of his work was done for magazines, the subjects usually being chosen from the Colonial and Revolutionary periods, which he treated with sympathy and knowledge. He wrote and illustrated many stories. He was also very successful as an instructor in the art of illustration.

Pyloadet (pi.lō.dēt'), L. Pseudonym of Leypoldt, Frederick.

Pylos (pi'los). [Also: Navarino, Neocastro.] Small seaport in S Greece, in the nomos (department) of Messenia, situated on the SW coast of the Peloponnese. In ancient times, it was a place of considerable importance, and the traditional seat of Nestor and other Neleids. The site was fortified (425 b.c.) by the Athenians under Demosthenes. 3,059 (1940).

Pym (pim), John. [Called "King Pym."] b. at Bymore, Somersetshire, England, 1584; d. at London, Dec. 8, 1643. English statesman and Parliamentary leader. He entered Broadgates Hall (now Pembroke College), Oxford, in 1599, and became a member of Parliament for Calne in 1614. He was one of the managers of Buckingham's impeachment in 1626, and advocated the Petition of Right in 1628. His authority began in the Short Parliament. In the Long Parliament he assisted in impeaching Strafford and Laud. He was one of the "five members" whose arrest was attempted by Charles I in January, 1642.

Pyncheon (pin'chon), Clifford. Brother of "old maid Pyncheon," who has returned from a prison to find himself at odds with a matter-of-fact woman, in The House of the Seven Gables (1851), by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Pynchon (pin'chon), John. b. at Springfield, Chelmsford, Essex, England, c1626; d. Jan. 17, 1703. American colonial merchant and official; son of William Pynchon. He constructed (1662) the first brick house in the Connecticut valley; later known as the Old Fort, this structure was instrumental in saving the lives of settlers who took refuge there during an Indian attack (1675) at the time of King Philip's War. He served (1662 et seq.) as deputy to the General Court, was assistant (c1662-1701) in the Council, and in 1680 was named (with Joseph Dudley) to set up the boundary line between Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Pynchon, William. b. c1590; d. at Wraybury, near Windsor, England, Oct. 24, 1662. American colonial merchant, trader, and official, one of the original patentees of the Massachusetts Bay Company, a founder (1636) of Springfield, Mass. Among those in the Winthrop emigration (1630), he served (1630-36, 1642-51) as an assistant of the colony, and became prominent as a landowner, fur-trader, and merchant. Giving over his property to his son, John, he left for England in 1652. His departure was occasioned by the charge of heresy which followed upon the publication of his criticism of the New England theocracy contained in The Meritorious Price of Our Redemption (1650).

Pyne (pin), Louisa Fanny. b. at London, Aug. 27, 1832; d. there, March 20, 1904. English singer. In 1854-57 she visited America, first appearing in the opera Sonnambula at New York, and singing at various other principal cities.

Pyeongyang (pyōng'yang', pyung'yāng'). [Also: Pieng-an, Pyengyang, Ping Yang; Japanese, Heijo.] City and port in NW Korea, on the Taotong River near the W coast, ab. 130 mi. NW of Seoul. It exports iron and steel products and coal. As the chief city and capital of the Communist-dominated North Korean regime (People's Republic of Korea), it was heavily bombed by United Nations forces. 285,965 (1940).

Pyra (pē'ri), Jakob Immanuel. b. at Kottbus, Germany, July 25, 1715; d. at Berlin, July 14, 1744. German poet. He was an associate of S. G. Lange, with whom he wrote Thyrsis und Damons freundschaftliche Lieder (1746) in antique meters, thus setting a style in the writing of odes which Klopstock followed. Lange and Pyra were opponents of Göttsched, and actually founded an association to fight him.

Pyramid Lake (pir'ā.mid). Lake in W Nevada, ab. 50 mi. NE of Carson City. It has no outlet. Length, ab. 35 mi.; area, ab. 185 sq. mi.; elevation, ab. 3,880 ft.

Pyramid Peak. Peak in W central Colorado, in Pitkin County, a summit of the Elk Mountains, a range of the Rocky Mountains. Elevation, ab. 14,000 ft.

Pyramids, Battle of the. Victory gained near the pyramids of Egypt, in July, 1798, by the French under Napoleon over the Mamelukes. By this success Napoleon made himself master of Egypt, but his triumph did not long endure. In the Battle of the Nile, in August of the same year, in the Bay of Abukir, a British naval force under Nelson overwhelmingly defeated Napoleon's supporting fleet (the French lost 13 out of 17 vessels), and thus virtually severed Napoleon's line of supply to the Continent.

Pyramus and Thisbe (pir'ā.mus, thiz'bē). In classical legend, two Babylonian lovers. They were forbidden to see each other by their parents, and talked together through a crack in the garden wall. They finally planned to meet at a certain tomb. Thisbe, who arrived first, was terrified by a lion, fled, and dropped her cloak. Pyramus arrived a few minutes later, found the cloak bloodstained from the lion's mouth (the lion, according to the traditional account, had eaten someone else just before it saw Thisbe), believed Thisbe dead, and killed himself. When Thisbe returned and found her lover dead, she, too, killed herself. Their story is celebrated by Ovid in his Metamorphoses, and Shakespeare introduces it in the interlude of the Midsummer Night's Dream.

Pyrenees (pir'ē.nēz). [French, Pyénées (pē.rā.nā); Spanish, Pinireos; Latin, Pyrenaei (pir.g.nē'i).] Pyrene (pir'ē.nē). Mountain range which separates France on the N from Spain on the S, and extends from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean Sea. It is divided into the Eastern, Central, and Western Pyrenees; about two thirds of the range is in Spain. The highest point (Pico de Aneto) reaches ab. 11,170 ft., in the Central Pyrenees. There are few passes, and the chain has a high average elevation; it constitutes a formidable barrier to transport excepting at its E and W ends. The higher summits have perpetual snow and there are some small glaciers; below these is a zone of mountain meadows, and farther down (below ab. 7,500 ft.) a forest zone of pines, fir, beeches, and oaks. The tiny republic of Andorra has survived for centuries in the Pyrenees. Length, ab. 300 mi.; greatest width, ab. 70 mi.

Pyrénees (pē.rā.nā), Basses. See Basses-Pyrénées.

Pyrénees, Hautes. See Hautes-Pyrénées.

Pyrenees (pir'ē.nēz), Peace of the. Treaty between France and Spain, concluded in November, 1659, on an island in the Bidasoa (a short stream near the Pyrenees, that constitutes the French-Spanish border). Spain ceded to France a great part of Artois, parts of Flanders, Hainaut, and Luxembourg, most of Roussillon, and part of Cerdagne; a marriage was arranged between Louis XIV and the Infanta of Spain, Maria Theresa, daughter of Philip IV. In effect, the treaty supplemented the Peace of Westphalia (1648), which had ended the Thirty Years' War (but which had not ended French-Spanish hostility. Intermittent fighting had continued, and Spain had openly utilized for her own purposes the French domestic difficulties created by the rising of the Fronde). In combination with the Peace of Westphalia, the Peace of the Pyrenees signaled the emergence of France as overwhelmingly the strongest single power in Europe.

Pyrénees-Orientales (pē.rā.nā.zo.ryan.tāl). Department in S France, bounded by the department of Ariège on the NW, the department of Aude on the N, the Mediterranean Sea on the E, and Spain on the S. It includes Roussillon and parts of Languedoc. In the Middle Ages the area belonged at various times to France and to Aragon. It now has numerous resorts and plays a major role in the French tourist trade. Wines of great diversity and excellent quality place the department among the foremost winemaking districts of France. Fruits, vegetables, potatoes, grain, and cheeses are also produced. There are also stone quarries, and iron and steel, chemical, food, and lumber industries. Capital, Perpignan; area, 1,598 sq. mi.; pop. 228,776 (1946).

Pyrgopolinices (pē'r'gō.pol.i.nī'sēn). Bragart, a character in the comedy Miles Gloriosus, by Plautus.

Pyrgos (pē'r'gōs). [Also, Pirgos.] Town in S Greece, in NW Peloponnesus, the capital of the nomos (department) of Elis, situated near the coast, E of the south tip of Zante Island; trade in wine, currants, and fruit. 20,066 (1951).

Pyrmont (pē'r.mont'). [Also, Bad Pyrmont.] Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, ab. 33 mi. SW of Hanover; ceramics, paper, tobacco, and toy manufactures. It is also a health resort. Famous guests have included Peter the Great of Russia, Frederick the Great of Prussia, Goethe, and Wilhelm von Humboldt. 16,264 (1950).

Pyrocles (pē'rō.klēz). Character in Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia. He disguises himself as a woman, Zelmane.

Pyrocles. Son of Acrates and brother of Cymocles, in Spenser's Faerie Queene.

Pyrrha (pir'ā). In Greek mythology, the wife of Deucalion, who with him survived the Flood and cast stones into the field from which rose men and women to replace the earth.

Pyrrho (pir'ō). b. in Elis, Greece, c360 B.C.; d. c270 B.C. Greek philosopher, the founder of the skeptical school.

Pyrrhus (pir'us). See also Neoptolemus.

Pyrrhus, b. c318 B.C.; killed at Argos, Greece, 272 B.C. King of Epirus, one of the greatest generals of antiquity. He was invited by Tarentum to assist it against Rome, defeated the Romans at Heraclea in 280 and at Asculum in 279, remained in Sicily until 276, and was defeated by the Romans at Beneventum in 275.

Pythagoras (pi.thag'ō.ras, pi-). b. in Samos, Greece; d. at Metapontum, in Magna Graecia, c497 B.C. Greek philosopher and mathematician. He emigrated (c529) to Crotona, in Magna Graecia, and later removed to Metapontum. None of his writings are extant, and it is almost impossible to distinguish between his own theories and those formulated by his followers. However, it was due to Pythagoras that mathematics was raised to the rank of a science, and many early geometrical discoveries have been ascribed to the Pythagorean thinkers. They are considered to have founded the theory of numbers, and the mathematical study of acoustics and music. They have appeared to have been among the very first (if not, in each instance, demonstrably the very first) thinkers to conceive of incommensurable quantities, and of the earth as a globe. Their emphasis on the study of numbers led on the one hand to number mysticism (which is what many modern readers now chiefly associate with Pythagoras and his school), and on the other hand to a quantitative study of nature.

Pytheas (pi.thē.as). fl. second half of the 4th century B.C. Greek navigator and astronomer. He was a native of Massilia (Marseilles), and visited the coasts of Spain, Gaul, and Great Britain. His works, only fragments of which remain, contain our earliest first-hand information concerning northwestern Europe.

Pythia (pi.th'ia). In Greek religion, the medium and oracular prophetess of Apollo at Delphi.

Pythian Games (pi.th'ian). One of the four great national festivals of ancient Greece, celebrated once in four years, in honor of Apollo, at Delphi. The most notable feature of the festival was originally a musical competition: the composition and performance of a hymn to the gods. After 582 B.C. athletic and equestrian games were added to the program.

Pythias (pi.th'ias). See Damon and Pythias.

Pythius (pi.th'ius). In Greek religion, an epithet or surname of Apollo in reference to him as the slayer of Python. Apollo Pythius was worshiped especially at Delphi.

Python (pi'thon). In Greek mythology, a huge female dragon or serpent born from the mud of the Flood. She guarded the cave and chasm at Delphi and there was killed by Apollo, who thus became henceforth the possessor and motivating deity of this oracle at Delphi. A ritual drama representing the killing of the dragon by the god was annually reenacted there.

Pyxus (pi.k'sus). Aeneas' name of Policastro.

Q

Q. Pseudonym of Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur Thomas. Qadisliya (kā.di.sē.yā). See Cadesia.

Qaf (kāf). See Kaf.

Qahirah (kā'hī.rā). Al-. Arabic name of Cairo, Egypt.

Qairwan (kīr.wān'). See Kairouan.

Qalyubiya (kālyō.bē.yā). Province in Lower Egypt, in NE Africa, in the Nile River delta S of the city of Cairo and E of the Damietta Branch of the river. Capital, Benha; settled area, 364 sq. mi.; pop. 690,156 (1947).

Qantara (kan'tā.rā). El. See El Kantara.

Qara Boghaz (kā.rā' bō.gāz'). See Kara-Bogaz-Göl.

Qara Kul (kā.rā' kōl). See Kara Kul.

Qara Qum (kā.rā' kōm). See Kara Kum.

Qarqar (kār.kār). See Karkar.

Qataghan (kā.tā.gān'). See Kataghan.

Qatar (kā'tār). [Also: Al Qatar, El Qatar, Katar.] Sheikhdom and British dependency on the E coast of Arabia, occupying a peninsula which juts into the Persian Gulf. The chief native industries are fishing and pearling. An oil concession has been recently developed by a British firm; reserves are estimated at 500 million barrels. Capital, Doha; area, ab. 8,300 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 30,000 (est. 1948).

Qatif (kā.tēf'). Former name of Dhahran.

Qazvin (kāz.vēn'). See Kazvin.

Qena (kā'nā). Province in Upper Egypt, in NE Africa, occupying land on both sides of the Nile River in the vicinity of the city of Qena, its capital, and situated between the provinces of Girga and Aswan. Settled area, 705 sq. mi.; pop. 1,107,915 (1947).

Qena. [Also: Geneh, Keneh, Kenneh; ancient names: Caene, Caenopolis.] Town in NE Africa, in Upper Egypt, capital of Qena province, on the E bank of the Nile River, ab. 350 mi. S of Cairo by rail. Its ancient temple ruins are of interest to tourists. 39,672 (1947).

Qift (kīf). See Coptos.

Qiryat Haim (kīr'yāt hām) or Qiryat Hayim (hī'yīm). See Kiryat Hayim.

Qishon (kī'shōn, kīsh'on). See Kishon.

Qizil Kum (kīzīl' kōm). See Kizil Kum.

Qizil Uzun (kīzīl' ā.zōn'). See Kizil Uzun.

Qomul (kō.mōl'). [Also: Hami, Khamil, Kumul.] Town in NW China, in the province of Sinkiang; important trading center and caravan junction. There is air service to Lanchow, in Kansu province. Pop. ab. 6,000.

Qoqchua (kēch'wā). See Quechua.

Qiqchua (kēch'wā). See Quechua.

Quad (kwōd). M. Pseudonym of Lewis, Charles Bertrand.

Quad Cities. Name applied to the cities of Rock Island, Moline, East Moline (all in Illinois), and Davenport, Iowa, taken as a group.

Quadi (kwā'dī). Ancient Germanic tribe, a part of the Suevi, the eastern neighbors of the Marcomanni in Bohemia. The Quadi were originally allies of the Marcomanni, but later (in the 4th century) appear in incursions into Roman territory. They were ultimately included under the common name Suevi.

Quadrilateral (kwōd.rī.lāt'ē.rāl). The four fortresses of Legnago, Mantua, Peschiera, and Verona, in Italy; famous for their strength and for their strategic importance during the Austrian occupation of N Italy.

Quadrone. The. Novel by Mayne Reid, published in 1856. It was adapted by Dion Boucicault for the play The Octoroon (1859).

Quadruple Alliance. League against Spain, formed in 1718 by Great Britain, France, Austria, and the Netherlands.

Quadruple Treaty. League formed against Dom Miguel of Portugal and Don Carlos of Spain in 1834. The signatory powers were Great Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal.

Quai d'Orsay (kā dōr.sā). Quay along the S bank of the Seine in Paris, on which are situated the department of foreign affairs and the building of the Corps Législatif.

hence, in journalistic usage, the French foreign office, or the government in general.

Quaker (kwā'kēr). The. Opera by Charles Dibdin, produced in 1777.

Quaker City. See Philadelphia, Pa.

Quakers. See Society of Friends.

Quakertown (kwā'kēr.tōn). Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Bucks County; manufactures of clothing, hosiery, stoves, and luggage. It was established by Quakers in 1715. Pop. 5,673 (1950).

Quality of Mercy. The. Novel by William Dean Howells, published in 1892.

Quality Street. Play (1901) by Sir James M. Barrie.

Quanah (kwā'nā). City in C Texas, county seat of Hardeman County, NW of Wichita Falls; manufactures of plaster from local gypsum deposits. It was named for a Comanche war chief. 4,589 (1950).

Quan Am (kwān' ām'). See Ba Quan Am.

Quantock Hills (kwōn'tōk). Range of hills in SW England, in Somersetshire, W of Bridgwater. Highest point, Wills Neck (1,262 ft.). Length, ab. 8 mi.

Quantrell (kwōn'trēl). Mrs. Mary A. See under Barbara Frietche.

Quantrill (kwōn'trīl), William Clarke. b. at Canal Dover, Ohio, July 31, 1837; d. June 6, 1865. American guerrilla leader with Confederate forces in the Civil War. Before 1861, he supported himself variously (and somewhat precariously) as a schoolteacher and gambler, chiefly in Kansas (which territory he left after being arrested on a horse-stealing charge). With the outbreak of the Civil War, he aligned himself with the Confederate side and subsequently became the commander of a guerrilla unit active in Kansas and Missouri, where he harassed Union sympathizers and helped capture (August, 1862) Indian pence. Mo. In 1862 his guerrilla band (which included Jesse and Frank James) became nominally a part of the Confederate regular service, and he was commissioned a captain; he led the force which carried out the sack of Lawrence, Kan., on Aug. 21, 1863, and later in the same year defeated a Union cavalry unit at Baxter Springs, Kan., putting to death 17 captives. Most authorities now agree that he was shot by Union troops in a surprise attack at Taylorville, Ky., in May, 1865, and that he died of his wounds, probably at Louisville, Ky., on June 6. However, in some parts of the South, and particularly in Texas, the legend has persisted that he was not killed, but survived the war to live as a country schoolteacher in the E part of Texas. Ballads of this part of the country also portray Quantrill as a sort of Robin Hood character; most documented historical accounts, however, indicate that he was a vicious and cold-blooded killer, who affiliated himself to the Confederate cause largely in order to obtain some sort of official sanction for looting and rapine.

Quantz (kwānts), Johann Joachim. b. at Oberscheden, Germany, Jan. 30, 1697; d. at Potsdam, Germany, July 12, 1773. German flutist and composer.

Quapaw (kwā'pō). [Also: Arkansas, Kwapa.] North American Indian tribe, of the Dhegihia group of the Siouan language family, formerly inhabiting E Arkansas. Their culture was typical Plains Indian village culture. Remnants survive today on a reservation in Oklahoma.

Quarai (kwā.rī'). [Also: Cuaray, Quarí (kwā.rā').] Former Indian village (pueblo), situated in W central New Mexico. It was abandoned in 1672 on account of the hostility of the Apaches.

Quaregna (kwā.rā'nýā), Conte di. Title of Avogadro, Amedeo.

Quaregnon (ká.re.nyōn). Town in S Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, W of Mons. It has coal mines, and an iron and steel industry. 17,842 (1947).

Quarles (kwōrlz, kwārlz), Francis. b. at Rumford, Essex, England, 1592; d. Sept. 8, 1644. English poet. He was educated at Christ's College, Cambridge, and became a student at Lincoln's Inn, London. He was city chronologer in 1639. Among his works (largely sacred poems) are Divine Emblems (1635), Hieroglyphics (1638), and a prose work, Enchiridion (1640).

Quarles, John. b. 1624; d. 1665. English poet and author; son of Francis Quarles.

Quarles, Philip. Character in Aldous Huxley's novel Point Counter Point (1928). A novelist, he is generally considered to be an autobiographical portrait of Huxley himself.

Quarnero (kwär.ne'ró), Golfo di. Italian name of Veliki Kvarner.

Quartering Act. See under Coercive Acts.

Quartley (kwórt'li), Arthur. b. at Paris, May 24, 1839; d. at New York, May 19, 1886. American marine painter. He was of English parentage, lived mostly at Baltimore and New York, and was elected a national academician in 1886.

Quartu Sant'Elena (kwär'tó sän.te'lä.nä). Town and commune in Italy, on the island of Sardinia, in the province of Cagliari, situated near the Gulf of Cagliari, E of Cagliari; stone quarries. Pop. of commune, 12,201 (1936); of town, 12,104 (1936).

Quasimodo (kwä.sí.mó'dó). Misshapen dwarf, one of the chief characters in Victor Hugo's Notre Dame de Paris.

Quaternary Era (kwä.tér.nä.rí). Geologic age marked by the rise of mankind. It is sometimes considered part of the preceding Cenozoic or Tertiary Era. See table at end of Volume III.

Quathlamba (kwät.lám'ba). See Drakensberg.

Quatre Cantons (ká.tre kán.tón), Lac des. French name of Lucerne, Lake of.

Quatrefoiges de Bréau (ká.tre.fáz.de brä.ó), Jean Louis Armand de. b. at Berthezème, Grand, France, Feb. 10, 1810; d. at Paris, Jan. 13, 1892. French naturalist, professor (1855) of anatomy and ethnology at the Museum of Natural History at Paris. He published works on zoology and anthropology.

Quatre Fils Aymon (ká.tre fés.ä.món), Les. Medieval French prose romance of adventure, from a narrative poem by Huon de Villeneuve, taken from earlier chansons in the 13th century; a popular French chapbook was founded on it. Aymon de Dordogne has four sons, Renaud or Reynaud (Italian, Rinaldo), Guichard or Guiscard, Alard or Aclard, and Richard, or Richardet, who are knighted by Charlemagne. To Renaud or Rinaldo appears in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, and in Tasso's poem.

Quatre Fils Aymon, Les. Opera by Michael William Balfe, produced at Paris in 1844.

Quatremère (ká.tre.mér), Étienne Marc. b. at Paris, July 12, 1782; d. there, Sept. 18, 1857. French Orientalist, professor of Hebrew and Syriac (1819 et seq.) at the Collège de France.

Quatremère de Quincy (ká.tre.mér.de kán.sé), Antoine Chrysostome. b. at Paris, Oct. 28, 1753; d. there, Dec. 8, 1819. French archaeologist and politician. He published Dictionnaire de l'architecture and critical works on Raphael, Michelangelo, Canova, and others.

Quatre Nations (ká.tre ná.syon), Collège des. See under Collège Mazarin.

Quatre Vents de l'Esprit (ká.tre.vän.de les.pré), Les. [Eng. trans., "The Four Winds of the Spirit."] Volume containing poems and a drama by Victor Hugo, published in 1881.

Quatre-vingt-treize (ká.tre.vän.trez). French title of Ninety-Three.

Quauhtemotzín (kwou.te.mó'tsín). See Guatemotzín or Guatemoc.

Quauhtlehuantizín (kwou'tle.wä.né.tsen'), Juan Bautista de San Antonio Muñon Chimalpáin. See Chimalpáin Quauhtlehuantizín, Juan Bautista de San Antonio Muñon.

Quay (kwä), Matthew Stanley. b. at Dillsburg, Pa., Sept. 30, 1833; d. at Beaver, Pa., May 28, 1904. American political boss. He began his political career before the Civil War, notably by his part in the Pennsylvania gubernatorial contest of 1860. During the Civil War he served as assistant commissary-general of the state, private secretary to the governor, colonel of the 134th Pennsylvania Infantry from August to December, 1862, as state military agent in Washington, as chief of transportation and telegraph services for his state, and as military secretary to the governor from 1863 to 1865.

His war record brought him the Congressional Medal of Honor. He served (1865-67) in the Pennsylvania legislature and as secretary of the commonwealth from 1872 to 1878. He became (1878) recorder of Philadelphia and again served (1879-82) as secretary of the commonwealth. As chairman of the state Republican committee, he gradually assumed absolute control of the party machinery in Pennsylvania. Despite the fact that he had been cited in a financial scandal involving the state treasurer's office, Quay was elected (1885) to that position. He served in the U.S. Senate from 1887 to 1899 and from 1901 to 1904. He was compelled to abandon his effort to win in the senatorial election of 1898 by charges of venality, but so great was his power in Pennsylvania politics that he was able to prevent the election of any other candidate. When Pennsylvania was thus left with only one senator at Washington, Quay was given an ad interim appointment by the governor of the state; the action led to a considerable furor among Pennsylvania voters, and the Senate refused to seat Quay. However, two years later Quay was able through his control of the dominant Pennsylvania political machine to secure reelection.

Quds esh Sherif (küts esh she.réf'), El. Arabic name of Jerusalem.

Quebec (kwé.bek'). [French, Québec (ká.bek).] Largest province of the Dominion of Canada. It is bounded by Hudson Strait on the N, Labrador on the E, the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Chaleur Bay on the SE, New Brunswick, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York on the S, Ontario on the SW and W, and James Bay and Hudson Bay on the W. About 90 percent of the area of Quebec is a rocky, largely forested region; in the extreme N this area is barren, and over much of it the softwood forests are not of the highest quality. Parts of this area are mountainous, reaching an elevation of ab. 3,905 ft. in the Laurentian Mountains; it is scarred by tens of thousands of depressions, most of these occupied by lakes; this region is largely a wilderness. Only in S Quebec is there a fertile lowland area, the broad valley of the St. Lawrence, extending from the U.S. border NE to the St. Lawrence estuary. In this region the agriculture and population of Quebec are concentrated. South of the St. Lawrence valley is another highland region, a continuation of the Appalachian system. The climate of Quebec varies sharply from S to N, and from the interior to Hudson Bay. The St. Lawrence valley has warm to hot summers; in the extreme N and NW there is no real summer at all, and July is a cool, raw season. Winters are everywhere cold, but in the N and C parts of Quebec they are severely cold and much longer than in the S. Farming is a major occupation; mixed farming is general, with a considerable specialization in dairy farming; vegetables and fruits are also produced in large quantities. The extensive softwood forests furnish pulpwood, the raw material for the pulp and paper industry; other industries, such as aluminum refining, are based on cheap hydroelectric power. Montreal is the chief industrial center of the province, and of Canada; it has a great diversity of industries, and is also the largest city and the chief port of Canada. The mineral resources of C and N Quebec are considerable, but in many cases development is hampered by the great expense of transportation; the new development of iron ore deposits on the Quebec-Labrador frontier has required an investment of over 200 million dollars, and the construction of a railroad ab. 360 mi. in length. Gold, iron, copper, silver, and zinc are produced in the N part. In S Quebec, roughly three fifths of the world's asbestos is mined. Government is vested in a lieutenant governor, executive council, legislative council, and legislative assembly. The province sends 24 senators and 73 representatives to the Dominion Parliament. About seven eighths of the population is Roman Catholic. Over four fifths of the inhabitants are of French Canadian origin, and speak French by preference. The region was explored by Cartier in 1535, and the first permanent settlement was made by the French at Quebec in 1608. The territory was ceded by France to Great Britain in 1763, the province of Upper Canada was set off in 1791, and Upper Canada and Lower Canada were united in 1841 and separated in 1867. Capital, Quebec; chief city, Montreal; area, 594,860 sq. mi. (including 71,000 sq. mi. of water); pop. 4,055,681 (1951).

Quebec. City in SE Quebec, capital of the province, situated at the junction of the St. Charles and St. Lawrence rivers. It is noted for its picturesque situation; the old citadel is situated on a high bluff overlooking the river. The city consists of an upper and a lower town (the latter has a distinctly European aspect, with narrow crooked streets). It has extensive trade, and is an important port for the export of timber and other products. It is the seat of Laval University (Roman Catholic). The site was visited by Cartier in 1535. A trading post founded by the French under Champlain in 1608 was taken by the British in 1629, and restored to the French in 1632; it was unsuccessfully attacked again by the British in 1690. The city was besieged by the British under Wolfe in 1759, and finally taken after the battle of Quebec in September, 1759. It was formally ceded to Great Britain in 1763, and was unsuccessfully attacked by the Americans under Montgomery in 1775 (Montgomery perished before its walls and his troops were dispersed). Pop. 150,757 (1941), 164,016 (1951); including suburbs, 200,814 (1941), 274,827 (1951).

Quebec, Battle of. See under Abraham, Plains of.

Quebec Act. Act of the British Parliament (June 22, 1774) which extended Quebec's boundaries S to the Ohio River and W to the upper Mississippi, granted religious toleration for Roman Catholics, and permitted the establishment of French civil law in Quebec. It was not, properly speaking, one of the Coercive Acts, although it is sometimes grouped with them. The measure, and particularly its provision closing the Ohio country to settlement by the seaboard colonists, aroused widespread resentment and indignation among the Americans. It touched off a wave of anti-Catholic propaganda in the colonies and served to intensify the American feeling of grievance against the mother country.

Quebec Conference. In World War II: 1. Allied three-power conference held at Quebec from Aug. 11 to 24, 1943, and attended by U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill, and a representative of the Chinese government. The broad plans for the opening of the European "second front" were developed by the Anglo-American leaders at this conference. 2. Meeting held at Quebec from Sept. 11 to 16, 1944, and attended by Roosevelt and Churchill. It was devoted to a discussion of strategy concerning military operations against Germany and Japan.

Quebec West. [French, Québec-Ouest (kə.bek.west).] Suburb of the city of Quebec, Canada, situated on the left bank of the St. Charles River just outside the Quebec city limits. 7,295 (1951).

Quechua (kech.wə). [Also: Quichua, Kechua, Keshua, Kichua, Qechua, Qqichua, Quetschua, Quichua.] Term applied to Quechua-speaking Indian tribes and certain Indian tribes who do not speak Quechua but live in deep valleys (or quechuas) of the central Andes. Their territory covers the highland areas of Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, N Chile and NW Argentina, and parts of the Peruvian coastal plains. They are also to be found scattered in the mountainous areas of E Peru and Ecuador, and in contiguous sections of the Amazon basin. Their prehistoric culture was typically Andean with agriculture, stone architecture, pottery making, weaving, and some herding. They were organized into independent tribes until their amalgamation into the Inca empire, the Incas themselves being a Quechua tribe which became powerful. The economy of the modern Quechua is based on agriculture, with potatoes, maize, barley, sugar cane, and cotton as important crops. Most of the labor is manual and simple irrigation is practiced. Herds of sheep, llama, and alpaca are becoming important in the economy. The main industries are weaving and pottery making. They live in villages built around a nucleus of related families and such communities often have a specialty of agricultural produce or handicraft, such as shoemaking, so that trade and the marketplace play an important role in their lives. The present population is estimated at about 5,500,000. Their religion is basically a native one fused with elements of Roman Catholicism.

Quechua. [Also: Incan or Runa-simi; for additional variants, see entry preceding.] One of the main language stocks of the Andean region. It became a lingua franca after the Spanish conquest.

Quedlinburg (kved.līn.burk). City in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, situated near the Harz Mountains, ab. 35 mi. SW of Magdeburg; trading and shipping center of a horticultural and market-gardening district, with metal and chemical industries. It is an old city, surrounded by medieval walls, with a notable castle, originally built by the emperor Otto I in 936 (but in its present form a Renaissance structure of the 16th century). The Dom (cathedral) is a Romanesque basilica of 1070-1129, with Gothic additions of 1320, and towers erected in the 19th century; it contains the tomb of the emperor Henry I. Quedlinburg passed to the house of Wettin in 1477, and was acquired by Brandenburg in 1698. The increase of population in the period 1939-46 was 29.5 percent. 35,142 (1946).

Queed (kwēd). Novel by Henry Synhor Harrison, published in 1911.

Queen (kwēn), Ellery. See Lee, Manfred B.

Queen Alexandra Range (aleg.zan'dra). Range of mountains in Antarctica W of the Beardmore Glacier at the head of the Ross Shelf Ice; named (1908) by Sir Ernest Shackleton for Queen Alexandra of Great Britain. Peak elevation, ab. 14,600 ft.

Queen Anne's War (anz). Name given in North America to that phase of the French and Indian Wars which took place in the period 1702-13. It paralleled the European conflict known as the War of the Spanish Succession.

Queen Charlotte Islands (shār.lot). Group of islands in the Pacific Ocean, W of British Columbia, Canada, and belonging to that province. The chief islands are Graham Island and Moresby Island. The islands are mountainous, and lumbering and fishing are the chief occupations. The inhabitants include many Indians. Area, ab. 3,970 sq. mi.; pop. 2,389 (1951).

Queen Charlotte Sound. Sea passage separating Vancouver Island from the mainland of British Columbia. It is between Hecate Strait and Charlotte Strait.

"Queen City of the Lakes." See Buffalo, N.Y.

"Queen City of the South." See Sydney, Australia.

"Queen City of Vermont" (vēr.mont). See Burlington, Vt.

Queen Dollalollola (dol.a.lol'a). See Dollalollola, Queen.

Queen Mab (mab). Poem by Shelley, printed in 1813.

Queen Mab. See also Mab, Queen.

Queen Mary (mār'i). Dramatic poem by Alfred Tennyson, published in 1875.

Queen Maud Land (mòd). Part of the continent of Antarctica between Coats Land and Enderby Land. It was named (1930) for the Queen of Norway.

Queen Maud Range. Range of prominent mountains in Antarctica extending SE from the head of the Ross Shelf Ice. It was discovered by Roald Amundsen in 1911 and named for the Queen of Norway.

Queen of China (chī'na), The. Volume of poems by Edward Shanks, published in 1919. It was the first winner of the Hawthornden prize.

Queen of Corinth (kor'inth), The. Play by Fletcher, Massinger, and others, produced before 1618 and printed in 1647.

"Queen of the Antilles" (an.til'ēz). See Cuba.

"Queen of the North." See under Edinburgh.

"Queen of the Pyrenees" (pir'ē.nēz). See under Bagnères-de-Luchon.

"Queen of the Sea." See Tyre.

"Queen of the West." See Cincinnati.

Queens (kwēnz). [Known popularly as the "Borough of Homes."] Borough of New York City, in the westernmost part of Long Island, and coterminous with Queens County. The largest of the city's five boroughs, it is bounded by the East River (separating it from the E Bronx) and Long Island Sound on the N, Jamaica Bay and the Atlantic Ocean on the S, Nassau County on the E, and Brooklyn and Manhattan on the W. Its many sections include Jackson Heights, Corona, Flushing, College Point, Whitestone, Bayside, Long Island City, Sunnyside, Woodside, Elmhurst, Winfield, Maspeth, Ridgewood, Forest Hills, Kew Gardens, Richmond, Hill, Woodhaven, Jamaica, Hollis, Queens Village, and St. Albans. Once-independent communities absorbed by the borough include Astoria, Long Island City, Flushing, Newtown, and Jamaica. Although Queens is frequently called the "borough of homes," Jamaica, Long Island City, and Astoria are known for their industries, which include automobile-assembly plants and factories producing food products, paint and varnish, clothing, pianos, and hosiery. The borough is linked to Manhattan and the Bronx by the Triborough Bridge, to the Bronx by the Bronx-Whitestone Bridge and the New York connecting Railroad (Hell Gate) Bridge, to Manhattan by the Queens Midtown Tunnel, railroad tunnels, and the Queensboro Bridge, and to Brooklyn by the Marine Parkway Bridge. The central building of the Queens Borough Public Library is at Jamaica. Queens College (municipal), Curedoor State Hospital (for mental illness), Queens General Hospital, Fort Tilden and Fort Totten (two of the city's fortifications), and the famous West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills (where national and international contests are held) are located in Queens. Also in this borough are some of New York City's outstanding public recreation areas, among them Alley Pond Park and Jacob Riis Park; also two race tracks, Jamaica and Aqueduct, and an entrance to the Belmont track, which lies in Nassau County. Here too are two of the world's largest and most important airports, La Guardia Field (municipal) and Idlewild (officially New York International Airport). Queens was settled (c1635) by the Dutch and purchased (1639) from the Indians. As part of New Netherland it was taken (1664) by the English; named (1683) Queens County (as part of the British province of New York) after the English Queen Catherine of Braganza, wife of Charles II. During the Revolutionary War Queens was mainly Tory in sympathy, and was occupied (1776 et seq.) by the British. In 1898, under the legislation establishing the consolidation of several areas with New York City, Queens was annexed by the city, although a group of towns which opposed consolidation withdrew from Queens and formed Nassau County. After World Wars I and II the borough experienced tremendous residential and commercial development. The New York World's Fair was held (1939-40) on the site now called Flushing Meadow Park, the fair's administration building later housing (1946 et seq.) the temporary headquarters of the United Nations General Assembly. Like each of the five boroughs, Queens has a borough president who administers local affairs. Area, 108 sq. mi.; pop. 1,297,634 (1940); 1,550,849 (1950).

Queensberry (kwēnz'ber'), Duke and Earl of. Titles held by various members of the Douglas family. Queensberry, 8th Marquis of. [Title of John Sholto Douglas.] b. 1844; d. 1900. English nobleman, notable as the person chiefly responsible for drawing up the rules of boxing now followed in virtually every country of the world. The Queensberry rules were first outlined in 1865 and by 1889 had been standardized and put into effect on both sides of the Atlantic. The Marquis of Queensberry is also of some note from the fact that it was his objection, by way of a public letter written to Oscar Wilde in 1895, to the friendship between the writer and Queensberry's son that precipitated the libel suit which brought about revelation of Wilde's various immoralities.

Queensbury and Shelf (kwēnz'ber' i, -ber; shelf). Urban district and manufacturing town in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 4 mi. N of Halifax, ab. 196 mi. N of London by rail. It comprises the former urban districts of Queensbury (also called Queenshead), and Shelf. The town has manufactures of worsteds, 9,067 (1951).

Queens' College. College of Cambridge University, England, founded by Margaret of Anjou, consort of Henry VI, in 1448, and refounded by Elizabeth Woodville, consort of Edward IV, in 1465. The vaulted gateway passes under a square tower with octagonal battlemented turrets at the angles. The Great Court is bordered by the venerable chapel, hall, and library. There are three other old courts (the Cloister Court, Erasmus Court, and Walnut Tree Court), besides one dating from a later period.

Queen's College. College of Oxford University, England, founded in honor of Philippa, consort of Edward III, by her confessor, Robert de Eglesfield, in 1340. The present buildings date from 1692, except the chapel, which is of 1714. The hall, built by Christopher Wren, contains fine portraits. The High Street front has a circular belvedere, with coupled columns, over the entrance.

Queen's County. Former name of County Laoighis. Queen's Exchange, The. Comedy by Richard Brome, printed in 1657, and reprinted (1661) with the title The Royal Exchange.

Queensferry (kwēnz'fer'i). [Also: Queensferry South, South Queensferry.] Royal burgh and seaport in S Scotland, in West Lothian, situated on the S bank of the Firth of Forth, ab. 7 mi. W of Edinburgh. The celebrated Forth Bridge crosses the Firth of Forth from Queensferry in West Lothian to North Queensferry in Fifehire. 2,277 (est. 1948).

Queen's Hall. Concert hall at London, in Langham Place, privately built in 1893. It was destroyed during World War II.

Queenshead (kwēnz'hed). See under Queensbury and Shelf.

Queensland (kwēnz'land). State of the Commonwealth of Australia, in the NE part. It is bounded by the Gulf of Carpentaria and Torres Strait on the N, the Coral Sea on the NE, the Pacific Ocean on the E, New South Wales on the S, South Australia on the SW, and the Northern Territory on the W. The Great Barrier Reef extends for over 1,000 mi. along its coast. Queensland is traversed by the Great Dividing Range parallel to the E coast; the mountains reach a peak elevation of 5,438 ft., but in other places are relatively low, and constitute only a series of high, hilly ridges. The climate of Queensland is generally warm; the N part, which reaches to within 700 mi. of the equator, has a hot climate the year round, with a winter dry season. The S part of Queensland has hot summers and mild winters. In the mountains and the desert interior frost may occur. Moisture conditions vary greatly, but in general there is a rapid change from humid conditions along the E coast to grassland steppe W of the mountains, and desert in the SW corner of the state. Agriculture is the chief industry of Queensland: wheat and sugar cane are the chief crops; livestock (chiefly sheep and cattle) raising is of major importance and the chief activity W of the Great Dividing Range. Manufacturing is chiefly associated with processing of agricultural and forest products, though Brisbane has diverse industries. The chief minerals produced are coal, mined in the SE near Brisbane, and lead and zinc, produced chiefly at Mount Isa in the NW; gold, copper, and tin are also produced. Railways total 6,567 mi., and there is an extensive network of roads. Several port cities carry on extensive commerce in sugar, bananas, timber, wheat, and meat. Brisbane is the only large city in the state, and is its capital and chief commercial center. Government is vested in a governor and assembly (elected) consisting of 62 members. Queensland sends six senators and ten representatives to the federal Parliament. Queensland was made a penal settlement in 1826, was opened to free settlers in 1842, and was made a separate colony in 1859. Capital, Brisbane; area, 670,500 sq. mi.; pop. 1,106,269 (1947); 1,191,245 (est. 1950).

Queen's Maries (mä-rēz'), The. Popular Scottish ballad relating the death of Mary Hamilton, one of the "Queen's Maries." The Maries are named as "Marie Seaton and Marie Beaton and Marie Carmichael and me" (i.e., Marie Hamilton). They belonged to the four families of Livingston, Fleming, Seaton, and Beaton. These four Maries went to France with Mary Stuart when she was a child of five in 1548, and returned with her to Scotland in 1561. Young Marie Hamilton found a lover at court, became pregnant, and drowned her child at birth. For this she was hanged. Scott's version, published in 1833, was a composite of several older versions. There are 28 versions of the ballad altogether.

Queens-Midtown Tunnel (kwēnz'mid'toun). Motor-vehicle tunnel under the East River, linking the borough of Manhattan in New York City with Long Island City in the borough of Queens on Long Island. Built by the New York City Tunnel Authority, it was opened on Nov. 15, 1940; it consists of two tubes, each having two lanes. Length, ab. 7,600 ft.

Queen's Quair, or the Six Years' Tragedy (kwär), The. Historical novel by Maurice Hewlett, published in 1904. It presents a sympathetic treatment of Mary, Queen of Scots.

Queenston (kwēnz'ton) or Queenstown (kwēnz'toun). Place in Ontario, Canada, situated ab. 5 mi. N of Niagara Falls. It was the scene of a victory of the British under Brock (killed early in the action) over the Americans, Oct. 13, 1812.

Queenstown (kwēnz'toun). Town in S Africa, in Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated in the E section of the province, ab. 153 mi. inland (NW) from East London, with which it is connected by rail. It is in the heart of a rich wheat and wool producing district. A mountain pass near the town leads across the nearby section of the Drakensberg range. Pop. 23,600, including 8,194 Europeans (1946).

Queenstown. Former name of Cöbhn.

Queen's Wigs. The. Novel by Naomi Royde-Smith, published in 1934.

Queen Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ä). Biographical study by Lytton Strachey, published in 1921. Strachey's candid and human portrait of the queen set a new style in biographical writing.

Queque (kwē'kweg). Polynesian prince and harpooner in Moby Dick (1851), novel by Herman Melville.

Queer Street (kwir). Novel by Edward Shanks, published in 1932.

Quiépo de Llano (kä'pō dā lyā'nō), Gonzalo. b. at Valladolid, Spain, 1875; d. at Seville, March 9, 1951. Spanish general, propagandist for Franco forces during the Spanish Civil War. He was commissioned (1893) as an army officer and fought in Cuba during the Spanish-American War. After a few years at Madrid he was sent to Morocco and was active in the administration there under Primo de Rivera. In 1926 he compromised himself in a plot against Alfonso XIII on behalf of authoritarian republicanism and was exiled. He stayed in Portugal and France until the amnesty of 1931, when he returned to military duty in Spain. During the Spanish Civil War (1936-39), which he entered on the side of Franco, his most outstanding service was the development and use of radio broadcasting for propaganda purposes in the period 1936-38. He is credited with coining the term "Fifth Column," which has also been attributed to General Mola.

Quirós (kä'rōsh'), Pedro Fernandes de. [Also, Quirós] b. c1560; d. at Panama, 1614. Portuguese navigator. He commanded an exploring expedition in the Pacific (1604-06), and discovered the New Hebrides.

Queiroz (kä'rōsh'), José Maria Eça de. b. at Póvoa de Varzim, Portugal, 1845; d. at Paris, Aug. 16, 1900. Portuguese novelist, short-story writer, and journalist, generally acclaimed as the master of the naturalistic novel, which he introduced in Portugal with his O Crime do padre Amaro (1875). Three other well-known novels of his early period were O Primo Basílio (1878; Eng. trans., Dragon's Teeth, 1889), A Relíquia (1887; Eng. trans., The Relic, 1925), and Os Maias (1888).

Quelimane (kel.i.mā'ne). [Also: Kilimane, Quilimane.] Town in SE Africa, in Mozambique, on the Quelimane River near its mouth, ab. 75 mi. N of the mouth of the Zambezi River. It has a considerable trade and is connected by a short railroad line with the interior. It is the capital of Zambezia province. 7,500 (1940).

Quelimane River. [Also: Kilimane, Quilimane.] River in SE Africa, in Mozambique; the northern mouth of the Zambezi River.

Quelpart or Quelpaerd (kwel'pärt). Former names of Cheju.

Que ma joie demeure (kə mā zhvä de.mër). Lyrical novel (1935; Eng. trans., Joy of Man's Desiring, 1940) by the French writer Jean Giono, in which a farming community attempts to find communal happiness in a return to primitive agricultural economics. Taking this story as a manual of conduct, groups of young Frenchmen were attempting to put its precepts into actual practice when they were interrupted by World War II.

Quennell (kwen'el), Peter (Courtney). b. at London, March 9, 1905—. English novelist, biographer, critic, and poet. He is editor of the Cornhill Magazine, and has contributed to magazines including the Criterion, Life and Letters, and the New Statesman and Nation. Author of biographical and critical works including Baudelaire and the Symbolists (1929), Byron: The Years of Fame (1936), Caroline of England (1940), and Byron in Italy (1941). In Byron: A Self Portrait (1950), he edited Byron's letters and diaries. He has also written a novel, The Phoenix-Kind (1931), Sympathy and Other Stories (1933), and volumes of poetry, including Poems (1926) and Inscription on a Fountain (1929).

Quental (kān'tāl'), Antero Tarquínio de. b. at Ponta Delgada, Azores, 1842; committed suicide there, 1891. Portuguese poet. The most famous leader of the group at Coimbra which fought against romanticism and for realism in Portuguese literature, he is now generally recognized as one of the greatest poets in Portuguese literary history.

Quentin Durward (kwen'tin dēr'ward). Novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1823. Quentin Durward is an archer of the Scottish Guard, who seeks his fortune in France in the reign of Louis XI.

Que Que (kwē'kwē). Mining town in Southern Rhodesia, S central Africa, ab. 153 mi. NE of Bulawayo, on the main rail line. It is a major gold-mining center, and a commercial center for the surrounding livestock-raising area. Iron and steel works have been established in the town to utilize rich iron-ore reserves in nearby areas. Pop. 1,933, including 1,761 Europeans (1951).

Querandi (kā.rān'dē). See Querendi.

Quérard (kā.rār'), Joseph Marie. b. at Rennes, France, Dec. 25, 1797; d. at Paris, Dec. 3, 1865. French bibliographer. He published La France littéraire (1826-42) and La Littérature française contemporaine (1842-57).

Quercy (ker.sē). Former county of France, situated in parts of Guienne and Gascony, S of Limousin, and approximately coextensive with the present department of Lot.

Querecho (kā.rā'chō). Group of Apache Indian tribes formerly found in C and W Texas.

Querendi (kā.ren'dē). [Also: Kerandi, Querandi.] Tribe of South American Indians of Argentina, formerly dwelling along the Plata and Paraná rivers. They fiercely resisted white colonists, and are now extinct. Various linguistic and ethnic affinities have been proposed for them, but most scholars now believe them to have been a branch of, or closely related to, the Puelche.

Queres (kā'rus). See Keres; see also Kerasan.

Querétaro (kā.rā'tārō). State in E Mexico, surrounded by the states of San Luis Potosí, Hidalgo, México, Michoacán, and Guanajuato; minerals and agricultural produce. It was conquered by the Spanish in the 16th century, and was a military center during the war with the U.S. (1846-48) and again during Maximilian's reign (1862-63). At one time port of Guanajuato, it achieved statehood in 1824. Capital, Querétaro; area, 4,432 sq. mi.; pop. 282,608 (1950).

Querétaro. City in C Mexico, capital of Querétaro state, ab. 110 mi. NW of Mexico City. It has opal mines, and manufactures of cotton, flour, and leather. The peace of Guadalupe-Hidalgo was ratified here in 1848, and here Maximilian was besieged and captured in 1867. The site antedates the Aztec empire. 336,299 (1940).

Quervfurt (kvär'fūrt). Town in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, situated near the Unstrut River, ab. 35 mi. W of Leipzig, 7,976 (1946).

Querouaille (kā'rwāl), Louise Renée de. See Kéroualle, Louise Renée de.

Quervain (ker.vān), Fritz de. b. at Sitten, Switzerland, May 4, 1868; d. at Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 24, 1940. Swiss surgeon. He was known for his studies in the pathology and surgery of the thyroid, and achieved world renown for his textbook on surgery. He propagated prophylaxis of goiter, and described (1895) an inflammation of the tendons of the thumb.

Quesada (kā.sā'fūā). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, near the source of the Guadalquivir River, ab. 40 mi. E of Jaén; agricultural trade. 11,309 (1940).

Quesada, Ernesto. b. 1858; d. 1934. Argentine diplomat, jurist, and historian, director of the Academia Argentina. Author of El Problema del idioma nacional, Un Invierno en Rusia, El Pensamiento filosófico contemporáneo, and others.

Quesada, Gonzalo de. b. at Havana, Cuba, Dec. 15, 1868; d. at Berlin, 1915. Cuban diplomat. He was graduated (1888) from the College of the City of New York, and was associated with José Martí in the struggle for Cuban independence. He was a special commissioner (1900) to the U.S., a member (1901) of the Cuban constitutional convention, and minister to the U.S. and (1912 et seq.) to Germany. Author of A History of Free Cuba (1898), Cuba (1905), and many others.

Quesada, Gonzalo Jiménez de. See Jiménez de Quesada, Gonzalo.

Quesnay (kə.nā), François. b. at Méré, near Montfort-l'Amaury, France, June 4, 1694; d. at Paris, Dec. 16, 1774. French political economist and physician, founder of the school of the physiocrats. He was surgeon to Louis XV. His chief work is Tableau économique (1758; modified first edition lost). He also contributed to the Encyclopédie and wrote medical works.

Quesne (kən), Geneviève R. Le. See Tabouis, Geneviève R.

Quesnel (kwə.nel'; French, ke.nel). Town in C British Columbia, Canada, on the Fraser River. There is some farming in the area as well as a little mining, 1,587 (1951).

Quesnel (ke.nel), Pasquier. b. at Paris, July 14, 1634; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Dec. 2, 1719. French Roman Catholic theologian, opposed by the Jesuits as a Gallicanist and Jansenist. His best-known work is Réflexions morales sur le Nouveau Testament (1687), condemned by Pope Clement XI in the bull Unigenitus (1713).

Quesnoy-sur-Deule (ke.nwā.sūr.dél). Town in N France, in the department of Nord, on the Deule River ab. 8 mi. NW of Lille. It has textile industries. 3,720 (1946).

Quêtelet (kāt.lē), Lambert Adolphe Jacques. b. at Ghent, Belgium, Feb. 22, 1796; d. at Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 17, 1874. Belgian mathematician and astronomer, especially noted as a statistician. He was successively professor of mathematics at the royal college at Ghent (1815) and at the Athenaeum at Brussels (1819), and of astronomy at the military school at Brussels (1836). He was the head of the statistical commission of Belgium. He published Sur l'homme et le développement de ses facultés (1835), Sur la théorie des probabilités (1846), Du système social (1848), L'anthropométrie (1871), and others.

Queschua (kech.wā). See Quechua.

Quetta (kwet'a). City in Pakistan, the capital of Baluchistan, ab. 380 mi. N of Karachi. It is a strategic point commanding the route between India and southern Afghanistan. Pop., with cantonment, 83,892 (1951).

Quetta-Pishin (-pish'en). [Also, Pishin.] District in Pakistan, in Baluchistan, N of Quetta, on the border of Baluchistan and Afghanistan; known for its horses and fruit. Area, 5,310 sq. mi.; pop. 156,289 (1941).

Quetzalcohuatl (kēt.sāl.kō.wā'tl). [Eng. trans., "Feathered Serpent."] Creator god and culture hero of the Aztec Indians. He was the god of learning and civilization and of the priesthood; he was considered to have given the people maize, weaving, and their calendar. He was also known as Ehecatl, god of the winds. He was the principal deity and legendary ruler of the Toltec Indians and the patron deity of the late Maya Indians at Chichén Itzá, among whom he was called Kukulcan. There is a considerable difference of opinion among scholars as to the exact position Quetzalcohuatl occupied in the history of Middle America. By some he is interpreted as a mythological figure only, and thereby an embodiment of important elements in the histories of the Toltec, Maya, and Aztec, all of whom shared many other cultural traditions. By others Quetzalcohuatl is taken as an actual historical figure who ruled among the Toltec for a time and then moved to Yucatán, where he and his companions introduced a number of practices of Mexican derivation which are reflected in the distinctive architecture of Chichén Itzá.

Queuille (ké'y), Henri. b. at Neuville d'Ussel, Corrèze, France, March 31, 1884— . French political leader and physician, premier (1948 et seq.) of France and leader of the Radical-Socialist Party. He practiced medicine in Corrèze, was a medical officer during World War I, and was a deputy (1914–35, 1945 et seq.), and a senator (1935–40). He was a member of 23 different cabinets, holding at various times the posts of minister of agriculture, food supply, public works, communications, and public health.

In June, 1940, while minister of food supply in the Reynaud cabinet, he opposed surrender to the Germans; he entered the Resistance movement, and escaped (1943) to London, where he joined the Free French movement. He became (June, 1943) a commissioner in the French Committee of National Liberation, was elected (1947) chairman of the Radical-Socialist group in parliament, and was minister of state (July–August, 1948) in the Marie cabinet before forming (Sept. 11, 1948) his own ministry. He resigned in October, 1949, was again premier (August, 1950, and March–July, 1951), and served as interior minister (1950–51) and as vice-premier (1952).

Queux (kē), William Tufnell Le. See Le Queux, William Tufnell.

Quevedo y Villegas (kē.nā'tnō ē mē.lā'gās), Francisco Gómez de. b. at Madrid, Sept. 26, 1580; d. at Villanueva de los Infantes, Spain, Sept. 8, 1645. Spanish satirist, humorist, and novelist. He was employed in the civil service, and was imprisoned for political libel. Among his satirical works is Sueños (Visions). His longest prose satire, Historia y vida del Buscón (1626; also El Gran Tacano, Pablo de Segovia), portrays the rise and fall of a blustering but resourceful adventurer whose triumphs and successes are always frustrated by the discovery of his true character.

Quezaltenango (kē.sāl.tā.nāng'gō). Department in SW Guatemala. Capital, Quezaltenango; area, 753 sq. mi.; pop. 184,860 (1950).

Quezaltenango. Town in W Guatemala, in Quezaltenango department, ab. 75 mi. NW of Guatemala City. 27,782 (1950).

Quezaltepēc (kē.sāl.tā.pēk'). See San Salvador.

Quezon (kē'sōn). [Former name, Tayabas.] Province in N Philippine Islands, renamed in honor of Manuel Luis Quezon y Molina after World War II. It embraces a large part of the E coast of Luzon, a part of the SE peninsula, and numerous islands E and S, including Polillo, with adjacent islands. It is bounded by Isabela, the Philippine Sea, and Camarines Norte on the N, the Philippine Sea and Camarines Sur on the E, the Sibuyan Sea and Batangas on the SW, and Laguna, Rizal, Bulacan, Nueva Ecija, and Nueva Vizcaya on the W. The principal bays on the E coast are Dingalan, Baler, and Casiguran, the last a fine harbor for large vessels in all weather. Lamon and Sogod bays indent the N coast, and inlets from the deep Gulf of Ragay the E coast of the peninsula. South of the province is Tayabas Bay. The surface is very mountainous, and the mountains are densely wooded. Rivers are numerous, but short and of little importance. Coal is found in the peninsular part of the province and in Pagbilao, Polillo, and other islands. Among the products are hemp, pineapples, bananas, mangos, sweet potatoes, sugar cane, rice, and copra. The inhabitants are chiefly Tagalogs and Bicolos. Capital, Lucena; area, 4,616 sq. mi.; pop. 416,719 (1948).

Quezon City. City in W Luzon, Philippine Islands, a northeastern suburb of Manila and the new capital of the Philippine Republic. It was incorporated in 1940 as the future site of the national capital, and has been under development since the end of World War II. It was named for Manuel Luis Quezon y Molina. In 1948 the national capital was officially transferred to Quezon City. 107,977 (1948).

Quezon y Molina (ē mō.lē'nā), Manuel Luis. b. at Baler, Luzon, Philippine Islands, Aug. 19, 1878; d. at Saranac Lake, N.Y., Aug. 1, 1944. Philippine statesman. He was trained for the law at Santo Tomas University, Manila, took part in the Aguinaldo uprising, was a member (1907–09) of the Philippine assembly, and from 1909 to 1916 was Philippine resident commissioner to the U.S. Congress. He served (1916–35) as president of the Philippine senate, and was elected (September, 1935) the first president of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. He was reelected in 1941 and, after the Japanese invasion of the Philippine Islands, established (1942) a government-in-exile in Australia and later at Washington, D.C.

Quft (kuft). See Coptos.

Quiaica (kyā'kā). See Chiyaika.

Quibdó (kēb.dō'). City in NW Colombia, capital of Chocó intendancy. 5,278 (1938).

Quibo (kē'bō). See Coiba.

Quibula (kē.bō'lā). See Chivula.

Quiché (kě.chā'). Powerful Mayan Indian tribe of W Guatemala at the time of the Spanish conquest, and one of the chief branches of the southern Maya. The tribe had its capital at Utatlan, near the present town of Santa Cruz del Quiché, NW of what is today Guatemala City. The Quiché were the first Indians encountered by Pedro de Alvarado when he entered Guatemala in 1524. Their descendants now form a large part of the rural population of the same region.

Quiché. [Also, El Quiché.] Department in C Guatemala. Capital, Santa Cruz del Quiché; area, 3,235 sq. mi.; pop. 173,516 (1950).

Quichotte (kě.shot), Don. See Don Quichotte.

Quichua or Quichua (kěch.wā). See Quechua.

Quick (kwik), (John) Herbert. b. near Steamboat Rock, Grundy County, Iowa, Oct. 23, 1861; d. at Columbia, Mo., May 10, 1925. American lawyer, editor, politician, and author. Admitted (1889) to the bar in Iowa, he practiced (1890-1908) his profession at Sioux City, Iowa, where he served as mayor (1898-1900). He was associate editor (1908-09) of La Follette's Weekly and editor (1909-16) of Farm and Fireside. Among his works are In the Fairland of America (1901), Aladdin & Co. (1904), Double Trouble (1906), The Fairview Idea (1919), From War to Peace (1919), and The Real Trouble with the Farmers (1924). He is best known for his trilogy of Iowa farm life: Vandemark's Folly (1921), The Hawkeye (1923), and The Invisible Woman (1924). His autobiography is One Man's Life (1925).

Quickly (kwik'li), Mistress or Hostess. Servant to Dr. Caius in Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor; also, a hostess in the first and second parts of King Henry IV and in King Henry V.

Quick or the Dead, The. Novelette by Amélie Rives (Princess Troubetzkoy), published in 1883.

Quicunque vult (kwě.kung'kwe vult). See Athanasian Creed.

Quidde (kvīd'e), Ludwig. b. at Bremen, Germany, March 23, 1858; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, March 5, 1941. German politician and pacifist. He was a member (1907-18) of the Bavarian diet, and a member (1919) of the Weimar constitutional assembly. He was president (1919-29) of the German Peace Society, and shared with Ferdinand E. Buisson the Nobel peace prize in 1927. He went into exile in 1933. He wrote Caligula (1894), a satire on the Kaiser, Völkerbund und Demokratie (1920), and Die Schuldfrage (1922).

Quietists (kwī'e.tists). See Molinists.

Quindy or Quinynd (kě.ēn'dē). Town in SW Paraguay, in Paraguari department. Pop. ab. 19,000.

Quijote de la Mancha (kě.hō'tā dā lā mán'chā), Don. Full Spanish name of Don Quixote.

Quileute (kwīl.e.ōt'). Tribe of North American Indians formerly living on the coast of Washington in the region of Cape Flattery. Their culture was a typical north Pacific coast fishing, whaling, sealing culture. They spoke a Chimakuan language. The Hoh Indians comprised their southern division. Today a few hundred of each survive on reservations in Washington.

Quilmane (kil.i.mā'ne). See Quelimane.

Quill (kwil), (Michael) Joseph. b. at Gortloughera, Kilgarvan, County Kerry, Ireland, Sept. 18, 1905.—American labor leader and politician. He came to the U.S. in 1926 and acquired citizenship in 1931. First employed as a laborer in the construction of the Independent Subway System, and later as a gateman with the Interboro Subway, in New York City, he was a leader in the organization, in 1934, of the Transport Workers Union of America. In 1935 Quill was chosen president of the union, which in 1937 affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, the precursor of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO). The Transport Workers Union succeeded in getting closed-shop contracts with the New York City transit lines, and by invitation of transit workers in other major cities of the U.S., expanded its activities on a national scale. In 1936 Quill was to the fore in organizing the American Labor Party in New York State, and as a candidate of that party was in 1937 elected a member of the city council of New York City. In 1949 he became president of the New York City Council of the CIO, and in 1950 a vice-president of the national CIO.

Quillard (kě.yār), Pierre. b. at Paris, July 14, 1864; d. at Neuilly, France, Feb. 4, 1912. French poet and scholar. Author of La fille aux mains coupées (1886) and other collections of verse, but better known for his many magazine articles on the culture and political problems of the Near East, and for his literary criticism, most of which was devoted to poetry.

Quiller-Couch (kwīl'er.kōch'), Sir Arthur Thomas. [Pseudonym, Q.] b. in Cornwall, England, Nov. 21, 1863; d. 1944. English man of letters. He was a lecturer in classics at Trinity College, Oxford (1886-87), was on the editorial staff of the Speaker from its start until 1899, and in 1912 was appointed King Edward VII professor of English literature at Cambridge University. He was knighted in 1910. Among his publications are The Splendid Spin (1889), The Blue Pavilions (1891), The Warwickshire Avon (1892), The Delectable Duchy (1893), Wandering Heath (1895), Poems and Ballads (1896), Fairy Tales from Far and Near (1896), Adventures in Criticism (1896), The Ship of Stars (1899), Old Fires and Profitable Ghosts (1900), Healy Wesley (1903), Shining Ferry (1905), George Eliot (1906), The Mayor of Troy (1906), Major Vigoureux (1907), Lady Good-for-Nothing (1910), Brother Copas (1911), The Vigil of Venus (1912), and others. In 1897 he was selected to finish Robert Louis Stevenson's uncompleted novel St. Ives. He compiled and edited the Oxford Book of English Verse, the Oxford Book of Ballads, and The Oxford Book of Victorian Verse.

Quillinan (kwīl'i.nan), Mrs. Edward. See Wordsworth, Dorothy.

Quillota (kě.yō'tā). Town in N Chile, in Valparaíso province. 17,232 (1940).

Quilmes (kěl'mās). Official name (since 1952), Eva Perón. City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, ab. 12 mi. SE of downtown Buenos Aires; industrial and residential suburb with textile, brewing, glass, rayon, steel, and oil-refining industries; bathing beach on the Río de la Plata. 115,113 (1947).

Quiloa (kil'wā). See Kilwa Kisiwani.

Quilombo (kěl.lōm'bō). See Kakonda.

Quilp (kwīlp). In Charles Dickens's Old Curiosity Shop, a malicious dwarf who abuses his wife.

Quilter (kwīl'ter), Roger. b. at Brighton, England, Nov. 1, 1877; d. Sept. 21, 1953. English composer. Among his songs and similar works are Song Cycle to Julia (1905), Seven Elizabethan Lyrics (1908), Now Sleep the Crimson Petal, and settings for works by Tennyson and Shakespeare. Among his orchestral works are Serenade (1907), Three English Dances, and A Children's Overture.

Quimbangala (kēm.bāng.gā'lā). See Mbangala.

Quimbaya (kēm.bā'yā). Tribe of South American Indians of the N Colombia highlands, now extinct. They were village dwellers and were famous for their metallurgy, especially their work in gold. It was formerly suggested that they were of Chibchan linguistic stock, but today scholars generally agree that they spoke a dialect of the Chocó language, with probable Cariban affinities.

Quimby (kwīm'bi), Phineas Parkhurst. b. at Lebanon, N.H., Feb. 16, 1802; d. Jan. 16, 1866. Founder of mental healing in the U.S., whose fundamental ideas are considered by some to have been employed by Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science. A clockmaker, with little or no formal education, he became interested (1838) in mesmerism, and subsequently abandoned his trade to give public exhibitions of his hypnotic powers. In 1847 he turned from mesmerism to mental healing, setting up (1859) his practice at Portland, Me., where he worked out a system of philosophy to which, on occasion, he applied the term "Christian Science." Among his patients in 1862 and 1864 was Mary Baker Eddy (then Mrs. Daniel Patterson), who became acquainted with his manuscripts. It is believed by many that she based her ideas upon the principles outlined by him (although this belief is not shared by followers of Christian Science). After Quimby's death, two former patients, Julius Dresser and Warren Felt Evans, carried on his work under the name of the New Thought movement.

Quimper (kañ.per). [Also, Quimper-Corentin (-kōrīn.tān').] Town in NW France, the capital of the département of Finistère. It has a port usable by small vessels and is known for the manufacture of a type of pottery called Quimper ware or Brittany ware. The Cathedral of Saint

Corentin is one of the finest Gothic buildings in Brittany. | 20,149 (1946).

Quin (kwín). Dan. Pseudonym of Lewis, Alfred Henry. Quin, Sir Edwin Richard Windham Wyndham-. [Titles: 3rd Earl of Dunraven and Mount-Earl, 1st Baron Knebworth.] b. at London, May 19, 1812; d. at Great Malvern, England, Oct. 6, 1871. English nobleman, noted for his interest in architecture and archaeology. As a member of Parliament (1837-51) he worked to safeguard the right of religious education by Roman Catholics in Ireland (he was himself a convert to Roman Catholicism). He was one of the founders of the Irish Archaeological Society (1840) and of the Celtic Society (1845).

Quin, James. b. at London, Feb. 24, 1693; d. at Bath, England, Jan. 21, 1765. English actor. He first appeared at London in 1715, and in 1720 he made a great success as Falstaff. He was the rival of Garrick until the latter became unmistakably more popular with the public, when Quin retired (1751) from the stage, reappearing only for benefits.

Quinames (kē.nā.mās). [Also, Quinametzin (kē.na-met'zín).] In Toltec mythology, a race of giants who inhabited the earth during the second of four eras.

Quinault (kē.nō), Philippe. b. at Paris, June 3, 1635; d. Nov. 26, 1688. French dramatist, considered the creator of French lyric tragedy. He wrote librettos for Lully's operas, including Roland (1685) and Armide (1686).

Quinbus Flestrin (kwim'bús fles'trin). See Flestrin, Quinbus.

Quince (kwins), Peter. Carpenter in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream. He takes the part of stage-manager in the interlude. In the farce of Bottom the Weaver, into which the comic parts of Midsummer Night's Dream were worked, he becomes a pedant and school-master, and in Gryphius's translation of this farce was introduced to Germany as "Herr Peter Spenze."

Quince (kving'ke), Georg Hermann. b. at Frankfurt on the Oder, Germany, Nov. 19, 1834; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, Jan. 13, 1924. German physicist; brother of Heinrich Irenäus Quince. Educated at the universities of Berlin, Königsberg, and Heidelberg, he was professor of physics (1872-75) at the University of Würzburg and held (1875-1907) the same post at Heidelberg. He is known for his studies in surface tensions, the magnetic permeability of fluids, and light reflection and penetration.

Quince, Heinrich Irenäus. b. at Frankfurt on the Oder, Germany, Aug. 26, 1842; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, May 19, 1922. German physician; brother of Georg Hermann Quince. He was the first to introduce (1891) lumbar puncture into medical practice, obtaining in this way cerebro-spinal fluid from a living person. He described also the flushing and blanching of the fingernails at each diastole of the heart, due to a high pulse pressure (the so-called capillary pulse, called Quince's sign).

Quincy (kwín'si). City in NW Florida, county seat of Gadsden County, W of Jacksonville: manufactures of eiqars. 6,505 (1950).

Quincy. City in W Illinois, county seat of Adams County, on the Mississippi River: hog-shipping center, with manufactures of plows and shoes. It was the site of the sixth Lincoln-Douglas debate (Oct. 13, 1858). 41,450 (1950).

Quincy (kwín'zi). City in E Massachusetts, in Norfolk County, on Quincy Bay in Boston harbor, ab. 7½ mi. SE of Boston: granite quarrying, shipbuilding, and machinery manufactures. It was separated from Braintree in 1792. Pop. 83,835 (1950).

Quincy (kwín'zi, -si), Edmund. b. at Braintree, Mass., 1681; d. at London, 1738. American jurist.

Quincy, Edmund. b. at Boston, Feb. 1, 1808; d. at Dedham, Mass., May 17, 1877. American author; son of Josiah Quincy (1772-1864), whose biography he wrote (1867) and whose speeches he edited (1875).

Quincy, Josiah. b. at Boston, Feb. 23, 1744; d. at sea, April 26, 1775. American lawyer and Revolutionary patriot. He was graduated (1763) from Harvard, where he received his master's degree in 1766, and studied law privately at Boston. In the agitations of the day, Quincy supported the patriot cause in his writings, and achieved prominence in Massachusetts and in the colonies at large. Selected to present the colonial cause to the British authorities, he secretly left for England on Sept. 28, 1774, and there had conversations with government and political leaders. He died aboard ship a few hours off the Massachusetts coast on the return voyage, taking with him information which he had deemed it imprudent to commit to paper.

Quincy, Josiah. b. at Boston, Feb. 4, 1772; d. at Quincy, Mass., July 1, 1864. American statesman, orator, and historian; son of Josiah Quincy (1744-75). A Federalist member of Congress from Massachusetts (1805-13), he opposed the embargo, the admission (1812) of Louisiana as a state, and the War of 1812. He was later a member of the Massachusetts legislature, mayor of Boston (1823-28), and president of Harvard (1829-45). He wrote a History of Harvard University (2 vols., 1840).

Quincy, Josiah Phillips. b. Nov. 28, 1829; d. Oct. 31, 1910. American author and historian; grandson of Josiah Quincy (1744-75). He was graduated (1850) from Harvard, studied at the Harvard Law School, was admitted (1854) to the bar, but abandoned his practice to devote himself to writing. Among his works are two books of poetry, Lyleria (1854) and Charicles (1856); he was also author of The Protection of Majorities (1876) and The Peckster Professorship (1888).

Quindío (kēn.dí'ó), Cordillera del. See Cordillera Central, Colombia.

Quinebaug (kwín'e.bög). River in S Massachusetts and E Connecticut which unites with the Shetucket River ab. 3 mi. NE of Norwich, Conn. Length, ab. 90 mi.

Quinet (kē.ne), Edgar. b. at Bourg, Ain, France, Feb. 17, 1803; d. at Versailles, France, March 27, 1875. French philosopher, poet, historian, and politician. After studying at Heidelberg he translated Herder's Ideen zur Philosophie der Geschichte der Menschheit. He had previously (1823) published Les Tablettes du Juif errant. He summed up the results of his travels in Greece, Italy, Spain, and other countries in works including De la Grèce moderne et de ses rapports avec l'antiquité (1830), Voyages d'un solitaire (1836), Allemagne et Italie (1839), and Mes vacances en Espagne (1846). In connection with his studies and observations in foreign countries, Quinet wrote a number of monographs and contributed many articles to the leading periodicals. He also composed epic poems, including Napoléon (1836) and Prométhée (1839), and wrote Ahasuerus, a prose drama (1833). He lectured in the faculty of letters at Lyons, and in 1842 accepted a chair of South European literature at the Collège de France. His best work of this period is Le Génie des religions (1842). He lost his position in 1846 because of his radical views, went to Spain, and after his return in 1847 was elected to the Chamber of Deputies. He took part in the revolution of 1848, and in 1852 was banished from France. He resided subsequently in Belgium and Switzerland, and, although amnestied in 1859, did not return to France until after the downfall of the empire. In addition to numerous articles and pamphlets, he completed Les Révolutions d'Italie in 1852, and published Les Esclaves (1853), Merlin l'enchanté (1860), Œuvres poétiques (1860), Histoire de la campagne de 1815 (1862), La Révolution (1865), La Création (1870), La République (1872), and L'Esprit nouveau (1874).

Quingolo (kēng.g'óló). See Chingolo.

Quino (kē'nó), Eusebio Francisco. See Kino, Eusebio Francisco.

Quiñones (kē.nyō'nās), José María Gil Robles. See Gil Robles Quiñones, José María.

Quinsigamond (kwín.sig'a.mond), Lake. Lake in Massachusetts, ab. 2½ mi. E of downtown Worcester. Length, ab. 5 mi.

Quint (kwint), Peter. Character in "The Turn of the Screw," story by Henry James published in The Two Magics (1898).

Quintana (kē.nā'nā), Manuel José. b. at Madrid, April 11, 1772; d. there, March 11, 1857. Spanish author. A lawyer, he was secretary of the Cortes and regency during the struggle against Joseph Bonaparte, and was imprisoned (1814-20). Subsequently he was preceptor of the infant queen Isabella (1833), and in 1835 was made senator. Quintana was one of the outstanding Spanish poets of his time, but he is best known for the prose work Vidas de Españoles celebres (3 vols., 1807-34; many subsequent editions).

Quintana Roo (kēn.tā'nā'rō'). Territory in SE Mexico, E of Yucatán and Campeche, and N of British Honduras: chicle, coconuts, sponges, and turtles. It contains Mayan ruins. Capital, Chetumal; area, 19,630 sq. mi.; pop. 26,996 (1950).

Quintana Roo, Andrés. b. 1787; d. 1851. Mexican poet and journalist, whose patriotism is commemorated in the name of one of the republic's territories. Typical of his verse is Al 16 de septiembre de 1821 (1821).

Quintanilla (kēn.tā.nē'yā), Carlos. b. at Cochabamba, Bolivia, Jan. 22, 1888— . Bolivian army officer and provisional president (1939-40). He entered (1907) the Bolivian army, was general of the army and chief of staff (1938), served in the Chaco War (1932, 1937), and was ambassador (1940-41) to the Vatican.

Quintard (kwīn'tārd), George William. b. at Stamford, Conn., April 22, 1822; d. at New York, April 2, 1913. American shipowner and manufacturer of marine engines. Establishing himself originally as a ship chandler at New York, he later secured control of an iron works in that city and turned to the manufacture of marine engines. After selling (1867) the iron works, he established a steamship line to Charleston and later put a Portland-Halifax line into operation. In 1869 he resumed activity as a maker of marine engines, establishing the Quintard Iron Works.

Quintero (kēn.tā'rō), Álvarez. See Álvarez Quintero. Quintilian (kwīn.til'yān). [Full Latin name, Marcus Fabius Quintilianus.] b. at Calagurris (Calahorra), Spain, c.35 A.D.; d. c.95 A.D. Roman rhetorician. He was educated at Rome, returned to his birthplace as a teacher of oratory, and went back to Rome with Galba in 68, and taught oratory there for 20 years. He was patronized by Vespasian and Domitian. His most celebrated work is his Institutio Oratoria, which exerted a powerful influence in its day. It is the most elaborate treatise on education, as well as one of the most important ancient documents of literary criticism.

Quintius (kwīn'shi.us, -shus) or Quinctius (kwīngk't'shi.us, -shus), Flamininus. See Flamininus, Titus Quintius (or Quinctius).

Quintus (kwīn'tus). Son of Titus Andronicus in the play Titus Andronicus, attributed to Shakespeare.

Quintus Ennius (en'i.us) See Ennius, Quintus.

Quintus Fabius Maximus (fā'b'i.us mak si.mus). See Fabius Maximus, Quintus.

Quintus Horatius Flaccus (hō.rā'shus flak'us). Full Latin name of Horace.

Quintus Icilus (kwīn'tis ēt.sē'lē.us). Pseudonym of Guichard, Karl Gottlieb.

Quiquete (kē.kā'tā). See Ekeketete.

Quirigua (kē.rē.gwā'). Mayan city in E Guatemala, which flourished in the 8th and 9th centuries, but was abandoned long before the Spanish conquest. It is famous for its excellence of stone sculpture and for the large size of some of the monuments commemorating periods in the Mayan calendar.

Quirinal (kwīr'i.nāl). [Latin, Mons Quirinalis (kwīr'i.nā'lis).] Furthest north and the highest of the seven hills of ancient Rome, lying NE of the Capitoline and NW of the Viminal. It takes its name from an old Sabine sanctuary of Quirinus.

Quirinalia (kwīr.i.nā'li.a). In ancient Rome, a festival in honor of Quirinus, celebrated on Feb. 17, on which day Romulus was said to have disappeared in a thunderstorm.

Quirino (kē.rē'nō), Elpidio. b. at Vigan, Luzon, Philippine Islands, Nov. 16, 1890—. Philippine statesman, president of the Philippine Republic (1948 et seq.). He entered politics in 1913 and was secretary (1917) to Manuel Quezon. From 1925 to 1935 he was a member of the Philippine senate, serving as majority party floor leader; he was a delegate (1934-35) to the constitutional convention. He served as secretary of finance (1934-36) and secretary of the interior (1936-38). In 1941 he returned to the senate, serving until 1945, when he was elected vice-president; he was secretary of finance (1943) and secretary of foreign affairs (1943-48). On the death (1948) of President Manuel Roxas, Quirino assumed the presidency and the following year was elected president over José Laurel, president of the Philippines during the Japanese occupation (1942-45).

Quirinus (kwīr'i.nus). Ancient Italian god of war, later identified with Romulus. He was similar to but not identified with Mars.

Quirites (kwīr'i'tēz). Citizens of ancient Rome considered in their civil capacity. The name Quirites pertained to them in addition to that of Romani, the latter designation having application in their political and military capacity.

Quirk, Gammon, and Snap (kwērk, gam'on, snap). Firm of rascally solicitors in Warren's Ten Thousand a Year.

Quiroga (kē.rō.gā), Emilia Pardo Bazán de. See Pardo Bazán de Quiroga, Emilia.

Quiroga, Horacio. b. at Salto, Uruguay, Dec. 31, 1878; committed suicide at Buenos Aires, 1937. Uruguayan short-story writer, known for his tales of the tropical territory of Misiones, in northeastern Argentina, where he spent most of the latter part of his life.

Quiros (kē.rōsh'), Pedro Fernandes de. See Queiroz, Pedro Fernandes de.

Quisling (kwiz'ling; Norwegian, kvis'ling), Vidkun Abraham Lauritz. b. July 18, 1887; executed at Oslo, Norway, Oct. 24, 1945. Norwegian army officer and political leader, head of the Norwegian puppet regime during the German occupation of Norway in World War II. After service as military attaché at Petrograd (1918-19) and Helsinki (1919-21), he was (1922-26) an assistant to Fritjof Nansen in his international health work. He served (1927-29) in the Norwegian legation at Moscow. He became (1930) active in anti-Bolshevik agitation, seeking contacts particularly with labor and within the Farmers' Party (he was (1931-33) minister of defense in the Farmers' Party government). He formed (1933) the Nasjonal Samling (National Union), a fascist political party, and entered (1936) into contact with the German Nazi leader Alfred Rosenberg. He assisted the Germans in their invasion (April 9, 1940) of Norway by proclaiming himself premier and withdrawing the order for Norwegian mobilization, but was deprived (September, 1940) of all real power and of the premiership by the German occupation chief. He was returned (February, 1942) to the premiership without retaining any real authority. He surrendered (May, 1945) to Norwegian police after the liberation, and was tried and sentenced to death (Sept. 10, 1945) for high treason.

Quistello (kwēs.tel'ō). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Mantova, on the Secchia River ab. 15 mi. SE of Mantua. Here, in 1734, the Imperialists defeated the French and Sardinians. Pop. of commune, 9,404 (1936); of town, 2,402 (1936).

Quitata (kē.tā'tā). See Chitata.

Quiteria (kē.tā'ryā). In Cervantes's Don Quixote, the lost bridge of Camacho.

Quitman (kwit'mān). City in S Georgia, county seat of Brooks County; shipping point for hams, watermelons, and cantaloupes. 4,769 (1950).

Quitman, John Anthony. b. at Rhinebeck, N.Y., Sept. 1, 1798; d. at Natchez, Miss., July 17, 1858. American politician and general. He served in the Texan war for independence in 1836, and was distinguished in the Mexican war at Monterey, Veracruz, Puebla, and Chapultepec. He was military governor of Mexico City in 1847, governor of Mississippi (1850-51), and a member of Congress from Mississippi (1855-58).

Quito (kē'tō). [Also: Cara, Kito, Quito.] Group of South American Indians of the highlands of Ecuador, who had developed a high level of civilization in pre-Inca times. They were conquered (c1487) by the Incas after years of struggle, and their kingdom became part of the Inca empire.

Quito. City in N Ecuador, capital of Ecuador and of Pichincha province, on the plateau of the Andes, ab. 9,350 ft. above the sea; second largest city of Ecuador. It lies at the base of the Pichincha volcano, and Cotopaxi, Cayambe, Antisana, and several other lofty peaks are in the immediate vicinity. The city has important textile industries, and other light industries. It was conquered by the Spaniards in 1534. Pop. 211,174 (1947).

Quito. See also Panzaleo.

Quito, Audience of. Chief court and governing body (audiencia) of Quito, or Ecuador, during the colonial period. Quito was long a province of Peru, and when the first audience was established, in 1563, it was made subordinate to that of Lima. The president of the audience was also governor of the province; he was appointed by the crown, but answered directly to the viceroy at Lima. From 1710 to 1722 Quito was attached to New Granada. The audience was abolished in 1718 when New Granada became a viceroyalty, but was restored in 1739, and thereafter remained subordinate to Peru until the revolution of 1822, when Quito was incorporated with Colombia. The name Ecuador was adopted in 1831, when the country became independent.

Quitu (kě'tō). See Quito Indians.

Quivira (kē.vē'rā). North American Indian "province" which Coronado sought and found in 1541, after hearing about it among the Rio Grande pueblos. It is usually associated with certain Wichita Indian settlements in C Kansas.

Quixote (kē.hō'tā). Don. See Don Quixote.

Quiyaka (kē.yā'kā). See Chiyaka.

Quiyind (kē.ēn'dē). See Quindi.

Quomodo (kwō.mō'dō). In Thomas Middleton's play Michaelmas Term, a woolen draper and usurer, whose amusingly frustrated ambition is to be a landed proprietor.

Quorra (kwor'a). See Niger River.

Quo Tai-chi (gwō' tī'ch'ē'). [Peking form, Kuo T'ai-ch'i.] b. at Kuangchi, Hupei, China, 1888; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., Feb. 29, 1952. Chinese diplomat; educated in the U.S. His chief posts were envoy to Great Britain (1932-41), foreign minister (1941-42), and chief Chinese delegate (1946-47) to the United Nations.

Quotem (kwō'tēm). Caleb. Character in The Review, by the younger Colman. The character was taken by him from an unsuccessful comic opera, Caleb Quotem and his Wife, or Paint, Poetry, and Putty, by Henry Lee. Quotem is a ubiquitous and preternaturally loquacious jack of all trades, as may be seen by the sign over his door: "Quotem, Auctioneer, Plumber, Glazier, Engraver, Apothecary, Schoolmaster, Watchmaker, Sign-Painter, etc., etc. N. B. This is the Parish Clerk's—I cure Agues and Teach the Use of the Globes."

Quo Vadis (kwō.vā'dis). [Eng. trans., "Whither Goest Thou?"] Historical novel of life at Rome in the time of Nero, by Henryk Sienkiewicz (Eng. trans., 1896). The novel has been widely translated, and achieved international fame.

Quran (kū.rān'). See Koran.

Quseir (kō.sār'). See Kosseir.

Qwathi (kwā'thē). Bantu-speaking people of the southern Nguni group of S Africa, inhabiting E Cape of Good Hope province of the Union of South Africa, and resembling the Xhosa in culture.

R

Ra (rā). [Also, Re.] In Egyptian mythology, the sun god and supreme deity, the protector of men and vanquisher of evil. According to myth, he was the first king of Egypt, and left the world because of the pettiness of mankind. Every night he fights against the hostile serpent of darkness during his journey through the underworld, and reappears victorious every morning. Because Ra, the sun, was the first ruler of Egypt, all subsequent kings ruled "in his image" (each king was called the son of Ra, for the specific purpose of ruling Egypt, which was called the daughter of Ra). The center of his cult was Heliopolis, where he is thought to have displaced a more ancient god. Ra became identified with local gods everywhere in Egypt, and he "loaned himself" to other gods to enhance their power. His symbols were the falcon, the bird that soars into the sun; the dung beetle or scarab, because he rolls a little ball, symbol of the sun as a rolling ball; and the uraeus serpent, symbol of sovereignty. He was commonly depicted as a bearded man crowned with the sun disk.

RA. See Resettlement Administration.

Raab (rāp). German name of Győr, Hungary, and of the Rába River, in Austria and Hungary.

Raabe (rā'be). Wilhelm. [Pseudonym, Jakob Corvinus.] b. at Eschershausen, Germany, Sept. 8, 1831; d. at Brunswick, Germany, Nov. 15, 1910. German novelist. Such literary models as Jean Paul Richter and Charles Dickens may account for his whimsicality, humor, and frequent queer characters, but in his work as a whole his use of middle-class conditions has caused him to be called "the poet of Philistinism." There is sentimentality in Die Chronik der Sperlingsgasse (1857) and Der Hungerpastor (1864), and romance in some of his shorter stories (Die schwarze Galeere; Else von der Tanne), but his basic outlook is pessimistic and tinged with bitterness. From his long list of narratives may be mentioned Unseres Herrgotts Kanzelei (1862), Abu Telfan (1867), Der Schüdderump (1870), Horacker (1876), and Alle Nester (1880).

Raalte (rāl'te). Commune in E Netherlands, in the province of Overijssel, ab. 12 mi. SE of Zwolle: cattle and pig markets. 10,882 (1939).

Raasay (rā'zā). [Also, Rasay.] Island in the Inner Hebrides, in N Scotland, in Inverness-shire, ab. 51 mi. W of Fort-Augustus. It is separated from the Scottish mainland (Ross and Cromarty) on the E by Inner Sound, and from the Isle of Skye on the W by the Sound of Raasay. Length, ab. 13 mi.; width, ab. 4 mi.

Rab (rab). See also Abba Arika.

Rab (rāb). [Italian, Arbe.] Island off the Croatian coast of the Adriatic Sea, formerly in the banovina (province) of Savska, ab. 35 mi. SE of Rijeka. The island is fertile, and famous for its natural beauty. Its industries include agriculture, stock raising, and fisheries. The population is of mixed Italian and Croatian descent. Area, ab. 36 sq. mi.; pop. 14,508 (1931).

Rab. [Italian, Arbe.] Town in Yugoslavia, on the island of Rab. It has many points of historical and architectural interest, such as the tower of the cathedral, which dates from the 13th century. 6,352 (1931).

Rába (rā'bā). [German, Raab.] River in E Austria and Hungary which joins an arm of the Danube at Győr. Length, ab. 160 mi.

Rabagas (rā.bā.gās). Play by Victorien Sardou, produced in 1872.

Rabah Zobeir (rā'bā zō.bār'). Killed April 22, 1900. African chieftain, ruler of Bornu. Of Arab and Negro descent, he was originally a slave or follower of Zobeir Rahama, whose forces he commanded (1879) in the Bahr-el-Ghazal. He deposed (1893) the sultan of Bornu, a region on Lake Chad which had come (1890) under British control. He conquered (1897) the sultanate of Baguirmi, but was defeated and killed by the French after several encounters (1899-1900).

Rabai (rā.bī'). [Also, Warabā.] One of nine Bantu-speaking peoples known collectively as Nyika, living in SE Kenya, in E Africa.

Rabanus (or Rhabanus) Maurus (rā.bā'nus mō'rus). [Also, Herabanus Maurus.] b. at Mainz, Germany, c776; d. at Winkel, Germany, Feb. 4, 856. German theologian, abbot (822-842) of Fulda, and later (847) archbishop of Mainz. He was a disciple of Aleuin, and before his elevation to the archbishopric taught theology, philosophy, poetry, and rhetoric at Paris in a school established there by Anglo-Saxon monks. He is considered to have been one of the clerics chiefly responsible for the 9th-century revival of learning. He wrote commentaries and theological works (edited by Colvenerius, 1627).

Rabat (rā.bāt'). [Also, New Sallee.] Seaport in NW Africa, the administrative capital of French Morocco, situated near Salé, on the Atlantic coast ab. 75 mi. NE of Casablanca, with which it is connected by rail. It has important manufactures of leather, carpets, cotton, and wool, and has coastwise and foreign trade. It is the principal residence of the sultan of Morocco. The city saw fighting during the Allied invasion of N Africa in 1942. 161,416 (1947).

Rabaud (rà.bô), Henri Benjamin. b. at Paris, Nov. 10, 1873; d. there, Sept. 12, 1949. French musician. He was chief conductor (1914 et seq.) of the Paris Opéra, directed (1918-19) the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and was director (1920 et seq.) of the Paris Conservatory, succeeding Gabriel Fauré. Among his compositions are two symphonies (1895 and 1899), the oratorio Job (1900), the symphonic poem La Procession Nocturne (1899), and choral and instrumental works. Among his operas are Fille de Roland (1904), Mârouf, Savetier de Caire (1914), and Miracle des Loups.

Rabaul (rà.boul, rà'boul). City established by the Germans in 1910 on the extreme E end of New Britain island, Bismarck Archipelago, now in the Australian-mandated Territory of New Guinea. Until 1941 Rabaul was the territorial administrative center, but following a series of disastrous volcanic eruptions (from 1937) the capital was transferred (it is now at Port Moresby, in the Territory of Papua). In 1947 it was announced that the administrative center for the district of New Britain would be transferred from Rabaul to Kokopo, ab. 14 mi. from Rabaul. The city is connected to the mainland by air and steamship service. Rabaul, taken by the Japanese early in 1942, was an important base for them during the fighting in the Solomons and New Guinea in World War II. It was bypassed by the Allies and remained in Japanese hands until the end of the war.

Rabbah Ammon (rà.bà'am'on) or Rabbath Ammon (rà.b'ath). Ancient names of Amman.

Rabble in Arms. Novel by Kenneth Roberts, published in 1933.

Rabbobth Ammon (rà.b'oth am'on). An ancient name of Amman.

Rabelais (rà.b'e.lā, rà.b'e.lā'; French, rà.b'le), François. [Pseudonym, Alcofrab Nasier (an anagram of his name).] b. at or near Chinon, in Touraine, France, c1494; d. probably at Paris, c April, 1553. French satirist and humorist. Little is known of his life before 1520, although tradition has it that he lived at Angers from 1515 to 1518 and studied at the Franciscan monastery of La Baunette near that town. Late in 1520 he became a monk in the Franciscan monastery of Puy-Saint-Martin, at Fontenay-le-Comte, in Poitou, where, thanks to the encouragement of a group of erudite lawyers with whom he became associated, and the eminent scholar Guillaume Budé with whom he corresponded, he began the study of Greek. Greek being then in disrepute among the Franciscans, Rabelais moved to a nearby Benedictine convent, the better to pursue his humanistic studies. As secretary to the bishop, Geoffroy d'Estissac, he traveled widely in Poitou, gaining that detailed knowledge of the local terrain, speech, customs, amusements, and legends which was to lend his writings their special popular and realistic flavor. He probably lived at Paris in the period 1528-30 and attended the university there. At the University of Montpellier, where he matriculated and received the degree of bachelor of medicine in 1530, he distinguished himself by his learned commentaries on Greek medical texts. By 1532 he was a practicing physician at Lyons, though he did not receive the doctor's degree until 1537. In 1534 he became physician to Jean du Bellay, bishop of Paris, in whose company he did considerable traveling, including several sojourns at Rome. In 1539 he was engaged as physician to Guillaume du Bellay-Langey, governor of Piedmont. From 1543, when the latter died, to 1546, Rabelais is lost to view. In 1546, his Tiers Livre having been condemned by the Sorbonne theologians, he took refuge at Metz. From 1548 to 1550 he was at Rome with Jean du Bellay, now a cardinal.

Literary Works and Viewpoint. Rabelais is best known as the author of Gargantua and Pantagruel, one of the world's literary masterpieces, the five books of which appeared from 1532 to 1564, the last posthumously and of debatable authenticity. Each book has a character and emphasis of its own. This epic of men and giants presents a juxtaposition on a vast scale of erudition and popular lore, of serious philosophy and obscene buffoonery, of crass realism and esoteric allegory. His extended discussions of contemporary life and thought, although placed in a framework of unrestrained fantasy, provide a faithful mirror of Renaissance social customs and intellectual interests. In his opposition to war Rabelais assumed, for the most part, the enlightened humanist position represented by Erasmus. His satire of legal practices and his attack on monasticism are applications of his expansive spirit. In the quarrel on the worth of women, which raged in the 1540's, Rabelais took an antifeminist stand. In his detailed treatments of navigation and of mechanical inventions he is to be associated with the forward-looking thinkers who, by about 1600, brought about a fusion of scholarship and the skilled crafts to produce modern science. Readers of Rabelais have usually been impressed by his exuberance, his optimism, and his generally expansive view of the world and man. The best-known English translation is that of Thomas Urquhart and Pierre Motteux (1653-1708).

Rabelais, the English. Epithet given variously to Jonathan Swift, Thomas Amory, and Laurence Sterne.

Rabener (rà'b'e.nér), Gottlieb Wilhelm. b. at Wachau, Germany, Sept. 17, 1714; d. at Dresden, Germany, March 22, 1771. German satirist, one of the contributors (1741 et seq.) to the Bremer Beiträge. He wrote prose satires on the German middle-class life of his time.

Rabi (rà'b'i), Isidor Isaac. b. in Austria, July 29, 1898—. American physicist. He joined the Columbia University teaching staff (1929), was appointed professor (1937), and served as executive officer of the physics department (1945-48). He is noted for his researches on radio-frequency spectra of atoms and molecules, and was awarded (1944) the Nobel prize for physics. Author of articles on magnetism, quantum mechanics, nuclear physics, and molecular beams.

Rabia I (rà.b'e'a). Moslem month, third in the year, having 30 days.

Rabia II. Moslem month, fourth in the year, having 29 days.

Rábida (rà'b'e.řhá), La. See La Rábida.

Rab-mag (rà'b'mag). In the Bible, the title of a Babylonian officer mentioned in Jer. xxxix. 3.

Rabshakeh (rà'b'sha.kē, rà.b.shā'kē). In the Bible, the title of an Assyrian officer (2 Kings, xviii. 17; Isa. xxxvi. 2), probably general or commander.

Rabutin (rà.b'ũ.tañ), Roger de. See Bussy, Comte de.

Rabutin-Chantal (-shāñ.tāl), Marie de. See Sévigne, Marquise (or Madame) de.

Racalmuto (rà.kāl.mō'tō). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Agrigento, NE of Agrigento. It markets grain and wine, and has sulfur and salt mining. Pop. of commune, 13,061 (1936); of town, 12,679 (1936).

Raconigi (rà.k.kō.nē'je). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Cuneo, ab. 25 mi. S of Turin: foodstuff, silk textile, and lumber industries; distilleries. Its most notable building is the former royal castle, started in the 17th century, continued in the 18th, and finished in the middle of the 19th century, in the reign of Charles Albert of Savoy; it is in the baroque, rococo and neoclassical styles. The castle escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 8,643 (1936); of town, 6,552 (1936).

Raconigi Agreement. Treaty between Russia and Italy, concluded (Oct. 24, 1909) at Raconigi, Italy, after a visit by Czar Nicholas II to King Victor Emmanuel III in Italy. The treaty provided that Russia would recognize Italian claims in Tripoli while Italy would support Russian claims in the Straits. The agreement was a source of considerable alarm to both Germany and Austria.

Raccoon River (rà.kōn'). [Also, Ceon River.] River in Iowa, a tributary of the Des Moines, which it joins at Des Moines. Length, ab. 195 mi.

Race (ràs), Cape. Headland at the SE extremity of Newfoundland.

Race of Alderney (ól'dér.ni). See Alderney, Race of.

Race of Portland (pōrt.lānd). See Portland, Race of.

Rachel (rà.chel). In the Bible, the daughter of Laban, sister of Leah, and wife of Jacob: mother of Joseph and Benjamin. Gen. xxix-xxxv.

Rachel (rà.shel). [Stage name of Élisa (or Élisabeth) Félix.] b. at Mumpf, Aargau, Switzerland, Feb. 28, 1821 (or March 24, 1820); d. near Cannes, France, Jan. 3, 1858. French tragedienne. She was a street singer at Lyons in 1831 with her sister Sophie, known as Sarah. Étienne Cloron, director of a school of music, hearing her, was struck with the quality of her voice, and took her with her family to Paris, where she entered his academy. She soon lost her voice, however, and studied drama with Saint-Aulaire. He had a small theater known as "La Salle Molière," where he produced plays with his pupils as actors. Rachel played soubrettes and tragic roles there from 1834 to 1836. She began to attract attention and was admitted to the Paris Conservatory in 1836, made rapid progress, resigned in 1837, appeared at the Gymnase in July of that year, and in 1838 appeared as Camille in Pierre Corneille's Horace at the Théâtre Français. Her success was extraordinary, and from this time her reputation was secure. She went to England in 1841, and to America in 1855, where she contracted a cold that brought on the tuberculosis of which she died three years later. Her finest parts were in the plays of Corneille and Racine, especially in the latter's Phèdre, and in Adrienne Lecouvreur, written for her by Eugène Scribe and Gabriel Legouvé. She also played Jeanne D'Arc, Mademoiselle de Belle Isle, Cléopâtre, and other roles.

Rachford (rash'ford), Benjamin Knox. b. at Alexandria, Ky., Nov. 23, 1857; d. at Cincinnati, Ohio, May 5, 1929. American physiologist and pediatrician. Elected (1897) director of pediatrics at the Cincinnati General Hospital, he set up one of the first outdoor wards in the U.S. for tubercular children. He was the initiator (1909) of the Babies Milk Fund at Cincinnati and played a prominent role in establishing the school of nursing and public health affiliated with the University of Cincinnati. He made notable investigations in auto-intoxication.

Rachilde (ră.shêld). Pseudonym of Vallette, Marguerite.

Rachmaninoff (răch.mă'nî.nôf), Sergei Vassilievich. [Also, Rachmaninov.] b. in the government of Novgorod, Russia, April 1, 1873; d. at Los Angeles, Calif., March 28, 1943. Russian pianist and composer. He studied at the St. Petersburg and Moscow conservatories, winning the gold medal for composition at Moscow in 1891. He made a concert tour in Russia in 1892, and appeared as conductor and pianist at London (1899) and in America (1909-10). After 1918 he was a resident of the U.S. He wrote concertos and piano pieces, the best known being the Prelude in C Sharp Minor; symphonies and other orchestral compositions, including The Cliff and The Isle of the Dead (after Böcklin's painting); and several operas, Aleko The Miser Knight, and Francesca da Rimini.

Racibórz (ră.chê'bôsh). [German, Ratibor.] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Opole, formerly in Upper Silesia, Germany, situated on the Oder River ab. 42 mi. SE of Opole and near the border of Czechoslovakia. It is a river port, with commercial activities, and machinery, chemical (especially acetone), paper, and food industries. Racibórz was the seat of a Silesian principality under Bohemian overlordship (1282-1532), fell to the emperor and became part of the Hapsburg domain, and was ceded to Prussia in 1742. In World War I, it was occupied by the Russians on Feb. 4, 1945. The town was badly damaged during the war, but repairs are now almost completed. 50,004 (1939), 19,605 (1946).

Racine (ra.sên'). [Former name, Port Gilbert.] City in SE Wisconsin, county seat of Racine County, on Lake Michigan ab. 23 mi. S of Milwaukee. It has manufactures of malted milk, waxes, varnishes, paints, polishes, rubber goods, knit goods, trunks, and iron. Settled in 1834, it was incorporated (1841) as a village and attained importance as a wheat-shipping and leather-manufacturing center. Pop. of city, 71,193 (1950); of urbanized area, 76,537 (1950).

Racine (ra.sên'; French, ra.sên), Jean Baptiste. b. at La Ferté-Milon, France, in December, 1639; d. at Paris, April 26, 1699. French tragic poet and dramatist. He lost his parents at a very early age, and was brought up by his grandparents. His studies, having begun when he was ten years old at the Collège de Beauvais, were continued at Port-Royal, and finished at the Collège d'Har-court (1658-59). On graduating, he went to live with a cousin of his, who was in the service of the Duc de Luynes. He was well received in society, and made friends among men of literary bent. His early training in Greek and Latin classics, especially the former, had been very thorough, and his tastes all ran in the direction of intellectual pursuits. He attracted attention in this line for the first time by an ode written for the marriage of Louis XIV, and entitled La Nymphe de la Seine (1660). A couple of short comedies, Amasie (1660) and Les Amours d'Oride (1661), are among his first attempts as a playwright, and unfortunately are now lost. His friendly relations with men like Jean de La Fontaine, Nicolas Boileau, and Molière led him to devote himself to writing for the stage; he thus produced a couple of plays, La Thébaïde (1664) and Alexandre (1665). His first real success as a dramatic poet was scored in Andromaque (1667), which is the initial tragedy in a long series of masterpieces. He attempted comedy next in Les Plaideurs (1668), but reverted completely to tragedy in Britannicus (1669), Bérénice (1670), Bajazet (1672), Mithridate (1673), Iphigénie (1674), and Phèdre (1677). Racine's enemies conspired against him at this time, and preferred to him a minor poet named Nicolas Pradon, who had written a rival tragedy on Phaedra which they extolled far above Racine's play. The great poet abstained then for a number of years from composing tragedies, but finally, at the request of Madame de Maintenon, wrote two plays of great lyric beauty, dealing with subjects from the Bible: Esther (1689) and Athalie (1691). Besides the above, Racine composed four hymns that rank among the finest productions in lyric poetry of his day; also an Abbrégé de l'histoire de Port-Royal, and a few other minor writings. The best edition of Racine's works was made by Paul Mesnard for the Collection des grands écrivains de la France (1865-74).

Racine, Louis. b. at Paris, Nov. 6, 1692; d. there, Jan. 29, 1763. French poet; son of Jean Baptiste Racine, whose biography he wrote (1747).

Racket (rak'et), Mrs. Character in Hannah Cowley's comedy The Belle's Stratagem.

Racket Lake. See Raquette Lake.

Racket River. See Raquette River.

Rackham (rak'am), Arthur. b. at London, Sept. 19, 1867; d. at Limpsfield, Surrey, England, Sept. 6, 1939. English painter and illustrator, noted equally for his humorous drawings in periodicals and for his illustrations for children's books. He contributed to such publications as Punch, The Graphic, St. Nicholas, Little Folks, Black and White, and The Sketch. Among the many books he illustrated are Peter Pan, Grimm's Fairy Tales, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Gulliver's Travels, The Greel-Heroes, The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, and Puck of Pook's Hill.

Rackiewicz (răch.kyê'vêch), Władysław. b. in Poland, Jan. 16, 1885; d. at Ruthin, North Wales, England, June 6, 1947. President of Poland (1939-45). A lawyer by profession, he was active under the Czarist regime, organizing aid committees for Polish people during World War I. In 1917 he became chairman of a committee in Russia organizing Polish military formations. In independent Poland he served as minister of the interior (1921, 1925-26), and later as a provincial governor in various parts of Poland. When the Germans occupied Poland (1939), he went to France and was elected president of the Polish government-in-exile to replace the prewar president, Ignacy Mościcki, who had resigned. He nominally held this post until his death, although the Polish regime which took control at Warsaw in 1945 paid no attention to him.

Rada (ră'vâ), Juan de. [Also, Juan de Herrada.] b. in Castile, Spain, c.1490; d. at Jauja, Peru, 1542. Spanish cavalier. He followed Pedro de Alvarado to Guatemala and Peru (1534), was with the elder Diego Almagro in Chile (1535-36), and later headed the conspiracy against Francisco Pizarro, killing him, it is said, with his own hand (June 26, 1541). Rada then declared young Diego Almagro governor of Peru, and ruled through him.

Radagaisus (rad'a.gî'sus, -gî'-) or Radagais (rad'a.gîs, -gîs) d. c.405 A.D. Leader of an army of Suevi, Vandals, and other tribes which invaded Italy in 405 A.D. He was defeated by Stilicho at Faesulae (modern Fiesole), and surrendered on condition that his life would be spared. He was, however, treacherously put to death.

Rădăuți (ru.dă.ô'tî, -ô'tê'tî). [Also, Radautsi; German, Radautz (ră.dă'outs).] Town in NE Rumania, in the province of South Bucovina, situated near the Siret River, ab. 12 mi. SW of Siret: agricultural market center. It has a cathedral with tombs of Moldavian rulers, 14,530 (1948).

Radcliffe (răd'klif). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in NW England, in Lancashire, situated on the river Irwell ab. 7 mi. NW of Manchester, ab. 191 mi. NW of London by rail. Its industries include cotton-textile manufactures, paper mills, iron foundries, and coal mines. 27,551 (est. 1951).

Radcliffe, Ann. [Maiden name, Ward.] b. at London, July 9, 1764; d. there, Feb. 7, 1823. English novelist. Among her novels are The Castles of Athlin and Dunbayne (1789), A Sicilian Romance (1790), The Romance of the Forest (1791), The Mysteries of Udolpho (1794), and The Italian (1797). In these, especially in the last three, she used the English scenery and ruins she loved to view as background for romantic tales of villainy and horror that are the archetypes of the so-called Gothic novel. The supernatural terrors in her books are always explained as being attributable to natural causes; although her novels were later surpassed in the multiplication of the mysterious, she remains among the most readable novelists of the genre.

Radcliffe or Radclyffe (răd'klif), Sir James. [Title, 3rd Earl of Derwentwater.] b. at London, June 28, 1689; beheaded there, Feb. 24, 1716. English Roman Catholic nobleman; son of Lady Mary Tudor, illegitimate daughter of Charles II and the actress Mary Davis. He was a leader in the rebellion of 1715 in favor of James Edward Stuart, the Old Pretender.

Radcliffe, John. b. at Wakefield, England, 1650; d. near London, Nov. 1, 1714. English physician, founder of the Radcliffe Library at Oxford. He studied at Oxford, and in 1684 settled at London as a medical practitioner. He obtained great celebrity as a physician, and attended several members of the royal family. He entered Parliament in 1713. He left 40,000 pounds for the building of the library at Oxford which bears his name.

Radcliffe College. See under Harvard University.

Radcliffe Library. Library (originally medical) connected with the University of Oxford, England. It was founded by John Radcliffe.

Rade (ră.dă'). See Rhadé.

Rade (ră.dă'). Martin. b. at Rennersdorf, Germany, April 4, 1857; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, April 9, 1940. German Lutheran theologian. Author of Luthers Leben (3 vols., 1884-87) and Glaubenslehre (2 vols., 1924-27).

Radeberg (ră.d.berk). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 8 mi. NW of Dresden: manufactures of glass and metal articles, enamelware, refrigerators, radio equipment, and beer. It has a castle dating from the 16th century. 16,622 (1946).

Radebeul (ră.d.boy). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, on the Elbe River NW suburb of Dresden: chemical, pharmaceutical, cosmetic, rubber, asbestos, metal, and shoe industries. 41,207 (1946).

Rade de Brest (răd de brest). See under Brest, France.

Radek (ră'dek), Karl. [Original surname: Sobelsohn; pseudonym, Struthahn.] b. at Lwow (then called Lemberg), Austria, 1885-. Russian revolutionist and journalist. His early career (1906-14) was spent as a Social-Democratic journalist in Poland and Germany. Soon after the beginning of World War I he went to Switzerland, where he carried on antiwar propaganda and joined in the meetings of the Socialist internationalists at Zimmerwald and Kienthal. In 1917 he was one of the Communist leaders sent across Germany by the German imperial government to keep Russia from further participation in the war; he went to Stockholm to serve as press representative of the Bolsheviks and to report to the outside world on the course of the Russian Revolution. He participated in the peace conference at Brest-Litovsk and, in 1918, was in Germany, organizing the German Communist Party. He was jailed (1919) in Germany, then returned to Russia where he became a member of the Comintern presidium. After the failure of the attempted Communist revolution in Germany in 1923, he lost his influence; in 1927 he was expelled from the party as a Trotskyist, that is, as one deviating from the program of the party as laid down under Joseph Stalin. He was again a party member in 1930, after publicly acknowledging his "error." He became (1931) editor of Izvestia; however, during the treason trials of Zinoviev and others in 1936 he was implicated as a Trotskyist. He was tried in January, 1937, in one of the greatest of the 1936-37 "purge" trials, confessed his conspiracy against the Communist regime, and was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for treason.

Radescu (ră.des'kō), Nicolae. b. at Călimănești, Rumania, March 30, 1876; d. at New York, May 16, 1953. Rumanian military and political leader, prime minister (1944) of Rumania and president (1949) of the Rumanian national committee in exile. He was forced by the Communist regime to leave Rumania in 1945.

Radetzky (ră.det'ski), Fyodor. b. at Kazan, Russia, July 28, 1820; d. at Odessa, Russia, Feb. 26, 1890. Russian general. He distinguished himself in the Russo-Turkish War by his successful defense (August-September, 1877) of the Shipka Pass.

Radetzky or Radetzki (ră.det'ski), Joseph Wenzel. [Title, Count Radetzky de Radetz.] b. at Trzobnitz, near Tábor, in Bohemia, Nov. 2, 1766; d. at Milan, Italy, Jan. 5, 1858. Austrian field marshal. He served against the Turks, and against the French at Hohenlinden, Aspern, and Wagram. He was chief of staff in the campaigns of 1813-15. He became commander in Italy in 1831, was defeated by the Sardinians at Goito in 1848, and defeated them at Custoza in 1848, and at Mortara and Novara in 1849, and captured Venice. He was governor of upper Italy (1849-57).

Radevormwald (ră.d.fo.rm.vălt'). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia. British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 25 mi. E of Düsseldorf: metal and electrical manufactures. 18,067 (1950).

Radford (răd'ford). Independent city in SW Virginia, on New River: manufactures of iron and lumber products; railroad repair shops. 9,026 (1950).

Radford, Arthur William. b. at Chicago, Feb. 27, 1896-. American naval officer, appointed (1953) chairman of the joint chiefs of staff of the U.S. armed forces. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1916 and took flight training in 1920. A great part of his service in World War II was in the Pacific, and he served as commander in chief of the Pacific fleet in the period immediately prior to his appointment as chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Radhakrishnan (ră.d.a.krish'nan), Sir Sarvepalli. b. in Madras, India, Sept. 5, 1888-. Indian philosopher, educator, and diplomat, ambassador (1949-52) to the U.S.S.R., vice-president (1952) of India. He was a member (1931-39) of the international committee of intellectual cooperation of the League of Nations, and chairman (1949) of the executive board of UNESCO and of its 1952 meeting. Lecturer (1929-30) at Oxford, he was vice-chancellor of Andhra University (1931-36) and of Benares Hindu University (1939 et seq.). He served as chairman (1948) of the Indian universities commission. His philosophical works, which have become widely known abroad, include The Philosophy of Rabindranath Tagore (1918), The Reign of Religion in Contemporary Philosophy (1920), The Philosophy of the Upanishads (1924, 1935), An Idealist View of Life (1932), Religion and Society (1945), and Is This Peace? (1947).

Radhanpur (ră'dan.pör). [Also, Rahdunpur.] Former native state now incorporated into Bombay state, Union of India, one of the former states of Western India, ab. 100 mi. NW of Ahmedabad, in the Raun of Kutch. Area, 1,150 sq. mi.; pop. 67,691 (1941).

Radhanpur. [Also, Rahdunpur.] Town in N Bombay, Union of India, formerly capital of the state of Radhanpur, ab. 95 mi. NW of Ahmedabad. 11,959 (1941).

Radhé (ră.dă'). See Rhadé.

Radić (ră'dieh), Ante. [Also, Radich.] b. in Croatia, 1868; d. there, 1919. Croatian peasant leader, ideological founder of South Slav agrarianism; brother of Stefan Radić.

Radić, Stefan. [Also, Radich.] b. in Croatia, 1871; assassinated at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, 1928. Croat statesman, founder of the Croatian Peasant Party. He was active in the South Slav national movement before World War I, and in efforts to find a workable compromise among Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes within the framework of the Yugoslav state. He was assassinated in the Yugoslav parliament by Montenegrin extremists.

Radical Liberal Party (of Luxembourg). Former name of the Democratic Group (of Luxembourg).

Radical Party. Political party in Argentina, founded (c1890) in opposition to the conservative element then in control of the government. Of generally liberal tendencies, the radicals were responsible for the institution (1912) of the secret ballot, which in turn led to their own rise to power (1916-30). Disqualified in 1931, the party regained control of the lower house of parliament in 1940 but waned again in 1942 and was completely defeated in the election (1946) of President Juan Perón.

Radical Republicans. Extreme wing of the Republican Party which during the Civil War insisted upon a firm adherence to antislavery doctrines and acted as the most vigorous critics of President Lincoln within the Union government, and during Reconstruction favored a harsh policy toward the South. During the Civil War one of their chief official instruments of policy was the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War; their postwar program is best illustrated by the impeachment and trial of President Andrew Johnson and by the body of Reconstruction legislation. In general, their efforts are sometimes characterized as an attempt to set up a "congressional dictatorship." Among the prominent Radical Republicans were Thaddeus Stevens, Charles Sumner, George Julian, Benjamin F. Wade, and Zachariah Chandler.

Radical Socialist Party. French political party, the traditional force supporting republicanism during the Third Republic. It is considered to have begun with the election (1869) of Léon Gambetta as a deputy on the so-called Belleville program, which embodied the principles of democratic republicanism and moderate social reform later adopted by the Radical-Socialists (also often known as "Radicals"). In 1880 a Radical Party was formed by Georges Clemenceau and Camille Pelletan. The term "socialist" was then added by more advanced elements. The party began participation in the government in 1898, stressing the anticlerical aspects of its program; antisocialist elements later became prominent (1907 et seq.). After World War I, the party was represented (1924 et seq.) in numerous cabinets, participated (1934 et seq.) in the Popular Front, and was dissolved and reestablished clandestinely during World War II, regaining legality in 1944; thereafter its influence declined. Its principal leader in later years was Edouard Herriot.

Radiguet (rà.dé.gé), Raymond. b. at Parc St-Maur, France, June 18, 1903; d. at Paris, Dec. 12, 1923. French poet and novelist. He was the author of two collections of poems, Joues en feu (1920) and Devoirs de vacances (1921), but known mainly for his short novels, Le Diable au corps (1923; Eng. trans., The Devil in the Flesh, 1932) and Le Bal du Comte Orgel (1924; Eng. trans., The Count's Ball, 1929). A prodigy of whose life little is known, he came to Paris in 1918, was taken up by Jean Cocteau and other modernist poets, and contributed to Sic and other "advanced" reviews. His work is marked by an 18th-century simplicity of style and a precocious clairvoyance in analyzing human relationships.

Rading (rà'ding), Adolf. b. at Berlin, March 2, 1888—. German architect and city planner. He studied at the Technische Hochschule at Berlin, collaborated with August Endell, and was a professor (1923-32) at the academy at Breslau. He designed office buildings, housing developments, and private houses at Berlin and Breslau. In his many publications on city planning he has been concerned mainly with the economic and functional problems of apartment houses.

Radisson (rà.dé.són), Sieur Pierre Esprit. [Known as Pierre d'Esprit.] b. at Saint-Malo, France, c1632; d. probably in England, after 1687. French explorer in Canada. He was the brother-in-law of Médard Chouart, Sieur des Groseilliers, with whom he discovered the upper Mississippi and explored the Hudson Bay region. Radisson's descriptions of the wealth obtainable in the Hudson Bay region is credited with causing the formation of the Hudson's Bay Company. He wrote an account of his travels and experiences among the North American Indians, which was published from the manuscript by the Prince Society in 1885. He went over to the service of the English because the French authorities confiscated the proceeds of one trading voyage on the grounds that the voyage had not been authorized.

Radkiewicz (ràt.kye'vèch), Stanislaw. b. 1903—. Polish Communist leader. A Communist since early youth, he was repeatedly sent by the Polish government to prison for subversive activities (1927-32), and went to the U.S.S.R. to receive special political and police training. Reputed to have been an agent of the GPU and NKVD (Russian secret police), he assisted in organizing Russian-sponsored Polish army units (1943-44), and became a member of the pro-Soviet Union of Polish Patriots in Moscow and chief of public security for the Polish Committee of National Liberation (1944-45). A year later he was appointed minister of public security and chief of police in the Russian-sponsored government of National Unity at Warsaw. He is a member of the Central Committee of the Polish Workers (Communist) Party.

Radnorshire (ràd'nor.shir) or Radnor (ràd'nor). Inland county in S Wales. It is bounded on the N by Montgomeryshire, on the NE by Shropshire (England), on the E by Herefordshire (England), on the S by Brecknockshire, and on the W by Cardiganshire. The surface is generally hilly or mountainous, reaching its highest elevation in the Forest of Radnor (2,186 ft.). The Vale of Radnor, lying in the E part, is fairly level. About 40 percent of the total area of the county is in permanent pasture. Dairy cattle are raised and large quantities of butter are made. Radnorshire contains the Welsh Lake District (in the Elan valley), from which the city of Birmingham, England, draws its water supply. The county is famous for its mineral springs. The only minerals of value are the limestones found underlying the Vale of Radnor. Presteigne is the county seat of Radnorshire, which is the smallest county in S Wales. Area, ab. 471 sq. mi.; pop. 19,998 (1951).

Radolfzell (rà'dòlf.tsel). [Also, Zell.] Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated on the Untersee arm of Lake Konstanz, ab. 11 mi. NW of Konstanz; agricultural trade; knitwear manufactures. The Gothic cathedral dates from the 15th century. Founded in the 9th century, Radolfzell passed to Austria in 1454 and to Baden in 1805. Pop. 8,737 (1946).

Radom (rà'dóm). Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Kielce, ab. 60 mi. S of Warsaw; electrical (especially telephone parts), metal, glass, and food industries; tanneries; ceramic and housewares manufactures; timber. The Church of the Bernardines and the parish church are Gothic buildings of the 15th and 16th centuries. The Confederation of Radom was concluded here in 1767 under the leadership of Prince Radziwill, instigated by the Russians who wished to keep Polish self-rule disorganized and thus eventually to destroy the country's independence. 69,455 (1946).

Radomsko (rà'dóm.skó). [Russian, Novoradomsk.] Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Łódź, NE of Częstochowa; metal and lumber industries. 19,551 (1946).

Radoslavov (rà.dò.slà'vùf), Vasil. b. at Lovech, Bulgaria, 1854; d. at Berlin, 1929. Bulgarian statesman, prime minister (1913-18) during World War I. He served earlier as minister of justice (1884-86) and prime minister (1886-87). He went into exile after the defeat of Germany, and published his memoirs, entitled Bulgarien und die Welkerie (1923).

Radot (rà.dò). See Badinguet.

Radowitz (rà'dò.vits), Joseph Maria von. b. at Blankenburg, Germany, Feb. 6, 1797; d. Dec. 25, 1853. Prussian general and politician. He was a deputy to the Frankfurt parliament (1848), and to the Erfurt parliament (1850). He was a friend and confidential adviser of Frederick William IV, was foreign minister (1850), and was a leader of the antirevolutionary party.

Radstadt (ràt.shtät). Town in C Austria, in Salzburg, situated on the Enns River ab. 30 mi. SE of Salzburg. 3,674 (1946).

Radstock (ràd'stok). See under Norton Radstock.

Radványi (ràd'vá.nyè), Netty. See Seghers, Anna.

Radzins (rà'dzins), Peteris. b. in Latvia, May 2, 1880; d. Oct. 7, 1930. Latvian general.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lîte, pûll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d, or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Radziwill (ră.jě'vël), Prince Anthony Henry. b. at Vilna, Lithuania, June 13, 1775; d. at Berlin, April 7, 1833. Polish composer and performer, who was also administrator of the duchy of Posen. Among his work is music to Goethe's Faust (1835), duets and quartets for voice, and songs. He was a patron of both Beethoven and Chopin.

Radziwill, Ferdinand. b. 1834; d. 1926. Polish politician. A member of the German parliament (1874 et seq.), he was active particularly on behalf of the Polish population then under German rule, and was also chairman of the Polish parliamentary group at Berlin. In independent Poland he was a member (1918-21) of parliament.

Radziwill, Janusz. b. at Berlin, Sept. 3, 1880—. Polish politician. In Poland before 1939 he was chairman of the Conservative Party, a member of parliament, and chairman of the parliamentary committee for foreign affairs (1928-39). Deported with his family by the Russians during World War II, he returned to Poland in 1946 but retired entirely from political life.

Rae (ră), John. b. in the Orkney Islands, Scotland, Sept. 30, 1813; d. at London, July 22, 1893. British arctic explorer. He studied medicine at Edinburgh, and was for a time a ship's surgeon in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company. He made explorations in 1846-47. In 1848 he went with Sir John Richardson in search of the lost Franklin expedition. He proved King William's Land to be an island and discovered traces of Sir John Franklin (1853-54), thus winning the prize that had been offered for the information. In 1864 he made a telegraphic survey across the Rocky Mountains.

Rae Bareli (ră'ē bāră'lă). [Also: Rai Bareli, Roy Bareilly.] District in the division of Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh, of the Union of India, ab. 60 mi. E of Cawnpore: rice, wheat, sugar, barley, and cotton. Area, 1,765 sq. mi.; pop. 1,064,804 (1941).

Rae Bareli. [Also: Rai Bareli, Roy Bareilly.] Capital of the district of Rae Bareli, Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, on the Sai River ab. 140 mi. E of Cawnpore: trading center, 20,945 (1941).

Raeburn (ră'bĕrn), Sir Henry. b. at Stockbridge, near Edinburgh, March 4, 1756; d. there, July 8, 1823. Scottish portrait painter. He was educated at Heriot's Hospital, and at 15 apprenticed to a goldsmith at Edinburgh. From this he passed to miniature painting and to oil painting, entirely self-taught. On the advice of Sir Joshua Reynolds, he studied in Italy, returning to Edinburgh in 1787, where he remained. He painted portraits of Scott, Blair, Robertson, Dugald Stewart, and others. In 1814 he was made associate royal academician, and in 1815 royal academician.

Raeder (ră'dĕr), Erich. b. at Wandsbeck, Germany, April 24, 1876—. German admiral. He served as chief of staff to Admiral Franz von Hipper in World War I, was chief (1928) of the navy department in the ministry of defense, and served as supreme commander (1939 et seq.) of the German naval forces. He planned the invasions of Norway and Greece in World War II, but opposed the attack on Russia. Retired in 1943, he was succeeded by Admiral Karl Dönitz. He was sentenced (1946) to life imprisonment by the international war crimes tribunal at Nuremberg.

Rædwald (răd'wôld). See Redwald.

Raemaekers (ră'mă'kĕrs), Louis. b. at Roermond, Netherlands, April 6, 1869—. Dutch political cartoonist and artist, noted for his political caricatures, most of which were originally published in Telegraaf at Amsterdam. He studied at Amsterdam, Brussels, and Paris, and during World War I did a series of war posters which became widely known. He has also sketched many landscapes and portraits. Among his better known works are Story of the War in Caricature (1919) and Before History (1918).

Raetia (rĕ'shă). See Rhaetia.

Rafaëla (ră.fă.ă'lă). [Also, Rafaëla (ră.fă.ă'lă).] City in E Argentina, in Santa Fé province, ab. 300 mi. NW of Buenos Aires, 23,665 (1947).

Raff (răf), Joseph Joachim. b. at Lachen, Switzerland, May 27, 1822; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, June 24 or 25, 1882. German composer. His works number nearly 300, including symphonies (among which are Im Walde and Leonore), sonatas, songs, quartets, and operas. Among the last are König Alfred (1850) and Dame Kobold (1870).

Raffadali (ră.fă.dă.lă). [Ancient name, Hypsaë.] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Agrigento, ab. 7 mi. NW of Agrigento: agriculture, cannery; textile manufactures. Pop. of commune, 11,207 (1936); of town, 11,158 (1936).

Raffaelli (ră.fă.ē.lĕ), Jean François. b. at Paris, April 20, 1850; d. 1923. French painter. He was a professional singer in his early years, and studied at the atelier Gérôme in his leisure hours; he made his debut as a painter at the Salon in 1870. He was especially attracted by the effects found in the streets and suburbs of Paris. Raffet (ră.fĕ), Denis Auguste Marie. b. at Paris, March 2, 1804; d. at Genoa, Italy, Feb. 16, 1860. French painter and lithographer. His first collection of lithographs appeared in 1827. He illustrated many of the popular books of the period. His reputation rests mainly upon his lithographs of military scenes and battle pieces. He was also an excellent caricaturist.

Raffles (ră'fĕz), Sir Thomas Stamford. b. at sea near Jamaica, July 5, 1781; d. July 5, 1826. English colonial official. He started his career as clerk in the London office of the East India Company. In 1805 he was sent to Penang on the Malayan coast as assistant to the first governor of that settlement. In the following years he strenuously opposed the company's design to liquidate its holdings east of India and secured a reversal of this policy in 1809. He went to the company's headquarters in India to advocate the conquest of Java, then occupied by a Dutch government subservient to Napoleon France, and in 1811 accompanied the British naval and military expedition which occupied Batavia without fighting. After French capitulation in the Indies, he was appointed lieutenant governor of Java and held this post until 1816. During this period he reformed the system of land tenure and of taxation. In 1817, after a visit to England during which he vainly urged retention of this formerly Dutch territory, he served as lieutenant governor (1818-23) of the British portion of Sumatra but again was defeated in his effort to gain for the British crown a permanent foothold in the Indian Archipelago. Finding British trade and shipping cut off from eastern Asia, he eventually persuaded his country to acquire (1819) from the Netherlands the seemingly useless tiny island of Singapore off the southern tip of the Malay Peninsula. Steps which he had taken to check the slave trade and other allegations of high-handed disregard of governmental orders led to his recall in 1824. Raffles contributed much to Western knowledge of Malaysian and Indonesian geography, natural history, and peoples. A college and a museum and research library in Singapore are named for him.

Rafinesque (ră.fĕ.nesk'), Constantine Samuel. b. at Galata, Constantinople, Oct. 22, 1783; d. at Philadelphia, Sept. 18, 1840. French-American naturalist. He published several works on botany and miscellaneous subjects.

Rafn (ră'ĕn, ră'ĕn), Karl Christian. b. at Braborg, Fyn, Denmark, Jan. 16, 1795; d. at Copenhagen, Oct. 20, 1864. Danish antiquary. He published various works on northern antiquities, and is best known for his Antiquitates Americanae (1837), on the medieval (10th-century) discoveries and the settlements from the 11th to the 14th century of the Scandinavians in America.

Raft of the Medusa (mĕ.dŭ'să, -ză). Painting by Géricault, in the Louvre, Paris. The raft bears the dying survivors of the lost frigate. It is a dramatic presentation of suffering and despair. The picture created a sensation, when exhibited in 1819, as one of the earliest strongly to define the tendencies of the new romantic school.

Ragaz or Ragatz (ră.găts). [Also, Bad Ragaz.] Resort in NE Switzerland, in the canton of St. Gallen, situated on the Tamina River, near the Rhine River. It is noted for its hot springs, 2,337 (1941).

Ragazzo (ră.găt'sô), II. See Farinelli, Carlo.

Raghava (ră.gă'vă). See Ramachandra; see also under Raghu.

Raghlín (ră.gĕl'ín). See Rathlín.

Raghu (ră'gô). In Hindu legend, an ancient king, ancestor of Ramachandra (the latter is sometimes called Raghava, meaning "descendant of Raghu").

Raglan (rag'lan), 1st Baron. [Title of Fitzroy James Henry Somerset.] b. Sept. 30, 1788; d. near Sevastopol, Russia, June 28, 1855. English field marshal; son of Henry Somerset, 5th Duke of Beaufort. He went (1808) to Portugal as aide-de-camp with Arthur Wellesley (later Duke of Wellington), participating in the battles of Roliça and Vimiero. He was appointed (1811) military secretary to Wellesley, lost his right arm at Waterloo, and was military secretary (1827) at the Horse Guards, a position which he held for more than 25 years. He succeeded (1852) Wellington as commander of the forces, and was made (1852) Baron Raglan of Raglan, Monmouthshire. He commanded the English forces during the Crimean War, winning the battle of the Alma (Sept. 20, 1854), which he opened with an attack by the British infantry. He blamed George Charles Bingham, 3rd Earl of Lucan, for the disastrous charge of the light brigade at Balaklava (1854), where Lucan misinterpreted an order from Raglan as meaning to attack at whatever cost. He was made (1854) field marshal after the victory at Inkerman, the notification coming with a letter of gratitude from Queen Victoria. He was blamed for the failure of the commissariat (1854-55) and accused of not having direct contact with his camps, and died shortly after the defeats of the Malakoff and the Redan.

Ragman Roll (rag'man). Collection of parchments containing the record of the fealty of Scottish barons, clergy, and gentry to Edward I of England when in Scotland in 1291 and 1296.

Ragman Roll. Poem printed by Wynkyn de Worde, consisting of a list of good and bad women.

Ragnar Lodbrok (räg'när löd'brök). In Old Norse legend, a Viking, who became king of Denmark and invaded England in the 8th century.

Ragnarök (räg'närök). In Old Norse mythology, the final battle of the world between the gods and the evil powers, in which all perish and the universe is consumed by fire. The only survivors are one man and one woman, Líf and Lífþrasir, who sleep safely in Hodmimir's forest through it all, and waken to repeople the earth.

Ragtoun (rag'toun). Former name of Amarillo.

Raguet (rag'ä), Condy. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 28, 1784; d. there, March 21, 1842. American political economist. He published Principles of Free Trade (1835). On Currency and Banking (1839), and others.

Ragusa (räg'zä). Province in SW Italy, in the compartimento (region) and island of Sicily. Capital, Ragusa; area, ab. 582 sq. mi.; pop. 223,086 (1936).

Ragusa. [Ancient name, Hybla Heraclea.] City and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, capital of the province of Ragusa, ab. 30 mi. SW of Syracuse. It comprises the two former communities of Ragusa Superiore and Ragusa Inferiore, which were merged in 1926 (the latter and older community had also the name of Ragusa Ibla). The older town, dominated by a huge castle, was largely destroyed in the earthquake of 1693; the newer town, with beautiful baroque palaces and churches, is connected with the old town by stairways. The district produces grain, olives, vine, and livestock; there are stone quarries and asphalt mines in the vicinity. In World War II, the city was the meeting point of American and Canadian forces in the invasion of Sicily, in June, 1943. Pop. of commune, 49,413 (1936); of city, 33,230 (1936).

Ragusa. Italian name of Dubrovnik.

Ragusa Ibla (ä'blä). See under Ragusa, Italy.

Ragusa Inferiore (än.fä.ryö'fä). See under Ragusa, Italy.

Ragusa Superiore (sä.pä.ryö'fä). See under Ragusa, Italy.

Raguse (räg'üz), Duc de. Title of Marmont, Auguste Frédéric Louis Viesse de.

Rahab (rä'häb). In Old Testament history, a woman of Jericho who protected two spies sent by Joshua to view the land. She concealed them in her house, put their pursuers on a false scent, and let them down by a cord from a window (Josh. ii.). She was the mother of Boaz, and David was her descendant.

Rahdunpur (rä'dun.pör). See Radhanpur.

Rahery (rä'ä.ri). See Rathlin.

Rahl (rä'l), Karl. b. at Vienna, Aug. 13, 1812; d. there, July 9, 1865. Austrian historical painter.

Rahmaniye (rä.mä.nä'yä). [Also: Rahmaniya (-ya), Ramanieh.] Place in the Nile delta, Egypt, ab. 40 mi. SE of Alexandria. It was a scene of military operations in the French campaigns in Egypt (1798-1801).

Rahu (rä'hö). In Hindu mythology, the demon who seizes the sun and moon, and thereby occasions their eclipse. In Hindu astronomical treatises the name is applied to the ascending node, the eclipse itself, and especially the moment at which the obscuration begins.

Rahway (rä'wä). City in N New Jersey, in Union County, ab. 17 mi. SW of New York; manufactures of cereal, machine oil, chemicals, and drugs. 21,290 (1950).

Rai (ri), Lala Lajpat. See Lajpat Rai, Lala.

Rai Bareli (ri ba.rä'lä). See Rae Bareli.

Raibolini (ri.bö.lä'nä), Francesco. See Francia.

Raichur (ri.chür). Town in Hyderabad, Union of India, near the Kistna River, ab. 110 mi. SW of the city of Hyderabad. There are several small cotton-weaving factories in the city. It is an important trading center. Pop. ab. 35,000.

Raid of Ruthven (ruth'vyn). See Ruthven, Raid of. Raikes (räks), Robert. b. at Gloucester, England, Sept. 14, 1735; d. April 5, 1811. English publisher and philanthropist. He was the originator of the modern Sunday schools, the first of which he established at Gloucester in 1780.

Railroad Commission of Wisconsin v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Co., 257 U.S. 563 (1922) (wis.kon'sin; shi.kä'gö, -kó'-; bér'ling.ton; kwín'si). Unanimous U.S. Supreme court decision upholding the constitutionality of the federal Transportation Act of 1920. The court's opinion, delivered by Chief Justice William H. Taft, affirmed the intrastate regulatory powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission and effectively placed all rail rates within the province of the commission.

Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935) (öl'ton). U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring unconstitutional the Railroad Retirement Pension Act of 1934 on the ground that it violated due process and exceeded the commerce power allotted to the national government. The case is notable as one of the major judicial setbacks suffered by the New Deal social reform program.

Railway Retirement Act. Act of the U.S. Congress passed in 1935 which authorized retirement pensions and annuities for railroad employees. It replaced the Railroad Retirement Act of 1934, which had been invalidated by the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in the case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co. (1935) on the ground that it violated the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment. The act of 1935 created the Railroad Retirement Board, a three-man unit representing management, labor, and the federal government, which is charged with administering pension and annuity payments to overage and disabled railway workers.

Raimond (rä.mön) or Raimunde (rä'münd). See Raymond.

Raimond (rä'mönd), C. E. Pseudonym of Robins, Elizabeth.

Raimondi (rä.mön'dä), Antonio. b. at Milan, Italy, 1825; d. at Lima, Peru, in December, 1890. Italian geographer and naturalist in Peru.

Raimondi, Marcantonio. b. at Bologna, Italy, c1475; d. before 1534. One of the chief Italian engravers of the Renaissance. He engraved after Raphael, Giulio Romano, Albrecht Dürer, and others.

Raimondi, Pietro. b. at Rome, Dec. 20, 1786; d. there, Oct. 30, 1853. Italian conductor and composer. He was theater director (1824-32) at Naples, and was named (1852) choirmaster at Saint Peter's at Rome.

Raimu (re.mü), Jules. [In professional use always shortened to Raimu.] b. 1883; d. Sept. 20, 1946. French stage and motion-picture actor. Long a favorite of the French theater-going public by reason of his performances as a comedian at the Folies Bergères and at the Théâtre de Paris, he won wider acclaim when he entered the motion-picture field in 1929. His performance in the film The Baker's Wife introduced him to the American public in 1940.

Raimund (rä'münt), Ferdinand. b. at Vienna, June 1, 1790; d. Sept. 5, 1836. Austrian dramatist and actor.

He became (c1817) a popular actor at Vienna, excelling in comedies. His own plays, which he began to produce after 1828, include Der Bauer als Millionär (1826), Der Alpenkönig und der Menschenfeind (1828), and Der Verschwender (1833). Always a prey to melancholy, he committed suicide after being bitten by a dog he thought was mad.

Rain (rān). Small town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, N of Augsburg. It was the scene of an engagement between the forces of Gustavus Adolphus and Tilly, on April 15, 1632, in which Tilly was mortally wounded. 959 (1946).

Rain (rān). Play (1922) by John Colton and Clemence Randolph, based on Miss Thompson, a short story by W. Somerset Maugham.

Rainalducci (rī.nāl.dōt'chē), Pietro. See Nicholas V, antipope.

Rainbow, The. Novel by D. H. Lawrence, published in 1915. Its sequel is Women in Love (1920).

Raincy (rah.sē). Le. See Le Raincy.

Raine (rān), William MacLeod. b. at London, England, June 22, 1871—. American writer. Author of Bucky O'Connor (1910), A Texas Ranger (1911), The Yukon Trail (1917), A Man Four Square (1919), Gunsight Pass (1921), Beyond the Rio Grande (1931), The Broad Arrow (1933), Riders of the Rim Rocks (1940), and other novels of western adventure.

Rainer (rī'nēr). b. Sept. 30, 1783; d. in the Tyrol, Jan. 16, 1853. Austrian archduke; seventh son of the emperor Leopold II. He was viceroy of the Austrian possessions in Italy from 1818 to the insurrection of 1848.

Rainer, Luise. b. at Vienna, Jan. 12, 1912—. Austrian stage and screen actress. She made her debut in 1928 at Düsseldorf, and for two seasons was at Vienna under contract to Max Reinhardt. Some of her most successful roles were in Saint Joan, Measure for Measure, Men in White, and Six Characters in Search of an Author. In 1935 she was brought to Hollywood for a film, Escapade, and followed this assignment with leading roles in The Great Ziegfeld (1936), The Good Earth (1937), and The Great Waltz (1938). She made her English-speaking stage debut at London in Behold the Bride (1939), and subsequently played the heroine in J. M. Barrie's A Kiss for Cinderella (1940) at New York.

Raines (rānz), John. b. at Canandaigua, N.Y., May 6, 1840; d. there, Dec. 16, 1909. American lawyer and legislator. He served (1881 et seq., 1885) in the New York State assembly and was a member (1886-89) of the state senate, subsequently serving (1889-93) in Congress and returning (1894) to the state senate, occupying his post until his death. He was the author of the state liquor excise law of 1896 (better known as the "Raines law") forbidding the Sunday sale of intoxicants except at inns and hotels having ten or more bedrooms.

Raines Inlet. See under Great Barrier Reef.

Raine (rān), Henry Thomas. b. at Carrollton, Ill., Aug. 20, 1860; d. at St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 19, 1934. American politician. He was graduated (B.A., 1883; M.A., 1886) from Amherst and received the degree of LL.B. from the Union College of Law (Chicago) in 1885. He practiced law at Carrollton from 1885 to 1902, and served in Congress (1903-21, 1923-34); he was defeated in the Republican landslide of 1920. On March 9, 1933, he succeeded newly elected Vice-President John Nance Garner as speaker of the House.

Rainier III (re.nyā). [Full name, Rainier III Louis Henri Maurice Bertrand de Grimaldi, Prince de Monaco.] b. at Monaco, May 31, 1923—. Reigning head (1949 et seq.) of the house of Monaco; grandson of Louis II of Monaco.

Rainier (rā'nir, rā'nir, rā'nir). Mount. [Also, Mount Tacoma.] Highest mountain in the state of Washington, situated E of Tacoma, in Mount Rainier National Park. It is of volcanic origin. Elevation, 14,408 ft.

Rain-in-the-Face. d. 1905. Sioux Indian chief. He was, with Sitting Bull, in command of the Sioux who defeated and annihilated the expedition led by General George Armstrong Custer at the Little Bighorn, in Montana, on June 25, 1876.

Rainis (rī'nīs), Janis. [Original surname, Plekšāns.] b. in Latvia, in September, 1865; d. Sept. 12, 1929.

Latvian poet, dramatist, and editor. Editor (1891-95) of the newspaper Dienas Lapa, he was imprisoned by the Russian government and banished (1897) to Pskov and later to Vyatka (1899); during the period of his banishment he engaged in translating various classics into Latvian, and published also his first collection of poetry (1903). He was a leader of the Latvian revolutionaries of 1905, and emigrated (1906) to Switzerland, where he remained until 1920, when he returned to the newly established independent Latvia. During his sojourn abroad Rainis wrote and published seven dramas and several collections of poetry. Among his dramas are Joseph and His Brothers, Fire and Night, and Daugava.

Rains (rānz), Claude. b. at London, England, Nov. 10, 1889—. American actor. His career on the stage includes appearances in England and the U.S. in such plays as A Bill of Divorcement, Marco Millions, and Darkness at Noon; he was general manager (1913) for Harley Granville-Barker's tour of the U.S. He has been, since 1933, well known as a motion-picture actor, appearing in The Invisible Man, Crime Without Passion, Anthony Adverse, The Prince and the Pauper, They Won't Forget, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, Here Comes Mr. Jordan, Casablanca, Caesar and Cleopatra, The White Tower, and others.

Rains, Gabriel James. b. in North Carolina, June 4, 1803; d. at Aiken, S.C., Aug. 6, 1881. American Confederate general. He accepted a brigadier-generalship in the Confederate service in 1861, and served with distinction at Wilson's Creek, Shiloh, and Seven Pines.

Rainy Lake (rā'nī). Lake on the border of Minnesota and Canada, NW of Lake Superior. Its outlet is the Rainy River to the Lake of the Woods. Length of the lake, ab. 50 mi.; elevation, 1,107 ft.; area, 366 sq. mi., of which 74 sq. mi. are in the U.S.

Rainy River. River in the far western part of the province of Ontario, Canada, which connects the Lake of the Woods with Rainy Lake and forms the boundary between Ontario and Minnesota. Length, ab. 85 mi.

Raipur (rī'pūr). City in Madhya Pradesh, Union of India, ab. 130 mi. E of Nagpur. There is some coal mining in the area; linseed, wheat, rice, and millet are produced. The city itself is a trading center and has several printing plants for the linseed. 63,565 (1941).

Raipur, 1st Baron of. Title of Sinha, Sri Satyendra Prasanno.

Rais (res), Baron de. See Retz, Baron de.

Raisin (rā'zin). River in SE Michigan which flows into Lake Erie ab. 34 mi. SW of Detroit. The battle fought on it in 1813 is known as the battle of Frenchtown. Length, ab. 140 mi.

Raising of the Cross. See Elevation of the Cross.

Raisuli (rā.sū'li), Ahmed ibn-Muhammed. b. c1875; d. 1925. Berber brigand in Morocco. He gained international notoriety by kidnapping and receiving huge ransoms for Walter Harris, London Times correspondent at Tangier; Ion Perdicaris, a U.S. citizen (abducted in 1904); and Sir Harry Maclean (kidnaped in 1907). After World War I he had ties for a time with Abd-el-Krim. The kidnapping of Perdicaris evoked from Secretary of State John Hay, at the behest of President Theodore Roosevelt, the famous telegram to the U.S. consul: "We want Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead."

Raiz (rets), Baron de. See Retz, Baron de.

Rajab (rā.jab'). Moslem month, having 30 days, the seventh in the calendar.

Raja Falls (rā'ja). See under Gersoppa, Falls of.

Rajagopalacharia (rā.jā.gō.pā'lā.chār'yā), Chakravarti. b. 1879—. Indian lawyer and politician, first Indian to become (1948) governor general of India. An ascetic Brahman, he was a close associate of Gandhi and is considered to be Gandhi's most faithful surviving ideological disciple. He served as a member of the Congress Working Committee until 1942, when he resigned to support full Indian cooperation in World War II on condition of immediate (if provisional) establishment of an autonomous Indian government. He was a member (1946) of the viceroy's executive council, and governor of Bengal (1947). He was governor general when the republic was proclaimed (1950); in 1951 he became minister of home affairs.

Rajahmundry (rā.ja.mu'n'dri). [Also: Rajamahendri, Rajamandry.] City in Madras, Union of India, on the Godavari River ab. 210 mi. E of Hyderabad; trading center. 74,574 (1941).

Rajashekhara (rā.ja.shā'ka.ra). fl. c900. Hindu dramatist. He was the author of three Sanskrit dramas, the Balaramayana (Exploits of Balarama), the Prachandapandava (The Wrathful Sons of Pandu), and the Viddha-shalabhanjika (The Wounded Doll), and of a Prakrit drama, the Karpuramanjari (Cluster of Camphor Blossoms).

Rajasthan (rā.ja.stān). Constituent state of the Union of India, formed in 1949 by the merger of 18 princely states of NW India, in the Rajputana region. Capital, Jaipur; land area, 128,424 sq. mi.; pop. 15,297,979 (1951).

Rajasthani (rā.ja.stā'nē). Indo-European language spoken by about 14 million people in W India, mainly in the states of Rajasthan. One of its dialects, Marwari, is the language of an important mercantile community which is now established throughout India; hence the Marwari script is often the one used in recording commercial transactions.

Rajata (rā.jā'tā), Marchese della. A title of Marchesi, Salvatore.

Rajata, Marquesa della. Title by marriage of Marchesi de Castrone, Madame Mathilda.

Rajatarangini (rā.ja.tā.rāng'i.nē). [Eng. trans., "Stream of Kings."] Sanskrit chronicle of the kings of Kashmir, written c1148 A.D. It is remarkable as almost the only work in Sanskrit literature which has value to scholars trained in contemporary techniques of historiography (which is to say simply that most Sanskrit writers were concerned primarily with metaphysics or legend, and paid little heed to exact chronologies or precise historical records).

Rajecz (rā'yech), Count Stephan Burján von. See Burján von Rajecz, Count Stephan.

Rajeshaye (rā.je.shā'yē). See Rajshahi.

Rajk (rōik), László. [Also spelled Reich.] b. at Székelyudvarhely (now Odorhely), in Transylvania, 1909; hanged at Budapest, Oct. 15, 1949. Hungarian politician. He became a Communist in 1939 and fought for the Loyalists during the Spanish Civil War (1936-39). In 1939 he was interned in France, and during World War II he became an important member of the underground fighters against the Nazis. Following the war he became a member of the Hungarian legislature and, a leader of the Communist Hungarian Workers' Party, was minister of the interior (1946-48) and foreign minister (1948). In 1949 he was arrested, accused of plotting the overthrow of the government, of plotting the death of Mátyás Rákosi, the vice-premier, and of spying for the U.S. and adhering to Tito of Yugoslavia. He confessed to these and other charges, was found guilty, and was executed.

Rajputana (rāj.pō.tā'na). [Also, Rajpootana.] Region in NW Union of India, formerly the collective name given to 23 states including Bikaner, Jaipur, Jaisalmer, Jodhpur, and Udaipur. The region formed part of the Mogul empire, and was subjugated by the Marhattas. It was almost entirely incorporated in 1948-49 into Rajasthan. The population is predominantly Hindu. Area, 132,559 sq. mi.; pop. 13,670,208 (1941).

Rajputs (rāj'pōts). Group of Hindu people (divided into more than 30 clans) who regard themselves as descendants of the ancient Kshatriya, or warrior caste. They have long been the ruling (though not the most numerous) people of the region named (from them) Rajputana, and even under the Union of India they play a dominant role in the government of this area. They number ab. 650,000. Their hereditary profession is that of arms, and no group in India has furnished so large a number of princely families. The Rajputs are not strict adherents of Brahmanism.

Rajshahi (rāj.shā'hē). [Also: Rajeshaye, Rajshahye.] Division formerly in British India, now divided between East Bengal, Pakistan, and West Bengal, Union of India, ab. 130 mi. N of Calcutta. It is a very important rice and jute producing area. Area, 19,612 sq. mi.; pop. 12,040,465 (1941).

Rajshahi. [Also: Rajeshaye, Rajshahye.] District in East Bengal, Pakistan, N of the Ganges River. Capital, Rajshahi; area, 2,526 sq. mi.; pop. 1,571,750 (1941).

Rajshahi. [Also: Rajeshaye, Rajshahye; former name, Rampur Beauleah (or Boalia).] Capital of the district of Rajshahi, East Bengal, Pakistan, on the Ganges River ab. 130 mi. N of Calcutta; jute-milling and trading center. 39,662 (1951).

Rakas Tal (rā'kās tāl). Sacred lake in SW Tibet, situated near the meeting of the borders of Tibet, the Union of India, and Nepal, W of Manasarovar Lake; one of the sources of the Sütley River. Circumference, ab. 50 mi.

Rake's Progress, The. Series of eight pictures by Hogarth (1735), and of engravings which he made after the paintings. The subject is the descent of a rich young man, through dissipation, to poverty, despair, and madness.

Rákóczy (rā'kō'sē), Francis. [Also, Francis II.] b. in Zemplén, Hungary, March 27, 1676; d. at Rodostó, Turkey, April 8, 1735. Hungarian statesman. When the War of the Spanish Succession diverted (1701) Austria's attention from internal to general European difficulties, Rákóczy headed the Hungarian rebellion of 1703. He had practically no support from the Hungarian nobility, but nevertheless, despite continual failure of his troops, kept the field, with the constant but vain hope of help from France. In 1704 he was chosen Prince of Transylvania and in 1707 assumed the government after a diet had declared the Hapsburgs deposed in Transylvania. In 1711 Rákóczy left Hungary and, despite an amnesty, never returned, living first in France and, after 1717, in Turkey.

Rákóczy, George. [Also, George I.] b. 1591; d. October, 1648. Prince of Transylvania (1631-48). In alliance with the Swedes, he invaded (1644-45) Hungary and Moravia, overran all of Hungary, and forced the Emperor Ferdinand III to grant territorial concessions and religious liberty for the Hungarians.

Rakonitz Chronicles (rā.kon'its), The. Trilogy on Jewish life and character by G. B. Stern, published collectively in 1932. It consists of the novels Tents of Israel (1924), American title, The Matriarch, (1925), A Deputy Was King (1926), and Mosaic (1930).

Rákoscaba (rā'kō'sh.tó'bó). An eastern suburb of Budapest, Hungary, a station on the railroad line from Budapest to Gödöllő, 15,604 (1948).

Rákosi (rā'kō'shē), Mátyás. b. at Ada, Hungary (now in Yugoslavia), March 14, 1892—. Hungarian politician. During World War I he served in the Austro-Hungarian army, but was captured (1915) and spent the remainder of the war as a Russian prisoner of war. He returned to Hungary at the end of the war and took part in Béla Kun's abortive Communist Republic (1919). He was secretary of the Comintern (1920) and continued his activities. In 1925 he was arrested and sentenced to imprisonment and in 1933 again was imprisoned, this time for life. In 1940 he obtained his freedom and went to Russia. He was back in Hungary in 1945 as secretary and head of the Hungarian Communist Party, served as vice-premier of the Hungarian People's Republic until 1952, and became premier in 1952.

Rákospalota (rā'kō'sh.pó'tó). A northeastern suburb of Budapest, Hungary, a station on the railroad line from Budapest to Vác. It has textile factories, oil refineries, and railroad repair shops. 48,379 (1948).

Rákosszentmihály (rā'kō'sh.sent.mē'hāy'). A northeastern suburb of Budapest, Hungary. 18,437 (1948).

Raksh (raksh). In the Persian epic, the Shahnamah, the famous horse of Rostam, who killed a lion in behalf of his master. After many other adventures Raksh himself was killed by falling into a pit filled with javelins.

Rakshasas (rāk'sha.saz). In Hindu mythology, a group of evil demons who are inimical to mankind. They play a great part in Hindu belief. They are believed to haunt cemeteries, destroy sacrifices, animate dead bodies, ensnare and even devour human beings and corpses. Some have long arms, some are fat, some thin, some dwarfish, some tall and humpbacked, some have only one eye, some only one ear, some have five feet, or enormous paunches, poisonous projecting teeth, and crooked thighs; occasionally they assume beautiful forms, but their eyes are always vertical slits.

Ralegh (rō'li, rā'li), Sir Walter. See Raleigh, Sir Walter.

Raleigh (rō'li, rā'li). City in C North Carolina, capital of the state and county seat of Wake County. It is an important cotton and tobacco shipping point, with manufactures of cotton goods, cottonseed oil, building materials, automobile bodies, and furniture. The city was platted in April, 1792. It is the seat of two colleges for women, St. Augustine's College, Shaw University, and the North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering of the University of North Carolina. It was the birthplace of President Andrew Johnson. The city was named for Sir Walter Raleigh. Pop. of city, 65,679 (1950); of urbanized area, 68,743 (1950).

"Raleigh." A pseudonym of Lee, Arthur.

Raleigh, Sir Walter. [Surname as he preferred to spell it, Ralegh.] b. at Hayes, Devonshire, England, c.1552; executed at London, Oct. 29, 1618. English courtier, colonizer, and poet. After a short residence at Oriel College, Oxford, he entered the Huguenot army (1569), returning to England before 1576. He joined (1578) his half-brother Sir Humphrey Gilbert in an expedition purportedly to explore and discover; in fact, the ships were to engage in piracy on the Spaniards. They were, however, driven back both in 1578 and 1579 without appreciable gains. Raleigh soon thereafter became attached to the followers of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, the queen's favorite. In 1580, he commanded an English company in Munster, Ireland. On his return he came into great favor at court; according to legend, this was due to his gallant action of spreading his cloak over a puddle so that the queen might not wet her shoes. Actually, his personal charm, good looks, and powerful sponsors at court all probably facilitated his rapid rise. He was granted several estates, a licensing patent, and a woolen-export monopoly (1584). In 1585 he became warden of the stanneries, giving him wide control in the tin mines of the west country, and vice-admiral of Devon and Cornwall; in 1586 he was captain of the guard. In 1584 he was granted a charter of colonization, and sent Philip Amadas and Arthur Barlow to explore the region between Florida and the Carolinas, which he called Virginia in honor of Elizabeth, the "Virgin Queen." In 1585 he despatched a fleet of colonists, who landed on Roanoke Island, but were brought back by Francis Drake the following year. In 1587 another body of emigrants was sent out; they settled on Roanoke Island, but had disappeared when a relief expedition reached the island in 1590; Virginia Dare was born during this unsuccessful colonizing attempt and suffered whatever fate befell the colonists. About 1586 Raleigh introduced the potato in Munster on his land he was granted by the queen; he is also credited with introducing the "drinking" of tobacco, as smoking was then called. In 1588 he took an active part against the Armada. During this period he became a friend of Edmund Spenser, whom he had met in Ireland some years earlier. He introduced Spenser to Elizabeth and persuaded him to publish the Faerie Queene. He had, however, gradually fallen out of the queen's favor as she became more and more infatuated with Robert Devereux, 2nd Earl of Essex; despite Raleigh's attempts to succeed the recently deceased Leicester as her principal favorite, he lost out, probably because of the intrigues of the many courtiers who had come to dislike his swaggering manner and who looked upon him as a Devonshire upstart. He stayed away from court for almost four years, but when Essex married he again came into favor. However, for his seduction of and marriage to Elizabeth Throckmorton (or Throgmorton), one of the queen's maids of honor, he was imprisoned (1592) in the Tower. Again barred from court, although granted freedom, Raleigh became the center of a group of poets and scientists, known as the "school of night," that included Christopher Marlowe, Thomas Harriot, George Chapman, Walter Warner, and Matthew Royden, among others. This brilliant group, containing some of the best minds in England, gained notoriety for their free attitude toward such matters as religion, in those days so closely tied to government in the person of the monarch that atheism was tantamount to treason; Marlowe was killed before the Privy Council could examine him on his opinions, but an official investigation was made into Raleigh's beliefs in 1594, the charges eventually dying for lack of decisive evidence. In 1595 he sailed for Trinidad and ascended the Orinoco in an effort to find treasure, but the expedition was fruitless. In 1596 he commanded a squadron under Charles Howard and the Earl of Essex in the expedition which destroyed the Spanish fleet at Cadiz; in 1597 he captured Fayal in the Azores, gaining renown in both expeditions. He again quarreled with Essex, and again fell out of favor at court. In 1600 he was appointed governor of Jersey and in 1601 took part in suppressing Essex's rebellion. He served as captain of the guard at the execution of Essex, but his triumph was shortlived. Elizabeth's death brought to the throne James I., whose policies ran counter to those Raleigh had supported. The background is unclear, but apparently James looked upon Essex as one of his supporters and therefore upon Raleigh as one of his enemies, all the more so since he favored a peaceful conclusion to the troubles with Spain and Raleigh was an exponent of further attacks on the Spaniard. In addition, Raleigh's enemies continued to work against him and Raleigh was probably implicated in one or several of the plots to keep the king from the throne. On the accession of James in 1603, Raleigh was stripped of his honors and estates and charged with a plot to place Arabella Stuart on the throne. He was again imprisoned in the Tower, tried very unfairly in November, 1603, and sentenced to death. The sentence was not carried out, but Raleigh remained a prisoner in the Tower until 1616. In the Tower he devoted himself to chemical experiments, and wrote as much of his History of the World as was ever finished. In 1616 he was released to command another expedition to Guiana and the Orinoco, promising not only that he would find gold but also that he would not interfere with the Spaniards; obviously this whole attempt was a move of desperation, Raleigh preferring to stake everything on one last gamble, for if he should find gold the inevitable clash with the Spaniards might be overlooked. The expedition was a failure from the start; ships were lost in storms; his men melted away as the result of disease and desertion; a group got into a fight with the Spaniards and Raleigh's son was killed. On his return, when the Spanish ambassador made an official complaint about the destruction of a Spanish town by Raleigh, the old sentence was invoked, and Raleigh was executed. In addition to the incomplete History of the World, which contains a famous apostrophe to Death, he wrote a number of prose works, including accounts of the Azores fight and the discovery of Guiana, and he was the author of several poems: Cynthia (which is his longest extant poem and may be a fragment of a much longer work), The Lie, The Pilgrimage, The Nymph's Reply (to Marlowe's The Passionate Shepherd), the sonnet appended to the Faerie Queene "Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay," and others.

Raleigh, Sir Walter Alexander. b. 1861; d. May 13, 1922. English essayist and biographer. He was professor of modern literature at University College, Liverpool (1889-1900), of English language and literature at Glasgow University (1900-04), and from 1904 of English literature at Oxford. He published The English Novel (1894), Robert Louis Stevenson (1895), Style (1897), Milton (1900), Wordsworth (1903), The English Voyages of the Sixteenth Century (1906), Shakespeare (1907), Six Essays on Johnson (1910), and Romance (1917).

Raleigh Club. London club founded in 1858 for social purposes.

Ralph (ralf), James. b. at Philadelphia between 1695 and 1705; d. at Chiswick, England, Jan. 24, 1762. English pamphleteer, historical writer, poet, and playwright. He went to England (1724) with Benjamin Franklin, settled there, and began writing poetry. He became a political journalist in the pay of Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales.

Ralph, Julian. b. at New York, May 27, 1853; d. there, Jan. 20, 1903. American journalist and author. He was with the Turkish army as a correspondent in the war of 1897 in Greece, and in 1899 went to South Africa as a war correspondent. He wrote On Canada's Frontier (1892), Chicago and the World's Fair (1892), Our Great West (1893), People We Pass (1895), Towards Pretoria (1900), An American with Lord Roberts (1901), War's Brighter Side (1901), and The Millionaire (1902).

Ralph Roister Doister (rois'ter dois'ter). Comedy by Nicholas Udall, probably written between 1534 and 1541.

to be played by Eton boys. Udall was master at Eton at that time. It was licensed and printed in 1566, and is considered to be the first English comedy. The Miles Gloriosus of Plautus appears to be its direct forerunner.

Ralston (rôl'stôn), James Layton, b. at Amherst, Nova Scotia, Sept. 27, 1881; d. at Montreal, May 21, 1948. Canadian politician and lawyer. He served as minister (1925-30, 1940-44) of national defense, and minister (1939-40) of finance.

Ralston, William Ralston Shedden, b. 1828; d. at London, Aug. 6, 1889. English Russian scholar.

Rama (râ'ma). Name of three heroes of Hindu mythology: Balarama (the brother of Krishna), Parashurama (sixth avatar of Vishnu), and Ramachandra (seventh avatar of Vishnu). It is especially applied to the last.

Rama I (râ'mâ). [Also: Chao P'ya Chakri, P'ra Putt'a Yot Chulalok; Pali, Brah Buddha Yot Fa Chulalok.] First king (1782-1809) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). He founded the capital city of Bangkok. In spite of wars with Burma, his reign was noted for administrative and legal reforms and for the subjection of the kingdoms of Luangprabang and Cambodia.

Rama II. [Also: P'ra Putt'a Loet La Nop'alai; Pali, Brah Buddha Loes La Narolya.] Second king (1809-24) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). He ascended the throne after extensive previous experience in government and war, instituted such social reforms as prohibition of the opium trade, conducted (1812) a campaign against Cambodia, resisted further aggression by Burma, and increased direct trade relations with Great Britain.

Rama III. [Also: P'ra Nang Klao; Pali, Brah Nan Klau.] Third king (1824-51) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). He signed treaties of friendship and commerce with the East India Company and with the U.S., and repelled an invasion from Kedah, the most powerful state in N Malaya.

Rama IV. [Called Maha Mongkut; Pali, Mahaman-kut.] b. 1804; d. 1868. Fourth king (1851-68) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam); eldest son of Rama II (whom he was ineligible to succeed because he was a Buddhist priest). When he succeeded his half brother, Rama III, he showed himself a man of unusual talents and statesmanship. He avoided having Siam drawn into the second Burmese War and reestablished trade relations with Great Britain and other foreign powers, but was forced to cede a protectorate over Cambodia to France (1867), except for the provinces of Battambang and Siemrap, sovereignty over which remained in dispute until after World War II.

Rama V. [Called Maha Chulalongkorn; Pali, Culan-karana.] b. 1853; d. 1910. Fifth king (1868-1910) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). Revered still as a great social reformer, he was responsible for the abolition of slavery and serfdom, introduction of modern communications and schools, and encouragement of large-scale economic development. He was (like Rama IV) forced to cede territory to France.

Rama VI. [Called Maha Vajiravudh.] b. 1881; d. 1925. Sixth king (1910-25) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). He was prepared by foreign education (in England) and a variety of administrative offices for a reign during which the kingdom was further modernized. He strengthened trade relations with Western nations and entered World War I on the side of the Allies in 1917.

Rama VII. [Called Pradjahipok.] b. in Siam, Nov. 8, 1893; d. in Surrey, England, May 31, 1941. Seventh king (1925-35) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam); brother and successor to Rama VI. He endeavored to match his economic reforms with constitutional ones; he abolished the extraterritorial rights of foreign powers. Out of sympathy with royalist attempts to reintroduce absolutist powers, he abdicated in 1935, retired to England, and was succeeded by his infant son Ananda Mahidol as Rama VIII. He visited the U.S. in 1931 to have cataracts removed from his eyes.

Rama VIII. [Called Ananda Mahidol.] b. 1925; killed June 9, 1946. Eighth king (1935-46) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam). He succeeded to the throne under a regency, and was educated in Switzerland, not returning to Siam until 1938.

Rama IX. [Called Bhumibol Adulyadej.] b. 1928—. Ninth king (1946 et seq.) of the Chakri dynasty of Thailand (Siam); brother and successor to Rama VIII.

Ramachandra (râ'ma.chân'dra). [Also: Rama; sometimes called Raghava.] Hero of the epic Ramayana and seventh incarnation of the god Vishnu. He is a very popular deity and his name, in the form "Ram Ram," is a common style of salutation among Hindus.

Ramadan (ram.a.dân') or Ramazan (ram.a.zân'). Ninth month of the Mohammedan year. Each day of the entire month is observed as a fast from dawn till sunset.

Ramadier (râ.mâ.dyâ), Paul, b. at La Rochelle, France, March 17, 1888—. French political leader and lawyer, first premier (1947) of France under the Fourth Republic. A close associate of Léon Blum in the leadership of the French Socialist Party, he was a deputy (1925-40, 1944 et seq.). He was undersecretary of state for public works (1936-38) and minister of labor (1938), and voted against the grant of dictatorial powers to Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain. After the liberation (1944) of France, he was minister of reconstruction (1944-45), minister of justice (1946-47), premier (Jan. 22-Nov. 21, 1947), minister of state (July-August, 1948), and minister of national defense (1948-49).

Ramaganga (râ.mâ.gung'ga). See Ramganga.

Ramah (râ'ma). In Old Testament geography, the name of several places in Palestine. The principal were the Ramah of Benjamin, situated a few miles N of Jerusalem, and the Ramah of Samuel, also called Ramathaim Zophim. The latter was situated N or NW of Jerusalem, possibly near Lydda; some identify it with the Ramah of Benjamin, and also with Arimatea.

Ramakien (râ.mâ.kyen'). Siamese (Thai) version of the Indian epic, the Ramayana.

Ram Alley, or Merry Tricks (ram). Comedy by Lodowick Barry, acted probably in 1609 and printed in 1611. Ram Alley led from Fleet Street to the Temple, and formerly secured immunity from arrest; hence it was the resort of sharpers and persons of ill fame of both sexes.

Raman (râ'man), Sir Chandrasekhara Venkata, b. in Trichinopoly, 1888—. Indian physicist. He won the 1930 Nobel prize in physics for his discovery (1928) of the Raman effect, a change in the frequency of a light ray passed through a given substance (transparent) by means of which the nature of the substance may be determined. Founder (1913) of the Raman Research Institute in Bangalore, he had long been a teacher and lecturer at Indian universities. Author of Molecular Diffraction of Light and The Theory of Musical Instruments.

Ramanieh (râ.mâ.nê'e). See Rahmaniye.

Ramanuja (râ.mâ'nô.ja), b. near Madras, India, c1017 A.D.; d. c1137. Indian religious leader, founder of the Vaishnava sect. He is buried in the great temple of Shriranganath. His distinctive tenet was his assertion of a triad of principles: (1) the supreme spirit; (2) the separate spirits of men; and (3) nonspirit. All three are eternal and inseparable, but the spirits of men and the visible world or nonspirit are dependent on the first.

Ramanujan (râ.mâ'nô.jan), Srinivasa, b. at Erode, near Madras, India, Dec. 22, 1887; d. at Chetput, near Madras, April 26, 1920. Indian mathematician who published some 20 papers on continued fractions, the theory of partitions, and applications of elliptic functions to the theory of numbers. He studied at Madras and went to England in 1914. He became a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and was the first Hindu to be elected to the Royal Society. His Collected Papers were published in 1927.

Rama's Bridge (râ'maz). See Adam's Bridge.

Rama Tibodi (râ'mâ tē'bō.dē). [Also: P'ya (or Suwangp'umi) of U'tong.] First king of Ayutia, originally ruler of Utong, a Thai principality in Thailand (Siam). After conquering the kingdom of Sukhotai and the Khmer possessions of Lopburi and Chantaburi, he made himself king of Ayutia c1350 and in 1357 founded the new capital city of the same name.

Ramayana (râ.mâ.ya.na). One of the two great epics of India, the other being the Mahabharata. It is ascribed to a poet Valmiki of the 2nd century a.c., and consists at present of ab. 24,000 couplets, divided into seven books. It is the production of one man, though many parts are fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; en, then; d, dor; g, s or sh; t, t or ch; later additions, such as those in which Ramachandra is represented as an incarnation of Vishnu, all the episodes in the first book, and the whole of the seventh. It was at first handed down orally, and variously modified in transmission, as afterward when reduced to writing; hence the number of distinct recensions, agreeing for the most part as to contents, but following a different arrangement. One belongs to Benares and the NW; another to Calcutta and Bengal proper; a third to Bombay and W India; while Weber found among the manuscripts of the Berlin Library what seemed to be a fourth. In 1806 and 1810 the text and translation of two books in the Bengal recension were published at Serampore; in 1829-38 A. W. von Schlegel at Bonn published two of the northern, with Latin translation; in 1843-70 the Italian Gorrasio published at Paris the complete text of the Bengali recension, with Italian translation. Two complete editions of the text appeared in 1859 in India, one at Bombay, the other at Calcutta. There is an English translation by Griffiths (Benares, 1870-74), following the Bombay edition.

RaMbaM (rām.bām'). See Maimonides.

Rambaud (rām.bō), Alfred Nicolas. b. at Besançon, France, July 2, 1842; d. at Paris, Nov. 10, 1905. French historian and author. He was minister of public instruction in the Ferry cabinet (1879-80) and in the Méline cabinet (1896-98). Among his works are L'Empire grec au X^e siècle, Constantin Porphyrogénète (1870), La Domination française en Allemagne; les Français sur le Rhin, 1792-1804 (1873), Histoire de la Russie depuis les origines jusqu'à l'année 1877 (1878), Histoire de la révolution française 1789-1799 (1883), Histoire de la civilisation française (1885-87), La France coloniale (1886), Histoire de la civilisation contemporaine en France (1888), L'Année de César (1893), Russes et Prussiens (1895), and Jules Ferry 1832-1893 (1903). With Ernest Lavisse he edited the Histoire générale du IV. siècle jusqu'à nos jours (1893-1901).

Rambervillers (rām.ber.vē.lā). Town in E France, in the department of Vosges, ab. 33 mi. SE of Nancy. It has paper manufactures, 6,097 (1946).

Rambler, The. Periodical, after the style of The Spectator, published at London (1750-52) by Samuel Johnson.

Rambouillet (rām.bō.yē). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, ab. 25 mi. SW of Paris. It has a former royal castle, with beautiful tapestries, and a park which is considered one of the foremost examples of the art of landscaping in France. The forest of Rambouillet is adjacent to the town, 7,446 (1946).

Rambouillet, Marquise de. See Vivonne, Catherine de.

Rambouillet, Hôtel de. See Hôtel de Rambouillet.

Rambouillet Decree. Decree issued by Napoleon I on March 23, 1810, providing for the sale of all American vessels which had fallen into French hands since 1808 (when Napoleon had issued another decree calling for seizure of all American vessels in French waters).

Rameau (rām.ō), Jean. [Pseudonym of Laurent Laibault.] b. at Caas, France, Feb. 19, 1859; d. at Dax, Landes, France, Feb. 24, 1942. French poet and novelist. Author of La Route bleue (1912), Le Fosseur d'or (1914), L'Arrivée aux étoiles (1922), and others. His work, once popular, is no longer widely read. Such critics as Jacques Rivière have been interested in his antimaterialistic tendencies.

Rameau, Jean Philippe. b. at Dijon, France, Oct. 23, 1683; d. at Paris, Sept. 12, 1764. French composer and musical theorist. He published Traité de l'harmonie (1722) and Nouveau système de musique théorique (1726), and made important contributions to the development of the orchestra. His operas and ballets include Hippolyte et Aricie (1733), Les Indes galantes (1735), Castor et Pollux (1737), Les Fêtes d'Hébé (1739), Dardanus (1739), Zais (1748), and Les Paladins (1760).

Ramée (rām.ā), Jacques La. Possible original name of Laramie, Jacques.

Ramée, Marie Louise de la. [Pseudonym, Ouida.] b. at Bury Saint Edmunds, England, 1840; d. at Viareggio, Italy, Jan. 25, 1908. English novelist. Her works include Strathmore (1865), Chandos (1866), Idalia (1867), Under Two Flags (1867), Tricotrin (1868), A Dog of Flanders (1872), Pascarel (1873), Ariadne (1880), Moths

(1880), Bimbi (1882), In Maremma (1882), Princess Naprazine (1884), A Rainy June (1885), Othmar (1885), Don Gesualdo (1886), A House Party (1887), Guillero (1889), Ruffino (1890), Syrin (1890), The Tower of Taddeo (1890), Santa Barbara (1891), The New Priesthood (1893), The Silver Christ (1894), Two Offenders (1894), Le Selve (1896), The Massarones (1897), Tozin, an Altruist (1897), La Strega (1899), The Waters of Edera (1900), Critical Studies (1900), and Street Dust (1901).

Ramée, Pierre de la. French name of Ramus, Petrus, Ramek (rām.ek), Rudolf. b. at Teschen (Těšín), then in Austria, April 12, 1881—Austrian politician. He became (1919) a member of parliament, served as chancellor (1924-26), and was vice-president (1930-33) of the Austrian parliament.

Ramenghi (rām.ēng'gē), Bartolomeo. Original name of the painter Bagnacavallo.

Rameses (rām.'ē.sēz, rām.'ē.sēz). [Also, Ramses.] In Old Testament geography, a city in Lower Egypt. It was built by the Israelites. Its exact site is disputed.

Rameses (rām.'ē.sēz, rām.'ē.sēz) or Ramses (rām.'ē.sēz). See Rameses I, II, III.

Ramesseum (rām.ē.sē'um). [Commonly, but erroneously, called the Memnonium.] Monument built by Ramses II at Thebes in Egypt. The entrance, between two great pyramidal towers, opens on a court ab. 200 ft. square, which had on each side a double range of columns. The second court, a little smaller, has Osiride pillars in front and rear, and double ranges of columns on the sides. From the rear portico is entered the splendid hypostyle hall, which has eight ranges of six columns, forming nine aisles. The columns of the central aisle, 32½ ft. high and over 21 in circumference, are the largest, and still support part of the lintels of the roof. The capitals are of the spreading bell-form. Beyond the hypostyle hall were nine chambers in three rows, the first two of the central row columned. Among the sculptures the colossal seated figure of Ramses in the outer court, now shattered, should be mentioned as by far the largest statue in Egypt: its weight is computed at 1,000 tons. The reliefs, among which are illustrations of the Asiatic campaigns of Ramses II, are of the highest interest.

Rameswaram (rām.ēs.wā.rām) or Rameshwaram (rām.ēs.wā.rām). [Also, Ramisseram.] Island between India and Ceylon, forming the W end of Adam's Bridge. It is the site of a Dravidian temple of great size (the plan is a rectangle 672 by 868 ft.), said to have been built in the 17th century.

Ramganga (rām.gāng'ga). [Also: Ramaṅganga, Ram-gunga.] River in N Union of India, in Uttar Pradesh. It rises in the Himalayas, flows SE, and joins the Ganges ab. 53 mi. NW of Cawnpore. Length, over 300 mi.

Ramilles (rām'il.ēz; French, rām.ē.yē). Village in C Belgium, in the province of Brabant, ab. 30 mi. SE of Brussels. Here on May 23, 1706, the Allies under the Duke of Marlborough defeated the French and Bavarians under the Duc de Villeroy. The victory led to the capture of nearly all the fortresses held by the French in the Low Countries.

Raminagrobis (rām.mi.nā.gro.bēs). In François Rabelais's Gargantua and Pantagruel, an aged poet. The character was intended to represent Guillaume Crétin, a poet celebrated at that time, but now almost utterly forgotten. Jean de La Fontaine gave the name to a great cat in his Fables.

Ramírez (rām.ē.rē.th), Juan. b. c1765; d. after 1823. Spanish general in Peru. He held a separate command against the rebellion of Pumacocha in Peru, finally defeating him (March 11, 1815). Ramírez treated the prisoners with great cruelty, and a large number were put to death. In 1816 he was made president of Quito, where, on May 24, 1822, he was defeated by the patriots under Antonio José de Sucre at the battle of Pichincha. Ramírez then capitulated and left Quito, which was never again occupied by the Spaniards.

Ramírez (rām.ē.rēs), Norberto. b. c1800; d. 1856. Central American politician, president of El Salvador (1840-41), and of Nicaragua (April 1, 1849-March 14, 1851).

Ramírez, Pedro Pablo. b. in Entre Ríos, Argentina, Jan. 30, 1884—Argentine politician and soldier, elevated to the presidency in June, 1943, after the bloodless coup which deposed President Ramón S. Castillo. Known for his links with Argentine fascist groups, Ramírez was coleader with General Arturo Rawson of the "GOU" (the officers' clique which deposed Castillo). Despite tax abatements calculated to win popular support, his administration was even more reactionary and nationalistic than that of the ultra-conservative Castillo. Ramírez was himself deposed (Feb. 24, 1944) in favor of Vice-President Edelmiro Farrell by a clique within the "GOU".

Ramírez (rā.mě'reth), Wenceslao. See Villa-Urrutia, Wenceslao Ramírez, Marqués de.

Ramírez Davalos (rā.mě'res dā'nā.los), Gil. See Davalos, Gil Ramírez.

Ramisseram (rā.mis'c.rām). See Rameswaram.

Ramler (rām'lér), Karl Wilhelm. b. at Kolberg, Germany, Feb. 15, 1725; d. at Berlin, April 11, 1796. German poet, admired by Lessing and dubbed "the German Horace" by his contemporaries. His odes to Frederick the Great were not, however, appreciated by their subject. His Der Tod Jesu (1755) is a cantata with music by Karl Heinrich Graun.

Ramman (rām'an). [Also: Adad, Hadad.] Assyro-Babylonian god of thunder and storms. He was also a war god, sometimes depicted with a hammer. In the Old Testament (2 Kings, v. 18) he is called Rimmon.

Ramman-Nirari (rām'an.ni.rā'ri). [Also: Adad-Nirari, Hadad-Nirari.] Name of several kings of Assyria. The first reigned c1300 B.C.; the second, c911-890 B.C.; and the third, c811-782 B.C. The last conquered many of the neighboring countries, and restored Assyrian influence in Babylonia.

Rammelsberg (rām'els.berk). Mountain in the Harz, Germany, directly S of Goslar. It has long been noted for its mines of copper, lead, zinc, and silver. Elevation, ab. 2,087 ft.

Rammohun Roy (rām.mō'hun roi'). [Also, Ram Mohan Roy.] b. in the district of Murshidabad, India, c1774; d. at Bristol, England, Sept. 27, 1833. First great modern theistic reformer of India. His father was a Brahman, and his grandfather had been an official of the Mogul emperors. Disgusted with the extravagant Hindu mythology, at 16 he composed a tract against idolatry. Persecuted, he fled to Benares and then to Tibet that he might converse with Buddhist priests, being determined to study each religion at its fountainhead. He learned Pali to read the Tripitaka, as later Arabic, Hebrew, and Greek to read the sacred books in those languages. At 20 he returned and resumed his Sanskrit studies, at the same time learning English. After his father's death in 1803 his antagonism to idolatry became more marked, and he set on foot the movement which resulted in 1830 in formal abolishment of the self-immolation of widows (suttee or sati). He formed at Calcutta in 1816 the Atmiya Sabha, or Spiritual Society, which became in 1830 the Brahma Sabha, "the Assembly or Society of God," the precursor of the later Adi-Brahma-Samaj and Brahma Samaj or Brahma Somaj. In April, 1831, he visited England, where he stayed until his death.

Ramnaagar (rām'nā.gar). [Also, Ramnuggur (rām-nug'ur).] Town in the Punjab, Pakistan, situated near the Chenab River ab. 60 mi. N of Lahore. It was the scene of a battle between the British under Sir Hugh Gough and the Sikhs in 1848.

Rammes (ram'něz) or Rammenses (ram.nen'séz). One of the three tribes into which the ancient Roman people were said to have been divided. Traditionally, this group represented the Latin element in the composition of the nation.

Rămnicul-Sărat (rim'nē.kol.su.răt'). Town in S Rumania, in Muntenia, ab. 50 mi. W of Galați; trade center. 19,267 (1948).

Rămnicul-Vâlcea (-vil'chā). Town in S Rumania, in Oltenia, ab. 100 mi. NW of Bucharest; salt mines and hot springs. 17,238 (1948).

Ramon (rā.môn), Gaston. b. in Yonne, France, in September, 1886—. French bacteriologist. He introduced (1924) anatoxin (formol toxoid) and tetanus toxoid, a serum providing immunity from tetanus (1933), and discovered the lasting immunity conferred by toxin-antitoxin mixtures and by toxoids in diphtheria and also a vaccine which could be successfully given in or through the nose.

Ramona (rā.mō'na). Unincorporated community in S Texas, in Hidalgo County. 2,768 (1950).

Ramona. Novel by Helen Hunt Jackson, published in 1884.

Ramond de Carbonnières (rām.ônd də kār.bō.nyér), Louis François Elizabeth, Baron. b. at Strasbourg, France, 1755; d. 1827. French scholar, statesman, and geologist, author of Travels in the Pyrenées. He was elected to the Legislative Assembly in 1791. He is of interest to students of Wordsworth because of his influence on the early style and thinking of that poet, especially as shown in the Descriptive Sketches.

Ramón y Cajal (rām.ôn' ē kā.hāl'), Santiago. b. at Petilla, Navarra, May 1, 1852; d. at Madrid, Oct. 17, 1934. Spanish physician, professor of histology (1892 et seq.) at the University of Madrid. He studied at the University of Saragossa, and became professor of histology at Barcelona in 1886. In 1906 with Camillo Golgi he received the Nobel prize for medicine. He did important work on the structure and nature of the nervous system, describing the nerve endings and their interconnection in the brain and spinal cord, and inventing a method of staining nerve tissue.

Ramos (ru'môsh), Artur. [Full name, Artur Ramos de Araújo Pereira.] b. at Pilar, Brazil, July 7, 1903; d. at Paris, Oct. 31, 1949. Brazilian anthropologist and folklorist, a specialist in the study of Negro cultures. His best-known book, O Negro brasileiro (1934), was translated into English (1935). His other works include O Folclore negro no Brasil (1935), Introdução à psicologia social (1936), As Culturas negras no novo mundo (1937), and Introdução à antropologia brasileira (1943).

Ramos, Graciliano. b. at Quebrângulos, Alagoas, Brazil, Oct. 27, 1892—. Brazilian novelist whose works deal with social problems of the northeastern section of his country. Among his novels are Cacés (1933), São Bernardo (1934), Angústia (1935), and Vidas secas (1937). Angústia was translated into English in 1946. Infância, his autobiography, appeared in 1945. Insônia, a book of short stories, was published in 1947.

Ramos (ru'môsh), João de Deus. See Deus, João de. Ramoth Gilead (rā'moth gil'ē.ad) and Ramoth Mizpah (miz'pā). Places (or a place) in Biblical geography, possibly identical with Mizpah; also located E of the Jordan.

Rampolla (rām.pō'lā), Mariano. [Title, Marchese del Tindaro.] b. at Polizzi, Sicily, Aug. 17, 1843; d. at Rome, Dec. 16, 1913. Italian prelate. He entered the service of the Pope in 1870 and was appointed counselor of the papal embassy at Madrid in 1875, secretary of the propaganda (Oriental rite) in 1877, secretary of ecclesiastical affairs in 1880, nuncio at Madrid in 1882, and secretary of state in 1887. He retired in 1903.

Rampur (rām'pör). Former native state now incorporated into Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, situated ab. 110 mi. E of Delhi; rice, wheat, sugar, and barley. Area, 894 sq. mi.; pop. 477,042 (1941).

Rampur. City in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, capital of the former state of Rampur, ab. 110 mi. E of Delhi; trade center of a rich agricultural region. 89,322 (1941).

Rampur Beaulac (bā.ou'lā.ā) or Rampur Boalia (bō.ā'lā.ā). Former names of Rajshahi, town.

Ramsay (ram'zi), Sir Alexander Robert Maule. b. May 29, 1881—. British naval officer. He married (1919) Princess Patricia, daughter of Queen Victoria's third son, the Duke of Connaught. He was fifth sea lord and head (1938-39) of the naval air service.

Ramsay, Allan. b. at Lendhills, Lanarkshire, Scotland, Oct. 15, 1686; d. at Edinburgh, Jan. 7, 1758. Scottish poet. Of very humble birth, he was apprenticed at 15 to a wig maker at Edinburgh. The Gentle Shepherd, a pastoral comedy, his best-known work, was suggested by the critique of Alexander Pope's Windsor Forest in the Guardian, April 7, 1713. It substituted for the pseudo-pastoral poetry of the time the real life of the Scottish shepherds. It has been called "the first genuine pastoral after Theocritus." He set up a bookshop in High Street and published his collections of poems, The Tea-Table Miscellany (English and Scottish songs, 1724-27); the music for these was published in 1763-75) and The Ever Green, the precursor of Percy's Reliques, containing Scottish songs written before 1600 (1724-27); Thirty Fables, partly original (1730), and Scots Proverbs (1737).

Ramsay, Allan. b. at Edinburgh, 1713; d. at Dover, England, Aug. 10, 1784. Scottish portrait painter; son of Allan Ramsay (1686-1758).

Ramsay, Sir Andrew Crombie. b. at Glasgow, Jan. 31, 1814; d. Dec. 9, 1891. Scottish geologist. He was director general (1871-81) of the geological survey of the United Kingdom. His works include Physical Geology and Geography of Great Britain and others.

Ramsay, Andrew Michael. [Called Chevalier de Ramsay.] b. at Ayr, Scotland, July 9, 1686; d. at St. Germain-en-Laye, France, May 6, 1743. Scottish author. He wrote in French; his chief work is Les Voyages de Cyrus (1727).

Ramsay, David. b. in Lancaster County, Pa., April 2, 1749; d. at Charleston, S.C., May 8, 1815. American physician, historian, and patriot, a delegate (1782-86) to the Continental Congress. He published a History of the American Revolution (1789), Life of Washington (1807), History of South Carolina (1809), History of the United States (1816), forming part of Universal History Americanized (12 vols., 1819), and others.

Ramsay, Fox Maule. [Original name, Fox Maule; titles: 2nd Baron Panmure, 11th Earl of Dalhousie.] b. at Brechin Castle, Forfarshire (now Angus), Scotland, April 22, 1801; d. July 6, 1874. British politician. He entered Parliament in 1835, and was secretary at war under Lord John Russell (1846-52) and under Palmerston (1855-58). He succeeded his father in the barony in 1852, and his cousin in the earldom in 1860, assuming the family surname of Ramsay in the following year.

Ramsay, Henrik. [Full name, Carl Henrik Wolter Ramsay.] b. at Helsinki, Finland, March 31, 1886; d. in Sweden, July 25, 1951. Finnish political leader, foreign minister (1943-44) during part of World War II. He was previously (1941-43) minister of supply in the wartime government. He was sentenced (1946) to two and a half years' imprisonment for responsibility in Finland's alliance with Germany during World War II.

Ramsay, Sir William. b. at Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 2, 1852; d. at High Wycombe, Bucks, England, July 23, 1916. British chemist, professor of chemistry in University College, London (1887-1913). He was especially noted for the discovery (with Lord Rayleigh) of argon, and of helium, neon, krypton, and xenon (the so-called noble gases). He determined the emanation of helium during the disintegration of radium. He was awarded the 1904 Nobel prize in chemistry. Among his publications are text books of chemistry and numerous scientific papers. He wrote also Essays Biographical and Chemical (1909).

Ramsay, Sir William Mitchell. b. at Glasgow, March 15, 1851; d. at Bournemouth, England, April 20, 1939. Scottish historian and archaeologist. Author of The Historical Geography of Asia Minor (1890), The Church in the Roman Empire (1893), Was Christ Born at Bethlehem? (1898), The Education of Christ (1902), Pauline and Other Studies in Early Christian History (1906), The Bearing of Recent Research on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament (1914), Asianic Elements in Greek Civilization (1927), and The Social Basis of the Permanence of the Roman Empire, traced from the inscriptions of Strutt and other travellers (part I, 1938).

Ramsbottom (ramz'bot'om). Urban district and manufacturing town in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 4 mi. N of Bury, ab. 197 mi. NW of London by rail. It has manufactures of cotton textiles, paper, woolen textiles, felts, and others. 14,587 (1951).

Ramsden (ramz'den), Jesse. b. at Salterhebble, near Halifax, England, 1735; d. at Brighton, England, Nov. 5, 1800. English manufacturer of mathematical instruments. Telescopes and divided circles were among his specialties.

Rameses (ram'sēz). See also Rameses.

Rameses I. [Also: Rameses, Rameses.] Egyptian king (1315-14 B.C.) of the XIXth dynasty; son of Harnhab and father of Seti I. A memorial stone of the second year of his reign was found at the second cataract at Wadi Halfa. The hypostyle hall at Karnak was begun during his reign.

Rameses II. [Also: Rameses, Rameses.] Egyptian king (1292-1225 B.C.), the third of the XIXth dynasty; son of Seti I. He was not the legitimate heir to the throne but usurped it in place of an older brother. The beginning of his long reign was occupied with a war against the Hittites, during which the great battle of Kadesh was fought, and in which Rameses saved his life only by personal bravery, later commemorated in Egyptian epic. The war ended (1272) with a treaty of peace and Rameses's marriage to a Hittite princess. He spent the remainder of his reign in a huge building program: the temple of Seti at Abydos, the temples at Karnak and Luxor, the Ramesseum at Thebes, the rock temple at Abu Simbel, and others were built or improved during his reign. He is sometimes said to be the Pharaoh of the Hebrew oppression. His mummy was found (1881) at Deir-el-Bahri and is now in the Cairo museum.

Rameses III. [Also: Rameses, Rameses.] Egyptian king (1198-1167 B.C., second king of the XXth dynasty). He conducted successful campaigns in Libya and Syria and supported bountifully the temples and the priesthood. His queen, Tyi, was involved in an unsuccessful plot to dethrone him in the late years of his reign.

Ramsey (ram'zi). Urban district and market town in C England, in Huntingdonshire, ab. 10 mi. NE of Huntingdon, ab. 75 mi. N of London by rail. Ramsey Mere, ab. 3 mi. NE (part of the Fen district) is now drained and produces heavy crops of wheat. 5,772 (1951).

Ramsey. Seaport and seaside resort on the NE coast of the Isle of Man, at the mouth of the river Sulby, ab. 13 mi. NE of Douglas. It is the chief seaport of the N part of the island. 4,607 (1951).

Ramsey. Borough in NE New Jersey, in Bergen County; residential suburb of New York, and shipping center for dairy products. 4,670 (1950).

Ramsey, Alexander. b. Sept. 8, 1815; d. April 22, 1903. American politician, U.S. secretary of war (1879-81) under Hayes. He was Whig member of Congress from Pennsylvania (1843-47), governor of Minnesota Territory (1849-53), governor of the state of Minnesota (1859-63), and Republican U.S. senator from Minnesota (1863-75).

Ramsey, DeWitt Clinton. b. at Whipple Barracks, Ariz., Oct. 2, 1888-; American naval officer.

Ramsey Mere (mir). See under Ramsey, England.

Ramsgate (ramz'gāt). Municipal borough, seaside resort, and small seaport in the Isle of Thanet, SE England, in Kent, situated on the North Sea ab. 78 mi. SE of London by rail. Ramsgate is a resort particularly for sea fishing and yachting. 35,748 (1951).

Ramus (rām'us), Joseph Marius. b. at Aix, France, June 19, 1805; d. at Nogent-sur-Seine, France, June 3, 1888. French sculptor. He went to Paris in 1822 and studied with Cortot. Among his works are Daphnis et Chloé, L'Innocence, Céphale et Procris, Anne d'Autriche (in the gardens of the Luxembourg), a statue of Puget for Marseilles, Saint Michel and Saint Gabriel for the Church of Saint Eustache, and others.

Ramus (rām'us; French, rām'ū), Petrus. [French, Pierre de la Ramée.] b. at Cuth, in Vermandois, France, 1515; killed in the massacre of St. Bartholomew, Aug. 24, 1572. French logician, noted for writings against Aristotelianism.

Ramusio (rām'mōzyō), Giambattista. b. at Treviso, Italy, June 20, 1485; d. at Padua, Italy, July 10, 1557. Venetian statesman and author, secretary of the senate and later of the Council of Ten. He traveled in various European countries. By correspondence he was acquainted with Gonzalo Fernández de Oviedo, Sebastian Cabot, and other distinguished historians and travelers, and was indefatigable in collecting accounts of the explorations made in his time. His Delle navigationi e viaggi . . . (3 vols., 1550-59-63, and subsequent editions) is one of the most important of the early collections of travels. Ramusio's name first appeared in the second volume, which was delayed until 1559, after his death.

Ramuz (rām'üz), Charles Ferdinand. b. at Lausanne, Switzerland, 1878; d. there, 1947. Swiss novelist and essayist writing in French. He produced a series of regional novels dealing with the farmers and middle-class people of his immediate surroundings. Written in a style stripped of all irrelevant detail, his best works are generally considered to be La Guérison des maladies (1917), Présence de la mort (1922; Eng. trans., The End of All Men, 1944), La Beauté sur la terre (1927; Eng. trans., Beauty on Earth, 1929) and Derborence (1934; Eng. trans., When the Mountain Fell, 1947).

Ran (rán). [Old Norse, Rán.] In Old Norse mythology, the goddess of the stormy sea; she caught ships in her hands and drowning men in her net.

Ranade (rā'nā.dā). Mahadeo Govind. b. Jan. 16, 1842; d. Jan. 16, 1901. Indian lawyer and reformer. He took part in establishing the Parthana Samaj, a Hindu reform sect, and was a founder (1887) of the Indian Social Conference. He advocated the abolition of child marriage and urged the right of widows to remarry. For many years a judge of the high court of Bombay, he was also interested in the economic problems of India and advocated a protectionist policy for Indian industry.

Rana Fjord (rā'nā). [Also: Ranen Fjord, Ran Fjord (rán).] Fjord indenting the W coast of Norway, in ab. lat. 66°20' N.

Ranavalona (rā.nā.vā.lō). [Original name, Razafindrahety; also: Ranavalona (rā.nā.vā.lō'nā), Ranavalomanjaka (mān'jākā).] b. 1864; d. at Algiers, May 23, 1917. Last queen of Madagascar (1883-97), who was deposed and exiled (1897) by Joseph Simon Gallieni. She was banished first to Réunion and then (1899) to Algiers.

Ranc (rán), Arthur. b. at Poitiers, France, Dec. 20, 1831; d. at Paris, Aug. 10, 1908. French political leader, organizer of the French espionage service during the siege of Paris (1870) in the Franco-Prussian War. During the Paris Commune (1871), he resigned as mayor of the 9th arrondissement because he held a neutral position, was tried and sentenced to death in absentia (1873) as a member of the Commune, and remained (1873-79) in Belgium. He was a strong advocate of the innocence of Alfred Dreyfus, acted as second for Colonel Picquart in his duel with Captain Henry, and was a deputy (1881-85) and senator (1891-1900, 1903 et seq.). He succeeded Georges Clemenceau as editor of Aurore.

Rancagua (rāng.kā'gwā). Capital of O'Higgins province, in C. Chile. Here the patriots under Bernardo O'Higgins were defeated by the Spaniards under Osorio in a two-day battle in the streets, Oct. 1-2, 1814. O'Higgins escaped with only a small part of his force. José Miguel de Carrera was held responsible for this defeat, as he could have reinforced O'Higgins. The disaster made the Spaniards masters of Chile until 1817. Pop. 31,018 (1940).

Rancé (rān.sā), Armand Jean le Bouthillier de. b. at Paris, Jan. 9, 1626; d. at Soligny-la-Trappe, Orne, France, Oct. 12, 1700. French monastic reformer. Abbot of La Trappe, he instituted there the austerity that made the monastery famous and is thus the founder of the Trappists.

Rancho Davis (ran'chō dā'vis). Former name of Rio Grande City, Tex.

Rand (rand), Ayn. b. at Petrograd (now Leningrad), Russia—. American novelist and playwright. She was the author of the play The Night of January 16th, produced at New York in 1935. Among her novels are We, the Living (1936) and The Fountainhead (1943).

Rand, Edward Kennard. b. at Boston, Dec. 20, 1871; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28, 1945. American educator, professor of Latin (1909-42) and curator of manuscripts at Harvard.

Rand, the. See Witwatersrand.

Randall (ran'dal), Alexander Williams. b. in Montgomery County, N.Y., Oct. 31, 1819; d. at Elmira, N.Y., July 26, 1872. American politician, U.S. postmaster general (1866-69) under Johnson. He was governor of Wisconsin (1857-61).

Randall, Harrison McAllister. b. at Burr Oak, Mich., Dec. 17, 1870—. American physicist. He has conducted investigations in high temperatures and infrared rays.

Randall, James Garfield. b. at Indianapolis, Ind., June 24, 1881; d. at Champaign, Ill., Feb. 20, 1953. American historian and teacher. Among his works are Constitutional Problems Under Lincoln (1926), The Civil War and Reconstruction (1937), Lincoln the President: Springfield to Gettysburg (2 vols., 1945), Lincoln and the South (1946), Lincoln the Liberal Statesman (1947), and Lincoln the President: Midstream (1952).

Randall, James Ryder. b. at Baltimore, Jan. 1, 1839; d. at Augusta, Ga., Jan. 14, 1908. American song writer and journalist. A Confederate sympathizer, he was the author of Maryland, My Maryland (1861).

Randall, John Herman, Jr. b. at Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 14, 1899—. American professor of philosophy. He was a faculty member (1925 et seq.) and professor (1935 et seq.) at Columbia. Author of The Problem of Group Responsibility (1922), The Making of the Modern Mind (1926), Our Changing Civilization (1929), and other works; coauthor of Theory and Practice in Historical Study (1946), The Philosophy of Ernest Cassirer (1947), and others.

Randall, Robert Richard. b. probably in New Jersey, c1750; d. at New York, in June, 1801. American privateer and businessman. A privateer during the Revolutionary War, he became a merchant at New York after the war and subsequently acquired land holdings in various parts of New York City. In his will he bequeathed these lands and other property to endow the home and hospital for aged seamen now called Sailors' Snug Harbor. A statue of Randall by Augustus Saint-Gaudens, erected in 1884, stands outside the buildings of this establishment on Staten Island.

Randall, Samuel Jackson. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1828; d. at Washington, D.C., April 13, 1890. American statesman. He was a member of Congress from Pennsylvania from 1863 until his death, and was speaker of the House (1876-81). He was noted as the leader of the protectionist Democrats.

Randall's Island. Island in the East River, New York City, included in the borough of Manhattan. The site of parks, playgrounds, and the Triborough Stadium (municipal), which seats ab. 30,000, it is also the point at which the three branches of the Triborough Bridge meet. Area, 194 acres.

Randazzo (rāndāt'sō). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Catania, ab. 23 mi. NW of Catania: agricultural commune, with small industries. The Church of Santa Maria was constructed in the 13th century; the Church of San Martino has a Gothic bell tower of the 13th century, but the interior dates from the 16th century. In World War II, the town was a key strategic point in the German retreat from Sicily, and was captured by an American force on Aug. 13, 1943, only after bitter fighting. The town sustained heavy damage in the war; Santa Maria and San Martino were both hit, but the campanile of the latter escaped damage. Pop. of commune, 13,684 (1936); of town, 12,558 (1936).

Randegger (rān'deg'ër; Italian, rān'dā.ger). Alberto. b. at Trieste, April 13, 1832; d. Dec. 18, 1911. Italian composer, conductor, and singingmaster. He went to England in 1854, and in 1868 was made professor of singing at the Royal Academy of Music. In addition to compositions, including a comic opera, a cantata, and other vocal music, he wrote a Primer of Singing.

Randers (rān'ers). Amt (county) of Denmark, in E Jutland, bounded by Aarhus, Viborg, and Aalborg, and the Kattegat. Capital, Randers; area, 952 sq. mi.; pop. 163,168 (1945).

Randers. Town in Denmark, in E Jutland, capital of the amt (county) of Randers. It exports meats and dairy products, has fisheries, and important manufactures of gloves, ropes and cords, and railroad equipment. 40,098 (1950).

Randolph (ran'dolf). Town in SE Massachusetts, in Norfolk County: suburb of Boston. 9,982 (1950).

Randolph. Town in C Vermont, in Orange County: manufactures of agricultural implements, rubber stamps, furniture, sheet gelatine, and dairy products. 3,499 (1950).

Randolph, Edmund. [Original name, Edmund Jenings Randolph.] b. at "Tazewell Hall," near Williamsburg, Va., Aug. 10, 1753; d. at "Carter Hall," Clarke County, Va., Sept. 12, 1813. American politician. U.S. attorney general (1789-94) and U.S. secretary of state (1794-95) under Washington. He attended the College of William and Mary, studied law under his father, and was appointed (1775) aide-de-camp to George Washington. His military service was brief, and he returned to Virginia to sit in the state constitutional convention, of which he was the youngest member. He became attorney general of Virginia and also served as mayor of Williamsburg. He was elected (1779) to the Continental Congress, was elected (1786) governor of Virginia, and was a delegate fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pîn, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʀn, then; ð, d o r j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; to the Annapolis Convention (1786) and to the Federal Convention (1787), where he proposed the Virginia plan. Although he refused to sign the Constitution, he advocated its ratification at the Virginia convention in 1788. He became the first U.S. attorney general under the Constitution and served (January, 1794–August, 1795) as U.S. secretary of state. He resigned from the latter position because of political pressure. He resumed his law practice at Richmond, Va., and later achieved prominence as senior counsel for Aaron Burr during the latter's trial for treason.

Randolph, Edward. b. at Canterbury, England, c. July 9, 1632; d. April, 1703. British agent in America. Arriving (1676) at Boston after having been instructed to report on the affairs of the Massachusetts colony, he returned to England in the same year and submitted an account of his investigations which placed the colonists in a highly unfavorable light. He was appointed (1678) collector of customs for New England, and came (1679) to New Hampshire, where he set up the government in the areas withdrawn from Massachusetts as a result of his reports, and then proceeded to Boston, where he subsequently fell into a period of bad feeling and recrimination with the colonists; in 1684 he succeeded in having the Massachusetts charter declared forfeit. He was named (1685) secretary and register for the Dominion of New England and in the same year became a counselor in the new royal government. With the revolt against Sir Edmund Andros in 1689, he was taken prisoner and returned to England, but in 1691 was made surveyor general of customs for North America. He is remembered as an ardent if blundering exponent of strict enforcement of English trade laws in the colonies.

Randolph, George Wythe. b. at "Monticello," Va., March 10, 1818; d. at "Edgehill," Va., April 3, 1867. American lawyer and Confederate official; son of Thomas Mann Randolph. A prominent member of the bar at Richmond, Va., he was among the peace commissioners which Virginia sent (1861) to the federal government, and later advocated secession at the state convention. After serving in the Confederate army and attaining the rank of brigadier general, he was named (1862) secretary of war in the Confederate government, holding the post until his resignation in November, 1862.

Randolph, Sir John. b. in Henrico County, Va., c.1693; d. March 2, 1737. American colonial official; son of William Randolph. He served (1718–34) as clerk of the House of Burgesses, was king's attorney of Virginia in 1727, and in 1728 went to England, where he was successful in securing the repeal of the Parliamentary act prohibiting the shipping of stripped tobacco from Virginia. Knighted (probably in 1732), he was the only Virginian to gain such rank during the colonial era. He was chosen (1734) to the Virginia House of Burgesses, of which he served as speaker.

Randolph, John. b. at "Tazewell Hall," Williamsburg, Va., 1727 or 1728; d. at Brompton, England, Jan. 31, 1784. American Loyalist; son of Sir John Randolph (c.1693–1737). Serving (1752–56) as clerk of the Virginia House of Burgesses, he was named attorney general for the Crown and was elected (1774, 1775) Burgess for the College of William and Mary. A Loyalist, he departed (1775) for England, where he lived on a Crown pension and drafted (1779) a scheme for conciliation with the colonies.

Randolph, John. [Called "John Randolph of Roanoke."] b. at "Cawsons," Prince George County, Va., June 2, 1773; d. at Philadelphia, May 24, 1833. American politician and orator. He was educated in Virginia and at New York, and attended Princeton for a time in 1787. He studied law under Edmund Randolph at Philadelphia, but abandoned his studies to lead the life of a sportsman. An anti-Federalist, he was elected to Congress in 1799 and became (1801) chairman of the standing committee on ways and means, serving in that capacity until 1805. During his first years in Congress he led the administration forces on the floor, but his break with Thomas Jefferson became evident during the time of the Yazoo claims controversy. Although defeated for reelection in 1813, Randolph returned to Congress in 1815; ill health compelled him to withdraw from the contest in 1817, but he was elected in 1819 and served until 1825. A proponent of Southern interests, Randolph attacked John Quincy Adams and Henry Clay, provoking the duel (April 8, 1826) with the latter held on the banks of the Potomac. Randolph served (1825–27) in the Senate and again in the House of Representatives from 1827 to 1829. He was a member of the Virginia convention (1829–30) and served (1830–31) as U.S. minister to Russia. On various occasions during his last years his mind was clouded by insanity. A strange and sometimes puzzling figure, he was brilliant after his own fashion and ranks as one of the most powerful orators of his day.

Randolph, Peyton. b. at Williamsburg, Va., c.1721; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 22, 1775. American patriot, a leading member of the Virginia House of Burgesses. He was president of the first Continental Congress in 1774, and a delegate to Congress in 1775.

Randolph, Theodore Fitz. b. at New Brunswick, N.J., June 24, 1826; d. at Morristown, N.J., Nov. 7, 1883. American politician. He was governor of New Jersey (1869–72), and a U.S. senator from New Jersey (1875–81).

Randolph, Thomas. b. at Houghton, Daventry, Northamptonshire, England, 1605; d. in March, 1635. English poet and dramatist, one of the "sons" of Ben Jonson. He wrote the plays Aristippus, Or, The Jovial Philosopher, The Muses' Looking-Glass, a Comedy, Amyntor, or the Impossible Doury, The Conceited Pedlar, The Jealous Lovers, and a number of minor poems.

Randolph, Thomas Jefferson. b. at "Monticello," Va., Sept. 11, 1792; d. at "Edgehill," Va., Oct. 7, 1875. American financier and writer; son of Thomas Mann Randolph and grandson of Thomas Jefferson. In 1814, he began assuming the responsibility for managing the financial affairs of Thomas Jefferson, and after the latter's death (1826) became the chief executor of the Jefferson estate. He was elected (1831) to the Virginia House of Delegates, and was a rector of the University of Virginia. Author of Memoir, Correspondence, and Miscellanies from the Papers of Thomas Jefferson (4 vols. 1829).

Randolph, Thomas Mann. b. in Goochland County, Va., Oct. 1, 1768; d. June 20, 1828. American politician; great-great-grandson of William Randolph. The husband of Thomas Jefferson's daughter, Martha, whom he married in 1790, he resided at "Monticello" and shared many of the diverse interests of his father-in-law. He served (1793–94) in the Virginia senate, was a member (1803–07) of Congress, served in the War of 1812, and was governor (1819–22) of Virginia, later serving (1823–25) in the state legislature.

Randolph, William. b. in Warwickshire, England, c.1651; d. April 11, 1711. American colonial official, planter, and merchant. Arriving (c.1673) in Virginia, he became (1684) the owner of the tract known as "Turkey Island" and subsequently acquired large holdings in other parts of Virginia. One of the most prominent slave-holders and planters in the colony, he held various civil and military offices, including that of clerk (1673–83) of Henrico County, lieutenant colonel of militia (1699 et seq.), clerk (1699–1701, 1702) of the Burgesses, and attorney general (1694 et seq.) for the Crown in Virginia. He was a founder and trustee of the College of William and Mary.

Random Island (ran'dom). Island in Trinity Bay, E. Newfoundland, Canada. Area, ab. 90 sq. mi.; pop. 1,744 (1951).

Randon (rân.dôn), Jacques Louis César Alexandre, Comte. b. at Grenoble, France, March 25, 1795; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 16, 1871. French marshal, governor general of Algeria and minister of war under Napoleon III.

Randulf de Gernons (ran'dulf de zher.nôn'). [Title, Earl of Chester.] d. 1153. Anglo-Norman leader in the civil wars at the time of King Stephen. He defeated his former liege, King Stephen, at Lincoln Castle (1141), and resumed war (1144) with Stephen after making terms with him (1142). Following a second peace (1146), he was treacherously imprisoned and had to surrender his castles to obtain freedom. He persuaded (1149) Duke Henry (later Henry II) to return to England, but he was won back to Stephen's side by extensive land grants. Later he was won back to Henry's cause by the promise of still more extensive grants.

Ransome (ran'səm), Arthur. b. at Leeds, Yorkshire, England, Jan. 18, 1884—. English writer. Author of Edgar Allan Poe (1910), The Hoof-marks of the Faun

(1911), The Elixir of Life (1915), Six Weeks in Russia (1919), The Chinese Puzzle (1927), and, for children, Swallows and Amazons (1930), Peter Duck (1932), Winter Holiday (1933), Secret Water (1939), and The Picts and the Martyrs (1943).

Ranson's Folly (ran'son'z). Title story in a series of novelettes by Richard Harding Davis, published in 1902 and dramatized in 1904.

Rantoul (ran.töl'). Village in E central Illinois, in Champaign County. It is situated near one of the largest U.S. Air Force bases in the Midwest, 6,387 (1950).

Raon-l'Étape (rä.ön.lä.täp). Town in E France, in the department of Vosges, on the Meurthe River ab. 10 mi. NW of St-Dié. An industrial town, it suffered serious damage in World Wars I and II, 6,553 (1946).

Raoul-Rochette (rä.öl.ro.shet), Désiré. b. at St.-Amand, Cher, France, March 9, 1790; d. at Paris, July 3, 1854. French archaeologist. He wrote Histoire critique de l'établissement des colonies grecques (4 vols., 1815), Monuments inédits d'antiquités (1828-30), and Peintures inédites (1836).

Raoult (rä.öl), François Marie. b. at Fournès, Nord, France, May 10, 1830; d. at Grenoble, France, April 1, 1901. French physical chemist. In 1887 he stated Raoult's law, i.e., the fractional lowering of the vapor pressure of a solvent by a solute is equal to the mol fraction of the solute. This was the earliest fundamental colligative law of solutions.

Raux (rä.ö), Jean. b. at Montpellier, France, June 12, 1677; d. at Paris, Feb. 10, 1734. French genre painter. He won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1704, and was made a member of the Academy in 1717.

Rapagnetta (rä.pä.nyät.tä). See D'Annunzio, Gabriele.

Rapallo (rä.päl'lö). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Genova, situated on the Gulf of Rapallo (part of the Gulf of Genoa), ab. 16 mi. E of Genoa; health resort. It is also a commercial seaport, with fisheries and a lumber trade. A convention between Italy and Yugoslavia, making Fiume an independent city, was signed here on Nov. 12, 1920 (but two years later a Fascist coup brought Fiume again under Italian control, and it remained Italian until the end of World War II). Much more important than this agreement, however, was the Treaty of Rapallo (1922), signed by the German Foreign Secretary Walther Rathenau and Russian Foreign Commissar Grigori Chicherin, which provided for the resumption of German-Russian relations after World War I. The town suffered some damage to its buildings of tourist interest during World War II (one aisle of the Collegiate Church was destroyed by bombing). Pop. of commune, 13,947 (1936); of town, 6,766 (1936).

Rapallo, Treaty of. [Also, Rapallo Pact.] Settlement (April 16, 1922) between Germany and the U.S.S.R. which was negotiated by Foreign Minister Walther Rathenau, for Germany, and by People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs G. V. Chicherin, for the U.S.S.R. The pact, which came as a complete surprise to most European diplomats, was a source of immediate concern to French and British diplomats in that it marked the beginning of a possible German orientation toward the east. Its main points were: (1) that Russia would renounce all reparations claims against Germany; (2) that Germany would renounce claims on behalf of German nationals caused by socialization in Russia; (3) that mutual trade would be encouraged; and (4) an agreement on the mutual recognition of a "favored nation" principle.

Rape of Europa (ü.rö'pä), The. [Also, Europa and the Bull.] Painting by Titian (1562). Europa is being carried through the waves on the bull's back; one Cupid follows, supported by a dolphin, and two fly above. Europa's maidens are seen on the distant shore.

Rape of Lucrece (lö.krës'), The. Narrative poem by Shakespeare, published in 1594.

Rape of Lucrece, The. Tragedy by Thomas Heywood, printed in 1608.

Rape of the Lock, The. Mock-heroic poem by Alexander Pope, published in two cantos in 1712, and in its present form in five cantos in 1714.

Rape of the Sabines (sä'b'inz), The. Painting by Rubens, in the National Gallery, London. The scene is in the Forum, with the Pantheon and a triumphal arch in the background.

Rape of the Sabines, The. Painting by Luca Giordano, in the museum at Dresden. The Romans, in armor, are seizing the Sabine women, some of whom defend themselves with energy, in an open place adorned with an arch and Corinthian columns. Romulus, mounted on a horse, is in command.

Rape of the Sabines, The. Group in marble by Giovanni da Bologna, in the Loggia dei Lanzi, Florence. A young Roman, bearing off a struggling woman, strides over the crouching form of a Sabine warrior.

Raphael (rä'fä.el', rä'fä.el'). [Also: Rafael or Raffaello (rä'fä.el'raf'), significant surname, Sanzio or Santi.] b. at Urbino, Italy, March 28, 1483; d. at Rome, April 6, 1520. Italian painter. He studied under his father, and after c1499 at Perugia under Perugino, whose style he imitated for many years. He assisted in the decoration of the Sala del Cambio there. His first great work, still in the style of Perugino, is the Coronation of the Virgin (1503), now in the Vatican. From 1503 to 1504 he painted a series of pictures for the Città di Castello, chief of which is the Marriage of the Virgin, or Spasolizio, in the museum of Brera. In 1504 he established himself at Florence, but worked also at Perugia and Siena. To this period belongs the Saint George of the Louvre. The works of the second or Florentine period are mainly Madonnas and Holy Families, also the portrait of himself in the Uffizi. Here he studied the great cartoons of Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci. In 1508, at the recommendation of his countryman Bramante, he went to Rome to decorate the Vatican for Julius II. In this third and last period Raphael emancipated himself from the traditions of his predecessors and formed his own style. His activity at this time, during the remainder of the reign of Julius II and that of Leo X, was prodigious. In 1514 he was appointed chief architect of Saint Peter's. He organized fêtes for the popes, was guardian of antiquities, and had prepared a great archaeological work on Roman remains. His work in Rome may be divided into five main groups: (1) the Stanze of the Vatican; (2) Loggie of the Vatican; (3) decoration of the Villa Chigi (Farnesina); (4) cartoons for the tapestries of the Sistine Chapel (they are now at the South Kensington Museum, London). A tapestry from Raphael's cartoons is preserved in the old museum at Berlin. It was made at Brussels for Henry VIII in 1515-16. The colors are somewhat faded. There are nine subjects in this collection, the tenth, Paul in Prison at Philippi, having perished. (5) Works at Saint Peter's. Among his chief easel pictures are Spasolizio (1504; at Milan), Entombment (Borghese, Rome), La Belle Jardinière (Louvre), La Fornarina (Rome), The Resurrection (Vatican), The Crucifixion (London), Coronation of the Virgin (Vatican), Marriage of the Virgin (Milan), Saint George and the Dragon, Saint Michael, Saint John, Apollo and Marsyas (Louvre), The Transfiguration, finished by Giulio Romano (1519-20; Vatican), Vision of Ezekiel (Florence), Lo Spasino (Madrid), and many madonnas.

Raphael. In Jewish and Christian angelology, one of the seven archangels, the angel of healing. He is the companion and instructor of Tobias in the Book of Tobit; and Milton represents him in Paradise Lost as the instructor of Adam and Eve.

Raphael de Jesús (rä'fä.el' de zhe.zös'). b. at Guimarães, Portugal, 1614; d. at Lisbon, Dec. 23, 1693. Portuguese Benedictine monk and historian.

"Raphael's Mistress" (rä'fä.elz, rä'fä.elz). See under Fornarina, La.

Raphia (rä'fä'). [Modern name, Rafa.] In ancient geography, a city on the coast of Palestine, SW of Gaza. Near it Ptolemy IV defeated (217 B.C.) Antiochus III.

Raphoe (rä.fö'). Ancient episcopal city in Donegal, Northern Ireland, ab. 13 mi. SW of Londonderry.

Rapidan (rap.i.dan', rap'i.dan'). Chief tributary of the Rappahannock, in Virginia, which it joins ab. 10 mi. W of Fredericksburg. Length, ab. 90 mi.

Rapid City (rap'id). City in W South Dakota, county seat of Pennington County. It is the principal trade and tourist center for the Black Hills, and has lumber, flour-milling, and cement industries. 25,310 (1950).

Rapido (rä'pé.dö). Short river in S central Italy, rising in the Apennines. The river is of insignificant agricultural or industrial importance, but acquired considerable note during World War II because of the extremely heavy casualties suffered by an American force that attempted (January, 1944) to outflank the German lines above Cassino by crossing the Rapido and driving north. The Rapido was finally crossed, but the German positions at Cassino held out until May.

Rapp (răp), George. b. in Württemberg, Nov. 1, 1757; d. at Economy, Pa., Aug. 7, 1847. German-American socialist, founder of the Harmonists. He emigrated with his followers in 1803 to Pennsylvania, where he founded a religious communistic settlement, which received the name of Harmony. In 1815 the community removed to Indiana. The new settlement was called New Harmony. The property at New Harmony was sold to Robert Owen in 1824, and the Harmonists removed to Beaver County, Pennsylvania, where they built the village of Economy on the Ohio River. Rapp continued to be the spiritual head of the Harmonists until his death. His doctrine, that man was hermaproditic and might regain this original state where creation through self alone was possible, led to a rule of strict celibacy that eventually destroyed (1906) a prosperous society.

Rapp (răp), Jean, Comte. b. at Colmar, in Alsace, April 26, 1772; d. near Lörrach, Baden, Germany, Nov. 8, 1821. French general. He served in the Napoleonic campaigns, and distinguished himself at the defense of Danzig (1813-14), which he was forced to surrender in January, 1814. He supported Napoleon in 1815, serving as commander of the Army of the Rhine during the Hundred Days.

Rappaccini's Daughter (rap.a.chă'niz). Tale by Nathaniel Hawthorne, originally published in 1844 and included in Mosses from an Old Manse (1846).

Rappahannock (rap.a.han'ok). River in Virginia. It is formed by the union of the N fork with other branches, and flows into Chesapeake Bay ab. 25 mi. S of the mouth of the Potomac. It was of great strategic importance in the Civil War, particularly in the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac (1862-64). Length, ab. 185 mi.

Rapperschwyll (răp'ër.shvël) or Rapperswil (răp'ër.svël). Town in NE Switzerland, in the canton of St. Gallen, at the E extremity of the Lake of Zurich. It has silk and cotton mills. 5,070 (1941).

Rappists (rap'ists). See Harmonists.

Rappold (rap'öld), Marie. [Maiden name, Winteroth.] b. at New York, c1880-. American operatic soprano. She was a member (1905 et seq.) of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, with which she made her debut as Sulamith in Karl Goldmark's Die Königin von Saba. Among her roles were Aida, Desdemona, Marguerite, and Venus.

Rappoltsweller (răp'olts.vi.lër). German name of Ri-beauvillé.

Rappoport (rap'o.pört), Angelo Solomon. b. at Baturin, in Little Russia, Sept. 5, 1871; d. June 2, 1950. British editor and author. He was on the staff (1906) of the Encyclopedia Britannica, and edited Twentieth Century Russia (1915-16), the New Gresham Encyclopedia (1918-24), and Illustrated Palestine (1927-29). He coedited the British Encyclopedia (1933). In France at the outbreak of World War II, he was arrested (1940) by the Gestapo for his anti-Nazi writings and interned in concentration camps until 1944. His publications include Primer of Philosophy (1903), Russian History (1905), English Drama (1906), Home Life in Russia (1912), History of Poland (1915), Dictionary of Socialism (1926), Myths and Legends of Ancient Israel (3 vols., 1928), Medieval Legends of Christ (1934), The Gannet against the Gospel (1936), and The Folk-lore of the Jews (1937).

Rapti (răp'ti). River in Nepal and N Union of India which rises in the Himalayas, flows first W, then S, and finally turns SE and joins the Gogra ab. 80 mi. NE of Benares. Gorakhpur is located on its banks. Length, ab. 375-400 mi.

Raquette Lake (rak'et). [Also, Racket Lake.] Lake in N New York, in the Adirondacks, in Hamilton County; summer resort. Its outlet is by Long Lake and Raquette River into the St. Lawrence.

Raquette River. [Also, Racket River.] River in N New York. It joins the St. Lawrence ab. 45 mi. NE of Ogdensburg. Length, ab. 135 mi.

Raratonga (rar.a.tong'ga). See under Cook Islands.

Rarey (răr'i). John Solomon. b. in Franklin County, Ohio, Dec. 6, 1827; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 4, 1866. American horse-tamer. He had great success in managing horses with a training system of his own, and gave many exhibitions both in America and Europe.

Raritan (răr'i.tan). Town in N New Jersey, in Somerset County, near New Brunswick. 5,131 (1950).

Raritan Bay. Bay indenting the E coast of New Jersey, S of Staten Island.

Raritan River. River in New Jersey. It is formed by the union of the N and S branches in Somerset County, and flows into Raritan Bay at Perth Amboy. Total length, ab. 75 mi.

Ras Addar (räs.ad.där'). Arabic name of Bon, Cape. Rasalas (ras'alas'). Third-magnitude star μ Leonis. It is often further designated as Alshemali or Borealis, as being the northernmost of the group of stars in the lion's head.

Ras-al-gethi (räs.al.geth'i). [Also, Ras-al-geti (räs.al.get'i).] Third-magnitude variable colored double star α Herculis, in the head of the constellation.

Rasalhague (räs.al.hă'gü). Second-magnitude star α Ophiuchi, in the head of the constellation.

Rasay (ră'zä). See Raasay.

Ras Bab el Mandeb (räs.băb.el.män'deb). See Bab el Mandeb, Cape.

Raschig (răsh'ich), Friedrich August. b. at Brandenburg, Germany, 1863; d. at Duisburg, Germany, 1928. German industrial chemist. He devised important technical processes for the production of hydrazine (from ammonia; the Raschig-Ring process); hydrazoic acid (precursor of lead azide, German detonator in World War I); phenol, and phenol-formaldehyde plastics.

Rascoe (ras'kō), (Arthur) Burton. b. at Fulton, Ky., Oct. 22, 1892-. American editor, writer, and anthologist. He was editor (1927-28) of The Bookman, editorial adviser (1934-37) of Doubleday, Doran and Company, and drama critic and editorial writer (1942-46) of the New York World-Telegram. Author of Theodore Dreiser (1925), Titans of Literature (1932), Prometheans (1933), The Joys of Reading (1937), Belle Starr: "The Bandit Queen" (1941), We Were Interrupted (1947), and other books.

Ras d'Aunigny (ră.dö.ră.nyë). French name of Alderney, Race of.

Rasgrad (răz'grăt). See Razgrad.

Rashid (ră.shéd'). Arabic name of Rosetta.

Rashin (ră.shën). Japanese name of Najin.

Rashleigh Osbaldistone (rash'li.oz.bôl'di.ston). See Osbaldistone, Rashleigh.

Rasín (ră.shën), Alois. b. 1867; assassinated, Feb. 16, 1923. Czechoslovak statesman. He was a prominent member of the Czech national independence movement during World War I and active on its central committee. After a long imprisonment by the Austrian authorities, he served as finance minister in the cabinets of the newly established Czechoslovak republic from 1919 to 1923, balanced his country's budget in a most difficult period, and thus assured the economic stability and prosperity which Czechoslovakia, more than any other of the Austrian succession states, enjoyed.

Rasis (ră'siz). See Rhazes.

Rask (ră'sk), Rasmus Christian. b. at Brøndekilde, Denmark, Nov. 22, 1787; d. at Copenhagen, Nov. 14, 1832. Danish philologist and writer, one of the founders of the modern science of comparative linguistics. His earliest work was particularly in the direction of Old Norse. In 1808 he published a translation of the Edda; in 1811 an Icelandic grammar. With government assistance, he made (1813) a journey to Iceland to study the language, returning (1815) by the way of Scotland. In the meantime he had been awarded the gold medal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries for an essay on the origin of the Old Norse language. In 1816, with public support, he started on an extended journey to the East. He was first for some months at Stockholm, then at St. Petersburg, whence he set out in the summer of 1819 for Tiflis (Tbilisi). He traveled through Persia in 1820, and then went on to Bombay, everywhere actively engaged in studying the languages of the countries through which he passed. In India he remained two years, engaged in linguistic study and in collecting and copying manuscripts. He finally returned to Copenhagen in 1823. For a long time his work failed to gain the recognition it merited. A small pension was given him for three years by the government; in 1825 he was made professor extraordinary of the history of literature, but without a stipend. In 1829, however, he was appointed university librarian, and at the end of 1831, barely a year before his death, he finally received the professorship of Oriental languages which he had so long desired. His linguistic studies covered a most extraordinary range. He published, among others, grammars of Icelandic, Anglo-Saxon, Singhalese, Spanish, Frisian, Italian, Danish (in English), Lapp, and English, and wrote monographs on special points of many languages and dialects. In numerous instances he cleared the way, by his preliminary labors and suggestions, for other workers in the same field. He discovered the principle of the relative correspondence of consonants in the Indo-Germanic languages, for instance, although it was formulated as a law by Jacob Grimm, whose name it bears. His collected essays (Samlade Afhandlinger) were published at Copenhagen (1834-38) in three volumes.

Raskob (ras'kob), John J. b. at Lockport, N.Y., March 19, 1879; d. near Centerville, Md., Oct. 14, 1950. American capitalist. He was secretary and assistant (1902 et seq.) to Pierre S. du Pont and later became a member of the finance committee of the du Pont and General Motors companies and one of the leading industrial executives of the U.S. In 1928 he became chairman of the Democratic National Committee to conduct the presidential campaign of Alfred E. Smith and, in the succeeding years, slowly dropping his industrial activities, he was active as a critic of the Republican administration. He supported the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, but soon after Roosevelt's election turned against him and became a prominent member of the so-called Liberty League opposing Roosevelt.

Rasles (râl), Sébastien. b. at Dôle, France, 1658; d. at Norridgewock (in what is now Maine), Aug. 12, 1724. French missionary. After completing his studies at Dijon, he joined the Jesuit order, taught Greek for a time in the college of that society at Nîmes, became attached to the missions of Canada in 1689, and was placed in charge of the station at Norridgewock in 1689. Here he studied the Abnaki language, of which he compiled a valuable dictionary in three volumes (now preserved in the library at Harvard). He had much influence with the Indians, which he exerted to secure their allegiance to the French against the English. Public opinion in New England was aroused against him, and a price was placed upon his head. He was attacked a number of times and escaped, but finally was surprised in 1724 by a party from Fort Richmond and shot. A monument to his memory was raised by the citizens of Norridgewock in 1833.

Ras Muhammad (râs mō'hām'ād). [Also: Ras Mohammed (mō'hām'ed), Ras Muhammed (mō'hām'ed).] Cape in NE Africa, the southernmost headland of the Sinai Peninsula, projecting into the Red Sea.

Rasmussen (râs'mûs,ën), Gustav. b. at Odense, Denmark, Aug. 10, 1895; d. at Copenhagen, Sept. 13, 1953. Danish diplomat, appointed (1943) foreign minister after the liberation of Denmark. Appointed (1939) legation counselor at London, he served (1942-45) on the Danish Council and Danish military mission at London, and was appointed (1945) minister to Rome, but became foreign minister before leaving to take the new post.

Rasmussen, Knud Johan Victor. b. at Jakobsbavn, Greenland, June 7, 1879; d. at Copenhagen, Denmark, Dec. 21, 1933. Danish arctic explorer and ethnologist who directed (1902 et seq.) many expeditions in Greenland. He was a proponent of the theory that the Eskimos and the North American Indians were descendants of the same Asian migratory tribes and searched for evidence of this on his expeditions. He was the first to travel across Melville Bay by sledge. He established (1910) the Thule station on Cape York, from which he led (1912 et seq.) expeditions. Author of Grønland langs Polhavet (1919), Fra Grønland til Stillehavet (1925-26), and Myter og Sagn fra Grønland (1921-25).

Rasoumovsky Quartets (râ.zō.môf'ski). Three works for string quartet (Opus 59) by Ludwig van Beethoven.

Raspail (râs.pây'), François Vincent. b. at Carpentras, France, Jan. 29, 1794; d. Jan. 8, 1878. French naturalist and radical republican politician. He took part in the revolutionary movements of 1830 and 1848, and was imprisoned in the latter year. He was a member of the Corps Législatif in 1869, and was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1876. Among his works are Nouveau système de chimie organique (1833), Nouveau système de physiologie végétale (1836), Histoire naturelle de la santé et de la maladie (1843), and Nouvelles études scientifiques (1864).

Raspe (râs'pe), Rudolph Erich. b. at Hanover, Germany, 1737; d. at Muckross, Ireland, 1794. German author. He was for a time professor of archaeology and curator of the museum at Kassel, but was charged with stealing medals under his care, and fled to England to avoid prosecution. He was assay master and storekeeper at the Dolcoath mines in Cornwall (1782-88). He then went to Caithness in Scotland, where his "salting" activities to delude Sir John Sinclair into believing he possessed valuable mining properties were exposed, forcing Raspe to flee to Ireland; the incident was the basis for Sir Walter Scott's characterization of Dousterswivel in The Antiquary. He wrote some scientific works, but is known chiefly as the compiler of Baron Munchausen's Narrative of his Marvellous Travels and Campaigns in Russia (1785), a German translation of which was introduced in Germany by the poet Gottfried August Bürger in 1786.

Rasputin (râs.pō'tvin; Anglicized, ras.pū'tin), Grigori Yefimovich. b. at Pokrovskoe, in Siberia, 1871; d. Dec. 17, 1916. Russian monk, influential at the court of Nicholas II. The son of a poor peasant, almost wholly illiterate even to the end of his life, in 1904 he announced that he was inspired and directed by God to preach a new religious message. Leaving his family, he joined a sect whose principal doctrine was salvation through repentance (most accounts have it that to this he added the precept that one should deliberately sin in order to be able to repent and win forgiveness). After pilgrimages to Jerusalem and to Mount Athos, during which he picked up scraps of theology and mystical phrases, he grew bold enough to proclaim that only through him could one be saved. Physically an impressively virile man, with something like hypnotic power over impressionable persons, especially if they were women, he soon acquired a considerable following. In 1907, becoming acquainted with the personal chaplain of the czarina, he was introduced into court circles, where he quickly gained an ascendancy over the czarina herself. When the czarévich, a sufferer from hemophilia, recovered while Rasputin was treating him by prayer and religious exercises, it was accounted a miracle, and the czar as well as his consort came under the influence of the monk. His standing with the monarch gave him power over the Holy Synod of the Russian Church, and he dictated the appointment of friends and followers to high ecclesiastical offices. During World War I his power grew, the czar and czarina being apparently wholly under his influence, shaping many policies by his mystical advice. An unsuccessful attempt on his life in 1914 increased his ascendancy, as it was believed that God had saved him. He was finally killed by a group of Russian noblemen, who first tried a strong dose of poison (the occasion was a dinner given by one of the group); when poison failed to kill the monk, the conspirators finished him off with bullets. The czarina built a special chapel at Tsarskoe Selo, where Rasputin's mortal remains were enshrined, and it is said that the grieving empress prayed there daily. During the Revolution of 1917, the monk's corpse was dug up and burned by the populace.

Rassam (râs.sâm'), Hormuzd. b. at Mosul, in what is now Iraq, 1826; d. at Brighton, England, Sept. 16, 1910. Turkish Assyriologist. He assisted (1845-47) Sir A. H. Layard in his archaeological excavations at Nineveh. Having at Layard's instance completed his studies at Oxford, he accompanied (1849) him on his second expedition, and became (1851) his successor as British agent for the conduct of Assyrian explorations, a post which he held until the explorations came to an end in 1854. In 1864 he was sent by the British government on a mission to Theodore, king of Abyssinia, by whom he was kept imprisoned until 1865. From 1876 to 1882 he conducted explorations in Mesopotamia for the British Museum. He published The British Mission to Theodore, King of Abyssinia (1869) and other works.

Rasselas (ras'e.las). Philosophical romance by Samuel Johnson, published in 1759.

Rassemblement des Gauches Républicaines (rà.sân.ble.mân dâ gôsh rà.pû.blê.ken). [Eng. trans., "Rally of the Republican Left."] French political grouping under the Fourth Republic, embracing various moderate political parties, especially the Radical Socialists.

Rassemblement du Peuple Français (rà.sân.ble.mân dü pé.ple frân.sâ). [Eng. trans., "Rally of the French People," called RPF.] French political movement, founded (April 14, 1947) by supporters of Charles de Gaulle. It opposed the constitution adopted for the Fourth Republic, advocating a strengthening of executive powers and opposing political party organization. It won considerable success in the municipal elections of October, 1947, when it claimed a membership of a million, but thereafter declined in strength. Its leaders include Charles de Gaulle, president, Jacques Soustelle, secretary-general, and André Malraux.

Rastaban (ràs.ta.bân'). See Alwid.

Rastaben (ràs.ta.ben'). See Etamin.

Ras Tanura (ràs tân.nô.ra). [Also: Ras Tannurah, Ras Tannura (tân.nô.ra).] Seaport in E Saudi Arabia, on the Persian Gulf, just N of the island of Bahrain. One of the largest oil refineries in the Middle East is located here.

Rastatt (rà'shtât, ràs'tât). [Also, Rastadt.] Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, ab. 14 mi. SW of Karlsruhe. It has a wine trade, and manufactures of paperware, furniture, and machinery. There is a baroque castle of 1699-1705, and various churches in the baroque style of the 18th century. The Peace of Rastatt, between the emperor and France, on March 7, 1714, concluded the War of the Spanish Succession, confirming the Peace of Utrecht (April, 1713). From 1797 to 1799 a congress was held here to attempt to settle territorial questions arising out of the war against France; no conclusion was reached and hostilities were resumed after two of the three French representatives were assassinated. The town was a fortress of the German Bund after 1840; the fortifications were razed in 1892. Pop. 16,390 (1950).

Rastatt, Congress of. In European history: 1. Congress held in 1713-14 for putting an end to the war between Austria and France. 2. Congress held in 1797-99 for the purpose of arranging the questions at issue between France and the Empire. It met Dec. 8, 1797, and was dissolved April 8, 1799. The cession of the left bank of the Rhine to France and the secularization of various German dominions were agreed to. Two of the French envoys were murdered by Austrian hussars near Rastatt, April 28, 1799.

Rastatt, Convention of. Secret agreement between France and Austria, Dec. 1, 1797, providing for the delivery of the left bank of the Rhine to the French.

Rastatt, Peace of. Treaty concluded between France and Austria March 7, 1714. It was confirmed by the Peace of Utrecht.

Rastede (ràs'tâ.dê). Town and commune in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in Oldenburg, situated on the railroad between Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, ab. 18 mi. NW of Bremen: agricultural commune. 14,439 (1950).

Rastenborg (ràs'ten.bûrk). German name of Kętrzyn.

Rastrick (ràs'trik). Former town, now part of Brighouse municipal borough, in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Calder, ab. 12 mi. SW of Leeds.

Rastyapino (ràs.tyâ'pi.nô). Former name of Dzerzhinsk.

Rata (rà'tâ). In Polynesian mythology, a boat-builder, voyager, and slayer of monsters. To rescue the bones of his parents, whose canoes were swallowed by a giant clam, he felled a tree to make a canoe. But Rata did not perform the proper ritual for felling a tree, and the tree repeatedly returned to its place until Rata propitiated its supernatural owners, who then helped build the canoe and launch it on a rainbow. Rata killed the clam, rescued the bones of his parents, and performed other miraculous feats.

Ratae (rà'tê). Latin name of Leicester, England.

Ratazzi (rà.tât'tsê), Urbano. See Rattazzi or Ratazzi, Urbano.

Rathayatra (rà.t.a.yâ'trâ). See under Juggernaut.

Rathbone (rath'bôn). Basil. b. at Johannesburg, South Africa, June 13, 1892—. American actor. He made his debut in 1911, came to the U.S. in 1912, became well known as a Shakespearean actor, and after 1920 was a starred and featured player. His first motion picture was made in 1925 at Hollywood, and he later became identified in the films and on the radio as Sherlock Holmes in a series of pictures and broadcasts taken from the Conan Doyle stories. He has since appeared on the stage, in motion pictures, and on the radio and television, often in "heavy" roles.

Rathbun (rà'th'bun), Richard. b. at Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 25, 1852; d. July 16, 1918. American zoologist, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution from 1897, and in charge of the U.S. National Museum from 1899.

Rathenau (rà'te.nou), Emil. b. at Berlin, Dec. 11, 1838; d. there, June 20, 1915. German industrialist and engineer. He went to the U.S. (1876) to study new technical inventions and methods. He returned to Germany and organized the German Edison Company, which in 1887 became the Allgemeine Elektrizitäts-Gesellschaft. He brought about improvements in the use of electrical power and was the first to produce aluminum for use in German industry.

Rathenau, Walther. b. at Berlin, Sept. 29, 1867; assassinated there, June 24, 1922. German industrialist, statesman, and author; son of Emil Rathenau. He studied at Berlin, Strasbourg, and Munich, became (1893) director of the Elektrochemische Werke at Bitterfeld, and was named (1899) a director of the Allgemeine Elektrizitäts-Gesellschaft (A.E.G., meaning "General Electric Company"), of which he became president in 1915 upon the death of his father. During World War I he helped coordinate the German war industries; he organized the agency called the Board of the War Ministry and until March, 1915, was in charge of administering raw materials in Germany. He took part (1919) at Berlin in the preliminaries to the Versailles Conference, was a member (1920-21) of the German socialization commission for disposal of the coal mines, and participated (1921) in the discussions preliminary to the London Conference. He joined (1921) Joseph Wirth's cabinet as minister of reconstruction, and as German representative at the Cannes Conference (January, 1922) was successful in securing a reduction in the German reparation payment for 1922. He became (1922) German minister for foreign affairs, negotiated (1922) the Treaty of Rapallo with Soviet Russia, and was killed by a group of nationalistic anti-Semites opposed to his policies of treaty fulfillment. Author of Zur Kritik der Zeit (1912), Von kommenden Dingen (1917), Die neue Wirtschaft (1917), and Die neue Gesellschaft (1919).

Rathenow (rà'te.nô). [Also, Rathenau (rà'te.nou).] Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, on the Havel River ab. 45 mi. NW of Berlin: manufactures of optical and precision instruments and of machinery; also lumber and flour mills. The Church of Mary and Andrew dates from the 14th-16th centuries. 27,566 (1946).

Rathlin (rà'th.lîn). [Also: Raghlin, Rahery.] Small island in Northern Ireland, in Ulster province and County Antrim, in the North Channel ab. 47 mi. N of Belfast. The island is similar in geological formation to the famous Giant's Causeway on the Irish mainland. Area, ab. 5 sq. mi.; length, ab. 5 mi.; width, ab. 1 mi.

Rathmines (rà'th.mînz'). Place in Ireland, ab. 3 mi. S of Dublin. Here the Royalists under James Butler, Marquis of Ormonde, were defeated (Aug. 2, 1649) by the Parliamentarians under Michael Jones.

Ratibor (rà'tê.bôr). German name of Racibórz.

Ratibor and Korvei (kôr'fi), Prince of. Additional title of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst, Prince Chlodwig Karl Victor of.

Ratingen (rät'ing'en). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated near the Rhine River, ab. 6 mi. N of Düsseldorf; glass, ceramics, metal, chemical, paper, and cotton textile industries. Medieval fortifications are preserved. The parish church, originally in the Romanesque style (11th century), has Gothic additions of the 14th century. The Rathaus (town hall) dates from the 16th century. During World War II the parish church suffered considerable damage. 25,245 (1950).

Ratisbon (rät'is.bon, -iz-) or Ratisbona (rat.is.bō'na, -iz-). See Regensburg.

Ratisbon Interim. Provisional arrangement devised by the emperor Charles V for the settlement of the points of dispute between the Roman Catholics and Protestants. It was based on a conference held (1541) during the Diet at Ratisbon (now Regensburg) between leading theologians (Philip Melancthon, Martin, Bucer, Johann von Eck, and others).

Ratisbonne (rà.tèz.bon), Louis Fortuné Gustave. [Pseudonym, Trim.] b. at Strasbourg, France, 1827; d. at Paris, 1900. French poet, translator, and dramatist. Author of a distinguished translation of The Divine Comedy (1857-60); of Pierre l'Ebouriffé (1872) and various other children's books; of Les Grandes Ombres (1900) and other collections of verse.

Rätische Alpen (rà'tish.è àlp'èn). German name of the Rhaetian Alps.

Rat Islands (rat). Group of islands in the W part of the Aleutians.

Ratlam (rut.lám'). [Also, Rutlam.] Former state, now incorporated into Madhya Bharat, Union of India, one of the states of Central India, ab. 150 mi. E of Ahmedabad: cattle raising, millet, wheat, and tobacco. Area, 687 sq. mi.; pop. 126,117 (1941).

Ratlam. [Also, Rutlam.] Town in Madhya Bharat, Union of India, former capital of the state of Ratlam, 155 mi. E of Ahmedabad; trading center. 44,939 (1941).

Ratnagiri (rut.ná'gí.rí) [Also, Rutnagherry.] District in Bombay, Union of India, ab. 150 mi. S of the city of Bombay along the coast of the Arabian Sea: rice, spices, cotton, tobacco and teakwood. Area, 4,069 sq. mi.; pop. 1,373,466 (1941).

Ratnagiri. [Also, Rutnagherry.] Capital of the district of Ratnagiri, Bombay, Union of India, on the Arabian Sea ab. 145 mi. S of Bombay; trading center, formerly a seaport. 17,904 (1941).

Ratnavali (rát.ná.vá.lí). [Eng. trans., "The Pearl Necklace."] Sanskrit drama of the 7th century. The authorship is variously ascribed.

Raton (rát.on'). City in NE New Mexico, county seat of Colfax County; trading center for an agricultural, lumbering, livestock, and coal and molybdenum mining area. 8,241 (1950).

Raton Mountains. Mountain group in SE Colorado and N New Mexico. Peak elevation, 9,586 ft.

Rat Portage (rat pór'táj). Former name of Kenora, Ontario, Canada.

Ratsey (rat'sí), Gamaliel. Hanged at Bedford, England, March 26, 1605. English highwayman. His notoriety is celebrated in several ballads. In carrying out his exploits, Ratsey always wore a mask.

Ratsey's Ghost. [Also, Ratsei's Ghost.] Very rare tract, printed without date, but supposed to have been published in 1605. It mentions Hamlet by name, and refers to the author and some circumstances of his life. Ratsey is referred to in many publications of the time.

Rattazzi (rát.tát'tsè) or Rattazzi (rà.tát'tsè), Urbano. b. at Alessandria, Italy, June 29, 1808; d. at Frosinone, Italy, June 5, 1873. Italian statesman. He became deputy in the Sardinian parliament in 1848, was minister for short periods in 1848 and 1849, became minister of justice in 1853 and of the interior in 1854, and resigned in 1858. He was again minister of the interior (1859-60), and was premier in 1862 and 1867.

Rattenfänger von Hameln (rát'en.feng.ér fon há'meln). Der. [Eng. trans., "The Rat-catcher of Hameln."] Opera by Victor Nessler, produced at Leipzig in 1879.

Ratti (rát'tè), Achille. Original name of Pope Pius XI.

Rattlin (rát'lin), Jack. Sailor in Tobias Smollett's Roderick Random.

Ratzburg (rát'se.bürk). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated on a lake ab. 12 mi. S of Lübeck; summer resort. It has a grain and livestock trade, and manufactures various ceramic, metal, wood, and paper products. The Romanesque Dom (cathedral) was founded by Henry the Lion in 1154; it has additions of the 13th century. The cathedral was undamaged during World War II. 12,502 (1950).

Ratzel (rát'sel), Friedrich. b. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Aug. 30, 1844; d. in Ammerland, Germany, Aug. 9, 1904. German geographer. He was educated at Heidelberg, Jena, and Berlin, traveled as a newspaperman in Europe, the U.S., and Latin America, became (1880) professor of geography in the Technische Hochschule at Munich, and held (1886 et seq.) the chair of geography at Leipzig. His theories stressed the role of physical environment as a determinant in the development of society; he made pioneer contributions to anthropogeography and to political geography. Author of Anthropogeographie (2 vols.), Völkerkunde, Politische Geographie, und Die Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika (2 vols., 1878-80).

Ratzenhofer (rát'sen.hö.fér), Gustav. b. at Vienna, July 4, 1842; d. en route from America to Europe, in October, 1904. German military jurist and sociologist. He developed a theory of society in terms of the social process which takes form in the struggle of men to satisfy their interests. The state is seen as a high form of social organization. His concept of "accommodation" has had considerable acceptance in contemporary American sociology. His important work was Wesen und Zweck der Politik als Theil der Sociologie und Grundlage der Staatswissenschaften (3 vols., 1893). Other works include Die Soziologische Erkenntnis, positive Philosophie des sozialen Lebens (1898), Positive Ethik (1901), works in the field of military sciences, and the posthumously published Soziologie (1907).

Rau (rou), Sir Benegal Narasinga. b. 1889—. Indian jurist; brother of Benegal Rama Rau. He served as prime minister (1944-45) of Jammu and Kashmir, and was appointed (1949) permanent member of India to the United Nations. He was named (1951) to the International Court of Justice.

Rau, Sir Benegal Rama. b. 1889—. Indian diplomat; brother of Benegal Narasinga Rau. He served as ambassador (1948-49) of India to the U.S. He was appointed Indian governor (1949) of the International Bank, and was also head of the Indian Reserve Bank. He served (1934-38) as deputy high commissioner for India at London.

Rau, Karl Heinrich. b. at Erlangen, Germany, Nov. 23, 1792; d. at Heidelberg, Germany, March 18, 1870. German political economist, professor at Heidelberg from 1822. His chief work is Lehrbuch der politischen Ökonomie (3 vols., 1826-37).

Räuber (ro'ber), Die. [English trans., "The Robbers."] Play by Schiller, printed in 1781 and first presented on the stage in 1782.

Rauch (rou'h), Christian Daniel. b. at Arolsen, Waldeck, Germany, Jan. 2, 1777; d. at Dresden, Germany, Dec. 3, 1857. German sculptor. Among his works are the statues of Blücher at Breslau and Berlin, the monument to Dürer at Nuremberg, and the monument to Frederick the Great at Berlin (1851).

Rauch, Friedrich August. b. in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, July 27, 1806; d. at Merceburg, Pa., March 2, 1841. American philosopher, first president (1835-41) of Marshall College (now part of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster), at Merceburg. He wrote Psychology (1840) and other books.

Raucoux (rō.kō) or Raucourt (rō.kör). See Rocourt or Rocour.

Raud (rà'd), Kristjan. b. at Viru-Jaagupi, Estonia, 1865; d. 1943. Estonian artist.

Raudian Fields (rō'di.àn). [Latin, Campi Raudii.] In ancient geography, a noted plain in N Italy, probably near Vercelli, but by some located near Verona. It was the scene of a battle in 101 B.C., in which the Cimbri were annihilated by the Romans.

Raudnitz an der Elbe (rōud'nits än der el'be). German name of Roudnice nad Labem.

Rauma (rou'mä). [Swedish, Raumo.] Town in S Finland, in the lään (department) of Turku-Pori, on the Gulf of Bothnia NW of Helsinki; leather, lumber, paper, and glass manufactures. The church was part of a 15th-century Franciscan monastery. 15,498 (1951).

Rauma River. See under Romsdal.

Raumer (rou'nier), Friedrich Ludwig Georg von. b. at Wörlitz, Germany, May 14, 1781; d. at Berlin, June 14, 1873. German historian; brother of Karl Georg von Raumer. He became professor at Breslau in 1811, and at Berlin in 1819, and was a member of the Frankfurt parliament in 1848, and later of the Prussian chamber. His chief works are Geschichte der Hohenstaufen und ihrer Zeit (1823-25) and Geschichte Europas seit dem Ende des 15. Jahrhunderts (1832-50). Other works are Briefe aus Paris und Frankreich (1831), England (1836-41), and Die Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika (1845).

Raumer, Karl Georg von. b. at Wörlitz, Germany, April 9, 1783; d. at Erlangen, Germany, June 2, 1865. German geographer, geologist, and writer on pedagogics; brother of Friedrich Ludwig Georg von Raumer. His works include Lehrbuch der allgemeinen Geographie (1832), Geschichte der Pädagogik (1842), and others.

Raumer, Rudolf von. b. at Breslau, April 14, 1815; d. at Erlangen, Germany, Aug. 30, 1876. German philologist; son of Karl Georg von Raumer. He wrote Geschichte der germanischen Philologie (1870) and others.

Raumo (rou'mö). Swedish name of Rauma.

Raunkier (rou'n'ker), Christen. b. 1860; d. 1938. Danish botanist. He evolved a method of analyzing the climate of any given region according to the "biological spectrum" (extent of plant exposure or protection) of its flora.

Raupach (rou'päch), Ernst Benjamin Salomo. b. at Straupitz, near Liegnitz (Legnica), in Silesia, May 21, 1784; d. at Berlin, March 18, 1852. German dramatist. His cycle of dynastic dramas (Die Hohenstaufen) were, in their day, widely produced in Germany by the various court theaters.

Rauraci (ró'ra-si), Montes. An ancient name of the Black Forest.

Raurici (ró'ri-si). [Also, Rauraci.] Ancient Germanic tribe first mentioned by Caesar. They were situated in the neighborhood of Basel, on the upper Rhine, in the territory north of the Helvetii, whom they had joined in their attempted migration, 58 B.C.

Rauschenbusch (rou'shen'bush), Walter. b. at Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 4, 1861; d. July 25, 1918. American theologian. He was ordained a Baptist minister in 1886, and in 1897 he became professor of New Testament exegesis in Rochester Theological Seminary.

Rauschnig (roush'n'ing), Hermann. b. in Germany, 1887—. German writer and politician. He served in the German army during World War I, and was subsequently a member of the National Socialist (Nazi) Party and president (1932) of the Danzig senate. He broke with the Nazi Party in 1935, and came (1940) to the U.S. (he became a U.S. citizen in 1948). Author of The Revolution of Nihilism (1939), The Voice of Destruction (1940), The Conservative Revolution (1941), The Redemption of Democracy (1943), and Time of Delirium (1946).

Rausenberger (rou'zen-ber-ger), Fritz. b. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, Feb. 13, 1868; d. at Munich, Germany, April 28, 1926. German artillery designer. He served as constructor of artillery at the Krupp works, and was a professor (1906 et seq.) at the Berlin-Charlottenburg military technical academy. He designed several artillery pieces used in World War I, including a long-range field gun.

Ravallac (rá.vá.yák), François. b. near Angoulême, France, c1578; executed at Paris, May 27, 1610. Murderer of Henry IV of France (May 14, 1610).

Ravaisson-Mollien (rá.ve.sôn.mo.lyân), Jean Gaspard Félix Lacher. b. at Namur, France (now in Belgium), Oct. 25, 1813; d. at Paris, May 18, 1900. French philosopher, archaeologist, and painter, a follower of the theories of the German philosopher Friedrich Wilhelm Schelling. An advocate of dynamic spiritualism, he had a profound influence on French philosophy. He served (1838 et seq.) as professor at the University of Rennes, later as government inspector of institutions of higher education. Author of De l'habitude (1838), Rapport sur la philosophie en France au XIX^e siècle (1868), La Vénus de Milo (1871), and Testament philosophique (1901).

Ravanusa (rá.vá.nó.zá). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Agrigento, ab. 22 mi. E of Agrigento; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 14,555 (1936); of town, 14,475 (1936).

Ravardière (rá.vár.dyér), Daniel de la Trousche, Sieur de La. See La Ravardière, Daniel de la Trousche, Sieur de.

Ravee (rá.vé). See Ravi.

Ravel (rá.vél'; French, rá.vél), Maurice. b. at Ciboure, Basses-Pyrénées, March 7, 1875; d. at Paris, Dec. 28, 1937. French composer. His works include compositions for the pianoforte, songs, a string quartet, and an overture, Rhapsodie espagnole; an opera, L'Heure espagnole, produced at the Paris Opéra Comique, May 19, 1911; the ballets Daphnis et Chloé (1912), La Valse (1919), and Boléro (1928); and a concerto for piano and orchestra (1932). His Ma Mère l'Oie, Le Tombeau de Couperin, and Pavane pour une infante défunte were originally written for piano; the suites fr. m. Daphnis et Chloé and the cleverly orchestrated Boléro are among the most popular concert selections.

Ravello (rá.vél'ló). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Salerno, situated high (1,227 ft.) above the Gulf of Salerno, between Amalfi and Salerno. It has a castle and a cathedral of the 11th century. It is much frequented by tourists, and was a favorite Italian residence of the composer Richard Wagner. Buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 3,227 (1936); of town, 703 (1936).

Raven, The. Poem by Edgar Allan Poe, the title piece of a volume published in 1845 and subsequently revised. It is noted for its skillful synecopation and musical use of language. The familiar refrain, "Nevermore," sounds the theme of despair in the poem.

Raven-Hill (rá'ven.hil'), Leonard. b. March 10, 1867; d. March 31, 1942. English illustrator and cartoonist, a member of the staff of Punch from 1896 to 1935. Among the books he illustrated is East London (1901).

Ravenna (ra've.ná; Italian, rá.vén.ná). Province in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna. Capital, Ravenna; area, ab. 718 sq. mi.; pop. 279,127 (1936).

Ravenna. City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, the capital of the province of Ravenna, ab. 6 mi. from the Adriatic Sea. Formerly directly on the sea, but now connected with it through the Naviglio Corsini Canal, it is a seaport and agricultural trade center, with foodstuff and construction industries, and silk manufactures. Pop. of commune, 81,086 (1936); of city, 29,070 (1936).

Art and Architecture. Ravenna is famous for its art treasures, particularly its buildings of the 5th-8th centuries, showing contacts between Western and Byzantine art and architecture. Structures of the 5th-6th centuries are: San Vitale, one of the most famous churches of Italy, started in 526 A.D., with mosaics of 545; Sant'Apollinare Nuovo, once the church of Theodorice the Great; Sant'Apollinare in Classe Fuori, a basilica church with picturesque bell tower; and San Francesco, San Giovanni Evangelista, Santa Agata, the Baptistery, the mausoleum of Galla Placidia (with beautiful mosaics), the two-story memorial of Theodorice the Great, and the remnants of the palace of Theodorice. The cathedral, reconstructed in the period 1734-44, stands on the site of a basilica of the 5th century; in the archiepiscopal palace is a chapel of the 5th century, with mosaics on the ceiling; the palazzo comunale (town hall) is likewise of this early period. Other churches, such as Santa Maria in Porto, date from the 16th century. The tomb of Dante, who died here in 1321, was erected in 1483, rebuilt in 1780. Ravenna was heavily damaged in World War II. Santa Maria in Porto was destroyed and San Giovanni Evangelista, the cathedral, and Sant'Apollinare Nuovo badly hit; however, most of the famous mosaics were saved.

History. Probably founded by the Etruscans, Ravenna came later into the hands of the Umbrians and the Romans, who developed it into the chief naval station on the upper Adriatic coast. In 476 it became the capital of Odoacer, in 493 of the kings of the Ostrogoths; in 540 it fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʒh, then; ǵ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; was captured by Belisarius and made the capital of the Byzantine domain in Italy (Exarchate of Ravenna). It was conquered by the Lombards in 751, but in 754 was included in the donation made to the Pope by the Frankish King Pepin the Short, which donation opens the history of the States of the Church. Subsequently the importance of the city declined; in the 13th century, the ruling Polenta family granted refuge here to Dante, who had fled his native Florence. From 1441 to 1509 under Venetian rule, it was from then until 1860 a part of the States of the Church.

Ravenna (rä'ven'ä). City in NE Ohio, county seat of Portage County, ab. 36 mi. SE of Cleveland; manufactures of excavating machinery, furniture frames, and women's clothing. 9,857 (1950).

Ravenna, Exarchate of. Dominion of the Byzantine exarch (or governor) in Italy, with its headquarters at Ravenna. The Ostrogothic realm in Italy was conquered (536-553) by the Byzantines, and the exarchate was instituted in 568. It comprised at first the province of Italy, but was soon confined to a district in NE Italy, near Ravenna.

Ravensbrück (rä'vens.brük). Village in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, ab. 48 mi. N of Berlin. It was used as one of the major concentration camps, chiefly for women, during the Nazi period. 937 (1946).

Ravensburg (rä'vens.bürk). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Danube department of the state of Württemberg, situated on the Schussen River ab. 47 mi. SW of Ulm. It has textile mills, a machine factory, various agricultural industries, and is the trading center of a dairying district. The Church of Our Lady, a Gothic structure of the 14th century, contains valuable stained-glass windows. The town, contested between the Wolf and Hohenstaufen dynasties in the early Middle Ages, became later a free imperial city; it passed to Bavaria in 1802, and to Württemberg in 1810. The population decreased in the period 1939-46 by 23.3 percent. 23,912 (1946). 25,859 (1950).

Ravenscroft (rä'venz.kroft), Edward. English dramatist of the latter part of the 17th century, at one time a student of law. His works include Mamamouchi, or the Citizen Turned Gentleman (1671), The Careless Lovers (1673), Soamamouchi (1677), The Wrangling Lovers, or the Invisible Mistress (1677), King Edgar and Alfreda (1677), The English Lawyer (1678; a translation of the Latin play Ignoramus), The London Cuckolds (1683), Dame Dobson, or the Cunning Woman (1684), The Canterbury Guests, or a Bargain Broken (1695), The Anatomist, or the Sham Doctor (1697), and The Italian Husband (1697).

Ravenscroft, Thomas. b. c1590; d. c1633. English song composer, remembered for The Whole Booke of Psalmes, commonly known as Ravenscroft's Psalter, containing 100 settings, of which he composed 48. His Panniedia, Musick's Miscellanie (1609) is the first such English work; he was the collector also of Deuterometia (1609) and Melismata (1611), containing such well-known rounds and catches as Three Blind Mice, Hold Thy Peace, We Be Soldiers Three, and The Three Ravens.

Ravenshoe (rä'venz.hö). Romance by Henry Kingsley, published in 1862.

Ravenspur (rä'ven.spér). Former place (now under the sea) on the coast of Yorkshire, England, near Spurn Head. Henry IV made a landing here in 1399, and Edward IV in 1471.

Ravenstein (rä'ven.stin). Ernst Georg. b. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, Dec. 30, 1834; d. March 13, 1913. British cartographer and geographer. He served (1855-75) in the topographical department of the War Office, and was professor of geography (1882-83) at Bedford College. The first (1887) to use spectrum colors for graduated contours in layer maps, he was a member of the Royal Geographical and Royal Statistical societies. Author of Systematic Atlas (1864), Atlas of the World (1911), and A Life's Work (1908).

Ravenswood (rä'venz.wüd). Edgar, Master of. Lover of Lucy Ashton in Scott's Bride of Lammermoor. A melancholy and revengeful man, finding her, as he supposes, faithless to him, he bitterly reproaches her, is challenged by her brother, and perishes in a quicksand on his way to the meeting.

Ravi (rä've). See also Chipeta.

Ravi. [Also: Ravee; ancient name, Hydrates.] One of the "five rivers" of the Punjab. It rises in the Himalayas, flows SW through Punjab state, Union of India, and through Punjab province, Pakistan, uniting with the Chenab ab. 35 mi. NE of Multan. Length, over 400 mi.

Ravins (rä.vañ). Col des. French name of Rawly Pass. Rawalpindi (rä.wal.pin'di). [Also: Rawal Pindi, Rawul Pindee.] Division of Punjab, Pakistan, bordering on the North-West Frontier Province and on Kashmir; rice, silk, timber, and cattle. Area, 21,381 sq. mi.; pop. 4,700,958 (1941).

Rawalpindi. [Also: Rawal Pindi, Rawul Pindee.] District in the Rawalpindi division, Punjab, Pakistan. Capital, Rawalpindi; area, 2,022 sq. mi.; pop. 758,231 (1941).

Rawalpindi. [Also: Rawal Pindi, Rawul Pindee.] Capital of the district of Rawalpindi, Punjab, Pakistan, the gateway to Kashmir, ab. 150 mi. NW of Lahore. It is an important military station and commercial center, and contains several educational institutions. 236,877 (1951).

Rawdon-Hastings (rô'don.häs'tingz), Francis. See Hastings, Francis Rawdon.

Rawl Pass (rä.vel'). See Rawly Pass.

Rawlings (rô'lingz), Marjorie Kinnan. b. at Washington, D.C., Aug. 8, 1896-. American novelist, author of books about the Florida back-country. Author of South Moon Under (1933), Golden Apples (1935), Cross Creek (1942), Cross Creek Cookery (1942), and other books. Her novel The Yearling (1938) received a Pulitzer prize in 1939; her short story Benny and the Bird Dogs is represented in many anthologies.

Rawlins (rô'linz). City in S Wyoming, county seat of Carbon County; supply and distribution point for a petroleum, natural gas, coal-mining, quarrying, and livestock-raising region. It is the seat of the state penitentiary. 7,415 (1950).

Rawlins, John Aaron. b. at Galena, Ill., Feb. 13, 1831; d. at Washington, D.C., Sept. 6, 1869. American general, U.S. secretary of war (1869) under Grant. A Douglas Democrat in 1860, he joined the Union army on the outbreak of the Civil War, and became assistant adjutant general to Grant in 1861, and chief of staff with the rank of brigadier general in 1865.

Rawlinson (rô'lin.son), George. b. at Chadlington, Oxfordshire, England, Nov. 23, 1812; d. at Canterbury, England, Oct. 6, 1902. English historian, Orientalist, and theologian; brother of Sir H. C. Rawlinson. He held (1861-89) the Camden professorship of ancient history at Oxford, and was canon (1872 et seq.) of Canterbury and rector (1888 et seq.) of All Hallows, London. Author of The Five Great Monarchies of the Ancient Eastern World: Chaldea, Assyria, Babylonia, Media, Persia (1862-67), The Sixth Great Oriental Monarchy: Parthia (1873), The Seventh Great Oriental Monarchy: the Sassanian or New Persian Empire (1876), A History of Egypt (1881), Phoenicia (1889), and various theological works.

Rawlinson, Sir Henry Creswicke. b. at Chadlington, Oxfordshire, April 11, 1810; d. at London, March 5, 1895. English Assyriologist and diplomatist. He entered the East India Company's army in 1827, and held various important offices both military and diplomatic, retiring in 1855. In 1859 he was appointed British minister at Tehran, where he remained one year. He became a member of the Council of India in 1858 and again in 1868. He copied, amid great hardships, the trilingual inscription of Darius I (Darius Hystaspis) at Behistun; the transcription, and its interpretation, were published by him from 1846 to 1851. He published On the Inscriptions of Assyria and Babylonia (1850), Outline of the History of Assyria (1852), and England and Russia in the East (1875); and was the joint editor of Cuneiform Inscriptions of Western Asia (1861-70), and other collections of inscriptions.

Rawmarsh (rô'märsh). Urban district in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 2 mi. NE of Rotherham, ab. 166 mi. N of London by rail. 18,793 (1951).

Rawnsley (rônz'li), Hardwicke Drummond. b. at Henley-on-Thames, England, Sept. 28, 1851; d. May 28, (1951).

1920. English clergyman, author, and poet. He was vicar of Wray, Windermere (1878-83), vicar of Crosthwaite, Keswick, and rural dean from 1883, and honorary canon of Carlisle. Among his works are Valete Tennyson, and Other Poems (1893), Literary Associations of the English Lakes (1894), Life and Nature at the English Lakes (1899), Memories of the Tennysons (1900), A Rambler's Notebook at the English Lakes (1902), Sermons on the Sayings of Jesus (1905), Months at the Lakes (1906), A Sonnet Chronicle (1906), Round the Lake Country (1909), and others.

Rawson (rô'son). Capital of Chubut territory, Argentina, located on the Chubut River, ab. 5 mi. from the Atlantic and ab. 675 mi. SW of Buenos Aires; center of a Welsh colony whose members are descended from the first settlers here (1865). Welsh is still the chief language. 10,492 (1947).

Rawson (rou'son), Arturo. b. 1884; d. at Buenos Aires, Oct. 8, 1952. Argentine cavalry officer, coleader with Pedro Ramírez of the officers' clique which deposed Ramón Castillo in June, 1943. For two days thereafter (June 5-6) he was de facto president of Argentina. He was succeeded as president by Ramírez.

Rawson (rô'son), Edward. b. at Gillingham, England, April 16, 1615; d. at Boston, Aug. 27, 1693. Colonial secretary of Massachusetts, and historical writer.

Rawtenstall (rô'ten.stôl). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 8 mi. N of Bury, ab. 201 mi. NW of London by rail. It has manufactures of boots and shoes. 25,426 (1951).

Rawul Pindee (râ'vul pin'dê). See Rawalpindi.

Rawul Pass (râ'vêl). [Also: Rawil Pass; French, Col des Ravins.] Alpine pass on the border of the cantons of Bern and Valais, Switzerland, leading from the Simmenthal in Bern to the Rhone valley at Sion.

Raxalp (râks'âlp). Elevated plateau-mountain in Austria, on the borders of the provinces of Lower Austria and Styria, NW of the Semmering Pass and ab. 44 mi. SW of Vienna. Elevation, ab. 6,600 ft.

Ray (râ), Cape. Southwesternmost cape of Newfoundland.

Ray, Isaac. b. at Beverly, Mass., Jan. 16, 1807; d. March 31, 1881. American physician, noted for his work in mental diseases. Author of A Treatise on the Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity (1838), Mental Hygiene (1863), Contributions to Mental Pathology (1873), and Ideal Characters of the Officers of a Hospital for the Insane (1873).

Ray or Wray (râ), John. b. at Black Notley, Essex, Nov. 29, 1627; d. there, Jan. 17, 1705. English naturalist, called "the father of English natural history." He traveled (1663-66) on the Continent with Francis Willughby. It is thought that the latter deserves much of the praise which Ray received as the founder of systematic zoology. Together they collected many specimens of plant and animal life on which to base a system of classification. Ray occupied himself with the plants; he first used the number of cotyledons as a means of dividing the plant kingdom and adopted the flower as the basis for classification into genera and species. He continued Willughby's work in classifying the animal kingdom, carrying it further than the birds and fishes that Willughby had completed at the time of his death (1672). He published Catalogus plantarum Anliae (1670); A Collection of English Proverbs (1670, and many later editions); Methodus plantarum nova (1682); Historia plantarum (1686-1704); Methodus insectorum (1705), and many zoological works: The Wisdom of God manifested in the Works of the Creation (1691); Miscellaneous Discourses (1692); etc. The Ray Society was established in 1844 for the purpose of publishing "rare books of established merit" on zoology, botany, and other divisions of natural history.

Ray (rî), Sir Prafulla Chandra. b. in Bengal, 1861; d. 1944. Indian scientist and educator, senior professor of chemistry at the University College of Science, Calcutta.

Rayburn (râ'bërn), Sam. b. in Roane County, Tenn., Jan. 6, 1882-. American politician, speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives (1940-46, 1949-53). He studied law at the University of Texas, and established his practice at Bonham, Tex. He was a member of the Texas legislature for six years, serving as speaker for two years, and served in Congress (1913 et seq.) as representative from the 4th Texas District.

Rayi (râ'î). Rarely used name of α Ophiuchi, usually known as Rasalhague.

Rayleigh (râ'li). Urban district in SE England, in Essex, ab. 7 mi. NW of Southend-on-Sea, ab. 33 mi. NE of London by rail. 9,388 (1951).

Rayleigh, 3rd Baron. Title of Strutt, John William.

Raymi (rî'mê). See Hatun Raymi.

Raymond (râ'mônd). Town in S Alberta, Canada, ab. 21 mi. S of Lethbridge, in the center of a stock-raising region. Sugar beets are also an important crop in the area. 2,279 (1951).

Raymond. City in SW Washington, in Pacific County. It is a seaport, with lumber industries. 4,110 (1950).

Raymond IV (râ'mônd; French, râ'môn). [Also: Raimond, Raimunde; called Raymond of Saint-Gilles (râ'môn de sâ'nzhêl).] d. at Tripoli, Feb. 28, 1105. Count of Toulouse (1088-1105). He was one of the most powerful princes in Europe in his time, and in 1096 assumed command of a large army which participated in the first Crusade. He besieged Tripoli in 1104.

Raymond VI. b. 1156; d. 1222. Count of Toulouse (1194-1222). He took part with the Albigenses against the Crusaders under Simon de Montfort, and was totally defeated by the latter in 1213. He was forced to cede his territories to Montfort, but continued fighting, with some measure of success, until his death.

Raymond (râ'mônd), Andrew Van Vranken. b. at Vischer's Ferry, Saratoga County, N.Y., Aug. 8, 1854; d. April 7, 1918. American educator, president of Union College (1894-1907).

Raymond, Antonin. b. at Kladno, in Bohemia, May 10, 1889-. American architect and industrial designer, considered a pioneer of modern architecture in the Orient. He came (c1910) to the U.S., became a U.S. citizen, worked in the architectural office of Cass Gilbert at New York, accompanied Frank Lloyd Wright to Japan, where Raymond practiced architecture from 1921 to 1937, designing private and government buildings, and has practiced (1939 et seq.) at New York as an architect and industrial designer.

Raymond, Bradford Paul. b. at Stamford, Conn., April 22, 1846; d. at Middletown, Conn., Feb. 27, 1916. American educator and Methodist clergyman, president of Lawrence University at Appleton, Wis. (1883-89) and of Wesleyan University (1889-1908).

Raymond (râ'môn), Fulgence. b. at St.-Christophe, France, Sept. 29, 1844; d. at Plancher-d'Andilly, France, Sept. 28, 1910. French neurologist. Originally a veterinarian, he took his medical degree and became (1894) J. M. Charcot's successor at the Salpêtrière clinic at Paris. He made important contributions to the knowledge of spinal sclerosis, pseudo-tubercles, and the neuroses. He described a type of apoplexy, marked by premonitory hemiparesis, called Raymond's paralysis.

Raymond (râ'mônd), George Lansing. b. at Chicago, Sept. 3, 1839; d. July 11, 1929. American clergyman, teacher, and author. He was ordained (1865) and held a Presbyterian pastorate until he became professor of English literature, aesthetics, rhetoric, and elocution at Williams College. He served as professor of oratory and aesthetic criticism (1880-1905) at Princeton and as professor of aesthetics (1905-12) at George Washington University. His books include works on aesthetics such as Poetry as a Representative Art (1886), The Genesis of Art Form (1893), Art in Theory (1894), and Proportion and Harmony of Line and Color in Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture (1899). He also wrote a novel, Modern Fishers of Men (1879).

Raymond, Henry Jarvis. b. at Lima, N.Y., Jan. 24, 1820; d. June 18, 1869. American newspaper editor and politician, first editor of the New York Times. He was graduated (1840) from the University of Vermont and while still at school contributed to Horace Greeley's New York, whose staff he joined after a period of freelancing. In 1841, when Greeley established the New York Tribune, Raymond became his chief assistant; in 1843 he joined the staff of the Morning Courier and New-York Enquirer; and in 1849 he was elected to the state assembly on the Whig ticket. Reflected in 1850, he became speaker in January, 1851, and left his newspaper post after aligning himself with the Free-Soil wing in the Whig Party led by Thurlow Weed and William H.

Seward. He became (1850) managing editor of Harper's New Monthly Magazine, holding that post until 1856, and in 1851, together with George Jones, founded the New York Times. The first issue appeared on Sept. 18, 1851, and the journal soon acquired an enviable reputation for impartial reporting. Within four years the Times had a city circulation more than twice as large as that of its rival, the Tribune. Raymond was elected (1854) lieutenant governor of New York and in February, 1856, was present at the Pittsburgh meeting that established the national Republican Party, for which he drafted a statement of principles. In 1864 he was chairman of the Republican national committee and was elected to Congress that year, becoming the administration leader in the fight between Johnson and the Radical Republicans. He was unsuccessful in this capacity and was expelled (Sept. 3, 1866) from the Republican Party for having attended the Philadelphia convention (August, 1866) of the Union Party and for having written its declaration of principles. He declined renomination and later recanted his sympathy for Johnson. He was the author of Association Discussed; or, the Socialism of the Tribune Examined (1847), Disunion and Slavery (1860), History of the Administration of President Lincoln (1864), and The Life and Public Service of Abraham Lincoln (1865).

Raymond, John Howard. b. at New York, March 7, 1814; d. at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Aug. 14, 1878. American educator. He was named (1855) the first president of the Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute. Becoming (1861) one of the first trustees of Vassar College, he served (1865-78) as president of that institution.

Raymond, John T. [Stage name of John O'Brien.] b. at Buffalo, N.Y., April 5, 1836; d. at Evansville, Ind., April 10, 1887. American comedian. He made his first appearance on the stage at Rochester, N.Y., in 1853. In 1873 he first took the part of Colonel Mulberry Sellers in The Gilded Age, for which he is now chiefly remembered.

Raymond, Rossiter Worthington. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, April 27, 1840; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Dec. 31, 1918. American mining engineer. He was U.S. commissioner of mining statistics (1868-76), editor (1867-93) of the New York American Journal of Mining (later called the Engineering and Mining Journal), president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers (1872-75), and secretary and editor of its Transactions from 1884. Among his works, besides official reports and numerous essays on the U.S. mining laws, are A Glossary of Mining and Metallurgical Terms (1881) and Life of Peter Cooper (1901).

Raymond of Sabunde [or de Sabiende]. [Also, Raimundo Sabiende.] d. c1437. Spanish teacher and theologian. He wrote Liber naturae (1434-36), an effort to reconcile reason and theology, which was translated into French by Montaigne, whose tribute to the author appears in his famous essay An Apologie of Raymond Sebond.

Raymond Roger (rā.mōn rō.zhā), Comte de Foix. See Foix, Raymond Roger, Comte de.

Raymondville (rā.mōnd.vil). City in S Texas, county seat of Willacy County, SW of Corpus Christi; trading and shipping center for an onion-raising area, 9,136 (1950).

Raynal (rā.nāl), Guillaume Thomas François. [Called Abbé Raynal.] b. at St-Geniez, Aveyron, France, April 12, 1713; d. at Paris, March 6, 1796. French historian and philosopher, notable as one of the early French freethinkers. He was ordained as a priest, but was formally expelled from the Church for his outspoken anticlericalism. His best-known work is the Histoire philosophique et politique des établissements et du commerce des Européens dans les deux Indes (1770; new edition, 1780-85). From the point of view of the French authorities, this work was vicious not only for its attacks on the clergy, but also for its charges that European colonial policies in Asia, and more particularly the people administering those policies, were brutal and greedy. To the rulers of France in the 1770's and early 1780's, still smarting from the loss of Canada and very conscious of the vast commercial possibilities of an overseas empire, such a work seemed almost treasonable. The book was burned by government order in 1781, and its author was exiled. He also wrote Histoire du Stathoudérat (1748), Anecdotes littéraires (2 vols., 1750), and Mémoires politiques de l'Europe (3 vols., 1754-74). Raynal was regarded as a leader of the French freethinkers.

Raynal, Paul. b. at Narbonne, France, 1890—. French playwright. Author of Le Maître de son cœur (1913-20), Le Tombeau sous l'arc de triomphe (1924; Eng. trans., The Unknown Warrior, 1928), Au soleil de l'instinct (1932), La Francerie (1933), and A souffert sous Ponce Pilate (1939). His work falls in two classes: intense psychological drama of the type familiar in France since Racine, and dramatic examination of the effects of war.

Rayne (rān). Town in S Louisiana, in Acadia Parish; important for the production and milling of rice; shipping point for edible turtles. 6,485 (1950).

Raynolds (rā'nōldz), Robert. b. at Santa Fe, N.M., April 29, 1902—. American novelist and playwright. Among his novels are Brothers in the West (1931), Saunders Oak (1933), Fortune (1935), May Bretton (1944), The Obscure Enemy (1945), Paquila (1947), and The Sinner of Saint Ambrose (1952). His plays and verse dramas include The Ugly Runts (1935), Farewell, Villon (1936), Thomas More (1937), Summer Song (1937), Take All My Loves (1938), and Bodicea (1942).

Raynouard (rā.nwār), François Juste Marie. b. at Brignoles, France, in September, 1761; d. at Passy, Paris, Oct. 27, 1836. French poet and scholar. He was noted for his works on Provençal literature and language, including Choix des poésies originales des troubadours (6 vols., 1816-21), and Lezique roman, a dictionary of the language of the troubadours, with a grammar and a selection of poems (1836-45).

Raystown (rāz'toun). Former name of Bedford, Pa.

Raystown, Fort. Original name of Bedford, Fort.

Rayville (rā'vil). Town in NE Louisiana, parish seat of Richland Parish; cotton processing and lumber industries. 3,138 (1950).

Razafindrahety (rā'zā.fin.drā'hē'ti). Original name of Ranavaloa III.

Razès (rā.zē). Former small division of Languedoc, France, corresponding to parts of the present departments of Aude and Pyrénées-Orientales.

Razgrad (rāz'grāt). [Also, Rasgrad.] Town in NE Bulgaria, in the department of Ruse, ab. 25 mi. NW of Shumen; important commercial town in a wine-growing region. 15,023 (1946).

Raziel (rā'zē.el). In Hebrew legend, the angel who gave Adam the wonderful book which contained all knowledge, and which Noah preserved in a golden casket on the ark.

Razmara (rāz.mā.rā'), Ali. b. at Tehran, Iran, April 1, 1901; assassinated there, March 7, 1951. Iranian soldier and politician. A graduate of the French military academy at St-Cyr, he served in the Iranian army and taught geography at the military university from 1930 to 1940. From 1944 to 1950 he was chief of staff, his principal duty being that of reorganizing the forces after World War II. He became known as a vigorous opponent of Russian attempts to dominate the country and in 1950 was named premier. He was killed by a member of an organization striving for nationalization of Iran's oil industry. Author of the classic 19-volume Military Geography of Iran and of The Military Geography of the Countries Surrounding Iran (5 vols., 1936-45).

Razor (rā'zör). Amusing intriguing valet in Sir John Vanbrugh's comedy The Provoked Wife.

Razzi (rāz'tsē), Giovanni Antonio. See Sodoma, II.

Re (rā). See Ra.

Ré (rā), Île de. [Also, Île de Rhé.] Island in W France, in the department of Charente-Maritime, in the Bay of Biscay opposite La Rochelle. The chief place is St-Martin-de-Ré. The island has a mild climate and produces wine and vegetables. Area, ab. 29 sq. mi.; pop. 8,538 (1946).

REA. See Rural Electrification Administration.

Rea (rā), Samuel. b. at Hollidaysburg, Pa., Sept. 21, 1855; d. at Gladwyne, Pa., March 24, 1929. American civil engineer and railroad executive. He was associated (1871 et seq.) with the Pennsylvania Railroad, serving (1913-25) as its president.

Read (rēd), George. b. near North East, Cecil County, Md., Sept. 18, 1733; d. Sept. 21, 1798. American lawyer, politician, and jurist, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He studied law privately, was admitted to the bar (1753) at Philadelphia, and in 1754 established his practice at New Castle, Del. He was appointed (1763) attorney general for the Lower Counties, a post he held until 1774. He was elected (1765) to the provincial assembly and served in that body for 12 years. During the pre-Revolutionary period he took a moderate position. He served in the first Continental Congress and was a member of the second one until 1777. Although he refused to support the resolution of independence, he signed and upheld the Declaration. He took a leading part in the Delaware constitutional convention of 1776 and in November, 1777, became acting head of the state of Delaware, continuing to carry out his duties until he was relieved (1778) at his own request. Thereafter he remained active as a member of the legislative council, to which he had been elected in 1776. As a member (1779) of the Delaware assembly he framed the act authorizing the state's delegates in Congress to sign the Articles of Confederation, and later in the same year resigned from the assembly because of poor health. He was chosen (1782) judge of the court of appeals in admiralty cases and was a member (1782-88) of the Delaware legislative council. He was present at the Annapolis convention (1786) and was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention (1787). He was one of the first senators from Delaware under the new government and was reelected (1790) after serving an initial two-year term. He resigned from the Senate in 1793 and became chief justice of Delaware, a position he held until his death.

Read, Herbert (Edward). b. near Kirbymoore, Yorkshire, England, Dec. 4, 1893—. English critic and poet. He was assistant keeper (1922-31) at the Victoria and Albert Museum, and professor of fine arts (1931 et seq.) at Edinburgh. Author of Songs of Chaos (1915), Naked Warriors (1919), Elegues (1919), Mutations of the Phoenix (1923), Reason and Romanticism (1926), Phases of English Poetry (1928), The Sense of Glory (1929), The Meaning of Art (1931; American title, The Anatomy of Art, 1932), The Innocent Eye (1933), The End of a War (1933), Poems, 1914-1934 (1935), Art and Society (1936), Poetry and Anarchism; Collected Essays (1938), Education through Art (1943), A World Within a War (1944), A Coat of Many Colours (1945), and The Grass Roots of Art (1947).

Read, John. b. at New Castle, Del., July 17, 1763; d. July 13, 1854. American lawyer; son of George Read. He was a member (1819-15) of the Philadelphia city council and served in the state assembly (1815-16) and in the state senate (1817-18).

Read, John Meredith. b. at Philadelphia, July 21, 1797; d. Nov. 29, 1874. American jurist; son of John Read. He was a member (1827-28) of the Pennsylvania state legislature, city solicitor (1830-31) of Philadelphia, U.S. district attorney (1837-41) for eastern Pennsylvania, and attorney general (1846) of Pennsylvania. He was elected (1858) to the Pennsylvania supreme court, becoming (1872) chief justice of that body.

Read, John Meredith. b. at Philadelphia, Feb. 21, 1837; d. Dec. 27, 1896. American diplomat and author; son of John Meredith Read (1797-1874). He served (1869 et seq.) as U.S. consul general at Paris, and was U.S. minister resident (1873-79; as chargé d'affaires from 1876) to Greece. Author of A Historical Inquiry Concerning Henry Hudson (1866) and Historic Studies in Vaud, Berne, and Savoy; from Roman Times to Voltaire, Rousseau and Gibbon (1897).

Read, Nathan. b. at Warren, Mass., July 2, 1759; d. at Belfast, Me., Jan. 20, 1849. American inventor, manufacturer, and legislator. He was graduated (1781) from Harvard, became an apothecary at Salem, where he began experimenting with devices for steam navigation, and in 1791 was granted patents for a chain-wheel system for boat propulsion, a portable multitubular boiler, and an improved double-acting steam engine. He also patented (1798) a device for cutting and heading nails, having already formed (1796) the Salem Iron Factory for the making of marine equipment. He served (1800 et seq.) as a member of Congress.

Read, Opie. b. at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 22, 1852; d. at Chicago, Nov. 2, 1939. American writer. He was editor (1878-81) of the Arkansas Gazette, was on the staff (1881-83) of the Cleveland Leader, and was founder (1883) and editor (1883-91) of the humorous Arkansas Traveler. He engaged (1891 et seq.) in literary work at Chicago. His adventure stories include Len Gansett (1885),

A Tennessee Judge (1893), The Jacklins (1895), The Starbucks (1902), An American in New York (1905), Old Lim Jacklin (1905), The Mystery of Margaret (1907), and Gold Gause Veil (1927).

Read, Thomas Buchanan. b. in Chester County, Pa., March 12, 1822; d. at New York, May 11, 1872. American poet and painter, author of the poem Sheridan's Ride. He wrote The New Pastoral (1855), The House by the Sea (1856), Sylvia (1857), The Wagoner of the Alleghanies (1862), and A Summer Story, Sheridan's Ride, and Other Poems (1865). His Poetical Works (3 vols.) appeared in 1866.

Reade (rēd), Charles. b. at Ipsden House, Oxfordshire, England, June 8, 1814; d. at London, April 11, 1884. English novelist and dramatist. He was graduated from Oxford (Magdalen College) in 1835, elected to a Vinerian fellowship at Oxford in 1842, and called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1843. Although Reade wished to be remembered primarily as a dramatist, he is known for his novels, and chiefly for The Cloister and the Hearth (1861), which portrays the tragic love story of the parents of Erasmus against the colorful background of the early Renaissance. This masterpiece, like much of Reade's other fiction, was based on his documentary method of compiling data from reliable printed sources and, when possible, from expert testimony and personal experience. It was this method that gave conviction to Reade's novels of purpose and established his reputation as an effective social reformer. Written in the humanitarian tradition of Charles Dickens, these novels are It is Never Too Late to Mend (1856), which castigated the separate system of English penal discipline; Hard Cash (1863), which revealed the iniquities of English lunacy laws and private lunatic asylums; Foul Play (1868), which censured the insurance frauds of ship-scuttlers; Put Yourself in His Place (1870), which exposed the terroristic discipline of lawless English trade unions; and A Woman-Hater (1877), which assisted Sophia Jex-Blake in her pioneering efforts to break the male monopoly of medicine and open British medical schools to women. Reade's other significant fiction includes two charming portraits, Peg Woffington (1853, a reworking of a play, Masks and Faces, that he had written with Tom Taylor in 1852) and Christie Johnstone (1853), and three energetic psychological novels, Griffith Gaunt (1866), A Terrible Temptation, wherein Reade, in the guise of Rolfe, describes his literary workshop (1871), and A Simpleton (1873).

Reade, William Winwood. b. at Ipsden, Oxfordshire, England, Jan. 30, 1838; d. at Wimbledon, England, April 24, 1875. English traveler in Africa, and novelist; nephew of Charles Reade.

Reader's Digest, The. Monthly magazine established by DeWitt Wallace in 1922, featuring condensations of articles originally printed in other publications. The magazine also appears in Braille, on phonographic records, and in various foreign editions. Its circulation of about 11 million (domestic and foreign) gives it the largest circulation in the U.S. and the world. Original material is now accepted, but the publication has maintained its policy of not carrying advertising in the domestic edition.

Reading (rēd'ing), 1st Marquis of. [Title of Rufus Daniel Isaacs; additional title, Viscount Erleigh.] b. at London, Oct. 10, 1860; d. there, Dec. 30, 1935. English politician. He served (1904-13) as a Liberal member of Parliament. He was solicitor general (1910) and attorney general (1910-13). He was the first attorney general to be a cabinet member. He served as lord chief justice (1913-21) of England. He was several times during World War I a special envoy to the U.S., and in 1918 was appointed ambassador to the U.S., serving until 1919. He became viceroy and governor general (1921-26) of India, facing the application of the newly enacted Government of India Act and the resultant agitation by the Nationalists and other dissidents. Briefly he held the post of foreign secretary (1931) in MacDonald's first national government, and was installed (1934) as lord warden of the Cinque Ports.

Reading. County borough, and the county seat of Berkshire, in S England, situated on the river Kennet near its confluence with the Thames, ab. 36 mi. W of London by rail. An almost continuous line of towns now stretches along the Thames from London to Reading. It is the marketing center of a large agricultural district, and a great railway center. Leading has manufactures of biscuits, iron, ale, agricultural implements, clothing, and pottery, among others. It contains ruins of a Benedictine abbey, founded in 1121, and is the seat of University College. Its site was the headquarters of the Danes in their inroad on Wessex in 871 and was burned by them in 1006. During the English Civil War, it was taken by the Parliamentarians under Robert Devereux, 3rd Earl of Essex, in 1643. Pop. 114,176 (1951).

Reading. Town in E Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, ab. 12 mi. NW of Boston; residential suburban community. 14,006 (1950).

Reading. [Former name, Vorheestown.] City in SW Ohio, in Hamilton County; manufactures of beer, lithographs, fireworks, matches, and chemicals. It was laid out in 1798. Pop. 7,836 (1950).

Reading. City in SE Pennsylvania, county seat of Berks County, on the Schuylkill River ab. 50 mi. NW of Philadelphia; manufactures include textiles, hosiery, metal products, and pretzels. It is the seat of Albright College. Laid out in 1748, it became a city in 1847. Pop. of city 110,568 (1940), 109,320 (1950); of urbanized area, 154,931 (1950).

Reading, John. b. 1677; d. Sept. 2, 1764. English organist. He was organist of Dulwich College (1696-98) and at London (1707 et seq.). Author of A Book of New Anthems.

Reading Gaol (jāl), The Ballad of. See Ballad of Reading Gaol, The.

Reagan (rē'gan), John Henninger. b. in Sevier County, Tenn., Oct. 8, 1818; d. at Palestine, Tex., March 6, 1905. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Texas (1857-61 and 1875-87), was postmaster general of the Confederacy (1861-65), and (for a short time) acting secretary of the Confederate treasury. He was a U.S. senator (1887-91), resigning to accept the chairmanship of the railroad commission of the state of Texas.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 154 U.S. 362 (1894). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding an injunction issued by a federal circuit court against the enforcement of rates fixed by a state railroad commission. The court affirmed its power to invalidate rate schedules prescribed by legislative enactment in instances where due process of law had been denied.

Real Academia Española (rā.āl' ā.kā.ñā'myā es.pā.nyō.ā). Spanish name of Academy, Royal Spanish.

Réal del Sarte (rā.āl del sār't), Louis Maxime. b. at Paris, May 2, 1888— . French sculptor. He is known for the allegorical monuments Morts des Armées de Champagne and Morts de Compiègne.

Realms of Being, The. Title of a series of philosophical works by George Santayana including Septicism and Animal Faith (1923), The Realm of Essence (1927), The Realm of Matter (1930), The Realm of Truth (1938), and The Realm of Spirit (1940). The viewpoint set forth in these volumes supplements and revises his earlier series, The Life of Reason (5 vols., 1905-06).

Rea Silvia (rē.ā sil'vī.ā). See Rhea Silvia.

Reason and Romanticism. Volume of literary criticism by Herbert Read, published in 1926.

Reate (rē.ā'tē). Ancient name of Rieti.

Réaumur (rē.ā.mūr), René Antoine Ferchault de. b. at La Rochelle, France, Feb. 28, 1683; d. on his estate, Bermondrie, Maine, France, Oct. 18, 1757. French physicist and naturalist, best known as the inventor (c1731) of the Réaumur thermometer. The scale of this thermometer is graduated so that the space between the freezing point and the boiling point of water is divided into 80 degrees. He also invented a type of porcelain named for him, investigated several aspects of zoology, including regeneration of limbs in crustaceans and the action of gastric juice in birds, and contributed to physical chemistry, developing an improved method of iron manufacture. His chief work is Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire naturelle des insectes (1734-42).

Reay (rā), 11th Baron. Title of Mackay, Donald James.

Rebecca (rē.bek'ā). [Also, Rebekah.] In the Bible, the sister of Laban, wife of the patriarch Isaac and mother of Esau and Jacob. Gen. xxii, xxiv, etc.

Rebecca. Character in Sir Walter Scott's novel Ivanhoe; a Jewess, the daughter of Isaac of York.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (sun'ī.bruk). Novel by Kate Douglas Wiggin, published in 1903.

Rebecca West (west). See West, Rebecca.

Rebecca (rē.bek). Henri Benjamin Constant de. See Constant de Rebecque, Henri Benjamin.

Rebellion, Great. In English history, the English Civil War, waged by the Parliamentary army against Charles I from 1642 to his execution in 1649, and the subsequent maintenance by force of a government opposed to the excluded sovereign Charles II until the Restoration in 1660.

Rebellion, the. In Scottish history, the two great Jacobite insurrections (1715-16, 1745-46).

Rebellion, War of the. [Also, "the Rebellion."] In American history, the Civil War. The term has little usage today.

Rebello da Silva (rē.bel'lo dā sil'vā), Luís Augusto. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, April 1, 1822; d. Sept. 19, 1871. Portuguese historian, novelist, and political orator.

Rebêlo (rē.bā'lo), Marques. [Pseudonym of Eddy Dias da Cruz.] b. at Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 6, 1907—. Brazilian novelist, short-story writer, and journalist, whose works depict contemporary life in his native city.

Reber (rē.ber), Napoléon Henri. b. at Mulhouse, France, Oct. 21, 1807; d. at Paris, Nov. 21, 1880. French composer, a professor (1851 et seq.) at the Paris Conservatory. His works include comic operas such as La Nuit de Noël (1848), Le Père Gaillard (1852), and Les Dames Capitaines (1857), the opera Naim, a ballet, a cantata, symphonies, chamber music, piano pieces, songs, and liturgical compositions.

Rebikov (rā'byi.kof), Vladimir Ivanovich. b. at Krasnovarsk, Russia, 1866; d. at Yalta, in the Crimea, Dec. 1, 1920. Russian composer, an exponent of extreme modernism in composition and one of the first to employ the whole-tone scale and unresolved dissonances. Among his compositions are the operas In the Storm (1894) and The Christmas Tree (1903). He also composed orchestral suites, symphonic poems, choral works, church music, and a pantomime.

Reboux (rē.bō), Paul. b. at Paris, May 21, 1877—. French writer. Author of Les Matinales (1897), Les Iris noires (1898), Trente-deux poèmes d'amour (1921), and other poems; of several novels; and of much miscellaneous critical writing. He is best known for a famous series of parodies of contemporary writers, À la manière de (1908; with Charles Muller; later editions in two volumes and augmented with further parodies), called by critics the most successful French literary satire of recent times.

Récarnier (rā.kā.myā), Madame. [Maiden name, Jeanne Françoise Julie Adélaïde Bernard.] b. at Lyons, France, Dec. 4, 1777; d. at Paris, May 11, 1849. French leader of society during the Napoleonic era. She was married at 15 to Monsieur Jacques Récarnier, who was nearly three times her age. For many years her beauty and intelligence attracted a brilliant circle to her salon. She was exiled from Paris by Napoleon because of her friendships with various figures who were looked on with disfavor by the government. Among her friends were Madame de Staël, Châteaubriand (who wished to marry her after the death of her husband in 1830), and Constant. Her Souvenirs et correspondance were edited by her niece, Madame Lenormant, in 1859.

Recanatini (rā.kā.nā'tē). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Marches, in the province of Macerata, S of Ancona; market town for agricultural products. The town was included in Pepin's donation to the Roman Catholic Church (774 A.D.) and from then until 1860 remained with brief interruptions under papal rule. Buildings of tourist interest escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 16,823 (1936); of town, 5,354 (1936).

Recife (rē.sē'fē). [Also, Pernambuco.] City in N Brazil, capital of the state of Pernambuco, on the E coast; seaport for sugar, cotton, and coffee. Bridges connect its three parts: Recife ("the reef"), the island of São Antonio, and Boa Vista on the mainland. Founded in 1536, it was controlled by the Dutch in the period 1630-54. Pop. 522,466 (1950).

Recita (rā.chē.tsi). See Reșița.

Recited at the Commemoration of the Living and Dead Soldiers of Harvard University. [Also, Com- memoration Ode.] Ode by James Russell Lowell in memory of the members of Harvard College who had served in the Civil War, read at the memorial exercises at Cambridge in 1865. Privately printed in that year, it was included in The Cathedral (1877).

Recklinghausen (rek'ling.hou.zən). Industrial city in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, ab. 30 mi. SW of Münster. It has coal mines, railroad repair shops, and machine, leather, chemical, textile, and ceramics manufactures. The city was in the 12th and 13th centuries under the sovereignty of the archbishops of Cologne, in the 14th century it was a member of the Hanseatic League, and it passed to Prussia in 1815. It was heavily bombed during World War II, and was occupied by Allied troops on April 3, 1945. Pop. 104,791 (1950).

Recklinghausen, Friedrich Daniel von. b. at Gütersloh, Westphalia, Germany, Dec. 2, 1833; d. at Strasbourg, Aug. 26, 1910. German pathologist. His investigations, especially with relation to diseases of the circulatory system and the bones and to certain forms of tumor, made important additions to medical science.

Reclamation Act of 1902. [Called the Newlands Act.] Act of the U.S. Congress passed in 1902 which authorized the federal government to use funds from the sale of public lands for developing irrigation projects. The reclamation service of the Department of Interior was empowered to construct such works for reclaiming arid and semiarid public tracts and to sell these improved lands to settlers.

Reclus (re.klü), Jean Jacques Élisée. b. March 15, 1830; d. July 4, 1905. French geographer. Some of his works were first published in the Tour du Monde and the Revue des Deux Mondes and republished in book form. They include La Terre (1867-68), Les Phénomènes terrestres, le monde et les météores (1872; republished in English as The Ocean), and Voyage à la Sierra Nevada de Sainte-Marthe. His greatest work was the Nouvelle géographie universelle (20 vols., 1875-94). In 1871 Reclus was sentenced to imprisonment in a penal colony for life because of his connection with the Paris Commune, but the sentence was commuted to banishment at the intercession of numerous distinguished scientists, and he lived at Clarens, Switzerland, until the amnesty of 1879 permitted his return to Paris.

Recoaro (rē.kō.ä'ró). Commune and town in N Italy, in the province of Vicenza, ab. 20 mi. NE of Verona; health resort. Pop. of commune, ab. 7,000; of town, ab. 1,200.

Reconstruction. Phase of U.S. history (1865-77) from the close of the Civil War to the final reestablishment of home rule in the South, during which the major policies of the U.S. government were in the hands of the Radical Republicans who dominated Congress. The chief national problem of this period was the restoration of the Southern states of the defeated Confederacy to their normal and constitutional relations within the Union. That Radical opposition to Lincoln's generous and conciliatory plan of reconstruction (1863) would have created difficulties for him had he lived is indicated by his pocket veto of the Wade-Davis Bill and the Radical counterattack launched by the Wade-Davis Manifesto (Aug. 5, 1864). While President Andrew Johnson was initially sympathetic to the Radicals, his subsequent repudiation of their harsh and vengeful policy brought to a head that antagonism between president and Congress which had its roots in the activities of the Congressional Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. By the close of 1866 the Radicals had the upper hand and proceeded, under the leadership of Thaddeus Stevens, to carry out a program of virtually dictatorial control aimed at punishing the South for armed rebellion. The impeachment and trial of President Johnson (which failed by only one vote) was followed by an extensive body of Reconstruction legislation designed chiefly to secure the civil rights of the Negro freedmen and to assure the supremacy of the Republican Party. In effect, the Radicals compelled the Southern states to ratify the Fourteenth Amendment as the price of their readmission to the Union. The defeat of Johnson's moderate policy saw the establishment under federal military occupation of puppet state governments in the South. The exploitation and manipulation of Negro votes, and the activities of state legislatures under the domination of carpetbaggers and scalawags, caused widespread resentment among Southerners. Combined with the burning issue of racial relations between the whites and the Negroes, these episodes of political corruption only served to exacerbate the wounds which Reconstruction was supposed to heal. In 1869 the last states of the former Southern Confederacy were readmitted to the Union, and in the same year the Fifteenth Amendment was passed with the ulterior purpose of continuing in the South the existence of the Republican state governments. The ensuing period witnessed the heyday of the Ku Klux Klan and the gradual restoration of Southern home rule under the banner of white supremacy. The years of social and political friction and disorder helped fix the pattern of Southern development up to the present day. The evils which Reconstruction had set out to cure had become even more intense, and Southern reaction against the imposed cure led to the creation of the so-called solid South and virtual one-party rule in that region. President Hayes's withdrawal (1877) of federal troops from the South signalized the formal end of Reconstruction. Politically, the South had once more gained its local independence; economically, it was left all but worn and wasted, and under the domination of Eastern capital; socially, it had still to deal with the aggravated problem of racial relations. In the years that followed, the friendly relations between North and South were gradually resumed, and Henry Grady's vision of a "New South" indicated that bitter memories of Reconstruction and even romantic recollections of a "Lost Cause" were being discarded in favor of a growing harmony between the sections. By the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, it was plain that the claims of national unity were superior to those of sectional preference and provincial consciousness.

Reconstruction and Development, International Bank for. See International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation. [Called the RFC.] U.S. government agency established by a special act of the U.S. Congress in 1932 with the object of stimulating the flow of credit and reviving American industrial activity. The RFC was empowered to make loans to railroads, banks, insurance companies, and other businesses, and to states and other public bodies. Among the subsidiaries of the RFC which were set up during World War II were the War Damage Corporation, Defense Supplies Corporation, Defense Plan Corporation, Rubber Reserve Company, and Metals Reserve Company.

Reconde (rek'örd), Robert. b. at Tenby, Wales, c1510; d. at London, 1558. British mathematician and physician. He entered Oxford in 1525, was fellow of All Souls College in 1531, and was physician to Edward VI and Queen Mary Tudor. He wrote The Grounde of Artes, teaching the Perfect Worke and Practise of Arithmetike (1540), The Pathway to Knowledge, containing the First Principles of Geometry (1551), The Castle of Knowledge (1551), and the first English book on algebra (1557). Most of his works are in the form of dialogues between the pupil and his master.

Recouly (re.kō.lē), Raymond. b. at St-Pons-de-Mauchens, France, June 14, 1876; d. at Montpeller, Hérault, France, Sept. 12, 1950. French journalist and historian. Author of Foch, le vainqueur de la guerre (1919), Histoire de la troisième république (1927), De Bismarck à Poincaré (1932), and others.

Rector of Wyck (wik), The. Novel by May Sinclair, published in 1925.

Reculver (rē.kul'vēr). [Also: Reculvers (rē.kul'vēr); Latin, Regulbium.] Place on the coast of Kent, England, ab. 9 mi. NE of Canterbury.

Recuyell of the Histories of Troye (re.ku'yēl; his'tō-ri-z; trōi'). First book printed in English. A folio volume of 351 leaves, it does not contain the date of printing, nor the name and place of the printer; but it appears from the introduction that it was translated from the French by William Caxton between the years 1469 and 1471.

Red. See Red River.

Redan (rē.dan'). Fortification defending Sevastopol in the Crimean War. It was stormed by the British on Sept. 8, 1855, but immediately abandoned by them.

Redan (rā.dān), Karl. Pseudonym of Converse, Charles Crozat.

Red Badge of Courage: An Episode of the American Civil War, The. Novel by Stephen Crane, published in 1895, presenting a study in the psychology of a young soldier facing combat for the first time. Crane, at the time he wrote the work, had never seen a battle. His knowledge of warfare was based upon a reading of Civil War military engagements and Tolstoy's War and Peace.

Red Bank. Borough in C New Jersey, in Monmouth County, on the Shrewsbury River ab. 25 mi. S of New York; residential suburb, with light manufactures. 12,743 (1950).

Red Bank. Locality in SW New Jersey, now in the borough of National Park, in Gloucester County, on the Delaware River ab. 7 mi. S of Philadelphia: site of a Revolutionary War battle (1777).

Red Bluff. City in N California, county seat of Tehama County, in an area of wheatfields and vineyards. 4,905 (1950).

Red Book of Hergest (her'gest), The. Collection of ancient Welsh tales, 11 of which were translated and included by Lady Charlotte Guest in her Mabinogion. It is a manuscript of the 14th century, preserved at Jesus College, Oxford. It contains a chronology from the time of Adam to 1318 A.D. and a chronological history of the Saxons to 1376.

Red Branch. In Old Irish legend, the organized band of warriors of King Conchobhar of Ulster. They were the bravest and most accomplished in all Ireland in the 1st century A.D. More than 100 stories about them are extant. Among the 12 greatest chiefs of the Red Branch were Cúchulainn and the three sons of Uisnech. The great hall set aside for the feasts of the warriors of the Red Branch was also called the Red Branch.

Redburn: His First Voyage (red'bérn). Novel by Herman Melville, published in 1849.

Redcar (red'kär). Municipal borough, seaside resort, and manufacturing town in NE England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, situated near the mouth of the river Tees, ab. 8 mi. NE of Middlesbrough, ab. 247 mi. N of London by rail. The town has a steel industry. 27,512 (1951).

Red Cloud. b. on Blue Creek, Neb., 1822; d. at Pine Ridge, S.D., Dec. 10, 1909. American Indian chief of the Oglalas, a branch of the Teton Sioux. He led (1866-69) the Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in their battles against the U.S. government, and in 1881 was removed as head of the Oglalas when he threatened a government Indian agent.

Red Cross. International philanthropic society founded to carry out the humanitarian aims formulated at the Geneva Convention of 1864. Its original objects were to care for the wounded in war and secure the neutrality of nurses, hospitals, and other medical services, and to relieve suffering occasioned by pestilence, floods, fire, and other calamities. The society was established through the efforts of Henri Dunant. The president of the American National Red Cross Society from 1881 to 1904 was Clara Barton.

Red Cross Knight. Hero of the first book of the Faerie Queene, by Edmund Spenser. He typifies holiness and represents the spirit of the Anglican Church.

Red Cut Heights. Unincorporated community in NE Texas, in Bowie County. 2,563 (1950).

"Red Dean." See Johnson, Hewlett.

Red Death, The Masque of the. See Masque of the Red Death, The.

Red Deer. City in S central Alberta, Canada, situated on the Red Deer River midway between Edmonton and Calgary, with which it is connected by rail and road: trading center for the surrounding grain-producing and dairy-farming area; petroleum is produced in the vicinity. 7,575 (1951).

Redding (red'ing). City in N California, county seat of Shasta County, N of San Francisco: principal shipping point for a fruit-growing, lumbering, and mining district. 10,256 (1950).

Redditch (red'ich). Urban district and industrial center in W England, in Worcestershire, ab. 13 mi. S of Birmingham, ab. 128 mi. NW of London by rail. It has long been noted for its manufacture of needles and fishhooks. It has manufactures of steel-plate storage batteries (the only place in Britain where these are made), aluminum alloys, forgings, castings, tubings, and extrusions (one of the largest aluminum factories in the country is here), chromium ware and chrome plate, springs, bicycles, and motorcycles. The first reparations factory to be removed from Germany following World War II (for the manufacture of automatic screw machines) was reërected at Redditch. 29,184 (1951).

"Red Eagle." See Weatherford, William.

Redemption, The. Trilogy by Charles Gounod, produced at the Birmingham festival in 1882.

Reden (rā'den). See Rheden.

Reder (rā'dér), Heinrich von. b. at Mellrichstadt, Germany, 1824; d. at Munich, Germany, 1909. German poet and one-time army officer. He was associated with the younger group of contributors to the journal Die Gesellschaft (1885 et seq.). Volans Heer, eine Märe aus dem Odenwald (1892) was his major effort.

Redesdale (rēdz'däl). Valley of the river Rede (a tributary of the Tyne), in NE England, in Northumberland. It extends to the river Tyne. Length, ab. 21 mi.

Redesdale, 1st Baron. Title of Freeman-Mitford, John.

Redesdale, 1st Baron (of the 2nd creation). See Freeman-Mitford, Algernon Bertram.

Redfield (red'fēld). City in E central South Dakota, county seat of Spink County. 2,655 (1950).

Redfield, Edward Willis. b. at Bridgeville, Del., 1869—. American landscape painter. Examples of his work are in many American galleries and museums.

Redfield, Isaac Fletcher. b. at Weathersfield, Vt., April 10, 1804; d. at Boston, March 23, 1876. American jurist.

Redfield, William Cox. b. at Albany, N.Y., June 18, 1858; d. at New York, June 13, 1932. American businessman and author, U.S. secretary of commerce (1913-19) under Wilson. He was a member of Congress (1911-13), and an advocate of downward revision of the tariff. He published Japanese Industry (1912), The New Industrial Day (1912), and We and the World (1927).

Red Gap, Ruggles of. See Ruggles of Red Gap.

Redgautlet (red.gäut'let, -gōnt'-). Novel by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1824.

Redgrave (red'gräv). Richard. b. at London, April 30, 1804; d. Dec. 14, 1888. English genre and landscape painter, inspector general of art schools and surveyor of the royal pictures. He published (with his brother) A Century of Painters of the English School (1866).

Redhill (red'hil). See under Reigate, England.

Red Horse Vale. Valley in W England, in Gloucestershire, ab. 10 mi. SE of Cheltenham.

Red House Mystery, The. Detective novel by A. A. Milne, published in 1922.

Redi (rā'dē), Francesco. b. at Arezzo, Italy, Feb. 18, 1626; d. at Pisa, Italy, March 1, 1698. Italian naturalist and poet. By careful isolation of meat, he demonstrated that the spontaneous generation of maggots is a superstition, and that access to the meat by flies is a necessary preliminary to the hatching of maggots. He wrote Esperienze intorno alla generazione degli insetti (Experiments on the Generation of Insects, 1668) and a famous dithyramb, Bacco in Toscana (Bacchus in Tuscany, 1685).

Red Jacket. [Indian name, Sagoyewatha.] b. at Old Castle, near Geneva, N.Y., c1758; d. at Seneca Village, N.Y., Jan. 20, 1830. Chief of the Senecas, noted as an orator. At first an opponent of the Americans, he was won over to their side and supported them in the War of 1812. He nevertheless resisted strongly any introduction of the white man's ways, holding firmly to Indian tradition; especially was he an opponent of Christianity, a position that led at one time to his deposition as chief of a tribe that had been almost completely converted. However, he was able, by a strong justification of his stand, to regain his chieftaincy.

Red Knight: A Romance, The. Novel by Francis Brett Young, published in 1921.

Red Lady of Paviland (pav'i.land). Fossil man excavated in South Wales in the early 19th century. The original finder disregarded the evidence of the accompanying contemporaneous prehistoric finds and classified these remains as those of a woman buried about the time of the Roman conquest of Britain. Later study, however, recognized the Red Lady as the remains of a young Cro-Magnon man, buried with his ceremonial covering of red ochre.

Red Lake. Lake in N Minnesota, in Beltrami County, the largest entirely within Minnesota. Its outlet is by the Red Lake River. Length, ab. 35 mi.; area, 441 sq. mi.

Red Lake River. River in NW Minnesota which joins the Red River opposite Grand Forks, N.D. Length, ab. 190 mi.

Redlands (red'landz). City in S California, in San Bernardino County, ab. 7 mi. SE of San Bernardino: packing and processing plants for citrus, vegetables, and dairy products; seat of the University of Redlands. 18,429 (1950).

Redlich (rät'lich), Joseph. b. at Göding (Hodonin), in Moravia, June 18, 1869; d. 1936. Austrian jurist and statesman. He was a member of parliament (1906-18), and minister of finance in Lammash's cabinet (1918). His professorship at Harvard (1926-35) was interrupted by brief service (1931) as finance minister in Buresch's cabinet.

Red Lion. Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in York County. 5,119 (1950).

Red Lodge. City in S Montana, county seat of Carbon County, ab. 174 mi. SE of Butte, in a bituminous coal-mining area. 2,730 (1950).

Redman (red'man), Ben Ray. [Pseudonym, Jeremy Lord.] b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Feb. 21, 1896—. American journalist, writer, and translator. He was literary editor (1922-29) of The Spur, editor (1926-37) of the "Old Wine in New Bottles" book column in the New York Herald Tribune, and subsequently a member of the production staff of Universal Pictures. Author of Masquerade (verse, 1923), Marriage for Three (comedy, 1929), The Perfect Crime (detective story, 1929), and other books. He published detective stories, as The Bannerman Case (1935) and The Meeker Case (1940), under the pseudonym Jeremy Lord. His translations from the French include Jean Giraudoux's Suzanne and the Pacific (1923) and Romain Rolland's Annette and Silvie (1925).

Redmayne (red'mān), Sir Richard Augustine Studdert. b. at South Dene, Gateshead-upon-Tyne, England, July 22, 1865—. English mining and civil engineer.

Redmond (red'mond). City in C Oregon, in Deschutes County. 2,956 (1950).

Redmond, John Edward. b. at Waterford, 1851; d. at London, March 6, 1918. Irish Nationalist politician, leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party from 1900. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was called to the bar (Gray's Inn) in 1886 and to the Irish bar in 1887. He was a member of Parliament from 1881. With the fall of C. S. Parnell, Redmond became (1891) the leader of the Parnellite faction and in 1900 managed to combine the Nationalist parties into one party devoted to attaining home rule within the empire. This group held the balance of power in Commons and Redmond used this influence in the parliamentary crisis of 1909-11 to destroy the veto power of the House of Lords. When the Home Rule Bill of 1912 was introduced, he supported it, but he opposed vehemently any compromise when the Unionists of Ulster threatened a separated Ireland. Though he supported the Irish Volunteers as a counterforce to the Ulster Volunteers under E. H. Carson's leadership in northern Ireland, he opposed the growing power of the Sinn Féin in southern Ireland, and was especially bitter over the 1916 Easter Rebellion of the extremists, which he denounced in Commons. He refused a post in the 1915 coalition cabinet. Home rule had passed in 1914 but application had been suspended until the end of the war. Redmond supported the institution of home rule, even with Ulster outside the new Ireland, temporarily at least, but the extremist Sinn Féin views gained sway and leadership of the nationalist movement passed to Éamon de Valera.

Red Mountains. Range in Wyoming, near Yellowstone Lake. The highest point is Mount Sheridan.

Red Oak. [Former name, Red Oak Junction.] City in SW Iowa, county seat of Montgomery County; manufactures of calendars. It was renamed in 1901. Pop. 6,526 (1950).

Redon (rē.dōn). Town in NW France, in the department of Ille-et-Vilaine, situated at the junction of the Vilaine River with the canal from Nantes to Brest, ab. 37 mi. SW of Rennes. The Church of Saint Sauveur is a noteworthy building in Romanesque style. 6,565 (1946).

Redon, Odilon. b. at Bordeaux, France, April 20, 1840; d. at Paris, July 6, 1916. French painter, lithographer, engraver, pastel artist, and illustrator, a forerunner of both surrealism and expressionism. He was a sickly child, born of wealthy parents, and his first teacher was Armand Clavaud, a botanist. He learned etching from Rodolphe Bresdin, then went to Paris to study under Corot, Courbet, and Fantin-Latour. In 1870 his education was interrupted by the Franco-Prussian War, which deeply affected him. He was friendly with the impressionists, but remained independent of them. He did not start to paint until late in life but he published his first album of lithographs in 1879 (In the Dream). Shortly after, he published To Edgar Poe, Origins, and Homage to Goya. His work is highly symbolic and mystical, and his flowers are among the most hauntingly beautiful in art history. A list of his works includes Flowers in a Vase, Women and Flowers, Chargers of the Sun, Child of Destiny, Nudes, Chaos, Living Centaur, Closed Eyes, Silence, Pegasus, Birth of Venus, and illustrations for E. Picard's The Oath and A. Remache's The Passing.

Redonella (rē.dōn.dē.lā). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, situated on the Bay of Vigo, ab. 15 mi. S of Pontevedra; port; manufactures linen goods and chinaware. 16,927 (1940).

Redondo Beach (rē.dōn'dō). City in S California, in Los Angeles County, on the Pacific SW of Los Angeles: residential suburban and seashore community. 25,226 (1950).

Redouté (rē.dō.tā), Pierre Joseph. b. at St.-Hubert, Belgium, July 10, 1759; d. at Paris, June 20, 1840. French painter of flowers, professor at the Museum of Natural History at Paris. He illustrated many botanical works.

Redoutensaal (rē.dō'ten.zal). Former ballroom of Maria Theresa at Vienna, which Max Reinhardt opened as a theater late in 1922. Here Reinhardt produced Carlo Gozzi's Turandot, Goethe's Clavigo, Molière's Misanthrope, and other plays. It was an intimate playhouse, with a platform stage and with a large screen as a permanent setting.

Redpath (rē'pāth), James. b. at Berwick-on-Tweed, England, 1833; d. at New York, Feb. 10, 1891. American abolitionist and author, now chiefly remembered for his activities in booking lecturers of various sorts throughout the U.S. He became a journalist at an early age, identified himself with the abolition movement, and acted as a war correspondent for Northern papers during the Civil War. He established the Lyceum Bureau (which quickly became generally known by his name) at Boston in 1868, and arranged lecture tours for many of the most notable figures of the 19th century. Among his works are Echoes of Harper's Ferry (1860), The John Brown Invasion (1860), The Public Life of Captain John Brown (1860), John Brown, the Hero (1862), and Talks about Ireland (1881).

Red Pony. The. Story of John Steinbeck, published in 1937 and reprinted in The Long Valley (1938).

"Red Prince." See Frederick Charles.

Red Ridinghood (rī'ding.hud), Little. [French, Le Chaperon Rouge; German, Rothkäppchen.] Nursery tale of oral tradition all over Europe, but especially common in W Europe. It is about a little girl who forgets her mother's command "to speak to no one whom she meets." She tells a wolf that she is going to her grandmother's cottage with some wine and bread. He reaches the cottage before her, eats her grandmother, and, when Little Red Ridinghood arrives, devours her also. In the German version, Rothkäppchen, as recorded by Grimm, a hunter comes and rips open the wolf, and Red Ridinghood and her grandmother are restored to life. This story is familiar to us not only through Grimm, but also through Perrault's French version, Le Chaperon Rouge.

Redriff (red'rif). Popular name of Rotherhithe.

Red River. Longest western tributary of the Mississippi, after the Missouri and the Arkansas. It rises in several fat, fāte, fir, āsk, fāre; net, nū, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, līte, pūll; ʔn, then; d, d o r j; s, s o sh; t, t o r ch; headstreams in the Llano Estacado of Texas, and is formed by the junction of Prairie Dog Town Fork and North Fork on the boundary between Texas and Oklahoma, flows through the SW part of Arkansas, traverses Louisiana, and joins the Mississippi. It is navigable to Shreveport, navigation above that point being partly checked by "rafts," or collections of driftwood, which formerly blocked the channel for 45 mi. Length, ab. 1,018 mi.; to headwaters of Prairie Dog Town Fork, ab. 1,500 mi.

Red River. [Also, Red River of the North.] River in the U.S. and Canada. It rises in W Minnesota, forms part of the boundary between Minnesota and North Dakota, traverses Manitoba, and flows into Lake Winnipeg. Near the city of Winnipeg, it is joined by the Assiniboine River. Length, ab. 355 mi.

Red River. See also under Tonkin.

Red River Expedition. In U.S. history, an unsuccessful Union expedition (March–May, 1864) up the Red River valley, for the purpose of recovering W Louisiana and occupying Arkansas and Texas. The federal land forces were commanded by N. P. Banks, the naval by D. D. Porter; the Confederate forces were commanded by Richard Taylor. The chief episodes were a Union defeat at Sabine Cross-Roads, a Union victory at Pleasant Hill, and the rescue of the Union fleet by Joseph Bailey.

Red River Expedition. In Canadian history, the expedition under Garnet Wolseley in 1870, which succeeded in putting down the insurrection under Louis Riel in the valley of the Red River (Red River of the North).

Red River Settlement. Name formerly given to the British colony settled in what has been since 1870 the Canadian province of Manitoba. It is traversed by the Red River (Red River of the North).

Red Rose. Emblem of the House of Lancaster in the Wars of the Roses.

Red Rover, The. Sea novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1827.

Redruth (red'ruth). Former urban district, now amalgamated with Camborne as Camborne-Redruth, in SW England, in Cornwall, ab. 9 mi. SW of Truro, ab. 289 mi. SW of London by rail. It was once an important copper and tin mining center, and some of the largest tin-mining companies now operating in the Far East still have their headquarters there. 9,904 (1931).

Red Saint, The. Historical novel by Warwick Deeping, published in 1909.

Red Sea. [Ancient (Latin) name, Sinus Arabicus.] Nearly landlocked sea situated between Africa and the Arabian Peninsula. It is connected with the Mediterranean Sea by the Gulf of Suez and the Suez Canal, and with the Indian Ocean by the Bab el Mandeb, the Gulf of Aden, and the Arabian Sea. It is bordered on its W coast by Egypt, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and Eritrea, and on its E coast by Saudi Arabia and Yemen. The surface waters become very warm in summer, reaching a maximum temperature of ab. 90° F. Because of intense evaporation, the salinity is also quite high. Length, ab. 1,400 mi.; area, ab. 169,000 sq. mi.; average depth, ab. 1,610 ft.; greatest known depth, ab. 7,740 ft. (in the C part, SW of Jidda).

Red Skins, The. Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1846. It is part of the trilogy Littlepage Manuscripts.

Reds of the Midi (mê.dê'). The. English translation, by Catharine A. Janvier, of the Provençal tale Li Rouge dón Mieujo, written by Félix Gras in 1896. It was published in 1898, before the appearance of the original or of its author's French translation, Les Rouges du Midi.

Red Sticks. In U.S. history, those Creek Indians who, expelled from their lands during the War of 1812, retired southward and continued hostile to the U.S. They were so called because in their principal village they erected a high pole and painted it red to signify their eagerness for the blood of the whites. Smaller sticks painted red were sometimes carried by warriors to symbolize hostility to the whites.

Redwald (red'wôld) or Rædwald (rad'wôld). d. c627. King of East Anglia. He accepted Christianity while he ruled under the influence of Ethelbert of Kent, but he became independent of Ethelbert and subsequently both Christ and the ancient gods were on equal footing in East Anglia. He defeated and killed (617) Ethelfrid of Northumbria and established Edwin, Ælla's son, on the throne.

Red Wing. b. probably near what is now Red Wing, Minn., c1750; d. c1825. Sioux chief. He aided the British during the War of 1812, but subsequently pursued a friendly policy toward the Americans.

Red Wing. City in SE Minnesota, county seat of Goodhue County, on the Mississippi River ab. 39 mi. SE of St. Paul; manufactures of marine motors, dairy products, pottery, and shoes. 10,645 (1950).

Redwood City (red'wud). City in C California, county seat of San Mateo County; a southern residential and industrial suburb of San Francisco. 25,544 (1950).

Redwood Falls. City in S Minnesota, county seat of Redwood County, on the Minnesota River. 3,813 (1950).

Ree (rê), Lough. Lake in the Irish Republic, forming part of the boundary between Connacht and Leinster provinces, and lying between Counties Roscommon, Longford, and Westmeath. It is an expansion of the river Shannon. Length, 16 mi.; greatest width, ab. 7 mi.

Reed (rêd), Douglas. b. at London, 1895—. English journalist and writer. He was engaged (1921 et seq.) as a newspaper correspondent, especially for the London Times, and established (1946) his own weekly newspaper, Tilings. His books include The Burning of the Reichstag (1934), Insanity Fair (1938), Nemesis? (1940), A Prophet at Home (1941), All Our Tomorrows (1942), The Next Horizon (1945), and Yeoman's Progress (1946).

Reed, Sir Edward James. b. at Sheerness, Kent, England, Sept. 20, 1830; d. Nov. 30, 1906. English marine engineer, designer of various vessels for the British, German, and other navies.

Reed, Henry (Hope). b. at Philadelphia, July 11, 1808; lost at sea, Sept. 27, 1854. American author; grandson of Joseph Reed. He was appointed professor of rhetoric and English literature in the University of Pennsylvania in 1835. He edited the works of William Wordsworth and Thomas Gray, and wrote Lectures on English Literature (1855), Lectures on English History and Tragic Poetry (1855), Lectures on the British Poets (1857), and others.

Reed, James A. b. near Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 9, 1861; d. near Fairview, Mich., Sept. 8, 1944. American lawyer and politician, who served (1911–29) as a U.S. senator from Missouri. He opposed U.S. entry into World War I and was a foe of the League of Nations. He was an unsuccessful contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928 and 1932.

Reed, John. b. at Portland, Ore., Oct. 22, 1887; d. at Moscow, Oct. 19, 1920. American journalist and poet. He was graduated (1910) from Harvard, became (1911) a member of the staff of the American Magazine, and in 1913 joined the staff of the socialist publication The Masses. Upon the outbreak of World War I, he went to Europe for the Metropolitan and accompanied various armies on the fronts. He married (January, 1917) Louise Bryant, and with her went to Russia, where they witnessed the October Revolution (1917) which brought the Bolsheviks into power. His observations at this time resulted in his most noted book, Ten Days That Shook the World (1919). He was a speaker at the All-Russian Soviet convention in January, 1918, and after his return to the U.S. was expelled (Aug. 30, 1919) from the Socialist Party. With other left-wingers he thereupon formed the Communist Labor Party, of which he was the head. He wrote its manifesto and platform and was editor of its organ, The Voice of Labor. While under indictment for sedition, he fled from the U.S. made his way to Russia, and became active as a speaker at Moscow. He died of typhus and was buried at the Kremlin. He was the author of The Day in Bokenia (1913), Insurgent Mexico (1914), The War in Eastern Europe (1916), Tumburlaine and Other Poems (1916), and Red Russia (1919). His Ten Days That Shook the World was widely translated and later appeared with an introduction by Lenin.

Reed, Joseph. b. at Trenton, N.J., Aug. 27, 1741; d. at Philadelphia, March 5, 1785. American patriot. He served in the Revolutionary War, was a member (1777, 1778) of the Continental Congress, and was president of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania (1778–81).

- Reed, Philip. d. Nov. 2, 1829. American politician. He was a U.S. senator from Maryland (1806-13) and a member of Congress (1817-19 and 1822-23). He commanded, as colonel of militia, the regiment of home guards which defeated the British under Sir Peter Parker at Moorefields, Md., Aug. 30, 1814.
- Reed, Stanley Forman. b. in Mason County, Ky., Dec. 31, 1834. American jurist. General counsel of the Federal Farm Board (1929-32) and of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (1932-35), he served as solicitor general (1935-38) of the U.S. He was an associate justice (1938 et seq.) of the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Reed, Thomas Brackett. b. at Portland, Me., Oct. 18, 1839; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 7, 1902. American lawyer and politician. He was elected (1867, 1868) to the Maine legislature and was chosen (1869) for the state senate. He was elected (1870) attorney general of Maine, a post he held for three years, resumed the practice of law after leaving that office, and later served as city solicitor for Portland. A Republican, he was elected (1876) to Congress, in which he served continuously until 1899. He played a leading role in the inquiry into the presidential election of 1876, was chairman of the judiciary committee, and became prominent as a member of the committee on rules by virtue of his attempts to reform House procedure. He became leader of the House Republicans after 1882 and was elected speaker on Dec. 2, 1889. His long-standing effort to revise House procedure bore fruit in the adoption (Feb. 14, 1890) of the noted Reed Rules, which freed the Congressional majority of obstructions and established party responsibility in the House. His differences with the expansionist policy of the McKinley administration led to Reed's resignation (Sept. 4, 1899).
- Reed, Thomas German. b. at Bristol, England, June 27, 1817; d. in Surrey, England, March 21, 1888. English musician and conductor. He was the originator in 1855 of a novelty known as "Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's Entertainment." It provided mild dramatic entertainment for persons who objected to the theater, and was very popular. Mrs. Thomas German Reed was Priscilla Horton (1818-95), an actress.
- Reed, Walter. b. in Gloucester County, Va., Sept. 13, 1851; d. in Washington, D.C., Nov. 22, 1902. American physician, surgeon (1875 et seq.) in the U.S. army. During the Spanish-American War he was the head of a board appointed to study the exhaustion and spread of typhoid fever in the camps of the volunteer troops in the U.S. In June, 1900, he was sent to Cuba at the head of a commission, with Aristides Agramonte, James Carroll, and Jesse Lazear, to study yellow fever. As a result of decisive experiments instituted by him it was proved that Dr. Carlos Juan Finlay was correct in his assumption that the germs of the disease are transmitted by a mosquito, Stegomyia fasciata (now known as Aedes aegypti). Knowing this, Dr. W. C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer at Havana, was able to eliminate yellow fever at Havana and later to apply the methods in Panama during the building of the Panama Canal. Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D.C., is named in Reed's honor.
- Reeder (rē'dēr), Andrew Horatio. b. July 12, 1807; d. at Easton, Pa., July 5, 1864. American politician. He was governor of the territory of Kansas (1854-55), but was removed by President Pierce for favoring the Free-Soil Party. He was elected U.S. senator from Kansas in 1856 under the Topeka constitution, but was refused admission.
- Reedley (rē'd'li). City in C California, in Fresno County: processing, canning, and shipping center for fruit. 4,135 (1950).
- Reed Rules. Rules governing the procedure of the House of Representatives which were sponsored by Speaker Thomas B. Reed of Maine and adopted on Feb. 14, 1890. The new rules greatly increased the power of the speaker (Reed was thereafter often called "Czar"), the quorum requirement was changed from a "voting" to a "present" quorum, the size of the Committee of the Whole was reduced, and changes were made in the order of business. As a result, changes were made that the business of the House was under the control of a small group of party leaders. The rules were finally amended in 1910 during the speakership of Joseph Cannon.
- Reedsburg (rēdz'bērg). City in S Wisconsin, in Sauk County: processing and shipping point for dairy products; woolen knitwear industry. 4,072 (1950).
- Reedy's Fort (rēdz'). Former name of Lewistown, Mont.
- Reedy (rē'di), William Marion. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 11, 1862; d. at San Francisco, July 28, 1920. American journalist, editor of Reedy's Mirror (1913-20). He became (1893) editor of the weekly Sunday Mirror (St. Louis), of which he became (1896) the owner, subsequently naming it Reedy's Mirror, a journal which achieved a national reputation as a cultural and critical force. Author of The Initiator (1901), The Law of Love (1905), and A Golden Book and The Literature of Childhood (1910).
- Reelfoot Lake (rēl'fūt). Lake E of the Mississippi River, in Lake and Obion counties, NW Tennessee. It was formed during the great earthquakes of 1811-12, when the waters of the Mississippi filled a depression formed by the earthquake. Length, ab. 19 mi.
- Rees (rēs), Abraham. b. at Llanbrynmar, Wales, 1743; d. June 9, 1825. British author. He edited Chambers's Cyclopaedia (1776-86) and Rees's Cyclopaedia (1802-20).
- Rees, John Krom. b. at New York, Oct. 27, 1851; d. there, March 9, 1907. American astronomer, professor of astronomy at Columbia University from 1881. He was professor of mathematics at Washington University, St. Louis (1876-81).
- Reese (rēs), Lizette Woodworth. b. at Huntingdon (now part of Baltimore), Jan. 9, 1856; d. Dec. 17, 1935. American poet and biographical writer, author of the popular sonnet Tears. Her volumes of verse included A Branch of May (1887), A Handful of Lavender (1891), A Quiet Road (1896), A Wayside Lute (1909), Spicewood (1920), Wild Cherry (1923), While April (1930), and Pastures (1933). She was author also of the autobiographical A Victorian Village (1929) and The York Road (1931).
- Reeve (rēv), Arthur Benjamin. b. at Patehogue, N.Y., Oct. 15, 1880; d. Aug. 9, 1936. American detective fiction writer, author of the Cosmopolitan Magazine series "Adventures of Craig Kennedy, Scientific Detective" (1910-18) and the books The Silent Bullet (1912), The Black Hand (1912), Poisoned Pen (1913), The Gold of the Gods (1915), Treasure Train (1917), The Soul Scar (1919), The Film Mystery (1921), The Clutching Hand (1934), Enter Craig Kennedy (1935), and The Stars Scream Murder (1936).
- Reeve, Clara. b. at Ipswich, Suffolk, England, 1729; d. there, Dec. 3, 1807. English novelist. Beginning (1772) her literary career with The Phoenix, a translation of John Barclay's Latin romance, Argenis, she also wrote The Progress of Romance (1785), a literary history, and The School for Widows (1791), a novel. She is remembered for The Old English Baron, a Gothic Story (1778), a novel originally published in 1777 as The Champion of Virtue. It is a supernatural tale written in the manner of Sir Horace Walpole.
- Reeve, Henry. b. at Norwich, England, Sept. 9, 1813; d. in Hampshire, England, Oct. 21, 1895. English writer. He was registrar of the Privy Council (1843-87), wrote on foreign affairs for the London Times (1840-55), and became editor of the Edinburgh Review in 1855. He published translations of Alexis de Toqueville's Democracy in America and France before the Revolution of 1789, and of F. P. G. Guizot's Washington. He published A Journal of the Reigns of King George IV and King William IV by Charles Greville in 1875, and sequels to that work in 1885 and 1887. He also published Royal and Republican France, a collection of historical essays (1872).
- Reeve, Tapping. b. at Brookhaven, Long Island, N.Y., in October, 1744; d. at Litchfield, Conn., Dec. 13, 1823. American jurist. He established a law school at Litchfield in 1784. He published various legal treatises.
- Reeves (rēvz), Arthur Middleton. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 7, 1856; d. near Hagerstown, Ind., Feb. 25, 1891. American philologist and historian. He studied in Europe, devoting himself particularly to the study of lelandic culture. Translator of J. T. Thoróddsen's Lad and Lass (1890) and author of The Finding of Wineland the Good (1890; enlarged ed., 1895). The latter work, a pioneering venture in its field, included translations and reproductions of Norse manuscripts relating to the discoveries of America by the Norsemen.

Reeves, Helen Buckingham. [Pseudonym: David Lyall; maiden name, Mathers; known as Helen Mathers.] b. at Crewkerne, Somersetshire, England, 1853; d. March 11, 1920. English novelist. Most of her works were signed Helen Mathers. She published Comin' Thro' the Rye (1875), Cherry Ripe (1877), My Lady Green Sleeves (1879), The Story of a Sin (1881), Found Out (1884), The Fashion of this World (1886), A Man of the Time (1894), and others.

Reeves, John Sims. b. at Woolwich, London, Sept. 26, 1818; d. at Worthing, England, Oct. 25, 1900. English tenor singer. He made his first appearance as a baritone at Newcastle in 1839, but from 1841 to 1843 he sang second tenor roles. Shortly afterward he went to Paris to study, and in 1847 appeared in tenor operatic roles in England. He was greatly admired also in oratorio.

Reeves, William Pember. b. at Lyttelton, New Zealand, Feb. 10, 1857; d. at London, May 16, 1932. New Zealand political leader, journalist, and author. Keenly interested in liberal social legislation, he was largely responsible for a New Zealand act making arbitration of labor disputes compulsory, the first such act in the world. He rose to the editorship of the Lyttelton Times (1889), was a member of Parliament (1887-96), and served in various ministries. He was New Zealand agent general at London (1896-1909), an associate of the British Fabians, director of the London School of Economics (full-time, 1909-17; part-time, until 1920), and chairman of the directors of the Bank of New Zealand (in which the government was a large shareholder) from 1917 to 1932. He was the author of State Experiments in Australia and New Zealand (1902), The Long White Cloud, a history of New Zealand (1898), and others.

Reeve's Tale (rēvz), The. One of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. He probably took it from Jean de Bove's fabliau De Gombert et des deux clercs, but it forms the sixth novel of the ninth day of Giovanni Boccaccio's Decameron.

Réflexions sur la violence (ră.flek.syon sür lâ vyo.lāns). Philosophical essay (1908; Eng. trans., Reflections on Violence, 1912) by Georges Sorel, on the role of, and the necessity for, violence in social progress. It was originally regarded as a socialist document but was eventually adopted by extreme conservatives like Benito Mussolini.

Reformation. Great religious revolution in the 16th century which led to the establishment of the Protestant churches. The Reformation assumed different aspects, and resulted in alterations of discipline or doctrine more or less fundamental in different countries and in different stages of its progress. Various reformers of great influence, as John Wycliffe and John Huss, had appeared before the 16th century, but the Reformation proper began nearly simultaneously in Germany under the lead of Martin Luther and in Switzerland under the lead of Huldreich Zwingli. The chief points urged by the Reformers were the need of justification by faith; the use and authority of the Scriptures and the right of private judgment in their interpretation; and the abandonment of the doctrine of transubstantiation, the adoration of the Virgin Mary and saints, the supremacy of the Pope, and various other doctrines and rites regarded by the Reformers as unscriptural. In the German Reformation the leading incidents were the publication at Wittenberg of Luther's 95 theses against indulgences in 1517, the excommunication of Luther in 1520, his testimony before the Diet of Worms in 1521, the spread of the principles in many of the German states, as Hesse, Saxony, and Brandenburg, and the opposition to them by the Emperor, the Diet and Confession of Augsburg in 1530, and the prolonged struggle between the Protestants and the Roman Catholics, ending with comparative religious equality in the Peace of Augsburg in 1555. The Reformation spread in Switzerland under Zwingli and John Calvin, in France, Hungary, Bohemia, the Scandinavian countries, the Low Countries, and elsewhere. In Scotland it was introduced (c1560) by John Knox. In England it led, in the reign of Henry VIII, to the abolition of the papal supremacy and the liberation from papal control of the Church of England, which, after a short Roman Catholic reaction under Mary Tudor, was firmly established under Elizabeth I. In many countries the Reformation occasioned an increased strength and zeal in the Roman Catholic Church, sometimes called the Counter Reformation.

Reformation Symphony. Mendelssohn's symphony No. 5 in D minor (Opus 107), written (1830) for the tercentenary celebration of the Augsburg Protestant Confession. It was not performed, however, till 1832, when it was given at Berlin.

Reform Bill. In English history, a bill for the purpose of enlarging the number of voters in elections for members of the House of Commons, and of removing inequalities in representation. The first (actually the third offered in two years) of these bills (often called specifically the Reform Bill), passed in 1832 by the Liberals after a violent struggle, disfranchised many rotten boroughs (boroughs with very few or no inhabitants), gave increased representation to the large towns, and enlarged the number of the holders of county and borough franchise. The effect of the second Reform Bill, passed by the Conservatives under Liberal pressure in 1867, was in the direction of a more democratic representation, and the same tendency was further shown in the Franchise Bill passed by the Liberals in 1884, which extended suffrage to nearly all men. In 1918 suffrage was given to all men and to women over 30; in 1928, all persons over 21 were enfranchised.

Reformed State Party. Dutch political party which supports the observance of Calvinistic principles in political and governmental affairs.

Reform War. Civil war in Mexico (1857-61). It arose out of the adoption (Feb. 5, 1857) of the constitution of Mexico, which greatly restricted the power of the clergy. This, and some acts of President Ignacio Comonfort which were regarded as hostile to the Church, led to a reaction and the deposition of Comonfort (Jan. 21, 1858). His legal successor, Benito Juárez, established a government at Veraacruz (May 4, 1858), and this became the focus of the "liberal," "reform," or "constitutional" party. The reactionists made Félix Zuloaga president of Mexico, but he was deposed on Dec. 23, 1858, and General Miguel Miramón, their principal military leader, took his place. The government of Juárez was recognized by the U.S., greatly strengthening his cause. On July 12, 1859, he issued his famous decree confiscating Church property, and thus increasing the breach. The war, on the side of Juárez, was generally carried on by his generals, but Miramón often commanded his own forces. The movements and countermovements were confusing. The movements and during the whole period the interior was in a state of anarchy, the prey of guerrilla parties. Miramón resigned and secretly left Mexico, Dec. 24, 1860, after being defeated in the field, and Juárez entered Mexico City, Jan. 11, 1861. The confusion did not entirely cease with Miramón's defeat, and it eventually opened the way to the French intervention and the short-lived empire of Maximilian.

Refugio (rē.fu'yō). Town in S Texas, county seat of Refugio County. N of Corpus Christi: important oil pipe-line terminus. It was established (1790) as Mission Nuestra Señora del Refugio, incorporated in 1834, and served in January, 1836, as the headquarters of General Sam Houston. It is reputed to be the only city that still operates under a Republic of Texas charter, 4,666 (1950).

Refusal, or the Ladies' Philosophy, The. Comedy by Colley Cibber, produced and printed in 1721. It is from Molière's Les Femmes savantes, with incidents of the South Sea mania.

Rega (ră.gă). [Also: Barega, Valega, Warega.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting the valleys of the Ulindi and Elila rivers (tributaries of the Lualaba) in E Belgian Congo. According to tradition they were once united politically under a single king, but today they are divided into a number of districts ruled by independent hereditary chiefs. They have age grades and exogamous patrilineal clans. They practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is the banana.

Regain (rē.gān). Short, poetic novel (1930; Eng. trans., Harvest, 1939) by Jean Giono, about the repopulation of a deserted French village through the conversion of Panturle, the hunter, to a life of farming.

Regalbuto (ră.găl.bō'tō). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, ab. 25 mi. NW of Catania; marketing center of an agricultural district. The Chiesa Madre and Church of Santa Maria alla Croce sustained some damage during World - War II. Pop. of commune, 11,218 (1936); of town, 10,732 (1936).

- Regaldi (rã.gãl'dè), Giuseppe. b. at Novara, Italy, in November, 1809; d. at Bologna, Italy, in February, 1883. Italian poet, noted as an improviser.
- Regan (rē'gan). Second daughter of Lear in Shakespeare's King Lear; the fierce and revengeful wife of Cornwall.
- Regards sur le monde actuel (rẽ.gãr sũr le mõnd äkt.üel). Essays (1931; Eng. trans., Reflections on the World of Today, 1948) by Paul Valéry, on the state of Europe and the condition of civilization at the beginning of the 1930's.
- Regen (rã'gen). River in Bavaria, Germany, which joins the Danube opposite Regensburg. Length, ab. 70 mi.
- Regency. In history, a term that designates the last nine years (1811-20) of the reign of George III of Great Britain; in aesthetics, a term that applies to the culture of that period, including literature, architecture, and the arts of decoration. On the occasion of George III's first lapse into insanity, in 1788, the Prince of Wales, backed by Charles James Fox, claimed the right to assume the regency without parliamentary action. The younger William Pitt maintained that the power to name a regent lay with Parliament. The king's recovery put an end to the debate at that time, but when he became totally insane in 1811, Pitt's view prevailed, and the prince (who was to rule after 1820 as George IV) became regent by Parliamentary action, which circumscribed his powers. His extravagances, his amours, and his treatment of his consort during this period gave point, as did his earlier and later conduct, to Thackeray's characterization of him as "the last and worst of all the Georges." But in addition to his generosity (at the taxpayers' expense) he had audacity, and a flair for making things center about him; moreover, during the years when he waited on the doorstep of power, he played the role of a liberal, favoring Fox and the Whigs generally, though once he was established as virtual monarch, he ruled largely through the Tories, including Castlereagh. The few years of his deputized rule were, however, exciting and crucial years, marked by final British triumph over Napoleon and by a flowering of British letters, art, and architecture.
- Regener (rã.gẽ.nẽr), Erich. b. at Bromberg, Germany, 1881—German atomic physicist and meteorologist. He first counted L-particles spinthariscopically, and has also investigated ultraviolet and cosmic rays, the oil drop experiment, fog-layer reflectivity, and other phenomena concerned in atomic-particle research.
- Regensburg (rã.gẽns.bũrk). [English, Ratisbon; ancient names, Reginum, Castra Regina; medieval, Ratisbona.] City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, capital of the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Lower Bavaria-Upper Palatinate, situated at the junction of the Regen and Danube rivers, at the northernmost bend of the course of the Danube, ab. 65 mi. NE of Munich. It has a trade in lumber, petroleum, building materials, and agricultural products. There are sugar refineries, breweries, canneries, tobacco, chemical, and machine manufactures. Large airplane factories were maintained here during World War II. Seven diets concerned with the religious controversies of the time were held here between 1531 and 1613; the city was occupied by Protestant and Roman Catholic forces during the Thirty Years' War; the "Permanent Diet" was held here from 1663 to 1806. The city passed to Karl von Dalberg in 1803, to Bavaria in 1810, and was conquered by Napoleon I in 1809. It was frequently (and heavily) bombed in the period 1942-44; Allied troops marched in on April 27, 1945. Pop. 108,604 (1946), 117,291 (1950).
- Regent's Park (rẽ.jẽnts). One of the largest parks of London, situated in the NW part of London. It is 472 acres in extent, and contains the Zoological Gardens.
- Regent Street (rẽ.jẽnt). One of the principal streets of the West End of London, extending from Portland Place to Waterloo Place.
- Reger (rã.gẽr), Max. b. at Brand, Germany, March 19, 1873; d. at Leipzig, Germany, May 11, 1916. German composer. He composed many organ pieces, chamber works, songs, and a sinfonietta. His music is marked by extreme complication in counterpoint, and by the avoidance of the contemporary tendency toward the use of imposing mass effects and instrumental color.
- Reggello (rãd.jel'lo). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Florence, ab. 10 mi. SE of Florence. Pop. of commune, 14,389 (1936); of town, 814 (1936).
- Reggio (rãd'jõ). Former duchy now forming part of the province of Reggio nell'Emilia, Italy.
- Reggio, Duc de. Title of Oudinot, Nicolas Charles.
- Reggio di Calabria (dẽ.kã.lã'brẽ.ã). [Also: Reggio, Reggio Calabria.] Province in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria. Capital, Reggio di Calabria; area, ab. 1,233 sq. mi.; pop. 578,262 (1936).
- Reggio di Calabria. [Also: Reggio, Reggio Calabria; ancient name, Regium or Rhegium.] City and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria, the capital of the province of Reggio di Calabria, situated on the Strait of Messina. It is a seaport, with exports of citrus fruits, citrus essences, and other products of the region, and large-scale fisheries. Founded by Greek colonists in the 8th century B.C. as a sister city to Zancle, it was destroyed in 386 B.C.; allied with Rome 270 B.C.; conquered by Alaric 410 A.D.; by Totila 549, the Saracens 918, the Pisans 1005, the Normans under Robert Guiscard 1063, and the Aragonese 1282. It was devastated by earthquakes in 1753 and 1908 (the latter destroyed most of the buildings and took the lives of over 12,000 of the inhabitants). In World War II, it was occupied by British forces Sept. 3, 1943. Some war damage was sustained by buildings of tourist interest. Pop. of commune, 119,804 (1936), 139,471 (1951); of city, 60,324 (1936).
- Reggio nell'Emilia (nẽ.lã.mẽ'lyã). [Also: Reggio, Reggio Emilia (ã.mẽ'lyã).] Province in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna. Capital, Reggio nell'Emilia; area, ab. 885 sq. mi.; pop. 375,288 (1936).
- Reggio nell'Emilia. [Also: Reggio, Reggio Emilia; ancient names, Regium Lepidum, Forum Lepidi.] City and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Emilia-Romagna, the capital of the province of Reggio nell'Emilia, between Parma and Modena; marketing center of a rich agricultural district. The cathedral, founded in the 9th century, was built mainly in the 13th century; the Basilica di San Prospero dates from the 10th century, but has a facade in baroque style. The churches of Madonna della Ghiara and Oratorio del Cristo date from the 16th and 17th centuries. World War II damage was slight. Reggio nell'Emilia played an important role in the development of Italian music in the 16th to 19th centuries; it contained good printing shops in the 15th and 16th centuries. It was the birthplace of the poet Lodovico Ariosto. A Roman town in ancient times, it was the capital of a Lombard duchy in the early Middle Ages; from 1527, it was part of Modena under the Este family; incorporated into the kingdom of Sardinia and Italy in 1859. Pop. of commune, 93,913 (1936), 106,765 (1951); of city, 49,069 (1936).
- Reghin (rã.gẽn'). Town in NW Rumania, in Transylvania, ab. 56 mi. E of Cluj; wood industry. 9,599 (1948).
- Regicide, The. Tragedy by Tobias Smollett. It was published in 1749, but was never acted.
- Regillus (rẽ.jil'us), Lake. In ancient geography, a small lake near Rome (perhaps near Frascati). It is traditionally the scene of a victory of the Romans over the Latins c496 B.C. that gave Rome preeminence in Latium.
- Regin (rã'gin). [Also, Reginån.] In the Volsunga Saga, the dwarf brother of the gigantic dragon Fafnir, and the mate of Sigurd. He was a great smith and reforged Sigurd's famous sword Branstock for Sigurd. He plotted Sigurd's death, but Sigurd killed him instead.
- Regina (rẽ.jĩ'nã). Capital and largest city of Saskatchewan, Canada, situated in the S central part of the province, ab. 104 mi. N of the Canadian-U.S. border, on the main lines of both the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways. Until the formation of the province of Saskatchewan in 1905, Regina was the capital of the provisional district of Assiniboia. It is the western headquarters of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and an important commercial and industrial center. Located in a great wheat-growing area, it is a major distributing center for farm machinery. Its many industries include flour milling, printing, oil refining, meat packing, and automobile assembly. 71,319 (1951).

Reginald Front de Boeuf (frôn' də bēf'), Sir. See Front de Boeuf, Sir Reginald.

Reginum (rē.j'num). An ancient name of Regensburg.
Regiomontanus (rē.ji.ō.mon.tā'nus; German, rā'gē.ō.mon.tā'nus). [Pseudonym (translation into Latin of the German Königsberg, his birthplace) of Johann Müller.] b. at Königsberg, Franconia, June 6, 1436; d. at Rome, July 6, 1476. German mathematician and astronomer, bishop of Regensburg. In an effort to correct errors in the Alfonsine Tables, a revision of the Ptolemaic planetary tables, he traveled (1462) to Rome to search for better manuscripts and to learn Greek. He wrote a work on trigonometry, the study of which he was later to foster in Germany, but was forced to leave Rome after a quarrel with the papal secretary, George of Trebizond, over the latter's translation of the Almagest. He went to Vienna, then to Buda, and then settled at Nuremberg (1471). There, with the financial help of Bernhard Walther, he built an observatory and established a printing press. He made observations of the comet of January, 1472 (later known as Halley's comet), and published a series of calendars as well as an Ephemeris covering the years 1474-1506 (said to have been used by Columbus). He was called to Rome in 1472 by Pope Sixtus IV to help in the work of reforming the calendar and died there.

Región Occidental (rē.yōn' òk'sē.řen.tāl'). [Also: Chaco, Chaco Boreal.] Civil division in NW Paraguay, bordered by Argentina, Bolivia, and Brazil. It is the largest and least populous division in the country, and was the chief cause of the Chaco War with Bolivia. Area, 88,833 sq. mi.; pop. 49,165 (est. 1941).

Región Oriental (rē.yōn' ò.ryen.tāl'). La. See Oriente, Ecuador.

Regio Syrtica (rē.ji.ō sēr.ti.kā). An ancient name of Tripolitanian.

Regium (rē.ji.um). An ancient name of Reggio di Calabria.

Regium Lepidum (rē.ji.um lep'i.dum). An ancient name of Reggio nell'Emilia, city.

Regla (rā'glā). City in NW Cuba, in La Habana province: a suburb of Havana; large warehouses for sugar and tobacco. Under Spanish rule it was noted as a smuggling center. 23,037 (1943).

Regnard (rē.nyār), Jean François. b. at Paris, in February, 1655; d. at his estate of Grillon, near Dourdan, France, Sept. 4, 1709. French writer of comedy. After Molière he is regarded as the greatest exponent of comedy in France. His prose comedies began to appear in 1688, and followed rapidly on each other during five years. After 1693 he composed a number of short plays in verse, and in 1696 he finally put on the stage Le Joueur, the comedy in verse that ranks him immediately next to Molière. He further displayed the originality of his talent in Le Distrail (1697), Démocrate (1700), Les Folies amoureuses (1704), Les Ménéchmes (1705), and Le Légataire universel (1708). His success was by no means limited to these plays in verse, for some of his best work was done in prose, like La Foire de Saint-Germain (1696) and Le Retour imprévu (1700), or else in prose and verse together, like La Suite de la foire de Saint-Germain or Les Momies d'Égypte (1696). Regnard's novel La Provinciale is in a certain measure autobiographical; it was not published till 1731.

Regnault (rē.nyō). A French form of Rinaldo.

Regnault, Alexandre George Henri. b. at Paris, Oct. 30, 1843; killed in battle, Jan. 19, 1871. French historical painter; son of Henri Victor Regnault. He took the Grand Prix de Rome in 1866, studied in Italy till 1868, and then went to Spain. In 1869 he revisited Italy, and in 1870 went to Africa. He returned to fight in the Franco-Prussian War. His works include Automedon, Salome, Execution in Granada, Judith and Holofernes, Thetis Giving Achilles the Arms of Vulcan, and A Fantasy in Tangiers.

Regnault, Henri Victor. b. at Aix-la-Chapelle (now Aachen, Germany), July 21, 1810; d. Jan. 19, 1878. French chemist and physicist. He became director of the Sèvres porcelain manufactury in 1854. He made important researches into unsaturated hydrocarbons, especially into their haloid derivatives; his physical researches into specific heats, coefficients of expansion, and vapor pressures resulted in several important modifications of existing laws in the direction of greater precision. Regnault's law states that at constant pressure the specific heat of a gas is constant. He wrote articles in the Comptes-rendus of the Academy of Sciences, Cours élémentaire de chimie (1847-49), and other works.

Regnault, Jean Baptiste, Baron. b. at Paris, Oct. 19, 1754; d. there, Nov. 12, 1829. French historical and genre painter. He took the Grand Prix de Rome in 1776, and received the title of Baron in 1819. Among his works are Education of Achilles (1783), The Descent from the Cross (1789), and The Three Graces (in the Louvre).

Règne Animal (ren'y ā.nē.māl), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Animal Kingdom."] Treatise on zoology, by Georges Cuvier, published in four volumes, 1817. The system developed in this work may be regarded as the basis of nearly all the scientific classifications until after the appearance of Charles Darwin's Origin of Species.

Régnier (rā.nyā), Henri de. [Full name, Henri François Joseph de Régnier.] b. at Nonlieux, France, Dec. 28, 1864; d. at Paris, May 23, 1936. French symbolist poet and novelist. Author of collections of poems, including Poèmes anciens et romanesques (1890), Poel qu'en songe (1892), Artichaut (1895); of such novels as La Double maîtresse (1900) and Les Recontres de M. de Bréot (1904); Eng. trans., The Libertines, 1929; and of much incidental critical writing. A second-generation symbolist, he showed touches of the influence of almost every great poet of the 19th century, but his work at its best developed along paths originally opened by Paul Verlaine.

Régnier, Madame Henri de. See Houville, Gérard d'.
Régnier, Jacques Auguste Adolphe. b. at Mainz, Germany, in July, 1804; d. at Fontainebleau, France, Oct. 21, 1884. French philologist.

Régnier, Mathurin. b. at Chartres, France, Dec. 21, 1573; d. at Rouen, France, Oct. 22, 1613. French satirical poet; nephew of the poet Philippe Desportes. At the age of 11 he received the tonsure, and when 20 followed Cardinal François de Joyeuse to Rome as a private secretary. On his return to France in 1604, he maintained the dissipated mode of living into which he had fallen while away, but was appointed to a canonry in the Chartres cathedral in 1609. As a writer, Régnier is well known for his satires. He is at his best in Le Goût décide de tout, L'Honneur ennemi de la vie, L'Amour qu'on ne peut dompter, Régnier apologiste de lui-même, La Folie est générale, Ny crainte ny espérance, Le Mauvais Repas, and Le Mauvais Lieu. C. A. Sainte-Beuve speaks of Régnier as standing on the threshold of the 17th century, and yet looking backward and fraternizing with Montaigne, Ronsard, and Rabelais. He states that where Régnier excels is in his knowledge of life, his expression of manners, his delineation of characters, and his description of home scenes. He likens Régnier's satires to a gallery of wonderful Flemish portraits.

Regnitz (rā'g'nits). River in Bavaria, Germany. It is formed by the union of the Pegnitz and Rednitz near Fürth, and joins the Main near Bamberg. Length (including the Pegnitz), ab. 125 mi.

Regnitzhof (rā'g'nits.hōf). Former name of Hof.

Regnum (rē'gnum). A Latin name of Chichester.

Rêgo (rā'gō), José Lins do. [Full name, José Lins do Rêgo Cavalcanti.] b. at Pilar, Paraíba, Brazil, 1901-; Brazilian novelist and essayist, one of the most widely read of contemporary Brazilian authors. His books generally portray the economic and social conflicts of the northeastern region of his country. Among his novels are Menino de engenho (1932), Doidinho (1933), Banguê (1934), Moleque Ricardo (1935), Usina (1935), Pureza (1937), Pedra Bonita (1938), Riacho Doce (1939), Água-Mãe (1941), and Fogo morto (1943).

Regulators. Organization (1704-71) of settlers in the back country of North Carolina that came into being as a protest against various oppressive measures of the day. The Regulators chose for their immediate targets the local government officials who enforced the burdensome laws and greedy attorneys who exacted illegal fees. The focus of the Regulators' activities was Orange County; their resistance also extended to Granville and Anson counties. The Regulators' imminent rebellion in 1768 was blunted by Governor William Tryon's threat of force; further disturbances in 1770-71 led to their decisive defeat at the Battle of the Alamance (May 16, 1771) and to the execution of several of their leaders.

Because of their continuing grievances against the colonial government (which was dominated by the comparatively well-to-do merchants and plantation owners of the seaboard counties), many of the Regulators aided the Loyalist cause during the American Revolution.

Regulbium (rē'gul'bī-um). Latin name of Reculver.

Regulus (reg'ū-lus). White star, of magnitude 1.3, in the heart of the Lion; α Leonis.

Regulus, Marcus Atilius. d. c250 n.c. Roman general. He was consul in 267, and as consul again in 256 during the First Punic War defeated the Carthaginian fleet at Ecnomus, invaded Africa, and defeated the Carthaginian army. He was defeated by the Carthaginians under the Spartan general Xanthippus in 255 and taken prisoner. According to Roman tradition he was sent by the Carthaginians to Rome with an embassy, in 250, to ask for peace or an exchange of prisoners. He is said to have given his word to return to Carthage and, when his embassy produced no results because he himself advised the senate not to accept the Carthaginian terms, he went back to Africa and was tortured to death. The story is probably a fabrication.

Rehan (rē'an), Ada. [Stage name of Ada Crehan.] b. at Limerick, Ireland, April 22, 1860; d. at New York, Jan. 8, 1916. American actress. In 1874 she made her debut at Newark, N.J., and her first appearance in New York the same year. She became leading lady in the company of Augustin Daly in 1878, and made her first appearance in his theater in 1879. She appeared with success at both London and Paris. Her best impersonations were Rosalind in As You Like It, Katharine in The Taming of the Shrew, Viola in Twelfth Night, and Countess Vera in The Last Word. She also created more than 40 roles in the light comedy of the day.

Rehberg (rā'berk), Hans. b. at Pieskow, Germany, Dec. 25, 1901—. German dramatist. His works, using themes taken from Prussian and German history, were popular in Germany during the Nazi regime. He wrote Der grosse Kurfürst (1934), Friedrich Wilhelm I (1935), Kaiser und König (1937), Der Siebenjährige Krieg (1938), and numerous radio plays.

Rehearsal, The. Burlesque tragedy or farce by George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and others, produced in 1671. It is a travesty of the bombastic rhymed plays of John Dryden and others. Samuel Butler, the author of Hudibras, Dr. Thomas Sprat, Martin Clifford, and others assisted Buckingham. Sir William Davenant, John Dryden, and Sir Robert Howard are all satirized. R. B. Sheridan's The Critic is a similar play, and Andrew Marvell's satire The Rehearsal Transposed is indebted to it.

Rehfues (rā'fūs), Philipp Joseph von. b. at Tübingen, Germany, Oct. 2, 1779; d. on his estate near Bonn, Germany, Oct. 21, 1843. German novelist and miscellaneous author. He was one of the German disciples of Sir Walter Scott, as in his novel Scipio Cicala (1832).

Rehn (rān), Ludwig. b. at Allendorf, Germany, April 13, 1849; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, May 29, 1930. German surgeon. He was the initiator of heart surgery in performing the first successful suture of the right ventricle of the heart (1896). He performed (1880) thyroidectomy for exophthalmic goiter and discovered (1895) anilin cancer of the bladder in an anilin-dye worker.

Rehoboam (rē,hō,bō'am). King of Judah (c933-c914 B.C.); son of Solomon. His accession was the signal for the revolt of the ten northern tribes under the leadership of Jeroboam, which resulted in the separation of the Hebrews into two kingdoms, that of Judah and that of Israel. Sheshonk I (Shishak) of Egypt invaded Palestine during Rehoboam's reign.

Rehoboth (rē,hō,bōth, -bōth). Name of three places mentioned in the Old Testament: (1) Rehoboth-Ir, a city near Nineveh; (2) a city near the Euphrates; (3) a well situated probably ab. 20 mi. S of Beersheba, Palestine, at the site now known as Ruheiba or Ruhebe.

Rehoboth. Town in SE Massachusetts, in Bristol County; manufactures of porcelain enamelware. 3,700 (1950).

Rehoboth Bay. Bay in the coast of Delaware, S of Cape Henlopen.

Reich (rī'eh), Emil. b. at Eperjes (now Prešov), in Slovakia, March 24, 1854; d. at London, Dec. 11, 1910. Hungarian author and lecturer. Among his many published works are History of Civilization, Foundations of Modern Europe, Atlas of Modern History, Fundamental Principles of Evidence, General History of Western Nations, and Woman Through the Ages.

Reich, László. See Rajk, László.

Reicha (rī'ehā), Anton Joseph. b. at Prague, Feb. 27, 1770; d. at Paris, May 28, 1836. French composer and writer on music. He published Traité de mélodie (1814), Cours de composition musicale (1818), Traité de haute composition musicale (1824-26), and L'Art du compositeur dramatique (1833). His compositions include five operas, symphonies, religious music, and oratorios.

Reicha, Joseph. b. in Bohemia, 1746; d. at Bonn, Germany, 1795. German conductor, composer, and cellist.

Reichard (rī'ehärt), Paul. b. at Neuwied, Germany, Dec. 2, 1854; d. at Berlin, Sept. 16, 1938. German explorer in Africa.

Reichardt (rī'ehärt), Johann Friedrich. b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, Nov. 25, 1752; d. at Giebichenstein, near Halle, Germany, June 17, 1814. German composer and musical writer, known for his songs. He was (1775 et seq.) Kapellmeister (choirmaster) to Frederick the Great but was dismissed (1794) by Frederick William II as a sympathizer with the French Revolution.

Reichenau (rī'ehē-nou). Commune and small island in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated in the Lake of Constance (Bodensee), between Konstanz and Radolfzell. It is a fruit, wine, and grain producing area, long famous as the seat of a Benedictine monastery founded in 724. The Minster, consecrated in 824 and rebuilt in the 10th century, is one of the oldest Romanesque church buildings north of the Alps. The monastery exerted considerable influence in the early Middle Ages through its scholars, librarians, musicians, and artists. The bulk of its manuscripts are now at Karlsruhe; some of the illuminated codices are in the libraries of Munich, Bamberg, and Trier. Pop. about 2,000.

Reichenau, Walther von. b. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Oct. 8, 1884; d. Jan. 17, 1942. German general. He served on the general staff during World War I, and during World War II was in command in Poland (1939), in France (1940), and in the U.S.S.R. (1941). He was defeated by General Semyon Timoshenko at Rostov in November, 1941.

Reichenbach (rī'ehēn.bäch). [Also, Reichenbach im Vogtland (im fō'ht'lānt).] Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Saxony, ab. 10 mi. SW of Zwickau; textile, garment, and metal industries. The Church of Peter and Paul, of the 11th century, has a famous organ of 1725. It received town privileges in 1271. Pop. 34,708 (1946).

Reichenbach. [Also, Reichenbach in der Oberlausitz (in der ō.bēr.lou'zit's).] Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Saxony, situated near the new Polish border, ab. 10 mi. W of Görlitz; chemical industry; agricultural trade. The French defeated the Russians here on May 22, 1813. Pop. 3,158 (1946).

Reichenbach. German name of Dzierżoniów.

Reichenbach, Anton Benedict. b. 1807; d. 1880. German naturalist; brother of H. G. L. Reichenbach.

Reichenbach, Georg von. b. at Durlach, Baden, Germany, Aug. 24, 1772; d. at Munich, May 21, 1826. German mechanician, manufacturer of astronomical and mathematical instruments.

Reichenbach, Heinrich Gottlieb Ludwig. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 8, 1793; d. March 17, 1879. German botanist and zoologist, professor at Dresden from 1820; brother of Anton Benedict Reichenbach. His chief work is Flora Germanica (with the Iconographia, 1823-84). He also wrote Regnum animale (1834-36) and others.

Reichenbach, Baron Karl von. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, Feb. 12, 1788; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 19, 1869. German scientist and manufacturer. He discovered creosote and paraffin in organic tar, but is best known for his theories concerning the "od" or "odylic force," a term fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pull; τη, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; he coined for a hypothetical force flowing between subject and practitioner (or a substance) during hypnotism.

Reichenbach River. Small tributary of the Aare River, in the canton of Bern, Switzerland. It joins the Aare ab. 16 mi. E of Interlaken. The Reichenbach is celebrated for the beauty of the cascades at its entrance into the Aare valley. The cascades are of interest also from the fact that it was in them that Sherlock Holmes fell to what looked like certain death at the close of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Final Case.

Reichenberg (rî'chen.berk). German name of Liberec, Reichenhall (rî'chen.häl). [Also, Bad Reichenhall.] Town in S. Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Saalach River and in the foothills of the Alps, near the Austrian border, ab. 10 mi. SW of Salzburg; salt mines, sawmills, and manufactures of chemicals, leather goods, and musical instruments. It is a popular health resort, with saline springs. There are numerous hotels and bathing establishments. 13,351 (1950).

Reichenow (rî'che.nō), Anton. b. at Charlottenburg, Germany, Aug. 1, 1847; d. at Hamburg, Germany, July 6, 1941. German ornithologist. He wrote Die Vögel Afrikas (3 vols., 1901-05). At the time of his death he was a professor at the Zoölogisches Museum at Berlin.

Reichensperger (rî'chen.sper.gör), August. b. at Koblenz, Germany, March 22, 1808; d. at Cologne, Germany, July 16, 1895. Prussian politician and writer on art; brother of Peter Franz Reichensperger. A delegate to the Prussian chamber of deputies (1850-63, 1870-76) and to the Reichstag (1867-84), he was one of the leaders of the Roman Catholic (Center) party.

Reichensperger, Peter Franz. b. at Koblenz, Germany, May 28, 1810; d. at Berlin, Dec. 31, 1892. Prussian politician; brother of August Reichensperger. He was a prominent member of the Roman Catholic (Center) party.

Reichenthal (rî'chen.täl), Laura. Original name of Riding, Laura.

Reicher (rî'cher), Emmanuel. b. 1849; d. 1924. German actor and director. After appearing in Max Reinhardt's company at the Kleines Theater, he came to New York in 1921 to stage matinee performances of Emile Verhaeren's The Cloister for the Theatre Guild. He remained to organize the American People's Theatre and also became a director of the Jewish Art Theatre.

Reichlin-Meldegge (rîch'lin.me'l/dek). Baron Karl Alexander von. b. at Grafenau, Bavaria, Germany, Feb. 22, 1801; d. at Heidelberg, Baden, Germany, Feb. 15, 1877. German philosopher and theologian.

Reichsbank (rîch's'bänk). Former German national bank at Berlin, until the close of World War II the leading bank in Germany, established by an act passed in 1875. In 1948 the Bank Deutscher Länder was established at Frankfurt on the Main as the central bank for the three western zones.

Reichshofen (rîch's'hō.fen), Battle of. See Wörth, Battle of.

Reichsland (rîch's'lânt). Designation (1871-1918) of Alsace-Lorraine as a territory of the German empire. Its meaning in English is "Imperial Territory," and the term was coined to indicate the special relationship of the territory to the German emperor.

Reichstadt (rîch'shtät). German name of Zákupy. Reichstadt, François Charles Joseph Napoléon Bonaparte, Duc de. See Napoleon II.

Reichstag (rîch's'täk). Under the central government of Germany before the close of World War II, an elective body which, either genuinely or nominally, exercised the legislative power. Under the Enabling Act of March 24, 1933, the Reichstag virtually surrendered its lawmaking powers to Chancellor Adolf Hitler and his cabinet.

Reichstag Building. [German, Reichstagsgebäude (rîch's'täks.ge.bōi'de).] Building at Berlin, on the Königsplatz, built between 1884 and 1894 from plans by Paul Wallot. In this building, 430 ft. long, 290 wide, and 88 ft. high (the central glass dome rose 225 ft.), met the Bundesrat and the Reichstag, the upper and lower houses of the German legislature. During the night of Feb. 27-28, 1933, a fire destroyed the central part of the building. The National Socialists, whose leader Adolf Hitler was then chancellor of Germany and who were seeking in the election called for March 5 a victory that would give them an absolute majority in the Reichstag, immediately claimed that the fire was set by the Communists and obtained from President Hindenburg emergency powers with which they were able to crush the Communists and win the election. There is little doubt that the Nazis themselves set the fire, and, though Marius van der Lubbe, a Dutchman, was executed after being found guilty of setting the fire, four other Communist defendants were acquitted of complicity despite the atmosphere of political pressure from the Nazis that pervaded the trial.

Reichstein (rîch'shtin), Tadeus. b. at Włocławek, Poland, July 20, 1897—. Swiss organic chemist. He taught at Zurich from 1922 to 1937 and later served as head of the department of pharmacy (1938-46) and chief of the organic section (1946 et seq.) at the University of Basel. He has investigated the aromatic nature of coffee, synthesized L-ascorbic acid, and worked on sugars. His researches on the secretions of the suprarenal glands and his synthesis of some of the hormones found therein, including cortisone, paralleled the work of E. C. Kendall and he, Kendall, and P. S. Hench were corecipients of the 1950 Nobel prize in physiology and medicine for their discovery of the arthritis-alleviating hormone cortisone.

Reid (rêd), E. Emmet. b. at Fincastle, Va., June 27, 1872—. American chemist, professor of organic chemistry (1914-37) at Johns Hopkins. Author of Introduction to Research in Organic Chemistry (1924) and College Organic Chemistry (1929).

Reid, Forrest. b. at Belfast, Ireland, 1876; d. 1947. English novelist, short-story writer, poet, and critic. Author of The Garden God (1906), The Bracells (1911), Following Darkness (1912; issued in 1937 as Peter Fleming), The Gentle Lover (1913), A Garden By the Gate (1916), The Spring Song (1917), A Garden By the Sea (1918), Pirates of the Spring (1920), Uncle Stephen (1931), Brian Westby (1934), and The Retreat, or the Vaccinations of Henry (1936; fiction); W. B. Yeats (1915) and Walter De La Mare (1929), critical studies; Retrospective Adventure (1941), essays and stories; and Apostate (1926), and its continuation, Private Road (1940), autobiography.

Reid, Sir George. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, Oct. 31, 1841; d. in Somersetshire, England, Feb. 9, 1913. Scottish landscape and portrait painter, president of the Royal Scottish Academy from 1891 to 1902. His paintings are found in museums at Edinburgh, Aberdeen, London, Oxford, Glasgow, Liverpool, and Manchester.

Reid, George Agnew. b. at Wingham, Canada, 1860—. Canadian painter. He became a member of the Royal Canadian Academy (1890) and later served as president (1906-09). He was also president of the Ontario College of Art from 1912 to 1923.

Reid, Sir George Houston. b. near Paisley, Scotland, Feb. 25, 1845; d. at London, Sept. 12, 1918. Australian political leader, third prime minister of Australia. He was elected to the New South Wales legislative assembly, becoming minister of public instruction in the Stuart government in 1883. He was a supporter of Sir Henry Parkes but refused to join his ministries from personal dislike of Parkes. He succeeded (1891) Parkes as party leader, won a sweeping victory (1894) on a free-trade platform, and became premier. He feared that Australian federation would end free trade for New South Wales, but finally supported the federal constitution. He lost the office of premier in 1899, but was elected (1901) to the first federal parliament as the leader of the free-trade bloc. He served as commonwealth prime minister (1904-05), leading a coalition of free-traders and protectionists, this episode marking the beginning of a fusion of conservatives of both outlooks to oppose Labour. He relinquished the party leadership in 1909, and became Australian high commissioner (1910-16) at London. He was elected to the House of Commons in 1916.

Reid, James L. b. near Russellville, Ohio, Dec. 26, 1844; d. June 1, 1910. American agriculturist, noted as a corn breeder. He produced varieties including Reid's Yellow Dent, which after 1893 was for years the most widely used variety in the U.S. corn belt.

Reid, Mayne. See Reid, Thomas Mayne.

Reid, Ogden Mills. b. at New York, May 16, 1882; d. there, Jan. 3, 1947. American editor and publisher; son of Whitelaw Reid. He joined (1908) the staff of the New York Tribune, later merged (1924) with the New York Herald as the New York Herald Tribune. He was appointed managing editor (1912) and editor (1913) of the Tribune, and retained the title of editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

Reid, Robert. b. at Stockbridge, Mass., July 29, 1862; d. at Clifton Springs, N.Y., Dec. 2, 1929. American painter. He did murals for many public buildings, including the Library of Congress at Washington, D.C., the state house at Boston, and the appellate courthouse at New York. In 1906 he became a member of the National Academy.

Reid, Robert Threshie. [Title, 1st Earl of Loreburn.] b. April 3, 1846; d. Nov. 30, 1923. British jurist. He was appointed queen's counsel in 1882. He was a member of the House of Commons for Hereford (1880-85) and for Dumfries (1886-1905). He was solicitor general in 1894, attorney general (1894-95), lord high chancellor (December, 1905-June, 1912), and one of the British counsel before the Venezuelan Commission.

Reid, Samuel Chester. b. at Norwich, Conn., Aug. 25, 1783; d. at New York, Jan. 28, 1861. American naval officer. As commander of a privateer, General Armstrong, he repulsed a British attack at Fayal in the Azores in 1814, finally sinking his own ship when the odds became too great. He designed the U.S. flag in its present form.

Reid, Thomas. b. at Strachan, Kincardineshire, Scotland, April 26, 1710; d. at Glasgow, Oct. 7, 1796. Scottish philosopher, the principal founder of the Scottish school of philosophy. He opposed the skepticism of John Locke and his followers with a "common-sense" approach that accepted the existence of things and did not attempt to make of them subjective mental phenomena. Similarly, morality in his system was based on an intuitive perception of ethics. He graduated from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1726, was librarian there, became pastor at Newmachar, near Aberdeen, in 1737, was appointed professor of philosophy at King's College, Aberdeen, in 1751, and was professor of moral philosophy at Glasgow (1764-81). He wrote an Essay on Quantity (1748), Enquiry into the Human Mind on the Principle of Common Sense (1764), Essays on the Intellectual Powers of Man (1785), and Essays on the Active Powers of the Human Mind (1788). His works were edited by Sir William Hamilton.

Reid, Thomas Mayne. [Called Mayne Reid.] b. in Ireland, April 4, 1818; d. at London, Oct. 22, 1883. British novelist. He traveled in the U.S., and served as captain in the U.S. army in the Mexican War. He sailed from New York in 1849 with a party of volunteers to aid in the Hungarian struggle for freedom, but arrived too late to take part in it. He then turned to writing tales of adventure, including The Rifle Rangers (1850), The Scalp Hunters (1851), The Boy Hunters (1852), The Bush Boys (1855), The Quadroon (1856), The War Trail (1857), Osceola (1858), The Boy Tar (1859), The Maroon (1862), The Headless Horseman (1866), The Castaways (1870), The Ocean Waifs (1871), The Death Shot (1874), The Flag of Distress (1875), The Vee Boers (1880), Gaspar the Gaucho (1880), and others.

Reid, Whitelaw. b. near Xenia, Ohio, Oct. 27, 1837; d. at London, Dec. 13, 1912. American journalist, editor, and diplomat, editor (1872-1905) of the New York Tribune. He became superintendent of schools at South Charleston, Ohio, and subsequently purchased an interest in the Xenia News, Ohio, editing that weekly for some two years. He was an ardent supporter of Lincoln at the 1860 Republican convention. Reid became (1861) legislative and political correspondent for the Cincinnati Times and Gazette and the Cleveland Herald; shortly afterward he became city editor of the Gazette and then served as a war correspondent with the Union forces. His accounts of the battles of Shiloh and Gettysburg brought him some note, as did his reporting of the funeral of Lincoln. He also served (1863-66) as librarian for the House of Representatives and for a time was clerk of its military committee. His After the War (1866) was a record of two tours of the postwar South, in which Reid was active for a short time as a cotton planter. He wrote Ohio in the War (1868) and after continuing to write for the Cincinnati Gazette joined the staff of the New York Tribune in 1868. He became its managing editor in 1869. Placed in charge of the Tribune during Horace Greeley's activity as a presidential candidate in 1872, Reid formally became head of the newspaper after Greeley's death in the same year. Under his management it continued to play a leading part in U.S. journalism, both editorially and from the standpoint of mechanical production (the Tribune was the first paper to install the Mergenthaler linotype). In 1889 Reid became U.S. minister to France, serving until 1892, when he was vice-presidential candidate of the Republican Party. In 1905, upon becoming U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, he gave up his editorship of the Tribune but retained financial control of the paper. Among his works are Ohio in the War (1868), A Continental Union (1900), and Problems of Expansion (1900).

Reid, Sir William. b. at Kinglassie, Fifeshire, Scotland, April 25, 1791; d. at London, Oct. 31, 1858. British meteorologist and colonial governor, chairman of the executive committee of the exhibition of 1851. He was governor of Bermuda (1839-46), Barbados (1846-48), and Malta (1851-58). He published An Attempt to develop the Law of Storms (1838), Progress of the Development of the Law of Storms (1849), and others.

Reidsville (rēdz'vil). City in N North Carolina, in Rockingham County: manufactures of cigarettes, and silk, rayon, and cotton textiles. 11,708 (1950).

Reif (rif). German name of Riva, Italy.

Reigate (rīg'āt). Municipal borough and market town in SE England, in Surrey, ab. 23 mi. S of London by rail. It comprises the ancient town of Chercheffelle and the modern town of Redhill. The site of the old castle is marked by a large cave which the barons are said to have used as a meeting place and guard room. 42,234 (1951).

Reign of Terror. In French history, that period of the French Revolution during which the country was under the sway of a faction whose members made the summary execution of persons (regardless of age or sex) who were considered obnoxious to their measures one of the cardinal principles of the government. This period may be said to have begun in March, 1793, when the Revolutionary tribunal was appointed, and to have ended in July, 1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates.

Reikiavik (rī'kyā'vek). See Reykjavik.

Reil (ril). Johann Christian. b. at Rhade, in East Friesland, Feb. 28, 1759; d. at Halle, Germany, Nov. 22, 1813. German anatomist and physician, professor (1810) at Berlin. He was superintendent of the military hospitals in 1813, and died of typhus contracted in the performance of his duties.

Reille (rey'), Honoré Charles Michel Joseph, Comte. b. at Antibes, France, Sept. 1, 1775; d. at Paris, March 4, 1860. French marshal. He served in the Napoleonic wars in Spain, at Quatre-Bras, Waterloo, and elsewhere and was made marshal in 1847.

Reimann (rī'mān), Max. b. at Elbing (in territory then part of Germany, now in Poland), Oct. 31, 1898—. German politician. Originally a miner, he became (1930) a functionary of the Communist Party, emigrated to Prague in 1933, was arrested in 1939 and placed in a concentration camp, and was liberated by the Allies in 1945. He became chairman of the new German Communist Party for the British Zone, and was a member of the parliamentary council at Bonn in 1948. In 1949 he was jailed by the British occupation authorities and was defeated for reelection.

Reimarus (rī'mā'rus), Hermann Samuel. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 22, 1694; d. there, March 1, 1768. German philosopher and scholar, professor (1727) of Hebrew and later also of mathematics at the Gymnasium (advanced secondary school) at Hamburg. He is especially noted as the author of the rationalistic Wolfenbüttel Fragments, published by Lessing (1774-78) as fragments of the work on New Testament history of an unknown author found by him in the Wolfenbüttel Library. The whole work bears the title Apologie oder Schutzschrift für die vernünftigen Verehrer Gottes.

Reims (rēmz; French, raīs). [Also: Rheims; ancient name, Durocortorum.] City in NE France, in the department of Marne, situated on the Vesle River and on a canal between the Aisne and Marne, NE of Paris. It was the chief place of the ancient tribe of the Remi.

The city is surrounded by vineyards and is a center for the champagne trade. It is also a textile center of long standing, particularly for woolen materials, and has chemical factories, breweries and distilleries, and biscuit manufactures. The Cathedral of Notre-Dame, place of the coronation of the kings of France, is one of the most grandiose Gothic church buildings in Europe and is regarded as a French national shrine. The exterior and interior are equally remarkable, and the wealth of medieval stone sculpture which it contains is overwhelming. The huge building has had a dramatic history: built, but not finished, between 1211 and 1480, it was all but destroyed in 1481; reconstructed bit by bit throughout the following centuries, it was again gravely damaged by German bombardment in World War I; it has since been reconstructed again. Reims contains other ancient buildings, such as the Church of Saint Remi, from the 11th and 12th centuries, the hôtel de ville (town hall), from the 17th century, the Porte Mars (a Roman relic), and others. There is a museum with archaeological and art collections. Many church councils met here, and Joan of Arc crowned Charles VII here in 1429. The city suffered heavy damage during World War I and had to be largely rebuilt; it was again damaged, although to a slighter degree, in World War II. On May 8, 1945, the armistice between the Germans and the Allied Powers, terminating World War II, was signed here. 110,749 (1946).

Rein (rin), Wilhelm. b. at Eisenach, Germany, Aug. 10, 1847; d. at Jena, Germany, Feb. 19, 1929. German educator. He served as professor (1886 et seq.) at the University of Jena. His works include Theorie und Praxis des Volksschulunterrichts (1878-85) and Enzyklopädisches Handbuch der Pädagogik (1894-1903).

Reina Barrios (rē'nā bār'ryōs), José María. See Reyna Barrios, José María.

Reinach (re.nāk), Joseph. [Pseudonym, Polybe.] b. at Paris, Sept. 30, 1856; d. there, April 18, 1921. French political leader and journalist; brother of Salomon Reinach and Théodore Reinach. He is remembered for his vigorous press campaigns, including those against General Boulanger and in support of Captain Dreyfus. He was on the staff of La République Française, with Léon Gambetta, and was a deputy (1889-98, 1906-14). During World War I he wrote military commentary under the pseudonym of Polybe. Author of Histoire de l'affaire Dreyfus (1901-08), and other works on various political and historical subjects.

Reinach, Salomon. b. at St.-Germain-en-Laye, France, Aug. 29, 1858; d. at Paris, Nov. 4, 1932. French archaeologist, keeper of the National Museum of St.-Germain (1902 et seq.); brother of Joseph Reinach and Théodore Reinach. He published Manuel de philologie classique, Traité d'épigraphie grecque, Répertoire de la statuaire grecque et romaine, Répertoire des vases grecs et étrangers, Répertoire de reliefs grecs et romains, and others. His best-known works are Apollon: Histoire générale des arts plastiques (1904) and Orphée: Histoire générale des religions (1909), both translated into English.

Reinach, Théodore. b. at St.-Germain-en-Laye, France, July 3, 1860; d. at Paris, Oct. 28, 1928. French archaeologist and numismatist; brother of Joseph Reinach and Salomon Reinach. He served as professor (1894 et seq.) at the Collège de France, and also as editor in chief of Revue des Études Grecques. Author of Histoire des Israélites depuis leur dispersion (1885).

Reincken or Reinken (ring'ken), Jan Adams (or Johann Adam). b. at Wilshausen, in Alsace, April 27, 1623; d. Nov. 24, 1722. German organist at the church of Saint Catherine at Hamburg, and composer of organ music. He wrote Hortus musicus, Partite diverse, fugues, and variations.

Reindeer Lake (rān'dir). Lake in Canada, in NE Saskatchewan and NW Manitoba, but mainly in the former province. It is drained via the Cochrane River; Wollaston Lake, Lake Athabasca, Slave River, and Great Slave Lake into the Mackenzie River. Elevation, 1,150 ft., area, 2,444 sq. mi.

Reinecke (rīn'ekē), Carl Heinrich Carsten. b. at Altona, Germany, June 23, 1824; d. at Leipzig, Germany, March 10, 1910. German pianist, composer, conductor, and teacher of music. After filling various posts in smaller cities, he became conductor of the Gewandhaus concerts at Leipzig in 1860, and at the same time was made professor of the piano and of composition at the Conservatory. In 1895 he was succeeded as conductor by Arthur Nikisch and in 1902 retired from his post at the Conservatory. He was famous as a player of Mozart's music. His compositions include an opera, König Manfred, a cantata, Hakon Jarl, songs, overtures, and piano music.

Reine de Chypre (ren de shēpr), La. [Eng. trans., "The Queen of Cyprus."] Opera by Halévy, produced at Paris in 1841. The words are by Jules Henri Vernoy de Saint-Georges.

Reine de Saba (de sā.bā), La. [Eng. trans., "The Queen of Sheba."] Opera in four acts by Charles Gounod, with a libretto by P. J. Barbier and Michel Carré, first produced at Paris on Feb. 28, 1862.

Reiner (rī'nēr), Fritz. b. at Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 19, 1888—. Hungarian conductor. He conducted (1914-21) the Dresden Opera, directed (1922-31) the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was teacher of conducting and head of the orchestral department (1931 et seq.) at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, and was conductor (1938 et seq.) of the Pittsburgh Symphony. He has composed a string quartet and several songs.

Reine Topaze (ren to.pāz), La. [Eng. trans., "Queen Topaze."] Opera by Victor Massé, produced at Paris in 1856.

Reinhardtbrunn (rīn'hārts.brūn). Castle of the dukes of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, situated at the foot of the Thüringerwald, near Friedrichroda, ab. 9 mi. SW of Gotha, Germany.

Reinhardt (rīn'hārt), Max. [Original surname, Goldmann.] b. at Baden, near Vienna, Sept. 9, 1873; d. Oct. 31, 1943. German stage director and manager, leader of an impressionistic and neo-romantic reaction against naturalism. He was engaged for the Deutsches Theater at Berlin, where he met with considerable success in the creation of Hauptmann, Tolstoi, and Ibsen roles (1894-1903), and finally embarked on his career as an independent producer when he assumed management of the Neues Theater, making his debut with Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream (1903). He directed (also at Berlin) the Deutsches Theater (1905-20, 1924-32), the Kammerspielhaus (1906), the Komödie (1924), the Theater am Kurfürstendamm (1925-26), and the Berliner Theater (1928-29); he opened at Vienna the Theater in der Josefstadt (1924), and produced the Salzburger Festspiele (1920 et seq.). After the Nazi assumption of power he came to the U.S., where he staged the Hollywood production of A Midsummer Night's Dream (1935). In New York he produced the operetta Rosalinda and also worked with the New Opera Company. He became a U.S. citizen in 1940.

Reinhardt, Walther. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, March 24, 1872; d. at Berlin, Aug. 8, 1930. German soldier, last Prussian minister of war. In October, 1919, he became chief of the army command. He resigned with Gustav Noske after the Kapp Putsch, and was later in command of Reichswehr groups.

Reinhart (rīn'hārt), Benjamin Franklin. b. at Waynesburg, Pa., Aug. 29, 1829; d. at Philadelphia, May 3, 1885. American portrait and historical painter.

Reinhart, Charles Stanley. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., 1844; d. at New York, Aug. 30, 1896. American genre painter and illustrator; nephew of Benjamin Franklin Reinhart.

Reinhart, Josef. b. at Rüttenen, Switzerland, 1875—. Swiss author. His Liedli ab em Land (1897) and Gschichtli ab em Land (1901) show that he can use his native dialect both for lyrical and narrative purposes. Many of his poems have gone into popular song books.

Reinhold (rīn'holt), Karl Leonhard. b. at Vienna, Oct. 26, 1758; d. at Kiel, Germany, April 10, 1823. German philosopher, professor at Jena (1787-94) and at Kiel (1794-1823). He advocated Kant's philosophy in Briefe über die Kantische Philosophie (1786-87), and also published Versuch einer neuen Theorie des Vorstellungsvermögens (1789) and other books.

Reinisch (rī'nish), Leo. b. at Osterwitz, Styria, Austria, 1832; d. 1913. Austrian Egyptologist and Africanist, professor of Egyptology (1872 et seq.) at the University of Vienna. His numerous works include Ägyptische Chrestomathie (1873-75); grammars of Barea (1874), Nuba (1879), and Bilin (1883); and a dictionary of Bilin (1887).

Reinkens (ring'kens), Joseph Hubert. b. at Burtseheid, near Aachen, Germany, March 1, 1821; d. at Bonn, Germany, Jan. 4, 1896. German prelate and Roman Catholic theologian, suspended in 1870 on account of opposition to the dogma of papal infallibility. He was consecrated bishop of the Old Catholics in 1873, and thereafter resided at Bonn. He published various works on ecclesiastical history.

Reinmar von Hagenau (rin'mär fon hä'ge.nou). [Called Reinmar der Alte (dër'äl'te).] fl. c1190-1210. Middle High German minnesinger, possibly from Hagenau near Strasbourg. He is known to have been before 1210 at the Viennese court, where he exerted considerable influence on Walther von der Vogelweide, and to have accompanied Duke Leopold V on the third Crusade (1190).

Reinmar von Zweter (fon tsv'ä'tér). [Called Reinmar der Junge (dër'yung'e).] fl. c1220-52. Middle High German didactic poet, hailing from the region between Heidelberg and Bruchsal, who began (c1220) as a disciple of Walther von der Vogelweide and was active until after 1252.

Reino e Conquistas de Angola (rã'nõ ê kõng.kësh'tash dê ung.gô'la). See Angola, former Portuguese colony.

Reinsch (rinsh), Paul Samuel. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., June 10, 1869; d. at Shanghai, China, Jan. 24, 1923. American teacher and diplomat. He became assistant professor and then professor (1901-13) of political science at Wisconsin. He served (1913-19) as U.S. minister to China and was legal adviser (1919-23) to the Chinese government. An organizer (1904) of the American Political Science Association, he was a member (1906-17) of the board of editors of the American Political Science Review. Author of Colonial Government (1902), Colonial Administration (1905), American Legislatures and Legislative Methods (1907), and Intellectual and Political Currents in the Far East (1911).

Reisenauer (rî'ze.nou.ér), Alfred. b. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, Nov. 1, 1863; d. at Liebau (Lubawka), in Silesia, Oct. 3, 1907. German pianist. He composed more than 100 songs, and works for piano.

Reiske (ris'ke), Johann Jakob. b. at Zörbig, near Halle, Germany, Dec. 25, 1716; d. Aug. 13, 1774. German Orientalist and classical philologist. He published works on Arabic, editions of Greek authors, and others.

Reisner (ris'nér), George Andrew. b. at Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 5, 1867; d. at Cairo, Egypt, June 7, 1942. American Egyptologist. He was director (1905-42) of Egyptian expeditions sponsored by Harvard and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and served as an assistant professor (1905-14) and professor (1914-42) at Harvard, and as curator (1910-42) of the Egyptian department of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. His discovery (1925) of the alabaster sarcophagus of the mother of Cheops, dating from more than 1,500 years before Tutankhamen, brought him international renown.

Reiss (ris), Albert. b. at Berlin, Feb. 22, 1870; d. at Nice, France, June 20, 1940. German operatic tenor. He made his first American appearance in 1901 at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and remained with the Metropolitan until 1917.

Reiss, Wilhelm. b. at Mannheim, Germany, 1838; d. near Pösnitz, Germany, Sept. 29, 1908. German scientist and traveler. From 1868 to 1876 he traveled in South America, generally in company with A. Stübel. They made their headquarters at Quito for four years, explored the Ecuadorian mountains, made an extended examination of the ancient necropolis of Ancon, near Lima, and other Peruvian antiquities, and finally descended the Amazon and visited the Brazilian coast cities. Their most important joint work is Das Totenfeld von Ancon in Peru (3 vols., 1880-87). Reiss also published many geological works.

Reissiger (ris'îgér), Karl Gottlieb. b. at Belzig, near Wittenberg, Germany, Jan. 31, 1798; d. at Dresden, Germany, Nov. 7, 1859. German composer of operas, songs, and orchestral compositions.

Reith (rêth), Sir John Charles Walsam. [Title, 1st Baron Reith of Stonehaven.] b. 1880. British politician and engineer. He was managing director (1923) and director general (1927-38) of the British Broadcasting System, chairman (1938-39) of Imperial Airways, and first chairman (1939-40) of British Overseas Airways Corporation. He was minister of information (1940), of transport (1940), and of works and buildings (1940-42), and first commissioner (1940-42) of works. From 1942 to 1945 he served with the navy.

Reitz (râts), Francis William. b. at Swellendam, Cape Colony, South Africa, Oct. 5, 1844; d. at Capetown, South Africa, March 27, 1934. South African politician and Boer leader. He practiced (1886 et seq.) as a barrister in South Africa, and was chief justice (1874-89) and president (1889-96) of the Orange Free State. He served as secretary of state (1898-1902) of the South African Republic, and was president of the senate (1911-18) of the Union of South Africa. He compiled anthologies of South African poetry and abridged G. M. Theal's Short History of South Africa.

Reitzenstein (rit'sen.sh'tin), Richard. b. at Breslau, April 2, 1861; d. at Göttingen, Germany, March 23, 1931. German classical scholar. Author of Epigramm und Skolion (1893), Die Vorgeschichte der christlichen Taufe (1929), and others.

Rej (râ), Mikolaj. b. at Żórawno, near Halicz (now in Ukraine), 1505; d. 1569. Polish Protestant moralist and writer, generally considered the father of Polish literature because of his pioneer use of the vernacular (1543).

Réjane (râ.zhan), Mme. [Stage name of Gabrielle Charlotte Réju.] b. at Paris, June 6, 1857; d. there, June 4, 1920. French actress and manager, for many years after her debut in 1875 the outstanding comedienne of the French stage. She achieved great success at the Vaudeville, whose director Porel she married in 1893 (divorced, 1905), and at the Odéon. She played in Mme. Sans-Gêne at London (1894) and New York (1895), founded and managed the Theatre Réjane at Paris (1905), made a long South American tour (1909), and appeared frequently at London. One of her greatest triumphs was in the role of Clotilde, the heroine of Henri Beque's La Parisienne, at the Théâtre Antoine (1897), a role she repeated at London in 1901. It was largely owing to her comic talent that Beque's naturalistic masterpiece came to be appreciated. She retired from the stage in 1915, but made several wartime appearances.

Rejected Addresses. Collection of parodies on Wordsworth, Byron, Scott, Moore, Coleridge, and other poets, written by the brothers James and Horace Smith, and published in 1812.

Rejoicing of the Law. See Simhath Torah.

Réju (râ.zhû), Gabrielle Charlotte. Original name of Réjane, Mme.

Relander (rälän'dér), Lauri Kristian. b. at Kronoborg, Finland, May 31, 1883; d. at Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 9, 1942. Finnish political leader, president (1925-31) of the Finnish Republic. He was a member of the Finnish legislature (1910-13, 1917-19), minister of agriculture (1918-20), and governor (1920-25) of Viipuri province.

Relapse, or Virtue in Danger, The. Play by Sir John Vanbrugh, produced in 1697. It was a sequel to Colley Cibber's Love's Last Shift.

Relief of Lucknow (luk'nou), The. Poem by Robert T. S. Lowell, published in his Poems (1864).

Relief of Lucknow, The. Play (1858) by Dion Boucicault.

Religio Laici (rê.lîj'î.ô lâ'î.sî). Polemic poem by John Dryden, published in 1682.

Religio Medici (med'î.sî). Philosophic treatise on religious belief by Sir Thomas Browne, published in 1643.

Religion, Wars of. Name given to a series of civil wars (1562-98) in France between the Huguenots and the Roman Catholics. Some eight or nine separate wars are distinguished, being separated by inconclusive treaties or paces (Amboise 1563, Longjumeau 1568, St. Germain 1570, Boulogne 1573, Chastillon or the Paix de Monsieur 1576, Bergerac 1577, Fleix 1580), but the wars amount to a single struggle with the majority of the nobility and the middle classes on the Huguenot side and the royal party and the peasantry on the other. Several notable battles were fought (Dreux 1562, Jarnac 1569, Moncontour 1569, Coutras 1587, Arques 1589, Ivry 1590) but the principal event of the conflict was probably the Massacre of St. Bartholomew (Aug. 23, 1572) in which many of the Huguenot leaders were murdered. The wars ended with the acceptance of Roman Catholicism by Henry IV (Henry of Navarre) and with the issuance (April 15, 1598) of the Edict of Nantes, granting political equality to the Huguenots.

Religious Aspect of Philosophy, The. Philosophic work by Josiah Royce, published in 1885.

Remagen (ră'mă'gen). [Lat., Rigomagus.] Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Palatinate, French Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Rhine River ab. 22 mi. NW of Koblenz: small industries; stone quarries; wine and fruit trade. 4,954 (1946).

Remagen Bridgehead. First bridgehead established E of the Rhine River by the Allies in World War II after their invasion of the Continent and the liberation of France. Advance units of the U.S. 9th Armored Division of the First Army reached Remagen and found the Ludendorff Bridge, which crossed the Rhine at that point, still intact but wired for demolition. Rushing across a few minutes before explosion time on March 7, 1945, advance U.S. detachments managed to prevent destruction of the bridge and the Rhine crossing thus secured was used during the period immediately following to pour reinforcements into Germany. The bridge was finally destroyed, but not until the Allies had established themselves firmly on both banks of the Rhine and built up their forces for an assault on the Ruhr.

Remarkable Providences. Essay by Increase Mather, published in 1684, containing a collection of providential happenings and records of those supposedly allied to the devil. The essay was intended to prove the existence of supernatural forces.

Remarque (re.mă'rk), Erich Maria. [Original name, Erich Paul Remark.] b. in Westphalia, Germany, 1897—, German novelist. His antimilitaristic novel based on experiences in World War I, In Western nichts Neues (1929; Eng. trans., All Quiet on the Western Front, 1929) was a phenomenal international success. The aftermath of the war was portrayed in Der Weg zurück (1931; Eng. trans., The Road Back, 1931) and Drei Kameraden (1937; Eng. trans., Three Comrades, 1937). He lived (1929–39) in Switzerland, and arrived (1939) in the U.S., of which he is now a citizen. Since coming to the U.S. he has written Flotsam (1941), Arch of Triumph (1946), and Spark of Life (1952).

Rembertów (rem.ber'tōf). Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warsaw, E of Warsaw. It belongs to the metropolitan area of Warsaw. 13,842 (1946).

Rembrandt (rem.brănt; Dutch, rem'brānt). [Full name, Rembrandt Harmenszoon van Rijn or Ryn (här-men.sōn vān rin).] b. at Leiden, Netherlands, July 15, 1607; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands (buried Oct. 8, 1669). Dutch painter and etcher, the chief member of the Dutch school of painting. His father was a miller in easy circumstances. At the age of 12 he entered the studio of Van Swaneburch and three years later that of Pieter Lastman at Amsterdam. In 1623 he returned to Leiden, where he remained until 1630. About 1628 he received his first pupil, Gerard Douw. In 1630 he removed to Amsterdam, where he soon had many pupils and many orders. On June 10, 1634, he married Saskia van Ulenburg. After her death he became involved in litigation, contracted debts, and in 1656 was formally declared bankrupt, and his collections were seized and sold for 500 florins. Among his principal works are Presentation in the Temple (1631); The Lesson in Anatomy (1632); Descent from the Cross, an etching (1633); the Artemisia at Madrid, and Saint Thomas at the Hermitage, St. Petersburg (1634); portrait of himself with his wife Saskia on his knee (1638); etching of Tobias and the Angel and Ecce Homo (1638); portrait of his mother, at Vienna (1639); Le Doreur (The Gilder, 1640), now at New York; Sortie of the Banning Cocq Company (the so-called Night Watch, 1642); etching of The Three Trees (1643); Pilgrims of Emmaus, in the Louvre (1648); the "Hundred-Guilder Print" of Christ preaching (1651); the name comes from a tradition that a Roman merchant offered him seven engravings by Marcantonio, worth 100 guilders, for a copy of the etching; The Burgomaster and His Wife (1657); Moses Descending Sinai (1659); Syndics of the Cloth Hall (1661); Jewish Bride (1663). He painted between 40 and 50 portraits of himself, which are in the various public galleries of Europe and America.

Rembrandt als Erzieher (rem'brānt əls ər.tse'ēr). Title of a cultural manifesto published anonymously in 1890 "by a German" ("von einem Deutschen"), who has been identified as Julius Langehn. It is a systematic popularization of much from Nietzsche and sees a return to extreme individualism as the only possible salvation from what Langehn considered to be the cultural decay of Germany in his time. The author epitomizes his program in the catch words "modesty, solitude, quiet—healthy individualism, popular aristocracy, spiritual art" and considers Rembrandt, who is here claimed as a German, the ideal and model to be emulated. Actually there is little Rembrandt in the book and very much about what it means to be a German. Its appearance coincided with one of the peaks of German nationalism, and it had great influence. Langehn has always since been referred to as "der Rembrandtdeutsche."

Remedios (ră.mă'ryōs). City on the N coast of Cuba, in Las Villas province: shipping point for sugar and tobacco. 10,485 (1943).

Remedius (ră.mē'di.us), Saint. See Saint Remi or Remy.

Remedy of Love, The. Poem written apparently c1530. It was printed in 1532 in an edition of Geoffrey Chaucer's poems, and long wrongly attributed to him.

Reményi (re.mă.nyē), Eduard. [Original name, Eduard Hoffmann.] b. 1830; d. at San Francisco, May 15, 1898. Hungarian violinist, noted for his technique and romantic interpretation.

Reményi, József. b. at Pozsony, Hungary (now Bratislava, Czechoslovakia), 1891—, Hungarian writer in the U.S. Author of Jó hínni (It Is Good to Believe, 1922), Embernek ne sirjatosk (People Shouldn't Cry, 1926), and Élni kell (We Must Live, 1931).

Remesal (ră.mă.să'l'), Antonio de. b. at Alariz, in Galicia, Spain, c1570; d. at Madrid, 1639. Spanish Dominican historian.

Remi or Remy (ră.mē), Saint. [Latinized, Remigius (rē.mij'i.us) or Remedius; called the "Apostle of the Franks."] b. at Cerny or Laon, France, 437 (some authorities say 439); d. at Reims, France, Jan. 13, 533. Frankish ecclesiastic. He was known from early youth for his learning and sanctity, and was elected archbishop of Reims at the age of 22. He labored for the conversion of the Franks and baptized their king, Clovis.

Remi (rē'mt). Tribe of the ancient Belgae, in Gaul, dwelling in the vicinity of what is now Reims (their capital). They aided Julius Caesar in his Gallic wars.

Rémi (ră.mē), Philippe de. See Beaumont, Philippe de Rémi, Sire de.

Remington (rem'ing-ton), Eliphalet. b. at Suffield, Conn., Oct. 27, 1793; d. Aug. 12, 1861. American firearms manufacturer, founder of the Remington gunworks. Up to 1828 he worked in association with his father, making gun barrels at what is now Ilion, N.Y., where, after the death (1828) of the father, the younger Remington established a gunshop. He purchased (1845) the gun-finishing facilities of Ames and Company of Springfield, Mass., and there commenced the manufacture of carbines and rifles for the U.S. government. He added the Remington pistol (1847) and agricultural implements (1856) to his business, and during the early months of the Civil War received large orders from the U.S. government.

Remington, Frederic. b. at Canton, N.Y., Oct. 4, 1861; d. at Ridgefield, Conn., Dec. 26, 1909. American figure and animal painter, and sculptor. Among his works are A Dash for the Timber, Last Stand, Past all Surgery, and A Broncho Buster (in bronze). He was well known as an illustrator, and especially for his pictures of cowboys and Indians.

Remington, Philo. b. at Litchfield, N.Y., Oct. 31, 1816; d. at Silver Springs, Fla., April 4, 1889. American manufacturer; son of Eliphalet Remington. Becoming associated with his father's gunworks at Ilion, N.Y., he became (1861) head of the company, which he reorganized (1865) into two branches, one for the manufacture of agricultural implements, the other (E. Remington and Sons) for the making of small arms. He was president of the latter firm, which under his direction specialized in the manufacture of pistols. He turned some of his gun-making facilities to the manufacture of sewing machines, which he placed on the market in 1870, and typewriters, the first Remington model appearing on the market in 1876. He sold his typewriter establishment in 1886 and his agricultural business in 1887.

Remington, Richard. Hero of H. G. Wells's novel The New Machiavelli (1911).

Remiremont (rē.mīr.mōh). Town in E France, in the department of Vosges, on the Moselle River SE of Épinal. It was the seat of a famous order of nuns, recruited from the highest nobility, from the 11th century until the French Revolution. There is a historical and art museum. 10,319 (1946).

Remizov (rā.mē.zōf), Aleksey Mikhailovich. b. at Moscow, 1877—, Russian author, an expatriate in France after 1921.

Remois (rē.mwā). Old district in Champagne, France. Its chief place was Reims.

Remonstrance, Grand. In English history, a formal protest passed by the House of Commons on Nov. 22, 1641. It listed the unconstitutional and unwise acts of the reign of Charles I, and demanded remedies.

Remonstrants. See under Arminians.

Remscheid (rēm.shīt). City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated near the Wupper River, ab. 20 mi. NE of Cologne. It is the center of German hardware manufactures, producing tools, kitchen utensils, bathroom fixtures, saws, scythes, skates, files, and like articles; also cloth, ribbons, rubber and leather goods, and canned fruit. 103,276 (1950).

Remsen (rēm.sen), Ira. b. at New York, Feb. 10, 1846; d. at Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif., March 4, 1927. American chemist. He was professor of chemistry and physics at Williams College (1872-76), professor of chemistry at the Johns Hopkins University (1876 et seq.), and president (1901-12) of the latter. He did notable work in organic chemistry, especially in connection with saccharin. He published Principles of Theoretical Chemistry (1877), An Introduction to the Study of Organic Chemistry (1885), Elementary Chemistry (1887), Inorganic Chemistry (1889), Chemical Experiments (1895), College Textbook of Chemistry (1901), and others.

Rémur (rē.mūr), Simon William Gabriel Bruté De. See Bruté De Rémur, Simon William Gabriel.

Remus (rē.mūs). In Roman legend, the twin brother of Romulus. It is said that after Romulus built the walls of Rome, Remus contemptuously leaped over them, and Romulus, in anger, killed him.

Remus, Uncle. See Uncle Remus.

Rémusat (rā.mū.zā), Comtesse de. [Maiden name, Claire Elisabeth Anne Gravier de Vergennes.] b. at Paris, Jan. 5, 1780; d. Dec. 21, 1821. French writer; wife of the chamberlain of Napoleon I, and an attendant of the empress Josephine. Her Mémoires on the court of Napoleon were published in 1879, and her Lettres in 1881.

Rémusat, François Marie Charles, Comte de. b. at Paris, March 14, 1797; d. there, June 6, 1875. French liberal politician and author; son of the Comtesse de Rémusat. He was minister of the interior in 1840, and minister of foreign affairs (1871-73). He wrote various philosophical works, including Essais de philosophie (1842), Abélard (1845), St. Anselme de Canterbury (1853), L'Angleterre au XVIII^e siècle (1856), Bacon, sa vie, son temps; sa philosophie (1857), and Histoire de la philosophie en Angleterre (1875).

Rémusat, Jean Pierre Abel. b. at Paris, Sept. 5, 1788; d. there, June 3, 1832. French Orientalist. He wrote Essai sur la langue et la littérature chinoises (1811), Recherches sur les langues tartares (1820), Éléments de la grammaire chinoise (1822), and other works on Chinese.

Remy (rā.mē), Saint. See Saint Remi or Remy.

Rémy (rā.mē), Jules. b. near Châlons-sur-Marne, France, Sept. 2, 1826; d. Dec. 5, 1893. French traveler and botanist.

Renaissance (ren.ā.zāns', -sāns', rē.nā'sāns) or Renascence. These terms, respectively from the French and from the Latin, and signifying "rebirth," historically identify the period of transition in western Europe from medieval to modern times, and critically refer to the thought, philosophy, art, and spirit of that period. The essence of the Renaissance was the reintroduction into western European thought and aesthetics of the full cultural heritage of Greece and Rome. It was not so much a rebirth as a reemergence of things lost in the rubble of the Roman world, and little valued during the age of scholasticism, of narrow preoccupation with theology. The close of the Renaissance may be correlated with the end of the 16th century, but to date its beginning is far more difficult. In one view, Saint Francis of Assisi (c1182-1226) is a forerunner of the Renaissance, in that his religion was joyous and he frankly loved nature and creatures. Dante, journeying through a medieval hell, and purgatory, and paradise, pointed to the Renaissance when he chose the pagan and classical Vergil for his guide; the passionate yet urbane Petrarch and the sophisticated Boccaccio are already men of the Renaissance, yet they all died before the dawn of the 15th century (which some take as the beginning of the Renaissance). The Crusades and the journeys of Marco Polo, enlarging the horizon of European man, were factors leading to the Renaissance, as the voyages of Columbus, Vasco de Gama, and Magellan later enriched it. Classic and Hellenistic works of poetry, philosophy, mathematics, and grammar, preserved by the Arabs, came back into Europe with returning Crusaders and through the Moors in Spain. Before the fall of Constantinople in 1453, Moslem pressure on the Byzantine Empire caused numerous scholars to flee to Italy, bringing classical lore and manuscripts. The climate was right for a spring season of the human spirit in Italy in the 15th and 16th centuries. The painters led the way, with the example of Giotto (1276-1336) before them. Many factors made his city, Florence, the center of Renaissance painting and sculpture, but these and other arts flourished also at Rome, Padua, Perugia, Urbino, Ferrara, Mantua, Milan, Bologna, and Venice. No other period of human history has seen such a galaxy of great painters as that which includes Fra Angelico, Pisanello, Masaccio, Fra Filippo Lippi, Piero della Francesca, Pollaiuolo, Mantegna, Jacopo Bellini, Giovanni Bellini, Verrocchio, Botticelli, Perugino, Carpaccio, Giorgione, Fra Bartolommeo, Andrea del Sarto, Correggio, and Tintoretto, all clustering about the supreme figures of Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, and Titian. But that caution is called for in fixing both the temporal and the geographic outlines of the Renaissance is illustrated by the fact that in the late 14th and early 15th centuries Flemish painting was ahead of Italian painting in such typically Renaissance characteristics as the trend toward realism, the practice of portraiture, and the increase of human interest. The work of such Flemings as the van Eycks, Roger van der Weyden, and Hugo van der Goe greatly influenced Italian painting, as later Italian painting was to influence Flemish artists, including Memling, Matsys, Bosch, the Brueghels, and Rubens, and French artists, and German artists, including Dürer and Holbein. But though the influence of Italian Renaissance sculpture was also felt abroad, nowhere outside Italy were the achievements of Donatello and Ghiberti, Michelangelo and Cellini, Verrocchio and Luca della Robbia even approached. Renaissance architecture also had its origin, and its fullest development, in Florence, Rome, Pavia, Ferrara, Milan, Venice, and other Italian cities. The Gothic style had taken little root in Italy. Yet for nearly a thousand years Italian architects had ignored the remnants and ruins of antiquity with which they were surrounded, or had used them only as quarries for the stone that went into their contemporary creations. However, as the city-states waxed in power and wealth under their forceful ducal rulers, coincidentally with the flowering of the Renaissance, both necessity and the spirit of ostentation called for great palaces and public buildings; the models of antiquity were first drawn upon for these, and presently their influence was felt in ecclesiastical architecture also. The Italians did not, however, return to the noble simplicity of antiquity; Renaissance architecture was no matter of copying, but was an original, creative art, born of an exuberant age. Antiquity was drawn on not so much for form as for decoration, and while many Italian Renaissance structures are of breathtaking beauty, others exhibit the excess of ornament which eventually led to the baroque style. In other countries the Renaissance induced architectural developments growing out of their own conditions, though some traces of Italian influence are found in French chateaux and public buildings and in English palaces. The informing spirit and impulse behind all these visible manifestations was the great stirring of human thought historically known as Humanism. Most Renaissance Humanists remained, sincerely or otherwise, affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church, though Humanism did have something to do with the rise of Protestantism. But many things, the Crusades and voyages, as already noted, the recovery of remnants of classical literature, the unearthing of examples of classical sculpture, the invention of printing, the new cosmology resulting from the theorizing of such men as Copernicus and Galileo, the growth of cities and increase of wealth, gave rise to what has aptly been called Neo-Protagoreanism, remembering that Protagoras said "Man is the measure of all things." There were among the Humanists some who were virtually atheists, but Humanism might be generally defined as a partial diversion of interest from theology and the future life to the present life and to man, accompanied by a vastly increased confidence in man's capacity to understand the universe and the forces of nature, and to work out his destiny. The spirit of Humanism is accordingly best perceived in Renaissance writings, literary and philosophical; among a very numerous company of writers, we need mention only Machiavelli, Erasmus, More, Montaigne, Bacon, and the English dramatists and poets of Elizabeth's and James I's reigns, Renaissance men all of them, and none more so than Shakespeare. Spain is an exception to the general statement that the Renaissance can be considered to have ended with the end of the 16th century. Humanistic thought had little utterance in Spanish save through Cervantes and Lope de Vega, late in the 16th and early in the 17th century. Although Charles V was partial to Italian art, the influence of the Renaissance in painting was slight until the rise of Velázquez, and it persisted as late as the days of Murillo. Later than elsewhere also, there evolved a Spanish Renaissance architecture, showing some Italian influence but largely native in origin. The Renaissance as a whole is often divided into the Early Renaissance, running to about the year 1500; the High Renaissance, defined as the years 1500 to 1530, when the very greatest of the Italian artists were at the peak of their powers, and the patronage of beauty-loving popes and nobles was most generous; and the Late Renaissance, from 1530 to the end of the century.

Renaix (re.ně). [Flemish: Ronse, Rousse.] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of East Flanders, ar. 35 mi. W of Brussels: linen, woolen, and cotton textile manufactures; hops trade. 25,924 (1947).

Renan (re.nān), (Joseph) Ernest. b. at Tréguier, Côtes-du-Nord, France, Jan. 27, 1823; d. at Paris, Oct. 2, 1892. French philologist and historian. He was the acknowledged leader of the school of critical philosophy in France. His studies, begun in his native town, were completed at Paris. He was discouraged in the study of theology by the barrenness of the scholastic method then in vogue, and broke sharply with the system. While making his living by teaching, he pursued his studies in comparative philology, and took, one after the other, his university degrees. His works published between 1850 and 1860 attracted much attention, especially for their style. They include his doctor's thesis, Averroès et l'averroïsme (1852), Études d'histoire religieuse (1857), De l'origine du langage (1858), and Essais de morale et de critique (1859). Soon after his return from a mission to the East (1861), Renan was called to the chair of Hebrew in the Collège de France; but, as he denied the divinity of Christ, he fell out with the clerical party, and was forced to resign his professorship in 1864. The works he wrote about this time contributed perhaps in greatest measure to his reputation. Foremost among them stands La Vie de Jésus (1863), the first book in the series entitled Histoire des origines du christianisme, which includes Les Apôtres (1866), St. Paul et sa mission (1867), L'antéchrist (1873), Les Évangiles et la seconde génération chrétienne (1877), L'Église chrétienne (1879), and Marc-Aurèle et la fin du monde antique (1880). The Index was published in 1889, and the natural introduction to the entire series is to be found in an entirely separate work, Histoire du peuple d'Israël (1887-94). Renan was also the author of Questions contemporaines (1868), Dialogues philosophiques (1876), Drames philosophiques (1888), and many other works.

Renard (re.när), Alphonse François. b. at Renaix, Belgium, 1842; d. at Ixelles, Belgium, 1903. Belgian geologist. He served as curator (1877 et seq.) of the mineralogical collection of the museum of natural history at Brussels and as professor (1888 et seq.) at the University of Ghent. Author of Observations géologiques sur les îles volcaniques explorées par l'expédition du "Beagle," and with Sir John Murray, of a Report on the Scientific Results of the Voyage of H.M.S. "Challenger."

Renard, Jules. b. at Châlons, Mayenne, France, Feb. 22, 1864; d. at Paris, May 22, 1910. French novelist, playwright, and essayist. Author of novels and shorter fictions, including L'Écorneille (1892), Le Courreur de filles (1894), and Poil de Carotte (1894); of plays, including Poil de Carotte (1900), Monsieur Vernet (1903), and La Bigote (1909). He also contributed copiously to humorous publications. Much of his work is autobiographical.

Renascence. Poem in octosyllabic couplets by Edna St. Vincent Millay, originally published in 1912 and included as the title piece of a volume published in 1917.

Renaud (re.nō). A French form of Rinaldo.

Renaud, Maurice Arnold. b. at Bordeaux, France, c1862; d. 1933. French baritone singer.

Renaucler (re.nō.dē), Pierre. b. at Paris, Dec. 19, 1871; d. at Palma, Mallorca, April 1, 1935. French political leader and journalist, secretary-general (1909 et seq.) of the French Socialist Party. He was editor of Le Peuple (1902-14), L'Humanité (1914-20), and La Vie Socialiste (1918 et seq.). A deputy (1914-19, 1924 et seq.), he approved the Moroccan war (1925), opposed (1925-27) the leadership of Léon Blum, withdrew (1927) from the Socialist Party leadership, was expelled (1933) from the party, and founded a small neo-Socialist group.

Renault (re.nō), Jean Louis. b. at Autun, Saône-et-Loire, France, May 21, 1843; d. at Barbizon, Seine-et-Marne, France, Feb. 8, 1918. French jurist, professor of international law at the University of Paris. He was jurisconsult for the ministry of foreign affairs and a member of the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague. In 1907, with E. T. Moneta, he was awarded the Nobel peace prize. He published Introduction à l'étude du droit international and Traité de droit commercial (with C. Lyon-Caen).

Renault, Louis. b. at Paris, Jan. 12, 1877; d. there, Oct. 24, 1944. French industrialist, the leading automobile manufacturer of France. He built his first car in 1897-98. He established a large automobile plant, and designed and built tractors and light tanks during World War I. He continued production after the defeat of France (July, 1940) in World War II, and died in prison (October, 1944) while awaiting trial on charges of collaboration with the Germans. His plant was nationalized by the French government.

Rencontre Imprévue (răn.kôntră an.pră.vũ), La. French title of Pilgrims of Mecca, The.

Rendall (ren.dal), Gerald Henry. b. at Harrow, Middlesex, England, 1851; d. Jan. 4, 1945. English classical scholar, headmaster of the Charterhouse School (1897-1911). His writings include The Cradle of the Aryans (1889), a translation of the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius (1897), and others.

Rendel (ren.dēl), James Meadows. b. near Dartmoor, England, 1799; d. at London, Nov. 21, 1856. English engineer.

Rendezvous Bluff (răn.dē.vũ). Former name of Discovery Bluff.

Rendis or Rentis (ren.dēs), Constantine. b. at Corinth, Greece, 1884. Greek statesman. He was in the diplomatic service (1910-20) and a delegate to the Paris Peace Conference (1918-20). He served as a deputy from Corinth (1920), and was minister of justice (1922), of foreign affairs (1922, 1924, 1925-26, 1946), of justice and interior (1945), of interior (1946), of public order (1947-49), and of war (1948). He was a delegate to the United Nations in 1946.

Rendl (ren.dī), Georg. b. at Zell am See, Salzburg, Austria, Feb. 1, 1903. Austrian writer, best known for his novels. He has also written some successful plays.

Rendsburg (rents.bürk). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated on the Eider River and the Kiel Canal, ab. 20 mi. W of Kiel: chemical, glass, tobacco, embroidery manufactures, and canneries. It also produces wooden shoes, and has cattle, hog, and horse markets. The Gothic Church of Mary dates from the 13th century; the Christ Church from 1700; the Rathaus (town hall) from 1566. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 65.1 percent. 35,502 (1946), 36,991 (1950).

René (re.nā). Novel by François René de Châteaubriand, published in 1802.

René I. [Called "le Bon," English, "the Good"; Latin, Renatus.] b. at Angers, France, Jan. 16, 1409; d. at Aix, France, July 10, 1480. Duke of Anjou (1434-80), count of Provence (1431-80), and (titular) king of Naples (1435-80); son of Louis II of Naples and Yolande of Aragon. He succeeded Joanna II at Naples in 1435, but was dispossessed by Alfonso V of Aragon in 1442. He was a patron of literature and art, and made his court renowned for its brilliance. He was himself noted as a writer of poetry and romance.

René Baton (re.nā bā.tōn). See Rhené-Baton.

Renegado, or the Gentleman of Venice (ren.ē.gā.dō). The. Play by Philip Massinger, licensed in 1624 and printed in 1630. The title was changed before James Shirley's Gentleman of Venice was produced.

Renfrew (ren.frō). Town in SE Ontario, Canada, just W of the Ottawa River, ab. 74 mi. NW of Ottawa, with which it is connected by rail and road, 7,360 (1951).

Renfrew. Royal burgh in S Scotland, county seat of Renfrewshire, on the river Clyde ab. 5 mi. W of Glasgow, ab. 411 mi. N of London by rail. It has linen manufactures, 17,555 (est. 1948).

Renfrewshire (ren.frō.shir) or Renfrew (ren.frō). Maritime county in S Scotland. It is bounded on the N by the river Clyde and Dunbartonshire, on the E by Lanarkshire, on the S and SW by Ayrshire, and on the W by the Firth of Clyde. The surface in the SW part is hilly and bleak, sloping N and NE to the lowlands along the river Clyde. The principal industries are agriculture, mining (chiefly of coal and iron ore) and quarrying, cotton-textile and thread manufactures, shipbuilding, and sugar refining. The largest towns are Paisley and Greenock. Renfrew is the county seat; area, ab. 225 sq. mi.; pop. 324,652 (1951).

Renì (rā'nì). Guido. See Guido Reni.

Renkum (reng.kum). Town in E Netherlands, in the province of Gelderland, on the Neder Rijn (Lower Rhine) River W of Arnhem; paper, rubber, and furniture factories. 24,135 (est. 1951).

Renn (ren). Ludwig. [Pseudonym of Arnold Friedrich Vieth von Golsenau.] b. at Dresden, Germany, April 22, 1889—d. German novelist. From his experiences in World War I he wrote Krieg (1923; Eng. trans., War, 1929), which many consider to be one of the most factual and objective of German war novels. The confusion of postwar conditions is portrayed in his novel Nachkrieg (1930; Eng. trans., After War, 1931). A communist, he was placed in a concentration camp during the early period of the Hitler regime. His novel Vor grossen Wandlungen (1936; Eng. trans., Death Without Battle, 1937), written after he escaped to Switzerland, gives an account of this experience. A further autobiographical novel, Adel im Untergang (1944), appeared after his emigration to Mexico.

Rennell (ren.əl), 1st Baron. [Title of James Rennell Rodd.] b. Nov. 9, 1858; d. at Ardrath, Sharnley Green, Surrey, England, July 26, 1941. English diplomat and writer. He was secretary of legation (1894-1901) at Cairo, counselor of embassy (1901-04) at Rome, minister (1904-08) to Sweden, and ambassador (1908-19) to Italy. He was a delegate (1921, 1923) to the League of Nations, and headed courts of conciliation between Austria and Switzerland (1925) and Italy and Chile (1928).

Rennell, James. b. near Chudleigh, Devonshire, England, Dec. 3, 1742; d. at London, March 29, 1830. English geographer in the service of the East India Company. His chief works are Memoir of a Map of Hindustan (revised ed., 1793), Bengal Atlas (1779), Geographical System of Herodotus (1800), Topography of the Plain of Troy (1814), and Geography of Western Asia (1831).

Renner (ren.ər). Karl. [Pseudonym in (political writing), Synopticus.] b. at Unter-Tannowitz, in Moravia, Dec.

14, 1870; d. at Grinzing (part of Vienna), Dec. 31, 1950. Austrian statesman. He became (1907) a Social Democratic member of parliament. Following World War I, he was the first chancellor of the Austrian republic, signed the peace treaty of St.-Germain (September, 1919), and resigned in 1920. He was president of the parliament in 1931, and a leader in the resistance against German aggression. He headed the provisional government from 1945 to 1950.

Rennes (ren.ē). [Breton, Roazon; ancient names, Condate, Civitas Redonum.] City in NW France, capital of the department of Ille-et-Vilaine and the ancient capital of Brittany, situated at the junction of the Ille and Vilaine rivers. It is an important railroad junction on the main line from Paris to Brest. It is a center of the leather trade and the leather industry, and also has paper manufacturing and printing establishments. The Cathedral of Saint Pierre, in classical Greek style, dates from 1787, the palace of justice from the 17th century. The city has an art museum and a university. Rennes became internationally known (1899) as the seat of the second trial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus. A large part of Rennes, including the museum, was severely damaged during World War II. 113,781 (1946).

Rennie (ren.ī). John. b. at Phantassie, Haddingtonshire (now East Lothian), Scotland, June 7, 1761; d. at London, Oct. 4, 1821. British engineer and architect. Three of the Thames bridges (the Southwark, the Waterloo, and the London) were built from his designs. He also designed the London docks, the India docks, and docks at Hull, Greenock, Liverpool, and Dublin, and the dockyards at Portsmouth, Chatham, Sheerness, and Plymouth.

Reno (re.nō). City in NV Nevada, county seat of Washoe County, on the Truckee River ab. 16 mi. NW of Virginia City; chief city of the state. Comparatively lenient divorce requirements and legalized gambling attract many divorce seekers and vacationists. There are meat-packing, lumber, and other industries. It is the seat of the University of Nevada. 32,497 (1950).

Reno, El. See El Reno.

Reno, Jesse Lee. b. at Wheeling, W. Va., June 20, 1823; killed at the battle of South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14, 1862. American general. He was graduated from West Point in 1846, served in the Mexican War, and was appointed a brigadier general of U.S. volunteers in 1861. He served in the Roanoke expedition in 1862, and participated as a corps commander in the second battle of Bull Run, and in the battles of Chantilly and South Mountain.

Reno, Jesse Wilford. b. 1862; d. at Pelham Manor, N.Y., June 2, 1947. American engineer who invented (1892) the inclined elevator, a forerunner of the modern escalator; son of Jesse Lee Reno.

Renoir (re.nwār), Pierre Auguste. b. at Limoges, France, Feb. 25, 1840; d. at Cagnes-sur-Mer, France, Dec. 3, 1919. French impressionist painter, one of the leaders of this movement, and one of its founders. He moved from Limoges to Paris at the age of four, and at 13 became apprenticed to a porcelain painter. In 1862 he entered the École des Beaux-Arts, where he was a friend of C. Monet, A. Sisley, and J. F. Bazille. He first exhibited in 1864 at the Salon, but for the next ten years he was rejected there as much as accepted. He participated in the first impressionist show (1874) and in most of them thereafter. His first important success at the Salon was with the Portrait of Mme. Charpentier and Her Children (1879). He traveled to Algiers and Italy in 1881, and from that time traveled a great deal during the summer months. In 1907 he acquired a home on the Côte-d'Azur, where he lived until his death. His work is extremely colorful and sensuous, and follows the luminous theories; he was an important influence on the post- and neo-impressionists. Among his better-known works are Portrait of V. Choquet, The Moulin de la Galette, A Winter Day on the Bois de Boulogne, The Horsewoman, Portrait of C. Monet, The Blonde Bather, Judgment of Paris, Still Life (1866), Still Life with Peaches, Girl with Chrysanthemum, Sisley and his Wife, Girl with Watering Can, Odalysse, The Pont Neuf, Quai de Conti, Monet Working in His Garden, Dancer, Harvesters, The Lope, Argenteuil Bridge, Mme. Monet, Self-Portrait, The Artist's Studio, The Swing, Portrait of Mme. Henriot, Boating Party, Luncheon of the fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; τη, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Boating Party, Portrait of Cézanne, Dance at Bougival, In the Meadow, Two Girls at the Piano, and many Bathers and Nudes.

Reno River (rā'nō). [Latin, Rhenus.] River in Italy which rises in the Apennines and flows as the Po di Primaro into the Adriatic ab. 12 mi. N of Ravenna. It formerly flowed into the Po. Total length, ab. 125 mi.

Renouvier (rē.nō.vyā), Charles Bernard. b. at Montpellier, France, Jan. 1, 1815; d. at Prades, France, Sept. 1, 1903. French philosopher, influenced by the theories of Kant, champion of phenomenological neoidealism in France. Author of Essais de critique générale (1854-64), La Science de la morale (1869), Uchronie, l'utopie dans l'histoire (1876), Le Personnalisme (1903), and Critique de la doctrine de Kant (1906).

Renovo (rē.nō'vō). Borough in C Pennsylvania, in Clinton County; railroad shops; manufactures of shirts and clay products, 3,751 (1950).

Rensselaer (ren'se.lér). City in NW Indiana, county seat of Jasper County; trading center for an agricultural area, 4,072 (1950).

Rensselaer (ren'se.lir, ren'se.lir', ren'se.lér). City in E New York, in Rensselaer County, on the Hudson River opposite Albany; industrial suburb of Albany; railroad shops; manufactures of dyss, chemicals, felt, and woolen goods. The city, formed in 1897, is comprised of the former villages of East Albany, Greenbush, and Bath-on-the-Hudson, 10,856 (1950).

Rent Day, The. Domestic drama by Douglas Jerrold, printed in 1832.

Rentería (ren.tā.re'ā). Town in N Spain, in the province of Guipúzcoa, SE of San Sebastián, 10,106 (1940).

Rentis (ren'dēs), Constantine. See Rendis, Constantine.

Renton (ren'ton). City in W Washington, in King County SE of Seattle; aircraft, pottery, and iron manufactures; coal mining, 16,039 (1950).

Rentschler (rench'lér), Harvey Clayton. b. at Hamburg, Pa., March 26, 1881; d. at East Orange, N.J., March 23, 1949. American physicist who conducted experiments with uranium later important in connection with the development of the atomic bomb. He was director of research (1917-47) for the Westinghouse Electric Company lamp division, and developed with Dr. Robert F. James the sterilamp, the first practical bacteria-killing ultraviolet-ray lamp, but his best-known achievement came about through research into lamp constituents. In looking for metals that might be used as filaments in lamps, Rentschler derived the first pure metallic uranium (1922); his process resulted in the only appreciable production of the metal and when, in 1942, he was called upon to turn out uranium in greater quantities for the atomic research projects then being undertaken, he increased the amount a thousandfold.

Renville Truce Agreement (ren'vil). Agreement reached between the Netherlands government and the republican Indonesian government on board the U.S. Navy transport Renville, anchored off the port of Batavia, on Jan. 17, 1948. It was signed after negotiations carried on under the auspices of the Good Offices Committee appointed by the United Nations Security Council to work out a settlement of the dispute over the right of the republican government to exercise sovereignty as the recognized de facto authority over the greater part of Java, Madura, and Sumatra, and was in effect until the establishment of a federated United States of Indonesia on Jan. 1, 1949, under the Linggadjati Agreement of March 27, 1947. Under the truce agreement, both parties undertook to issue a ceasefire order within 48 hours, to respect certain demilitarized zones, and also to bring into force measures of demilitarization and pacification previously agreed upon.

Renwick (ren'wik), Edward Sabine. b. at New York, Jan. 3, 1823; d. at Short Hills, N.J., March 19, 1912. American inventor; son of James Renwick (1792-1863). During his lifetime he obtained some 25 patents on inventions of his own, including a grain harvester and binder, devices for incubators and chicken brooders, a breech-loading firearm, a tumbler lock, and a steam valve. Author of The Thermostatic Incubator, Its Construction and Management (1883) and Patentable Invention (1893).

Renwick, Henry Brevoort. b. Sept. 4, 1817; d. at New York, Jan. 27, 1895. American engineer and patent expert; son of James Renwick (1792-1863). He was connected (1840) with the U.S. Boundary Commission, remaining with that body until 1846, and in 1853 was named the first U.S. inspector of steam vessels at the New York port. His latter years were spent as a patent expert.

Renwick (ren'wik, -ik), James. b. at Moniaive, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, Feb. 15, 1662; executed Feb. 17, 1688. Scottish Covenanter. In 1683 he was ordained at Groningen, Netherlands, and became a field preacher. In 1684 he published the Apologetic Declaration, denying the ecclesiastical authority of Charles II, for which he was outlawed. He was indicted for disowning the authority of James II, maintaining the lawfulness of defensive arms, and other political offenses, was condemned, and was hanged in the Grassmarket, Edinburgh.

Renwick (ren'wik), James. b. in England, May 30, 1792; d. at New York, Jan. 12, 1863. American physicist. He wrote Outlines of Natural Philosophy (1822-23), A Treatise on the Steam-Engine (1830), Elements of Mechanics (1832), scientific textbooks, and biographies of Fulton, Hamilton, and others.

Renwick, James. b. at Bloomingdale (now part of New York City), Nov. 3, 1818; d. at New York, June 23, 1895. American architect; son of James Renwick (1792-1863). He designed Grace Church (New York), Saint Patrick's Cathedral (New York), the Smithsonian Institution and Corcoran Art Gallery (Washington), and others.

Réole (rā.ōl), La. See La Réole.

Reparations, Allied Commission on. For World War II, see Allied Commission on Reparations.

Reparations Commission. Body authorized by the Treaty of Versailles for the purpose of determining the total of reparations payments demanded from Germany and other Central Powers after World War I. In April, 1921, the commission fixed the sum at 132 billion gold marks (about 32 billion dollars) and arranged a schedule for priorities and payments. The difficulties which arose in the course of collecting reparations led to the appointment of a committee under Charles G. Dawes which drew up the Dawes Plan, initiated in 1924. The commission was terminated in 1930, when the Young Plan was adopted.

Re Pastore (rā.pās.tō'rā), II. Dramatic cantata by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, to Metastasio's words, composed in 1775.

Repelen-Baerl (rā'pe.len.berl'). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 18 mi. W of Essen; coal mines; metal and cloth manufactures, 15,405 (1946).

Repgow (rep'gō), Eike von. See Eike von Repgow or Repkow.

Rephaim (rē.fā'im). In Old Testament legend, a race of giants, the ancient inhabitants of Palestine and of the land E of the Jordan.

Rephaim, Valley of. In Biblical geography, a valley or plain SW of Jerusalem.

Repin (rep'in), Ilya Efimovich. b. Aug. 5, 1844; d. Sept. 29, 1930. Russian genre, historical, and portrait painter, water colorist, and sculptor, who was a leader of the naturalist movement in the second half of the 19th century in Russia, and the link between naturalism and more modern trends there. He studied at St. Petersburg, then traveled to Rome, Paris, and Vienna, and exhibited in Russia, France, Germany, Italy, and elsewhere. A list of his work includes Portrait Bust of L. Tolstoy, Ivan the Terrible Killing His Son, The Tsarina Sophie, The Cossacks, Conference of the Council of State, At the Monastery of the Virgin, The Last Supper, The Duel, Turgenev, Gogol, Borodin, Rimsky-Korsakoff, and Moussorgsky.

Repkow (rep'kō), Eike von. See Eike von Repgow or Repkow.

Repnin (rip.nyén'), Prince Nikolai. b. at St. Petersburg, March 22, 1734; d. at Riga, Latvia, May 24, 1801. Russian general and diplomat. As the representative of Catherine the Great at Warsaw (1763-69), he worked to arouse the dissidents in an effort to confuse Polish politics to the point where Russia would be called upon to intervene; the policy eventually resulted in the partitions of Poland. He resigned to lead a command against the Turks, served as ambassador to Turkey (1775-76), and fought in the War of the Bavarian Succession. He again served against the Turks, whom he defeated on July 9, 1791.

Repplier (rep'li), Agnes. b. at Philadelphia, April 1, 1855; d. there, Dec. 15, 1950. American essayist. She wrote Books and Men (1888), Points of View (1891), Essays in Miniature (1892), Essays in Idleness (1893), In the Dozy Hours (1895), Varia (1897), The Fireside Spinster (1901), Compromises (1904), In Our Convent Days (1905), Philadelphia (1907), Happy Half-Century (1908), Americans and Others (1912), Counter Currents (1916), Under Dispute (1924), To Think of Teal (1932), In Pursuit of Laughter (1936), and Eight Decades (1937). Her biographical works include Père Marquette (1929), Mère Marie of the Ursulines (1931), and Junipero Serra (1933).

Representative Men. Seven essays by Ralph Waldo Emerson, originally delivered as lectures (1845-46, 1847) and published in 1850. The initial essay, "On the Uses of Great Men," is followed by considerations of Plato, Swedenborg, Montaigne, Shakespeare, Napoleon, and Goethe.

Representatives, House of. Lower, more numerous branch of the U.S. Congress, comprising (1949) 435 members, chosen every second year by the people of the several states. It is presided over by a speaker elected by its members. Representatives are apportioned among the states according to population, every state having at least one representative. No one can be a representative who has not attained the age of 25, who has not been seven years a citizen of the U.S. and who is not an inhabitant of the state in which he is chosen. The House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment and of originating bills for raising revenue. Each organized territory has a delegate in the House of Representatives who is entitled to speak, though he has no vote.

Reprisals, or the Tars of Old England, The. Farce by Tobias Smollett, produced in 1757.

Republic, The. Work by Plato, descriptive of a commonwealth drawn according to his ideal.

Republic, The Battle Hymn of the. See Battle Hymn of the Republic, The.

Republican (rep'ub'li.kan). River in E Colorado, S Nebraska, and N Kansas. It unites with the Smoky Hill in Davis County, Kan., ab. 60 mi. W of Topeka, to form the Kansas River. Length, ab. 445 mi.; with South Fork, ab. 625 mi.

Republican Party. Name sometimes applied to the group or party (in full, Democratic-Republican Party) opposed to the Federalists during the last decade of the 18th century in the U.S. It replaced the name Anti-Federal, and was itself replaced by the name Democratic.

Republican Party. U.S. political party formed in 1854, having as its original purpose opposition to the extension of slavery into the territories. The name was adopted at a meeting (Feb. 28, 1854) at Ripon, Wis., and at a state convention which assembled (July 6, 1854) at Jackson, Mich. It held its first national convention at Pittsburgh in February, 1856, and conducted its initial national nominating convention at Philadelphia in June, 1856, when John C. Frémont was chosen as its first presidential candidate. It was composed of Free Soilers, of antislavery Whigs, and of some Democrats (who formed the group known as Anti-Nebraska men), and was joined by the abolitionists, and eventually by many Know Nothings. During the period of the Civil War many war Democrats acted with it. In 1856 it elected its candidate (N.P. Banks) for speaker of the House of Representatives, and in 1861 it gained control of the executive and both houses of Congress. The presidents from 1861 to 1885 (Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, and Arthur) were all Republicans, and the presidency was again filled by a Republican during the administrations of Harrison (1889-93), McKinley (1897-1901), Theodore Roosevelt (1901-09), Taft (1909-13), Harding (1921-23), Coolidge (1923-29), Hoover (1929-33), and Eisenhower (1953 et seq.).

Republican Socialist Union Party. Bolivian political party, with a mildly radical platform, formed in 1946 by a coalition of other parties.

Republic of Korea (kō.rē'a). See under Korea.

République Française (rā.pū.blēk frān.sēz). Official French name of France.

Repulse (rē.puls'), Sinking of the. See Prince of Wales and Repulse, Sinking of the.

Repulse Bay. Bay S of Melville Peninsula, in the district of Keewatin, Northwest Territories, Canada, and N of Southampton Island.

Requena (rā.kā'nā). Town in E Spain, in the province of Valencia, ab. 35 mi. W of Valencia. A center of the Spanish wine trade, it also has manufactures of silk. Much contested by Christians and Moors in the Middle Ages, it was conquered by the Cid, retaken by the Moors, and finally occupied by Alfonso VIII in 1219. Pop. 19,422 (1940).

Requetés (rā.kā.tās'). In 20th-century Spanish history, a name adopted by Spanish Carlist armies from the refrain of a marching song of the third Navarrese battalion, much honored among the Armies of the Faith (Ejércitos de la Fe). Many of these Carlist bands were trained in Fascist Italy during the Spanish Civil War and together with Francisco Franco's Moorish troops and the Tercio (Spanish Foreign Legion) were responsible for some of the fiercest fighting of that conflict.

Requiem (rē'kwī.əm, rek'wī.əm), German. See German Requiem.

Requier (rē.kyā'), Augustus Julian. b. at Charleston, S.C., May 27, 1825; d. at New York, March 19, 1887. American poet and dramatist. He was admitted to the bar (1844) at Charleston, served as editor of the Marion (S.C.) Star, and was U.S. district attorney (1853 et seq.) for Alabama. During the Civil War he was district attorney for the Confederacy, and in 1866 moved to New York. Author of the blank verse play The Spanish Exile (1842), The Old Sanctuary: A Romance of the Ashley (1846), Poems (1860), Ode to Shakespeare (1862), and The Legend of Tremaine (c1864).

Resaca de la Palma (rā.sā'kā dē lā pāl'mā). Place in S Texas, ab. 4 mi. N of Matamoros, Mexico, where a battle was fought May 9, 1846, between U.S. troops (ab. 2,200) under Zachary Taylor and the Mexicans (4,000 to 5,000) under Mariano Arista. The engagement followed the battle of Palo Alto on the 8th, and, as in that, Taylor was victorious. All the Mexican artillery and trains fell into his hands.

Rescue, The. Psychological novel by Joseph Conrad, published in 1920.

Research Magnificent, The. Novel by H. G. Wells, published in 1915.

Resende (rē.zen'de), Garcia de. b. at Évora, Portugal, c1470; d. 1536. Portuguese poet, compiler of the Cancioneiro Geral (1516), a collection of nearly 1,000 poems by almost 300 authors, including himself. This collection, in addition to having philological and literary interest, is a major source of information about Portuguese society of the 15th century.

Reserve (rē.zérv'). Unincorporated community in SE Louisiana, on the Mississippi River W of New Orleans. It has a sugar refinery. 4,465 (1950).

Reserve Officers' Training Corps. [Called the ROTC.] Corps created by the National Defense Act of 1916 and reestablished in 1920. After completing training under regular army personnel, a number of college students annually receive commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Reservoir of the 1,001 Columns. Reservoir in Istanbul, built by Constantine. It is in plan 197 by 166 ft.; its groined vaults rest on 212 columns in 15 ranges. Though it is half filled with sediment deposited by the water, its shafts and capitals still project to a height of 33 ft.

Resettlement Administration. [Called the R.A.] U.S. government agency established for the retirement of submarginal and eroded lands and the resettlement of low-income farm families. It was transferred to the Department of Agriculture in 1937 and was designated the Farm Security Administration.

Resheph (rē'shef). In Syrian mythology, the god of war, disease, plague, and fire. The Phoenicians identified him with Apollo in his function of sender and dispeller of plagues. In Egypt Resheph was depicted as a bearded war-god bearing various weapons.

fāt, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Reshevsky (rɛ.shɛf'ski), Samuel J. b. at Ozorków, Poland, Nov. 26, 1911— American chess champion (1936–44, 1946–48). A former prodigy, who gave displays in Europe and the U.S. at the age of eight, he is one of the leading contenders for the world chess title. In addition to five victories in the U.S. championship, his principal tournament successes have been first prize at Margate, England, in 1935, Kemer, Latvia, in 1937 (equal first), and Los Angeles in 1945.

Reshid Pasha (rɛ.shɛd' pā.shā'), Mustafa Mehemed. b. at Constantinople, 1802; d. at Candia, Crete, Jan. 7, 1858. Turkish liberal statesman and diplomat. He was several times minister of foreign affairs under Mahmud II and Abdul-Medjid I. He promulgated (1839) the Hattı-sherif of Gülhané, a statement of proposed reforms in the governmental system and a guarantee of the rights of Turkish citizens, and was grand vizier at the time of the Crimean War.

Resicabánya (rɛ'shɛ.tsò.bā'nyò). Hungarian name of Resița.

Resina (rã.zɛ'nã). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Gulf of Naples and the W slope of Mount Vesuvius, ab. 5 mi. SE of Naples. The ground on which the settlement stands is volcanic lava, partly covering the site of ancient Herculaneum. There are fruit orchards and fisheries; Lacrimae Christi wine is produced in the district. Resina is the starting point of the Mount Vesuvius electric railroad. Pop. of commune, 30,707 (1936); of town, 26,580 (1936).

Resistencia (rã.sɛs.tɛn'syã). City in NE Argentina, capital of Chaco Territory, ab. 500 mi. NNW of Buenos Aires: commercial center and shipping point for quebracho, cotton, lumber, livestock, and hides; meat packing and food and cotton processing. It is served by the port of Barranqueras on the Paraná River. 52,385 (1947).

Reșița (rɛ'shɛ.tsã). [Also: Reșița; Hungarian, Resicabánya.] Town in NW Rumania, in the province of Banat, ab. 50 mi. SE of Timisoara: wood industry and salt mines; blast furnaces, foundries, rolling mills, and machine factories. 24,895 (1948).

Resolution (rɛz.ɔ'lɔ'shɔn). Exploring ship in which, with the Discovery, Sir Thomas Button sailed from England in 1612, and accomplished the exploration of Hudson Bay and of Southampton Island.

Resolution Island. Island in the district of Franklin, Northwest Territories, Canada, situated N of Labrador and N of Cape Chidley, off the S tip of Baffin Island, at the entrance of Hudson Strait.

Respighi (rãs.pɛ'gɛ), Ottorino. b. at Bologna, Italy, July 9, 1879; d. at Rome, April 18, 1936. Italian composer. He appeared as pianist and conductor at Philadelphia (1926), New York (1928, 1932), and Chicago (1935). Among his compositions are the operas Re Enzo, Semirama, Maria Vitoria, La Campana Sonnera, La Fiamma, and Belfagor. Among his symphonic poems are Feste Romane, Ballata delle Gnomidi, Pini di Roma, and Fontane di Roma. He also composed an opera-oratorio in one act and three episodes, Maria Egiziaca, the suite Gi Uccelli, and the orchestral work Sinfonia Drammatica (1915).

Restif (rã.tɛf, res-), Nicolas Edmé. [Sometimes called the "French Defoe"; known as Restif (or Rétif) de la Bretonne.] b. at Sacy, Yonne, France, Nov. 22, 1734; d. at Paris, Feb. 3, 1806. French romancer and litterateur, whose many novels, with subject matter taken in large part from his own life, comprise a racy treatment of contemporary social life and customs. He was by trade a printer and published most of his own works; their superb printing and their licentious subject matter have made them collectors' items.

Restigouche (rɛ'sti.gɔsh). River in New Brunswick, Canada, which forms part of the boundary between New Brunswick and Quebec, and flows into Chaleur Bay at Dalhousie. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Rest Is Silence, The. See under O Resto é silêncio.

Restitution, Edict of. Edict by the emperor Ferdinand II, dated March 6, 1629, requiring Protestants to restore to the Roman Catholics sees ecclesiastical property appropriated since the treaty of Passau in 1552.

Resto é silêncio (rɛ'stô e sɛ.lãn'syò), O. See O Resto é silêncio.

Restoration. In Jewish history, the return of the Jews to Palestine c538 B.C. after the Babylonian Captivity; also, their return to and possession of the Holy Land, as expected by many of them.

Restoration. In English history, the reestablishment of the English monarchy with the return of King Charles II in 1660; by extension, the whole reign of Charles II, or, often, the period between 1660 and the accession of Queen Anne in 1702.

Restoration. In French history, the return of the Bourbons to power in 1814 (called the first Restoration) and (after the episode of the Hundred Days) in 1815 (called the second Restoration).

Restoration. Novel by Ethel Sidgwick, published in 1923.

Restorer of the Roman Empire (rɔ'mãn). Title given by the senate to Aurelian.

Restraining Acts. See Coercive Acts.

Restrepo (rɛs.trã'pò), Carlos E. b. at Medellín, Colombia, c1868; d. there, July 6, 1937. Colombian lawyer and politician, president (1910–14) of Colombia. During his administration, there was a marked anti-American feeling, the aftermath of the establishment of Panamanian independence. He served in the house of representatives, of which he was at one time presiding officer. He was minister of interior (1930–34), and ambassador (1934) to the Vatican.

Restrepo, José Manuel. b. at Envigado, Colombia, c1775; d. 1860. New Granadan historian. He was a lawyer and active in politics, occupying various civil and cabinet positions. His intimate acquaintance with Simón Bolívar and other leaders of the movement for independence peculiarly fitted him for writing a history of the times. His most important work was Historia de la revolución de la República de Colombia (1827, 7 vols., with 3 vols. of documents; 3rd ed., 4 vols., 1858).

Reszke (rɛ'skɛ; Polish, rɛ'sh'kɛ), Édouard de. b. at Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 23, 1855; d. in Poland, May 25, 1917. Polish bass singer; brother of Jean de Reszke. He made his debut at Paris in 1876, and his career practically coincides with that of his brother. His principal parts were Ruy Gomez (in Hernani), Don Basile (Barbier de Séville), Leporello (Don Juan), Méphistophélès (Faust), and Frère Laurent (Roméo et Juliette).

Reszke, Jean de. [Original name, Jan Mieczysław de Reszke.] b. at Warsaw, Poland, Jan. 14, 1850; d. at Nice, France, April 3, 1925. Polish operatic tenor; brother of Édouard de Reszke. He made his debut at London in 1874, and appeared at the Théâtre Français in 1876, and again in 1883. At this time his voice changed from the baritone to the tenor register. In 1884 he was engaged at the Italian Opera, and later sang there, with various absences. Several times from 1892 to 1901 he sang in America. He later taught at Paris. His principal parts were the Cid, Faust, Romeo, Radames in Aida, Vasco in L'Africaine, and Ascanio in Cellini.

Reszke, Josephine. b. 1855; d. at Warsaw, Poland, in February, 1891. Polish operatic coloratura soprano; sister of Jean de Reszke. She made her debut at Venice and sang (1875) Ophelia at the Paris Opera. Her other parts include Aida, Salomé, and the original Sita in Roi de Lahore.

Retalhuleu (rã.tã.lò.lã'ò). Department in SW Guatemala. Capital, Retalhuleu; area, 717 sq. mi.; pop. 67,265 (1950).

Retalhuleu. City in SW Guatemala, capital of Retalhuleu department: coffee. 7,677 (1950).

Retford (rɛt'fɔrd). Local name for East Retford.

Rethberg (rɛt'hɛrg; German, rɛt'berk), Elisabeth. [Stage name of Lisbeth Sättler.] b. at Schwarzenberg, Saxony, Germany, Dec. 22, 1894—. American operatic soprano. She made her debut (1922) at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in the role of Aida. Among her leading roles at the Metropolitan were Eva, Elsa, Sieglinde, Mimi, Madame Butterfly, and the Mars-hallin.

Rethel (rɛ.tɛl). Town in N France, in the department of Ardennes, on the Aisne River ab. 23 mi. NE of Reims. Contested between French and Spaniards in the past, and twice heavily damaged by the Germans (World Wars I and II), the town still contains, although badly ruined, such old buildings as the Church of Saint Nicholas (partly from the 12th century, partly from the 17th century), and the castle and the hôtel de ville (town hall) from the 18th century. 4.718 (1946).

Rethel (rē'tel), Alfred. b. near Aachen, Germany, May 15, 1816; d. at Düsseldorf, Germany, Dec. 1, 1859. German historical painter. His works include frescoes of subjects taken from the history of Charlemagne (in the Rathaus at Aachen), series on the Dance of Death, and Hannibal Crossing the Alps.

Rethelois (rē.tē.lwā). Old division of Champagne, France, now in the département of Ardennes.

Rethymni (rē.thēm'nē). [Also: Rethimni, Rethimnon (rē.thēm.nōn), Rethymne.] Nomos (département) in S Greece, situated on the island of Crete, on the N coast. Capital, Rethymnon; area, ab. 582 sq. mi.; pop. 72,186 (1951).

Rethymnon (rē.thēm.nōn). [Also: Rethimnon, Rethymni, Rethymne (rē.thēm'nē), Retimo.] Town in S Greece, capital of the nomos (département) of Rethymni, situated on the N coast of the island of Crete, ab. 38 mi. W of Candia; seaport and airport. The airport was occupied by the Germans in World War II on May 31, 1941. 10,906 (1940).

Reti (rē'tē), Richard. [Also, Réti.] b. in Czechoslovakia, May 18, 1889; d. at Prague, June 6, 1929. Czechoslovak chess master. His principal works, Modern Ideas in Chess and Masters of the Chessboard, exerted a profound influence on chess theory, and helped materially to gain universal recognition of the "hypermodern" school. He was an excellent composer of chess endings and for a time held the world's record for the largest number of blindfold games played simultaneously. His chief tournament successes were at Košice (1918), Göteborg (1920), Teplice-Sanov (1922), Moravská Ostrava (1923), and Brno (1928).

Retief (rē'tēf'), Pieter. d. 1838. Boer leader in the Great Trek, opponent of the Hottentot emancipation, remembered chiefly as the leader whose repeated quarrels and rivalries with other leaders led him and his followers to Natal, where they were all slaughtered by Dingaan, king of the Zulus.

Rétif de la Bretonne (rā.tēf de là brē.tōn). See Restif, Nicolas Edmé.

Retimo (rē.tē.mō). See Rethymnon.

Retté (rē.tā), Adolphe. b. at Paris, 1863; d. at Beaune, France, 1930. French poet and writer. Author of Les Cloches de la nuit (1889), Une belle dame passa (1893), Campagne première (1897), and Lumières tranquilles (1901), all in verse; and of Thulé des brumes (1891) and Du Diable à Dieu (1907). Beginning his career as a symbolist, he turned (1893) anarchist; then, after his marriage and establishment in the country, he became a pantheist; in 1906 he announced his conversion to Roman Catholicism. The remainder of his life was devoted to the writing of religious books.

Return from Parnassus (pār.nas'us). The. Play in two parts, being the second and third parts of The Pilgrimage to Parnassus, written before the death of Queen Elizabeth. The Pilgrimage was acted at Cambridge in 1597, the first part of The Return probably in 1598, and the last in 1601. They are thought to have been written by members of Saint John's College, Cambridge, and are personal satires showing the trials of poor authors from Shakespeare down, and the jealousy existing between professional actors and scholars.

Return of Peter Grimm (pē'tēr grim). The. Play by David Belasco, produced in 1911 and published in 1920.

Return of the Brute. Novel by Liam O'Flaherty, published in 1929.

Return of the Native, The. Novel by Thomas Hardy, published in 1878, regarded by many readers as his masterpiece.

Return of the Soldier, The. Novel by Rebecca West, published in 1918.

Retz (rets). Old division of Brittany, France, corresponding to part of the département of Loire-Inférieure.

Retz, Baron de. [Also: Rais, Raiz; title of Gilles de Laval.] b. c.1404; executed at Nantes, France, in October, 1440. French marshal, contemporary of and ally in the wars against the English of Joan of Arc. He was notorious for his cruelties to children, and, after confessing to the mistreatment of some 100 boys, was executed. His story is sometimes identified with that of Barbe-Bleue (Bluebeard), but without foundation, his perversions apparently not extending to women.

Retz, Cardinal de. [Title of Jean François Paul de Gondi.] b. at Montmirail, France, in October, 1614; d. at Paris, Aug. 24, 1679. French politician and author. He received his education at the hands of Saint Vincent de Paul, and thereafter at the Jesuit College of Clermont. From earliest childhood he was intended for the church, where he was to become eventually archbishop of Paris, a dignity that had long been held in his family; but by his stormy conduct he came near foiling all plans made in his interest. A strong desire on his part to become a political leader led him to take a leading part (1648-49) in the movement against Cardinal Mazarin known as the Fronde. He obtained at last the removal of that statesman, and rose himself to the dignity of cardinal. But his popularity was short-lived, and he was finally imprisoned at Vincennes (1652). He escaped, and traveled in foreign countries until the time of Mazarin's death. Then he returned to France. He resigned the archbishopric, which in the meantime had fallen to his lot through his uncle's death, and retired shortly after to private life in Lorraine. Here he wrote his Mémoires, which are of great value in the history of the court life and doings of his day. To Cardinal de Retz we are indebted for important and doubtless reliable information concerning the queen, Mazarin, Gaston d'Orléans, Condé, Turenne, La Rochefoucauld, and many others of the period.

Retzius (rē'tē.üs), Anders Adolf. b. at Lund, Sweden, Oct. 13, 1796; d. April 18, 1860. Swedish anatomist; son of Anders Johan Retzius. He was professor of anatomy and physiology at Stockholm.

Retzius, Anders Johan. b. 1742; d. 1821. Swedish botanist, professor at Lund.

Retzius, Gustaf. [Full name, Magnus Gustaf Retzius.] b. at Stockholm, Oct. 17, 1842; d. there, July 21, 1919. Swedish anthropologist, professor of histology and anatomy at Lund, Sweden; son of Anders Adolf Retzius. Author of works on ancient Swedish and Finnish crania and on the brain of man and apes.

Retzsch (rech), Moritz. b. at Dresden, Germany, Dec. 9, 1779; d. there, June 11, 1857. German etcher and painter. He illustrated works of Goethe, Schiller, and others.

Reubell (rē.bel), Jean François. See Rewbell or Reubell, Jean François.

Reuben (rō'ben). [Also, Ruben.] In the Bible, the eldest son of Jacob and Leah. Gen. xxix, xxx, etc.

Reuben. In the Bible, one of the tribes of Israel, descended from Reuben, son of Jacob. Its territory lay E of the Dead Sea and Jordan, S of Gad, and N of Moab. Num. xxxii.

Reuben Butler (but'ler). See Butler, Reuben.

Reuchlin (roich'lin), Johann. [Grecized, Capnio.] b. at Pforzheim, Baden, Dec. 28 (or Feb. 22), 1455; d. at Liebenzell, near Hirschau, Bavaria, June 30, 1522. German humanist. He studied and traveled in Germany, Switzerland, France, and Italy. He settled at Tübingen in 1481 as a teacher of jurisprudence and the liberal arts, and was a judge in the Swabian League from 1500 or 1502 to 1512. He opposed, in a formal opinion to the emperor in 1510, the suppression of Jewish books hostile to Christianity, advocated by the converted Jew Johann Pfefferkorn, which involved him in a controversy (1510-16) with the Dominicans and the obscurantists generally. Reuchlin proposed instead that the Jewish communities be required to supply books to support two chairs of Hebrew at every German university; the controversy ended in his victory when an accusation against him at Rome was dropped. He promoted education in Germany by publishing Greek textbooks, and wrote various works on Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, including a Hebrew grammar, Rudimenta Hebraica (1506). He published the cabalistic works De verbo mystico (1494) and De arte cabalistica (1494).

Reuel (rē.ü'el). See Jethro.

Reuenthal (roien.täl), Neidhart von. See Neidhart von Reuenthal.

Reumont (rē.mōn'), Alfred von. b. at Aix-la-Chapelle (now Aachen, Germany), Aug. 15, 1808; d. at Burtseheid, fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pñe; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ыu, then; ð, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; near Aachen, April 27, 1887. German writer on Italian history and art, and diplomat. His diplomatic service was rendered principally in Italy, and largely at the papal court. He wrote Geschichte der Stadt Rom (1867-70) and others.

Réunion (rē'un'yōn; French, rā.ū.nyōā). [Full French name, Île de la Réunion; former names: Bourbon, Île Bourbon.] Island in the Indian Ocean, a possession of France, SW of Mauritius and ab. 420 mi. E of Madagascar. St.-Denis, the capital, is situated on the N side of the island. The surface is largely mountainous and of volcanic origin, the highest summit being Piton des Neiges (10,069 ft.). The chief product is sugar; rum and manioc are also important. The inhabitants are of French descent, Negroes, and others. The island was discovered by Mascarenhas at the beginning of the 16th century, and was finally taken possession of by the French in 1649. It was occupied (1810-15) by the British. Réunion was a colony of France until Jan. 1, 1947, when it became an overseas department of metropolitan France. It is represented in the French assembly by three deputies, in the Council of the Republic by two councilors, and in the Assembly of the French Union by one delegate. Other towns of importance besides St.-Denis are St.-Paul, St.-Louis, and St.-Pierre. A railway 80 mi. long connects several coast points. Area, 970 sq. mi.; pop. 261,647 (1950).

Reunion, Chambers of. Special courts established by Louis XIV at Metz, Besançon, Tournai, and Breisach, in 1680. They decided on the annexation to France of various territories along the eastern frontier (Saarbrücken, Luxembourg, and others).

Reunion, Wars of. Name sometimes given to the wars between France and the allied powers waged in consequence of the annexation of territory determined by the Chambers of Reunion of 1680.

Reus (re'ōs). Town in NE Spain, in the province of Tarragona, ab. 6 mi. NW of Tarragona. It is a manufacturing town, producing machinery, cotton, silk, and linen goods, leather goods, soap, and chemicals. 32,285 (1940).

Reus, Count de. A title of Prim, Juan.

Reusch (roish), Franz Heinrich. b. at Brilon, Westphalia, Germany, Dec. 4, 1823; d. March 3, 1900. German theologian. He was educated at the universities of Bonn, Tübingen, and Munich, was ordained priest in 1849, and edited (1866-77) the Bonner Theologisches Literaturblatt. Excommunicated (1872) from the Roman Catholic Church for his resistance to the doctrine of papal infallibility, he held various posts in the Old Catholic Church until his resignation in 1878.

Reuss (rois). River in Switzerland. It rises in the St. Gotthard, traverses the Lake of Lucerne, and joins the Aare near Brugg. Length, 99 mi.

Reuss, Eduard Wilhelm Eugen. b. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, July 18, 1804; d. there, April 15, 1891. Alsatian Protestant theologian, professor at Strasbourg from 1834. His works include Geschichte der heiligen Schriften des Neuen Testaments (1842), Histoire de la théologie chrétienne au siècle apostolique (1852), Histoire du canon des Saintes-Écritures (1863), Geschichte der heiligen Schriften des Alten Testaments (1881) and others. He published (1874-81) La Bible, nouvelle traduction avec commentaire.

Reuter (ro'îter), Christian. b. at Küken, near Halle, Germany, 1665; d. after 1712. German satirist. As a student at Leipzig (1688 et seq.) he was put out of his lodgings by the proprietress, a certain widow Müller. Reuter thereupon revealed, after the model of Molière, what he knew about widow Müller's private affairs in his L'Honnête femme oder die ehrliche Frau zu Plissine (1695) and Der ehrlichen Frau Schlampampe Krankheit und Tod (1696). For this the widow had him expelled from the university, whereupon he devoted himself to the Müller family again in his satirical novel Schelmffußs Reisebeschreibung (1696). After 1703 he produced festival plays at the court in Berlin. He also wrote Passionsgedanken (1706).

Reuter, Ernst. b. at Apenrade, Germany, July 29, 1889; d. at Berlin, Sept. 29, 1953. German politician. He served in the German army in World War I and was captured by the Russians. He was taken to Moscow, where he later met Lenin, Stalin, and Trotsky, and founded (1917) the German Volga Republic. In 1918 he returned to Germany and was active in the Communist Party, which he left in 1921 to rejoin the Social Democratic Party. He was one of the editors of the party paper Vorwärts and a member of the Reichstag in 1932. He was placed in a concentration camp by the Nazis in 1933, and emigrated (1935) to England. Later he was in Turkey, where he served as consultant on economics to the Turkish government. In 1946 he returned to Berlin, was elected first mayor of Berlin, but was opposed by the Russians, and was elected (1948) mayor of the Western sector of Berlin. He represented Berlin at the parliamentary council at Bonn.

Reuter, Fritz. b. at Stavenhagen, Germany, Nov. 7, 1810; d. at Eisenach, Germany, June 12, 1874. German dialect (Low German) poet. During the political reaction of the 1830's he was tried and condemned to death for his political activities as a student. This sentence was commuted to 30 years' imprisonment, seven of which he served (1833-40) before the new king, Frederick William IV, released him. His works (tales and poems) include Läuschen un Rimels (1853), Reis nah Bellingen (1855), Kein Häusung (1858), Hanne Näte un de biddde Pudel (1859), Schurr-Murr (1861); also a collection of novels, Olle Kamellen (comprising Ut de Franzosentid, 1860, Ut mine Festungstid, 1862, Ut mine Stromtid, 1864, and others). The two latter, autobiographical narratives, are now generally considered to have been his best prose works.

Reuter, Gabriele. b. at Alexandria, Egypt, Feb. 8, 1859; d. 1941. German novelist. Particularly interested in the presentation of feminine and feminist problems, she is often labeled as a propagandist for the emancipation of women. Her first great success, Aus guter Familie (1895), was followed by Frau Bürgelin und ihre Söhne (1899), Ellen von der Weiden (1900), Ins neue Land (1916), Die Herrin (1918), Benedikta (1923), and her autobiography, Vom Kinde zum Menschen (1922).

Reuter, Baron Paul Julius de. [Original name, Israel Beer Josephat.] b. at Kassel, Germany, 1816; d. at Nice, France, Feb. 25, 1899. German-English news-agency pioneer. He was founder of Reuter's News Agency, which consisted at first (1849) of a pigeon-post connection between the terminal points of the German and French-Belgian telegraph lines at Aachen and Verviers. In 1851, shortly after the Dover-Calais cable had been laid, he settled at London, where his news-gathering service met with so little success that he had to make a living by the transmission of private commercial messages to places not yet accessible by wire. In 1858 the London Times changed its policy and printed a Reuter report of an important speech by Napoleon III, and soon Reuter was able to extend his operations all over the world. He laid a cable from Cork to Crookhaven (in order to improve the transmission time for U.S. Civil War news), obtained a concession for a cable to Cuxhaven, and in the same year (1865) another for a cable from France to the U.S., which he operated jointly with the Anglo-American Telegraph Company. In 1871 he was given the title of baron by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, and was granted the English privileges of the title by Queen Victoria.

Reuter Agency. [Commonly called Reuters.] Agency for the collection and transmission of news, founded by Paul Julius de Reuter, and now extending over nearly the entire world.

Reuterdahl (rō'tér.däl), Henry. b. at Malmö, Sweden, Aug. 12, 1871; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 22, 1925. American marine and naval painter, noted for his battleship paintings. He studied at Stockholm and emigrated to the U.S. in 1893. He was a correspondent in the Spanish-American War and in World War I, contributing to many leading magazines.

Reuther (rō'thër), Walter Philip. b. at Wheeling, W.Va., Sept. 1, 1907.—American labor leader. Son of a union organizer and one-time Socialist candidate for Congress, he became at an early age an apprentice tool and die worker, but presently was discharged for his agitation against Sunday work. Thereupon he went to Detroit, where he was employed successively in a number of plants connected with the automotive industry. He was a foreman with the Ford Motor Company (1931-32), but, experiencing trouble again as a result of his union activities, he went to Europe and spent three years (1932-35) traveling through several countries by bicycle, observing labor conditions, and working for 16 months in a Russian automotive factory. He also found time to visit the Far East. Returning to Detroit, he led the first major strike in that city's automotive industry. He had a large part in writing the first agreement with the General Motors Corporation for resort to an impartial umpire. From 1939 to the present time he has been director of his union's General Motors Department. In 1942 he became first vice-president, and in 1946 president of the International Union of United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Workers, Congress of Industrial Organizations. Shortly before the U.S. became involved in World War II, he put forward a plan for accelerated mass production of airplanes in automobile factories, and during the war he strongly upheld labor's no-strike pledge. He was a member of the labor-management committee of the War Production Board and also represented labor in the Office of Production Management and on the War Manpower Commission. After the war he led several strikes which were successful in obtaining better wages and working conditions, but he fought in vain for the principle of wage increases without price increases, though he made the point that higher prices would make higher wages illusory. In his first term as president of his union he was hampered by an executive board allegedly under Communist control, but after 1947 he had a friendly executive board, and proceeded to root out Communist influence. He was elected president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in 1952 after the death of Philip Murray.

Reutlingen (roi'tling.en). City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Black Forest Kreis (district) of the state of Württemberg, situated at the foot of the Swabian Jura, ab. 20 mi. S of Stuttgart; machine, cotton and woolen textile, paper, and leather-goods manufactures. Reutlingen became a free imperial city in 1240. Pop. 43,735 (1950).

Reutte (roi'te). Village and tourist resort in W Austria, in N Tirol province, near the Bavarian frontier, situated on the Lech River and in a lake region ab. 35 mi. NW of Innsbruck. 3,188 (1946).

Reval (rā'vāl). German name of Tallin, Estonia.

Revel (re-vel). Town in SE France, in the department of Haute-Garonne, ab. 30 mi. SE of Toulouse. It has an important lumber trade; manufactures furniture. 5,508 (1946).

Revel (rā'vel). Former name of Tallin, Estonia.

Revelation, Book of. [Also: Apocalypse, The Revelation of Saint John the Divine.] Last book of the New Testament, representative of the apocalyptic literature of its period. It has been attributed to the apostle John, and the date of its composition is often put near the end of the 1st century; but its authorship and date are subjects of dispute. There is a wide difference of opinion also as to the interpretation and significance of the book.

Revelstoke (rev'el.stōk). City in SE British Columbia, Canada: division point on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway where the railway crosses the Columbia River and begins its climb over the Selkirk Mountains. Nearby is the Connaught Tunnel, a railway tunnel through the Selkirks. 2,917 (1951).

Revendal (rev'en.dāl). Vera. Daughter of a Czarist general in Israel Zangwill's play The Melting Pot (1908).

Revenge. Tragedy by Edward Young, produced in 1721.

Revenge for Honor. Tragedy sometimes attributed to George Chapman, published in 1654.

Revenge of Bussy D'Ambois (bü.sē' dān.bwā'), The. See Bussy D'Ambois, The Revenge of.

Revenge's Tragedy, The. Play by Cyril Tourneur, licensed and printed in 1607.

Reventlow (rā'vent.lō). Count Ernst zu. b. at Husum, Germany, Aug. 18, 1869; d. at Munich, in November, 1943. German politician and writer, spokesman of pan-German nationalism and of anti-Semitism. He was expelled from the German army in 1908 and opposed Reichschancellor Bethmann-Hollweg's policies during World War I. He became a member of the Reichstag in 1924 and officially joined the Nazi Party in 1928. He advocated (1920 et seq.) a German-Russian alliance in his paper, Reichswehr, and was the leader (1934 et seq.) of the anti-Christian Deutsche Glaubensbewegung. He wrote Der russisch-japanische Krieg (3 vols., 1904-06), Deutschland in der Welt voran (1906), Weltfrieden oder Weltkrieg (1907), Der Kaiser und die Byzantiner (1908), Der Vampir des Festlands (1915), Deutscher Sozialismus (1930), Nationaler Sozialismus im neuen Deutschland (1932), and Von Potsdam nach Doorn (1940).

Revenue Cutter Service. See under Coast Guard, U.S.

Revenue Marine. See under Coast Guard, U.S.

Reverberator, The. Novelette by Henry James, published in 1888.

Reverdin (re-ver.dān), Jacques Louis. b. at Fontenex, near Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 28, 1842; d. at Geneva, Jan. 9, 1929. Swiss surgeon. He introduced (1869) a new method in skin grafting, transplanting small points of skin to a granulating surface (Reverdin's method of "greffe épidermique"). He studied the consequences of partial or complete thyroidectomy and reported (1882) a syndrome as of myxedema following this operation. He introduced extirpation of the astragalus, tarsiectomia posterior, and the operation of the hallux valgus.

Reverdy (re-ver.dē), Pierre. b. at Narbonne, France, 1889—. French poet. Author of Poèmes en Prose (1915), La Lucarne ovale (1916), Quelques poèmes (1916), Les Épaves du ciel (1924), Flaques de verre (1929), Pierres blanches (1931), and Ferraille (1937). He has been attached to no school, although the review Nord-Sud, of which he became editor in 1917, did much to encourage such modernist poets as Philippe Soupault and Louis Aragon. Since his conversion to Roman Catholicism in 1926 he has lived near the Benedictine Abbey at Solesmes. He is credited with exerting a strong influence over younger poets.

Revere (rē.vir'). City in E Massachusetts, in Suffolk County, on Massachusetts Bay ab. 4 mi. NE of downtown Boston: a residential, seashore, and industrial suburb with sugar-refining, metalworking, food-processing, and optical industries. It is noted for its beach resorts and summer homes. 36,763 (1950).

Revere, Joseph Warren. b. at Boston, May 17, 1812; d. at Hoboken, N.J., April 20, 1880. American naval officer and Civil War general; grandson of Paul Revere. A midshipman (1828) in the U.S. navy, he became (1841) a lieutenant, took part in the Mexican War and the California gold rush, and resigned (1850) from the navy, later serving (1851) as a colonel in the Mexican army. Joining (1861) the Union forces as a colonel, he took part in the Peninsular Campaign, Seven Pines, and Antietam, was promoted (1862) to the rank of brigadier general, and was tried and dismissed from the service for alleged disobedience of orders at Chancellorsville (1863). However, his sentence was revoked (1864) and his resignation accepted. Author of A Tour of Duty in California (1849) and Keel and Saddle: A Retrospect of Forty Years of Military and Naval Service (1872).

Revere, Paul. [Original family surname, De Revoire.] b. at Boston, Jan. 1, 1735; d. there, May 10, 1818. American craftsman and Revolutionary patriot, celebrated for his ride by horseback toward Lexington and Concord, Mass., which brought to American patriots the warning of the impending British march. He was of French Huguenot descent, and learned the silversmith's trade under his father; in 1756 he served briefly in the French and Indian Wars. In addition to following his own trade, he became an engraver and cartoonist, expressing his support of the patriot cause in political cartoons, many of which appeared in the Royal American Magazine. He also designed coats of arms, seals, bookplates, picture frames, and certificates, and made dental devices. He was one of the three special committeemen of the North End Caucus, a Boston political club, who decided to hold the "Boston Tea Party," and himself took part in that famous affair. In 1773 he made a long journey on horseback to inform the Sons of Liberty at New York of the "Tea Party." After making two other rides to New York and Philadelphia, he became (1774) official courier to Congress for the Massachusetts provincial assembly. He rode to Durham, N.H., to warn General John Sullivan of the British scheme to remove the munitions from Fort William and Mary and rode on to Portsmouth to inform the New Hampshire Lads. He also rode (April 16, 1775) to Concord to warn the patriots there to move their supplies, and on this occasion arranged for the signal which Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem has made familiar to countless readers. The subject of that poem is Revere's most famous ride, made to Lexington to warn John Hancock and Samuel Adams that the British were on the march. He became (March 29, 1776) a member of the Massachusetts committee of correspondence. During the early part of the Revolution he designed and printed the first issue of Continental money, and made the state seal of Massachusetts and the first official seal of the colonies. He learned how to make gunpowder and directed its manufacture at Canton, Mass. He was in command (1778-79) at Castle William and took part in the Penobscot Expedition (1779). The latter action, which ended in disaster, led to charges of cowardice and insubordination against Revere, but he was exonerated by a court-martial in 1782. In addition to his role as a patriot, Revere is remembered for the excellent ware he turned out as a master silversmith. He also cast bells and made cannon, and from his foundry came the spikes, bolts, pumps, and copper accessories for Old Ironsides. He discovered a sheet-copper rolling process and made (1808-09) for Robert Fulton copper plates for use in the boilers of a steam ferry-boat.

Reveries of a Bachelor. Book by Ik Marvel (Donald Grant Mitchell), published in 1850.

Revers (rē.vēr), Georges Marie Joseph. b. at St.-Malo, France, July 30, 1891—. French army commander, chief (1947 et seq.) of the general staff of the French army. He was an undersecretary for war (1941) while assisting the Allied intelligence services, escaped (1942) to join the field forces ("Maquis") of the Resistance movement, was staff organizer (1944) during the Paris insurrection against the Germans, and reorganized (1944-45) the French army after the liberation of France.

Review. Periodical by Daniel Defoe, issued from one to three times a week from 1704 to 1713. It was a precursor of the Tatler in its essays, and of other later periodicals in its gossip column and use of a leading article. It comprises a valuable record of political and social thought in its time.

Review, The. Musical farce by George Colman the younger, printed in 1800. It was taken from an unsuccessful comic opera, Caleb Quotem and his Wife, or Paint, Poetry, and Puffery, by Henry Lee.

Reviewer, The. "Little magazine" published (1921-25) at Richmond, Va., devoted to the cause of Southern literature. Emily Clark and James Branch Cabell were among the editors. Among the writers introduced by the publication were Julia Peterkin, DuBose Heyward, and Paul Green.

Review of Reviews. Monthly magazine published in the U.S. from 1891 to 1937. The publication, which analyzed current events, incorporated World's Work in 1932 and was absorbed by The Literary Digest in 1937.

Revillagigedo (rē.vē'lyā.gē.nā'thō), Count of. See Gómez de Horcasitas, Juan Francisco; see also Gómez Pacheco do Padilla Horcasitas, Juan Vicente.

Révillé (rē.vēl), Albert. b. at Dieppe, France, Nov. 4, 1826; d. at Paris, Oct. 25, 1906. French Protestant theological writer. He accepted a call as pastor of the Walloon church at Rotterdam in 1851 (having previously been suffragan at Nîmes and pastor at Lunery, near Dieppe), and was appointed titular professor of religious history at the Collège de France in 1880. Among his works are Essais de critique religieuse (1860) and Histoire des religions (1883 et seq.).

Reyvlout (rē.vē.yō), Eugène. b. at Besançon, France, 1843; d. at Paris, 1913. French Egyptologist, who taught Coptic language and demotic handwriting at the Ecole du Louvre. Author of Nouvelle chrestomathie démotique (1878) and Les Origines égyptiennes du droit civil romain (1912).

Revin (rē.vān). Town in N France, in the department of Ardennes, on the Meuse River ab. 12 mi. NW of Mézières. It has metal and ceramics manufactures. Part of the town was destroyed in World War II. 7,826 (1946).

Revizor (rē.vē.zōr'). Russian name of Inspector General, The.

Revocation of the Edict of Nantes (nānts; French, nānt). Proclamation of Louis XIV of France, Oct. 18, 1685, annulling the Edict of Nantes (1598). It forbade the free exercise of the Protestant religion. Its promulgation was followed by the emigration of ab. 300,000 persons, including artisans, men of science and letters, and others, to the Netherlands, Brandenburg, England, Switzerland, America, and elsewhere.

Revolt of Amboina (am.boi'nā). See Amboina, Revolt of.

Revolt of Islam (is'lām, is.lām'). The. Narrative poem by Percy Bysshe Shelley, published in 1818. It was first called Laon and Cythna.

Revolution, English. Series of political movements that forced James II off the throne of England. See Glorious Revolution.

Revolution, French. See French Revolution.

Revolution, Russian. See Russian Revolution.

Revolutionary Army, American. Organized military force employed by the Continental Congress and the various American colonies in fighting against the British during the American Revolutionary War (1775-81). The Continental Army was established in June, 1775. George Washington was appointed commander in chief on June 15, 1775, and on July 3 took command at Cambridge, Mass. The Revolutionary Army was composed of Continentals (enlisted for one year or longer) and state militia (enrolled for periods ranging from three to nine months). During the war the army labored under grave disadvantages: lack of adequate food, clothing, transportation, munitions, and heavy guns. There were periods when heavy desertion threatened the cohesion and effectiveness of the force; extramilitary factors, such as Congressional blundering and provincial pride and short-sightedness, added to the many difficulties faced by Washington. The army reached its nadir at Valley Forge, where disease and starvation took a heavy toll, and where 3,000 men had to be classified as unfit for duty because they lacked shoes and clothing. That the Revolutionary Army did not crumble must be attributed largely to the determination and ability of Washington. Surviving records of enrollment are not accurate; they indicate approximately 396,000 enlistments, more than two thirds of them in the Continental ranks.

Revolutionary Institutions, Party of. Mexican political party, drawing its principal strength from workers and farmers.

Revolutionary Left, Party of the. Bolivian political party, distinctly radical, formed in 1940.

Revolutionary Romances. Series of narratives by William Gilmore Simms, including The Partisan (1835), Woodcraft (1854), and The Scout (1854).

Revolutionary Tribunal. In French history, specifically, an extraordinary court of justice established by the Convention, in 1793, to take cognizance of all attacks directed against the French Revolution, the republic, and the public welfare. It was the prime mover in the Reign of Terror and was suppressed in 1795; similar courts were established in the provinces.

Revolutionary War. [Also: American Revolution, War of American Independence, War of the American Revolution.] War (1775-83) for redress of grievances and later for independence, waged by the 13 American colonies (later states) against Great Britain. The term "American Revolution" (but not the other variants listed above) is also applied to the entire series of American protests and overt actions against British attempts to limit colonial authority in the period from 1763 to 1783. If "American Revolution" is used in this sense, the actual war must be taken only as the military culmination of a movement which actually began a number of years before. In the war, the colonies were assisted (1778 et seq.) by France, Spain, and the Netherlands. Its immediate causes were the imperial and revenue measures of Great Britain, among them the Writs of Assistance (1761), Stamp Act (1765), the Townshend Acts (1767), and the "Intolerable" or "Coercive" Acts (1774). In its broader aspects, however, the American Revolution was more than the final precipitation of discontent and protest against specific measures of British colonial policy. It was in large part the product of an increasing colonial awareness of self-determination which had been intensified by British inability to meet satisfactorily the fundamental problem of imperial organization. The immense distances separating the colonies and the mother country posed critical difficulties of control for the British government, but equally crucial was the gap of political and economic differences which interposed between the colonies and the seat of government at Westminster. Colonial consciousness of the need for separate status did not emerge suddenly; indeed, not until the publication in 1776 of Common Sense, by Thomas Paine, was independence publicly advocated; and during the war about one third of the people, most of whom had warmly supported the colonial cause in its earlier phase, opposed this objective. The skillful agitation and propaganda of the radicals, particularly after 1773, played an important role in crystallizing colonial feeling and precipitating armed conflict. The repressive measures adopted by Great Britain in 1774 widened the gulf between her and the colonies, and the refusal of Westminster to entertain a redress of grievances made imperial organization and home rule questions for settlement by force of arms. The following are the leading incidents and events: Boston massacre (1770), Boston Tea Party (Dec. 16, 1773), first Continental Congress (September, 1774), battles of Lexington and Concord (April 19, 1775), meeting of the second Continental Congress (May 10, 1775), capture of Ticonderoga (May 10, 1775), battle of Bunker Hill (June 17, 1775), unsuccessful attack on Canada (1775-76), evacuation of Boston (March 17, 1776), British repulse off Charleston (June 28, 1776), Declaration of Independence (July 4, 1776), battle of Long Island (Aug. 27, 1776), battle of White Plains (Oct. 28, 1776), loss of Forts Washington and Lee, and retreat through New Jersey, end of 1776; battle of Trenton (Dec. 26, 1776), battle of Princeton (Jan. 3, 1777), battle of Bennington (Aug. 16, 1777), battle of Brandywine (Sept. 11, 1777), battle of Stillwater (Sept. 19, 1777), battle of Germantown (Oct. 4, 1777), battle of Saratoga (Oct. 7, 1777), Burgoyne's surrender (Oct. 17, 1777), adoption of the Articles of Confederation (Nov. 15, 1777), treaty with France (Feb. 6, 1778), battle of Monmouth (June 28, 1778), storming of Stony Point (July 16, 1779), naval victory of Paul Jones (Sept. 23, 1779), British capture of Charleston (May 12, 1780), battle of Camden (Aug. 16, 1780), Arnold's treachery (September, 1780), battle of King's Mountain (Oct. 7, 1780), battle of the Clouds (Jan. 17, 1781), ratification of the Articles of Confederation by the last of the states (March 1, 1781), battle of Guilford (March 15, 1781), battle of Eutaw (Sept. 8, 1781), surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown (Oct. 19, 1783), peace of Paris (Sept. 3, 1783), and evacuation of New York (Nov. 25, 1783).

Revolution of 1848. French revolution of February, 1848, which overthrew the government of Louis Philippe. See February Revolution.

Revolving Lights. Novel by Dorothy M. Richardson, published in 1921. It is the seventh section of Pilgrimage (1938), a novel sequence in 12 parts employing the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Rewa (ré'wa). [Also, Rewah.] Former native state now incorporated into Vindhya Pradesh, Union of India, one of the Central India States, ab. 120 mi. SW of Benares; cattle raising, wheat, and millet. A treaty establishing a British protectorate was made in 1812. Capital, Rewa; area, ab. 12,830 sq. mi.; pop. 1,820,445 (1941).

Rewa. [Also, Rewah.] Former capital of the state of Rewa, now in Vindhya Pradesh, Union of India, ab. 118 mi. SW of Benares; trading center. 26,008 (1941).

Rewbell or Reubell (ré'bél), Jean François. b. at Colmar, in Alsace, Oct. 8, 1747; d. there, Nov. 23, 1807. French politician. He was a deputy to the Constituent Assembly and the Convention, and a member of the Directory (1795-99). He became a member (1799) of the Council of Ancients. He retired from public life after Napoleon's coup d'état.

Rexburg (reks'berg). City in E Idaho, county seat of Madison County. It was founded by Mormons. 4,253 (1950).

Rey (rá), Félix María Calleja del. See Calleja del Rey, Félix María.

Rey (rí), Jacobus Hercules De La. See De La Rey, Jacobus Hercules.

Rey (rá), Louis Ernest Étienne. Original name of Reyer, Ernest.

Reybaud (rá'bō), Henriette Étienne Fanny. [Maiden name, Arnau.] b. at Aix, France, 1802; d. Jan. 1, 1871. French novelist; wife of Marie Roch Louis Reybaud.

Reybaud, Marie Roch Louis. b. at Marseilles, France, Aug. 15, 1799; d. at Paris, Oct. 28, 1879. French writer and politician. His works include Études sur les réformateurs ou socialistes modernes (1840-43), and the satirical novels Jérôme Paturot à la recherche d'une position (1843) and Jérôme Paturot à la recherche de la meilleure des républiques (1848).

Reybold (rá'böld), Eugene. b. at Delaware City, Del., Feb. 13, 1884-_. American soldier. He served (October, 1941-45) as chief of engineers.

Reyer (rá'yer), Ernest. [Original name, Louis Ernest Étienne Rey.] b. at Marseilles, France, Dec. 1, 1823; d. at Levendon, France, Jan. 15, 1909. French composer. His most important works are the operas Sigurd (1884) and Salammbo (1890). For some years he was musical critic of the Journal des Débats, and in 1875 published Notes de musique.

Reyes (rá'yās), Alfonso. b. at Monterrey, Mexico, May 17, 1889-_. Mexican diplomat and critic, authority on Spanish letters. He has represented his country in Spain, France, Argentina, and Brazil. A distinguished essayist, he has written Visión de Andahuac (1917), Sympatías y diferencias (1921-23), and others.

Reyes, Ernesto de Jesús Castillero. See Castillero Reyes, Ernesto de Jesús.

Reyes, Laguna de. See Juinín Lake.

Reyes, Neftalí. Original name of Neruda, Pablo.

Reyes, Rafael. b. c.1850; d. 1921. South American explorer, soldier, and statesman, president (1904-09) of Colombia. He was sent to Washington to represent Colombian interests in connection with the recognition by the U.S. of the new Republic of Panama, and was officially proclaimed president of Colombia, July 4, 1904, and inaugurated Aug. 7, 1904. By a resolution of the general assembly in March, 1905, his term of office was extended until Dec. 31, 1914. He resigned July 28, 1909, having failed to win approval of a proposed U.S.-Colombia treaty recognizing Panama's independence.

Reykjavík (rá'kyá.vék). [Also, Reikiavik.] Capital of Iceland, situated on a bay on the SW coast of the island. Containing about one third of the entire population of Iceland, it is the seat of the Icelandic government, and has fisheries, shipping activities, small industries. There is a library, university, national museum of antiquities and of natural history; sculpture gallery. The city has a unique central heating system utilizing water brought by pipe line from nearby hot springs. Reykjavík was occupied by British and Americans during World War II. 55,980 (1950).

Reyles (rá'lās), Carlos. b. at Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 30, 1868; d. there, July 24, 1938. Uruguayan novelist, considered the greatest in his country. In his best work, El Terruño (1916), he wrote of rural life; his El Embrujo de Sevilla (1922) brought him honorary citizenship in that Spanish city.

Reymont (rá'mönt), Władysław Stanisław. b. at Kobiele Wielkie, Poland, 1867; d. 1925. Polish short-story writer and novelist. Without much formal education, he learned the art of writing by long and earnest reading of Henryk Sienkiewicz. He revolted against the positivist trend in Polish literature and sought his themes outside the city and beyond the factory. His masterpiece, The Peasants (4 vols., 1902-09; Eng. trans., 1924-25) won for him the Nobel prize in literature (1924). Other important works are the autobiographical Comédie (1896; Eng. trans., 1920), The Promised Land (1899; Eng. trans., 1927), a story of Łódź; and The Year 1794 (1914-19), a story of the War of Independence under Thaddeus Kosciuszko.

Reyna (or Reina) Barrios (rá'nā bār'ryōs), José María. b. 1853; assassinated Feb. 8, 1898. Guatemalan politician, president of Guatemala (1892-98); nephew of Justo Rufino Barrios.

Reynaldo (rá'nāl'dō). Character in Shakespeare's tragedy Hamlet: a servant to Polonius.

Reynard the Fox (ren'ard, rá'nard). Medieval beast epic which receives its name from the central character. Other characters are King Noble, the lion, Bruin, the bear, Chanticleer, the cock, Tybert, the cat, Isegrim, the wolf, and many others. Reynard the Fox is not any one book, but several accumulations from classical fables and traditional European animal tales and folk motifs worked into a satire not only on medieval society but on human nature. One of the earliest of such compilations was the Latin poem Isegrimus (c1148) by the Fleming Nivardus of Ghent. Various sections of the French Roman de Renart appeared in the period of 1175-1205. Most of the Reynard material is of French origin, but the version best known to English readers is the translation made by William Caxton in 1481 from a lost Flemish manuscript, and originally entitled The Historie of Reynard the Foze. Goethe's Reinecke Fuchs is a reworking into modern German of an 1180 Low German version. The Bibliotheca Curiosa edition of Caxton's book lists 30 principal editions in English of this beast epic between 1481 and 1884, variously entitled Historie of Reinard the Foze, Book of Rymant the Foze, The Shifts of Reynardine, The Crafty Courtier, or Fable of Reynard the Fox, The most delectable History of Reynard the Fox, and others.

Reynaud (rā.nō), Jean Ernest. b. at Lyons, France, Feb. 14, 1806; d. at Paris, June 28, 1863. French philosophical writer. He became a mining engineer in the service of the government in 1830, but resigned his position after the July revolution of that year. He was a moderate Democrat in the assembly of 1848, and soon retired to private life. His chief work is Terre et ciel (1854).

Reynaud, Paul. b. at Barcelonnette, Basses-Alpes, France, Oct. 15, 1878-. French lawyer and political leader, premier (March 22-June 16, 1940) of France during the invasion and defeat of France in World War II. He entered political life following World War I and was defeated (1924) as a moderate republican candidate for the Chamber of Deputies, but was elected in 1928, and was minister of finance (1930, 1933-40), minister of colonies (1931), justice minister (1932-38), and premier and foreign minister (March-June, 1940), as well as war minister (May-June, 1940). He played a highly individualist role in French politics: after World War I, he advocated French assistance in maintaining German economic life, urged (1930 et seq.) devaluation of the franc, called (1935) for creation of 11 motorized divisions, and opposed the pro-Italian policy (1935-36) of Pierre Laval and the Munich agreement (1938). A finance minister (1933-40), he introduced a vigorous policy of increased national production and decreased consumption. After the Allied failures in Norway, he became premier (March 22, 1940), negotiated an agreement (March 28, 1940) with Great Britain barring a separate armistice or separate peace, replaced General Maurice Gamelin with General Maxime Weygand as commander in chief of the French army, and appointed Philippe Pétain, then ambassador to Madrid, vice-premier. He asked (June 2) British Prime Minister Winston Churchill to release France from the agreement barring a separate armistice, but rejected (June 12) the demand made by Weygand and Pétain for an armistice, accepted Churchill's proposal for organic union of Britain, France, and their empires, but resigned (June 16) after Pétain's formal demand for an armistice. He was tried (February, 1942) at Riom, and deported (1943) to Germany. Released (1945) from captivity, he was elected (1946) a deputy, keeping his seat despite Communist demands that his election be invalidated. He refused (1947) to form a ministry or to take a cabinet post, became (1948) minister of finance and economic affairs, and urged (1949) that the U.S. increase its military forces in Europe.

